4. From what hath been obſerved he takes occaſion to caution his hearers againſt that unpardonable crime, blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt. All other ſins, however deep, multiplied, or aggravated, may be forgiven, Chriſt's blood being a ſufficient atonement for them; and whoſoever pleads it in faith will find pardon, even thoſe who reviled or crucified him; but whoſoever ſpeaketh againſt the Holy Ghoſt it ſhall not be forgiven, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. And this blaſphemy is not any denial of his divine Perſon, or oppoſition to his work through ignorance, nor any reſiſtance againſt the miniſtry of his word, nor wilful ſin committed againſt his light and warnings; but "a wilful and deſpiteful rejection of the Spirit of grace; the "imputing his miraculous operations and illuminations to diabolical agency; the contradicting and denying the doctrines "he reveals, and this through obſtinate malice, in oppoſition "to a man's own light and conſcience." This is a direct ſin againſt our remedy, and muſt needs be attended with inevitable perdition.

5. Chriſt addreſſes the Phariſees, convicting them of the wickedneſs of their hearts by the malice which appeared in their lips. It was as abſurd for them, who committed ſuch blaſphemies, to pretend to ſanctity, as to expect good fruit from an evil tree. For, as a man's heart is to be diſcerned by his words and actions, it plainly appeared, by what they ſpoke out of the abundance of their hearts, that they were a generation of vipers, thruſting out their invenomed tongues againſt Chriſt and blaſpheming him, the natural effect of the evil which dwelt within them. A good man out of the good treaſure of his heart, repleniſhed with divine grace, bringeth forth good things, ſuch as are for the uſe of edifying, and for the glory of God. But an evil man, whoſe ſpirit is unrenewed, out of the evil treaſure of corruption which is natural to him, bringeth forth evil, in the corrupt communication which proceeds out of his mouth, and the polluted ſtreams in his life and converſation, which break forth from the inexhauſted ſource within. And if not an idle word paſſes without the divine notice, but we muſt anſwer for it in a judgment-day, how much more terrible muſt be the blaſphemer's guilt? With what circumſpection then ſhould we keep the door of our lips, when our eternal ſtate is to be determined thereby, and our words muſt all be produced at the bar of God as evidences of our juſtification or condemnation, and ſentence proceed accordingly? We may learn hence, (1.) That, unleſs the heart be renewed by the power of God's Spirit, nothing but evil, and that continually, can proceed out of it. (2.) Our words are the index of our minds, and by our general courſe of communication our ſtate Godward may be eaſily diſcovered. (3.) The ſolemn account that we muſt one day make for every word that is in our tongue ſhould be ever on our mind, to reſtrain all idle, vain, impertinent diſcourſe, as well as what is more immediately noxious. How much hath every man to lament on this behalf!

38. ¶ [h] Then certain of the ſcribes and of the Phariſees anſwered, ſaying, Maſter, we would ſee a ſign from thee. 39. But he anſwered and ſaid to them, An evil and [i] adulterous generation ſeeketh after a ſign, and there ſhall no ſign be given to it but the ſign of the prophet Jonas. 40. For as [k] Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly: ſo ſhall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. 41. The men of Nineveh [l] ſhall riſe in judgment with this generation, and ſhall condemn it: [m] becauſe they repented at the preaching of Jonas, and behold a greater than Jonas is here. 42. The queen of the ſouth ſhall riſe up in the judgment with this generation, and ſhall condemn it: for [n] ſhe came from the uttermoſt parts of the earth to hear the wiſdom of Solomon, and behold a greater than Solomon is here. 43. [o] When the unclean ſpirit is gone out of a man, [p] he walketh through dry places, ſeeking reſt, and findeth none. 44. Then he ſaith, I will return into my houſe, from whence I came out: and when he is come, he findeth it empty, ſwept, and garniſhed. 45. Then goeth he, and taketh with himſelf ſeven other ſpirits more wicked than himſelf, and they enter in and dwell there: and [q] the laſt ſtate of that man is worſe than the firſt. Even ſo ſhall it be alſo unto this wicked generation.

v. 38—45. Though what our Lord had ſaid was ſufficient to convince every impartial hearer, certain ſcribes and Phariſees pretended they were not yet ſatisfied of his divine miſſion; and though they addreſs him with reſpect, calling him Maſter, it ſeems to be done hypocritically; for they demand a ſign from heaven; perhaps ſuch as of old appeared on mount Sinai; intimating that, notwithſtanding his other miracles, without this they ſhould not acknowledge him as the Meſſiah: a demand unreaſonable and inſolent, and which our Lord juſtly denies. They who are diſſatisfied with the evidences of truth he hath been pleaſed to give, notwithſtanding what they may pretend, would never be convinced by any other.

1. He brands them as an evil and adulterous generation, degenerate from the piety of their forefathers, and chargeable with the moſt criminal apoſtacy from God, literally and ſpiritually committing adultery againſt him.

2. He rejects their demand. No ſign ſhall be given them, ſuch as they required, from heaven; but one ſhould be given them from the earth in his reſurrection, which had been prefigured by Jonas the prophet, who, after being three days and three nights in the whale's belly, was caſt alive on dry land: ſo ſhall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth; that is, part of three natural days, as the Jews computed their time; for ſo long he lay in the grave, reckoning Friday, before ſun-ſetting, as one; Saturday two; and Sunday, after ſun-ſet, when the third day commenced, as three; our Lord then ariſing from the dead: and if this did not convince them, nothing would. Note, The reſurrection of Jeſus is the great hinge on which our everlaſting ſalvation turns, and the grand ſign confirming all the reſt; and they who refuſe the evidence with which this is attended, and aſk for more, we may be fully ſure deſire no ſign to confirm their faith, but a plea for their infidelity.

3. He warns them of the conſequences which would attend the wilfulneſs and wickedneſs of the men of that generation.

---

[h] Chap. xvi. 1. Mark viii. 11. Luke xi. 16, 29. 1 Cor. i. 22.

[i] Iſa. lvii. 3.

[k] Jonah i. 17.

[l] Jer. iii. 11. Ezek. xvi. 51. Rom. ii. 27.

[m] Jonah iii. 5.

[n] 1 Kings x. 1. 2 Chron. ix. 1.

[o] Luke xi. 24.

[p] Job i. 7. 1 Pet. v. 8.

[q] Heb. vi. 4. & x. 26. 2 Pet. ii. 20.

The men of Nineveh ſhall riſe up as witneſſes to condemn them; for they, though heathens, repented at the preaching of Jonas for one day only: but Chriſt had wrought manifold miracles, had long and earneſtly preached the goſpel of the kingdom, and ſhortly was to riſe from the dead; in all which he was far ſuperior to Jonas. If therefore they rejected him, far greater would be their condemnation than that which was threatned againſt the men of Nineveh, and their ſpeedy repentance ſhall riſe up to condemn the unbelief and impenitence of the men of that generation.

In like manner ſhall the queen of the ſouth, who came from far on the report of Solomon's wiſdom, condemn theſe deſpiſers of Chriſt and his goſpel. She, though a Gentile, no ſooner heard the wiſe king than ſhe owned the truth of the report concerning him: but, when a greater than Solomon was there, even Jeſus, in whom dwelt all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, the men of that generation refuſed to receive his word, or believe in him; and therefore how aggravated will be their condemnation! They who have enjoyed and abuſed the greateſt means and mercies ſhall ſink under heavier guilt, and receive greater damnation.

4. He deſcribes their character, as willing ſlaves of Satan. They were like one poſſeſſed of the devil, who goeth for a while out, to return with double violence. He is called an unclean ſpirit: having loſt all purity himſelf, he ceaſes not to tempt men to all manner of uncleanneſs. He walketh in dry places, like a melancholy perſon, ſeeking reſt, and findeth none, being miſerable when he is no longer in miſchief; and therefore, taking ſeven other ſpirits worſe than himſelf, he returns to his former abode, and finds the ſinner's heart ready to entertain them, as a houſe ſwept and garniſhed to receive its gueſts, and there they fix their ſtay, ſo that the laſt ſtate of that man is worſe than the firſt, more wicked than before: even ſo ſhall it be alſo unto this wicked generation. The Devil, who by Chriſt's preaching and miracles for a while retired from Judea into the Gentile world, afterwards, when the goſpel ſpread among the heathen, returned with ſevenfold power to the Jews, who readily received him, and with all malice and wickedneſs perſecuted the miniſters of Chriſt, which brought upon that devoted people final deſtruction.

46. ¶ While he yet talked to the people, [q] behold, his mother and [r] his brethren ſtood without, deſiring to ſpeak with him. 47. Then one ſaid unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren ſtand without, deſiring to ſpeak with thee. 48. But he anſwered and ſaid unto him that told him, [s] Who is my mother? And who are my brethren? 49. And he ſtretched forth his hand towards his diſciples, and ſaid, Behold my mother, and my brethren. 50. For [t] whoſoever ſhall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the ſame is my brother, and ſiſter, and mother.

[q] Mark iii. 31. Luke viii. 20.
[r] Chap. xiii. 55.
[s] Deut. xxxiii. 9.
[t] John xv. 14.

v. 46—50. Whilſt Chriſt continued his diſcourſes, which bore ſo hard upon the Phariſees, we are told,

1. That his mother and brethren ſtood without: apprehenſive perhaps of his danger to which he would be expoſed thereby, they deſired to ſpeak to him, and warn him againſt giving ſuch offenſive and plain rebukes. Whether theſe were his brethren by the ſame mother Mary, or by a former wife of Joſeph's, or his couſin-germans as many ſuppoſe, is not a matter at all material. Hereupon one of his auditors immediately informed him of their requeſt. Note, (1.) Near relations, by their fears for us, often lay hindrances in our way. (2.) Danger muſt not deter us from fidelity in the way of our duty.

2. Chriſt replies, in anſwer to the meſſage, Who is my mother, and who are my brethren? not as contemning parental authority, or diſregarding the ties of blood; but intimating that the addreſs was unſeaſonable, and, when God's glory was concerned, no natural or civil reſpects were to be attended. We are bound to love them much, but to love God more: yea, and the union which divine grace makes betwixt kindred ſouls is in many reſpects ſtronger than the bonds of blood. He ſtretched forth his hand to his diſciples, and ſaid, Behold my mother and my brethren; ſo affectionately did he regard them: for whoſoever ſhall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, attentive to the goſpel, and obedient to the faith, the ſame is my brother, and ſiſter, and mother, ſo near and dear to him. Note, (1.) The mark of diſcipleſhip to Jeſus is obedience to the revealed word and will of God. (2.) However deſpiſed we may be, or rejected of men; it is ſufficient honour to be eſteemed the brethren of Jeſus. (3.) They who reſemble Chriſt in ſpirit, temper, and diſpoſition, and have the bleſſed image of that one Father, even God, ſtamped upon them, will be acknowledged by the Lord of life and glory in the day of his appearing, and admitted, as heirs of God and joint-heirs with Chriſt, to ſhare with him the eternal inheritance.

CHAP. XIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the ſower, with its explication, and the reaſon why Chriſt choſe this method of teaching, ver. 1—23. 2. Of the tares, ver. 24—30. 3. Of the grain of muſtard-ſeed, ver. 31, 32. 4. Of the leaven, ver. 33. 5. The parable of the tares explained, with a further reaſon for Chriſt's uſing parables, ver. 34—43. 6. The parable of the hid treaſure, the pearl of great price, and of the net, ver. 44—50. 7. The application to his diſciples, under the parable of the good houſeholder, ver. 51, 52. 8. The contempt put upon Chriſt by his countrymen, ver. 53—58.

1. THE ſame day went Jeſus out of the houſe, and ſat by the ſea-ſide. 2. And [a] great multitudes were gathered together unto him, ſo that he went into a ſhip, and ſat, and the whole multitude ſtood on the ſhore. 3. And he ſpake many things unto them in parables, ſaying, Behold a ſower went forth to ſow. 4. And when he ſowed, ſome ſeeds fell by the way-ſide, and the fowls came and devoured them up. 5. Some fell upon ſtony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they ſprung up, becauſe they had no deepneſs of earth: 6. And when the ſun was up, they were ſcorched, and, becauſe they had not root, they withered away. 7. And ſome fell among thorns: and the thorns ſprung up and choked them. 8. But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, ſome an hundred-fold, ſome ſixty-fold, ſome thirty-fold. 9. [b] Who hath ears to hear, let him hear. 10. And the diſciples came, and ſaid unto him, Why ſpeakeſt thou unto them in parables? 11. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, Becauſe [c] it is given unto you to know the myſteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. 12. For [d] whoſoever hath, to him ſhall be given, and he ſhall have more abundance: but whoſoever hath not, from him ſhall be taken away even that he hath. 13. Therefore ſpeak I to them in parables: becauſe they, ſeeing, ſee not: and hearing, they hear not, neither do they underſtand. 14. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Eſaias, which ſaith, [e] By hearing ye ſhall hear, and ſhall not underſtand: and ſeeing ye ſhall ſee, and ſhall not perceive. 15. For this people's heart is waxed groſs, and [f] their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have cloſed; leſt at any time they ſhould ſee with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and ſhould underſtand with their heart, and ſhould be converted, and I ſhould heal them. 16. But [g] bleſſed are your eyes, for they ſee; and your ears, for they hear. 17. For verily I ſay unto you, that [h] many prophets and righteous men have deſired to ſee thoſe things which ye ſee, and have not ſeen them: and to hear thoſe things which ye hear, and have not heard them. 18. [i] Hear ye therefore the parable of the ſower. 19. When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and underſtandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was ſown in his heart: this is he which received ſeed by the way-ſide. 20. But he that received the ſeed into ſtony places, the ſame is he that heareth the word, and [k] anon with joy receiveth it: 21. Yet hath he not root in himſelf, but [l] dureth for a while: for when tribulation or perſecution ariſeth becauſe of the word, [m] by and by he is offended. 22. He alſo that received ſeed [n] among the thorns, is he that heareth the word: and the care of this world, and [o] the deceitfulneſs of riches choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. 23. But he that received ſeed into the good ground, is he that heareth the word, and underſtandeth it, [p] which alſo beareth fruit, and bringeth forth [q] ſome an hundred-fold, ſome ſixty, ſome thirty.

[a] Mark iv. 1. Luke viii. 4.
[b] Chap. xi. 15.
[c] Chap. xi. 25. & xvi. 17. 1 Cor. ii. 10. 1 John ii. 27.
[d] Chap. xxv. 29. Rev. xxii. 11.
[e] Iſa. vi. 9.
[f] Heb. v. 11.
[g] Chap. xvi. 17. Luke x. 23.
[h] Heb. xi. 13. 1 Pet. i. 10.
[i] Mark iv. 14. Luke viii. 11.
[k] Iſa. lviii. 2. Ezek. xxxiii. 31, 32. Mark vi. 20. John v. 35.
[l] Hoſ. vi. 4. Gal. v. 7.
[m] Chap. xi. 6.
[n] Jer. iv. 3.
[o] Chap. xix. 23. 1 Tim. v. 9. 2 Tim. iv. 10.
[p] John xv. 8.
[q] Gen. xxvi. 12.

v. 1—23. With indefatigable diligence did the great prophet of his people labour to inculcate the doctrines of his goſpel. The ſame day went Jeſus out of the houſe, and ſat by the ſea-ſide, his auditory being too great for a houſe to contain them; and there, aſcending a ſhip for his pulpit, whilſt the attentive multitude crouded the ſhore, he ſpake many things unto them in parables, more, probably, than are here recorded; and he choſe this method for reaſons given, v. 13, 35. Note, (1.) In preaching the goſpel we are called to be inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon: no time nor place is unſuitable to ſpeak a word for Chriſt and for immortal ſouls. (2.) Where Chriſt is preached there ſhould we with delight attend: his preſence and bleſſing on the ſea-ſhore are better than all the magnificence of Solomon's temple without him.

1. The parable with which Chriſt opens his diſcourſe is that of a ſower, ſowing his ſeed, with the various ſoils on which it fell, and the conſequences thereof. By familiar and well-known objects Chriſt would thus convey more pleaſingly his divine inſtructions, and teach them to ſpiritualize their daily labours, and to draw from them profitable meditation. The explication of the parable Chriſt is pleaſed himſelf to give, and we cannot err when following an infallible interpreter. The ſeed is the word of the kingdom, the goſpel; the ſower is the Lord Jeſus, with all his divinely appointed miniſters; and he alſo by his Spirit quickens the ſeed ſown, that it may bring forth fruit in the hearts of his people. The field is the world in general, and the ſeveral ſorts of ground here mentioned, on which the ſeed falls, repreſent the different tempers of thoſe to whom the goſpel is preached, and the effects thereby produced upon them; and we may obſerve but one ſort in four brought forth any laſting fruit: for, though the ſame word of truth is preached to multitudes, it becomes an incorruptible ſeed but to a few. An awful warning to all to take heed how they hear: for many are called, but few choſen.

[1.] Some are like the way-ſide, where the ſeed, falling on the hard ground, not broken up, is expoſed to the birds and devoured. This repreſents the caſe of thoſe who are careleſs, negligent, and inattentive hearers, on whom the word of God makes no impreſſion: they underſtand it not, being under the darkneſs of their fallen mind, and their hearts hardened. The wicked one, the devil, ever watchful to prevent all good from entering, no ſooner obſerves ſuch a one in the way of the goſpel than he ſeeks to divert him from it, and catches away the word from his heart as it falls, diſtracting his attention by ſome objects around him, or ſuggeſting ſome idle, vain, worldly, or trifling thoughts, ſo that the word of God is immediately effaced from the memory, and becomes utterly unprofitable.

[2.] Others are like the ſtony ground, on which whatever is ſown ſprings up quickly, the earth being ſhallow; but, unable to bear the ſcorching ſun, for want of root, it withers away. Such are they who attend the miniſtry of the word, and, ſtruck at firſt greatly with what they hear, give an immediate aſſent to its truth, and inſtantly commence profeſſors; but the root of the matter is not in them; they are not brought to a deep and humbling ſenſe of the ſinfulneſs of their nature; they do not ſee the utter impotence of their hearts to all good; they are not humbled to an univerſal renunciation of themſelves; nor led to Chriſt alone for pardon, righteouſneſs, grace, and glory: but, whilſt ſome lively impreſſion or ſudden flaſh of joy ſucceeds their hearing, they are ready to conclude the work is done, when it is not even yet begun; their hearts continue unhumbled and unholy; they are not partakers of the grace of God in truth, nor influenced by the divine principle of faith which worketh by love; they have never truly counted the coſt, and therefore, when they are called to painful ſelf-denial for Chriſt's ſake, to endure reproach, the loſs of friends or fortune, or the ſeverer ſufferings which invenomed perſecutors may inflict, then they ſhrink from the croſs, diſhonour their profeſſion, comply with the world, are offended, and walk no more with Jeſus. May we never be numbered among ſuch apoſtates from the truth!

[3.] Another ſort of hearers are compared to the ſeed ſown among thorns. Theſe go farther than the former: they take up and continue a fair profeſſion, are attendants on the word and ordinances, and in appearance Chriſtians altogether; but inſenſibly the cares of the world, a too great anxiety about a proviſion for themſelves or families, an inordinate love of money, and too eager a purſuit after it, theſe, under many a ſpecious cloak of prudent care and becoming induſtry, ſeduce the affections to gold from God, and inſenſibly, like the thorns, eat out the life and ſpirit of that godlineſs they once ſeemed poſſeſſed of; the heart grows cold, eternal things looſe their importance, the vanities of time appear more ſignificant; and though the profeſſion of religion and the form of duties may ſtill be carried on, it is mere huſk; no ſubſtantial fruit of grace is produced: the word is choked, and the ſoul drowned in perdition and deſtruction. How many thus have fallen! May we be warned of the imminent danger, and fear for ourſelves, leſt this evil world ſteal away our hearts from God.

[4.] Though others were unfruitful, one ſort of hearers are mentioned, who, like the good ground, repaid the huſbandman's toils. Their hearts by divine grace were opened to receive the ſeed of the goſpel, and, watered by the dews of heavenly influence, it grew, and brought forth fruit abundantly. They are deſcribed not merely as hearing the word, but underſtanding it, the eyes of their mind being enlightened, and they receive the truth not only in the light but in the love of it: in their heart the ſeed takes root, and brings forth the genuine fruits of righteouſneſs and true holineſs: and this variouſly, according to the meaſure of the gift of Chriſt: for though the quality of the fruit be the ſame in all, wrought by that one and the ſelf-ſame Spirit, yet in ſome theſe fruits are more eminent and abundant than in others. May Jeſus give us then the hearing ear and underſtanding heart, that our profiting may appear; and may we ſeek to abide and abound in every fruit of grace, which by Jeſus Chriſt are to the praiſe and glory of God!

2. Chriſt reſolves the queſtion addreſſed to him by his diſciples, v. 10. why he ſpoke to the people by parables. In general ſuch was the good pleaſure of his will. With regard to thoſe who were his diſciples, he intended to ſtir up their enquiries after the explication of what they heard, and it was their peculiar mercy that to them it was given to know the myſteries of the kingdom, he being ready to lead them into the knowledge of all truth; but to others it was not given. God is ſovereign in the diſpenſations of his grace, and is pleaſed to withhold from ſome what he beſtows on others: and where none have any claim upon him, he may, no doubt, do what he will with his own, v. 11. Where he hath been pleaſed to give a ſpiritual underſtanding, and the influences of his Spirit, there he will continue to work, and perfect that which he begins, increaſing his gifts of wiſdom and grace: but where there is no ſpiritual knowledge of Chriſt, no experience of his grace, no deſire to profit by his word, there he will take away the external gifts, the means of grace, or miniſtry of the goſpel, which ſuch perſons before enjoyed, and leave them to the blindneſs they have choſen, v. 12. And this he aſſigns as the reaſon why he ſpake to them in parables, without expounding them to the multitude, as he did to his own diſciples. He deſigned to leave thoſe who wilfully had rejected the light of his miracles and doctrines to the hardneſs and impenitence of their own hearts. They did not chuſe to ſee or underſtand, and therefore he decrees in juſt judgment that they ſhall not, v. 13. And herein the prophecy of Iſaiah, ch. vi. v. 9, 10. was fulfilled. The Jews were now given up to that judicial blindneſs he had foretold. In the midſt of the glorious light of the goſpel, and in the face of the aſtoniſhing miracles wherewith Jeſus as the Meſſiah had confirmed his miſſion, they obſtinately ſtopped their ears, and cloſed their eyes, as if they were afraid the force of conviction and the ſtrong evidence of truth ſhould overpower them, and neceſſitate them to ſubmit to the Saviour's doctrine, and yield up their hearts and ways to his government: which they being reſolved not to do, his Spirit will no longer ſtrive with them, and they are left to the ignorance and impenitence of their hearts, v. 14, 15. But towards thoſe whom he had choſen for diſciples, God had the moſt gracious deſigns: he had given them the ſeeing eye and the hearing ear, and bleſſed them with the underſtanding thoſe myſteries of his grace which were hid from other's eyes, v. 16. yea, they enjoyed tranſcendent favours beyond all the prophets and righteous men which had gone before them; for, earneſtly as they longed for the appearing of the Meſſiah, and to behold him incarnate, they ſaw his day but at a diſtance, and chiefly beheld the great things of his kingdom wrapped up in types and figures; whilſt his preſent diſciples beheld him face to face, ſaw his miracles, and from his own mouth more diſtinctly were informed of thoſe truths which the others ſaw only through a glaſs darkly, v. 16. Note, (1.) Why God is pleaſed to give the knowledge of his truth to one, and withhold it from another, can only be reſolved into the good pleaſure of his own will. (2.) All our wiſdom in divine things is the gift of God: till he opens the eyes of our minds, the wiſeſt of men are in groſs darkneſs. (3.) Many enjoy the means of grace whoſe hearts only grow more hard and inſenſible under them. They hate the light, and therefore are juſtly abandoned to the darkneſs they have choſen. (4.) The greateſt of all bleſſings is the knowledge of Jeſus; for him to know is everlaſting life. (5.) If we are diſtinguiſhed by peculiar circumſtances of the divine regard, the ſtronger obligation is laid upon us to be thankful, and to walk in the light as children of the light.

24. ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, ſaying,
The kingdom of heaven is likened unto [r] a man which [r] Ver. 37.
ſowed good ſeed in his field: 25. But while men ſlept, his enemy came and ſowed tares among the wheat, and went his way. 26. But when the blade was ſprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares alſo. 27.
So the ſervants of the houſholder came and ſaid unto him, Sir, Didſt thou not ſow good ſeed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares? 28. He ſaid unto them, An enemy hath done this. The ſervants ſaid unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? 29. But he ſaid, Nay; leſt while ye gather up the tares, ye root up alſo the wheat with them. 30. Let both grow together until the harveſt: and in the time of harveſt I will ſay to the reapers, Gather ye together firſt the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but [s] gather the wheat into [s] Chap. iii. 12.
my barn. 31. ¶ Another parable put he forth unto them, ſaying, [t] The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of [t] Mark iv. 31. Luke xiii. 19.
muſtard-ſeed, which a man took and ſowed in his field.
32. Which indeed is the leaſt of all ſeeds: but when it [u] Pſ. lxxx. 8—11. Prov. iv. 18.
is grown, it is the greateſt among herbs, and [u] becometh a tree: ſo that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof. 33. ¶ [x] Another parable ſpake he unto them, The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and [y] hid in three † meaſures of meal, [z] till the whole was leavened. 34. All theſe things ſpake Jeſus unto the multitude in parables, and without a parable ſpake he not unto them: 35. That it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the prophet, ſaying, [a] I will open my mouth in parables, I will utter things [b] which have been kept ſecret from the foundation of the world. 36. Then Jeſus ſent the multitude away, and went into the houſe: and his diſciples came unto him, ſaying, [c] Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field. 37, He anſwered and ſaid unto them, He that ſoweth the good ſeed, is the Son of man: 38. The field is the world: the good ſeed are the children of the kingdom: but the tares are [d] the children of the wicked one: 39. The enemy that ſowed them is the devil: [e] the harveſt is the end of the world: and the reapers are the angels. 40. As therefore the tares are gathered and burnt in the fire, ſo ſhall it be in the end of this world. 41. The Son of man ſhall ſend forth his angels, and they ſhall gather out of his kingdom all ‡ things that offend, and them which do iniquity; 42. And [f] ſhall caſt them into a furnace of fire: [g] there ſhall be wailing and gnaſhing of teeth. 43. [h] Then ſhall the righteous ſhine forth as the ſun, in the kingdom of their Father. [i] Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

[x] Luke xiii. 20.
[y] Pſ. cxix. 11.
† This meaſure contained nearly a peck and an half.
[z] 1 Cor. v. 7.
[a] Pſ. lxxviii. 2.
[b] Rom. xvi. 25. 1 Cor. ii. 7. Eph. iii. 9. Col. i. 26.
[c] Ezek. xxxvi. 37. Jam. i. 5.
[d] John viii. 44. Acts xiii. 10. 1 John iii. 8.
[e] Joel iii. 13. Rev. xiv. 15.
‡ Gr. Scandals. Rom. xvi. 17. 2 Pet. ii. 1.
[f] Chap. iii. 12. Rev. xix. 20.
[g] Chap. viii. 12.
[h] Dan. xii. 3. 1 Cor. xv. 42.
[i] Chap. xi. 15.

v. 24—43. Our Lord further continues his diſcourſe to the people in parables, chuſing in this manner to wrap up the doctrines he inculcated, according to the prophecy, (Pſ. lxxviii. 2.) and whilſt he thus opened a door for enquiry to his diſciples, to whom he afterwards explained the meaning of the figures he uſed, and informed them of the ſecrets of wiſdom couched under theſe parables, he left the multitude, who ſhewed no ſollicitude to be informed of their meaning, to their ignorance, v. 34, 35. Three parables are here delivered, one of which is afterwards particularly explained by our Lord in private to his diſciples, who deſired to be informed of its deſign, v. 36. We have,

1. The parable of the tares, which is the repreſentation of the viſible church in particular, as the former related to the world in general.

(1.) The ſower of the good ſeed is the Son of man, who by himſelf, and the miniſters he hath appointed, ſows the ſeed of eternal life in the hearts of his people, and cauſes it to take root, and bring forth fruit: all that is good in man entirely proceeds from him.

(2.) The field is the world, through which the goſpel is ſpread, and particularly the viſible church, where the word is preached, and Chriſt's ſervants, under him the great huſbandman, continually labour to break up the fallow ground, and caſt in the living ſeed.

(3.) The good ſeed are the children of the kingdom; thoſe who by faith embrace the doctrines of the goſpel, and in all holy converſation and godlineſs adorn it.

(4.) The tares are the children of the wicked one; all hypocrites and careleſs profeſſors, who, though they have a name to live in the viſible church, are really dead in treſpaſſes and ſins; under the influence of the devil, reſembling him in their ſpirit and tempers, and a trouble and vexation to the children of God among whom they aſſociate.

(5.) The enemy that ſowed them is the devil; that ſpirit of wickedneſs, whoſe unwearied labours are employed to corrupt and deſtroy the ſouls of men, and who watches day and night to take advantage againſt the church of Chriſt: and whilſt we are off our guard, or lulled by outward proſperity into a ſtate of ſecurity, he inſinuates his pernicious errors in doctrine and practice, ſeducing unſtable ſouls: and for a while the miſchief is not diſcovered, ſo artful are his wiles; like the villain who ſowed tares, and ſlipped away unnoticed under the covert of the night. But though at firſt the ſecret wickedneſs, which lurked under the cloke of plauſible profeſſion, is not perceived, in a little while the difference between the wheat and tares becomes very viſible. The exerciſe of grace in the one appears evident in the ſpirituality of their tempers, the ſimplicity of their hearts, and the purity of their manners; whilſt obſervation and experience diſcovers the unfaithfulneſs of the tares, and a day of trial ſhews their real character. With grief and ſurprize the faithful miniſters and ſervants of Jeſus behold the errors and immoralities among the profeſſors of godlineſs, and carry their ſorrowful enquiries to their Lord, v. 27. for they who have a zeal for him, cannot but be affected with every thing in his church which reflects diſhonour upon his holy religion, v. 27. He informs them whence theſe tares ſprung. He marked his enemy in all his ways, but for his own more abundant glory permitted his malicious attempts, v. 28. He does not reflect upon his ſervants, as if negligence were to be charged on them; nor will he grant their requeſt, of immediately eradicating theſe pernicious inmates. There would be danger, if it was left to us, leſt our undiſtinguiſhing eye might claſs among the hypocrites ſome who were ſincere; or, too rigid or haſty in our judgments, ſhould count thoſe tares, whom the Lord knew to be the true ſeed; for his all-ſeeing eye alone can diſcern the true characters of men. They are therefore permitted to grow together; the day of ſeparation will come, when the diſtinction between tares and wheat will be evident. And from hence we ſhould learn, (1.) That as long as Chriſt has a church, the devil will ſtill be ſeeking to diſturb the peace, or corrupt the purity of the profeſſing members of it, notwithſtanding the care of the moſt vigilant paſtors, and the adminiſtration of the ſtricteſt diſcipline. (2.) We ſhould be very cautious of pronouncing raſh and haſty cenſures on the characters of others: God only knoweth the heart; and it is better that many criminals ſhould eſcape, than one righteous perſon be condemned.

(6.) The harveſt is the end of the world; the reapers are the angels; they ſhall go forth, and make the awful ſeparation. All that offend and do iniquity, whoſe pernicious doctrines, or immoral conduct, have been a ſcandal to the religion they profeſſed, ſhall be gathered out, and, like tares, bound in bundles for the burning. The diſtinction between the righteous and the wicked ſhall then be too evident to admit of a miſtake, and the ſeparation between them ſhall be perfect and everlaſting. For,

(7.) They ſhall caſt them, the tares, into a furnace of fire; the fire prepared for the devil and his angels, the place of torment appointed for all the ungodly, where they ſhall burn, and none ſhall quench them; their pangs intolerable and eternal, under the wrath of God, which is for ever wrath to come; where every expreſſion of acuteſt anguiſh and black deſpair ſhall prove how fearful a thing it is to fall into the hands of the living God. Lord, gather not my ſoul with theſe ſinners!

(8.) The wheat ſhall be gathered into God's barn. The righteous being proved and found faithful, ſhall be collected in one glorious company, and ſhine forth as the ſun, arrayed in robes of ſpotleſs purity, and clothed with honour and immortality; admitted into their Father's kingdom, and ſitting down on the throne of their Lord, to reign with him for ever and ever. The proſpect of ſuch a glorious ſtate before us ſhould deeply engage our attention; he therefore that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

2. The parable of the grain of muſtard-ſeed, which from one of the ſmalleſt ſeeds, grows, in the eaſtern countries, into the greateſt of herbs; ſo that, like a ſpreading tree, the birds find ſhelter in its branches. And ſuch is,

(1.) The work of God in a redeemed ſoul. The beginnings are often ſmall, and ſcarce perceptible; but, watered with divine influences, the ſeed of eternal life ſprings up, and amidſt all the ſtormy blaſts of temptation, corruption, perſecution, affliction, to which it is expoſed, increaſeth with the increaſe of God.

(2.) Such alſo was the Meſſiah's kingdom at the firſt. Chriſt and his diſciples ſeemed little, mean, and deſpicable; but their word took deep root; abundant converts were made; the goſpel ſpread on every ſide, and filled the face of the world with fruit: and, like the enlarging circle in the water, the church of Chriſt ſhall go on increaſing, till the kingdoms of the world become the kingdom of the Lord, and all the fowls of the air, both Jews and Gentiles, be converted, and flock together into it. Haſten, O Lord, this happy day!

3. The parable of the leaven. As a little of this diffuſes itſelf gradually through the whole maſs of meal with which it is mingled; ſo doth the goſpel word, when quickened by divine grace, powerfully diffuſe its energy through all the faculties of the ſoul, and over all the members of the body; ſanctifying the whole, communicating throughout a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt, and working a bleſſed and univerſal change into his image and likeneſs; and ſpreading far and wide among all nations, the word of truth ſhall continue its mighty operations, till all nations ſhall be brought to the obedience of the faith. Note, (1.) Divine grace works often imperceptibly, but irreſiſtibly. (2.) Where the leaven of truth is hid in the heart, there its influence will infallibly appear; there will be a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt in all we ſpeak or do.

44. ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto [k] treaſure hid in a field: the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and [l] ſelleth all that he hath, and [m] buyeth that field. 45. ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man, ſeeking goodly pearls: 46. Who when he had found [n] one pearl of great price, he went and ſold all that he had, and bought it. 47. ¶ Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that was caſt into the ſea, and [o] gathered of every kind. 48. Which when it was full, they drew to ſhore, and ſat down, and gathered the good into veſſels, but caſt the bad away. 49. So ſhall it be

[k] Prov. ii. 4.
[l] Phil. iii. 7, 8.
[m] Iſa. lv. 1. Rev. iii. 18.
[n] 2 Cor. viii. 9. Rev. iii. 18.
[o] Chap. xxii. 10.

at the end of the world: the angels ſhall come forth, and [p] ſever the wicked from among the juſt; 50. And [q] ſhall caſt them into the furnace of fire, there ſhall be wailing and gnaſhing of teeth. 51. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Have ye underſtood all theſe things? They ſay unto him, Yea, Lord. 52. Then ſaid he unto them, Therefore every ſcribe which is inſtructed unto the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is an houſholder, which bringeth forth out of his treaſures [r] things new and old.

[p] Chap. xxv. 32.
[q] Ver. 42.
[r] Cant. vii. 13.

v. 44—52. Four other parables conclude our bleſſed Lord's diſcourſe.

1. The treaſure hid in the field, which is Chriſt himſelf, and the great and precious promiſes that are in him. The field is the ſcripture, wherein He is revealed to us, in whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, and from whom the moſt ineſtimable riches to a ſinner, of pardon, peace, righteouſneſs, and grace, are to be derived. Theſe are hid from us: though we have the ſcriptures before us, we cannot look farther than the ſurface of them, till God imparts the ſpiritual underſtanding, and enables us to dig deep in the precious mine. When we have found the treaſure, we muſt hide it in our hearts, and nothing can equal the joy with which a poor ſinner diſcovers the riches of the grace revealed in Jeſus Chriſt: for the ſake of this we ſhall be ready to part with all beſides, and count an intereſt in his love and favour the moſt invaluable treaſure.

2. The parable of the pearl of great price is much of the ſame import with the foregoing. The merchant is the convinced ſinner, ſeeking after Chriſt and his ſalvation, the pearl of great price, an object indeed deſerving our moſt eager purſuit. Shall merchants compaſs ſea and land for one poor jewel; and ſhall we not be more aſſiduous in ſecuring an intereſt in Jeſus, and the poſſeſſion of all the jewels of grace and glory? He finds it, as all who truly ſeek the Saviour aſſuredly will; and then with chearfulneſs ſells all to become poſſeſſor of it; content to quit the world, with all its riches, honours, pleaſures; his ſins, with all their allurements; yea, and to part with his own righteouſneſs too, that he may be found in Chriſt, a partaker of his redemption; and that, ſtript of all beſide, Chriſt may be to him all and in all.

3. The parable of the net caſt into the ſea, with the explication annexed. The net is the goſpel preached to every creature; the miniſters of Chriſt are the fiſhermen, who caſt it into the ſea, the world: by it a multitude of ſouls are incloſed, and brought into the viſible church. When it is full, in the latter days, and all, both Jews and Gentiles, are gathered into it, then cometh the end, when the net ſhall be drawn to ſhore, in the great day of final ſeparation, and the contents of it be examined. The good fiſh, the juſt, who in Chriſt Jeſus are juſtified from all things, and found faithful, ſhall be gathered into the veſſels of glory prepared for their reception; whilſt the angels, the miniſters employed in this ſervice, ſhall ſeparate the bad, the wicked, from among them, and caſt them away as vile and reprobate into the everlaſting burnings. Note, (1.) Many who have had a place in the goſpel church, will at the laſt day be rejected by the great head of the church, as hypocrites and unfaithful. (2.) They who live in wickedneſs, have nothing to expect but an eternity of woe. (3.) The conſideration of the dreadful end of thoſe who periſh, ſhould awaken our greater ſollicitude to make our calling and election ſure.

4. The parable of the houſholder aptly finiſhes, as the practical improvement of the whole. Our Lord, v. 51. had interrogated them on their proficiency, whether they had underſtood the meaning of the parables he had uttered; and as they had replied in the affirmative, he directs them to the proper uſe of the knowledge which they poſſeſſed. They were to be evangelical ſcribes, to preach the everlaſting goſpel, as the ſcribes in their days expounded the law: and herein they were to reſemble an houſholder, who having made a liberal proviſion for the family under his care, brings forth out of his ſtorehouſe things new and old, as each is beſt ſuited to their wants. The family under our care is the church of Chriſt, that particular part of it to which we are ordained to miniſter. Our treaſure is the word of truth, and Chriſt eſpecially therein revealed, with an experimental knowledge of him in all his offices, of the riches of his ſalvation, and the obligations to love and ſerve him thence ariſing. Theſe we muſt ſet before the people, drawn from the ſacred ſtorehouſes of the Old and New Teſtament; inculcating anew ancient truths; adding to old experiences, new obſervations; and providing thus a ſupply of ſpiritual food, ſuited to every ſtate, condition, and circumſtance of the people whom we ſerve. And this wiſdom, this ability to miniſter, no attainments of ſcience, no reſearches of philoſophy, no force of genius can beſtow: it is the gift of the great Maſter of the family, the Lord Jeſus; and they who would ſavingly teach others the doctrines of the kingdom, muſt be themſelves firſt taught of him.

53. ¶ And it came to paſs that when Jeſus had finiſhed theſe parables, he departed thence. 54. [s] And when he was come into his own country, he taught them in their ſynagogue, inſomuch that they were aſtoniſhed, and ſaid, Whence hath this man this wiſdom, and theſe mighty works? 55. [t] Is not this [u] the carpenter's ſon? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joſes, and Simon, and Judas? 56. And his ſiſters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all theſe things? 57. And [x] they were offended in him. But Jeſus ſaid unto them, A prophet is not without honour, ſave in his own country, and in his own houſe. 58. And [y] he did not many mighty works there, becauſe of their unbelief.

[s] Mark vi. 1. Luke iv. 16.
[t] Iſa. xlix. 7.
[u] John vi. 42.
[x] Iſa. liii. 3. Chap. xi. 6.
[y] Mark vi. 5.

v. 53—58. When Jeſus had finiſhed this diſcourſe, he returned to his own city Nazareth, where he had before been ſo contumeliouſly treated, and where he again met the like contempt.

1. Though they could not help being aſtoniſhed at the wiſdom and authority with which he ſpoke in their ſynagogue, and the mighty works he performed, yet their queſtions ſhew the prejudices they entertained againſt him. They knew his parentage and education: he had not been brought up under their admired doctors; and his father was of no higher rank than a carpenter: his mother Mary, a woman of no account; and his brethren and ſiſters mean, low, and illiterate people: and at this they ſtumbled, deſpiſed his perſon, and ſlighted his miniſtry.

2. Chriſt gently rebukes their unreaſonable prejudices, and puniſhes them for their low thoughts of him. They acted according to vulgar prepoſſeſſions, which lead us to pay little reverence and reſpect to thoſe with whom we have been familiar; and if they riſe to ſuperior excellence, and above their former ſtation, they are envied. Therefore, ſince they deſpiſed and rejected him, refuſed to believe his doctrine, and ſubmit to the evidence of his miracles, he did not many mighty works there; not for want of power, but in juſt judgment; leaving them to their unbelief and hardneſs of heart. Note, (1.) Prejudices entertained againſt miniſters is a great obſtruction to our profiting by their labours. (2.) We owe it to our unbelief, that we ſee and experience no more of the mighty works of Jeſus.

CHAP. XIV.

John Baptiſt had ſaid concerning Chriſt, He muſt increaſe, but I muſt decreaſe, John iii. 30. The morning-ſtar is here diſappearing, and the ſun of righteouſneſs riſing to his meridian luſtre. Here is, 1. The martyrdom of John, his impriſonment for his faithfulneſs to Herod, ver. 1—5. And the beheading of him to pleaſe Herodias, ver. 6—12. 2. The miracles of Chriſt. (1.) His feeding five thouſand men, that came to him to be taught, with five loaves and two fiſhes, ver. 13—24. (2.) Chriſt's walking on the water to his diſciples in a ſtorm, ver. 22—33. (3.) His healing the ſick with the touch of the hem of his garment, ver. 34—36.

1. AT that time [a] Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jeſus, 2. And ſaid unto his ſervants, This is John the baptiſt, [b] he is riſen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do ſhew forth themſelves in him. 3. ¶ For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in priſon for Herodias's ſake, his brother Philip's wife. 4. For John ſaid unto him, [c] It is not lawful for thee to have her. 5. And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, becauſe [d] they counted him as a prophet. 6. But when Herod's birth-day was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleaſed Herod. 7. Whereupon [e] he promiſed with an oath to give her whatſoever ſhe would aſk. 8. And ſhe, being before inſtructed of her mother, ſaid, Give me here John baptiſt's head in a charger. 9. And the king was ſorry: nevertheleſs for the oath's ſake, and them which ſat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her. 10. And he ſent and beheaded John in the priſon. 11. And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damſel: and ſhe brought it to her mother. 12. And his diſciples came, and took up the body and buried it, and went and told Jeſus.

[a] Mark vi. 14. Luke ix. 7.
[b] Pſ. xiv. 5.
[c] Lev. xviii. 6. & xx. 21.
[d] Chap. xxi. 26. Luke xx. 6.
[e] Prov. vi. 2. Eccleſ. v. 6.

v. 1—12. John, the harbinger of Jeſus, had lately finiſhed his glorious race, and won the crown of martyrdom. We have in theſe verſes an account of that bloody ſcene; and the occaſion of its being here introduced is intimated, v. 2. The fame of Jeſus and his miracles began to be noiſed; and no ſooner did they reach Herod's ears, than his guilty conſcience betrayed his fears, and inſtantly ſuggeſted, that this was John whom he had beheaded, but now raiſed from the dead, and endued with more extraordinary powers to vindicate his injured character, and perhaps avenge himſelf on his perſecutors. Note, (1.) On this ſide hell, the greateſt torment is a guilty conſcience. (2.) Perſecutors will find they in vain ſeek to be rid of their troublers: though one be ſlain or removed, God will raiſe up freſh witneſſes to the truth. (3.) Many under the horrors of conſcience, like the devils, tremble, yet continue impenitent. Convictions are not converſion.

In the ſtory of John's ſufferings we are told,

1. The occaſion of them: and this was, his fidelity and zeal in reproving Herod for his flagitious enormities, and eſpecially for his adultery and inceſt with Herodias, his brother Philip's wife, whom he had inveigled away from her own huſband; and though he was alive, and had children by her, yet had Herod publicly married her, and continued to cohabit with her. This atrocious crime John plainly and faithfully charged upon his conſcience, as utterly unlawful, and ſure to bring down the wrath of God upon him. Though a king, John feared not to diſcharge his commiſſion. As the greateſt monarchs have no prerogative to break God's laws, his miniſters muſt boldly vindicate his honour, and, without reſpect of perſons, declare his wrath againſt the mightieſt tranſgreſſors.

2. For this John was impriſoned. Inſtigated by Herodias, who meditated revenge, as well as to gratify his own reſentments, Herod had ſeized, bound, and caſt him into priſon. They who will be zealous againſt ſin, muſt prepare to ſuffer. Faithful rebukes, however kindly meant, will be often reſented as affronts, and expoſe us to the vengeance of an enraged perſecutor; but when we have a good cauſe, and a good conſcience, we need not fear bonds or impriſonment.

3. Herod would have diſpatched him out of hand, and rid himſelf of this troubler; but his fears prevailed over his reſentment, and for a while reſtrained him from the bloody deed. John's character as a prophet had procured him ſuch general veneration, that to murder him outright might provoke ſome popular inſurrection, and endanger his own perſon and government. Note, (1.) None are greater ſlaves to fear, than they who affect to tyrannize with deſpotic ſway. (2.) The fear of man often reſtrains thoſe who have caſt off all fear of God.

4. At laſt the barbarous deed is contrived and executed; and, after a tedious confinement, the faithful martyr is by death releaſed, and goes where the wicked ceaſe from troubling. It appears probable, that the whole plot was concerted by Herodias, whoſe unrelenting malice could not reſt whilſt John was yet alive; and that Herod was privy to the deſign; the circumſtances being contrived merely to blind the populace. However, whether he knew it, or raſhly involved himſelf by his oath, Herod is without excuſe. The time choſen for the execution of the deſign was Herod's birth-day, and the inſtrument was Salome, the daughter of Herodias. To grace the feſtival, ſhe condeſcended to appear before the auguſt aſſembly, and danced ſo exquiſitely, that Herod in a tranſport of delight ſwore to gratify her in whatever requeſt ſhe ſhould make. At her mother's inſtigation ſhe demands the head of John the Baptiſt, who thought hereby at once to get rid of his reproofs, and glut her revenge. Struck with this bloody requeſt, at leaſt appearing to be ſo, Herod expreſſed great ſorrow and reluctance to comply with it. The injuſtice, cruelty, and infamy of ſuch an action cried aloud. Nevertheleſs, pretending conſcience, as if a raſh oath could oblige him to commit ſo wicked a deed, and out of reſpect to thoſe around him, who being witneſſes to the oath approved the performance of it, and probably were glad to get rid of ſo troubleſome a reprover, he gives orders for John's execution in the priſon, and inſtantly, without form or proceſs, ſends one of his ſavage inſtruments to bring the head of the holy Baptiſt in a charger. The bloody diſh is delivered to Salome, and ſhe preſents it to her mother, a feaſt for her cruel revenge, whilſt with malicious delight ſhe beholds that tongue for ever ſilent, that had ſo deeply wounded her repoſe. Note, (1.) Seaſons of carnal mirth and jollity are uſually attended with much miſchief. Feaſting and dancing are pleaſing to the fleſh; but they are pernicious to the ſpirit, and often productive of fatal conſequences. (2.) Raſh oaths involve the conſcience in dreadful dilemmas, where guilt is ſure to faſten on either ſide; yet, when we have ſworn to do evil, that oath is more ſafely broken than kept. Our obligation to keep God's laws cannot be ſuperſeded by any other we chuſe to lay ourſelves under. (3.) The boſom, that ſhould be the ſeat of tenderneſs, when fired with luſt and revenge, becomes the moſt barbarous and ſavage. (4.) The bad examples of parents are fatally pernicious. We quickly learn the evil to which the bias of corrupt nature leans ſo ſtrongly. (5.) Many are made ſorry by their ſins, who never have godly ſorrow for them. Though ſcourged by their conſciences, their love of evil bears down their convictions. (6.) The triumphing of the wicked is ſhort; God will ſoon require at their hands the innocent blood they have ſhed.

5. The diſciples of John hearing the ſad cataſtrophe, came to pay their laſt kind offices to their maſter's corpſe, and teſtify their affection and reſpect by attending it to the grave; and then went and informed Jeſus of the event, on whoſe miniſtry probably they had attended ſince John's impriſonment: and if they were drawn nearer to him by their former maſter's removal, they were in the iſſue gainers by their loſs. Note, (1.) As the duſt of his ſaints is precious to the Lord, ſo ſhould their very corpſes be to us, for the ſake of the ſpirit which dwelt in them. (2.) We muſt carry all our griefs to Jeſus, and be confident he will alleviate the ſorrows we pour into his compaſſionate boſom. (3.) Whatever human helps, friends, or miniſters, we may be deprived of, we may not deſpond; our Maſter in heaven ever lives; and if we are driven nearer to him, he can more than compenſate our loſſes.

13. ¶ [f] When Jeſus heard of it, [g] he departed thence by ſhip into a deſart place, apart: and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities. 14. And Jeſus went forth, and ſaw a great multitude, and [h] was moved with compaſſion toward them, and he healed their ſick. 15. And when it was evening, his diſciples came to him, ſaying, This is a deſart place, and the time is now paſt; ſend the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themſelves victuals. 16. But Jeſus ſaid unto them, They need not depart, give ye them to eat. 17. And they ſay unto him, [i] We have here but five loaves, and two fiſhes. 18. He ſaid, Bring them hither to me. 19. And he commanded the multitude to ſit down on the graſs, and took the five loaves, and the two fiſhes, and looking up to heaven, [k] he bleſſed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his diſciples, and [l] the diſciples to the multitude. 20. And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the fragments that remained, twelve baſkets full. 21. And they that had eaten were about five thouſand men, beſide women and children.

[f] Mark vi. 32. Luke ix. 10.
[g] Chap. x. 23. & xii. 14, 15.
[h] Chap. ix. 36.
[i] Num. xi. 22. 2 Kings iv. 43.
[k] Chap. xv. 36. & xxvi. 26. Rom. xiv. 6.
[l] Chap. xiv. 45.

v. 13—21. To ſhelter himſelf from the jealouſy of a cruel tyrant, as well as to give ſome reſt to his diſciples, returned from their travels and preaching, our Lord withdrew into a deſart place. His hour was not yet come; nor was he called to expoſe himſelf to Herod's enmity; and therefore he took this prudential ſtep, teaching up by his example, though always to be prepared for ſuffering in the way of duty, not raſhly or needleſsly to court perſecution. Hereupon we are told,

1. That the multitude, who had heard of his departure, immediately followed him on foot; ſo eager were they to attend his miniſtry. Though there might be danger in cleaving to a man ſo obnoxious, and they muſt go many a weary ſtep to attend him, nothing diſcouraged them. They who have a reliſh for the goſpel, will follow it in all its removes, and ſtick at no pains to enjoy the ſincere milk of the word: nor will perſecution abate their ardor, but increaſe it.

2. The ſight of ſo many poor ſouls awakened the compaſſions of Jeſus; and though he came thither for retirement, he gladly choſe to forego his own eaſe to do them good. He would not ſuffer them to come ſo far in vain, and therefore went forth, pitying their ſad caſe, deſtitute of food for their bodies, many ſick and weak, and, worſt of all, their ſouls periſhing for lack of knowledge: and therefore he undertakes the relief of all their neceſſities; healing their ſick; inſtructing them in the doctrines of his kingdom; and deſigning, ere they parted, to ſpread a table for them in the wilderneſs. With like compaſſions ſhould we regard the ſouls and bodies of men, and then ſhall we readily lay out ourſelves, and chearfully ſpend and be ſpent in their ſervice.

3. The diſciples, ignorant of the intentions of their Maſter, and foreſeeing the inconveniencies which muſt ariſe from detaining ſo vaſt a multitude there, where no refreſhment could be procured, deſired their Lord to diſmiſs the congregation, the day beginning to decline. But he, who knew his own intentions, to try their faith, bids them communicate their little ſtock of proviſions to the people. The diſciples reaſonably object the inſufficiency of their ſlender ſtore, amounting to no more than five loaves and two fiſhes, which, though they were ready to part with, would not be taſted among ſuch a multitude. Yet Jeſus bad them bring them to him, and truſt his power. Note, (1.) In following Chriſt we may be reduced to the greateſt ſtraits; but in the way of duty we muſt truſt, and not be afraid. (2.) They who have Chriſt, have all, and abound; his preſence and love can abundantly compenſate every loſs, and enable us to be content even to be hungry, and in need of daily food. (3.) Chriſt and his diſciples lived on coarſe and ſcanty fare, to teach us abſtinence and the mortification of our ſenſual appetites. (4.) Though we have but little, we ſhould be ready, when duty calls, to give of that little.

4. Our Lord diſtributes the proviſion. Having commanded the multitude to ſit down, where the graſs was their carpet, he craved a bleſſing on the meal; and breaking the bread, gave it to his diſciples, who waited on the multitude, as they ſat in ranks oppoſite each other, and with aſtoniſhment beheld the meat grow under their hands, and increaſe as it deſcended. Note, (1.) Chriſt himſelf is the living bread, which faith daily feeds upon; in him there is enough for all, and to ſpare. (2.) We ſhould never ſit down to our meals without aſking God's bleſſing. It is among the ſureſt marks of an irreligious family, or an irreligious heart, wherever this is neglected. We who are fed by his bounty, are ſurely bound at leaſt to acknowledge the favour. (3.) When we charitably break our bread to the hungry, we ſhall find no diminution of our ſtore.

5. There was enough, and more than enough for all. They did all eat, and were filled; five thouſand men, beſides women and children: and, inſtead of ſuffering any loſs, the diſciples, on collecting the fragments, find that they far exceed the original food, amounting to twelve baſkets full. Note, (1.) The bleſſing of God can multiply a little into abundance; and none are paid with ſo good intereſt, as thoſe who in charity lend unto the Lord. (2.) Though we have plenty, it muſt not therefore tempt us to waſte. Since we cannot make one bit of bread, and multitudes of God's poor may want it, every crumb ſhould be carefully collected. The truly liberal will be the beſt œconomiſts.

22. ¶ And ſtraightway Jeſus conſtrained his diſciples to get into a ſhip, and to go before him unto the other ſide, while he ſent the multitudes away. 23. [m] And when he had ſent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray; and [n] when the evening was come, he was there alone. 24. But the ſhip was now in the midſt of the ſea, [o] toſſed with waves: for the wind was contrary. 25. And [p] in the fourth watch of the night, Jeſus went unto them [q] walking on the ſea. 26. And when the diſciples ſaw him walking on the ſea, they were troubled, ſaying, It is a ſpirit; and they cried out for fear. 27. But ſtraightway Jeſus ſpake unto them, ſaying, Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid. 28. And Peter anſwered him and ſaid, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. 29. And he ſaid, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ſhip, he walked on the water to go to Jeſus. 30. But when he ſaw [r] the wind boiſtrous, he was afraid: and beginning to ſink, he cried, ſaying, Lord, ſave me. 31. And immediately [s] Jeſus ſtretched forth his hand, and caught him, and ſaid unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didſt thou doubt? 32. And when they were come into the ſhip, the wind ceaſed. 33. Then they that were in the ſhip came and worſhipped him, ſaying, Of a truth [t] thou art the Son of God.

[m] Mark vi. 46, &c.
[n] John vi. 16, &c.
[o] Iſa. liv. 11.
[p] Pſ. xlvi. 1.
[q] Job ix. 8.
[r] Acts xiv. 22.
[s] Pſ. xviii. 6.
[t] Pſ. ii. 7. Chap. xvi. 16. John i. 49.

v. 22—33. Miracle ſucceeds to miracle: he had juſt preſerved the multitude from being famiſhed, and now he ſaves his diſciples from foundering in the ſtorm. The Lord is ever a very preſent help in trouble. We are told,

1. The conſtraint he put upon his diſciples, ordering them to embark whilſt he diſmiſſed the multitude. There appeared in the people preſent a deep conviction of his being the Meſſiah, and, according to their prejudices, they now thought of proclaiming him king, which opportunity his diſciples were ready eagerly to embrace: but they miſtook the nature of his kingdom, and for a while entertained the falſe notions of their countrymen. Note, The diſciples of Chriſt are ever too apt to look for a temporal inſtead of a ſpiritual kingdom.

2. When he had ſent away his diſciples, though reluctant, and diſmiſſed the people, he retired for prayer and communion with God, and in that pleaſing work continued till night drew on. Note, They who are much in public miniſtrations, need alſo be much in prayer and converſe with God. They will be moſt fervent in their diſcourſes, who come from their knees into their pulpits.

3. His diſciples, who had embarked at his command, were now in imminent danger. All was ſmooth when they ſet ſail; but now when they were far from land the ſtorm aroſe, and the wind blew directly againſt them. Thus in the way of duty we may meet with ſore temptations, and be ſometimes at our wits end. All things may ſeem to be againſt us, and the diſpenſations of providence and grace dark and gloomy as this tempeſtuous night; and yet even then are all things working together for our good. If we ſteadily hold on our courſe, and walk by faith, not by ſight, we ſhall arrive ſafe at the ſhore of eternal reſt.

4. In the time of need Jeſus approaches them at the morning watch, walking on the ſtormy waves, and thereby ſhewing them his power to ſave them, and his attention to them in the hour of danger. But they not knowing him, and obſerving ſomething moving on the waters, concluded it an apparition, or ſome evil ſpirit; and ſuppoſing it foreboded ſome miſchief to them, cried out for fear: but Jeſus immediately undeceived them, and with his well-known voice endeavours to quiet their apprehenſions of danger. Be of good cheer; be undiſmayed; it is I, your maſter and Lord; be not afraid, whilſt I am ſo nigh, and able to ſave you. Note, (1.) Chriſt is nearer us when we are in trouble, than we are aware of; and when we ſeem abandoned by him, his right hand is under us, to keep us from ſinking. (2.) When the ſoul is in diſtreſs, we are ready to interpret even the appearances in our favour as ominous, and to ſtart from our approaching mercies. (3.) If Chriſt ſpeaks comfort to our hearts, we need not then be afraid of any danger or diſtreſs, for he through all can make us more than conquerors.

5. Their fears being ſomewhat quieted, Peter, impatient to be at his Maſter's feet, and ever the foremoſt to expreſs his fidelity and zeal, begs leave, if it was the Lord indeed, his doubts not being entirely removed, that he would command him to come down, and enable him to go to him on the waters. Tho' eager to go, he dares not without a warrant; but if Jeſus bids him, neither winds nor waves diſmay him. The Lord grants his requeſt, and, at once to convince him of his weakneſs, and confirm his faith, permits him to come. Note, (1.) They who love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt in ſincerity, will, at his bidding, go through fire or water. (2.) Though no dangers muſt deter us in the way of duty, we may not wilfully run into them without a divine call. (3.) Chriſt knows our hearts; and though he ſees much infirmity mingled with our warmeſt profeſſion, he knows how to pity and pardon the one, whilſt he kindly accepts the other.

6. Peter no ſooner receives permiſſion, than immediately he boldly caſts himſelf into the deep, and, by faith upheld, walks on the foaming billows. But when he felt the ſtormy wind, and obſerved the boiſterous waves, his faith ſtaggered, his fears prevailed, and he began to ſink. Ready to periſh, he inſtantly and eagerly cries, Lord, ſave me; and in the laſt extremity ſtretches the arms of faith and prayer towards the almighty Saviour. Note, (1.) Whilſt we walk by faith, not by ſight, we ſhall ſtand firm amidſt the ſtorms of this tumultuous world. (2.) The ſtrongeſt believers are ſometimes ſhaken; and, to humble and beat down all ſelf-confidence, the Saviour is pleaſed to withhold his grace, and then they inſtantly feel how weak they are. (3.) We may never expect perfect deliverance from our fears, till we are perfected in love, and that is reſerved for the happineſs of a better world. (4.) We cannot but ſtagger, the moment we take our eye off from Chriſt and his promiſes, to look at the difficulties and dangers before us, and our own inability to ſurmount them. (5.) Though Chriſt permits true believers ſometimes to begin to ſink, he will not ſuffer them to be drowned, but means only to magnify his power and grace towards them, and to excite their gratitude and love in the more abundant experience of his ſalvation. (6.) Times of danger ſhould be times of prayer; and Jeſus never yet failed the poor ſinner, who, ſenſible of his inevitable ruin without him, thus ardently cried, Lord, ſave me.

7. The prayer is ſcarce ſooner uttered than anſwered; the almighty hand of Jeſus ſtretched out, ſnatched him from the jaws of death; and raiſing him up, he rebukes his weak and wavering faith, that, after experiencing ſo much of his Lord's power, could yet diſtruſt him. Note, (1.) Many a time may every faithful ſoul remember the occaſion, when he was ready to give up all for loſt, and ſeemed ſinking into eternal death, and then did Jeſus ſnatch us as brands from the burning. (2.) All our diſquieting fears ariſe from our unbelief, and ſhould drive us more to our knees, that the cauſe of them may be removed by the increaſe of our faith. (3.) Little faith, though it may leave us in a fright, will never leave us finally to fall. None can ſink who have ever taken hold on Chriſt. (4.) When we diſhonour our Lord by diſtruſting his power and love, we deſerve to be upbraided for it.

8. On the coming of Jeſus into the ſhip with Peter, the ſtorm inſtantly ceaſed, the waves ſubſided, and, ſtruck with aſtoniſhment, all who were in the ſhip fell at his feet, acknowledging his divine power and godhead in the wonders they had ſeen, and adoring him for the mercies they had received. Note, (1.) When Chriſt comes to viſit the troubled ſoul, then the winds of diſtreſs and temptation are huſhed, and the tempeſt of doubts and fears is calmed. (2.) Experience of the Redeemer's grace and power ſhould confirm our faith, and excite our adoration; and this is the bleſſed end for which he permits his people to be exerciſed, that he may more abundantly diſplay his own glory in their ſalvation.

34. ¶ [u] And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Genneſaret. 35. And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they ſent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diſeaſed. 36. And beſought him that they might

[u] Mark vi. 53.

only

x Chap. ix. 20. Mark iii. 10. Luke vi. 19. Acts xix. 12.

only touch the hem of his garment : and [x] as many as touched were made perfectly whole.

v. 34—36. The ſtorm being over, and their ſhip arrived ſafe to port, they diſembarked in the fruitful land of Genneſaret ; and thus ſhall the ſaints of God at laſt, when all the tempeſts of life are blown over, reach that land, where there is undiſturbed repoſe, and pleaſures for evermore.

No ſooner is it known that Jeſus is there, than we are told, the eagerneſs with which the people of that country crouded around him, ſpreading the glad tidings through the neighbourhood, and bringing all their diſeaſed to Jeſus, the great and general phyſician. And ſuch was their faith in his ſufficiency to heal all their maladies, that they beſought him, if but to touch the hem of his garment, perſuaded ſuch virtue reſided in him, that nothing more was needful to their cure : nor were they diſappointed in their confidence or application. He granted their requeſt, and as many as touched him immediately were made perfectly whole. Note, (1.) Chriſt's viſits are precious ; we ſhould improve them with diligence. (2.) If we have found him a Saviour unto us, it becomes us to ſpread the glad tidings, and invite others to come and ſhare our bleſſings. (3.) There is no diſeaſe of our ſouls, but Jeſus hath healing for it. If we periſh, it is becauſe we will not come to him that we may have life. (4.) They who in faith and humility approach the Saviour, are ſure never to go diſappointed away.

CHAP. XV.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's diſcourſe with the ſcribes and Phariſees about human traditions and injunctions, ver. 1—9. 2. His diſcourſe with the multitude, and with his diſciples, concerning the things that defile a man, ver. 10—20. 3. His caſting the devil out of the woman of Canaan's daughter, ver. 21—28. 4. His healing of all that were brought to him, ver. 29—31. 5. His feeding four thouſand men with ſeven loaves and a few little fiſhes, ver. 32—39.

a Mark vii. 1.
b Col. ii. 8.
c Ex. xx. 12. Deut. v. 16.
d Ex. xxi. 17. Lev. xx. 9. Prov. xx. 20. & xxx. 17.
e Prov. i. 25.
f Iſa. xxix. 13. Ezek. xxxiii. 31.
g Col. ii. 18—22.

1. THEN [a] came to Jeſus ſcribes and Phariſees, which were of Jeruſalem, ſaying, 2. Why do thy diſciples tranſgreſs [b] the tradition of the elders ? for they waſh not their hands when they eat bread. 3. But he anſwered and ſaid unto them, Why do you alſo tranſgreſs the commandment of God by your tradition ? 4. For God commanded, ſaying, [c] Honour thy father and mother : and, [d] He that curſeth father or mother, let him die the death. 5. But ye ſay, Whoſoever ſhall ſay to his father or his mother, It is a gift by whatſoever thou mighteſt be profited by me, 6. And honour not his father or his mother, he ſhall be free. [e] Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition. 7. Ye hypocrites, well did Eſaias propheſy of you, ſaying, 8. [f] This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips : but their heart is far from me. 9. But in vain do they worſhip me, [g] teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

v. 1—9. Since the purity of the Redeemer's conduct was ſuch that his moſt inveterate enemies could not convince him of ſin, the ſcribes and Phariſees endeavoured, if they could not prove him guilty of a breach of God's law, to accuſe him at leaſt as a breaker of the canons of their church.

1. The accuſation laid againſt him is for permitting his diſciples " to tranſgreſs the tradition of the elders, and eat bread " with unwaſhen hands :" which to them appeared highly criminal, who, having loſt the ſpirit and power of godlineſs, were wholly engroſſed with the form, and ſpent their zeal in practiſing and enforcing the vain ſuperſtitions of their own invention as the moſt eſſential parts of religion. And ſimilar hereunto we ſtill too frequently ſee the moſt rigid and ſuperſtitious obſervers of the form of godlineſs the greateſt enemies to the power of it, and the moſt inveterate perſecutors of the ſpiritually-minded.

2. Chriſt anſwers their accuſation, vindicates his diſciples, and rebukes their hypocriſy.

[1.] He vindicates his diſciples, by ſhewing the folly and wickedneſs of the traditions on which they grounded their charge, and recriminates by a juſter accuſation of their conduct who made void the commandments of God by their traditions. In proof of which he produces the fifth commandment, where the duty of children towards their parents is enjoined ; and in the honour we muſt pay to them there is included the relief of their wants, in caſe of need : and to this law God hath annexed the moſt awful ſanction : The tranſgreſſor who curſes, or but ſpeaks contemptibly of, his father or mother, is doomed to death, Exod. xxi. 17. But their falſe caſuiſtry had provided an evaſion, to avoid miniſtring to the neceſſities of their parents ; and their tradition aſſerted, that however urgent theſe might be, if they vowed to employ in ſacred uſes, what ſhould have been given to relieve their parents wants ; or rather, as Dr. Gill interprets the paſſage, vowed that what they had ſhould be as Corban, as if dedicated to the ſanctuary, and ſhould not be given to their parents uſe ; they were then ſuppoſed to be bound by their vow ; and though the things were not employed in ſacred uſes, they thought themſelves authorized under this pretence to withhold from their father or mother the relief they ought to have afforded them : a tradition as abſurd as impious, and utterly overturning the law of God. Note, (1.) Many who are flaming in zeal for trifling human ceremonies, diſregard and violate the moſt eſſential precepts of charity, and the moſt evident commands of God's law. (2.) Tradition has been ever a treacherous guide ; therefore neither antiquity nor authority muſt weigh a ruſh with us againſt the revealed truths of God's word.

[2.] He rebukes their hypocriſy. He knew their hearts, and therefore there was no raſhneſs nor uncharitableneſs in the charge laid againſt them : and he brings his reproof from Iſaiah ; for what the prophet ſpake as the character of the men of his day, had alſo a further view to the generation then preſent, who exactly anſwered the deſcription ; and they are indeed equally applicable to the ſtate of all hypocrites and formal profeſſors to the end of time. They made an outward ſhew of religion, and, ſo far as lip-ſervice and external worſhip went, pretended to honour God ; but their hearts, without which he is pleaſed with no ſervices, were far eſtranged from him : and whilſt they appeared to pay the higheſt reſpect to God, they ſet up their traditions and human inventions, many of them in direct oppoſition to God's law ; and this rendered all their worſhip and apparent devotion vain, uſeleſs, and rejected. Note, (1.) Hypocriſy is among the moſt common and fatal ſins ; and though men may not diſcover it in us, from God it cannot be hid. (2.) God's firſt requirement of us is our heart ; if this be alienated from him, nothing we can offer him beſide will meet with any acceptance.

h Mark vii. 14.
i Acts x. 15. Rom. xiv. 14. 1 Tim. iv. 4. Tit. i. 15.
k John xv. 2.
l Iſa. ix. 16. & xlii. 19. Chap. xxiii. 16.
m Jer. v. 31. & xx. 6. Rev. xxii. 15.
n John xiv. 9. Heb. v. 12.
o Jam. iii. 6.
p Gen. vi. 5. & viii. 21. Prov. vi. 14. Jer. xvii. 9.

10. ¶ [h] And he called the multitude, and ſaid unto them, Hear and underſtand. 11. [i] Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man ; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man. 12. Then came his diſciples, and ſaid unto him, Knoweſt thou that the Phariſees were offended after they heard this ſaying ? 13. But he anſwered and ſaid, [k] Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, ſhall be rooted up. 14. Let them alone : [l] they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, [m] both ſhall fall into the ditch. 15. Then anſwered Peter, and ſaid unto him, Declare unto us this parable. 16. And Jeſus ſaid, Are ye alſo [n] yet without underſtanding ? 17. Do not ye yet underſtand, that whatſoever entreth in at the mouth, goeth into the belly, and is caſt out into the draught ? 18. But [o] thoſe things which proceed out of the mouth, come forth from the heart, and they defile the man. 19. For [p] out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, falſe witneſs, blaſphemies. 20. Theſe are the things which defile a man : but to eat with unwaſhen hands, defileth not a man.

v. 10—20. Having vindicated his diſciples, and rebuked the hypocriſy of the Phariſees, he endeavours to ſet the multitude in general right in a matter of ſuch importance, which had been ſo grievouſly miſtaken. And for this purpoſe he calls them unto him, as they probably had withdrawn whilſt the Phariſees had talked with him, and bids them hear and underſtand ; for it requires much attention and careful examination before we can emancipate ourſelves from the fetters of long-rooted error, and the prejudices of education.

1. He lays down this grand axiom, that all defilement comes from within. It was a ſuperſtitious tradition which the Phariſees inculcated, that the meat eaten with unwaſhen hands communicated pollution to the ſoul ; whereas nothing can defile that but ſin, which taking its riſe in the heart, iſſues forth at the mouth. And herein he levelled a tacit rebuke againſt theſe cavillers, who, whilſt they contended for cleanneſs and purity, betrayed the venom and malignity of their own hearts. The ſevereſt cenſurers of others are uſually thus found moſt culpable themſelves. Whilſt they pretend to pluck the mote from their brother's eye, they diſcover not the beam which is in their own.

2. When they were retired into a houſe, the diſciples, aware of the great offence this declaration gave to the Phariſees, expreſſed their concern about it, as if the obſervation had been better ſuppreſſed, and might prejudice and exaſperate them againſt him. Note, (1.) Truth, however offenſive, muſt be ſpoken, and the woe lies not againſt thoſe who give the offence, but againſt thoſe who take it. (2.) We are too apt to hear for others, and to fear, leaſt ſome of the audience ſhould be diſguſted with plain dealing. But they who would convert men's ſouls, muſt often be content to offend nice ears.

3. In anſwer to their ſuggeſtion, Jeſus vindicates what he had ſpoken, as proper and neceſſary. As thoſe men, and their traditions, were not thoſe heavenly plants, which God the Father had planted; they are thus, by the piercing word of truth, diſcovered, detected, and rooted up. If they are offended, the diſciples need not regard it; for high as their character was among the people, they were in fact no better than blind leaders of the blind, ignorant themſelves of ſaving truth, and miſleading thoſe who blindly and implicitly obeyed their dictates. And the neceſſary conſequence of this was, that they muſt periſh together, and fall into the pit of eternal miſery. Note, (1.) However plauſible men's profeſſions may be, and however admired their characters, if they are not the planting of God, and experimentally partakers of the quickening influences of his ſpirit, their ruin is as ſure as that of impenitent publicans and harlots. (2) Pride and blindneſs of heart are inſeparable companions; and none are ſo far from the light of truth, as thoſe who, filled with the conceit of their own wiſdom and abilities, vainly boaſt how clear they ſee. (3.) The deceived and the deceiver will periſh together; and they who chuſe their own deluſions, have themſelves only to blame for the ruin which enſues.

4. Peter, in the name of the diſciples, not underſtanding the meaning of the parable, or ſtill biaſſed by the prejudices of education, deſires his maſter to explain himſelf more diſtinctly on this point: and though their backwardneſs to underſtand was culpable, their deſire to be informed was commendable. It is always good to be inquiſitive about the great concerns of our ſouls, and Chriſt is willing to teach thoſe who deſire to learn, whilſt the wilfully ignorant, the ſelf-ſufficient, and the proud, are juſtly left to their darkneſs and ruin.

5. Chriſt rebukes the dulneſs of their capacity, yet graciouſly condeſcends to give a farther explication of what he had advanced. Are ye alſo yet without underſtanding? They had enjoyed many and long opportunities for profiting under him, and it was a ſhame in a matter ſo plain, they ſhould be yet ſo ignorant. Chriſt juſtly expects our means and mercies ſhould produce a proportionate advancement in grace and knowledge. Nothing could be more evident than that the meat, of whatever ſort it were, which entered at the mouth, and merely paſſed through the body, could communicate no moral defilement to the ſoul. But the heart being the ſource and fountain of all ſpiritual impurity, what flowed from thence alone communicated in God's ſight defilement to the man: and the corrupt and impure ſtreams which flow from thence he enumerates, a dreadful catalogue, but the natural produce of every fallen ſpirit. (1.) Evil thoughts, ſuch as lewd deſires, infidel reaſonings, covetous wiſhes, malicious purpoſes, fraudulent deſigns, which never appeared in words or actions, but were naked and open before God, and brought guilt upon the ſoul. (2.) Murders, not only the effuſion of human blood, but every word of anger, every act of violence, every expreſſion of malice, hatred, or revenge. (3.) Adulteries, fornications, with all the various ſteps and contrivances which have a tendency to lead men to theſe horrid deeds. (4.) Thefts, whether committed by force or fraud. (5.) Falſe witneſs in perjuries, lies, deceit, and miſrepreſentation. (6.) Blaſphemies, againſt God or man. Theſe are the great violations of God's law, the things which involve the conſcience in guilt, and make us loathſome in the eyes of divine purity: whilſt to eat with unwaſhen hands communicates no defilement to the ſoul, nor in the leaſt renders any man a ſinner before God.

21. ¶ [q] Then Jeſus went thence, and departed into the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon. 22. And behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the ſame coaſts, and cried unto him, ſaying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievouſly vexed with a devil. 23. But [r] he anſwered her not a word. And his diſciples came and beſought him, ſaying, Send her away, for ſhe crieth after us. 24. But he anſwered and ſaid, I am not ſent, but unto [s] the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael. 25. Then came ſhe and [t] worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord, help me. 26. But he anſwered and ſaid, [u] It is not meet to take the children's bread, and caſt it to the dogs. 27. And ſhe ſaid, [x] Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their maſter's table. 28. [y] Then Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

[q] Mark vii. 24.
[r] Pſ. xxii. 2. Jer. xiv. 9. Lam. iii. 8.
[s] Chap. x. 6. Rom. xv. 8.
[t] Gen. xxxii. 26.
[u] Chap vii. 6.
[x] Pſ. lxxiii. 22. Prov. xxx. 2.
[y] Iſa. lvii. 26.

v. 21—28. Departing from the country of Genneſaret, our Lord viſited the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon. He had a peculiar object in his view, and by one act of favour to the poor Gentiles, would intimate the mercy he had in ſtore for them. We have,

1. The application made to him by a poor woman of that country, a Canaanite; perhaps a deſcendant of that accurſed race, but ſelected as a monument of mercy. Having heard the fame of Jeſus, ſhe ſeized the preſent moment to prefer her requeſt. Her caſe was very afflictive, her daughter was grievouſly vexed with a devil, poſſeſſed and tormented by him, and therefore ſhe earneſtly cries, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David. She profeſſes her faith in him, as the true Meſſiah, expreſſes her confidence of his power to help her, and conſcious of her own unworthineſs to receive any favour from him, caſts herſelf entirely on his mercy. Note, (1.) To ſee a child under the power of diſeaſe, is deeply felt by every tender parent; but to behold them under the power of ſin and Satan, is far more grievous. (2.) When we can do no more for our unhappy offſpring, we muſt continue in prayer to preſent their miſerable ſtate to Jeſus, if ſo be, he may interpoſe to heal them. (3.) The mercies ſhewn to our children are favours done to ourſelves, and ſhould be ſo acknowledged. (4.) All that a ſinner hath to aſk of the Saviour is mere mercy; we have no claim upon him, and can only caſt ourſelves at his feet, to do with us, and by us, according to the riches of his grace.

2. Her application at firſt appears to be utterly diſregarded, and Jeſus condeſcended to make no reply; not that he meant to deny her requeſt, but to exerciſe her faith, and quicken her importunity. His diſciples, who had never ſeen before their maſter deaf to the intreaties of the miſerable, intereſted themſelves in her behalf; and not merely to be rid of her cries, but probably affected with her deep diſtreſs, wiſhed her requeſt granted, and that ſhe were diſmiſſed in peace; but his anſwer, v. 24. ſeemed to carry a ſtill more unfavourable aſpect, as if his miniſtry and miracles were to be confined to Iſrael alone. Nay, when the poor petitioner, notwithſtanding all diſcouragement, approaching nearer, fell down at his feet, importunately reiterating her requeſt, ſhe apparently meets with ſtill a rougher reception; ſeems to be ſpurned away as a dog, and excluded from the participation of mercies which were confined to God's covenant people, as if all out of the pale of peculiarity deſerved to be treated as impure animals, and rejected by the faithful. Note, (1.) We muſt not conclude our requeſts are refuſed, becauſe they are not immediately granted; nor that though the Saviour ſeems to frown, he forbids farther intreaty; it is to exerciſe our faith, and quicken our prayers. (2.) Gracious ſouls are ever ready advocates and interceſſors for the miſerable. (3.) If the Lord write bitter things againſt us, it is to humble our ſouls before him, and make us ſee how vile and unworthy we are of any favour at his hands.

3. Not diſmayed by this repulſe, nor driven to quit her hold, her faith cleaves to him, and her ſoul bows down before him. Far from being offended at being treated as a dog, or ſinking into deſpair at Chriſt's reply, her anſwer expreſſed the deep humility and unſhaken dependance of her heart upon him. "Truth, Lord, ſhe replied; I own the charge; more vile and "worthleſs than I am no dog can be; a ſinner, a Gentile, undeſerving of any favour: yet, as a dog, regard me" (ſo gracefully and powerfully doth ſhe improve that for her plea, which ſeemed to convey the greateſt diſcouragement;) "they "are permitted, under their maſter's table, to pick up the "crumbs that fall, I aſk no more. Whilſt happier Iſraelites "enjoy the abundance of thy miracles, let one crumb fall on "me, a poor Canaanite; no loſs to them, to me a mercy ſo "unſpeakable." Note, (1.) Nothing muſt ever drive us from Chriſt; the more we are diſtreſſed, the more ſhould we cleave to him. If we periſh, we periſh; let it be at leaſt at the feet of Jeſus, and there none ever yet were finally caſt away. (2.) We can never have too lowly thoughts of ourſelves; the worſt we can ſay of ourſelves, or others can ſay of us, is nothing ſo bad as God ſees in us. (3.) Active faith lays hold even on the hand that ſeems ſtretched out to deſtroy: "though "thou ſlay me, yet will I truſt in thee." And this is indeed the the triumph of faith.

4. As if amazed and overcome by faith ſo diſtinguiſhed, Jeſus grants her requeſt, and diſmiſſes her with the higheſt marks of his approbation. To her utmoſt wiſhes he extends the favour, and inſtantly her daughter was made whole. Note, (1.) Nothing is ſo pleaſing and honourable to Jeſus, as great faith in his power and love. (2.) There is no mercy that we can aſk, believing, which Jeſus will ever refuſe us; whether it be pardon, grace, or glory, it ſhall aſſuredly be given us.

29. And Jeſus departed [z] from thence, and came nigh unto the ſea of Galilee, and went up into a mountain, and ſat down there. 30. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them thoſe that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and caſt them down at Jeſus feet, and [a] he healed them. 31. Inſomuch that the multitude wondered, when they ſaw the dumb to ſpeak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to ſee: and they glorified the God of Iſrael. 32. ¶ [b] Then Jeſus called his diſciples unto him, and ſaid, I have compaſſion on the multitude, becauſe they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat: and I will not ſend them away faſting, leſt they faint by the way. 33. And his diſciples ſay unto him, [c] Whence ſhould we have ſo much bread in the wilderneſs, as to fill ſo great a multitude? 34. And Jeſus ſaith unto them, How many loaves have ye? and they ſaid, Seven, and a few little fiſhes. 35. And he commanded the multitude to ſit down on the ground. 36. And he took the ſeven loaves and the fiſhes, and [d] gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his diſciples, and the diſciples to the multitude. 37. And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left, ſeven baſkets full. 38. And they that did eat, were four thouſand men, beſide women and children. 39. And he ſent away the multitude, and took ſhip, and came into the coaſts of Magdala.

[z] Mark vii. 31.
[a] Iſa. xxxv. 5, 6. Chap. xi. 5.
[b] Mark viii. 1.

v. 29—39. Having finiſhed the work which he went thither to do, Jeſus returned again to the coaſts of Galilee: and ſeating himſelf on a riſing ground, as the great and univerſal phyſician, appeared ready to receive and relieve every miſerable patient whatever his diſeaſe might be, without money, and without price. We have an account,

1. Of the multitudes who came to him, bringing the afflicted with various maladies, and caſting them down at his feet. And his compaſſions were ſo great, his power ſo effectual, that he healed them all. Note, (1.) The diſeaſes of our bodies drive us inſtantly to the phyſician, though his art is uncertain; ſhall not the more dangerous diſeaſes of our ſouls drive us to Jeſus, whoſe medicines of grace are infallible? (2.) The world is full of ſickneſs and pain becauſe full of ſin; if the cauſe be once removed through the blood, the righteouſneſs, the ſpirit of Jeſus, the effects will quickly for ever ceaſe, and the inhabitants above ſhall never more ſay I am ſick.

2. Theſe wonders of power and grace deeply affected the beholders. Amazed to hear the dumb to ſpeak, to ſee the lame walk, the blind reſtored to ſight, and every malady removed with a word, they glorified the God of Iſrael for ſending the promiſed Meſſiah, for ſuch theſe words beſpoke him, whom they now beheld. Note, Every mercy demands a tribute of praiſe; and if the removal of bodily complaints excited ſuch wonder and thankfulneſs, how much more ſhould we admire the riches of the gift, and adore the God of our ſalvation, if our ſouls have experienced the power of his healing grace, if our once blind eyes ſee the light of truth; if our ears, once deaf, are open to the goſpel's joyful ſound; if our once lame feet are ſtrengthened to run the way of his commandments? For theſe unutterable bleſſings, praiſe the Lord, O my ſoul.

3. A ſingular miracle is wrought, wherein all partook, ſimilar to what he had done before, chap. xiv. with this little variation, that here four thouſand, beſides women and children, are fed with ſeven loaves and a few little fiſhes: there, five thouſand men, beſides women and children, were fed with five loaves.

[1.] The circumſtances of the people here aſſembled, moved the compaſſion of Jeſus. So eager were they to attend on his miniſtry, and to behold his miracles, that for three days ſucceſſively they continued with him; and if they brought any little proviſion with them, it was ere this conſumed, ſo that they had now nothing to eat; and as many of them came from far, and could not ſoon get a ſupply of food, to ſend them away thus faſting might expoſe them to faint by the way through weakneſs, and to periſh with hunger. Calling his diſciples, therefore, he acquainted them with his gracious deſign of feeding them there; but they forgetting what they had ſo lately ſeen, chap. xiv. 21. objected to the poſſibility of providing meat for ſuch a multitude in that wilderneſs; and eſpecially when by his queſtion he ſeemed to intend ſupplying the table out of their ſcanty ſtore, which appeared ſo inſufficient, being no more than ſeven loaves, and a few ſmall fiſhes. Note, (1.) They who know the ſweetneſs of the goſpel word, will undergo wearineſs and hunger, rather than be deprived of it. (2.) It is through our forgetfulneſs of the paſt interpoſitions we have experienced, that under new difficulties we fall into freſh perplexity.

[2.] Having commanded them to ſit down, he took the loaves and fiſhes as before, and thanking God for the proviſion, he divided the bread and fiſhes among the diſciples, that they ſhould diſtribute them to the multitude: and far from any lack, when all had eaten and were filled, ſeven baſkets full of fragments ſtill remained. The proviſion indeed was ſomewhat more, the company fewer, and the fragments leſs than in the former inſtance, but the miracle was the ſame in one caſe as the other; and the wondrous enlargement of the food evidenced the ſame divine creative power. Note, We ſtand aſtoniſhed at this relation; but is not every corn that is caſt into the earth as marvellouſly increaſed at the harveſt? yet who thinks of the wonder-working hand of him, by whoſe daily bread we are continually fed?

[3.] Having liberally ſatisfied his gueſts, he diſmiſſes them to their own homes. Thither duty called them; we cannot always be in attendance on the ſanctuary, it is not proper we ſhould be. As for himſelf and his diſciples, they took ſhip, and came into the coaſts of Magdala. His work was to be going about doing good, and in every place he left behind him abundant marks of his tranſcendent power, grace, and love.

CHAP. XVI.

None of Chriſt's miracles are recorded in this chapter, but four of his diſcourſes. Here is, 1. A conference with the Phariſees, who challenged him to ſhew them a ſign from heaven, ver. 1—4. 2. Another with his diſciples about the leaven of the Phariſees, ver. 5—12. 3. Another with them concerning himſelf, as the Chriſt, and concerning his church built upon him, ver. 13—20. 4. Another concerning his ſufferings for them and theirs for him, ver. 21—28. And all theſe are written for our learning.

1. [a] THE Phariſees alſo with the Sadducees, came, and tempting, deſired him that he would ſhew them a ſign from heaven. 2. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, When it is evening, ye ſay, It will be fair weather: for the ſky is red. 3. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to day: for the ſky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can diſcern the face of the ſky, but can ye not diſcern the ſigns of the times? 4. [b] A wicked and adulterous generation ſeeketh after a ſign, and there ſhall no ſign be given unto it, but the ſign of the prophet Jonas. And he left them and departed.

v. 1—4. However oppoſite in their tenets the Phariſees and Sadducees were, in their enmity againſt Chriſt and his goſpel they perfectly agreed.

1. They came in concert, with a view to tempt and entangle him, and, pretending diſſatisfaction with the miracles he wrought, deſired a proof of the divine miſſion he aſſumed, by ſome ſign from heaven, ſuch as appeared when the law was given on Sinai. Not indeed that they wiſhed to be convinced, but merely ſought ſome refuge for their infidelity. Note, They who, after all the miracles Jeſus hath wrought, deſire farther evidence of his character, evidently ſhew they determine not to receive him; and if never ſo many ſigns or wonders were granted them, yet would they not believe in him.

2. Chriſt juſtly refuſes to gratify their vain curioſity, and unreaſonable requeſt. There was evidence ſufficient before them, if they choſe to ſee; and they did not want natural ſagacity to judge of it. From obſerving the appearances of the ſky they determined what weather would follow. If the ſky was red at evening, they preſumed, by obſervation and experience, the following day would be fair: but, if in the morning the ſky appeared red and lowring, then it would be wet or windy: and from great probability drew theſe concluſions. But how glaringly did they play the hypocrite, when, pretending the higheſt veneration for Moſes and the prophets, though they could judge of the weather by the appearances of the ſky, they could not diſcern the ſigns of the times, ſo clearly and diſtinctly revealed in the ſacred writings; could neither ſee the preſent exact fulfilment of all the prophecies concerning the Meſſiah, nor the ruin coming upon themſelves for rejecting him: and therefore, ſince they were a wicked and adulterous generation, wilfully blind to the evidence of truth, no other ſign ſhall be given them than the miracles they had already rejected, except his reſurrection from the dead after three days, prefigured by the abode of the prophet Jonas in the whale's belly. And with this he left them, as incorrigible ſinners, with whom it was in vain to remonſtrate, and croſſed the lake to another part of the country. Note, (1.) Many are wiſe enough in human concerns, yea deeply ſkilled in the myſteries of ſcience, who yet are ſtark blind with regard to their ſouls. (2.) They who by their obſtinacy and infidelity provoke Chriſt to depart from them, are juſtly given up to perdition.

5. ¶ [c] And when his diſciples were come to the other ſide, they had forgotten to take bread. 6. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, [d] Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the Sadducees. 7. And they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, It is becauſe we have taken no bread. 8. Which when Jeſus perceived, he ſaid unto them, O ye of little faith, why reaſon ye among yourſelves, becauſe ye have brought no bread? 9. [e] Do ye not yet underſtand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thouſand, and how many baſkets ye took up? 10. [f] Neither the ſeven loaves of the four thouſand, and how many baſkets ye took up? 11. How is it that ye do not underſtand, that I ſpake it not to you concerning bread, that ye ſhould beware of the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the Sadducees? 12. Then underſtood they

how

[c] Num. xi. 22. 2 Kings iv. 43.

[d] Chap. xiv. 19. Rom. xiv. 6.

[a] Chap. xii. 38. Mark viii. 11. Luke xii. 54. 1 Cor. i. 22.

[b] Chap. xii. 39.

[c] Mark viii. 14.

[d] Ver. 12.

[e] Chap. xiv. 17. John vi. 9.

[f] Chap. xv. 34.

how that he bad them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Phariſees, and of the Sadducees.

v. 5—12. Departing in haſte, the diſciples had forgotten to take with them proviſions as uſual: and thereupon from temporal things he takes occaſion to introduce ſpiritual inſtructions.

1. He cautions them to beware of the leaven of the Phariſees and of the Sadducees; of their principles and doctrines, which would ſpread their pernicious influences through the whole man.

2. They miſtook his meaning, and, taking his words literally, they concluded privately among themſelves that it was intended as a rebuke for their careleſſneſs; or a caution not to make uſe of the bread of the Phariſees and Sadducees, nor ſo much as to eat with them.

3. He reproves them for the ſinful diſtruſt of their hearts, and the dulneſs of their apprehenſions. It was a proof of the weakneſs of their faith, after the miracles they had ſo lately ſeen, to harbour a moment's diſtruſt about a proviſion, which their maſter could ſo eaſily ſupply: and it ſhewed their ſtupidity, not to underſtand, after what had paſſed, that it could not be of bread literally that he ſpoke, but of ſomething ſpiritual and figurative, of much greater moment than bread merely. Note, (1.) Chriſt is diſpleaſed with his people when they harbour worldly fears, and are diſturbed about the meat that periſheth. It is a proof of little faith indeed, to ſuppoſe that thoſe who have a promiſe of heaven for their home ſhould want bread by the way. (2.) If we remembered better the paſt experience of God's care, it would adminiſter an argument to ſilence our preſent diſtruſts and perplexities.

4. At laſt they comprehend his meaning, that he ſpake not of the bread but of the doctrines of theſe ſects, cautioning them againſt the falſe traditions, pride, and ſelf-righteouſneſs of the Phariſees, and againſt the infidelity and licentious principles of the Sadducees; both fatally dangerous: againſt which we have alike need to be on our guard. Take heed and beware of them.

13. ¶ When Jeſus came into the coaſts of Ceſarea Philippi, he aſked his diſciples, ſaying, [g] Whom do men ſay that I, the Son of man, am? 14. And they ſaid, Some ſay that thou art John the Baptiſt, ſome Elias, and others Jeremias, or one of the prophets. 15. He ſaith unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am? 16. And Simon Peter anſwered and ſaid, [h] Thou art Chriſt, the Son of the living God. 17. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Bleſſed art thou, Simon Bar-jona: for fleſh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, [i] but my Father which is in heaven. 18. And I ſay alſo unto thee, that thou art Peter, and upon [k] this rock I will build my church: and the gates of hell ſhall not prevail againſt it. 19. And [l] I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatſoever thou ſhalt bind on earth, ſhall be bound in heaven: and whatſoever thou ſhalt looſe on earth, ſhall be looſed in heaven. 20. [m] Then charged he his diſciples that they ſhould tell no man that he was Jeſus the Chriſt.

[g] Mark viii. 27. Luke ix. 18.

[h] John vi. 69. & xi. 27. Acts viii. 37. 1 John iv. 15. & v. 5.

[i] Chap. xi. 27. 1 Cor. ii. 10. Gal. i. 16.

[k] Ver. 16. 1 Cor. iii. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 6.

[l] Chap. xviii. 18. John xx. 23.

[m] Chap. xvii. 9.

v. 13—20. Being now in the remoteſt part of the country, our Lord took occaſion in private conference to enquire into the opinions entertained concerning himſelf by the people in general, and by his diſciples in particular. Not that he was ignorant of either; but he meant to lead them to an open confeſſion of their faith in him.

1. He aſks concerning the general opinion which the people formed of him, who appeared under the name of the Son of man; the humble title he aſſumed when he emptied himſelf, and was made in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh. Or it may be read, Whom do men ſay that I am? The ſon of man? Do they acknowledge my character and miſſion as the Meſſiah: or, What do they think of me?

2. The diſciples, who had heard the different ſentiments of the multitude, informed him that there was a variety of conjectures formed concerning him; ſome ſuppoſing him John the Baptiſt riſen from the dead; others Elias, propheſied of by Malachi; other Jeremias, or one of the ancient prophets ſent to reform the guilty age: opinions which ſhewed the honourable ſentiments the common people entertained of him, yet far ſhort of the truth. The meanneſs of his birth, relations, dreſs, and followers, ſeems to have quite excluded the notion of his true character as the Meſſiah, whom their prejudices had always repreſented as to come with all the pomp of majeſty, and the glory of a conquering hero.

3. He queſtions them concerning their own ſentiments of him. They had been better taught, and therefore ſhould have higher notions of his true character; and, being ſhortly to become teachers of others, they were peculiarly called upon to entertain right apprehenſions of this important truth themſelves. Note, We muſt know Jeſus ourſelves, his perſon and offices, or it is impoſſible we ſhould truly be his miniſters to others.

4. Peter, according to his uſual zeal and forwardneſs, in the name of the reſt, and as their ſpokeſman, nobly replies, Thou art Chriſt, the Son of the living God. They underſtood his real character; they truly believed in him as the divine Meſſiah, the anointed prophet, prieſt, and king of his people; and were ready to confeſs him not merely as Son of man, but as the coequal Son of God.

5. Chriſt expreſſes his high commendation of this truly apoſtolic confeſſion. It was a diſtinguiſhed bleſſing which Peter poſſeſſed thus to know the Lord's Chriſt; and what neither ſprung from his birth, education, or his own reaſoning, but from divine revelation. So noble and open a profeſſion of his faith ſhewed him to be what his name imported, a rock: and hereupon Chriſt adds, Upon this rock will I build my church: which ſome apply perſonally to Peter, and may in a ſound ſenſe be admitted, as one of thoſe apoſtles on whom, as the foundation, the church is ſaid to be built, being raiſed chiefly by their miniſtry, Eph. ii. 20. Rev. xxi. 14. Nor can this at all countenance the abſurd pretenſions of the biſhops of Rome, who are neither his ſucceſſors in office or doctrine. Indeed nothing can more evidence the weakneſs of their claims than ſuch perverted ſcriptures, wreſted and preſſed into the ſervice. But by the rock more probably is meant Chriſt himſelf, who in ſpeaking pointed to his own perſon, and being evidently the rock on which Peter himſelf built, the true foundation, other than which can no man lay, 1 Cor. iii. 11. Hereon he is pleaſed to raiſe the glorious ſuperſtructure of his church: the work and the glory of it are all his own; and on his power, love, and faithfulneſs, its ſtability reſts: nor ſhall the gates of hell ever prevail againſt it; neither the power nor policy of Satan or his inſtruments ſhall be able to deſtroy the church, nor ſhall death or the grave finally detain one member of it; but they ſhall be triumphant at laſt, and ſee every foe made their footſtool. Note, (1.) Nothing is ſo acceptable to Jeſus as a bold profeſſion of our confidence in him. (2.) They are truly bleſſed who ſavingly know the Son of God. (3.) All we know of God and his Chriſt is from his own revelation: and unleſs he himſelf is pleaſed to teach us, we know nothing as we ought to know. (4.) The church of Chriſt is his own planting and building, and every member of it is fixed on that rock of ages againſt which no foe can prevail: the crafts and aſſaults of Satan, the malice of men, the open attacks of perſecutors, and the ſecret machinations of heretics and hypocrites, are alike impotent againſt thoſe who are kept by the power of God through faith unto ſalvation.

6. Having engaged to erect his church, Chriſt provides for the government of it, and commits to Peter and the other apoſtles the keys, the enſigns of authority, empowering him and them in his name, ſee John xx. 23. to declare what was lawful and unlawful, to charge ſin upon men's conſciences, and abſolve them on their humiliation, to pronounce ſpiritual cenſures or looſe men from them; and what they did upon earth in his name, and according to his will and word, he engages to ratify in heaven. And this is particularly addreſſed to Peter here, as being ordained to be the firſt preacher of the goſpel both to the Jews and Gentiles, and as the honour conferred upon him for the glorious confeſſion he had made.

7. He ſtrictly charges his diſciples at preſent to conceal what they knew of his divine perſon and character: and this for many reaſons; becauſe his hour was not yet come, and ſuch declarations would exaſperate the Phariſees to deſtroy him, alarm the government, and occaſion an inſurrection among the people, big with the hopes of a temporal Meſſiah; beſides that they were to be better furniſhed, after his reſurrection, with greater abilities for their work, and fuller evidence of the truth in their own ſouls, and for the conviction of others.

21. ¶ From that time forth began Jeſus to [n] ſhew unto his diſciples, how that he muſt go unto Jeruſalem, and ſuffer many things of the elders and chief prieſts, and ſcribes, and be killed, and be raiſed again the third day. 22. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, ſaying, ¶ † Be it far from thee, Lord: this ſhall not be unto thee. 23. But he turned, and ſaid unto Peter, [o] Get thee behind me, Satan, thou art an offence unto me: for thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, but thoſe that be of men.

[n] Chap. xx. 18. Mark viii. 31. Luke ix. 22.

† Gr. Pity thyſelf.

[o] 2 Sam. xix. 22.

v. 21—23. To check the aſpiring hopes which his own diſciples fooliſhly entertained concerning the nature of his kingdom, he begins to inform them of the ſufferings he muſt undergo: and from that time, when their faith appeared eſtabliſhed in him, inculcated this mortifying leſſon, as they were able to bear it. Chriſt's method is to let us into the knowledge of his truth by degrees: it would utterly have ſtaggered us, if we had known at firſt all the diſcouragements we ſhould afterwards meet with.

1. He foretels his ſufferings and death, (ſtrange tidings to their ears) the ſcene of which would be in Jeruſalem, the holy city, and the inſtruments the moſt admired characters, the elders, chief-prieſts, and ſcribes, who by their office and profeſſion ſhould have been the firſt to receive and honour him as the Meſſiah: but withal he informs them, to ſupport their hopes, that the third day he ſhould riſe again. And all this muſt be. So God had decreed in his eternal counſels: and no other way could the ſalvation of his people be ſecured.

2. Peter, ſtill the foremoſt to ſpeak, though now as faulty as he had been before commendable, could not bear to hear of his death and ſufferings, and therefore had the boldneſs to take him aſide and expoſtulate with him, expreſſing his diſpleaſure at what he had heard, his abhorrence of the thought of it, and his preſumption that it was impoſſible the Meſſiah ſhould thus ſuffer, and the Son of the living God be put to death. Note, (1.) Our hearts ill bear commendation; like Peter, we are too apt to preſume upon it. (2.) How intricate ſoever God's ways may appear, and his diſpenſations however painful to us, it is not for us to queſtion the rectitude of his procedure, or pretend to be wiſer than he: ſubmiſſion and ſilence are our bounden duty. (3.) Our corrupt nature ever ſhrinks from the croſs with abhorrence. Had Chriſt thus ſtarted back from it, what had become of us?

3. With a ſharp rebuke the Lord teſtifies his diſpleaſure againſt Peter. He turned, with ſternneſs in his look, and ſaid unto Peter, in the hearing of the twelve, Get thee behind me, Satan; be gone: thou ſpeakeſt under his influence: and this pretended kindneſs implies real enmity. Thou art an offence, or hindrance, to me, oppoſing the great end for which I came into the world: for thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, doſt not reliſh the contrivance of infinite wiſdom, for the manifeſtation of his own glory, and the redemption of ſinners, by my ſufferings, but thoſe that be of men, expecting in the Meſſiah a temporal monarch, and influenced by the hopes of worldly wealth, power, and honour. Note, (1.) Left but for a moment to ourſelves, however high our attainments have been, we muſt inſtantly ſink under the power of Satan. (2.) We may find often as dangerous ſnares in the falſe kindneſs of our friends as in the avowed enmity of our foes. (3.) Whoever on any pretence would diſſuade us from the path of duty, we muſt reject the advice with abhorrence, and rebuke them with ſeverity. (4.) Maxims of carnal policy, and deſire of earthly eaſe and honour, are ſtrangely apt to inſinuate themſelves even into good men, and diſincline them from taking up that croſs which God hath appointed them. We have need of conſtant jealouſy over our hearts, leſt, imitating Peter's conduct, we ſhould meet with his rebuke.

24. ¶ [p] Then ſaid Jeſus unto his diſciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and [q] take up his croſs, and follow me. 25. For [r] whoſoever will ſave his life, ſhall loſe it: and whoſoever will loſe his life for my ſake, ſhall find it. 26. For what is a man profited, if he ſhall gain the whole world, and loſe his own ſoul? or [s] what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul? 27. For [t] the Son of man ſhall come in the glory of his Father, [u] with his angels; and then [x] he ſhall reward every man according to his works. 28. Verily I ſay unto you, [y] There be ſome ſtanding here, which ſhall not taſte of death, till they ſee the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

p Mark viii. 34. Luke ix. 23.
q Chap. x. 38. Acts xiv. 22. 1 Theſ. iii. 3. 2 Tim. iii. 12.
r Luke xvii. 33. John xii. 25.
s Pſ. xlix. 7, 8.
t Chap. xxvi. 64.
u Dan. vii. 10. Chap. xxv. 31. Jude 14.
x Prov. xxiii. 12. Jer. xvii. 10. 2 Cor. v. 10.
y Mark ix. 1. Luke ix. 27.

v. 24—28. As he had foretold them of the ſufferings himſelf muſt endure, he forewarns them alſo to expect the like treatment, and advertiſes them that only thus bearing his croſs they could be truly his diſciples.

1. He plainly ſets before them the terms of diſcipleſhip; very different from what their national prejudices ſuggeſted. If any man will come after me, a volunteer in my ſervice, and chuſing it with all the trials which for my ſake he may be expoſed to endure, let him deny himſelf, his own will and wiſdom, his pride and ſelf-righteouſneſs, his carnal luſts and appetites, his worldly honour, eaſe, and advantage, and whatever elſe would tend to clog, retard, or turn him back from my ſervice; and let him take up his croſs, chearfully ſubmitting to every providential affliction, and ready to expoſe himſelf in the way of duty to perſecutions, loſſes, reproaches, ſufferings, yea, even to death itſelf, if need be, for my ſake, and the open and avowed profeſſion of my name: and let him follow me in all humility, patience, faith, perſeverance, ſtedfaſt and unmoveable in the work of the Lord, whether to do or ſuffer according to his holy will. Hard terms for fleſh and blood! Indeed we muſt have more than human ability, or they would be impracticable. Note, (1.) Self-denial is the firſt leſſon of Chriſt's ſchool. (2.) There never yet was a Chriſtian without his croſs. Far therefore from being diſcouraged by what we ſuffer, we ſhould rather conclude our real diſcipleſhip from this conformity to our Lord. (3.) It becomes us however to take care the croſs we bear is the croſs of Chriſt, and not what our own wilfulneſs or ſins have brought upon us.

2. Chriſt ſuggeſts the moſt powerful arguments to engage us with ſteadineſs and chearfulneſs to embrace his propoſal.

[1.] An eternity of happineſs or miſery depends on our preſent choice and conduct. Whoever, by baſe and ſinful compliances with a world that lieth in wickedneſs, would ſcreen himſelf from ſufferings and death, takes the direct method to deſtroy for ever the life he thus ſeeks to preſerve. Whilſt he who with unſhaken fidelity, for the ſake of Chriſt and his goſpel, is ready to endure the loſs of all things, and even of life itſelf, rather than diſhonour his profeſſion, or betray the cauſe in which he is engaged, this man ſhall in eternity be unſpeakably a gainer, and effectually ſecure the life he thus bravely dares to part with. We muſt therefore weigh time againſt eternity, and, under the influences of realizing faith, ſhall not heſitate a moment, whether we ſhall ſuffer with Chriſt that we may reign with him, or, prolonging a momentary exiſtence by our cowardice, periſh everlaſtingly.

[2.] Our immortal ſouls are at ſtake, infinitely more valuable than ten thouſand worlds. Admit that we ſhould, by complying with the world, gain all that it hath to beſtow, wallow in its wealth, riot in its pleaſures, or riſe to the pinnacle of earthly grandeur, yet, if this be purchaſed by the loſs of our ſouls for ever, driven from the preſence of God, and conſigned to everlaſting torment, how inconceivably fooliſh will this bargain appear ſhortly, and how irreparable the damage? ſince, had a man millions of gold and ſilver, yea worlds unnumbered, to beſtow, they would in God's account be lighter on the balances than vanity itſelf; yea, would be leſs than nothing, if proffered in exchange to redeem but one ſoul from death eternal. Note, (1.) The value of the ſoul and the vanity of the world ſhould be the ſubjects of our frequent meditation. (2.) How many thouſands are daily bartering their ſouls for the moſt miſerable pittance of this world's honours, gain, and pleaſures! and yet ſo hath the god of this world blinded them, that they will not ſee the folly, the madneſs of their purſuits. (3.) A ſoul loſt, is loſt for ever; there is no redemption in the grave. (4.) There is but one ſufficient price to redeem the ſoul from death, and that is the blood of Chriſt; and all other things in God's account are as dung and droſs.

[3.] The rewards of eternal glory will infinitely compenſate all the ſufferings of this preſent time. This is a periſhing world; the end of all things is at hand; the Judge is at the door; the Son of man ſhall come in all the glory of divinity, with his angelic guards around his throne of judgment, and then will he diſpenſe his rewards according to men's works; when the faithful ſhall receive the eternal glory, honour, and immortality, he hath promiſed; and the wicked, the worldling and apoſtates, the wages of their iniquity in eternal torment. Note, To live under the conſtant expectation of this great day, is the beſt means of ſtrengthening us againſt every trial we may be called to encounter.

[4.] As an eſpecial argument to ſecure their fidelity, Chriſt aſſures them, that ſome there preſent, before their death, ſhould ſee the glory of the Meſſiah's kingdom begun, in his reſurrection from the dead, the out-pouring of his Spirit in the day of Pentecoſt, the ſpreading of his goſpel, and the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate and nation, their bittereſt perſecutors, which would be an emblem of the final perdition of all ungodly men in the judgment-day.

CHAP. XVII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt in his pomp and glory transfigured, ver. 1—13. 2. Chriſt in his power and grace caſting the devil out of a child, ver. 14—21. And, 3. Chriſt in his poverty and great humiliation, (1.) Foretelling his own ſufferings, ver. 22, 23. (2.) Paying tribute, ver. 24—27.

1. AND [a] after ſix days, Jeſus taketh Peter, James and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart, 2. And was transfigured before them, and [b] his face did ſhine as the ſun, and his raiment was white as the light. 3. And behold, there appeared unto them Moſes and Elias talking with him. 4. Then anſwered Peter, and ſaid unto Jeſus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias. 5. While he yet ſpake, behold, a bright cloud overſhadowed them: and [c] behold, a voice out of the cloud, which ſaid, [d] This is my beloved Son, [e] in whom I am well pleaſed; [f] hear ye him. 6. And when the diſciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were ſore afraid. 7. And Jeſus came and [g] touched them, and ſaid, Ariſe, and be not afraid. 8. And when they had lift up their eyes, they ſaw no man, ſave Jeſus only. 9. And as they came down from the mountain, [h] Jeſus charged them, ſaying, Tell the viſion to no man, until the Son of man be riſen again from the dead. 10. And his diſciples aſked him, ſaying, [i] Why then ſay the ſcribes, that Elias muſt firſt come? 11. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Elias truly ſhall firſt come, and [k] reſtore a Mark ix. 2. Luke ix. 28.

b Ex. xxxiv. 29, 35. 2 Pet. i. 16.
c 2 Pet. i. 17.
d Chap. iii. 17.
e Iſa. xlii. 1.
f Deut. xviii. 18. Acts iii. 22, 23.
g Dan. viii. 18. & x. 10, 18.
h Chap. xvi. 20.
i Ma . 5. Chap. i 14.
k Lu. xi. 16, 17.

ſtore all things: 12. But I ſay unto you, that Elias is [l] Chap. xiv. 10. come already, and they knew him not, [l] but have done
[m] Chap. xvi. 21. unto him whatſoever they liſted: [m] likewiſe ſhall alſo the Son of man ſuffer of them. 13. Then the diſciples underſtood that he ſpake unto them of John the Baptiſt.

v. 1—13. As Chriſt had ſo lately ſpoken of the Son of man's coming in his kingdom, he here gives them a glimpſe of his glory on the mount of transfiguration. We are told,

1. When and where this happened, and who were the ſpectators. It was ſix days after the former diſcourſe above recorded; or, according to St. Luke, about eight, he taking in the day the diſcourſe paſſed, and that on which the transfiguration happened, and the other evangeliſts only mentioning the intervening ſpace of time. The place was the top of a mountain apart, whither he had retired for prayer, with three of his diſciples, Peter, James, and John, whom he was pleaſed to favour with the glorious viſion, the lively impreſſion of which dwelt long after on their minds. See 2 Pet. i. 16, 17.

2. The manner of his transfiguration. As he was praying, Luke ix. 29. the glory of the divinity burſt forth, and he who bore the form of a ſervant ſuddenly appeared in the form of God, Phil. ii. 6. His face, as the ſun ſhining in its ſtrength, dazzled the beholders with its tranſcendent luſtre, and ſuch bright beams darted from his glorified body, that, ſurrounded with irradiation, his very raiment glittered, and became white as the light. An awful pleaſing ſight! Happy the favoured ſouls who then beheld him! and yet far happier they who ſhall with open face behold him on the mount of God, and be changed into the ſame image, faſhioned like to his glorious body.

3. The attendants who waited on him, Moſes and Elias. They too appeared in glory. Known probably to the diſciples by immediate revelation, or by the converſation they heard, which, we are told, Luke xx. 31, reſpected Chriſt's ſufferings and death at Jeruſalem.

4. Overwhelmed with wonder and delight, Peter, the ready ſpokeſman for his brethren, expreſſes the exulting rapture of his heart, and wiſhes for the continuance of the glorious viſion. Fain would he forever there fix his abode, and with a mixture of commendable piety and inconſiderate weakneſs, propoſes to make three booths, where Chriſt with his celeſtial viſitants might dwell; ſcarce knowing what he ſaid through the tranſport of his mind. Note, (1.) They who have ever known experimentally the ſweetneſs of communion with Jeſus, and have by faith beheld ſome of his glory, long to maintain the delightful intercourſe; for it is good to be with him. (2.) The place to enjoy Chriſt's viſits is not in the buſy world, or gay circle, but in retirement, meditation, and prayer: in this mount of the Lord he may ſtill be ſeen. (3.) Though in ſome happy moments we ſeem for a while upon the glorious hill, we have now no abiding tabernacle there, and quickly the bright viſion is removed. Bleſſed be God however, we look for a houſe not made with hands, eternal in the heavens, and there we ſhall be ever with the Lord.

5. A bright cloud, at the inſtant Peter ſpoke, overſhadowed them, the emblem of the Divine Preſence, and from the excellent glory iſſued forth the voice of God the Father proclaiming the dignity, excellence, and acceptableneſs of his dear Son Jeſus, and enjoining on them ſolemn attention to all his words: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed; hear ye him. Where we may obſerve, (1.) That this was a repetition of what had been declared at Chriſt's baptiſm, containing the grand truth on which our everlaſting hopes depend, that God is well pleaſed with the undertaking of Jeſus, and is in him reconciling ſinners to himſelf, ſatisfied with his ſubſtitution on their behalf, and therefore not imputing their treſpaſſes unto them. (2.) There never hath appeared but one Perſon under the ſun concerning whom God could ſay, In him I am well pleaſed, and that was his own Son. Him therefore we muſt hear, ſince only by and through him can God be well pleaſed with us: his blood, his righteouſneſs, muſt be alone our truſt; his word of goſpel-grace our conſtant rule; his will our duty and delight. Lord, ſpeak thou to my heart, that I may thus hear thee!

6. Terrified with the appearance of the Divine Majeſty, and trembling at the voice of God, the diſciples proſtrated themſelves on the earth in ſilent adoration, conſcious of their own vileneſs, and afraid to lift up their eyes before the holy Lord God. But Jeſus kindly approached and quieted their fears, encouraged them to ariſe, and bid them not be afraid; the voice they had heard was not that of an angry God, but of the Father of mercies; not ſpeaking out of the thick darkneſs, as on mount Sinai, the demands of a perfect law, but out of the bright cloud of goſpel light and love, publiſhing ſalvation, and pointing them to a Redeemer. Note, (1.) Conſciouſneſs of guilt muſt ever make us dread to appear before a jealous God. It is in Chriſt's righteouſneſs alone we can with boldneſs approach his throne. (2.) Jeſus is the comforter of his afflicted people; and when we are diſmayed under what we feel or fear, and ready to ſink down in deſpair, his words of conſolation revive our drooping heads, and embolden us to look up.

7. Riſing at the command of Jeſus, when they looked around the viſion had diſappeared, and Moſes and Elias were gone, Jeſus however ſtill remained with them in his uſual form as before his transfiguration. Note, If Chriſt remain with us, we can eaſily reſt content with the loſs of any thing beſides.

8. He charged them, as they came down from the mount, to take no notice of the viſion they had ſeen, but reſerve it till his reſurrection from the dead, when that would add credibility to their report, which now, conſidering the ſtate of ſufferings which was before him, might be diſbelieved and rejected.

9. A difficulty aroſe in the diſciples minds: revolving what had paſſed; the ſhort ſtay Elias made; and the injunctions of ſecreſy laid upon them; why it ſhould be ſo often inculcated by the ſcribes that Elias muſt firſt come, publickly uſhering in the appearing of the Meſſiah; and this queſtion they begged their maſter to reſolve: which he doth to their full ſatisfaction. He tells them, it was true that Elias muſt be the forerunner of the Meſſiah, as was propheſied, Mal. iv. 5, 6. and by his preaching reſtore all things, preach the doctrines of repentance, and direct the people to him who comes to make all things new. But this had already been fulfilled; there had appeared one in the ſpirit and power of Elias, whom they knew not, as the perſon meant by the prophecy, and him the Scribes and Phariſees in general had rejected, and treated with contempt, and Herod had murdered him. And as they had perſecuted to death the meſſenger, ſo would they deal by the maſter, that Son of man, whoſe way he was ſent to prepare, who would ſuffer the like indignities, cruelty, and death itſelf by their hands. Note, (1.) When we do not thoroughly underſtand any paſſage of ſcripture, we muſt go to Chriſt on our knees, and ſhall find prayer the beſt means of arriving at the truth. (2.) If we are treated with inſult and cruelty by the world, let it not be thought ſtrange we are compaſſed with a great cloud of witneſſes who have trod the way before us.

Laſtly; The diſciples now underſtood clearly what he meant, and that John the Baptiſt was the perſon to whom he pointed; and from the fulfilment of the prophecy in him, they received a freſh confirmation of their faith in Jeſus, as the Chriſt.

14. ¶ [n] And when they were come to the multitude, [n] Mark ix.
there came to him a certain man kneeling down to him, 14. Luke ix.
and ſaying, 15. Lord, have mercy on my ſon, for he 37.
is lunatic, and ſore vexed: for oft-times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water. 16. And I brought him to thy diſciples, and they could not cure him. 17. Then Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, O faithleſs and perverſe generation, how long ſhall I be with you? how long ſhall I ſuffer you? bring him hither to me. 18. And Jeſus rebuked the devil, and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour. 19. Then came the diſciples to Jeſus apart, and ſaid, Why could not we caſt him out? 20. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Becauſe of your unbelief: for verily I ſay unto you, [o] if ye have [o] Chap. xxi.
faith as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, ye ſhall ſay unto this 21. Mark mountain, Remove hence to yonder place, and it ſhall xi. 23.
remove; and nothing ſhall be impoſſible unto you. 21. Luke xvii. 6.
Howbeit this kind goeth not out, but by prayer and 1 Cor. xiii. 2.
faſting.

v. 14—21. The next day, when Jeſus, with the three diſciples, returned from the mountain, to the reſt of their company and the people who waited for him, he found his preſence greatly needed, and opportunely arrived to give a freſh diſplay of his power and mercy.

1. An afflicted father addreſſes him on his knees, in behalf of his only ſon, poſſeſſed with a devil, a lunatic, and frequently ſeized with epileptic fits, in which he fell into the fire or water, which ever he chanced to be near, to the great hazard of his life. In the abſence of Chriſt he had applied in vain to the diſciples, who were unable to caſt him out, ſo that unleſs he could help, the caſe was deſperate. Note, (1.) Tender parents ſuffer in every pang which their children feel. (2.) Under all their diſeaſes of body or ſoul, we muſt carry our children's miſeries to Jeſus, and at leaſt commend them in prayer to him, when every other means and method fail.

2. Chriſt compaſſionates the caſe, and bids the patient be brought to him; but directs a ſharp rebuke to that perverſe and faithleſs generation the Scribes and Phariſees, and people who probably inſulted the diſciples on their failing in attempting the cure, and imagined this was a caſe which would baffle the maſter's ſkill. Juſtly he upbraids them with their unbelief and hardneſs of heart, after all the miracles he had wrought before them; and well might he refuſe any longer to bear with their perverſeneſs. Yet his patience waits, and he will give them freſh inſtances of his power, that at leaſt they may be inexcuſable in their rejecting him. Note, (1.) Nothing is ſo provoking to the Redeemer, as the perverſeneſs and unbelief of thoſe, to whom he hath long vouchſafed the means of grace. (2.) Men's wickedneſs will not prevent the exerciſe of Chriſt's goodneſs; and if this leads them not to repentance, it will heap up wrath upon them againſt the day of wrath.

3. Jeſus, with a word, diſpoſſeſſed the devil, and the child immediately received a perfect cure. Before his authoritative command, Satan fell a vanquiſhed foe; and by the word of Jeſus, the ſword of the ſpirit, and the ſhield of faith, ſhall we ſtill triumph over the powers of darkneſs, and ſee the arch-enemy of our ſouls bruiſed under our feet.

4. The diſciples took the firſt opportunity, when alone, to enquire of their maſter why they had failed in attempting the cure, and diſpoſſeſſing the evil ſpirit; being concerned perhaps for their reputation among the people, or fearful leſt they had provoked the Lord to withdraw that miraculous power he had once beſtowed on them. Note, When we ſee ourſelves baffled in contending with the powers of evil, it becomes us ſeriouſly to enquire how we came to fail, and by what means the fault may be amended.

5. Chriſt gives them a full anſwer: it was their unbelief which prevented the cure. Whilſt the multitude in general were utterly faithleſs, they were culpable in a leſſer meaſure; for, though they were not utterly deſtitute of faith, they had at this time failed in the exerciſe of it. For elſe, the leaſt meaſure of this miraculous faith, poſſeſſed and exerted, was ſufficient to remove the mountain now before them, and to do whatever elſe, however to human view impoſſible, ſhould be needful to confirm the truth of their miſſion, to promote the glory of God and the good of mankind: but this faith muſt be the fruit of earneſt prayer and faſting, the means appointed of God for the obtaining it. Some refer the words, this kind, not to faith, but to the devils, ſuppoſing ſome more difficult to be diſpoſſeſſed than others, and conſidering this as another reaſon why they could not ſucceed: but the former ſenſe appears preferable. Note, (1.) Whenever we fail in duty, and are foiled in temptation, to this we muſt ever aſcribe it, It is becauſe of our unbelief. (2.) Though we may not be claſſed with unbelievers, yet have we daily cauſe to lament the weakneſs of our faith. (3.) The faith of miracles is ceaſed; we cannot now ſay to this mountain, Remove: but it is as great an inſtance of divine power, and requires as real an exerciſe of divine faith, to remove the mountains of guilt and corruption. And, bleſſed be the Lord, this faith remaineth in all the elect people of God.

p Chap. xvi. 21. & xx. 18. Mark ix. 31. Luke ix. 44. q Acts ii. 23.

22. ¶ [p] And while they abode in Galilee, Jeſus ſaid unto them, [q] The Son of man ſhall be betrayed into the hands of men: 23. And they ſhall kill him, and the third day he ſhall be raiſed again. And they were exceeding ſorry.

v. 22, 23. While they were journeying through Galilee, in their return to Capernaum, we are told,

1. That Jeſus again took occaſion to remind his diſciples of the ſufferings to which, according to the eternal counſels of God, he muſt be delivered up, through the treachery and malice of wicked men, who, thirſting for his blood, would murder him by the moſt cruel and ignominious death, ſee Luke xxiv. 7. But for their comfort he added, on the third day he ſhould riſe again.

2. His diſciples appeared exceeding ſorry, and deeply affected with what he told them. They did not underſtand what his riſing again meant, and then all the reſt appeared dark and diſmal, and utterly contradictory to thoſe opinions of the Meſſiah which they had entertained. Note, Through the darkneſs of our minds we ſuffer, needleſſly, many a gloomy hour under afflictive providences. We do not look to their end, or underſtand how all theſe things are working together for our good: if we did, we ſhould be always rejoicing.

r Mark ix. 33.

† A coin worth fifteen pence. Ex. xxx. 13. & xxxviii. 26.

24. ¶ And when [r] they were come to Capernaum, they that received † tribute-money came to Peter, and ſaid, Doth not your maſter pay tribute? 25. He ſaith, Yes. And when he was come into the houſe, Jeſus prevented him, ſaying, What thinkeſt thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take cuſtom or tribute? of their own children, or of ſtrangers? 26. Peter ſaith unto him, Of ſtrangers. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Then are the children free. 27. Notwithſtanding, leſt we ſhould offend them, go thou to the ſea, and caſt an hook, and take up the fiſh that firſt cometh up: and when thou haſt opened his mouth, thou ſhalt find ‡ a piece of money: that take, and [s] give unto them, for me and thee.

‡ Gr. A ſtater, which was worth 2s. 6d.

s Rom. xiii. 7.

v. 24—27. The tribute mentioned here was the half ſhekel, about fifteen pence in value, which every Jew, above twenty years of age, paid annually to the temple for the maintenance of the ſervice.

1. The collectors of this tax applied to Peter, at whoſe houſe, probably, Jeſus abode when at Capernaum, chap. viii. 14. to know if his Maſter did not pay the uſual tribute. And Peter, not doubting his Maſter's readineſs to comply with the eſtabliſhed law, anſwered in the affirmative.

2. Jeſus prevented him, as he came to ſpeak to him of the matter, with a queſtion, which ſhewed his omniſcience as acquainted with the purpoſe of his coming, and the right he had to exemption, had he choſen to plead his privilege. Of whom do the kings of the earth take cuſtom, or tribute, of their own children, or of ſtrangers? their ſubjects, or foreigners who trade in their country? The anſwer was obvious: and Peter inſtantly replied, Such taxes could be exacted from none but ſtrangers, ſince to tax their own children would be abſurd and uſeleſs. Then, ſaid Jeſus, are the children free; and conſequently I, who am the Son of God, for the ſervice of whoſe temple this is levied, am excuſed from the payment of it. Neverthleſs he waves his right, though ſo poor as to be unable, without a miracle, to furniſh the pittance demanded; and, to avoid the appearance of offence to thoſe who, not knowing his character, might be led to eſteem him, if he had refuſed to pay, a deſpiſer of the temple, and thereby might be prejudiced againſt his doctrine, he orders Peter to go to the ſea, and, baiting his hook, to take up the firſt fiſh which came to it, in the mouth of which he would find a ſtater, a piece of money of the value of a Jewiſh ſhekel, which would juſt ſuffice to pay for both, and remove all occaſion of offence. We may learn hence, (1.) The divine perfections which ſhone forth in Jeſus during his humiliation. All creatures are under his controul, and ſubſervient to his pleaſure: he appears acquainted with all that paſſes in the heart of man and in the depths of the ſea: thus, even when in the form of a man, ſhewing ſtill his divine power and Godhead. (2). If Chriſt paid tribute, and ſubmitted to the powers in church and ſtate, who can plead a right to exemption? (3.) In many caſes it is a Chriſtian's duty to wave his title to what may be ſtrictly his due, and even to ſuffer in his ſecular intereſts, rather than give offence, or prejudice any againſt the goſpel. We ſhall in the end be no loſers by ſuch ſelf-denial. (4.) When Chriſt would work a miracle, Peter muſt uſe the appointed means; for it is in the way of diligence in duty, not in ſloth, that we can expect a divine interpoſition in our behalf. (5.) When Chriſt could have furniſhed all his wants for ever, he choſe juſt a ſufficiency for the preſent emergence, and depended for a ſubſiſtence afterwards in the ordinary way; to teach us, if we have enough for to-day, to truſt God for the morrow.

CHAP. XVIII.

We have here, 1. Inſtructions concerning humility, ver. 1—6. 2. Concerning offences in general, ver. 7. particularly offences given, (1.) By us to ourſelves, ver. 8, 9. (2.) By us to others, ver. 10—14. (3.) By others to us; which are of two ſorts, [1.] Scandalous ſins, that are to be reproved, ver. 15—20. [2.] Perſonal wrongs, that are to be forgiven, ver. 21—35. See how practical Chriſt's preaching was: he could have revealed myſteries; but he preſſed plain duties, eſpecially thoſe that are moſt diſpleaſing to fleſh and blood.

1. [a] AT the ſame time came the diſciples unto Jeſus, ſaying, Who is the greateſt in the kingdom of heaven? 2. And Jeſus called a little child unto him, and ſet him in the midſt of them, 3. And ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, Except ye be converted, and [b] become as little children, ye ſhall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. 4. [c] Whoſoever therefore ſhall humble himſelf as this little child, the ſame is greateſt in the kingdom of heaven. 5. And [d] whoſo ſhall receive one ſuch little child in my name, receiveth me. 6. But [e] whoſo ſhall offend one of theſe little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the ſea.

a Mark ix. 33. Luke ix. 46. & xxii. 24.

b Pſ. cxxxi. 2. Chap. xix. 14. 1 Cor. xiv. 20. 1 Pet. ii. 2.

c Chap. xx. 27.

d Chap. x. 42.

e Mark ix. 42. Luke xvii. 1.

v. 1—7. The diſciples, deeply tinctured with Jewiſh prejudices, entertained very falſe conceptions of the Meſſiah's kingdom, and had, in the way to Capernaum, been diſputing which of them ſhould have the precedence in it. Jeſus, who knew what had been the ſubject of their contention, now aſked them concerning it. And, after ſome ſilence and ſhame at being diſcovered, ſee Mark ix. 33, 34. they,

1. Propoſe to him the queſtion in diſpute, which of them ſhould be promoted to the firſt poſt of honour in his kingdom; for each had formed ſome pretence to this diſtinguiſhed place. And ſo ready are we all to be partial in our own favour, inſtead of being humbly content, in the views of our real deſerts, to ſit down with the leaſt and the loweſt.

2. By an appoſite emblem Chriſt ſeeks to rebuke their vanity, and teach them what ſpirit they ſhould put on. He took a little child and ſet him in the midſt of them, that they might look and learn whilſt he commented on the caſe, aſſuring them, that ſuch was the nature of his kingdom, that none could enter therein, or partake of its honours and privileges, unleſs their hearts were converted, and turned from the affectation of earthly grandeur and greatneſs, and, like little children, they became dead to the contentions of ambition, and the vain deſires of outward wealth and eminence. Whilſt the way to ſecure the moſt honourable place among his members upon earth, and the higheſt throne next his own in glory, was by ſinking loweſt in their own apprehenſions of themſelves, and, inſtead of affecting magiſterial dominion over others, becoming humble, teachable, and ready to ſit down at the feet of the meaneſt. Hard leſſons theſe for human pride! Note, (1.) Beſides our firſt general converſion from a ſtate of nature to a ſtate of grace, we need converſion daily from the errors and evils that ſtill would be cleaving to us, and therefore muſt continually pray, Turn thou us, and ſo ſhall we be turned. (2.) The way to honour is humility. The lowlieſt ſouls are deareſt to the Lord; they moſt reſemble him. Whilſt pride made angels devils, defaced God's image from the human ſoul, drove man from paradiſe, and bars the gate againſt his return.

3. Chriſt expreſſes his high regard and tender concern for thoſe who in this childlike ſpirit are his diſciples indeed. Whoſoever ſhall ſhew them the leaſt kindneſs for the ſake of their relation to him, he will regard it as if the favour had been ſhewn to his own perſon. Whilſt to offend one of theſe, to perſecute or oppreſs them, to take advantage of their ſimplicity or meekneſs to trample on them, or of their weakneſs to endeavour to deceive or diſcourage them, the moſt dreadful of judgments will be the puniſhment of ſuch an offender: and better were it for him to have come to the moſt fearful death by the hands of the public executioner, even to be thrown into the ſea with a milſtone about his neck, than with ſuch guilt to fall into the hands of an avenging God, under whoſe wrath he muſt periſh, both body and ſoul, in hell. Note, (1.) Chriſt has the tendereſt care for his poor people; and a cup of cold water given to the meaneſt in his name ſhall not loſe its reward. (2.) It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of a jealous God. They who now oppreſs and oppoſe the meek diſciples of Jeſus little think againſt whom they offend, and the vengeance which awaits them.

[f] 1 Cor. xi. 19.
[g] Chap. xxvi. 24.
[h] Chap. v. 29, 30. Mark ix. 43.

7. ¶ Wo unto the world becauſe of offences: for [f] it muſt needs be that offences come: but [g] wo to that man by whom the offence cometh. 8. Wherefore [h] if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and caſt them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than, having two hands or two feet, to be caſt into everlaſting fire. 9. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and caſt it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than, having two eyes, to be caſt into hell-fire. 10. [i] Take heed that ye deſpiſe not one of theſe little ones; for I ſay unto you, that in heaven [k] their angels do always [l] behold the face of my Father which is in heaven. 11. For [m] the Son of man is come to ſave that which was loſt. 12. How think ye? [n] if a man have an hundred ſheep, and [o] one of them be gone aſtray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and [p] ſeeketh that which is gone aſtray? 13. And if ſo be that he find it, verily I ſay unto you, he rejoiceth more of that ſheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not aſtray. 14. Even ſo it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of theſe little ones ſhould periſh.

[i] Rom. xiv. 3, 10, 21.
[k] Pſ. xxxiv. 7. Heb. i. 14.
[l] Luke i. 19.
[m] Chap. x. 6. Luke v. 32. & xix. 10.
[n] Luke xv. 4.
[o] Iſa. liii. 6. Jer. l. 6.
[p] Ezek. xxxiv. 16.

v. 7—14. We have here the wo denounced againſt the world becauſe of offences. Under which are comprehended whatever hath a tendency to ſeduce or affright the ſoul from the good ways of the Lord, or to diſcourage and grieve the hearts of the righteous.

1. That there will be offences is certain. Conſidering the craft, malice, and vigilance of Satan, the perverſeneſs of ungodly men and their rooted enmity to the goſpel, and, above all, the deep and deſperate native wickedneſs of every human heart, it is morally impoſſible offences ſhould not come; and God, for wiſe ends, hath decreed to permit them: but this will in no wiſe extenuate the guilt of thoſe by whom the offence cometh, nor abate the ſeverity of their judgment. Note, (1.) We are travelling a dangerous road: this world is full of evil, of ſnares and ſtumbling-blocks; the multitude lieth in wickedneſs, and many who pretend to know the path of ſafety only lie in wait to deceive. We need be jealous of our going, cleave to God's word alone, and neither be offended with the enmity of thoſe that are without, nor the hypocriſy and falls of thoſe that are profeſſors within, remembering the foundation of God ſtandeth ſure. He knoweth thoſe that are his, and will keep them, that nothing ſhall offend them, Pſ. cxix. 165. (2.) Though the deceived and the deceiver periſh together, yet will they lie down under aggravated guilt who have been Satan's inſtruments to lead others into error or ſin. Their blood will be upon the heads of their ſeducers.

2. Whatever may be occaſion of offence to ourſelves or others, however near and dear to us it may be, we muſt part with it. The body of ſin muſt be crucified. And though it may be as painful to mortify particular corruptions as to ſuffer the amputation of a hand or a foot, unrelenting ſeverity is needful, where our own ſouls or others are in danger. And however acute the pain, or however ſenſibly felt the loſs may be, it is better, infinitely better to endure the momentary pang of preſent ſelf-denial, that we may eſcape eternal miſery, and ſecure a life of never-ending glory, than for a tranſitory indulgence of appetite, and the ſenſual enjoyments of an hour, to be caſt into devouring fire, and dwell in everlaſting burnings. Note, (1.) In this ſtate of corruption, not only the groſſer pollutions that are in the world through luſt muſt be abhorred, but every word, every action, be avoided, which may tend in the remoteſt way to inflame our own paſſions or enſnare others. (2.) It is of abſolute neceſſity that we ſhould often in temptation look into the burnings of hell, and gain from thence arguments to ſtart from the moſt pleaſurable ſins. (3.) They only who have begun the life of grace know experimentally what is meant by theſe ſevere operations of ſelf-denial.

3. A particular caution is given to beware of deſpiſing the leaſt of Chriſt's little ones, the weakeſt of his diſciples. We may not be indifferent about our carriage towards them, careleſs of what may offend them; muſt not treat them with contempt, as if regardleſs of their welfare, or ſlighting their weakneſs or infirmities; nor do ought to diſtreſs, diſcourage, enſnare, or lead them into ſin; but we ſhould ſhew our tenderneſs towards them, and our jealouſy for them, by every expreſſion of kindneſs in word or deed, and by a careful avoiding whatever may grieve or hurt them.

4. He enforces his diſcourſe by ſeveral cogent arguments:

[1.] Becauſe the meaneſt heir of ſalvation is attended by angelic miniſters. And if thoſe glorious ſpirits, who in heaven behold the face of God, and ſtand around his throne, the ready ſervants of his will, do not diſdain to wait upon theſe little ones, much leſs ſhould we think them beneath our regard; and may juſtly dread, if we ſhould treat them ill, theſe guardian ſpirits would be our accuſers, and be employed as executioners of the divine diſpleaſure againſt us.

[2.] Becauſe it is the very purpoſe of Chriſt's coming to ſeek and ſave loſt ſouls. And if, on this tranſcendently gracious deſign, he condeſcended to ſtoop ſo low, the leaſt of thoſe for whom he became incarnate have hereby an unutterable dignity and value conferred upon them, and therefore ſhould neither be deſpiſed nor offended; for this he muſt highly reſent. Note, (1.) Our ſouls are loſt, eternally loſt, without Chriſt Jeſus. (2.) Salvation is purely of grace. When we were without help or hope, he died for the ungodly. (3.) They who are purchaſed by the blood of Chriſt ſhould be precious in our eyes. If he did ſo much to ſave them, ſurely we ſhould be peculiarly careful to do nothing to offend them.

[3.] Becauſe it is God's will and pleaſure that not one of theſe little ones periſh. And we are bound to correſpond with him herein, and according to our ability to help forward the purpoſes of his grace, and put no ſtumbling-blocks in their way. Our Lord illuſtrates this by a parable, and appeals to them as judges of the caſe. Suppoſe a man poſſeſſed of a hundred ſheep, and one be ſtrayed from the flock, his ſollicitude is greater in ſearching after it, and his joy more ſenſible on finding it, than he feels about all the reſt which went not aſtray. And ſuch concern hath God for the wandering children of his grace, recovering them and rejoicing over them: and, as he hath in his eternal counſels determined their ſalvation, he cannot but be highly diſpleaſed with all who attempt to obſtruct it, or are careleſs about advancing it, and regards ſuch conduct as an avowed oppoſition, or criminal diſregard, of his holy will and pleaſure. Note, (1.) God's people are his flock; and though ſometimes they wander from him in the wilderneſs of ſin, he will not ſuffer them to periſh, but graciouſly is pleaſed to purſue them with mercy, and bring them back to the fold again. (2.) Though none can fruſtrate the purpoſes of God's love towards his redeemed, yet every obſtruction laid in their way he will highly reſent. (3.) Since all true believers, of whatever ſtate or condition, have one common Father, they ſhould love as brethren, honour and eſteem each other as members of the ſame family, avoid every occaſion of grieving one another, and ſtudy every means of advancing their mutual good.

15. ¶ Moreover, [q] if thy brother ſhall treſpaſs againſt thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he ſhall hear thee, thou haſt gained thy brother. 16. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that [r] in the mouth of two or three witneſſes every word may be eſtabliſhed. 17. And if he ſhall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church, but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee [s] as an heathen man, and a publican. 18. Verily I ſay unto you, [t] Whatſoever ye ſhall bind on earth, ſhall be bound in heaven: and whatſoever ye ſhall looſe on earth, ſhall be looſed in heaven. 19. Again I ſay unto you, that if two of you ſhall agree on earth as touching any thing that they ſhall aſk, [u] it ſhall be done for them of my Father

[q] Lev. xix. 17. Luke xvii. 3.
[r] Numb. xxxv. 30. Deut. xix. 15. John viii. 17. 2 Cor. xiii. 1.
[s] Rom. xvi. 17. 1 Cor. v. 11. 2 Theſ. iii. 6.
[t] Chap. xvi. 19. John xx. 23.
[u] Jam. v. 16. 1 John iii. 22. & v. 14.

which is in heaven. 20. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midſt of them.

v. 15—20. As we muſt be careful not to give offence, as careful ſhould we be to ſhew all Chriſtian tenderneſs and charity when we are juſtly offended. Since in this frail and corrupted ſtate even good men are but men, and liable to fall, tranſgreſſing the precepts of prudence, juſtice, or charity, we are therefore here directed in ſuch caſes how to behave towards them.

1. If a brother, a profeſſing member of our moſt holy faith, act unſuitable thereunto, and do us an injury, or give us cauſe of complaint againſt him, we muſt firſt give him a private and kind admonition of his fault, and mildly argue the caſe, deſiring to bring him to repentance and amendment; more ſollicitous for his good, than the redreſs of our own wrongs. We may not in this caſe, through fear of offending on the one hand, be ſilent, and ſuffer ſin upon our brother without rebuke; nor, on the other, give way to raſh anger or revenge, and by a public reproof expoſe him to others, which, however true the charge, would ſerve not to recover, but exaſperate him the more. In this way of mild and ſecret admonition we may hope for ſucceſs; and if he expreſs his ſorrow, and deſire reconciliation, then the rebuke will be eſteemed a kindneſs, the friendſhip more ſtrongly cemented, our brother recovered, and the offence forgiven and forgotten.

2. If this method of reproof prove abortive, and he is obſtinate againſt conviction, and diſpleaſed inſtead of humbling himſelf; then take two or three faithful impartial Chriſtian brethren, and in their preſence let the matter be diſcuſſed, that they may hear and judge, and add their weight to bring the party offending to due ſubmiſſion and reparation of the injury. Or if their ſentiments be diſregarded alſo, they will be evidences before the church of the ſteps which have been taken, and ready to confirm the truth of the juſt accuſation of the injured perſon.

3. If every other method prove ineffectual, then the matter ſhould be laid before the church, the ſociety of faithful people among whom ſuch a one aſſociates, that he may have a public admonition for his offence, and be called upon to repent and amend of the evil he hath done.

4. If he ſtill remains incorrigible, and perſiſts in his iniquity, then he is to be excluded from the communion of the faithful, and no more connection and familiarity is to be maintained with him; for the charity which teaches us to forgive our enemies, forbids us not to be on our guard againſt thoſe who have uſed us ill, and refuſe to repair the injury. From the whole we may learn, (1.) Under every injury received, to guard our own hearts againſt paſſion or revenge: this wrath of man worketh not the righteouſneſs of God. (2.) Never to ſpeak of another's faults behind his back, till we have in love and the ſpirit of meekneſs firſt admoniſhed him to his face. (3.) To be ready under every provocation to forgive and forget, the moment real repentance appears in our brother. (4.) Not to endeavour to form a party in our favour, but in caſes of offence, real or ſuppoſed, where the ſentiments of brethren may differ about the facts, to let ſome common impartial friends hear and judge, before the matter be mentioned in public, or but whiſpered to others.

5. Chriſt delegates authority to his church thus to cenſure offenders, and ratifies the ſentence that ſhall be pronounced in correſpondence with this his revealed word: ſo that thoſe who for their notorious evils are excluded from the ſociety of the faithful now, ſhall be written among the reprobate, and for ever baniſhed from the preſence of God, unleſs they repent of their tranſgreſſions, and then they are again to be received into the boſom of the church, and all that is paſt to be entirely forgiven. The abſolution pronounced on them by the miniſters of God on earth ſhall be ratified in heaven, and the correction having become effectual, the broken-hearted penitent is to be comforted, and reſtored to his former place, both in the church of God, and in our brotherly affection and regard.

6. For their encouragement in every religious concern, and eſpecially with regard to the recovery of thoſe who are fallen into ſin, that they may be reſtored, our Lord declares the mighty efficacy of united prayer. Whatever, according to the divine will, two or three faithful ſouls ſhall meet together with joint ſupplications to beg at God's hands, he will aſſuredly hear and grant their requeſts. For wherever the ſmalleſt number of real believers aſſemble in Chriſt's name, depending on his promiſes, and deſiring above all things the advancement of his glory, there will he ever be quickening their prayers, ſtrengthening their faith, enlivening their hopes, and comforting their hearts; and when he is one of the company, their ſupplications muſt be effectual, for him the Father heareth always; and what an encouragement is this to ſocial prayer!

21. ¶ Then came Peter to him, and ſaid, Lord, how oft ſhall my brother ſin againſt me, and I forgive him? [x] till ſeven times? 22. Jeſus ſaith unto him, I ſay not unto thee, Until ſeven times: [y] but, until ſeventy times ſeven. 23. ¶ Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king which would take account of his ſervants. 24. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thouſand † talents. 25. But foraſmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be ſold, and his wife and [z] children, and all that he had, and payment to be made. 26. The ſervant therefore fell down, and worſhipped him, ſaying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. 27. Then the lord of that ſervant was moved with compaſſion, and looſed him, and forgave him the debt. 28. But the ſame ſervant went out, and found one of his fellow-ſervants, which owed him ‡ an hundred pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, ſaying, Pay me that thou oweſt. 29. And his fellow-ſervant fell down at his feet, and beſought him, ſaying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. 30. And he would not: but went and caſt him into priſon, till he ſhould pay the debt. 31. So when his fellow-ſervants ſaw what was done, they were very ſorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done. 32. Then his lord, after that he had called him, ſaid unto him, O thou wicked ſervant, I forgave thee all that debt, becauſe thou deſiredſt me: 33. Shouldſt not thou alſo have had compaſſion on thy fellow-ſervant, even as I had pity on thee? 34. And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he ſhould pay all that was due unto him. 35. [a] So likewiſe ſhall my heavenly Father do alſo unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their treſpaſſes.

[x] Luke xvii. 4.

[y] Chap. vi. 14. Col. iii. 13.

† One talent's value is 187 l. 10s.

[z] 2 Kings iv. 1.

‡ i. e. 3 l. 2 s. 6 d. for a Roman denary is worth 7½ d.

[a] Chap. vi. 14. Mark xi. 26. Jam. ii. 13.

v. 21—35. As our Lord had juſt given directions concerning the charitable conduct to be obſerved towards offenders, Peter, deſirous to know how far this forgiveneſs of perſonal injuries extended, propoſed to his Maſter the queſtion, Whether, if the offence was repeated ſeven times, the forgiveneſs muſt be as often granted on the repentance of the offender? He concluded this a great ſtretch of charity; but our Lord's anſwer ſhewed him how limited were his apprehenſions: I ſay not unto thee, Until ſeven times: but, until ſeventy times ſeven: intimating, that we muſt make no limitation to our forgiveneſs, but be always and in all caſes ready to grant it, whenever the offender repents; imitating the divine compaſſions, which know no bounds, nor end. And to enforce and elucidate this, he introduces a parable, wherein this godlike charity appears moſt eminent, and the guilt and danger of the oppoſite conduct is drawn in ſtriking colours.

The parable repreſents,

1. The noble clemency of a great lord, who looking into his affairs, and reviſing his own accounts, (which it were well if every great man did) found, among other debtors, one who owed him an immenſe ſum, the leaſt part of which he was unable to diſcharge. In conſequence whereof, in courſe of law, he gave orders that himſelf and family ſhould be ſold for ſlaves, and all he had diſpoſed of for his uſe. But, terrified at the ſentence, though juſt, the poor debtor intreats a reſpite, with many fair promiſes of payment; when, moved with his diſtreſs, the compaſſionate maſter generouſly and freely forgave him all, and delivered him at once from his terrors and his debt. And this may be applied to the caſe between God and the ſinner. (1.) We are deeply in arrear to him: every ſin is a debt, and we are overwhelmed with it: we poſſeſs a ſinful nature, and our thoughts, words, and deeds have been ſo perverſe before God, ſo often and ſo greatly have we offended, that no computation can reach the number of our tranſgreſſions, nor can we conceive the greatneſs of our guilt or provocations. (2.) The miſery of our caſe, and what renders it moſt deplorable, yea, deſperate, is, that we have nothing to pay. Could we render by a perfect obedience the preſent debt of duty, this would make no compenſation for paſt iniquity; but indeed, our nature being corrupt, we are ſo far from paying for the paſt offences, that we are daily, hourly increaſing the immenſe arrears. (3.) God keeps an account of all: not a word is in our tongue, nor a thought in our hearts, but he knoweth it all together; ſo that we can no more conceal our tranſgreſſions from him, than we can cancel them. (4.) If the divine law takes its courſe, the conſequence muſt be, that we ſhould be ſold to ſuffer for our iniquities, and in the place of torment, in body and ſoul continue ſatisfying the juſtice of God to eternity. (5.) The diſcovery of this dreadful ſituation made to the ſinner's ſoul by the preaching of the word to his conſcience, or ſome awakening providence, fills him with terror, and ſets him a crying for mercy. But uſually at firſt the cries of the awakened conſcience are for a reſpite, with many promiſes of amendment, which the ſinner fooliſhly thinks will be accepted in payment. And he does not ſee his own utter inſolvency, but thinks, through the ignorance and ſelf-righteouſneſs of his heart, that he can make God ſome payment; till by and by the trial convinces him his beſt is bad, and ſelf-deſpair ſtrips him naked at the feet of the croſs of Chriſt. (6.) God's infinite compaſſions extend through the Redeemer to the moſt guilty and deſperate. He freely and fully forgives all that is paſt: not that he doth it without a ſatisfaction made to his juſtice; this the Son of his love, incarnate, and dying under the guilt of our ſins, hath paid; but the mercy of pardon, reconciliation, and deliverance from the bondage of guilt and corruption, is to us freely given, to the praiſe of the glory of his grace, without money and without price.

2. We are told the unſuitable conduct this much-obliged ſervant ſhewed reſpecting a fellow-ſervant of his, who owed him a trifling debt. He no ſooner obtained his own pardon and liberty, than he went out, ſeized and throttled him, till he was almoſt choaked, and with menaces and inſolence demanded inſtant payment, or threatened him with a priſon. In vain his poor brother begged a reſpite, and, in the very words himſelf had uſed, deſired only time, and the debt ſhould be paid; he was deaf to intreaty, and thruſt him into a jail: a piece of cruelty and oppreſſion, that the other ſervants beheld with grief and indignation, and failed not to acquaint their lord with this inhuman behaviour. Note, (1.) Many profeſſors, who preſume upon God's forgiveneſs, ſhew, by their covetouſneſs and rigorous cenſures of others, the hypocriſy of their hearts, and the vanity of their hopes. (2.) Offences done to us, compared with thoſe we have committed againſt God, are ſo trivial, that we ſhould be aſhamed to ſhow rigour in exacting reparation. (3.) Pride and paſſion render men unmerciful: though they know a priſon pays no debts, they take delight in thus gratifying their inſolence or revenge. (4.) The debtor may not complain, though he be dealt with rigorouſly; humble intreaty becomes his condition, eſpecially when he ſuffers only the fruits of his folly or extravagance. (5.) A compaſſionate heart feels for the diſtreſſes of others, and, if it can afford no other relief to them, carries the caſe of the oppreſſor and the oppreſſed to God in prayer, and his ears are open thereunto; he will anſwer in mercy and judgment. (6.) It is eſpecially grievous to a gracious ſoul, to ſee in profeſſors of religion a ſpirit of bitterneſs and unmercifulneſs, and he laments it before the Lord.

3. Juſt reſentment fired the maſter's heart on hearing theſe tidings; and inſtantly citing this hardened wretch before him, he charges him with his wickedneſs, and upbraids him with his cruelty and ingratitude for all the mercies he had ſo lately received; expoſtulating with him on the caſe, and leaving him without excuſe. In wrath he bids him therefore inſtantly be ſeized, and delivered to the tormentors; to be confined in priſon, and ſuffer the moſt rigorous puniſhment, till all the former debt ſhould be paid.

Some have urged this circumſtance as an argument, that God really pardons ſin, and leaves us on our good behaviour for the future; but if we tranſgreſs, then he revives the paſt. But as God's gifts and callings are without repentance, and we are aſſured that he remembers no more the iniquities he once forgave, (Heb. viii. 12.) we muſt underſtand the forgiveneſs here (if we ſuppoſe the parable is in every particular to be applied to the ſinner's caſe) to be the preſumption the perſon entertained on the view of the goſpel offers, that he was pardoned, when in fact he was not. Or if we ſuppoſe it a real act of forgiveneſs to a child of God, his being delivered to the tormentors for his after ſins and ingratitude, may well refer to the temporal calamities that God is often pleaſed to inflict on his people for their offences, viſiting their iniquities with the rod, and their ſin with ſcourges, though his loving-kindneſs he doth not take from them, nor ſuffer his truth to fail. But, after all, I am much more inclined to think, that the ſcope of the parable is principally to be attended to, without a ſtrict application of it in every particular to God's dealings with ſinners, and then we ſhall ſee nothing can be more ſuited to enforce mutual forgiveneſs, ſince without it we may not hope ourſelves to be forgiven of God. And thus,

4. The general deſign of the parable is explained, v. 35. God will deal with us as we deal with our brethren; and if we ſhew an implacable and unforgiving ſpirit, whatever hopes of pardon we may entertain, they are deluſive; his wrath hangs over us, and in the great day of account we ſhall be delivered to the tormentors. Moſt bounden are we therefore to forgive every injury, nor ever harbour the leaſt wiſh or deſire of revenge; for we expect greater mercy and forgiveneſs from God, than ever men can from us, and therefore a ſenſe of his pardoning love ſhould kindle ours.

CHAP. XIX.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt changing his quarters, leaving Galilee, and coming into the coaſts of Judea, ver. 1, 2. 2. His diſpute with the Phariſees about divorce, and his diſcourſe with his diſciples upon occaſion of it, ver. 3—12. 3. The kind entertainment he gave to ſome little children which were brought to him, ver. 13—15. 4. An account of what paſſed between Chriſt and a hopeful young gentleman that applied himſelf to him, ver. 16—22. 5. His diſcourſe with his diſciples upon that occaſion, concerning the difficulty of the ſalvation of thoſe that have much in the world, and the certain recompenſe of thoſe that leave all for Chriſt, ver. 23—30.

1. AND it came to paſs, that [a] when Jeſus had finiſhed theſe ſayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coaſts of Judea, beyond Jordan: 2. And [b] great multitudes followed him, and he healed them there. 3. ¶ The Phariſees alſo came unto him, tempting him, and ſaying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cauſe? 4. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, Have ye not read, that [c] he which made them at the beginning, made them male and female? 5. And ſaid, For this cauſe [d] ſhall a man leave father and mother, and ſhall cleave to his wife: and [e] they twain ſhall be one fleſh. 6. Wherefore they are no more twain, but one fleſh. What therefore God hath joined together, let no man put aſunder. 7. They ſay unto him, [f] Why did Moſes then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away? 8. He ſaith unto them, Moſes, becauſe of the hardneſs of your hearts, ſuffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not ſo. 9. And I ſay unto you, [g] Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and ſhall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoſo marrieth her which is put away, doth commit adultery. 10. ¶ His diſciples ſay unto him, If the caſe of the man be ſo with his wife, it is not good to marry. 11. But he ſaid unto them, [h] All men cannot receive this ſaying, ſave they to whom it is given. 12. For there are ſome eunuchs, which were ſo born from their mothers womb: and there are ſome eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, [i] which have made themſelves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's ſake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

[a] Mark x. 1.

[b] Chap. xii. 15.

[c] Gen. i. 27. & v. 2. Mal. ii. 15.

[d] Gen. ii. 24. Pſ. xlv. 10. Eph. v. 31.

[e] 1 Cor. vi. 16. & vii. 2.

[f] Deut. xxiv. 1. Chap. v. 31.

[g] Chap. v. 32. Mark x. 11. Luke xvi. 18. 1 Cor. vii. 11.

[h] 1 Cor. vii. 2, 9.

[i] 1 Cor. vii. 32, 34.

v. 1—12. Having finiſhed his miniſtry in Galilee, Chriſt departed to return no more, till after his reſurrection, unleſs for one paſſing viſit, (Luke xvii. 11.) When God's miniſters have done their work in a place, Providence directs their removal; and till they have, none of their enemies in earth or hell can diſplace them. Chriſt was now advancing towards Jeruſalem, the ſcene of his ſufferings, and in his way took that part of Judea, where John had chiefly exerciſed his miniſtry, beyond, or, as it may be rendered, on this ſide Jordan; and, as was uſual in every place through which he paſſed, great multitudes reſorted to him, and, according to his wonted compaſſions, he healed them of all their diſeaſes, in confirmation of the doctrines which he taught.

His ever inveterate enemies the Phariſees failed not to attend him here alſo, uſing all their wiles to draw him into a ſnare, that they might prejudice the people againſt him. For which end we have here,

1. The inſidious queſtion they propoſed to him concerning divorces. Whether it was lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cauſe? a queſtion much debated in their ſchools; and through the abuſe of the permiſſion granted in the law of Moſes, they had done it on the moſt frivolous pretences. The Phariſees hoped therefore either to have matter of accuſation againſt him, if he condemned divorces, as an oppoſer to the law of Moſes; or, if he allowed them thus generally, they would have treated him as licentious, the more ſerious Jews condemning thoſe divorces which were made on trifling provocations.

2. In anſwer, Chriſt refers them to the original inſtitution of marriage, as the beſt ſolution of the difficulty they propoſed. Let them conſider that, and they might reſolve their own queſtion. It would appear from thence, that ſuch arbitrary divorces were directly repugnant to the nature of the matrimonial bond. In the very creation of the firſt man and woman, the indiſſoluble union between them might be collected: Adam had none but Eve, nor could divorce her for another, when no other woman then ſubſiſted. This being of all relations the neareſt, God ordained, that even a father or mother muſt be left for the ſake of a wife: not that marriage vacates the obligation lying upon us to help and relieve them; No: but if all admit, that the reciprocal relation between parent and child may not be broken, much leſs can the nearer connection of man and wife be diſſolved. They are one fleſh, near to each other as the members of the ſame body, which no one ever thought of parting with, but cheriſhes with tendereſt care. Thoſe therefore whom God hath thus indiſſolubly joined, it would be highly criminal and preſumptuous in man to ſeparate.

3. The Phariſees ſtart an objection to this interpretation of ſcripture, and flatter themſelves they have Moſes on their ſide, v. 7. Why then did Moſes, &c. very ready to ſeize the ſhadow of a plea, and by repreſenting Chriſt as an enemy to the inſtitutions of Moſes, to render him ſuſpected, and prejudice the people againſt him. Thus do wicked men endeavour to pervert the bleſſed ſcriptures, and make them militate againſt themſelves.

4. Chriſt anſwers their objection, and in a way that did not a little reflect on their ill tempers and conduct. What they ſuppoſe a command, our Lord ſays was merely a toleration, and permitted as a judicial and political law, to prevent the greater evils which muſt enſue; ſuch being their hardneſs of heart, that, rather than their helpleſs wives ſhould be cruelly treated, perhaps murdered to be rid of them, ſuch being their malignity and obduracy, God was pleaſed for their ſakes to diſpenſe with his poſitive law, though from the beginning it was not ſo. Nor in the goſpel ſtate ſhould this be any longer ſuffered, Chriſt being come to reſtore this ordinance to its primitive inſtitution, and to take away the hardneſs of men's hearts; therefore henceforward no divorces would be allowed of, ſave in the caſe of unfaithfulneſs to the marriage-bed: and whoſoever on any other cauſe ſhould divorce his wife, and marry another, would be guilty of adultery, as he would be alſo who married her thus divorced.

5. The diſciples, on hearing this determination of their Maſter, could not help, when they were alone, ſuggeſting their apprehenſions of the unhappineſs of the married ſtate, if divorces were ſo ſtrictly prohibited, and that the experiment would be ſo dangerous, that it amounted to an injunction of celibacy. So apt are men to ſeek liberty for the indulgence of appetite, and to argue againſt the beſt inſtitutions, becauſe of ſome inconveniences which may ariſe from them. If we poſſeſs the ſpirit of Chriſtianity, of meekneſs, patience, and love, we ſhall learn to bear each other's burdens, compaſſionate each other's infirmities, and be thankful for the comforts we enjoy, which far exceed the inconveniencies divorce can be ſuppoſed to remedy.

6. Chriſt replies to their ſuggeſtion, that their reaſoning in one view was right, and that a ſingle ſtate is preferable for thoſe who have the gift of continence; eſpecially in days of perſecution and diſtreſs, and where the cares of a family, and the incumbrances thereto annexed, would make it more difficult for the firſt preachers of the goſpel to be travelling from place to place, or take up too much of their time and thoughts, inſtead of better things. But there are few, very few comparatively, who are poſſeſſed of this gift; and therefore marriage, with all its croſſes, is far the moſt preferable, and to be choſen as a matter of duty; and when entered upon in the fear and love of God, the comforts of that relation will be found to overpay us for all the croſſes. But ſome there are from the birth by natural conſtitution formed for celibacy, ſtrangers to the deſire of women; ſome by the wickedneſs of men are incapacitated for the marriage ſtate; and ſome, ſeeing powerful reaſons to determine their choice, for the ſake of greater uſefulneſs in the ſervice of Jeſus Chriſt, have ſuch particular ſupplies of divine grace given them, as to be able to forego the delights of wedlock, and may laudably purpoſe to live a ſingle life, though not under any vows, if afterwards they ſhould ſee cauſe to change their ſentiments; nor as any thing meritorious, as the papiſts ſuggeſt; but purely, that being diſengaged from the cares of life, they may be enabled to employ themſelves more entirely in the work of God, than otherwiſe they could. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

13. ¶ [k] Then were there brought unto him little children, that he ſhould put his hands on them, and pray: and the diſciples rebuked them. 14. But Jeſus ſaid, Suffer little children, and forbid them not to come unto me: for [l] of ſuch is the kingdom of heaven. 15. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

[k] Mark x. 13. Luke xviii. 15.

[l] Chap. xviii. 3. 1 Cor. xiv. 20.

v. 13—15. We have ſeen multitudes of others making their application to Chriſt; here we behold ſome pious parents bringing their children to crave his divine benediction.

1. They brought their infants, that Jeſus might lay his hands upon them, and pray for them, in faith expecting that he could impart to them ſpiritual bleſſings, and that his prayers would be attended with gracious effects. Note, They who have taſted the grace of Jeſus themſelves, cannot but earneſtly deſire, that all theirs may ſhare with them the ineſtimable mercy, and therefore fail not to preſent their little ones to him for his bleſſing.

2. The diſciples, apprehenſive leſt ſuch a precedent would induce others to bring their children, and thereby occaſion their Maſter much trouble; or ſuppoſing it beneath him to take notice of infants, or uſeleſs to bring them to him; rebuked thoſe who brought the children, and wanted to prevent their application. But,

3. Chriſt expreſſed his diſpleaſure againſt his diſciples for obſtructing ſo charitable a work, and bids them ſuffer theſe babes to be brought, ſeeing of ſuch is the kingdom of heaven. Not only like theſe in ſpirit and temper ſhould the members of his church be, but alſo that they, as well as grown perſons, are capable of becoming ſubjects of the goſpel kingdom, and of having an intereſt in its ſpiritual bleſſings and privileges: and if ſo, then there ſeems no reaſon why they may not by baptiſm be admitted into the viſible communion of the faithful. And he laid his hands on them, and bleſſed them, (Mark x. 16.) Tho' they cannot ſtretch out their infant hands to him in faith and prayer, he can confer on them his gifts of grace, and prepare them for his eternal kingdom. Thus having confirmed the privileges of the lambs of his flock, he departed thence.

16. ¶ [m] And behold, one came and ſaid unto him, Good maſter, what good thing ſhall I do that I may have eternal life? 17. And he ſaid unto him, Why calleſt thou me good? there is none good but one, that is God: but [n] if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. 18. He ſaith unto him, Which? Jeſus ſaid, [o] Thou ſhalt do no murder, Thou ſhalt not commit adultery, Thou ſhalt not ſteal, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs. 19. [p] Honour thy father and thy mother: and [q] Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf. 20. The young man ſaid unto him, All theſe things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet? 21. Jeſus ſaid unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, [r] go and ſell that thou haſt, and give to the poor, and thou ſhalt have treaſure in heaven: and come and follow me. 22. But when the young man heard that ſaying, he went away ſorrowful: for he had great poſſeſſions.

[m] Mark x. 17. Luke xviii. 18.

[n] Gal. iii. 12.

[o] Ex. xx. 13. Deut. v. 17.

[p] Chap. xv. 4.

[q] Lev. xix. 18. Chap. xxii. 39. Rom. xiii. 8, 9. Gal. v. 14.

[r] Luke xii. 23. & xvi. 9. Acts iv. 34. 1 Tim. vi. 18, 19.

v. 16—22. We have here a conference between a promiſing young man, who came with a queſtion of the laſt importance, and our bleſſed Lord, whoſe anſwer is deſigned for his conviction and humiliation, in order to lead him to a better righteouſneſs than his own, for the obtaining that eternal life which he enquired after.

1. His addreſs was moſt reſpectful, and his enquiry of the laſt conſequence. Though Chriſt appeared outwardly mean and deſpicable, and he himſelf was a perſon of diſtinction, yet he humbly knelt before him, and with a title of uncommon veneration addreſſed him, deſiring to be informed by him, as a prophet ſent from God, by what works of righteouſneſs he might aſſuredly obtain that eternal life he ſeemed above all things ſollicitous to ſecure. Note, (1.) Eternal life is the grand object, and moſt deſerving our firſt concern. (2.) Youth and riches are dangerous ſnares, that too frequently divert the mind from the conſideration of another world; but the more rare, the more commendable it is, when we ſee any perſon poſſeſſed of both, ſeeking in the firſt place the kingdom of God. (3.) They who would learn the way to eternal life, muſt be daily coming to Chriſt on their knees.

2. Our Lord replies both to his addreſs and queſtion. As the young ruler regarded him as a mere man, the title of Good, in that emphatical ſenſe, was miſapplied, ſince no creature is abſolutely and perfectly good, but God alone. As to the queſtion, according to the views wherewith he came, expecting to obtain life by obedience to the law as a covenant of works, there was but one way: If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments, perfectly, univerſally, perpetually. Nothing ſhort of this can ſecure a title to eternal life under the law, where every defect, failure, or omiſſion, immediately incurs the penalty of the curſe denounced, Deut. vi. 25. In which anſwer Chriſt appears deſigning to lead him to a view of the impoſſibility of obtaining righteouſneſs and life eternal by any doings and duties of his own, and, by unhinging him from an opinion of his own goodneſs and abilities, to ſhew him the neceſſity of a better righteouſneſs than his own for his title to life and glory. Note, (1.) There is no abſolute goodneſs in man; all we have at beſt is imperfect. (2.) There was once a way to life by perſonal perfect obedience; but ſince the firſt man's ſin none ever went that way, he only excepted, who was more than man.

3. Willing to know what theſe commandments were, and conceiving his abilities and inclinations equal to the taſk, the young ruler begs a diſtinct enumeration of them; and Jeſus, to convince him how miſtaken an idea he had formed of himſelf, inſtances only in the duties of the ſecond table, which he had probably learnt by heart, and which, if rightly underſtood, would miniſter to him abundant matter for humiliation, and ſhew him the impoſſibility of obtaining eternal life by his own obedience.

4. Ignorant of the ſpirituality of the law, and judging according to the wretched literal comments of the ſcribes, he thought he might ſafely vouch for his obedience. From his youth up he had eſcaped from the groſſer pollutions that are in the world, and made conſcience of his ways. He was no adulterer, thief, murderer, or perjured perſon; and having kept all theſe commandments, as he ſuppoſed, deſired, with ſome ſhew of ſelf-complacence, to know what farther was required, as if he only wanted to be informed, and was ready to obey. Note, (1.)

Pride on our duties is as damnable as the indulgence of our ſins. (2.) It may appear a ſtrange, but it is a true aſſertion, that the faireſt characters in the eyes of the world are uſually the fartheſt from the kingdom of God. (3.) We may be fully aſſured we know neither God's law nor our own hearts, when we preſume to ſay of the leaſt of his commandments, All theſe have I kept from my youth. (4.) A humbling ſight of our ſins, not a vain conceit of ourſelves, is the firſt ſtep to the kingdom of God.

5. To convince him how miſtaken his apprehenſions were of his own goodneſs, Chriſt puts him upon giving a proof of obedience to that leading precept of the law, and only true principle of duty, Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf; and he would preſently ſee how much he lacked of the attainments he boaſted. He wiſhed to be perfect; if he would be, as one ſtep towards it, let him ſell all his poſſeſſions, diſtribute them to the poor, have his affections taken off from earthly things, commence a conſtant attendant on Jeſus, take up his croſs, and follow his footſteps; and then he would ſecure the treaſures of eternity, and be in the way to that eternal life he ſought. Note, (1.) A holy deadneſs to the world is at all times the duty of Chriſt's diſciples; and there may be occaſions ſtill, where literally we muſt be ready to part with all for his ſake. (2.) Covetouſneſs and inordinate love of the world are often ſeen in the faireſt profeſſors, and are among the ſaddeſt ſymptoms of the inſincerity and hypocriſy of their hearts. (3.) They who leave all for Chriſt, will be no looſers in the end; the treaſures of eternity will prove an ample recompenſe.

6. Unable to bear theſe hard ſayings, and not at all inclined to part from his great poſſeſſions, though eternal life was at ſtake, the young man thought the way too narrow; yet, grieved to find he had not reached the perfection he fancied in himſelf, and loth to quit Chriſt and eternal life, he went away ſorrowful, unwilling to loſe the hopes of heaven, and yet reſolved not to part with his great poſſeſſions on earth. Note, (1.) Riches are the rock on which innumerable ſouls are ſhipwrecked, and drowned thereby in perdition and deſtruction. (2.) The more we have of this world, in general the cloſer our affections cleave to it; and increaſing wealth brings uſually an increaſe of ſnares. (3.) Many are ſorry to part with Chriſt, and ſubmit with reluctance to the yoke of ſin and the world, who yet periſh under the bondage of corruption.

23. ¶ Then ſaid Jeſus unto his diſciples, Verily I ſay unto you, that [s] a rich man ſhall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven. 24. And again I ſay unto you, [t] It is eaſier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 25. When his diſciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, ſaying, Who then can be ſaved? 26. But Jeſus beheld them, and ſaid unto them, With men this is impoſſible, [u] but with God all things are poſſible. 27. ¶ Then anſwered Peter, and ſaid unto him, Behold, [x] we have forſaken all, and followed thee; what ſhall we have therefore? 28. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, that ye which have followed me [y] in the regeneration, when the Son of man ſhall ſit in the throne of his glory, [z] ye alſo ſhall ſit upon twelve thrones, [a] judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael. 29. And every one that hath forſaken houſes, or brethren, or ſiſters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my name's ſake, ſhall receive an hundred-fold, and ſhall inherit everlaſting life. 30. But [b] many that are firſt ſhall be laſt; and the laſt ſhall be firſt.

[s] Mark x. 24. 1 Cor. i. 26. 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.
[t] Jer. xiii. 23. Luke xviii. 25.
[u] Jer. xxxii. 17. Zech. viii. 6. Luke i. 37. & xviii. 27.
[x] Deut. xxxiii. 9. Chap. iv. 20.
[y] Heb. ix. 10. or Acts iii. 21. 2 Pet. iii. 13.
[z] Luke xxii. 28—30. 2 Tim. ii. 12.
[a] 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3.
[b] Chap. xx. 16. Luke xiii. 30.

v. 23—30. On occaſion of ſo promiſing a youth's departure from him, through inordinate attachment to worldly wealth, our Lord, directing his diſcourſe to his diſciples,

1. Obſerves the vaſt obſtructions which riches lay in the way of men's ſalvation. A rich man, whoſe heart is engaged with the care and love of his ſubſtance, can hardly ever become a ſubject of Chriſt's kingdom upon earth, or an inheritor of his kingdom in heaven. Things in their nature the moſt impracticable may be expected to happen, even, according to the proverbial expreſſion, for a camel to go through a needle's eye, ſooner than for a man, whoſe heart is attached to his wealth, and ſeeks his happineſs therein, to become a real diſciple of Jeſus, and an inheritor of glory. Note, (1.) The immenſe difficulties riches put in our way to heaven ſhould make us thankful in a low condition, that God hath not expoſed us to this temptation; ſhould ſuppreſs every riſing of envy againſt our wealthy neighbours, and quench every inordinate deſire of abundance. (2.) They who are rich, have more duties to diſcharge; more ſins to beſet them; more tempations to ſtruggle with; more ſelf-denial to exerciſe; and a larger account of talents to ſettle than others; and therefore grea grace is needful to ſanctify great poſſeſſions.

2. The diſciples expreſs their aſtoniſhment at their Maſter's aſſertion; and if the caſe ſtood thus, according to their miſtaken ideas of the Meſſiah's kingdom, they do not conceive it poſſible to be ſupported, if all the rich and great are excluded, who uſually ſway the world: or if they underſtood him of the heavenly kingdom, they are ready to conclude, that few or any would ever attain thereunto, as many are poſſeſſed of wealth, and almoſt all deſire it. Note, The wonder is, conſidering the difficulties in the way of ſalvation, not that ſo few are ſaved, but that any obtain it. The more the hindrances are, the greater diligence we need uſe to ſurmount them.

3. Chriſt with concern obſerving their ſurprize and conſternation, replied, that indeed with men, conſidering their native corruption and worldly-mindedneſs, ſalvation was utterly out of their reach; they being unable to effect the needful change in their own hearts, or in each other's, more than human ſufficiency was requiſite. This is the work of God; impoſſibilities with us are poſſible with him: almighty grace can ſubdue the moſt inveterate corruptions, ſpiritualize the affections of the moſt worldly-minded, and enable the rich as well as the poor to overcome the temptations of their perilous ſtate, and ſhew themſelves rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom. None therefore are to be deſpaired of; when God will work, who can let it?——Some refer this to the Meſſiah's kingdom upon earth, as if the anſwer implied, that though it appeared ſo impracticable to them to ſet up this kingdom, in oppoſition to all the wealth and greatneſs of the world; yet ſuch ſupports ſhould be miniſtered to them, poor and inconſiderable as they were, as ſhould enable them to withſtand all their enemies, and make their labours ſucceſsful.

4. Peter, in the name of his brethren, thought this no unfavourable ſeaſon to enquire what they ſhould get, ſince they had left all and followed him. It is true their all was not much; but ſuch as it was, it was equally dear to them as if they had poſſeſſed greater wealth. Note, (1.) If our ſpirit be right, tho' our loſs for Chriſt exceed not the widow's mite, he will accept it as if we had left greater poſſeſſions. (2.) Though it is not the mere motive of advantage that influences the faithful, we may notwithſtanding with comfort look to the great recompenſe of reward.

5. Chriſt engages, that they who forſake all for him ſhall be no looſers in the iſſue. They who have followed him in the regeneration, ſhall be honoured with the moſt eminent ſeats in his kingdom, and ſit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael.

In the regeneration, refers either to the preſent ſtate of the diſciples who had followed Chriſt, and may ſpiritually deſcribe the change which had paſſed on their ſouls by the renewing power of divine grace. Or this may ſignify their attendance upon him, and devoting themſelves to his ſervice in ſetting up that kingdom which was deſigned to effect a glorious reformation in the world. This phraſe may likewiſe be connected with the latter part of the clauſe, when the Son of man ſhall ſit in the throne of his glory, in the regeneration, and then it hath reſpect to the future ſtate of the Redeemer's exaltation, when, after his aſcenſion from the dead, they ſhould be endued with power from on high, the former Moſaical diſpenſation ſhould be aboliſhed, and they commiſſioned to preach the goſpel, and erect the Chriſtian church; in which old things, the Jewiſh ceremonials, would paſs away, and all things become new; new ordinances be adminiſtered, and new hearts and minds be given to the converts.

Their ſitting on thrones, &c. may imply either the dignity of their apoſtleſhip, to which they ſhould be advanced, to charge the Jews with their crimes, eſpecially their rejection of the Meſſiah, and to denounce the vengeance ready to be executed upon them, which, in conſequence of their predictions, they ſhould ſee accompliſhed. Or this refers to their diſtinguiſhed place of honour, when in the great day of the Redeemer's appearing and glory, they ſhould be admitted to ſit down as aſſeſſors with him, on thrones around his own, approving and applauding his judgment, diſpenſed according to the word they preached, and afterwards ſhall in the eternal world reign with Chriſt in glory everlaſting.

And whilſt he thus promiſed the twelve this diſtinguiſhed honour, he added alſo, for the encouragement of all who ſhould tread in their ſteps to the end of time, that the like rewards ſhould be the portion of the faithful. It is ſuppoſed, that for Chriſt's ſake all his true diſciples would be called upon to make very painful ſacrifices, and often be forced to loſe the affection of neareſt and deareſt relations, be ſeparated from the greateſt comforts of life, and deprived of all they poſſeſſed: but he engages to indemnify them for their loſſes; ſometimes in kind, by his providence ſo ordering events, as that they ſhall in preſent advantages receive a hundred fold, or at leaſt always in comfort ſhall have an abundant recompenſe, enjoying clearer and brighter manifeſtations of God's love and favour; and, for temporal loſſes, finding their ſouls enriched by ſpiritual graces; beſides the glorious hope of eternal life in the world to come, ſecured by the faithfulneſs of the true witneſs, and the unchangeable promiſes of God, which muſt needs infinitely overpay us for all the croſſes and loſſes of this tranſitory world. We may learn from the whole of this diſcourſe, (1.) To expect, if we are Chriſt's diſciples, many a croſs, and to be ready to part with whatever ſtands in competition with his honour and intereſt. (2.) To be thankful if we are not called to thoſe ſeverer exerciſes of diſcipleſhip which others before us have endured. (3.) To keep the promiſes in our eye when the day of trial comes, and then we ſhall think nothing too hard to ſuffer, or too dear to loſe. A ſenſe of the Redeemer's preſent love, and a proſpect of the glory which ſhall be revealed, will make every preſent affliction light, and cauſe us to rejoice in the midſt of our ſorrows. (4.) The time we muſt ſuffer for Chriſt is momentary, but our reign with him ſhall be eternal.

6. He adds, by way of obviating any miſtake which might ariſe, as if eternal life was the reward of merit, not of grace; or as if priority of calling gave precedence in his kingdom; that many who were firſt ſhall be laſt, and the laſt firſt. Many of the Jews who were firſt called refuſing the invitation, and many Gentiles through grace, though laſt invited, eagerly embracing the goſpel; and alſo of thoſe, both of the Jews and Gentiles, many who were truly and effectually called and converted at firſt, would be outſtripped in attainments, and excelled in ſpirituality, zeal, and fidelity, by thoſe who in order of time ſhould afterwards come in, and be exalted to higher honours in his kingdom, which he elucidates by a parable in the ſucceeding chapter. Note, If we are called late, we muſt work the faſter, and give the greater diligence to redeem the time.

CHAP. XX.

We have four things in this chapter: 1. The parable of the labourers in the vineyard, ver. 1—16. 2. A prediction of Chriſt's approaching ſufferings, ver. 17—19. 3. The petition of two of the diſciples, by their mother, reproved, ver. 20—28. 4. The petition of the two blind men granted, and their eyes opened, ver. 29—34.

1. FOR [a] the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an houſholder, which went out [b] early in the morning to hire [c] labourers into his vineyard. 2. And when he had agreed with the labourers for † a penny a day, he ſent them into his vineyard. 3. And he went out about the third hour, and ſaw others ſtanding idle in the market-place. 4. And ſaid unto them, Go ye alſo into the vineyard, and whatſoever is right, I will give you. And they went their way. 5. Again he went out about the ſixth and ninth hour, and did likewiſe. 6. And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others ſtanding idle, and ſaith unto them, Why ſtand ye here all the day idle? 7. They ſay unto him, Becauſe no man hath hired us. He ſaith unto them, Go ye alſo into the vineyard, and whatſoever is right, that ſhall ye receive. 8. So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard ſaith unto his ſteward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the laſt unto the firſt. 9. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, [d] they received every man a penny. 10. But when the firſt came, they ſuppoſed that they ſhould have received more, and they likewiſe received every man a penny. 11. And when they had received it, they murmured againſt the good man of the houſe, 12. Saying, Theſe laſt have wrought but one hour, and thou haſt made them equal unto us, which have born the burden and heat of the day. 13. But he anſwered one of them and ſaid, Friend, [e] I do thee no wrong: didſt not thou agree with me for a penny? 14. Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this laſt, even as unto thee. 15. [f] Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? is thine eye evil becauſe I am good? 16. [g] So the laſt ſhall be firſt, and the firſt laſt: for [h] many be called, but few choſen.

[a] Iſa. v. 1. Chap. xxi. 33.
[b] 1 Kings xviii. 12. 2 Tim. iii. 15.
[c] Phil. ii. 12. 2 Pet. i. 5.
† i. e. Seven pence halfpenny.
[d] Rom. ii. 7.
[e] Rom. ix. 14.
[f] Rom. ix. 21.
[g] Chap. xix. 30. & xxi. 31.
[h] Chap. xxii. 14.

v. 1—16. This parable is a comment on the text which concluded the foregoing chapter, and repreſents to us the goſpel diſpenſation, and this with particular application to the Jews and Gentiles; the former of whom were ever for excluding the latter from all the bleſſings of the Meſſiah's kingdom, and could never endure the thoughts of the heathen being admitted to equal privileges with themſelves. But ſo God had ordained; and though for their fathers' ſakes the firſt offers of the goſpel were to be made to them, yet the Gentiles were ſhortly to be admitted fellow heirs, and of the ſame body. More generally the parable may alſo repreſent to us the ſovereignty of God in the diſpenſation of his gifts of grace and glory. As he is debtor to none, he may do what he will with his own; may beſtow his bleſſings in time, meaſure, manner, as he pleaſes; and reward according to the good pleaſure of his will.

1. We have an account in this parable of the agreement made with the labourers by the maſter of the vineyard. The vineyard may repreſent the church; the maſter, the Lord Jeſus; the labourers, as many as the Lord our God ſhall call; the market-place, the world, that lieth in wickedneſs; where, till he comes to hire us, we are idle, unemployed, or worſe, employed in miſchief; ſerving divers luſts and pleaſures, and doing no work God is pleaſed with, or that can bring any revenue of glory to him. Our work for which we are engaged is caring for the ſoul, and in this ſervice our own benefit, as well as God's glory, is conſulted; for indeed, if we be righteous, what do we unto him? yet God is pleaſed to hire us to labour for ourſelves, and, as the reward of grace, to promiſe us the wages of ſpiritual and eternal bleſſings, ſignified by the Roman penny, about ſeven-pence halfpenny in value, the uſual hire of a day-labourer. The day of life is our working ſeaſon, a ſhort moment, in which we have much to do, and therefore are called to do it with our might, before the night cometh when no man can work. And if the burden be heavy, or the heat intenſe, the time is ſhort, the ſhadows of the evening are haſting on, and the night of death will diſmiſs us to our eternal reſt. The different hours may repreſent, (1.) The calling of Jews and Gentiles; the early morning call may point to the miniſtry of Chriſt; the third hour, to that of the Apoſtles ſent to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael; the ſixth and ninth hours may refer to their preaching ſtill to thoſe of Judea only, and to the diſperſed among the Gentiles for a time; till at the eleventh hour the call was enlarged to the heathen world, to thoſe who had never heard the glad tidings of ſalvation before, and then readily accepted the invitation of entering into the vineyard of Jeſus. (2.) The different ages of thoſe who are effectually called of the Lord. Some are brought home to him in childhood, as Timothy. From early youth, like good Joſiah, their heart is tender, and grace begins its bleſſed work, engaging them to give themſelves up to the ſervice of their Redeemer. Others at different periods are called to Jeſus, ſevered by grace, in the very prime of life, from their gay purſuits; or as they are firſt entering on the world, brought out of it to follow Chriſt. Some are ſtopped, after a long career in evil, and in their declining years mercifully conſtrained to bow to the Redeemer: and a few, even at the eleventh hour, bending to the grave under decrepit age, are made ſignal monuments of divine mercy and ſovereignty, and proofs of his ability to ſave to the uttermoſt. No bonds of cuſtom in ſin, no fetters of worldly connections, no length of time, or depth of corruption, prevent the efficacy of God's grace towards his choſen. It is happy for thoſe who begin ſooneſt; but it is never too late. Whilſt the day laſts, the call ſtill is, Whoſoever will, let him come; but we may not trifle with the moment of opportunity: eternity is at ſtake; and therefore to-day, whilſt it is called to-day, we muſt embrace the gracious invitation.

2. The evening came, the labourers were called, their wages paid, and each received a penny. The evening is the end of time, when the great account will be ſettled, and all, both Jews and Gentiles, will appear at the judgment-ſeat of Chriſt, the great ſteward, to receive according to the things they have done in the body. He is repreſented beginning with the laſt, and giving to each the ſame reward; for as the wages is not of debt, but of grace, in heaven (as ſome conceive) all ſhall enjoy the ſame perfect meaſure of glory; at leaſt, every veſſel, if there be a diverſity of capacities, ſhall be full.

3. They who had entered the vineyard firſt, ſeeing the reſt thus recompenſed, ſuppoſed their labours entitled them to more than their agreement, and therefore were diſappointed when they received no more than a penny, and began to murmur and complain, as if an injuſtice had been done them in making thoſe their equals in the wages, who had ſo much later in the day entered upon the work. And this repreſents the caſe of the Jews, who, becauſe they were the antient people of God, were firſt called, and had enjoyed peculiar privileges beyond any other nation, would fain have monopolized the advantages of the Meſſiah's kingdom, or at leaſt have poſſeſſed its chief honours, and could not endure the thought that the Gentiles ſhould be made their equals, and ſhare the ſame grace and glory with them.

4. The maſter of the vineyard ſilences the murmurers, addreſſing himſelf to one of them, ſaying, Friend, I do thee no wrong, &c. There could be no injuſtice done him, if he had the full ſum agreed for; and therefore he ought to be content. He had a right to diſpoſe of his own money as he pleaſed, and if he choſe to give unto the laſt a penny, as well as to the firſt, it were wicked and envious to repine againſt the gracious giver. And all this is true, not only with regard to the Jews and Gentiles, but generally with regard to all mankind in general. (1.) God, who is juſtice itſelf, neither can nor will do wrong to any. (2.) His gifts of providence and grace are his own; and as none have a title to either, though they on whom he is pleaſed to beſtow them have reaſon to be thankful, they from whom he withholds them have no juſt cauſe to complain. (3.) If we can claim any thing from God as our own, it is only in virtue of his gracious promiſe, not on account of our deſert. (4.)

We are too apt to be making compariſons between ourſelves and others; and, partial in our own favour, are ready to think, that kindneſſes ſhewn to others, are injuſtice done to ourſelves. (5.) Envy makes us ſelf-tormentors, and is at once our ſin and our curſe.

5. The text of the diſcourſe concludes it, being the point which was to be proved; ſo the firſt ſhall be laſt, and the laſt firſt. Many Gentiles ſhould far outſhine the Jewiſh converts who were firſt admitted into the church; and many riſing diſciples would be found, who in knowledge, grace, and holineſs would overtake and exceed thoſe who were in Chriſt before them: For, not thoſe who are foremoſt in profeſſion are always firſt in the race, but contrariwiſe; many who are called into the outward communion of the church, are never effectually converted and turned to God; and it will be found at laſt, that there are but few, comparatively ſpeaking, choſen to eternal life and glory: an aſſertion moſt alarming, and which ſhould awaken all our ſollicitude to make our calling and election ſure, that we may be of that few.

[l] Chap. xvi. 21. Mark x. 32. Luke xviii. 31.
[k] Chap. xxvii. 2. Acts iv. 27.

17. ¶ And Jeſus going up to Jeruſalem, took the twelve diſciples apart in the way, [l] and ſaid unto them, 18. Behold, we go up to Jeruſalem, and the Son of man ſhall be betrayed unto the chief prieſts, and unto the ſcribes, and they ſhall condemn him to death. 19. And [k] ſhall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock and to ſcourge and to crucify him: and the third day he ſhall riſe again.

v. 17—19. To prepare them for that ſcene of diſtreſs and ſufferings on which he was about to enter, he once more took his diſciples apart, as they went up together to Jeruſalem, and repeated what he ſaid before, chap. xvi. 21. xvii. 22, 23. informing them now more particularly concerning the manner of his ſufferings and death, which he had foretold: That he ſhould not only be betrayed into his enemies hands, but perſecuted with unrelenting malice, and by a moſt unrighteous ſentence condemned to die: That he ſhould be delivered to the Gentiles, the Romans, who alone had then the power of life and death in Judea; and, after enduring the moſt ſhocking and barbarous indignities, ſhould ſuffer death upon a croſs. Tidings that no doubt filled them with horror and diſmay: but he adds, for their comfort and ſupport, that on the third day he ſhould riſe again. Note, In all the troubles we feel or fear, it is a comfort to look forward to a reſurrection day, when they will all be for ever at an end.

[l] Mark x. 35.
[m] Chap. iv. 21.
[n] Jer. xlv. 5.
[o] Jam. iv. 3.
[p] Chap. xxvi. 39, 42.
[q] Chap. xxvi. 56.
[r] Acts xii. 2.
† Gr. Save to them, &c. Chap. xxv. 34. John xvii. 2. Rev. ii. 7, 10, 17. & iii. 5, 12, 21.
[s] Luke xxii. 24, &c.
[t] Rom. xv. 2. 1 Cor. ix. 19, 20.
[u] John xiii. 14.
[x] Luke xxii. 27.
[y] Iſa. liii. 10. Dan. ix. 24. 1 Tim. ii. 6. Tit. ii. 14. 1 Pet. i. 19.
[z] Iſa. liii. 11. Chap. xxxi. 26, 28. Rom. v. 15, 19. Heb. ix. 28.

20. ¶ [l] Then came to him the mother of [m] Zebedee's children, with her ſons, worſhipping him, and deſiring a certain thing of him. 21. And he ſaid unto her, What wilt thou? She ſaith unto him, [n] Grant that theſe my two ſons may ſit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left in thy kingdom. 22. But Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, [o] Ye know not what ye aſk. Are ye able to drink of [p] the cup that I ſhall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptiſm that I am baptized with? They ſay unto him, [q] We are able. 23. And he ſaith unto them, [r] Ye ſhall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptiſm that I am baptized with: but to ſit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, † but it ſhall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. 24. And when the ten heard it, [s] they were moved with indignation againſt the two brethren. 25. But Jeſus called them unto him, and ſaid, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exerciſe dominion over them, and they that are great exerciſe authority upon them. 26. But it ſhall not be ſo among you: but whoſoever will be great among you, let him be your miniſter. 27. And whoſoever will be chief among you, [t] let him be your ſervant. 28. [u] Even as [x] the Son of man came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, and [y] to give his life a ranſom [z] for many.

v. 20—28. Far from being cured of their national prejudices by all the ſufferings our Lord had foretold them he ſhould endure, they concluded theſe would be only the prelude to the more glorious manifeſtation of his power at his riſing again. And therefore,

1. Two of the diſciples, James and John, the ſons of Zebedee, with their mother Salome, who is ſuppoſed to have been nearly related to Joſeph, and might therefore hope to have a ſtrong intereſt in Jeſus, came to their Maſter, and through her preferring their requeſt, with deep reſpect ſhe beſought him to grant her a favour; and being ordered to name it, ſhe deſired him to confer on her two ſons the firſt honours of that kingdom which they ſhortly expected would appear.

2. Pitying their ignorance and weakneſs, inſtead of upbraiding their pride and folly, our Lord turned to the two diſciples, and gently admoniſhes them, ſaying, Ye know not what ye aſk: Your notions of the nature of my kingdom are utterly miſtaken: it is not an earthly throne to which I ſhall be exalted; and as miſtaken are you in the means of attaining the honours you ſeek. You are not aware of the ſufferings and trials that muſt be endured by all thoſe who would come to reign with me. Through much tribulation lies the entrance into heaven; and can you, think ye, drink of my bitter cup, or bear to be baptized in blood, as I muſt ſhortly be? Such ſufferings as theſe they were not prepared for: their ambition looked ſo high, that they ſaw not the dangers which were before them, nor knew what manner of ſpirit they were of. Note, (1.) They who would reign with Chriſt, muſt firſt ſuffer with him; and every Chriſtian ſhould well count the coſt, before he begins to take up his croſs. (2.) In all our ſufferings it ſhould ſweeten our cup to think that Chriſt hath drank of it before us, and all the bitterneſs of ſin he hath taken away.

3. Their ſelf-confidence is a natural conſequence of their pride, and therefore they without heſitation boldly engage for their own ability and fidelity; though, alas! they were ſad ſtrangers to themſelves, and knew not what they ſaid. Note, Young converts are often very forward, till ſad experience hath taught them their own weakneſs.

4. Chriſt replies, and aſſures them they ſhall ſuffer for him, and in a manner they probably at that time little apprehended. But though they did ſo, ſtill he left their requeſt in ſuſpenſe. The honour they ſought was to be diſpoſed of according to God's eternal counſels, and not to be given, ſave to them for whom it is prepared of my Father. In the diſtribution of ſpiritual, temporal, and eternal bleſſings, all are diſpenſed according to the plan laid down in the eternal mind, and concerted in the everlaſting covenant of grace: nothing can be added thereto, or diminiſhed therefrom.

5. The ſame ambitious ſpirit which ſpake in the requeſt of John and James, equally appeared in the indignation of the other ten againſt them, who each thought himſelf as much entitled to the ſuperiority which they deſired. They did not grieve for the ſin of their brethren, but were angry at what they conceived an affront to them; and whilſt they violently condemned their ambition, like many others, were blind to the ſame ſpirit in themſelves. Note, Deſire of preeminence is among the moſt fruitful ſources of diſputes among brethren. Inſtead of being in his own eyes the laſt and the leaſt, each is for aſſuming a ſuperiority, which the proud heart of his fellow is very unwilling to admit.

6. To ſilence the diſpute, and ſtrike at the root of the evil, Jeſus with the greateſt tenderneſs called them to him; and, to beat down that ſpirit of ambition, ſo evil in itſelf, and ſo peculiarly unbecoming their holy and humble profeſſion, he endeavours to undeceive them reſpecting the nature of his kingdom, which was purely ſpiritual. The kings and princes of the Gentiles indeed thirſted after dominion and deſpotic ſway, and the more potent exerciſed unbounded authority over their weaker vaſſals and ſubjects; but utterly unlike them muſt their conduct be. Their greatneſs muſt conſiſt not in lording it over God's heritage, but in their abounding labours; not in aſpiring deſires to rule, but in humble endeavours to promote the ſalvation of men's ſouls. The only laudable ambition Jeſus can approve, is the holy ſtriſe who ſhall be moſt condeſcending, and the firſt in every work and labour of love to ſerve the meaneſt who bear the Chriſtian name. Nor did he, their Maſter, recommend ought to them, of which himſelf had not ſet them an eminent example, who came not to take ſtate upon himſelf, and be ſerved with earthly pomp and grandeur, but humbled himſelf to the loweſt offices in the ſervice of men's ſouls and bodies; and, after living the life of a ſervant, was about to die the death of a ſlave, that by the ſacrifice of himſelf he might give a ranſom for many, even for all thoſe whom the Father had given him, in whoſe ſtead he was about to ſuffer, in order to redeem them from the guilt and power of their ſins, and from the wrath of God which they had provoked; and having him therefore for ſuch a pattern of humility, they were peculiarly obliged to copy after it. Note, (1.) The affectation of earthly pomp and ſplendor is utterly unbecoming thoſe who pretend to be the miniſters of the meek and humble Jeſus. (2.) The church of Chriſt hath never ſuffered greater injuries than from the tyranny and oppreſſion of thoſe, who profeſſing to be the ſucceſſors of the Apoſtles, ſeem to have inherited nothing from them, but that lordly, ambitious, and domineering ſpirit for which Jeſus ſo juſtly reprimanded them. (3.) The only allowable ambition among the miniſters of Chriſt is, who ſhall be moſt humble and ſerviceable to their brethren, and herein moſt conformed to their bleſſed Maſter's image. (4.) The life which the Lord Jeſus laid down, was the price of our redemption; and being accepted of God as complete and full, the redemption obtained by it was eternal: thoſe therefore for whom he died can never more ſuffer under the ſins for which he paid a ranſom.

29. [a] And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him. 30. ¶ [b] And behold, two [c] blind men ſitting by the way-ſide, when they heard that Jeſus paſſed by, [d] cried out, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David. 31. And the multitude rebuked them, becauſe they ſhould hold their peace: but [e] they cried the more, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David. 32. And Jeſus ſtood ſtill, and called them, and ſaid, [f] What will ye that I ſhall do unto you? 33. They ſay unto him, [g] Lord, that our eyes may be opened. 34. So Jeſus had compaſſion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately [h] their eyes received ſight, and they followed him.

[a] Mark x. 46. Luke xviii. 35.
[b] Chap. ix. 27.
[c] Iſa. lix. 10.
[d] Mat. xviii. 19.
[e] Luke xviii. 2.
[f] Chap. vii. 7.
[g] Iſa. xxxv. 5.
[h] Luke i. 79.

v. 29—34. Advancing ſtill towards Jeruſalem, Jeſus and his diſciples paſſed through Jericho, attended as uſual by a vaſt multitude, whom curioſity to hear or ſee his miracles, deſire to learn, or want of his healing influence, had drawn together; when behold a wondrous inſtance of his power and compaſſion appears.

1. Two blind men, beggars, ſat by the way-ſide, and hearing from ſome of the multitude, that the famed prophet of Nazareth, who had wrought ſo many miracles, was paſſing by, they immediately concluded it a moſt providential circumſtance, and with united and loud ſupplications cried out inceſſantly, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David. Note, (1.) In theſe blind beggars we may behold a lively emblem of our ſouls. Our underſtanding is darkneſs, and we utterly deſtitute of all good, periſhing inevitably in want and wretchedneſs, unleſs the divine mercy reſpect our miſery and relieve us. (2.) They who feel their real ſtate, will cry after Jeſus, the only hope of the miſerable and the deſtitute. (3.) Providential opportunities ſhould be improved; if we neglect them now, they never may return.

2. They made ſo loud a noiſe, and cried ſo vehemently, that the multitude rebuked them as troubleſome, and bad them be ſilent. But this only made them redouble their prayers, ſaying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou ſon of David: Thou, who art ſo able to help us, whoſe tender mercies have been ſo often extended to others, let our pitiable caſe engage thy notice, and move thy wonted compaſſions. And herein they have ſet us a noble example, (1.) Of fervent prayer. Their wants were great; they felt them with deep ſenſibility; therefore they cried ſo loud, ſo perſevering: So ſhould we do. We may meet with many diſcouragements in ſeeking Chriſt; but theſe, inſtead of ſilencing our prayer, ſhould quicken our importunity. (2.) Of confident faith. They were fully perſuaded, that what they aſked, he was willing and able to grant them. His power as the Lord, his office as the Son of David, emboldened their truſt in his mercy. It is by faith we muſt thus in every diſtreſs honour Jeſus by caſting our care upon him, pleading his name as the ground of our confidence. (3.) Of deep humility. They aſk for mercy alone, referring themſelves entirely to him for the manner in which he pleaſes to diſpenſe it to them. We have no merit; can claim nothing at God's hands; deſerve nothing but wrath and hell: all our hope is in his boundleſs grace, to ſupply all our poverty and wretchedneſs, to pardon our guilt, and beſtow the gifts of his Spirit to deliver us from the power of our ſin. This mercy grant, O Son of David!

3. Chriſt, who had heard their cries, and knew what rebukes they had met with, ſtood and called them to him; for he delights to revive the ſpirit of the contrite, and to relieve the wants of the miſerable. He bids them therefore prefer their requeſt, intimating his readineſs to grant the mercy they had ſo importunately ſought. Note, The promiſes of Chriſt give an unlimited ſcope to our prayers: we can aſk nothing really good for us, which Jeſus is not willing to beſtow.

4. The poor blind men have a ready anſwer; Lord, that our eyes may be opened. They aſk not for ſilver or gold, but for a boon far more difficult to be granted, which yet they are aſſured he can eaſily beſtow. We have need to prefer the ſame prayer every day; and would to God we were more deeply affected with our ſpiritual blindneſs, that our applications might be more frequent and fervent.

5. Their cure is immediate. The compaſſions of Jeſus left them not in ſuſpenſe: he touched their eyes; a flood of day inſtantly broke upon them; and joining the company, they joyfully followed him, teſtifying their gratitude, love and praiſe. Note, They who are enlightened by the Redeemer's grace, will from that moment cleave to him in his holy ways, and gratefully labour to advance his glory.

CHAP. XXI.

The death and reſurrection of Jeſus Chriſt are the two grand hinges upon which our ſalvation turns; and therefore the hiſtory of his ſufferings, even unto death, and his riſing again, is more particularly recorded by all the Evangeliſts than any other part of his ſtory. We have here, 1. The public entry which he made into Jeruſalem, upon the firſt day of the paſſion-week, ver. 1—11. 2. The authority he exerciſed there, in cleanſing the temple, and driving out of it the buyers and ſellers, ver. 12—16. 3. The emblem he gave of the ſtate of the Jewiſh church, in curſing the barren fig-tree, and his diſcourſe with his diſciples thereupon, ver. 17—22. 4. His juſtifying his own authority, by appealing to the baptiſm of John, ver. 23—27. 5. His ſhaming the infidelity and obſtinacy of the chief prieſts and elders, with the repentance of the publicans, illuſtrated by the parable of the two ſons, ver. 29—32. 6. His reading the doom of the Jewiſh church for its unfruitfulneſs, in the parable of the vineyard let out to unthankful huſbandmen, ver. 33—46.

1. AND [a] when they drew nigh unto Jeruſalem, and were come to Bethphage, unto the mount of Olives, then ſent Jeſus two diſciples, 2. Saying unto them, Go into the village over-againſt you, and ſtraightway ye ſhall find an aſs tied, and a colt with her: looſe them, and bring them unto me. 3. And if any man ſay ought unto you, ye ſhall ſay, The Lord hath need of them; and ſtraightway he will ſend them. 4. All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the prophet, ſaying, 5. [b] Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, [c] thy king cometh unto thee, meek, and ſitting upon an aſs, and a colt the foal of an aſs. 6. And the diſciples went, and did as Jeſus commanded them, 7. And brought the aſs and the colt, and [d] put on them their clothes, and they ſet him thereon. 8. And a very great multitude ſpread their garments in the way; [e] others cut down branches from the trees, and ſtrewed them in the way. 9. And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, ſaying, [f] Hoſanna to the ſon of David: [g] Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord, Hoſanna in the higheſt. 10. And when he was come into Jeruſalem, all the city was moved, ſaying, Who is this? 11. And the multitude ſaid, This is Jeſus [h] the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

[a] Mark xi. 1. Luke xix. 29.
[b] Iſa. lxii. 11. Zech. ix. 9. John xii. 15.
[c] Cant. iii. 11.
[d] 2 Kings ix. 13.
[e] 1 Mac. xiii. 51. 2 Mac. x. 7. John xii. 13.
[f] Pſ. cxviii. 25.
[g] Ibid. 26. Chap. xxiii. 39.
[h] Chap. ii. 23.

v. 1—11. Being about to offer himſelf as the true paſchal Lamb for the ſins of his people, our bleſſed Lord determined to make his triumphant entry firſt into Jeruſalem, as a prelude to thoſe more exalted honours, to which on his reſurrection from the dead he ſhould be advanced. We are told on his approaching the ſuburbs, where he halted,

1. The preparations he ordered to be made. We find no heralds ſent to clear the way; no guards ſurround his glittering car; no muſic fills the air with harmony; no officers of ſtate with gorgeous robes attend their mighty ſovereign. The lowly Jeſus deſpiſed this pageantry; it fitted not his ſtate of humiliation; and therefore, though he could in an inſtant have commanded down cherubic legions to attend his ſteps, and made the clouds his chariots, he choſe his poor diſciples to be with him, and ſeated on an aſs's colt, nor even that his own, determines thus to make his public entry. Yet even here he takes occaſion to diſplay his divine omniſcience, and influence over the ſpirits of men; ſending his diſciples to the village over-againſt them, directing them where to find the aſs tied with her foal; aſſuring them, that if any man offered to queſtion them for looſing the aſs, it would be ſufficient to ſay their Maſter wanted them, and he would immediately let them go.

2. The fulfilment of the ſcripture herein is particularly remarked. Long before had the prophets Iſaiah and Zechariah predicted this event; Tell ye the daughter of Zion glad tidings of great joy: Behold, admire and adore him, thy king, the long-expected Meſſiah, cometh unto thee, bringing ſalvation; meek as a lamb, to bear every indignity for Zion's ſake, and gentle to rule with a ſceptre of love in the hearts of his people; ſitting upon an aſs, and a colt the foal of an aſs; like one of the ancient judges of Iſrael, and in ſuch humility as was beſt ſuited to that character he bore. Note, Chriſt is Zion's king: his happy ſubjects may well rejoice in his power and love; but let his enemies tremble; though he comes now like a lamb, he will ſhortly roar againſt them as a lion.

3. The diſciples having obeyed their Maſter's orders, and brought the aſs with her colt, they ſpread their garments on them, and ſeated him thereon; and with every expreſſion of exultation and joy, which this poor and, to human view, deſpicable multitude could ſhew, they uſhered him into the city, ſpreading their garments inſtead of carpets on the ground, or hanging them by the way-ſide; cutting down boughs of trees, and ſtrewing them by the road; carrying palm-branches in their hands, (John xii. 13.) as in the feaſt of tabernacles, and uttering with loud Hoſannahs their triumphant ſongs of praiſe, welcoming their adored Meſſiah, the Son of David, who came with divine authority from on high; wiſhing him all proſperity, honour, happineſs, and glory; praying for the appearing of his kingdom, and that his throne might be exalted over all; and calling on the heavenly hoſts to join in their bleſſings, praiſe, and adoration. Note, (1.) The coming of Jeſus into the ſinner's heart is ſtill matter of greater exultation, and deſerves louder ſhouts of praiſe. (2.) They who have taſted the preciouſneſs of a Redeemer's grace in their own ſouls cannot but long to ſee his kingdom eſtabliſhed in the hearts of others, and fervently pray for its more abundant manifeſtation in the world.

4. Such an uncommon ſcene excited great emotion in the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, according as they were differently affected with wonder, envy, contempt, or exultation; and the general enquiry was, Who is this? that comes with ſuch a train and ſuch exclamations. To which the multitude replied, This is Jeſus, the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee, whoſe doctrines and miracles have rendered him ſo famed, and confirmed his divine miſſion. Note, (1.) Chriſt is often little known, where the greateſt profeſſion of his religion is made. (2.) The poor deſpiſed multitude judge righter concerning Jeſus, his character, and goſpel, than the wiſe and noble, who often affect to deſpiſe them.

12. ¶ [i] And Jeſus went into the temple of God, and caſt out all them that ſold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the ſeats of them that ſold doves, 13. And ſaid unto them, It is written, [k] My houſe ſhall be called the houſe of prayer, [l] but ye have made it a den of thieves. 14. And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple, and he healed them. 15. And when the chief prieſts and ſcribes ſaw the wonderful things that he did, and the children crying in the temple, and ſaying, Hoſanna to the Son of David; they were ſore diſpleaſed, 16. And ſaid unto him, Heareſt thou what theſe ſay? And Jeſus ſaith unto them, Yea; have ye never read, [m] Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings thou haſt perfected praiſe? 17. ¶ And he left them, and went out of the city into Bethany, and he lodged there.

[i] Mark xi. 11. Luke xix. 45. John ii. 15.
[k] Iſa. lvi. 7.
[l] Jer. vii. 11.
[m] Pſ. viii. 2.

v. 12—17. The ſon of God the King in Zion, regards his temple as his palace, and thitherward directs his ſteps.

1. He purges it of intruders, the buyers and ſellers, who in the courts carried on their traffic; exchanging bills to purchaſe ſheep and doves for ſacrifice, or money to pay the annual half ſhekel; and under pretence that this was in order to further the temple ſervice, the prieſts, through avarice, connived at it, enriching themſelves by the extortion practiſed on theſe occaſions. But the Lord overthrew their ſtalls, and drove them out before him, confounded and unable to bear his frowns, or reſiſt his arm; vindicating his conduct, and condemning their wickedneſs by a quotation from Iſa. lvi. 7. and Jer. vii. 11. ſaying, It is written, My houſe ſhall be called a houſe of prayer, to which men ſhould reſort, and where God had promiſed to hear their ſupplications; but ye have made it a den of thieves, perverting it to the vileſt purpoſes, diſhonouring God, and plundering the people. Note, (1.) The vileſt corruptions have been introduced into the church by thoſe who, making advantage the end of their profeſſion, counterfeit godlineſs in order to make gain. (2.) The eyes of his peculiar jealouſy are upon his church, and nothing can more offend the bleſſed head of it, than to behold an avaricious ſpirit in thoſe who, by their very calling, profeſs themſelves crucified to the world.

2. When he had ejected the intruders, he ſat as a King upon his throne to diſpenſe his royal favours; healing the blind and lame who came to him in the temple, and thither the ſpiritually blind and lame are invited ſtill to come to him, and by his word and ſpirit he continues to manifeſt there his healing power and grace.

3. He rebukes the envy of the chief prieſts and ſcribes. They could not bear to ſee ſuch inconteſtible miracles wrought by him; and when the very children, ſtruck with the works of Jeſus, joined their feeble voices to the acclamations of the multitude, and cried, Hoſanna to the Son of David, they were ſtung with malignant envy, and intimated to Jeſus, that to hear without ſilencing ſuch ſilly little creatures, proved him weakly vain and oſtentatious. But Jeſus vindicates theſe infant praiſes he heard; he approved their liſpings; and had theſe cavillers known the ſcriptures, they might have herein obſerved their fulfilment, where it was written, Out of the mouth of babes and ſucklings thou haſt ordained ſtrength, Pſ. viii. 2. God's ſtrength was now made perfect in their weakneſs, and the Meſſiah's praiſe advanced by theſe feeble inſtruments, to the confuſionand condemnation of thoſe who rejected and denied him. Note, (1.) Greatneſs and goodneſs are ever the objects of envy, and the proud cannot bear to hear the tribute of commendation payed to ſuperior excellence. (2.) It is happy when children learn betimes to liſp the Redeemer's praiſes. Though education cannot beſtow grace, yet example and inſtruction in the way of godlineſs, are means we may humbly hope God will effectually bleſs. (3.) The prayers and ſervices of little children are pleaſing to the dear Saviour, and he will graciouſly accept their feeble efforts to expreſs their gratitude.

4. Leaving them to reflect on what had paſſed, he departed to Bethany where he lodged, about two miles from Jeruſalem; thus for a while withdrawing himſelf from their malice and fury, and depriving them of the bleſſing of his preſence, which they had ſo juſtly forfeited.

18. [n] Now in the morning as he returned into the city, he hungred. 19. And when he ſaw † a fig-tree in the way, he came to it, and [o] found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and ſaid unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And preſently the fig-tree withered away. 20. And when the diſciples ſaw it, they marvelled, ſaying, How ſoon is the fig-tree withered away? 21. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, [p] If ye have faith and [q] doubt not, ye ſhall not only do this which is done to the fig-tree, but alſo if ye ſhall ſay unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea; it ſhall be done. 22. And [r] all things whatſoever ye ſhall aſk in prayer, believing, ye ſhall receive.

[n] Mark xi. 12.
† Gr. One fig-tree.
[o] 2 Tim. iii. 5. Rev. iii. 1.
[p] Chap. xvii. 20. Luke xvii. 6.
[q] James i. 6.
[r] Chap. vii. 7. John xiv. 13. & xv. 7. & xvi. 24. 1 John v. 14.

v. 18—22. In the morning early Jeſus returned to Jeruſalem, and having probably come out faſting, he was hungry; being, as man, ſubject to all our ſinleſs infirmities. And ſeeing a fig-tree remarkably flouriſhing, he made up to it, expecting to have found fruit, but found nothing but leaves; on which denouncing a curſe upon it for its barrenneſs, the tree immediately began to wither. And herein Chriſt ſeems to have particularly in his view the Jewiſh people, of which this fig-tree was a lively emblem. They were, in their profeſſion of religion, zealous and plauſible, but barren of all true fruits of righteouſneſs; and therefore were now given up to the curſe, to be deſtroyed without remedy. Note, (1.) Chriſt requires of his diſciples not merely leaves of profeſſion, but the fruit of grace; tho' too many deceive his expectations, and reſt in the form, whilſt they continue ſtrangers to the power of godlineſs. (2.) The curſe will light upon the barren trees; often in this world the hypocrite's hope periſheth; they diſcover their inſincerity, and wither in the eyes of man; but at fartheſt, the day of recompence will blaſt their confidences.

The diſciples the next morning paſſing with their maſter the ſame way, Mark xi. 20. obſerved with wonder how ſoon the fig-tree was withered away which Jeſus had curſed the preceding day: and ſo terrible are his comminations, and ſure to light down upon the devoted ſinner's head. In anſwer to which obſervation, Jeſus replied, that this was little, compared with the power they ſhould be endued with, if they exerciſed unſhaken and unwavering faith in God; not heſitating, or reaſoning how the miracle could be performed, but truſting God's power and promiſes; in which caſe they would be enabled, not merely to dry up a fig-tree with a word, but to ſay to this mountain, on which they now ſtood, be thou removed, and caſt into the ſea, and it ſhall be done. Such aſtoniſhing miracles ſhould they be enabled to work; and whatever other thing they ſhould find needful in the execution of their miniſtry, for the honour of God and the furtherance of his goſpel, they need only aſk it in prayer, nothing doubting, and it ſhould aſſuredly be granted them. Note, The prayer of faith is ſure to prevail; to this God denies nothing. If ever we want, are unhappy, or in diſtreſs, to this ſource it may be traced, to the diſtruſt of his promiſes, his power, or his love.

23. ¶ [s] And when he was come into the temple, the chief prieſts and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and ſaid, [t] By what authority doſt thou theſe things? and who gave thee this authority? 24. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, I alſo will aſk you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like wiſe will tell you by what authority I do theſe things. 25. [u] The baptiſm of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men? And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, From heaven; he will ſay unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? 26. But if we ſhall ſay, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet. 27. And they anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid, [x] We cannot tell. And he ſaid unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do theſe things.

[s] Mark xi. 27. Luke xx. 1.
[t] Exod. ii. 14. Acts iv. 7.
[u] Prov. xv. 28.
[x] Job v. 13.

v. 23—27. We have here,

1. The inſolent demand made upon our Lord, and the interruption given him in his bleſſed work, by the chief prieſts and elders, the rulers in church and ſtate; who, unable any longer to contain, and filled with indignation at what they had ſeen and heard the preceding day, inſiſted upon his producing authority for what he did, and ſhewing the commiſſion under which he acted, preſuming that his anſwer would infallibly lay him open to ſome accuſation, which they had ſo long wiſhed to find againſt him. Note, When we are faithfully labouring for Chriſt, we need not wonder, if Satan and his inſtruments labour to interrupt us.

2. Chriſt anſwers their demand by another. He knew how to confound them, whilſt they thought to ſilence him, and is ready out of their own mouths to condemn them. The baptiſm of John, was it of heaven, or of men? Was he commiſſioned from heaven, or went forth at his own will, or under merely human authority? The queſtion was ſhort, but the dilemma to which it reduced them, was inextricable. They plainly ſaw, if they ſhould ſay, John acted under a divine commiſſion, then Chriſt would have an immediate proof of his own, and they would be inexcuſable for not receiving him as the Meſſiah, to whom John bore witneſs. On the other hand, their own honour, lives, and ſafety, were at ſtake; the people being fully perſuaded of John's prophetic character, which ſhould they deny, they juſtly apprehended leaſt they ſhould be ſtoned like blaſphemers; and therefore, contrary to their own convictions, they choſe to confeſs ignorance, and tell a lie, rather than own the divine miſſion of the meſſenger, which would, in its conſequence, involve the divine authority of Jeſus. But if they thus wilfully choſe to appear ignorant in one caſe, our Lord was fully vindicated in refuſing to give them farther ſatisfaction about himſelf, ſeeing it was in vain to talk with thoſe, who had firſt reſolved not to be convinced. Note, (1.) Worldly minds are unſpeakably more influenced by the fear of men, than by the fear of God. (2.) Many are more afraid of ſhame than ſin, and therefore heſitate not at a lie concerning their thoughts and apprehenſions, their affections and intentions, their remembering or forgetting things, &c. becauſe they flatter themſelves nobody can diſprove them: but there is a ſearcher of hearts, from whom no ſecrets are hid. (3.) If men wilfully ſhut their eyes againſt the truth, it is in vain to reaſon with them any farther.

28. ¶ But what think you? A certain man had two ſons, and he came to the firſt, and ſaid, Son, go work to day in my vineyard. 29. He anſwered and ſaid, I will not: but afterward he repented, and went. 30. And he came to the ſecond, and ſaid likewiſe. And he anſwered and ſaid, [y] I go, ſir; and went not. 31. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They ſay unto him, The firſt. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [z] Verily I ſay unto you, that the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you. 32. For [a] John came unto you in the way of righteouſneſs, and ye believed him not: [b] but the publicans and the harlots believed him. And [c] ye, when ye had ſeen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

y Chap.xxiii. 3.
z Luke vii. 29, 30.
a Chap. iii. 8.
b Luke iii. 12.
c Pſ. x. 4.

v. 28—32. Having ſilenced their cavils, he makes an attack upon their conſcience, in a parable, with an application to them.

1. We have the parable itſelf. A certain man had two ſons, whom he ſent into his vineyard to work: the one appeared at firſt refractory, undutiful, and refuſed to obey his father's commands; but afterward, reflecting on his ill conduct, he was ſorry, repented, and went to his work: the other no ſooner was bid to go than with profound reſpect he promiſed immediate obedience, but never went. The queſtion which did his father's will was too evident to admit of heſitation, and they allow the penitent to be the dutiful ſon. Note, (1.) God is our father; he commands his children to ſerve and glorify him; by our relation to him obedience is our duty, and ſhould be our delight. The day of life is the day of labour, and ſhould therefore diligently be improved by us. But, (2.) Such is our vile nature, that we are rebellious children, refuſe to hearken, yea, dare to ſay, We will not ſerve him, but our own luſts and pleaſures, and inſolently turn from him, every one in his own way. (3.) Whenever by divine grace we are led to repent and return, God in Chriſt is graciouſly pleaſed to receive us, to forgive our wickedneſs and inſolence; again he permits us to be employed in his ſervice, and reſtores us to his regard. (4.) Whilſt ſome prove better than they promiſe, others prove the very contrary; make fair profeſſions of love to Chriſt and his ſervice, but never go farther; Chriſtians in word and in tongue, but not in deed and in truth.

2. Chriſt applies the parable to thoſe who were before him; the primary ſcope of which is to ſhew, that publicans and harlots, repenting, would enter the kingdom ſooner than they; and probably he hath an eye here into the Gentiles, who would repent and be converted by the goſpel, when the Jewiſh nation, for their impenitence and unbelief, would be rejected. And this had evidently appeared in the effects of John's miniſtry, who came in the way of righteouſneſs; his life remarkably exemplary, his doctrine directly tending to lead men to repentance, and faith in the Meſſiah; whereby he proved his miſſion from God: but notwithſtanding ye believed him not: though you pretend ſuch reſpect for God, as the ſecond ſon did for his father, you did not receive John's teſtimony, nor believe the doctrines he preached; but the publicans and harlots believed him, were convinced of their guilt and danger, received his teſtimony concerning Jeſus, repented and were baptized: and, notwithſtanding theſe remarkable fruits of his miniſtry, which ſerved to evidence the divine power and authority which accompanied his word, ye, when ye had ſeen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him, but continued obſtinately hardened againſt every method of conviction. Note, (1.) The ſucceſs of our miniſtry is one of the beſt teſtimonials of our miſſion from God. (2.) Formal profeſſors are much more difficultly wrought upon, and ſeldomer converted, than careleſs ſinners. Strictneſs in the ceremonials of religion, and the pride of duties truſted upon for righteouſneſs, are among the ſtrongeſt holds of Satan in the human heart. (3.) Wherever the goſpel comes in power, converting publicans and harlots, there will it leave thoſe inexcuſable who, beholding its efficacy on others, ſtill contradict, and blaſpheme, and reject the counſel of God againſt their own ſouls.

33. ¶ Hear [d] another parable: There was a certain houſholder [e] which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-preſs in it, and built a tower, and let it out to huſbandmen, and went into a far country. 34. And when the time of the fruit drew near, he ſent his ſervants to the huſbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it. 35. And the huſbandmen took his ſervants, [f] and beat one, and killed another, and ſtoned another. 36. Again he ſent other ſervants, more than the firſt: and they did unto them likewiſe. 37. But laſt of all he ſent unto them his ſon, ſaying, They will reverence my ſon. 38. But, when the huſbandmen ſaw the ſon, they ſaid among themſelves, [g] This is the heir, [h] come, let us kill him, and let us ſeize on his inheritance. 39. And they caught him, and [i] caſt him out of the vineyard, and ſlew him. 40. When the Lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto thoſe huſbandmen? 41. They ſay unto him, He will miſerably deſtroy thoſe wicked men, and [k] will let out his vineyard unto other huſbandmen, which ſhall render him the fruits in their ſeaſons. 42. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Did ye never read in the ſcriptures, [l] The ſtone which the builders rejected, the ſame is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? 43. Therefore ſay I unto you, [m] The kingdom of God ſhall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. 44. And [n] whoſoever ſhall fall on this ſtone, ſhall be broken: but [o] on whomſoever it ſhall fall, it will grind him to powder. 45. And when the chief prieſts and Phariſees had heard his parables, they perceived that he ſpake of them. 46. But when they ſought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, becauſe [p] they took him for a prophet.

d Mark xii. 1. Luke xx. 9.
e Pſ. lxxx. 9. Cant. viii. 11. Iſa. v. 1. Jer. ii. 21.
f 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Neh. ix. 26. Chap. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 52. 1 Theſſ. ii. 15. Heb. xi. 36, &c.
g Heb. i. 2.
h Chap. xxvi. 3. & xxvii. 1.
i Heb. xiii. 12.
k Acts xiii. 46. & xviii. 6.
l Pſ. cxviii. 22. Acts iv. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 7.
m Chap. viii. 12.
n Iſa. viii. 14, 15. Rom. ix. 33.
o Iſa. lx. 12. Dan. ii. 34.
p Luke vii. 16. John vii. 40.

v. 33—46. Another parable, nearly of the ſame import as the former, is here delivered. We have,

1. The privileges which the Jewiſh church had long enjoyed, repreſented by a vineyard let out to huſbandmen. They had been planted in a pleaſant land, fenced round by God's peculiar care, bleſſed with the means of grace; in the midſt of them he had ſet up his altar, manifeſted his preſence, depoſited his lively oracles, inſtituted divine ordinances, appointed a holy miniſtry: nothing that could conduce to their fruitfulneſs or defence was lacking: and therefore, having ſettled their conſtitution at Sinai, or at the dedication of the temple, retiring between the cherubim, he committed to the chief prieſts and elders the care of his church, for the edification of which they were required, as huſbandmen in a vineyard, to labour. Note, (1.) Chriſt's church is his vineyard, and under his eſpecial care, whilſt the world in general lieth in wickedneſs. (2.) Miniſters in the church muſt labour in the word and doctrine: a life of eaſe, indolence, and ſelf-gratification, is inconſiſtent with this ſacred employment.

2. Enjoying ſuch means and mercies, God juſtly expected their profiting ſhould appear, and ſent accordingly his prophets to remind them of their obligations, and ſtir them up and direct them to the diſcharge of them, that they might, in the fruits of grace and righteouſneſs, render that tribute to God which was ſo much his due.

3. The baſeneſs and cruelty of the huſbandmen to theſe divine meſſengers was aſtoniſhing. They abuſed, inſulted, and perſecuted the prophets, and even went ſo far as to imbrue their hands in their blood, Jer. xx. 2. Neh. ix. 26. 2 Chron. xxiv. 21. and when the Lord, in his patience and pity, ſent others in ſucceſſion, to ſee if at laſt ſome change might be wrought, the riſing generation repeated all the wickedneſs of their forefathers. Note, (1.) It hath been the lot of all God's faithful miniſters from the beginning to ſuffer perſecution; and none have been deeper in this tranſgreſſion than thoſe who by office and profeſſion filled the moſt diſtinguiſhed places in his church. (2.)

God's patience with ſinners is aſtoniſhing. Though provoked and inſulted in the perſon of his ambaſſadors, he ſtill ſends them with proffers of peace and pardon.

4. When, in infinite condeſcenſion and love, God ſent to them his Son, to whom they might well be expected to pay reverence and attention; and from whoſe miniſtry and miracles at leaſt, if they rejected others, ſome bleſſed change might have been hoped for; ſo far were they from receiving and ſubmitting to him, that, to fill up the meaſure of their iniquities, they immediately began to plot againſt him, and what theſe huſbandmen had done they were now about to repeat, to caſt him out and ſlay him; as if, when they had crucified him without the walls of Jeruſalem, they might then lord it without controul in the church, and, by the murder of the heir, ſeize the inheritance without oppoſition.

5. Chriſt appeals to them for what they thought muſt be the conſequence, when the Lord of the vineyard came; for come he ſurely will, to reckon with the perſecutors of his prophets and the murderers of his Son. And they, not yet underſtanding the meaning couched under theſe parabolic expreſſions, readily replied, no doubt the caſe of theſe wicked huſbandmen will be terrible; they have nothing to expect but condign puniſhment for their crimes, and that the vineyard ſhould be committed to more truſty ſervants. Thus unwittingly pronouncing their own doom, and juſtifying God's procedure in rejecting them, and calling the Gentiles into his church, who would render him more abundant honour, love, and ſervice. Note, (1.) Even thoſe who periſh ſhall be made to confeſs God's righteouſneſs, and ſhall out of their own mouths be condemned. (2.) The end of all the ungodly, and of the perſecutors of Chriſt and his people, is to be miſerably deſtroyed under the conſuming wrath of an offended God.

6. When, on our Lord's intimating their concern in this parable, they had teſtified their abhorrence of the thought he ſuggeſted of murdering God's ſon, Luke xx. 16—19. he aſſures them this would infallibly be the caſe: and they had, no doubt, often read the ſcripture which foretold it, Pſ. cxviii. 22. The ſtone was himſelf, the rock on which his church ſhould be built up; the builders were the chief prieſts and elders, who rejected him, and refuſed to own him as the Meſſiah; yet, notwithſtanding their malice and infidelity, he muſt become the headſtone of the corner, exalted to be the head of all principalities and powers, and of his church in particular, both of Jews and Gentiles united in one glorious body. And this is the Lord's doing, who, in his predeterminate counſel and foreknowledge, permitted and over-ruled their wickedneſs for good, and would, at his reſurrection and aſcenſion, thus advance his ſon Jeſus, and give him a name above every name; and it is marvellous in our eyes; the obduracy of the Jews, the calling of the Gentiles, the rejection of the Meſſiah and his exaltation, are all marvellouſly ordered to advance the divine glory, to pour confuſion on the enemies of the Redeemer, and effectually to ſecure the ſalvation of his peculiar people.

7. Chriſt particularly addreſſing himſelf to the chief prieſts, elders, and people before him, makes a direct application of all he had ſpoken to their caſe. The goſpel they had rejected ſhould ſhortly be taken from them, and they abandoned of God, becauſe of their infidelity and impenitence; whilſt this word of ſalvation ſhould be ſent to the Gentiles, who would thankfully embrace it, be admitted into the Meſſiah's kingdom, and approve themſelves faithful ſubjects of it in all holy converſation and godlineſs. Whoſoever therefore among them, offended at the humiliation of Jeſus, through ignorance or prejudice rejected him as the Meſſiah, ſhall be broken, as a man that ſtumbles againſt a ſtone: but whoſoever, in his ſtate of exaltation, obſtinately perſiſt in their malice againſt him, ſhall be cruſhed in pieces by him as under the fall of a mighty rock. Note, They who will not bow to the ſceptre of a Redeemer's grace, muſt miſerably periſh under the iron rod of his judgments.

Laſtly, The chief prieſts and phariſees could not miſtake his meaning: they plainly perceived the drift of his parables and diſcourſe, and ſaw it expreſly levelled againſt them, out of their own mouths drawing their condemnation, and confirming the ſentence of wrath and reprobacy againſt them; but ſo hardened were they, that, inſtead of inſtantly humbling their ſouls that they might avert the threatened vengeance, they were ſo enraged that they would inſtantly have laid violent hands upon him, and probably have murdered him on the ſpot; but the fear of the people reſtrained them, who, taking Jeſus for a prophet, would at preſent have interpoſed for his reſcue: they were therefore conſtrained to defer their revenge to a more convenient ſeaſon. Note, (1.) The word of God is powerful and penetrating, and conſcience will make the application, Thou art the man. (2.) They who are not corrected by reproof, muſt be exaſperated thereby. (3.) It is a mercy that God hath many ways of reſtraining men's wickedneſs, though they have caſt off his fear: he can bind them with human fetters, when they refuſe to be governed by his divine law.

CHAP. XXII.

This chapter is a continuation of Chriſt's diſcourſes in the temple, two or three days before he died: his diſcourſes then are largely recorded, as being of ſpecial weight and conſequence. In this chapter we have, 1. Inſtructions given, by the parable of the marriage-ſupper, concerning the rejection of the Jews and the calling of the Gentiles, ver. 1—10. and, by the doom of the gueſt that had not the wedding-garment, the danger of hypocriſy in the profeſſion of Chriſtianity, ver. 11—14. 2. Diſputes with the Phariſees, Sadducees, and ſcribes, who oppoſed Chriſt. (1.) Concerning paying tribute to Caeſar, ver. 15—22. (2.) Concerning the reſurrection of the dead and the future ſtate, ver. 23—33. (3.) Concerning the great commandment of the law, ver. 34—40. (4.) Concerning the relation of the Meſſiah to David, ver. 41—46.

1. AND Jeſus anſwered and ſpake unto them again by parables, and ſaid, 2. [a] The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, [b] which made a marriage for his ſon, 3. And [c] ſent forth his ſervants to call them that were bidden to the wedding: and they would not come. 4. Again, he ſent forth other ſervants, ſaying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: [d] my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: [e] come unto the marriage. 5. But they [f] made light of it, and went their ways, [g] one to his farm, another to his merchandiſe: 6. And the remnant took his ſervants, and [h] entreated them ſpitefully, and ſlew them. 7. But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and [i] he ſent forth his armies, and deſtroyed thoſe murderers, and burnt up their city. 8. Then ſaith he to his ſervants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden [k] were not worthy. 9. Go ye therefore [l] into the high-ways, and [m] as many as ye ſhall find, bid to the marriage. 10. So thoſe ſervants went out into the high-ways, and [n] gathered together all, as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furniſhed with gueſts. 11. ¶ And when the king came in to ſee the gueſts, he ſaw there a man [o] which had not on a wedding-garment: 12. And he ſaith unto him, Friend, how cameſt thou in hither, not having a wedding-garment? and he was ſpeechleſs. 13. Then ſaid the king to the ſervants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and [p] caſt him into outer darkneſs: there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. 14. [q] For many are called, but few are choſen.

[a] Luke xiv. 16.
[b] Rev. xix. 7, 9.
[c] Prov. ix. 3, &c.
[d] Prov. ix. 2.
[e] Rev. xxii. 17.
[f] Heb. ii. 3.
[g] 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.
[h] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Chap. xxi. 35.
[i] Dan. ix. 26. Luke xix. 27, 43.
[k] Acts xiii. 46.
[l] Prov. i. 20.
[m] Mar. xvi. 15.
[n] Chap. xiii. 47.
[o] Zech. iii. 4. Luke xv. 22. Rev. iii. 18. & xix. 8.
[p] Chap. viii. 12. & xiii. 42. & xxiv. 51. & xxv. 30.
[q] Chap. xix. 30. & xx. 16.

v. 1—14. This parable is in import much the ſame as the foregoing, ſhewing the rejection of the Jewiſh people for their obſtinate infidelity, and the calling of the Gentiles conſequent thereupon.

The goſpel diſpenſation is compared to a magnificent entertainment made by a king on the marriage of his ſon, which repreſents the rich proviſion made for poor ſinners, and the gracious invitation ſent to them by the great bridegroom of his church, Chriſt Jeſus, the ſon of the eternal King. We have,

1. The rich proviſion made on this occaſion. The oxen and fatlings are killed, with all that vaſt abundance which became the royal table; ſignifying thoſe ſpiritual bleſſings which a poor and periſhing ſinner needs, ſuch as the pardon of ſin, acceptance with God as righteous, a ſenſe of his love, the comforts and graces of the Holy Ghoſt, ſpiritual ſupports to carry him through the journey of time, and the glorious hope of the enjoyment of God in eternity. And theſe afford the richeſt feaſt for a ſinful ſoul.

2. The repeated calls ſent to thoſe who had been invited, urging their attendance. Thus in particular the Lord ſent out the ſeventy diſciples to call the Jewiſh people; and, when they refuſed to hearken, he again, after his reſurrection, ſent forth his apoſtles and evangeliſts, with greater vehemence to urge their coming, having now perfected the redemption of his people by the one oblation of himſelf, and fully obtained for them all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly things. He invited them therefore once more to join themſelves to the Lord, and take him as their covenant head and glorious bridegroom. And thus in general, by his miniſters to the end of time, doth the Lord ſend forth his gracious invitations to miſerable ſinners, entreating them to come and ſecure their own happineſs, be reconciled to God, and partake of the goſpel feaſt, where all things are ready which they can wiſh or need; where Jeſus is ready to receive them, the Father to pardon and bleſs them, the Spirit to comfort and ſtrengthen them. Well therefore may we with earneſtneſs beſeech men, as they value all that is dear to them, Come unto the marriage.

3. The folly and wickedneſs of thoſe who were invited appear in ſtriking colours; at firſt in a careleſs and inſolent refuſal of the favour done them; and afterwards, when expoſtulated with, and again intreated to comply, by a contemptuous treatment of the meſſage, and a more cruel treatment of the meſſengers: ſome ſlighted and deſpiſed the offer, preferring their worldly avocations, and pretending more neceſſary engagements; whilſt others, provoked with the importunity of the ſervants, not only inſulted and reviled them, but even in a rage imbrued their hands in their blood. Thus it happened to the firſt preachers of the goſpel: the Jewiſh people ſlighted their admonitions, and, inſtead of hearkning to the word of ſalvation, were the bitter perſecutors and murderers of thoſe who preached it. Nor were they ſingular herein. The ſame invitation hath ever ſince, to this very day, met with very much of the like treatment. Many continue to make light of Chriſt; negligent about the concerns of their immortal ſouls, their pleaſures, their gains, their worldly engagement, occupy all their hearts, and they have neither leiſure nor inclination to mind the concerns of religion. They are engroſſed with the cares of life, and anxious about ſo many other things, that, they pretend, they cannot attend to the one thing needful. Thus thouſands turn their backs on Chriſt; their farm and their merchandiſe occupy them wholly, and the calls of the goſpel find no entrance into their deaf ears. Whilſt others, exaſperated at being diſturbed in their ſinful purſuits by the zealous miniſters of God, hate and revile them, and would, but for human reſtraints, renew the former perſecutions. They who preach the goſpel muſt expect to ſuffer for it.

4. The offended monarch, in righteous wrath, to vindicate his honour and avenge his ſervants wrongs, ſent forth his armies, deſtroyed theſe murderers, and burnt up their cities. The Roman armies, at God's command, thus deſtroyed the Jewiſh nation and burnt up Jeruſalem, as the puniſhment due to them for rejecting and murdering their Meſſiah and his miniſters. And the like vengeance awaits all that obey not the goſpel, and perſecute the preachers of it: wrath will ſhortly come upon them to the uttermoſt.

5. The calling of the Gentiles was a conſequence of the rejection of the Jews. God's feaſt ſhall not be prepared in vain. When they who were firſt bidden therefore by their refuſal were judged unworthy a place in his kingdom, he ſent forth his ſervants into the heathen world, with a general invitation, to preach the goſpel to every creature. Which commiſſion they readily executed, inviting all of every rank and ſtation, and ſinners of every degree, to come to Jeſus Chriſt, with aſſurances of a ready welcome from him. And thus the Chriſtian church was filled with an innumerable multitude of converts; ſome really and truly turned to God, others but falſe-hearted and hypocritical profeſſors. Note, (1.) Chriſt will have a church and people in the world, however many reject his goſpel. (2.) The invitation is general. God indeed knoweth thoſe that are his: we do not; therefore muſt preach the goſpel to every creature. (3.) Under the diſpenſation of grace by Jeſus Chriſt, all petty diſtinctions between one ſinner and another are in a manner aboliſhed; as the leaſt ſinner muſt eternally periſh without it, the greateſt have a full and free redemption offered in him. No man periſhes through the greatneſs of his ſins, but through his unbelief and neglect of the goſpel. (4.) The viſible church is a mixt multitude, and will continue ſo till the great day of ſeparation: we may expect to find in it bad, as well as good.

6. The diſcovery, conviction, and condemnation of hypocrites in the church is repreſented by the king's viſit to his gueſts; where obſerving one without a wedding-garment, (which probably might be provided for the gueſts on theſe occaſions, and therefore the neglect was criminal, eſpecially if he preferred his rags before the bright garments which lay ready for him) he addreſſed him with a ſtartling enquiry how he dared intrude himſelf there without the wedding-garment: and, ſpeechleſs at the queſtion, his ſilence confeſſed his guilt. Shackled therefore as a malefactor, the king commands him to be dragged from the room illuminated for the bridal feaſt, and thruſt into the darkneſs without, to bewail, with unavailing expreſſions of bitter anguiſh, his preſumption, ſin, and folly. Where we may obſerve, (1.) The particular notice the Lord takes of thoſe who profeſs to believe in him: he trieth the heart. Hypocriſy may deceive men, but not God. The day will come when the falſe-hearted ſhall be detected, either by ſifting providences in this world, or at the appearing of the King upon his throne. May we now ſo judge ourſelves, that we may not then be judged of the Lord! (2.) The wedding-garment here ſeems to be the righteouſneſs of our Redeemer, provided for us to put on. And it is our ſin, and will be our ruin, that through ignorance we know not the want of it, or through pride reject it, and dare to appear before God in the filthy rags of our own righteouſneſs, which cannot cover our ſhame. (3.) They muſt needs be ſpeechleſs in the day of God, who in profeſſion have joined in the outward ordinances, whilſt their faith hath never put on Chriſt, nor their hearts been conformed to his image. (4.) Hypocrites in the church will receive the ſoreſt damnation in eternal torments, doomed to ſuffer agonies unutterable and inconceivable, and filled with the moſt excruciating rage, horror, and deſpair.

7. The parable concludes with the repetition of the obſervation Chriſt had made before, that many are called, but few choſen. An alarming notice, to examine ourſelves whether we be in the faith; how we came in to the Lord's table; what garments we are cloathed with; and how we can bear the maſter's piercing eye.

15. ¶ [r] Then went the Phariſees, and [s] took counſel how they might intangle him in his talk. 16. And they ſent out unto him their diſciples, with the Herodians, ſaying, [t] Maſter, we know that thou art true, and teacheſt the way of God in truth, neither careſt thou for any man; for thou regardeſt not the perſon of men. 17. Tell us therefore, What thinkeſt thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Ceſar, or not? 18. But Jeſus perceived their wickedneſs, and ſaid, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? 19. Shew me the tribute-money. And they brought unto him † a penny. 20. And he ſaith unto them, Whoſe is this image and ſuperſcription? 21. They ſay unto him, Ceſar's. Then ſaith he unto them, [u] Render therefore unto Ceſar, the things which are Ceſar's: and unto God, the things that are God's. 22. When they had heard theſe words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

v. 15—22. Ceaſeleſs in their deſigns of malice, the Phariſees, aſſociated with the Herodians, endeavoured to entangle him in his talk, and by ſome captious ſubject of diſpute to draw from him ſome expreſſion whereon to found an accuſation againſt him. So little can the pureſt innocence, or the moſt faultleſs integrity, ſcreen us from the malevolence of wicked men.

The Herodians are thought to be a ſect of the Jews who were the partizans of Herod, and were zealous for the Roman government and the payment of the tribute, whilſt the Phariſees and the reſt of the nation abhorred the yoke, and hardly could brook this ignominious badge of ſervitude. They were therefore proper inſtruments on the preſent occaſion.

1. The queſtion they put to our Lord was whether it was lawful to pay tribute to Ceſar, or not. And they concluded this would neceſſarily involve him in a dilemma. Should he deny the lawfulneſs of paying tribute, ſtraitway the Herodians would accuſe him to the government as a rebel and incendiary: ſhould he affirm it, the Phariſees thought he would immediately exaſperate the people, and give them the wiſhed-for opportunity to deſtroy him. Note, It hath been the old practice of Satan's emiſſaries to lay ſnares for God's ſervants, and, by catching an unguarded expreſſion, by wilful miſtake or deſigned miſrepreſentation to blacken and abuſe them. But there is one who heareth and judgeth.

2. To cover this inſidious deſign, they uſe the deepeſt expreſſions of reſpect. As if, conſcientiouſly diſpoſed to follow the path of duty, and highly venerating Chriſt's wiſdom and piety, they deſired his directions for their conduct, perſuaded that, being a teacher come from God, no frowns nor fear of man would ſway his determinations. Note, (1.) The faireſt profeſſions often cloke the fouleſt deſigns. (2.) Their character of Chriſt ſhould be the pattern for all his miniſters. Faithful and true to God themſelves, no fear nor flattery muſt tempt them to conceal any thing of the whole counſel of God from others; but, regardleſs of men's perſons, with zeal and ſimplicity they muſt diſcharge their commiſſion, and ſpeak the truth as it is in Jeſus.

3. Chriſt baffles their craft and diſappoints their deſigns. He knew the ſecret wickedneſs they meditated, and by his queſtion, which ſhewed his knowledge of their hearts, reproved their hypocriſy: Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Shew me the tribute-money. Out of their own mouths he would ſilence them, and anſwer them with their own confeſſions: for, producing to him a penny, a ſilver Roman coin, he demanded whoſe image and ſuperſcription it bore: and, they replying Ceſar's, he anſwered, Render therefore unto Ceſar the things that are Ceſar's. As the coining money was the royal prerogative, the circulation of ſuch coin implied ſubjection to the perſon whoſe image it bore: there could be no doubt therefore but that, if Ceſar's money was regarded as the current coin of the land, there could be no unlawfulneſs in rendering him the tribute which bore his image, in return for the protection and adminiſtration of the civil government, which they received from him. And this interfered not with their religious duties: they muſt render alſo unto God the things which are God's. Thus neither could the civil government have cauſe to be offended, nor the Phariſees be able to accuſe him without condemning themſelves. Note, (1.) When we have to deal with crafty adverſaries, we need be wiſe as ſerpents, whilſt we are harmleſs as doves. (2.) The maſk of hypocrites, however naturally painted, cannot impoſe upon him who trieth the heart. Their hope of concealment is deluſion; and whilſt they tempt him they deſtroy themſelves. (3.) Captious queſtions ſhould

---

[r] Mark xii. 13. Luke xx. 20.

[s] Mic. ii. 1.

[t] Pſ. xii. 2.

† In value ſeven-pence halfpenny. Chap. xx. 2.

[u] Chap. xvii. 25. Rom. xiii. 7.

have a cautious anſwer, that, if poſſible, they who came to enſnare us may be confounded themſelves. (4.) It is reaſonable we ſhould pay tribute to the government from which we receive protection. Chriſt's ſervants muſt on principle be loyal ſubjects. But, though Ceſar has our tribute, God muſt have our hearts. (5.) We muſt ſubmit to every ordinance of man for the Lord's ſake: but, if human injunctions contradict divine commands, God muſt be obeyed, and we muſt be content to ſuffer.

4. Though confounded with his reply, they could not but admire his wiſdom; and, defeated in their purpoſe, they retired with ſhame as baffled foes, unable to find the leaſt ground for accuſation againſt him. May the Lord ever endue his miniſters with the like wiſdom, and enable them to diſappoint the malice of thoſe who lie in wait for an occaſion againſt them!

23. ¶ [x] The ſame day came to him the Sadducees, [y] which ſay that there is no reſurrection, and aſked him, 24. Saying, Maſter, [z] Moſes ſaid, If a man die, having no children, his brother ſhall marry his wife, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother. 25. [a] Now there were with us ſeven brethren, and the firſt, when he had married a wife, deceaſed, and, having no iſſue, left his wife unto his brother. 26. Likewiſe the ſecond alſo, and the third, unto the ſeventh. 27. And laſt of all the woman died alſo. 28. Therefore, in the reſurrection, whoſe wife ſhall ſhe be of the ſeven? for they all had her. 29. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Ye do err, [b] not knowing the ſcriptures, [c] nor the power of God. 30. For in the reſurrection they neither marry nor are given in marriage; [d] but are as the angels of God in heaven. 31.
But, as touching the reſurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was ſpoken unto you by God, ſaying, 32. [e] I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. 33. And when the multitude heard this, they were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine.

x Mark xii. 18. Luke xx. 27.
y Acts xxiii. 8.
z Deut. xxv. 5.
a Tob. iii. 8.
b Job xix. 25, 26. Ezek. xxxvii. 5—10. Dan. xii. 2.
c Acts xxvi. 8.
d 1 John iii. 2.
e Exod. iii. 6, 16. Acts vii. 32. Heb. xi. 16.

v. 23—33. The Phariſees and Herodians being foiled, the Sadducees next reſolved to take the field of controverſy againſt him. They utterly denied a future ſtate, the exiſtence of angels or ſpirits, and the reſurrection of the dead, and thought they could propoſe a queſtion to our Lord which it would puzzle him to decide.

1. They ſtated a caſe, (whether real or imaginary was not material) founded on the Moſaical inſtitutions concerning the widow of a man who died childleſs, whoſe brother, according to the law, Deut. xxv. 5. was obliged to marry her, and raiſe up an heir to the inheritance of the deceaſed. The queſtion they propoſed therefore was, if a woman ſucceſſively married ſeven brothers, and, having no children by either, at laſt died herſelf, whoſe wife ſhe ſhall be at the reſurrection, ſince all could claim the ſame title to her. They thought thus to lead our Lord to join them in denying a reſurrection, or to reduce him to own his ignorance, or to make a deciſion they could prove to be abſurd, and unſupported by reaſon or Scripture.

2. Chriſt rectifies their miſtake, reproves their ignorance, and ſhews their objection againſt a reſurrection to be fallacious: they erred, not knowing the ſcriptures, nor the power of God. The Scriptures declare there ſhall be a reſurrection, Job xii. 26. Ezek. xxxvii. Dan. xii. 2. and though the collection of the ſcattered atoms of the human body appears never ſo difficult, it is not beyond the almighty power of God to effect. Beſides, their ideas of a future ſtate were falſe and carnal. There will be no occaſion there for marriage, to perpetuate inheritances, or to keep up a ſucceſſion of names, or to miniſter to our comforts or alleviate our cares; but all will be in heaven as the angels of God, perfectly pure and ſpiritual, and happy as thoſe glorious miniſters which ſurround the throne of God. But our Lord reſts not in confuting their miſtakes: he ſupports the truth by unanſwerable arguments, drawn even from the Pentateuch, the ſacred authority of which books they themſelves admitted. Now, concerning the reſurrection of the dead, they muſt needs remember what God himſelf declared at that memorable occaſion when he appeared to Moſes in the burning buſh, Exod. iii. 6. where he ſaid, I am the God of Abraham, Iſaac, and Jacob, tho' theſe patriarchs were long ſince dead. He ſaith not I was, but I am, he ſtanding towards them ſtill in the ſame relation: and as his being their God implies ſome peculiarly great and glorious advantages thence accruing, but theſe holy men, during all their lives, were ſtrangers and pilgrims in the earth, exerciſed with various troubles and afflictions, therefore it follows there muſt be a future ſtate, where their eternal reward awaits them. Beſides, God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. Had theſe patriarchs ceaſed to be when their bodies died, God could not with any propriety be ſaid to continue in the ſame covenant-relation to them as before. He being their God proves them ſtill alive; and the exiſtence therefore of their ſouls as immortal is evident: but he was not only the God of their ſouls, but of the men in their whole perſons. As therefore their ſouls now live, their bodies will be quickened alſo; elſe would he be ſtill the God of the dead: the reſurrection of the body, as well as the immortality of the ſoul, therefore is here ſuppoſed, and the argument concluſive againſt the tenets of the Sadducees. Note, (1.) The cauſe of all our grand errors is the ignorance of the Scriptures. (2.) Many things to the eye of ſenſe impoſſible, the eye of faith, that looks to the promiſes and power of God, ſees not only poſſible, but ſure and certain. (3.) They who have the Lord for their God need not wiſh for more: he will be their eternal portion and exceeding great reward.

3. The Sadducees were ſilenced, the multitude aſtoniſhed; they had never before heard the eternal happineſs of the righteous, the immortality of the ſoul, and the reſurrection from the dead, ſo nobly defended and proved.

34. ¶ [f] But when the Phariſees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to ſilence, they were gathered together.
35. Then one of them which was a lawyer, aſked him a queſtion, tempting him, and ſaying, 36. Maſter, which is the great commandment in the law? 37. Jeſus ſaid unto him, [g] Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy mind.
38. This is the firſt and great commandment. 39. And the ſecond is like unto it, [h] Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf. 40. [i] On theſe two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

f Mark xii. 28. Luke x. 25.
g Deut. vi. 5. & x. 12. & xxx. 6. Luke xx 27.
h Lev. xix. 18. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14. 1 Tim. i. 5. Jam. ii. 8.
i Chap. vii. 12.

v. 34—40. The Phariſees here again return to the charge; and, grieved probably he ſhould be able to ſilence thoſe whom they could not, conſulted together how to put a ſtop to his increaſing reputation, which ſo eclipſed their own. They who greatly ſhine, muſt expect to be greatly envied. They reſolved once more to try their ſkill, and by a queſtion, which had afforded much diſputation among themſelves, endeavour, if they can, to draw ſomething from him of which they ſtill hoped to make their advantage.

1. The queſtion was, which is the great commandment of the law? ſome eſteeming it to be circumciſion, others the obſervation of the ſabbath, others the wearing the phylacteries. And ſhould he determine the queſtion in favour of any one party of diſputants, the reſt would probably have been offended with the deciſion.

2. His anſwer carries evidence and conviction along with it. The firſt and great commandment is the perfect love of God, and the next the loving our neighbour as ourſelves; theſe two commandments compriſe the whole moral law, with all the duties enforced by the prophets; and to be obedient to theſe, this divine principle of love can alone engage us. Theſe commandments ſtill continue in full force; and in the practical exerciſe of thoſe conſiſts all vital religion: for though we are not under the law, that we ſhould expect life from our obedience; nor capable of diſcharging perfectly theſe juſt and holy precepts; yet are we bound to ſet them before us as our rule of duty, and by the goſpel-faith, which worketh by love, ſhall be enabled in a meaſure to walk as Chriſt alſo walked, humbly following, though unable to attain unto the perfection of his bright example. Note, (1.) We muſt love the Lord our God. We muſt firſt believe that he is our God, our reconciled God in Jeſus Chriſt, and then love will be the immediate effect: this will produce a hearty obedience to his commands, and unreſerved ſubmiſſion to his providence. The love of God will make us count none of his commandments grievous, and reckon every diſpenſation righteous, juſt, and good. (2.) The love of our neighbours follows. They muſt be dear to us as we are to ourſelves: their perſons, property, characters, be regarded as our own, and we ſhould be ready in every good word and work to do them ſervice, wiſh them every bleſſing, and deſire to act towards them, in every ſituation, as we could reaſonably expect they ſhould behave to us, if they were in our circumſtances. The more we appear under the influence of theſe divine precepts, the more we ſhall ſhew of the ſpirit and power of true Chriſtianity.

41. ¶ [k] While the Phariſees were gathered together, Jeſus aſked them, 42. Saying, What think ye of Chriſt? whoſe Son is he? They ſay unto him, The ſon of David.
43. He ſaith unto them, How then doth David [l] in ſpirit call him Lord, ſaying, 44. [m] The LORD ſaid unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool? 45. [n] If David then call him Lord, how is he his ſon. 46. And no man was able to anſwer him a word, neither durſt any man (from that day forth) aſk him any more queſtions.

k Mark xii. 35. Luke xx. 41.
l 2 Sam. xxiii. 2.
m Pſ. cx. 1. Acts ii. 34. Heb. i. 13. & x. 12, 13.
n Rev. xxii. 16.

v. 41—46 Having thus ſilenced all his opponents, our Lord is now pleaſed to put a queſtion in turn to thoſe who had ſo often tempted him. And he did it when they were gathered together to conſult how to enſnare him, that his triumph over them might be more diſtinguiſhed.

1. The queſtion ſeemed ſo plain that a child might anſwer it. What think ye of Chriſt? whoſe Son is he? And they have their reply ready, little imagining in what difficulties it would involve them. They ſay unto him, The Son of David. So far they were right, the Scripture had thus determined, Pſ. lxxxix. 35, 36. Iſa. ix. 7. xi. 1. It is a queſtion we ſhould be ſeriouſly concerned to anſwer, What we think of his perſon, offices, undertaking; and whether he is a Chriſt to us, a Saviour to the uttermoſt.

2. From their anſwer our Lord propoſes to them another queſtion of more difficult ſolution. How is the Meſſiah's being David's Son reconcileable with his being David's Lord? for ſuch the pſalmiſt acknowledges him, when, ſpeaking under divine inſpiration, Pſ. cx. 1. he ſaith, The Lord, God the Father, ſaid unto my Lord, the divine Meſſiah, Sit thou at my right hand, exalted to the throne of the Majeſty in the heavens, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool; for ſo long will he reign till every foe is deſtroyed, and the kingdoms of the world become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Chriſt. If David then call him Lord, acknowledging him his ſuperior, and a divine perſon; how is he his Son? and to deſcend from him as man?

3. This queſtion quite puzzled them. They ſeem to have been ignorant of the divine character of the Meſſiah; they regarded him as a mere man, and underſtood not the union of God and man in one Chriſt; or, if they knew it, they were not willing to acknowledge his Deity, and choſe to be ſilent, rather than reply. Perceiving now how unequal a match they all together were for his ſuperior wiſdom, they durſt not encounter him with any more enſnaring queſtions, and avoided any farther diſputes which they found muſt iſſue in their ſhame. Note, Many are ſilenced, without being convinced; have their arguments confuted, while their hearts ſtill remain unconverted.

CHAP. XXIII.

Chriſt here, 1. cautions his diſciples againſt the pride and hypocriſy of the Scribes and Phariſees, ver. 1—12. 2. He denounces woes againſt them for their ſins, ver. 13—33. 3. He foretels the ruin of Jeruſalem, ver. 34—39.

1. THEN ſpake Jeſus to the multitude, and to his diſciples, 2. Saying, The Scribes and the Phariſees ſit in Moſes ſeat. 3. All therefore whatſoever they bid you obſerve, that obſerve and do; but do not ye after their works: for [a] they ſay, and do not. 4. For [b] they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be born, and lay them on mens ſhoulders, but they themſelves will not move them with one of their fingers. 5. But [c] all their works they do for to be ſeen of men: [d] they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, 6. [e] And love the uppermoſt rooms at feaſts, and the chief ſeats in the ſynagogues, 7. And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi. 8. [f] But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt, and all ye are brethren. 9. And call no man your Father upon the earth: for [g] one is your Father which is in heaven. 10. Neither be ye called maſters: for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt. 11. [h] But he that is greateſt among you, ſhall be your ſervant. 12. [i] And whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, ſhall be abaſed; and he that ſhall humble himſelf, ſhall be exalted.

[a] Rom. ii. 19.
[b] Iſa. x. 1. Luke xi. 46. Acts xv. 10. Gal. vi. 13.
[c] Chap. v. 1, 2, 5, 16.
[d] Numb. xv. 38. Deut. vi. 8. & xxii. 12. Prov. iii. 3.
[e] Mark xii. 38, 39. Luke xi. 43. & xx. 46. 3 John 9.
[f] Jam. iii. 1. 2 Cor. i. 24. 1 Pet. v. 3.
[g] Mal. i. 6.
[h] Chap. xx. 26, 27.
[i] Prov. xxix. 23. Luke xiv. 11. & xviii. 14. Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5.

v. 1—12. Among all the Jewiſh ſects the Phariſees maintained the moſt diſtinguiſhed rank, for their reputed wiſdom and piety; their ſpecious appearance of religion, and external attention to the forms of godlineſs, obtained them ſo high a character, that it was uſually ſaid, if but two men reached heaven, one of them would be a Phariſee. Yet none ever fell under more cenſures from Chriſt than theſe reputed patterns of ſanctity, becauſe indeed they were the moſt inveterate enemies of him and his goſpel: as thoſe of a like ſtamp ever have been and will be to the end of time. Their religion was outſide, their hearts enmity againſt God, filled with pride, ſelf-righteouſneſs, love of eſteem, worldly-mindedneſs, and hatred to the power of internal vital godlineſs. Whom the world therefore admired as the beſt ſort of people in it, God abhorred as the worſt, as the fartheſt from his kingdom and righteouſneſs. And the caſe is the ſame to this very day. Againſt theſe whited ſepulchres Chriſt therefore cautions his diſciples.

1. He honours the office they bore as expoſitors of the law, who ſat in Moſes's ſeat, and read and interpreted in the ſynagogues the ſacred oracles to the people. And ſo far as they ſpake agreeably to the Scriptures they were to be attended to, and their word to be obſerved and done. Note, (1.) The moſt ſacred and honourable offices in the church have often been filled by the worſt of men. Yet ought not this to bring any diſhonour upon the miniſtry itſelf, or prejudice us againſt the order, that many, who are a ſcandal to the name they bear, have thruſt themſelves into it. (2.) When wicked men preach ſound truth, their word is to be received, whilſt their works are abhorred. Though example is moſt forcible to perſuade: and it can hardly be expected that they ſhould convince others, who do not themſelve appear to believe the very doctrines they preach.

2. He brands the men who lived ſo unſuitably to the word they taught, and cautions the people to beware of imitating them. Do not after their works: for they ſay, and do not. They boaſted indeed of the purity of their morals, as well as the orthodoxy of their ſentiments; but the one was as corrupt as the other was culpable. Several things our Lord charges upon them.

[1.] Their hypocriſy. They were very ſtrict preachers of the law, and rigid in enforcing the additions made by their vain traditions, laying upon men's conſciences burdens intolerable, whilſt they themſelves diſpenſed with their own obſervance of them, and their practice gave the lie to their preaching. Note, Many preachers pretend the greateſt zeal for morality, whoſe lives ſhew the laxeſt morals; and who muſt therefore be damned upon their own ſhewing.

[2.] Their formality, and deſire of human applauſe. Their religion conſiſted of outſide; and to make a fair ſhew before men was their great ambition. Inſtead of internal ſpirituality, and meditation on God's word, they made broad their phylacteries, which were ſcrolls of parchment, on which ſelect portions of the law were written, ſewed up in the ſkin of a clean beaſt, and hung at their arms and over their forheads; and by their uncommon breadth they meant to inſinuate their uncommon zeal for the law. And they enlarge the borders of their garments; not only conforming to the precept, Numb. xv. 38—40. but affecting, by the width of their fringes, to ſhew their diſtinguiſhed ſanctity, and obſervance of the command. So true it is ſtill, that the moſt zealous contenders for the form of godlineſs are often the greateſt ſtrangers to the power of it, and the loudeſt devotees but mere ſounding braſs and tinkling cymbals.

[3.] Their pride and affectation of preeminence. They coveted always the moſt diſtinguiſhed place at an entertainment; and even in the ſynagogues, where they aſſembled for religious worſhip, the ſame deſire of precedency appeared in their choice of the chief ſeats, as if their buſineſs there was more to make a figure themſelves, than to pay their humble adorations. In like manner they affected ſounding titles of reſpect, and, when they appeared in public, they loved to have deep homage paid them, and to be addreſſed with, Rabbi, Rabbi! that others might hear and obſerve their importance and dignity. Note, (1.) There is no harm in receiving or giving titles of honour to whom honour is due: but to take a pleaſure in hearing the ſound, to be puffed up with the title, and to be offended at the omiſſion of it, theſe mark deteſtable pride. (2.) Nothing can ſhew a ſtronger tincture of Phariſaiſm than coming to God's houſe to ſeek our own glory, and to be more anxious in what pew we are placed than with what ſpirit we worſhip.

3. He forbids his diſciples to challenge for themſelves, or aſcribe to others, any ſuch pompous names as the Scribes aſſumed. They muſt not be called Rabbi, affecting human honour, or any title importing dominion over the faith or conſciences of their brethren: nor muſt they be ſtiled Maſter, as if upon their own authority they ſat up for guides and leaders; but muſt own one Maſter only, that is Chriſt, whoſe word alone muſt be their rule, whilſt they, as brethren, arrogated no ſupremacy over each other, alike ſubmiſſive to their common head. Nor may they give flattering titles to any; calling no man Father upon the earth. Not that this forbids us honouring our natural parents, or thoſe who have begotten us in the goſpel, or paying due reverence to age or dignity; but we muſt regard no man as the founder of our religion, or as the head of the church, to whom, in matters of conſcience, we owe implicit obedience, this being the ſole prerogative of our God and Father, whoſe throne is in the heavens: but if any man among them excelled in gifts or graces, or was eſteemed and preferred to a more honourable place in the church than others, far from being puffed up with his eminence, he is required to be the more condeſcending and laborious, employing himſelf the more zealouſly and humbly for the benefit of his fellow Chriſtians. And our Lord ſubjoins the moſt forcible argument to ſupport what he had advanced: Whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, grow proud, imperious, and aſſuming over his brethren, ſhall be abaſed; either in penitent humiliation, when brought to a ſight of his ſin, in this world; or be covered with confuſion in the more awful day of Chriſt's appearing: whilſt he that humbleth himſelf in every work and labour of love, and in a lowly ſenſe of his own deep unworthineſs, he ſhall be exalted in the eyes of God and all good men, and that both now and for ever.

13. ¶ But [k] wo unto you, Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites: for ye ſhut up the kingdom of heaven againſt men: for ye neither go in yourſelves, neither ſuffer ye them that are entring to go in. 14. Wo unto you, Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites; for [l] ye devour widows houſes, houſes, and for a pretence make long prayer ; therefore ye ſhall receive the greater damnation. 15. Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites ; for ye compaſs ſea and land to make one proſelyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourſelves. 16. Wo unto you, ye [m] blind guides, which ſay, [n] Whoſoever ſhall ſwear by the temple, it is nothing : but whoſoever ſhall ſwear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor. 17. Ye fools, and blind : for whether is greater, the gold, [o] or the temple that ſanctifieth the gold ? 18. And whoſoever ſhall ſwear by the altar, it is nothing : but whoſoever ſweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is † guilty. 19. Ye fools, and blind : for whether is greater, the gift, [p] or the altar that ſanctifieth the gift. 20. Whoſo therefore ſhall ſwear by the altar, ſweareth by it, and by all things thereon. 21. And whoſo ſhall ſwear by the temple, ſweareth by it, and by him [q] that dwelleth therein. 22. And he that ſhall ſwear by heaven, ſweareth by [r] the throne of God, and by him that ſitteth thereon. 23. Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites ; for [s] ye pay tythe of mint, and aniſe, and cummin, [t] and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith : theſe ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. 24. Ye blind guides, which ſtrain at a gnat, and ſwallow a camel. 25. Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites ; for [u] ye make clean the outſide of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and exceſs. 26. Thou blind Phariſee, cleanſe firſt that which is within the cup and platter, [x] that the outſide of them may be clean alſo. 27. [y] Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites : for ye are like unto whited ſepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanneſs. 28. Even ſo ye alſo outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocriſy and iniquity. 29. [z] Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites ; becauſe ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garniſh the ſepulchres of the righteous, 30. And ſay, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets. 31. Wherefore [a] ye be witneſſes unto yourſelves, that [b] ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. 32. [c] Fill ye up then the meaſure of your fathers. 33. Ye ſerpents, [d] ye generation of vipers, how can ye eſcape the damnation of hell ?

[k] Ezek. xxii. 25. Luke xi. 52.
[l] Mark xii. 40. Luke xx. 47. 2 Tim. iii. 6. Tit. i. 11.

[m] Chap. xv. 14.
[n] Chap. v. 33, 34.
[o] Ex. xxx. 29.
† Or a debtor, or bound.
[p] Ex. xxix. 37.
[q] 1 Kings viii. 13. 2 Chron. vi. 2.
[r] Chap. v. 34. Acts vii. 49.
[s] Luke xi. 42. & xviii. 12.
[t] 1 Sam. xv. 22. Hoſ. vi. 6. Mic. vi. 8. Chap. ix. 13. & xii. 7.
[u] Mark vii. 4. Luke xi. 39.
[x] Tit. i. 15.
[y] Luke xi. 44.
[z] Luke xi. 47.
[a] Pſ. lxiv. 8.
[b] Acts vii. 51, 52. 1 Theſ. ii. 15.
[c] 1 Theſ. ii. 16.
[d] Chap. iii. 7. & xii. 34.

v. 13—33. Like Ezekiel's bitter roll, we have here repeated fearful woes, like ſo many bolts of thunder levelled againſt theſe proud ſelf-righteous Phariſees. The general charge againſt them is their being hypocrites, proved in a variety of particulars ; and this being the character God eſpecially abhors, we ſhould be the more jealous over our own ſouls, that this rank weed of bitterneſs ſpring not up under the profeſſion of godlineſs, and mar the whole.

1. Pretending to be teachers of the law, and poſſeſſed of the key of knowledge, inſtead of explaining the ſpiritual meaning of all the typical rites, as pointing to Chriſt ; or the purport of the prophecies which related to him ; they ſtudiouſly ſought to pervert both ; commenting upon them in ſuch a way as moſt entirely to overturn the true nature of the Meſſiah's office and kingdom, and led the people to reſt on the ſhadows inſtead of the ſubſtance. Invenomed enemies to the goſpel, they turned a deaf ear to all Chriſt advanced in proof of his own divine character and miſſion, and not only rejected him themſelves, but uſed their utmoſt efforts, employing all their influence, their examples, and their cunning, to prejudice the people againſt him and his goſpel ; reviling his perſon, doctrine, and miracles, and thundering out their anathemas againſt thoſe who ſhould profeſs to receive him as the Meſſiah.

2. They made the cloke of religion ſubſervient to the baſeſt purpoſes of gain and avarice ; inſinuating themſelves into the confidence of helpleſs widows, on whom, by their long prayers and affected ſhew of devotion, they impoſed, and who ſuppoſing their piety great as the appearances of it, entruſted them with the management of their affairs, and were directed by their advice ; by which means, taking advantage of their ſuperſtition and credulity, they fleeced them of their ſubſtance, and enriched themſelves with the ſpoil of the moſt cruel inhumanity, as well as baſeſt injuſtice ; for which, though they might eſcape the cenſures of men, God, the all-ſeeing Judge, would ſurely give them greater damnation in the day of recompenſe. Note, (1.) The vileſt wickedneſs may ſometimes be ſo ſhaded by craft, as to elude the eye of human obſervation. (2.) The appearance of godlineſs put on to cover worldly deſigns, is in God's account the moſt atrocious of crimes. (3.) Long prayers are not always culpable ; it is only when they are for a pretence, that they become an abomination. (4.) There are degrees of miſery in hell : ſome ſhall receive greater damnation than others, and the moſt dreadful vengeance of all ſhall light on the hypocrite's head.

3. They exerted the greateſt zeal to make proſelytes from the Gentiles, in order to heighten their own reputation, and ſtrengthen their party, and ſtuck at no pains to ſucceed in their attempts ; which, when they had done, they abuſed the aſcendancy they obtained over the conſciences of their converts to inſtil the moſt virulent prejudices into them againſt Chriſt and his goſpel ; making them more bigotted than themſelves to the vain traditions of the elders, and more bitter perſecutors, even than their maſters, of the diſciples of Jeſus, See Acts xiii. 45. xiv. 2—19. xvii. 5. xviii. 6. Thus their pretended converſion ſerved to render them but twofold more the children of hell than themſelves. Note, (1.) Every impenitent ſinner and hypocrite is a child of hell, of his father the devil, and doomed to dwell with him eternally. But of theſe ſome ſhew greater malignity againſt Chriſt and his goſpel than others, and theſe are ſuch uſually as fancy themſelves converted, and are the ſtricteſt obſervers of the forms and ceremonies of religion. (2.) The induſtry theſe Phariſees uſed to gain proſelytes in ſo bad a cauſe, ſhould condemn our negligence and want of zeal, who take ſo little pains to make converts to Chriſt and his goſpel.

4. They were blind guides, erring through greedineſs after gain, and deceiving others, miſleading them into the moſt dangerous errors reſpecting the obligation of oaths ; diſtinguiſhing between the temple and the gold, the altar and the gift ; as if they might ſwear by the former, and break the oath with impunity ; but an oath by the latter was conſcientiouſly obligatory : and the reaſon was clear, becauſe theſe blind guides made gain of the gold vowed to the temple ſervice, and of the gifts offered on the altar. But how abſurd and fooliſh this diſtinction ? the temple which ſanctified the gold, and the altar which ſanctified the gift, muſt needs be more holy than the gold and gift, which received all their ſanctity from being offered there : the oath made by the temple and altar ſhould therefore rather be thought more binding, than that made by the gold or the gift. Indeed theſe kinds of oaths were in themſelves evil and profane ; but if a man once made them, he was bound to fulfil them. An oath by the altar included all the gifts thereon ; as alſo to ſwear by the temple, or by heaven, implied an appeal to him who dwelleth there, maniſeſting his preſence between the cherubims, or ſitting on his throne moſt high ; and therefore every breach of ſuch oath was direct perjury. Note, (1.) It is a dreadful thing for the poor people, when they who undertake to ſhew them the way to heaven are blind and ignorant ; and it is ſtill more terrible for the blind guides themſelves, who will periſh under the guilt of thoſe ſouls they have miſled and ruined. (2.) Oaths are ſacred ; they are an appeal to the heart-ſearching God : by him alone we may ſwear ; but if any profanely ſwear by other things, their profaneneſs will be no plea for their perjury ; they are ſtill in conſcience bound to fulfil their oath as to the Lord.

5. They were ſcrupulous about trifles, and negligent of the eſſential duties of religion. They were moſt exact in the payment of their tythes, even to the ſmall herbs of their garden, to the mint, and aniſe, and cummin ; but they omitted the weightier matters of the law, ſuch as judgment, the due adminiſtration of juſtice, and protecting the weak and helpleſs againſt their oppreſſors ; mercy, the kind relief they ſhould have ſhown to the diſtreſſed ; and faith, a dependance upon God's care and love, and the grateful return due in conſequence thereof. Theſe they ſhould have practiſed, as the moſt important and momentous ; whilſt matters comparatively trivial deſerved but a ſubordinate regard : but they were ſuch blind guides, corrupt in practice as well as doctrine, they ſtrained at a gnat, or ſtrained out a gnat from their liquors, as if it would choak them ; pretended ſuch a ſcrupulous attention to avoid the leaſt ſin, and practiſe the niceſt morality ; whilſt they could ſwallow a camel, making no conſcience in ſecret of the moſt enormous crimes, to gratify their pride, their covetouſneſs, and their malice, See ver. 14. chap. xxvii. 6. John xviii. 28. Note, (1.) The payment of our tythes to the uttermoſt farthing Chriſt commands ; This ſhould ye have done. They who are unjuſt to God's miniſters in withholding their dues, are worſe than even theſe Phariſees. (2.) The practice of one duty can never be pleaded as a compenſation for the neglect of another ; and much leſs can obſervanees merely ceremonial excuſe the neglect of thoſe weightier moral precepts, judgment, mercy, and faith. (3.) Many pretend a ſcrupulous conſcience in trifles, who, when any thing important to them is at ſtake, heſitate not at committing the moſt flagrant immoralities.

6. Their religion conſiſted in mere externals, whilſt their hearts continued utterly corrupt and defiled. They were very curious about waſhing their cups and platters, and placed much purity in this ; whilſt they cared little by what oppreſſion they got the proviſion they eat out of them : at leaſt, their inward together to conſult how to enſnare him, that his triumph over them might be more diſtinguiſhed.

1. The queſtion ſeemed ſo plain that a child might anſwer it. What think ye of Chriſt? whoſe Son is he? And they have their reply ready, little imagining in what difficulties it would involve them. They ſay unto him, The Son of David. So far they were right, the Scripture had thus determined, Pſ. lxxxix. 35, 36. Iſa. ix. 7. xi. 1. It is a queſtion we ſhould be ſeriouſly concerned to anſwer, What we think of his perſon, offices, undertaking; and whether he is a Chriſt to us, a Saviour to the uttermoſt.

2. From their anſwer our Lord propoſes to them another queſtion of more difficult ſolution. How is the Meſſiah's being David's Son reconcileable with his being David's Lord? for ſuch the pſalmiſt acknowledges him, when, ſpeaking under divine inſpiration, Pſ. cx. 1. he ſaith, The Lord, God the Father, ſaid unto my Lord, the divine Meſſiah, Sit thou at my right hand, exalted to the throne of the Majeſty in the heavens, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool; for ſo long will he reign till every foe is deſtroyed, and the kingdoms of the world become the kingdoms of the Lord and of his Chriſt. If David then call him Lord, acknowledging him his ſuperior, and a divine perſon; how is he his Son? and to deſcend from him as man?

3. This queſtion quite puzzled them. They ſeem to have been ignorant of the divine character of the Meſſiah; they regarded him as a mere man, and underſtood not the union of God and man in one Chriſt; or, if they knew it, they were not willing to acknowledge his Deity, and choſe to be ſilent, rather than reply. Perceiving now how unequal a match they all together were for his ſuperior wiſdom, they durſt not encounter him with any more enſnaring queſtions, and avoided any farther diſputes which they found muſt iſſue in their ſhame. Note, Many are ſilenced, without being convinced; have their arguments confuted, while their hearts ſtill remain unconverted.

CHAP. XXIII.

Chriſt here, 1. cautions his diſciples againſt the pride and hypocriſy of the Scribes and Phariſees, ver. 1—12. 2. He denounces woes againſt them for their ſins, ver. 13—33. 3. He foretels the ruin of Jeruſalem, ver. 34—39.

1. THEN ſpake Jeſus to the multitude, and to his diſciples, 2. Saying, The Scribes and the Phariſees ſit in Moſes ſeat. 3. All therefore whatſoever they bid you obſerve, that obſerve and do; but do not ye after their works: for [a] they ſay, and do not. 4. For [b] they bind heavy burdens, and grievous to be born, and lay them on mens ſhoulders, but they themſelves will not move them with one of their fingers. 5. But [c] all their works they do for to be ſeen of men: [d] they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments,
6. [e] And love the uppermoſt rooms at feaſts, and the chief ſeats in the ſynagogues, 7. And greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.
8. [f] But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt, and all ye are brethren. 9. And call no man your Father upon the earth: for [g] one is your Father which is in heaven. 10. Neither be ye called maſters:
for one is your Maſter, even Chriſt. 11. [h] But he that is greateſt among you, ſhall be your ſervant. 12. [i] And whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, ſhall be abaſed; and he that ſhall humble himſelf, ſhall be exalted.

[a] Rom. ii. 19.
[b] Iſa. x. 1. Luke xi. 46. Acts xv. 10. Gal. vi. 13.
[c] Chap. v. 1, 2, 5, 16.
[d] Numb. xv. 38. Deut. vi. 8. & xxii. 12. Prov. iii. 3.
[e] Mark xii. 38, 39. Luke xi. 43. & xx. 46. 3 John 9.
[f] Jam. iii. 1. 2 Cor. i. 24. 1 Pet. v. 3.
[g] Mal. i. 6.
[h] Chap. xx. 26, 27.
[i] Prov. xxix. 23. Luke xiv. 11. & xviii. 14. Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5.

v. 1—12. Among all the Jewiſh ſects the Phariſees maintained the moſt diſtinguiſhed rank, for their reputed wiſdom and piety; their ſpecious appearance of religion, and external attention to the forms of godlineſs, obtained them ſo high a character, that it was uſually ſaid, if but two men reached heaven, one of them would be a Phariſee. Yet none ever fell under more cenſures from Chriſt than theſe reputed patterns of ſanctity, becauſe indeed they were the moſt inveterate enemies of him and his goſpel: as thoſe of a like ſtamp ever have been and will be to the end of time. Their religion was outſide, their hearts enmity againſt God, filled with pride, ſelf-righteouſneſs, love of eſteem, worldly-mindedneſs, and hatred to the power of internal vital godlineſs. Whom the world therefore admired as the beſt ſort of people in it, God abhorred as the worſt, as the fartheſt from his kingdom and righteouſneſs. And the caſe is the ſame to this very day. Againſt theſe whited ſepulchres Chriſt therefore cautions his diſciples.

1. He honours the office they bore as expoſitors of the law, who ſat in Moſes's ſeat, and read and interpreted in the ſynagogues the ſacred oracles to the people. And ſo far as they ſpake agreeably to the Scriptures they were to be attended to, and their word to be obſerved and done. Note, (1.) The moſt ſacred and honourable offices in the church have often been filled by the worſt of men. Yet ought not this to bring any diſhonour upon the miniſtry itſelf, or prejudice us againſt the order, that many, who are a ſcandal to the name they bear, have thruſt themſelves into it. (2.) When wicked men preach ſound truth, their word is to be received, whilſt their works are abhorred. Though example is moſt forcible to perſuade: and it can hardly be expected that they ſhould convince others, who do not themſelve appear to believe the very doctrines they preach.

2. He brands the men who lived ſo unſuitably to the word they taught, and cautions the people to beware of imitating them. Do not after their works: for they ſay, and do not. They boaſted indeed of the purity of their morals, as well as the orthodoxy of their ſentiments; but the one was as corrupt as the other was culpable. Several things our Lord charges upon them.

[1.] Their hypocriſy. They were very ſtrict preachers of the law, and rigid in enforcing the additions made by their vain traditions, laying upon men's conſciences burdens intolerable, whilſt they themſelves diſpenſed with their own obſervance of them, and their practice gave the lie to their preaching. Note, Many preachers pretend the greateſt zeal for morality, whoſe lives ſhew the laxeſt morals; and who muſt therefore be damned upon their own ſhewing.

[2.] Their formality, and deſire of human applauſe. Their religion conſiſted of outſide; and to make a fair ſhew before men was their great ambition. Inſtead of internal ſpirituality, and meditation on God's word, they made broad their phylacteries, which were ſcrolls of parchment, on which ſelect portions of the law were written, ſewed up in the ſkin of a clean beaſt, and hung at their arms and over their forheads; and by their uncommon breadth they meant to inſinuate their uncommon zeal for the law. And they enlarge the borders of their garments; not only conforming to the precept, Numb. xv. 38—40. but affecting, by the width of their fringes, to ſhew their diſtinguiſhed ſanctity, and obſervance of the command. So true it is ſtill, that the moſt zealous contenders for the form of godlineſs are often the greateſt ſtrangers to the power of it, and the loudeſt devotees but mere ſounding braſs and tinkling cymbals.

[3.] Their pride and affectation of preeminence. They coveted always the moſt diſtinguiſhed place at an entertainment; and even in the ſynagogues, where they aſſembled for religious worſhip, the ſame deſire of precedency appeared in their choice of the chief ſeats, as if their buſineſs there was more to make a figure themſelves, than to pay their humble adorations. In like manner they affected ſounding titles of reſpect, and, when they appeared in public, they loved to have deep homage paid them, and to be addreſſed with, Rabbi, Rabbi! that others might hear and obſerve their importance and dignity. Note, (1.) There is no harm in receiving or giving titles of honour to whom honour is due: but to take a pleaſure in hearing the ſound, to be puffed up with the title, and to be offended at the omiſſion of it, theſe mark deteſtable pride. (2.) Nothing can ſhew a ſtronger tincture of Phariſaiſm than coming to God's houſe to ſeek our own glory, and to be more anxious in what pew we are placed than with what ſpirit we worſhip.

3. He forbids his diſciples to challenge for themſelves, or aſcribe to others, any ſuch pompous names as the Scribes aſſumed. They muſt not be called Rabbi, affecting human honour, or any title importing dominion over the faith or conſciences of their brethren: nor muſt they be ſtiled Maſter, as if upon their own authority they ſat up for guides and leaders; but muſt own one Maſter only, that is Chriſt, whoſe word alone muſt be their rule, whilſt they, as brethren, arrogated no ſupremacy over each other, alike ſubmiſſive to their common head. Nor may they give flattering titles to any; calling no man Father upon the earth. Not that this forbids us honouring our natural parents, or thoſe who have begotten us in the goſpel, or paying due reverence to age or dignity; but we muſt regard no man as the founder of our religion, or as the head of the church, to whom, in matters of conſcience, we owe implicit obedience, this being the ſole prerogative of our God and Father, whoſe throne is in the heavens: but if any man among them excelled in gifts or graces, or was eſteemed and preferred to a more honourable place in the church than others, far from being puffed up with his eminence, he is required to be the more condeſcending and laborious, employing himſelf the more zealouſly and humbly for the benefit of his fellow Chriſtians. And our Lord ſubjoins the moſt forcible argument to ſupport what he had advanced: Whoſoever ſhall exalt himſelf, grow proud, imperious, and aſſuming over his brethren, ſhall be abaſed; either in penitent humiliation, when brought to a ſight of his ſin, in this world; or be covered with confuſion in the more awful day of Chriſt's appearing: whilſt he that humbleth himſelf in every work and labour of love, and in a lowly ſenſe of his own deep unworthineſs, he ſhall be exalted in the eyes of God and all good men, and that both now and for ever.

13. ¶ But [k] wo unto you, Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites: for ye ſhut up the kingdom of heaven againſt men: for ye neither go in yourſelves, neither ſuffer ye them that are entring to go in. 14. Wo unto you, Scribes and Phariſees, hypocrites; for [l] ye devour widows houſes,

[k] Ezek. xxii. 25. Luke xi. 52.
[l] Mark xii. 40. Luke xx. 47. 2 Tim. iii. 6. Tit. i. 11.

houſes, and for a pretence make long prayer; therefore ye ſhall receive the greater damnation. 15. Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites; for ye compaſs ſea and land to make one proſelyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourſelves. 16. Wo unto you, ye [m] blind guides, which ſay, [n] Whoſoever ſhall ſwear by the temple, it is nothing: but whoſoever ſhall ſwear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor. 17. Ye fools, and blind: for whether is greater, the gold, [o] or the temple that ſanctifieth the gold? 18. And whoſoever ſhall ſwear by the altar, it is nothing: but whoſoever ſweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is † guilty. 19. Ye fools, and blind: for whether is greater, the gift, [p] or the altar that ſanctifieth the gift. 20. Whoſo therefore ſhall ſwear by the altar, ſweareth by it, and by all things thereon. 21. And whoſo ſhall ſwear by the temple, ſweareth by it, and by him [q] that dwelleth therein. 22. And he that ſhall ſwear by heaven, ſweareth by [r] the throne of God, and by him that ſitteth thereon. 23. Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites; for [s] ye pay tythe of mint, and aniſe, and cummin, [t] and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: theſe ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. 24. Ye blind guides, which ſtrain at a gnat, and ſwallow a camel. 25. Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites; for [u] ye make clean the outſide of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and exceſs. 26. Thou blind Phariſee, cleanſe firſt that which is within the cup and platter, [x] that the outſide of them may be clean alſo. 27. [y] Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites: for ye are like unto whited ſepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanneſs. 28. Even ſo ye alſo outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocriſy and iniquity. 29. [z] Wo unto you, ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites; becauſe ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garniſh the ſepulchres of the righteous, 30. And ſay, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets. 31. Wherefore [a] ye be witneſſes unto yourſelves, that [b] ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. 32. [c] Fill ye up then the meaſure of your fathers. 33. Ye ſerpents, [d] ye generation of vipers, how can ye eſcape the damnation of hell?

[m] Chap. xv. 14.
[n] Chap. v. 33, 34.
[o] Ex. xxx. 29.
† Or a debtor, or bound.
[p] Ex. xxix. 37.
[q] 1 Kings viii. 13. 2 Chron. vi. 2.
[r] Chap. v. 34. Acts vii. 49.
[s] Luke xi. 42. & xviii. 12.
[t] 1 Sam. xv. 22. Hoſ. vi. 6. Mic. vi. 8. Chap. ix. 13. & xii. 7.
[u] Mark vii. 4. Luke xi. 39.
[x] Tit. i. 15.
[y] Luke xi. 44.
[z] Luke xi. 47.
[a] Pſ. lxiv. 8.
[b] Acts vii. 51, 52. 1 Theſ. ii. 15.
[c] 1 Theſ. ii. 16.
[d] Chap. iii. 7. & xii. 34.

v. 13—33. Like Ezekiel's bitter roll, we have here repeated fearful woes, like ſo many bolts of thunder levelled againſt theſe proud ſelf-righteous Phariſees. The general charge againſt them is their being hypocrites, proved in a variety of particulars; and this being the character God eſpecially abhors, we ſhould be the more jealous over our own ſouls, that this rank weed of bitterneſs ſpring not up under the profeſſion of godlineſs, and mar the whole.

1. Pretending to be teachers of the law, and poſſeſſed of the key of knowledge, inſtead of explaining the ſpiritual meaning of all the typical rites, as pointing to Chriſt; or the purport of the prophecies which related to him; they ſtudiouſly ſought to pervert both; commenting upon them in ſuch a way as moſt entirely to overturn the true nature of the Meſſiah's office and kingdom, and led the people to reſt on the ſhadows inſtead of the ſubſtance. Invenomed enemies to the goſpel, they turned a deaf ear to all Chriſt advanced in proof of his own divine character and miſſion, and not only rejected him themſelves, but uſed their utmoſt efforts, employing all their influence, their examples, and their cunning, to prejudice the people againſt him and his goſpel; reviling his perſon, doctrine, and miracles, and thundering out their anathemas againſt thoſe who ſhould profeſs to receive him as the Meſſiah.

2. They made the cloke of religion ſubſervient to the baſeſt purpoſes of gain and avarice; inſinuating themſelves into the confidence of helpleſs widows, on whom, by their long prayers and affected ſhew of devotion, they impoſed, and who ſuppoſing their piety great as the appearances of it, entruſted them with the management of their affairs, and were directed by their advice; by which means, taking advantage of their ſuperſtition and credulity, they fleeced them of their ſubſtance, and enriched themſelves with the ſpoil of the moſt cruel inhumanity, as well as baſeſt injuſtice; for which, though they might eſcape the cenſures of men, God, the all-ſeeing Judge, would ſurely give them greater damnation in the day of recompenſe. Note, (1.) The vileſt wickedneſs may ſometimes be ſo ſhaded by craft, as to elude the eye of human obſervation. (2.) The appearance of godlineſs put on to cover worldly deſigns, is in God's account the moſt atrocious of crimes. (3.) Long prayers are not always culpable; it is only when they are for a pretence, that they become an abomination. (4.) There are degrees of miſery in hell: ſome ſhall receive greater damnation than others, and the moſt dreadful vengeance of all ſhall light on the hypocrite's head.

3. They exerted the greateſt zeal to make proſelytes from the Gentiles, in order to heighten their own reputation, and ſtrengthen their party, and ſtuck at no pains to ſucceed in their attempts; which, when they had done, they abuſed the aſcendancy they obtained over the conſciences of their converts to inſtil the moſt virulent prejudices into them againſt Chriſt and his goſpel; making them more bigotted than themſelves to the vain traditions of the elders, and more bitter perſecutors, even than their maſters, of the diſciples of Jeſus, See Acts xiii. 45. xiv. 2—19. xvii. 5. xviii. 6. Thus their pretended converſion ſerved to render them but twofold more the children of hell than themſelves. Note, (1.) Every impenitent ſinner and hypocrite is a child of hell, of his father the devil, and doomed to dwell with him eternally. But of theſe ſome ſhew greater malignity againſt Chriſt and his goſpel than others, and theſe are ſuch uſually as fancy themſelves converted, and are the ſtricteſt obſervers of the forms and ceremonies of religion. (2.) The induſtry theſe Phariſees uſed to gain proſelytes in ſo bad a cauſe, ſhould condemn our negligence and want of zeal, who take ſo little pains to make converts to Chriſt and his goſpel.

4. They were blind guides, erring through greedineſs after gain, and deceiving others, miſleading them into the moſt dangerous errors reſpecting the obligation of oaths; diſtinguiſhing between the temple and the gold, the altar and the gift; as if they might ſwear by the former, and break the oath with impunity; but an oath by the latter was conſcientiouſly obligatory: and the reaſon was clear, becauſe theſe blind guides made gain of the gold vowed to the temple ſervice, and of the gifts offered on the altar. But how abſurd and fooliſh this diſtinction? the temple which ſanctified the gold, and the altar which ſanctified the gift, muſt needs be more holy than the gold and gift, which received all their ſanctity from being offered there: the oath made by the temple and altar ſhould therefore rather be thought more binding, than that made by the gold or the gift. Indeed theſe kinds of oaths were in themſelves evil and profane; but if a man once made them, he was bound to fulfil them. An oath by the altar included all the gifts thereon; as alſo to ſwear by the temple, or by heaven, implied an appeal to him who dwelleth there, manifeſting his preſence between the cherubims, or ſitting on his throne moſt high; and therefore every breach of ſuch oath was direct perjury. Note, (1.) It is a dreadful thing for the poor people, when they who undertake to ſhew them the way to heaven are blind and ignorant; and it is ſtill more terrible for the blind guides themſelves, who will periſh under the guilt of thoſe ſouls they have miſled and ruined. (2.) Oaths are ſacred; they are an appeal to the heart-ſearching God: by him alone we may ſwear; but if any profanely ſwear by other things, their profaneneſs will be no plea for their perjury; they are ſtill in conſcience bound to fulfil their oath as to the Lord.

5. They were ſcrupulous about trifles, and negligent of the eſſential duties of religion. They were moſt exact in the payment of their tythes, even to the ſmall herbs of their garden, to the mint, and aniſe, and cummin; but they omitted the weightier matters of the law, ſuch as judgment, the due adminiſtration of juſtice, and protecting the weak and helpleſs againſt their oppreſſors; mercy, the kind relief they ſhould have ſhown to the diſtreſſed; and faith, a dependance upon God's care and love, and the grateful return due in conſequence thereof. Theſe they ſhould have practiſed, as the moſt important and momentous; whilſt matters comparatively trivial deſerved but a ſubordinate regard: but they were ſuch blind guides, corrupt in practice as well as doctrine, they ſtrained at a gnat, or ſtrained out a gnat from their liquors, as if it would choak them; pretended ſuch a ſcrupulous attention to avoid the leaſt ſin, and practiſe the niceſt morality; whilſt they could ſwallow a camel, making no conſcience in ſecret of the moſt enormous crimes, to gratify their pride, their covetouſneſs, and their malice, See ver. 14. chap. xxvii. 6. John xviii. 28. Note, (1.) The payment of our tythes to the uttermoſt farthing Chriſt commands; This ſhould ye have done. They who are unjuſt to God's miniſters in withholding their dues, are worſe than even theſe Phariſees. (2.) The practice of one duty can never be pleaded as a compenſation for the neglect of another; and much leſs can obſervances merely ceremonial excuſe the neglect of thoſe weightier moral precepts, judgment, mercy, and faith. (3.) Many pretend a ſcrupulous conſcience in trifles, who, when any thing important to them is at ſtake, heſitate not at committing the moſt flagrant immoralities.

6. Their religion conſiſted in mere externals, whilſt their hearts continued utterly corrupt and defiled. They were very curious about waſhing their cups and platters, and placed much purity in this; whilſt they cared little by what oppreſſion they got the proviſion they eat out of them: at leaſt, their inward parts were very wickedneſs, whatever ſpecious cloke they threw over their ways. Juſtly therefore doth Jeſus upbraid them, Thou blind Phariſee! dark to the pollution of thy ſoul; cleanſe firſt thy inmoſt thoughts, principles, and deſigns; begin within; be pure in heart, and then you may with conſiſtence contend for an exact conformity to the external rites and ceremonies enjoined by the law. But in their preſent ſtate they were the very reverſe of real purity; like whited ſepulchres, garniſhed and glittering without, but within full of pollution and putrefaction; the lively emblem of their hypocriſy and iniquity, lurking under the ſplendid guiſe of uncommon piety. Note, (1.) Our hearts are our grand concern; all our ſervices in religion will be acceptable or abominable, as they are truly purified by the blood of Jeſus, or left polluted with native guilt and corruption. (2.) They who have never ſeen, felt, and lamented the plague of their own hearts, muſt neceſſarily be blind to all ſpiritual concerns, ſince here all vital godlineſs begins. (3.) The world abounds with whited ſepulchres; we need be warned of them, leſt miſtaking ſhew for reality, we eſteem thoſe patterns of piety, who are in fact but ſinks of pollution, full of pride, worldly-mindedneſs, and enmity to the power of experimental religion.

7. They pretended a high veneration for the prophets of old, and, in honour of their memories, built ſumptuous monuments for them, and kept them with the niceſt care. They made great profeſſions of the reſpect they would have paid them, had they been ſo happy as to have lived in their days; and condemned bitterly the wickedneſs of their forefathers in perſecuting and murdering them; proteſting againſt ſuch violence, and that they would have never joined in ſhedding ſuch innocent blood. Thus by their own confeſſion they allowed themſelves the deſcendants of thoſe who had murdered the prophets; and how much of their ſpirit they had imbibed, their behaviour towards John the Baptiſt, and their paſt and preſent malicious deſigns againſt Jeſus, plainly evidenced. Therefore he juſtly abandons them to the ruin they have deſerved, leaving them to fill up the meaſure of their iniquities, by crucifying him, the Lord of life and glory, and perſecuting even to death his apoſtles and miniſters, till wrath ſhould come upon them to the uttermoſt. Ye ſerpents, ſubtle and poiſonous; ye generation of vipers, fierce and malignant; how can ye eſcape the damnation of hell? In their preſent temper and conduct, it was impoſſible but that the eternal wrath of God muſt abide upon them. Note, (1.) Many pretend reſpect for paſt reformers and good men, who perſecute with greateſt virulence thoſe who tread in their ſteps. (2.) The deceitfulneſs of the heart is great: we are ſtrangely apt to flatter ourſelves, how well we ſhould have done and acted if we had been in other perſons circumſtances. Many think the hard-hearted Jews, who left the Son of God to lie in a manger, who heard his doctrine, and ſaw his miracles, and yet crucified him, were ſinners of a peculiar dye; and had they lived then, they ſhould have welcomed him with rapture to their houſes and their hearts; who yet treat his word, his miniſters, his people, with the ſame contempt and enmity. (3.) God's patience waits long with offenders, but their meaſure of ſin will be full, and then ſhall wrath come upon them to the uttermoſt. (4.) The damnation of hell is to be freely denounced againſt the impenitent and hypocrites, how unwilling ſoever they may be to hear it, or ready to mock at theſe terrors of the Lord.

34. ¶ [e] Wherefore behold, I ſend unto you prophets, and wiſe men, and ſcribes; and [f] ſome of them ye ſhall kill and crucify, and [g] ſome of them ſhall ye ſcourge in your ſynagogues, and [h] perſecute them from city to city: 35. That upon you may come all the righteous blood ſhed upon the earth, from [i] the blood of righteous Abel unto [k] the blood of Zacharias ſon of Barachias, whom ye ſlew between the temple and the altar. 36. Verily I ſay unto you, All theſe things ſhall come upon this generation. 37. [l] O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, [m] thou that killeſt the prophets, and ſtoneſt them which are ſent unto thee, how often would [n] I have gathered thy children together even as a hen gathereth her chickens [o] under her wings, and [p] ye would not! 38. Behold, your houſe is left unto you deſolate. 39. For I ſay unto you, Ye ſhall not ſee me henceforth, till ye ſhall ſay, [q] Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

[e] Luke xi. 49.
[f] Acts vii. 59. & xii. 2.
[g] Chap. x. 17. Acts xxii. 19. 2 Cor. xi. 24, 25.
[h] Acts viii. 4.
[i] Gen. iv. 8.
[k] 2 Chron. xxiv. 21.
[l] Luke xiii. 34.
[m] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15. Neh. ix. 26.
[n] 2 Eſd. i. 30.
[o] Pſ. xvii. 8. & xci. 4.
[p] Pſ. lxxxi. 11, 12.
[q] Pſ. cxviii. 26. Chap. xxi. 9.

v. 34—39. Their fathers they allowed had perſecuted and ſlain the prophets of the Lord, and they would ſoon prove themſelves genuine deſcendants from them.

1. Chriſt foretels what would be their behaviour towards his Apoſtles and Evangeliſts. Once more he would give them a trial, by ſending to them his miniſters, inveſted with divine authority from him their God and King, who in gift and graces ſhould be no ways inferior to the prophets, wiſe men, and ſcribes who went before them. But inſtead of obedience to their word, or reſpect for their perſons, they would juſt do as their fathers before them, or worſe; perſecuting them from city to city, ſcourging them in their ſynagogues, and putting them to the moſt ignominious and cruel deaths. See Acts vii. 59. xii. 2. v. 10. xxvi. 11.

2. The meaſure of all their fathers ſins, which thus they imitated, approved, and exceeded, being full, God would not fail to require at their hands all the blood which had been ſhed for righteouſneſs ſake, from the blood of righteous Abel, the firſt martyr, to the blood of Zechariah, the ſon of Barachiah, or Jehoiada, See 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 21. whom they ſlew between the porch and the altar, and was the laſt martyr for the truth recorded in the Old Teſtament. On this generation Chriſt aſſures them ſhall all theſe things come; all the heavy wrath threatened for their forefathers guilt and their own. Note, (1.) Every inſult and injury ſhewn to God's righteous ones, ſhall, ſooner or later, be ſeverely avenged. (2.) The nearer judgments approach, the louder they call for repentance.

3. Chriſt pathetically laments over the wickedneſs of Jeruſalem, and denounces her doom.

[1.] He laments over her wickedneſs, upbraiding her with ingratitude and impenitence under all the means and mercies ſhe had enjoyed. Thou that killeſt the prophets, and ſtoneſt them which are ſent unto thee, as blaſphemers. Such had been, and would be again her practice; and the great truths of God have been often thus loaded with the ſevereſt cenſures, and the moſt faithful and zealous advocates for them perſecuted under the ſpecious pretence of vindicating God's honour, and puniſhing thoſe whom theſe pretended zealots are pleaſed to brand as enthuſiaſts or heretics. Yet, ſays Chriſt, How often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not. As man, and a miniſter of the circumciſion, Chriſt peculiarly regarded Iſrael for their fathers ſake; he wiſhed therefore to engage them to attend his miniſtry, that by acknowledging him as the Meſſiah, they might at leaſt prevent the doom with which their rejecting him would be attended. But ye, the Scribes and Phariſees, who prejudiced the people againſt him, would not; effectually preventing the people from receiving Chriſt as the Meſſiah, to do which they in general ſeem to have been diſpoſed; and thus theſe falſe guides brought ruin upon themſelves and their deluded followers. Note, (1.) They who have fled to Chriſt for refuge, will find a ſure covert from the ſtorm of divine wrath; whilſt all who refuſe his ſalvation will be left expoſed to deſerved vengeance. (2.) Chriſt will viſit for all the means and mercies men have abuſed; and a deſpiſed and rejected goſpel will bring down the heavieſt condemnation.

[2.] He reads her doom. Your houſe is left unto you deſolate. God was now about to abandon them as incorrigible; to leave his temple; and his preſence withdrawn, the gold became dim, the fine gold was changed. Nothing but deſolation remained within thoſe once ſacred walls, when the divine inhabitant was fled; nor would it be long ere one ſtone ſhould not be left on another. When God departed, their glory and defence forſook them: their city and nation with their temple were now devoted to utter deſtruction.

4. He takes his ſad farewel of that temple he never more would enter; nor would they ever ſee him after his departure to heaven, till that great day of his appearing and glory, when too late they would be convinced of his being the Meſſiah, and be glad to join in thoſe aſcriptions of praiſe to him, at which they had been ſo enraged. Some ſuppoſe this refers to the converſion of the Jews in the latter day, when they ſhall welcome that Redeemer their fathers crucified with hoſannas, bleſſing, and praiſe. Note, (1.) The day is near when every eye ſhall behold the once crucified Jeſus on a throne of judgment, and then wo to thoſe who pierced him! (2.) They who will not ſee, are juſtly given up to the blindneſs of their hearts; and ſince they would not bow to the ſceptre of a Redeemer's grace, they muſt periſh under the rod of his judgment. (3.) If we welcome Jeſus now to our hearts, and he is pleaſed to make them his temple, and by his Spirit to take up his reſidence therein, then ſhall the day of his appearing and glory be our exceeding great joy, and we ſhall riſe up to welcome and call him bleſſed who cometh in the name of the Lord, to be glorified in his ſaints, and admired of all that believe.

CHAP. XXIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. The prophecy of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and the utter ruin of the Jewiſh church and nation, which was now haſtening on, and was compleated about forty years after; the prefaces to that deſtruction, and conſequences of it; yet looking further to Chriſt's coming at the end of time, and the conſummation of all things, of which that was a type and figure, ver. 4—31. 2. The practical application of this prophecy for the awakening and quickening of his diſciples to prepare for theſe great and awful things, ver. 32—51.

1. [a] AND Jeſus went out, and departed from the temple; and his diſciples came to him for to ſhew him the buildings of the temple. 2. And Jeſus ſaid ſaid unto them, See ye not all theſe things? verily I ſay unto you, [b] There ſhall not be left here one ſtone upon another, that ſhall not be thrown down.

[a] Mark xiii. 1. Luke xxi. 5.

[b] 1 Kings ix. 7. Mic. iii. 12. Luke xix. 44.

v. 1, 2. Having foretold the deſolations of Zion, Chriſt took his laſt farewel of the temple's devoted walls, and went out to return no more. On his departing we are told the converſation that paſſed between Jeſus and his diſciples. They were aſtoniſhed probably at his prediction, perhaps incredulous of its fulfilment, and begged him a moment to behold the magnificent ſtructure, and view the ſtrength and beauty of the fabric. Tinctured with national prejudices, they ſeem to have been over-pleaſed with the outward glory of the building, and thought with regret of its deſolations; but Chriſt, ſo far from reverſing the ſentence, more awfully confirms it, decreeing its utter and irrecoverable ruin; ſo that not even one ſtone ſhould be left upon another; which, by the concurring teſtimony of hiſtorians, was literally fulfilled, and the very ground ploughed up where the temple ſtood. Note, We are too apt to look upon outward grandeur with the eye of ſenſe, and to be influenced by the pomp and glory of the world; but the eye of faith ſees the vanity of every thing below the ſun, and looks above it for all that is truly great, and permanently glorious.

3. ¶ And as he ſat upon the mount of Olives, the diſciples came unto him privately, ſaying, [c] Tell us, when ſhall theſe things be? and what ſhall be the ſign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? 4. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, [d] Take heed that no man deceive you. 5. For [e] many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt; and [f] ſhall deceive many. 6. And ye ſhall hear of wars, and rumours of wars: ſee that ye be not troubled: for all theſe things muſt come to paſs, but the end is not yet. 7. For [g] nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdom againſt kingdom: and there ſhall be [h] famines, and peſtilences, and earthquakes in divers places. 8. All theſe are the beginning of ſorrows. 9. [i]. Then ſhall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and ſhall kill you: and [k] ye ſhall be hated of all nations for my name's ſake. 10. And then [l] ſhall many be offended, and [m] ſhall betray one another, and ſhall hate one another. 11. [n] And many falſe prophets ſhall riſe, [o] and ſhall deceive many. 12. And becauſe iniquity ſhall abound, the love of many ſhall wax cold. 13. [p] But he that ſhall endure unto the end, the ſame ſhall be ſaved. 14. And [q] this goſpel of the kingdom ſhall be preached in all the world, for a witneſs unto all nations, and then ſhall the end come. 15. When ye therefore ſhall ſee the abomination of deſolation, [r] ſpoken of by Daniel the prophet, ſtand in the holy place, ([s] whoſo readeth, let him underſtand) 16. Then let them which be in Judea, [t] flee into the mountains. 17. Let him which is on the houſe-top, not come down to take any thing out of his houſe: 18. Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes. 19. And [u] wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give ſuck in thoſe days. 20. But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the ſabbath-day: 21. For [x] then ſhall be great tribulation, ſuch as was not ſince the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever ſhall be. 22. And except thoſe days ſhould be ſhortned, there ſhould no fleſh be ſaved: [y] but for the elect's ſake thoſe days ſhall be ſhortned. 23. [z] Then if any man ſhall ſay unto you, Lo, here is Chriſt, or, there; believe it not. 24. For there ſhall ariſe falſe chriſts, and [a] falſe prophets, and [b] ſhall ſhew great ſigns and wonders, inſomuch that ([c] if it were poſſible) they ſhall deceive the very elect. 25. Behold, I have told you before. 26. Wherefore, if they ſhall ſay unto you, Behold, he is in the deſart, go not forth: Behold, he is in the ſecret chambers, believe it not. 27. [d] For as the lightning cometh out of the eaſt, and ſhineth even unto the weſt: ſo ſhall alſo the coming of the Son of man be. 28. For [e] whereſoever the carcaſe is, there will the eagles be gathered together. 29. ¶ Immediately after the tribulation of thoſe days, [f] ſhall the ſun be darkned, and the moon ſhall not give her light, and the ſtars ſhall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens ſhall be ſhaken. 30. And [g] then ſhall appear the ſign of the Son of man in heaven: and [h] then ſhall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and [i] they ſhall ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and [k] great glory. 31. And [l] he ſhall ſend his angels with a great ſound of a trumpet, and they ſhall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

[c] 1 Theſ. v. 1.
[d] Eph. v. 6. Col. ii. 8. 2 Theſ. ii. 3. 1 John iv. 1.
[e] Jer. xiv. 14. & xxiii. 25. John v. 43.
[f] Ver. 11. Acts v. 36, 37. Rev. xiii. 3.
[g] 2 Chron. xv. 6. Hag. ii. 22. Zech. xiv. 13.
[h] Acts xi. 28.
[i] Chap. x. 17. John xv. 20. & xvi. 2. Rev. ii. 10.
[k] Chap. x. 22.
[l] Chap. xiii. 21.
[m] Chap. x. 21.
[n] Acts xx. 29. 1 Cor. xi. 19. 1 Tim. iv. 1. 2 Pet. ii. 1.
[o] Ver. 5.
[p] Dan. xii. 12. Chap. x. 22. Rev. ii. 10.
[q] Rom. x. 18. Col. i. 6.
[r] Dan. ix. 27. & xii. 11.
[s] Dan. ix. 25.
[t] Prov. xxii. 3.
[u] Luke xxiii. 29.
[x] Dan. xii. 1.
[y] Iſa. lxv. 9. Zech. xiv. 2.
[z] Mark xiii. 21. Luke xvii. 23. & xxi. 8.
[a] Deut. xiii. 1.
[b] 2 Theſ. ii. 9, 10.
[c] John x. 28, 29. Rom. viii. 29, 30. 2 Tim. ii. 19.
[d] Luke xvii. 24.
[e] Job xxxix. 30. Luke xvii. 37.
[f] Iſa. xiii. 10. Ezek. xxxii. 7. Joel ii. 10, 31. & iii. 15. Rev. vi. 12.
[g] Dan. vii. 13.
[h] Zech. xii. 12.
[i] Chap. xxvi. 64. Rev. i. 7.
[k] Chap. xvi. 27.
[l] Chap. xiii. 41. 1 Cor. xv. 52. 1 Theſ. iv. 16.

v. 3—31. Aſcending the mount of Olives, oppoſite to which the temple ſtood full in view, the diſciples, as he ſat there, came privately unto him, ſaying, Tell us, when ſhall theſe things be? the deſtruction of the city and temple: and what ſhall be the ſign of thy coming, and of the end of the world? According to their rooted prejudices they ſeem ſtill to have expected him to appear as a glorious temporal Meſſiah; and by his coming, meant not his appearing in the day of judgment; or, by the end of the world, the final conſummation of all things; but rather, the end of the preſent age, and the period of the Jewiſh œconomy; ſuppoſing it probable, that the deſtruction of the temple would pave the way for the erection of another far more magnificent, when in all the pomp of earthly majeſty he would appear, and they ſhould be highly advanced in that univerſal kingdom they expected him to eſtabliſh. They were very ſollicitous therefore to be informed of the ſigns which ſhould uſher him to the throne; and Jeſus, to caution them againſt deluſion, to rectify their miſtakes, and to confirm them in the faith when they ſhould ſee the predictions accompliſhed, anſwers their queſtions.

1. He cautions his diſciples againſt deceivers. Having rejected the true Meſſiah, yet impatient for the temporal deliverance they expected from him, the Jews were open to receive every pretender who ſat up in his name; and to the falſe Chriſts and falſe prophets who ſhould ariſe, were they juſtly to be given up, who ſo obſtinately and wickedly had rejected the true. They muſt pay no regard to the pretenſions of theſe deluders, and turn a deaf ear to their emiſſaries, who ſay, Chriſt is in the deſart, or hid in ſome ſecret chamber, and ready to appear. Nor are they to be believed, though they may do ſtrange feats, and pretend to work miracles, which will impoſe upon the credulous. So powerfully indeed will the great ſeducer play off his illuſions, that nothing but God's effectual grace and everlaſting promiſes could preſerve even the elect from being deceived: but Chriſt, who had choſen, would keep them; and therefore they muſt remember theſe cautions now given them in the day of temptation, (v. 25.) which would ſet them on their guard, and preſerve them from ſeduction. Note, (1.) The devil and his inſtruments may do ſtrange things to ſupport the credit of his falling cauſe, and lying wonders may be wrought that may ſtagger the incautious; but whatever would draw us from Chriſt muſt be rejected with abhorrence. (2.) It is the comfort of Chriſt's real diſciples, that it is not poſſible they ſhould be fatally or finally deceived. (3.) Novel pretenſions and opinions in matters of religion are ever to be ſuſpected: there cannot be a new, or another goſpel. (4.) We are kept by the power of God unto ſalvation, yet are warned to be on our guard, as if we were to keep ourſelves. He who hath ordained the end, hath alſo appointed the means.

2. Wars and rumours of wars will precede the threatned deſtruction. By inſurrections and ſeditions againſt the Roman government in Judea, thouſands miſerably periſhed; whilſt inteſtine commotions and ſlaughters among themſelves prepared the way for their final deſtruction, when, on their laſt revolt, the Romans marched their armies to beſiege and utterly ruin their city and nation. Yet Chriſt warns his diſciples not to be diſcouraged by theſe things, ſo as to diſcontinue their preaching, or be terrified in their minds; for theſe things muſt firſt come to paſs, but the end is not yet; the Jews ſhall be ſpared a little longer, to experience other judgments. Note, (1.) The ravages of war make dreadful work; we cannot but tremble at the alarm; though where the heart is fixed on the rock of ages, we ſhall not be troubled. Nature will ſhudder, but faith can raiſe us above our fears. (2.) God's decrees are unchangeable. What he hath ordained, muſt come to paſs; and this ſhould quiet our minds, and ſilence our murmurings: we know he doth all things well.

3. Another ſign he gives them of the approaching deſolation. Nation ſhall riſe up againſt nation, &c. great commotions being in the Roman empire between the contenders for ſovereignty; and there ſhall be famines, and peſtilences, and earthquakes in divers places; all which came to paſs before the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; and are called the beginnings of ſorrows; being but the prelude to the pangs in which ſhe ſhould expire, as all the temporal judgments which light upon the heads of ſinners, are but the beginnings of ſorrows, inconceivably bitter as they are endleſs.

4. He bids them expect a fiery perſecution. Far from ſtanding high in that earthly kingdom with which they flattered themſelves, nothing but bonds, impriſonment, and death in all its moſt terrible forms, awaited them; hated both of Jews and Gentiles for the ſake of Chriſt, and his goſpel which they preached. And theſe trying ſeaſons would have awful effects on many who before profeſſed the faith of Jeſus, but now, when the croſs lay ſo heavy, would be offended, and apoſtatize; for ſuffering times are the ſieve for hypocrites, whoſe fair profeſſion then is quickly blaſted. They ſtudiouſly ſeek occaſions to quarrel with religion, and then revolt from it, content to be Chriſtians only as long as it coſts them neither the loſs of eaſe, intereſt, or honour; and as apoſtates uſually turn the bittereſt perſecutors, by ſuch falſe brethren they ſhould be betrayed, and hated with uncommon malignity. Through the concurrence of ſuch unfaithfulneſs amongſt profeſſors, ſuch enmity in their perſecutors, and ſuch deluding and ſeducing teachers as would ariſe, iniquity would peculiarly abound; and, as the conſequences of it, the love of many ſhould wax cold. Though perſecution would make the flame burn fiercer in ſome, many would be glad to ſeek a ſhelter from the ſtorm by concealing their profeſſion, or falling into decays, into ſects and parties, loſe the vital warmth and power of godlineſs, at leaſt for a time: for ſouls truly alive to God may under temptation ſuffer much, and, like trees in winter, it cannot be known whether they will ever ſpring again; but where there is ſtill grace in the heart, there will be a revival, and a return to their firſt love. But for the comfort of thoſe who approve themſelves faithful in theſe trying times, they ſhall be ſaved. The remnant according to the election of grace ſhall not periſh in the furnace of adverſity, but either comfortably ſurvive their troubles in this world, or have a more abundant recompenſe in that which is eternal.

5. Notwithſtanding all their ſufferings, this goſpel of the kingdom, that points the way to the kingdom of grace and of glory, ſhall be preached in all the world, to which their very perſecutions eminently contributed, (Acts viii. 1—4.) the apoſtles and others carrying the glad tidings into all the kingdoms under the Roman empire, and probably beyond its limits, (Col. i. 6, 23.) for a witneſs to all nations, of pardon and peace to thoſe who believed, and as a teſtimony againſt thoſe who perſiſted in their infidelity. And all this was done within forty years after our Lord's aſcenſion, and before Jeruſalem was deſtroyed, and is mentioned as the laſt ſign of its approaching ruin.

6. Having foretold the ſigns of the times, our Lord proceeds to inform them of the immediate cauſes of the deſtruction, and to direct them how to act when the deſolation came up as a flood. They would ſee the abomination of deſolation; the Roman armies compaſſing their city and the holy place, with ſtandards flying, on which they bore the images of their gods ſo hateful to the Jewiſh nation; and then whoſoever read the prophet Daniel, would ſee by the event his prediction verified. When this was the caſe, then it was high time for them to flee, and leave the devoted city and country; betaking themſelves to the mountains for concealment from the ravages of the invaders. And when the danger was ſo near and urgent, not a moment was to be loſt: they muſt not go into their houſe, if walking on its roof, to pack up their goods, nor return from the field to carry off their cloaths; but, as they were, inſtantly flee for their lives to ſome place of ſafety, as we are told the Chriſtians immediately did to Pella, on the approach of the Roman army. In this ſeaſon of diſtreſs ſome will be found in circumſtances peculiarly melancholy and grievous: even ſuch as are with child, and give ſuck, whoſe flight will be hereby greatly retarded, and it will be more difficult for them to eſcape. Alſo they had need pray, that their flight might not be in the winter, when the inclemency of the weather and depth of the roads would increaſe their calamity; nor on the ſabbath-day, when many, who ſtill were attached to the rigid obſervance of that day, would be ſcrupulous of travelling, or when the Jews would prevent their journey as contrary to the law. But flee they muſt, for in the city Jeruſalem during the ſiege there would be ſuch a ſcene of miſery, horror, and diſtreſs, as never before was known, nor ever ſhall be, till the time of the conſummation of all things; ſo that ſhould theſe calamities continue, not one of the Jewiſh nation would be left. But God having yet a remnant among them, according to the election of grace, and from the deſcendants of thoſe who ſhould eſcape the ſword, deſigning in ſome future day to raiſe up a people for himſelf; he therefore hath ſhortned theſe calamitous days, not dealing with them in that rigour they deſerved, but for his elect's ſake ſparing them from an utter extirpation. Note, (1.) In days of tribulation, when God opens a door of eſcape, we muſt thankfully embrace the opportunity. Though we may never fly from duty, we muſt not expoſe ourſelves to unneceſſary danger. (2.) Delays are dangerous; eſpecially where our ſouls are at ſtake. The preſent moment only is allotted us to flee for refuge to the mountain of a Saviour's grace. (3.) At the worſt of times, and in the worſt of places, God hath a few, and for their ſakes he is graciouſly pleaſed to ſhorten the days of calamity. The men of this wicked world little think how much they are indebted to thoſe whom they often deſpiſe and abhor.

7. He adds a repeated caution againſt deceivers, whoſe fallacious promiſes in theſe calamitous times would be more eaſily credited; and pretending to come as the Meſſiah to reſcue the Jewiſh nation from the Roman yoke, would find many ready to receive them, and willing to be deluded with the leaſt ſhadow of hope: and their pretended ſigns and wonders would have a great effect on multitudes; but they muſt remember this warning, and reject all theſe impoſtors.

8. He aſſures them the ruin of Jeruſalem and the Jewiſh nation ſhould be ſudden, irreſiſtible, and awful, as when the blaſt of lightning darts from the cloud. And as eagles by their quick ſcent diſcover and ſeize the carcaſe, ſo ſhould the Romans, bearing the figure of eagles on their ſtandards, ſurround the city as a corpſe to be devoured by them, and through the land hunt out, ſeize, and deſtroy this devoted people.

Some ſuppoſe there is a reference here to the ſwift ſpreading of the goſpel through the world, as a light from heaven illuminating the earth, breaking through the clouds of darkneſs and ſuperſtition, ſeen far and wide, attended with moſt amazing ſucceſs, when innumerable converts eagerly flocked to Chriſt, as eagles to the carcaſe, which was indeed the caſe, but the former ſenſe ſeems to be principally intended.

9. The utter ruin of the eccleſiaſtical and civil ſtate of the Jewiſh nation will then immediately enſue. All their glory will depart, all their temple ſervice ceaſe, their entire diſperſion be accompliſhed; metaphorically repreſented by a total dire eclipſe of all the luminaries of heaven, and by a diſſolution of the very frame of nature. Then will the Meſſiah, whom they have rejected, appear to execute the threatned vengeance upon them; and all their tribes with deepeſt anguiſh and diſtreſs will too late mourn their infidelity, and feel the weight of that blood they imprecated on their heads.

Laſtly, On this final ruin of Jeruſalem, the angels of the churches, Chriſt's miniſters, ſhall blow the goſpel-trumpet, and ſpread its awful pleaſing ſound throughout the earth, which, accompanied with the demonſtration of the Spirit and power, will be made effectual to the converſion of all the elect of God thro' the whole earth: and this goſpel will continue to be preached till the end of time, when he ſhall have accompliſhed their number; and then ſhall he be revealed from heaven at the day of final judgment, of which this is the type and figure.

Though to this ſingle event of the deſtruction of the Jewiſh people and nation, I incline to think this prophecy moſt immediately applicable; yet probably there is alſo contained in it a ſtrong reference to the more awful appearance of the great Judge of quick and dead in the laſt day, whoſe coming will be uſhered in with the ſame ſigns of wars, peſtilence, famine, and earthquakes; whoſe goſpel will be firſt ſpread through all lands; and whoſe appearance will be ſudden, unexpected, and terrible as the lightning; and then ſhall all thoſe things literally come to paſs, which are here recorded. Before the brightneſs of his preſence ſhall the ſun and moon be darkened, the ſtars fall from their ſpheres, the elements melt, the heavens be wrapped together as a ſcroll, and the earth be conſumed. With horror the guilty world, ſtartled from their ſlumbers and ſecurity, will behold the terrible Judge ſeated on his throne, ſurrounded by angelic hoſts, the miniſters of flame, who wait his orders, and execute his ſentence. Too late with tears of anguiſh and deſpair they will bewail their inevitable miſery, who had ever before refuſed to mourn in penitence their provocations. With power irreſiſtible, and glory inconceivable, ſhall the Son of man be revealed in clouds burning with vengeance againſt his foes, bright with refreſhing beams of chearing light to gladden the hearts of his redeemed. Then every eye ſhall ſee him, and from his lips expect their irrevocable doom. Awakened from the duſt by the laſt trumpet's blaſt, around his throne ſhall his elect be gathered, conducted by miniſtring angels, whilſt every boſom glows with hope, delight, and joy unſpeakable and full of glory; and welcomed by their Lord, as thoſe his grace hath choſen, his power hath preſerved, their eternal bliſs ſhall be ſecured; whilſt they in wonder, love, and adoration bow before him, with thankfulneſs unutterable own the ſovereign favour, and aſcribe to him alone the everlaſting praiſe. Thruſt from his preſence, ſpeechleſs with guilt, covered with ſhame, the unbelievers, the impenitent, the hypocrite, ſhall then be conſigned to their manſions of eternal horror, torment, and deſpair, and find the juſt but terrible reward of their deeds. Conſider, ſinful ſoul, ere that day comes, who can dwell with devouring fire? who can dwell in everlaſting burnings?

32. [m] Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: When his [m] Mark xiii. branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know 28. Luke that ſummer is nigh: 33. So likewiſe ye, when ye ſhall xxi. 29.
ſee all theſe things, know [n] that † it is near, even at the [n] Jam. v. 9. doors. 34. Verily I ſay unto you, [o] This generation † Or, He.
ſhall not paſs, till all theſe things be fulfilled. 35. [o] Chap. xvi. 28.
[p] Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away, but my words ſhall [p] Pſ. cii. 26.
not paſs away. 36. ¶ But of that day and hour know- Iſa. li. 6.
eth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, [q] but my Fa- Chap. v. 18. Heb. i. 11.
ther only. 37. But as the days of Noe were, ſo ſhall [q] Zech. xiv.
alſo the coming of the Son of man be. 38. [r] For as in 7. Acts i. 7.
the days that were before the flood, they were eating [r] Gen. vi. 3 and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until —5. & vii. 5. Luke xvii.
the day that Noe entred into the ark, 39. And knew not 26. 1 Pet. iii. 20.
until the flood came, and took them all away; [s] ſo ſhall [s] 1 Theſ. v. 3.
alſo the coming of the Son of man be. 40. [t] Then [t] Luke xvii.
ſhall two be in the field, the one ſhall be taken, and the 34, &c.
other left. 41. Two women ſhall be grinding at the mill,
the

the one ſhall be taken, and the other left. 42. ¶ [u] Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. 43. [x] But know this, that if the good man of the houſe had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have ſuffered his houſe to be broken up. 44. [y] Therefore be ye alſo ready: for in ſuch an hour as you think not, the Son of man cometh. 45. Who then is a faithful and wiſe ſervant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his houſhold, [z] to give them meat in due ſeaſon? 46. [a] Bleſſed is that ſervant, whom his Lord when he cometh, ſhall find ſo doing. 47. Verily I ſay unto you, that [b] he ſhall make him ruler over all his goods. 48. [c] But and if that evil ſervant ſhall ſay in his heart, My Lord delayeth his coming, 49. [c] And ſhall begin to ſmite his fellow-ſervants, and to eat and drink with the drunken: 50. [d] The Lord of that ſervant ſhall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of; 51. And ſhall cut him aſunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: [e] there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

u Chap. xxv. 13. Mark xiii. 33. Luke xxi. 36.
x Luke xii. 39, &c. 1 Theſ. v. 2. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. iii. 3. & xvi. 15.
y 1 Theſ. v. 6. 2 Pet. iii. 11.
z John xxi. 15. Acts xx. 28.
a Rev. xvi. 15.
b Chap. xxv. 21.
c c Wiſd. ii. 1—10.
d 1 Theſ. v. 3.
e Chap. viii. 12. & xxii. 13.

v. 32—51. As the events predicted would ſpeedily have their accompliſhment, they muſt prepare for them.

1. They may judge of the approach of Jeruſalem's ruin by the ſigns mentioned, as eaſily and as ſurely as they would conclude ſummer at hand, when the fig-tree begins to bud, and put forth leaves. The things Chriſt had ſpoken would certainly and ſpeedily have their fulfilment: heaven and earth ſhould paſs, ſooner than one jot or tittle of his word could fail; and they of that generation would behold it, though the very day or hour fixed in the divine decree for Jeruſalem's fall, no man nor angel knew, that being a ſecret in the divine boſom.

Many underſtand the laſt verſe as a tranſition to what relates to the final judgment. It is fixed in the divine mind; it cometh certainly; the time is ſhort; the hour unknown, that we might be always ready, leſt that day ſhould come upon us unawares.

2. He deſcribes the ſenſuality and ſecurity in which the Jewiſh people would be ſurprized. Like the men of the old world, who ſlighted Noah's warnings, perſiſted in the ſervice of their luſts and pleaſures, and, drowned in carnal gratifications, would not believe the threatned judgments, till wrath came upon them, and the flood ſwept them away. In ſuch a ſtate of falſe peace and worldly purſuits would the Jews be found when their deſtroyers came, notwithſtanding all the warnings of Chriſt and his apoſtles; and then, by wondrous turns of providence, where two perſons were found at the ſame employments in the field, or at the mill, one ſhall be taken, either a captive, or ſlain, and the other ſhall be left, eſcaping from the hands of the enemy.

And this will eſpecially be the caſe with the world of the ungodly before the great day of the Lord comes. They will be ſurprized in the midſt of ſenſual and earthly gratifications; refuſing to hear the voice of God's miniſters calling them to repentance, he will give them up to the ſpirit of ſlumber. Their indulgencies drive them to infidelity, and their unbelief hardens them in their ſins; ſo reciprocally do the love of pleaſure and infidelity operate. Thus they will put far away the evil day, though they only impoſe upon themſelves, and will be more terribly ſurprized with its ſudden arrival: and then an awful and eternal ſeparation ſhall be made between the children of men who were before of the ſame occupation, engaged in the ſame labours, dwelling perhaps under one roof, or partners of the ſame bed; but of whom one was taken by ſovereign diſtinguiſhing grace, and called by the goſpel to be a ſervant of Jeſus, and the other left a ſlave of corruption. Theſe ſhall now be for ever ſeparated; the one caught up to the Saviour's boſom, the other left to the eternal miſery and ruin he hath choſen. What thankfulneſs then do all who are taken owe to him, who, when others ſo near, ſo like themſelves periſh, is pleaſed to ſave them with an everlaſting ſalvation!

3. He admoniſhes them in the view of theſe things to be always ready, faithfully diſcharging their truſt, and, as uncertain of the time, ever wakeful and watchful, that when theſe judgments come, they may be found on their guard. And what is here ſaid, was not peculiarly directed to them, but is ſpoken to all, who being in jeopardy every hour, and not knowing whether the very next they may not be called to meet their Lord by death, or at the throne of judgment, have continual need to be expecting and preparing for their great change. Two things we know: That Chriſt will come, but when is uncertain, and therefore left uncertain, that we might be always ready; unleſs we act more fooliſhly reſpecting our ſouls, than any man of common prudence does with regard to his perſon or ſubſtance; for if he be admoniſhed of danger from the approach of a thief by night, he will watch to prevent the robber's entrance: and how much more then are we called to watch, that we may not be ſurprized at midnight with the coming of the great Judge, and periſh in a fatal ſecurity, body and ſoul for ever? Our Lord enforces this great duty of watchfulneſs by the caſe of a maſter and his two ſervants, the one negligent, the other diligent and watchful; recommending it to us to copy the example of the wiſe and faithful ſervant, that we may receive his reward, and eſcape the miſery which neglect and careleſſneſs about the concerns of our ſouls muſt neceſſarily be attended with.

[1.] The wiſe and faithful ſervant repreſents every gracious ſoul, and eſpecially the miniſters of Chriſt, who are ſent by him, the great ruler of his family the church, to ſerve in their ſeveral departments, according to their ſeveral capacities. Their buſineſs is to ſerve, not themſelves, but the heirs of ſalvation, for whom they are appointed to labour; ſtudying to render them every kind office, and to give them that meat of the ſound, ſavoury, and ſtrengthening doctrines of truth, which they need; and this regularly in due ſeaſon, and as ſhall beſt ſuit the ſtate of every one of their people. Herein the faithful miniſter muſt approve, (1.) His wiſdom, in ſtudying and conſulting their wants, and how to ſupply them. (2.) His faithfulneſs, in diſcharging his truſt, with a conſtant regard to his maſter's honour, and an eye to the real good of thoſe committed to his care; willing to approve himſelf to their conſciences, and, when both cannot be done, more ſollicitous to profit than to pleaſe them. (3.) His diligence, always employed in the bleſſed work, that when his maſter comes, he may be found ſo doing. Note, Love of idleneſs and eaſe in a miniſter is doubly criminal. Where ſuch a faithful ſervant thus labours, he ſhall not loſe his reward. The bleſſing of Jeſus ſhall reſt upon him in life, in death, for ever: he will have the comfort of his work when he lives, will feel ſatisfaction in it when he dies, and the bleſſing ſhall follow him into the eternal world, where he ſhall be advanced to the higheſt honours, and ſhine forth in the kingdom of Jeſus, as the ſun for ever and ever. May ſuch a proſpect animate our zeal, and quicken our diligence.

[2.] The very reverſe is the conduct and end of the wicked ſervant; under which character every miniſter and profeſſor of religion is repreſented, whoſe practice and principles contradict his pretenſions. (1.) His practice is deſcribed as bad, very bad; quarrelſome, inſolent, and oppreſſive to his fellow-ſervants, and abuſing the power he is entruſted with over them. Inſtead of ſtudying their good, and labouring for their ſervice, he is wholly taken up with the indulgence of his own appetites. If he can find good eating and drinking for himſelf, he cares nothing how his maſter's intereſts fare; and his company are thoſe with whom he can feaſt to the full, in luxury, exceſs, and drunkenneſs. Note, The Lord obſerves the conduct of thoſe who call themſelves his miniſters and ſervants. He marks their pride and inſolence; ſmiting with words of reproach, or, under pretence of vindicating their maſter's honour, abuſing with the exerciſe of oppreſſive authority their more faithful fellow-ſervants, uſually becauſe they are faithful. The Lord ſees their carnal lives, their unbecoming aſſociates, their compliances with a world lying in wickedneſs, and their partaking in other men's ſins, perhaps loſt in exceſs themſelves. Miniſters! yet, horrid to tell, drunkards, or companions with them! Will he not viſit for theſe things?—(2.) His principles are as infidel, as his practice is immoral. Far from living in a conſtant expectation of his Maſter's coming, he puts far off the evil day, and flatters himſelf there is no danger yet. And thus his heart is emboldened to live after the faſhion of the world, and to neglect the awful charge committed to him. Note, There is much more infidelity both in miniſters and people profeſſing godlineſs, than they themſelves are aware of; yet many a man would be ſhocked and affronted to be charged as an infidel, whoſe practice, notwithſtanding, every day evidences the infidelity of his heart, and demonſtrates, that it is impoſſible he can believe the ſolemn account he muſt ſhortly make, when he ſo ſeldom, or ſo careleſſly thinks of it, and takes ſo little pains to prepare for it.—(3.) His doom is fearful. Surprized by his Maſter's coming in death or judgment, his negligence and guilt will ſtare him in the face, when it is too late for repentance or amendment. He ſhall be cut off from all his ſenſual purſuits, in the midſt of his iniquities; and, ſeparated for ever from the Lord, his portion ſhall be appointed him with hypocrites in the deepeſt abyſs of miſery, where eternal weeping and gnaſhing of teeth beſpeak the unutterable torments of the damned. Let every careleſs ſinner, and, above all, every negligent, faithleſs, worldly-minded miniſter, read this awful ſentence and tremble, whilſt yet there is hope. They ſhall aſſuredly receive greater damnation than any others, who, under the guiſe of a pretended commiſſion from Chriſt, have deluded and deſtroyed the people committed to their charge, and by their errors, negligence, or ill examples, lie down with the blood of loſt ſouls upon their heads crying for vengeance.

CHAP. XXV.

The neceſſity of preparing to meet the Lord in judgment, is enforced, 1. In the parable of the ten virgins, ver. 1—13. 2. In the parable of the three ſervants, ver. 14—30. 3. In a more plain deſcription of the proceſs of the laſt judgment, ver. 31—46. and theſe are things of awful conſideration becauſe of everlaſting concern to every one of us.

1. THEN ſhall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten [a] virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet [b] the bridegroom. 2. [c] And five of them were wiſe, and five were fooliſh. 3. They that were fooliſh took their lamps, and took no oil with them: 4. But the wiſe [d] took oil in their veſſels with their lamps. 5. While the bridegroom tarried, [e] they all ſlumbered and ſlept. 6. And [f] at midnight, there was [g] a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him. 7. Then all thoſe virgins aroſe, [h] and trimmed their lamps. 8. And the fooliſh ſaid unto the wiſe, Give us of your oil; [i] for our lamps are † gone out. 9. But the wiſe anſwered, ſaying, Not ſo; leſt there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to [k] them that ſell, and buy for yourſelves. 10. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came, and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage, and [l] the door was ſhut. 11. Afterward came alſo the other virgins, ſaying, [m] Lord, Lord, open to us. 12. But he anſwered and ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, [n] I know you not. 13. [o] Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day, nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

[a] Pſ. xlv. 14. Rev. xxi. 2, 9.
[b] Eph. v. 31, 32. Rev. xix. 7.
[c] Chap. xiii. 47. & xxii. 10.
[d] Zech. iv. 2, 3. John i. 16.
[e] Chap. xxvi. 43. Jam. iii. 2.
[f] Mark xiii. 35. Luke xii. 20.
[g] Chap. xxiv. 31. 1 Theſ. iv. 16.
[h] Luke xii. 35. 2 Pet. iii. 14.
[i] Job viii. 13, 14. & xviii. 5, 6. & xxi. 17.
† Or going out. Job xi. 20.
[k] Iſa. lv. 1.
[l] Luke xiii. 25.
[m] Chap. vii. 21, 22.
[n] Chap. vii. 23.
[o] Chap. xxiv. 42. 1 Cor. xvi. 13. 1 Theſ. v. 6. 1 Pet. v. 8. Rev. xvi.

v. 1—13. Though this parable, as connected with the former chapter, may have a particular reference to the deſtruction of the Jewiſh people, who had ſlighted the goſpel ſalvation, and neglected their day of grace, yet it may well be underſtood as of more general import, and including a warning and caution to men in every age and place.

The parable itſelf is taken from a common cuſtom in thoſe days, when the bridegroom uſed to go in the evening attended by his friends, to the houſe of the bride, who, on hearing of his approach, went out with lights, accompanied by a number of virgins, her companions, to welcome his arrival, and conduct him to the entertainment provided on that occaſion; and ſuch ſhall be the ſtate of the goſpel church at the coming of Chriſt, as we ſee here repreſented. We have,

1. The perſons here ſpoken of, the virgins, who went out with their lamps to meet the Bridegroom. The Bridegroom is the Lord Jeſus, who condeſcends to call his church his ſpouſe; and to honour every member of it with that near and exalted relation. The virgins are thoſe profeſſors of religion, who appear deſirous to preſent themſelves to Chriſt, in the comelineſs, beauty, and ſimplicity, which his righteouſneſs and grace puts upon them; they go forth to meet him, found in his ways and ordinances here on earth, expecting his coming from heaven, and if they are his indeed, loving and looking for the day of his appearing.

2. The characters of the virgins. They were very different, as their actions ſhewed. Five of them were wiſe; and as an evidence of their foreſight and prudence, they took care to be well provided with oil, that they might have enough, if they ſhould tarry long in waiting. Theſe repreſent the faithful ſouls made wiſe unto ſalvation, whoſe hearts are truly ſupplied with the oil of divine grace, and have not only the light of profeſſion, but the real experimental knowledge of Jeſus Chriſt, poſſeſs a living principle, and partake of a divine nature; but five were fooliſh, who, though in appearance aſſociated with the others, were unacquainted with the life-giving truths of the goſpel, profeſſors, but not poſſeſſors of the grace which is in Jeſus Chriſt; ſhining to others in a name to live, but really dead and dark in their own ſouls: they have lamps, but no oil with them, deſtitute of ſpiritual life; careful only to make a fair ſhew in the fleſh, and recommend themſelves to their neighbours as Chriſtians, without a ſingle eye to Chriſt, and a real deſire in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity to approve themſelves to him. And they are fooliſh indeed, who thus deceiving others, moſt fatally deceive and deſtroy their own ſouls.

3. The Bridegroom not coming ſo ſoon as they expected, they all ſlumbered and ſlept; but as their ſtate was different when awake, it was different alſo when aſleep. Indeed the wiſe, the faithful ſouls, through the abiding corruption of their nature; worldly avocations; removal from the goſpel, and the communication of lively chriſtians; ſlothfulneſs, or neglect of ſpiritual exerciſes; the power and prevalence of temptation; outward eaſe and affluence; connection with others lifeleſs or careleſs in their walk; through theſe and the like cauſes, even once vigorous chriſtians grow ſometimes into a lifeleſs ſtate of ſoul: the love of Chriſt, and of their brethren, waxes cold; indifference to the concerns of eternity ſucceeds; and though they lament it, the ſorrow is not deep or laſting; notwithſtanding the root of the matter is in them, and afflictions, the word, and renewed breathings of the divine ſpirit, will yet revive the dying flame. The fooliſh, ſatisfied in external profeſſion, ſleep the ſleep of death, ſunk in carnal ſecurity, and utterly reſting upon the form of godlineſs.

4. At midnight, the cry of the Bridegroom's approach ſtartled them from their ſlumbers, and inſtantly they were ſummoned to meet him with their lamps. Thus ſuddenly ſurprized are we often by death; and even gracious ſouls ſtart at the ſummons, not expecting it ſo near, and conſcious of their own unfaithfulneſs: whilſt horror ſeizes the hypocrite and the ſinner, and they awake to meet their inevitable doom. But doth our Lord delay? Is this moment yet our own? Awake then thou that ſleepeſt, prevent this dire alarm.

5. Inſtantly they aroſe, and began to trim their lamps. The wiſe found much to do, and bluſhed to be thus overtaken, but their oil ſoon revived the expiring flame; their faith and love regained their exerciſe, and welcoming their Redeemer, they confidently expected to be found of him in peace. The fooliſh too eſſayed to prepare, but alas! too late: their lamps were gone out, and no oil to be procured: in vain they ſeek to beg from their companions, or buy from others; they have loſt the moment which cannot be regained. Thus even in this world the lamp of profeſſion is often extinguiſhed, and the unfaithfulneſs of the heart appears: though if the hypocrite's hope burns to his laſt hour, in death it expires: then he will know the value of what he hath loſt, when it cannot be regained: none will then be found able to impart of their grace, what the beſt poſſeſs being barely ſufficient for themſelves. Whilſt there is life indeed, the market is ſtill open to the lateſt moment; they who come to Chriſt may buy pardon, grace, and peace; without money and without price: but when death cloſes the ſcene, the lamp of hope is for ever extinguiſhed; and as the tree falleth, it muſt lie.

6. Whilſt the fooliſh virgins went to buy, the Bridegroom came. Many on their death-beds expreſs deep concern for their neglected ſouls, and think by ſome extraordinary acts of devotion and charity, ſtill to purchaſe heaven; miſtaking the market and ſpending their labours on that which ſatisfieth not. Chriſt alone can ſave a ſinking ſoul, and to the laſt; they who come humbly to him, never find it too late——They that were ready went in with him to the marriage; all who are found cloathed in his righteouſneſs, and ſhining in the graces of his ſpirit, are admitted to his eternal preſence, and ſit down with him in glory: and then the door was ſhut; they who are entered into the reſt of the bleſſed, go out no more; and they who are once excluded, can never more gain admiſſion: the great gulph is fixed, and deſpair hath for ever barred the door of hope. Too late the fooliſh virgins came, importunately craving admittance, for in death and judgment they will often learn to pray and cry who never prayed before; but all entrance is refuſed to them, and the Bridegroom utterly diſowns them; verily I ſay unto you, I know you not; and wo to that ſinful ſoul thus abandoned of God to his miſery, and doomed never to enter into his reſt.

7. The inference from the whole is, Watch therefore; the concerns of our ſouls are infinitely momentous, and will not admit of being trifled with; the time is ſhort, eternity depends upon our improvement of it. We know neither the day nor the hour when we ſhall be ſummoned away; the ſleeping virgins had a midnight call, and why not you or I? Watch therefore, that you may be always ready to go forth with joy to meet the Lord.

14. ¶ For the kingdom of heaven is as a [p] man travelling into a far country, who called his own ſervants, and delivered unto them his goods: 15. [q] And unto one he gave five † talents, to another two, and to another one, to every man according to his ſeveral ability, and ſtraightway took his journey. 16. Then he that had received the five talents, went and [r] traded with the ſame, and made them other five talents. 17. And likewiſe he that had received two, he alſo gained other two. 18. But he that had received one, went and digged in the earth, and hid his lord's money. 19. After a long time the lord of thoſe ſervants cometh, and [s] reckoneth with them. 20. And ſo he that had received five talents, came and brought other five talents, ſaying, Lord, thou deliveredſt unto me five talents: behold, [t] I have gained beſides them five talents more. 21. His lord ſaid unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful ſervant; thou haſt been faithful over a few things, [u] I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into [x] the joy of thy lord. 22. He alſo that had received two talents, came and ſaid, Lord, thou deliveredſt unto me

[p] Luke xix. 12.
[q] Rom. xii. 6. 1 Cor. xii. 7, 11. Eph. iv. 8, 11.
† A talent is 187 l. 10s. Chap. xviii. 24.
[r] Prov. iii. 14.
[s] Rom. xiv. 12.
[t] Jam. ii. 18.
[u] Gen. xxxix. 4. Chap. xxiv. 47. Luke xxii. 29, 30.
[x] Heb. xii. 2.

two talents: behold, I have gained other two talents beſides them. 23. His lord ſaid unto him, [y] Well done, good and faithful ſervant; thou haſt been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord. 24. Then he which had received the one talent, came and ſaid, Lord, [z] I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou haſt not ſown, and gathering where thou haſt not ſtrawed: 25. And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou haſt that is thine. 26. His lord anſwered and ſaid unto him, Thou wicked and ſlothful ſervant, thou kneweſt that I reap where I ſowed not, and gather where I have not ſtrawed: 27. Thou oughteſt therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I ſhould have received mine own with uſury. 28. Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. 29. [a] For unto every one that hath ſhall be given, and he ſhall have abundance: but from him that hath not ſhall be taken away, even that which he hath. 30. And caſt ye the unprofitable ſervant [b] into our darkneſs: there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth.

y Ver. 21. 1 Pet. i. 7.
z Ezek. x. 25.
a Chap. xiii. 12. Mark iv. 25. Luke viii. 18.
b Chap. viii. 12. & xxiv. 51.

v. 14—30. As a farther illuſtration of the method in which the Lord will deal with the viſible members of his church, the following parable is delivered. Chriſt is the great Maſter and Lord of all; we are all his ſervants in profeſſion, and they eſpecially, who are put in truſt with the goſpel: our great buſineſs therefore here below is, to make our profiting appear to the glory of our Lord. We are told,

1. The truſt committed to theſe ſervants during their maſter's abſence. To one he gave five talents, to another two, to another one; to the leaſt a very conſiderable ſum, a ſingle talent of ſilver amounting by the loweſt computation to upwards of 353 l. and theſe talents may refer either, (1.) To the gifts he beſtowed on his diſciples after his aſcenſion, qualifying them with extraordinary miraculous powers, and furniſhing them with ability for the diſcharge of the arduous truſt committed to them, whilſt he went up to heaven, being in the fulneſs of time again to return, and call his ſervants to account for the improvement of that which he had committed to their care. (2.) The talents may refer in general to all the gifts of nature or providence, of which we are poſſeſſed, and which are lent us of the Lord, purely to ſerve the purpoſes of his glory, and promote the intereſts of his kingdom; and for them we muſt be accountable to him in the great day of his appearing. Some have more than others, God being ſovereign in his bounty; and as we deſerve nothing from him, it is a mercy that we ſhould be entruſted with the leaſt talent. They, who by their ſtation, abilities, or poſſeſſions, are entruſted with much, whoſe capital is large, and influence moſt extenſive, have the more to anſwer for, and need give the greater diligence: but all have ſomething; the meaneſt have one immortal ſoul to care for, infinitely more precious than millions of ſilver or gold.

2. The improvement each made of the talents committed to them. Two of them immediately ſet themſelves to work, and by their diligence doubled their capital. Thus faithful miniſters and chriſtians laying out themſelves in the Redeemer's work and ſervice, ſee the moſt abundant bleſſing attending their labours of love. Their own ſouls are enriched with knowledge and grace, whilſt they are ſerving others; the church is edified and increaſed, and immortal ſouls are gained for Chriſt, in his account the richeſt treaſure—One of the ſervants, and he that had leaſt, was negligent and careleſs; inſtead of making uſe of his talent, he went and hid it in the earth: repreſenting herein the character of thoſe, whether miniſters, or profeſſors of religion, who make no improvement of their natural abilities, or providential endowments; but are ſo buried in earthly-mindedneſs, and attention to this world's purſuits, that they have neither inclination nor leiſure to ſerve the intereſts of Chriſt and of ſouls.

3. After a long time the maſter of theſe ſervants came to reckon with them: for though the Lord Jeſus waits long, he will aſſuredly come at laſt; and we muſt at his tribunal, every one of us, render up our account. Oh! that it might be with joy, and not with ſorrow.

(1.) The faithful ſervants with readineſs appeared, and gave up their accounts, highly to their maſter's ſatisfaction, who failed not abundantly to reward their diligence. He that had five talents, had gained other five: he that two, had doubled them; both therefore are received with the ſame token of approbation, and partake of the ſame rewards. Thus in the day of Chriſt, the faithful miniſters and diſciples of Jeſus acknowledging the truſt committed to them as a matter of grace, will produce full evidence of their diligence and profiting, and whether it be leſs or more of the gifts of nature or providence which they have poſſeſſed, their Lord will graciouſly accept the improvement they have made, will commend their fidelity, and abundantly reward them; exalting them to a throne of glory in his eternal kingdom, and admitting them into the participation of thoſe unſpeakable and never-ending joys which are at his right hand for evermore: a reward indeed infinitely exceeding all their ſervices. But as it was through grace they received their talents, through grace alone were enabled to improve them; ſo it is of grace, not of debt, they receive the recompenſe ſo far beyond all they could deſire or deſerve.

(2.) The ſlothful ſervant next appears, and fain would excuſe his own negligence by the moſt unjuſt reflection upon his gracious Maſter; pretending apprehenſions of his auſterity, and rigorous exactions, as if he expected to reap where he had neither manured the ſoil, nor ſown the ſeed: producing therefore the talent, and pleading fear, he hopes his Lord will be ſatisfied with his own, and not diſapprove his care of hiding it, that he might reſtore it entire at his return. Such are the ſentiments, pleas, and excuſes of the falſe and faithleſs diſciple. [1.] He hath hard thoughts of God, and thinks his demands too rigourous and ſevere, deſirous to lay the blame of his ſins on him rather than himſelf. [2.] He is under the bondage of fear, the little he affects to do proceeds from a ſlaviſh principle, and where this reigns, no acceptable ſervice can be rendered to God. [3.] He depends for his acceptance with God on a negative religion, and thinks it very ſufficient if he can plead he hath done no harm, hath not been ſo bad as others, nor indulged in thoſe exceſſes which they fell into; though he can produce neither the works of faith, or labours of love. [4.] He preſumes on the validity of his plea, and ſees not that there is a lie in his right hand.

(3.) Convicted out of his own mouth, judgment is pronounced on him. His ſloth and wickedneſs were evident; and to be idle in the ſervice of God is highly criminal. His very excuſe ſhewed ſelf-contradiction; ſince if he had ſo auſtere a perſon to deal with, at leaſt he ſhould have given the money into a banker's hands, where it would have been equally ſafe, and bore lawful intereſt. Note, The ſinner's excuſes in the day of judgment will but prove his guilt more evident: if God was the hard maſter he pretends, he ought to have been at more pains to pleaſe him, and more diligent to improve the meaſure of gifts or grace, however ſmall, which was vouchſafed him. Juſtly therefore doth ſentence proceed, take the talent from him; for they who uſe not the gifts, means, and mercies, temporal or ſpiritual, which they enjoy, deſerve to forfeit them; and give it unto him which hath ten talents: God thus graciouſly rewarding the fidelity and diligence of his ſervants with an increaſe of bleſſings, adding to the ſtore they have improved, whilſt he often ſtrips off even the profeſſion of the hypocrites, and deprives them of the common gifts of nature, providence, or goſpel-privileges which they before enjoyed. Nor doth the unprofitable ſervant's puniſhment reſt in the mere loſs of what he poſſeſſed, but in the ſufferings to which he ſhall be doomed, when caſt into the outer darkneſs, where there ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth. Note, (1.) Hell is the place of the ſinner's torment, and the miſeries of that diſmal manſion the direſt expreſſions of human agony and diſtreſs can but faintly repreſent. (2.) If the ſlothful and unprofitable meet ſo fearful a doom, where will the extravagant and abandoned appear, who have ſquandered inſtead of hiding the talent, and abuſed it to the moſt immediate diſhonour and injury of the maſter who intruſted them therewith?

31. ¶ When [c] the Son of man ſhall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then ſhall he ſit upon the throne of his glory. 32. And [d] before him ſhall be gathered all nations; and [e] he ſhall ſeparate them one from another, as a ſhepherd divideth his ſheep from the goats: 33. And he ſhall ſet the ſheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. 34. Then ſhall the King ſay unto them on his right hand, Come, ye bleſſed of my Father, inherit the kingdom [f] prepared for you from the foundation of the world: 35. [g] For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirſty, and ye gave me drink: [h] I was a ſtranger, and ye took me in: 36. [i] Naked, and ye clothed me: I was ſick, and ye viſited me: [k] I was in priſon, and ye came unto me: 37. Then ſhall the righteous anſwer him, ſaying, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirſty, and gave thee drink? 38. When ſaw we thee a ſtranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? 39. Or when ſaw we thee ſick, or in priſon, and came unto thee? 40. And the king ſhall anſwer, and ſay unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, [l] Inaſmuch as ye have done it unto one of the leaſt of theſe my brethren, ye have done it unto me. 41. Then ſhall he ſay alſo unto them on the left hand, [m] Depart from me, ye [n] curſed, into [o] everlaſting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. 42. [p] For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat:

c Zech. xiv. 5. Chap. xvi. 27. 1 Theſ. iv. 16. 2 Theſ. i. 7. Jude 14. Rev. i. 7.
d Rom. xiv. 10. 2 Cor. v. 10. Rev. i. 7. & xx. 12.
e Ezek. xxxiv. 17. Chap. xiii. 49.
f Chap. xx. 23. Mark x. 40. Heb. xi. 16.
g Iſa. lviii. 7. Ezek. xviii. 7. Jam. i. 27.
h Heb. xiii. 2.
i Jam. ii. 15, 16.
k 2 Tim. i. 16.
l Prov. xix. 17. Chap. x. 42. Heb. vi. 10.
m Chap. vii. 23.
n Pſ. cix. 17.
o Mark ix. 44, 46, 48.
p Am. vi. 6. Jam. ii. 15, 16. 1 John iii. 17.

I was thirſty, and ye gave me no drink: 43. I was a ſtranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: ſick, and in priſon, and ye viſited me not. 44. Then ſhall they alſo anſwer him, ſaying, Lord, when ſaw we thee an hungred, or athirſt, or a ſtranger, or naked, or ſick, or in priſon, and did not miniſter unto thee? 45. Then ſhall he anſwer them ſaying, Verily I ſay unto you, [q] Inaſmuch as ye did it not to one of the leaſt of theſe, ye did it not to me. 46. And [r] theſe ſhall go away into everlaſting puniſhment: but the righteous into life eternal.

[q] Prov. xiv. 31. & xvii. 5. Zech. ii. 8. Acts ix. 5.

[r] Dan. xii. 2. John v. 29. Rev. xiv. 11. & xx. 10.

v. 31—46. Without a parable, our Lord proceeds in theſe verſes to give a delineation of that awful proceſs, which will be obſerved in the great day of final judgment: may it awaken our minds to prepare for it! We have,

1. The majeſty of the eternal Judge diſplayed. The Son of man, the incarnate Jeſus, who once ſuffered on a croſs, and is now exalted to the crown, all power being given him in heaven and in earth, at his bar ſhall the nations be aſſembled, and every individual of the ſons of Adam muſt then appear before him, to receive, according to the deciſions of his juſtice, everlaſting happineſs, or eternal torment. In the glory of eſſential deity, with the peculiar dignity of Mediator, ſhall he be revealed; the myriads of bright angelic hoſts ſhall grace his train, and ſtand the ready miniſters to execute his orders: whilſt ſeated on a throne of glory, brighter than the ſun when he goeth forth in his ſtrength, every eye ſhall ſee him, and from his lips expect their irrevocable doom. Shall I be there? my ſoul, tremble at the thought, and give all diligence to be found of him in peace,

2. The all-diſcerning eye of Jeſus, incapable of miſtaking the true characters of men, ſhall now make the final ſeparation. His ſheep, who in faith unfeigned, and love without diſſimulation, followed him the true ſhepherd, ſhall, in diſtinguiſhed honour, be placed high at his right hand: whilſt the goats, the hypocrites and impenitent, whoſe hearts remain uncleanſed from their native filthineſs, who lived and died in ſin unpardoned, ſhall be degraded to the left with ſhame, the prelude to their approaching fearful ſentence. Reader, conſider, where ſhall thy place be?

3. The faithful ſhall be received with the moſt endearing welcome. Then, when he ſhall have made the ſeparation, and no one ſpot remains among the glorious hoſt, addreſſing himſelf with every endearment of voice and aſpect, the King, whoſe word is with power, and his ſentence unchangeable, he ſhall ſay unto them, Come, ye, the everlaſting objects of my love, whom by grace I have choſen and called, and who have followed me in the regeneration; come, to be for ever with me, to behold and partake of my glory, ye bleſſed children of my Father; honoured with this diſtinguiſhed title, though deſpiſed, abhorred of men, precious to the God of heaven, bleſſed with his preſent and eternal favour; come, inherit the kingdom, as joint-heirs with me, a kingdom that cannot be moved, eternal in the heavens; compared with which, all earthly grandeur vaniſhes, as the glow-worm before the meridian ſun; a kingdom of never-fading glory, prepared by the power and grace of the Almighty, on purpoſe to crown the felicity of his choſen, and this from the foundation of the world. From eternity the plan was laid, in the creation the deſign appeared, and now the thrones are ready to receive you, that you may reign with me for ever and ever. With what rapture and delight, with what joy unſpeakable and full of glory will the redeemed hear this addreſs from the mouth of their adored Judge, of their beloved Lord! Oh that my lot may be amongſt theſe ſaints in light!

4. Chriſt mentions the evidences of their relation to him as his people, clearly ſhewn in the regard paid for his ſake, to their brethren in affliction and diſtreſs: the deſtitute, hungry, and naked their hands were open to relieve, the ſick were cheered by their preſence and ſweet counſel, and all the horrors of a priſon kept them not from viſiting the faithful there confined for the teſtimony of Jeſus Chriſt, ſupporting their wants, and not aſhamed of their bonds. Works of genuine charity theſe, which though in no wiſe meritorious, or challenging a reward at his hands, Jeſus remembers, and in the riches of his grace is pleaſed to mention to their honour, as undoubted tokens of their faith unfeigned. Surprized to hear their Lord make mention of their poor inſignificant ſervices, and with deep humility conſcious how little they deſerved it at his hands, the righteous were ready to queſtion and diſclaim the works attributed to them. They never ſaw, at leaſt the moſt of them, their Lord in the fleſh, and cannot hear, without ſome confuſion, his declarations with regard to their duties; when they ever bluſhed to think how defective they had been: but the king from his throne ſhall anſwer, with ſtrongeſt aſſurances of his kind reſentment of their conduct, that he regards what they did for the meaneſt of his diſciples, whom in his infinite condeſcenſion he is pleaſed to call my brethren, as done unto himſelf. He interprets our practice by our principles; it is not ſo much the duty, as the ſpirit in which it is performed, that he reſpects. The leaſt deed of charity, even a cup of cold water, when beſtowed with a deſire to his glory, and proceeding from love to him, ſhall be remembered with diſtinguiſhed honour. And in the leaſt of his poor people Jeſus is ſtill preſent with us; and what we beſtow to relieve their wants, will be equally acceptable to him, as if we had viſited him in the days of his fleſh, and miniſtred to him of our ſubſtance. What an engagement and encouragement this, to every work and labour of love.

5. Sentence is paſſed on thoſe at the left hand. With terror in his voice, and frowns of terrible ire, the Judge ſhall pronounce the unchangeable decree. Depart from me, ye objects of my abhorrence, whoſe guilt and impenitence provoke my indignation, be for ever baniſhed from my preſence, and therewith from all bliſs, and eaſe, and happineſs for ever. Depart, ye curſed, on whom my wrath eternally abides, and all the penalties of a broken law; vengeance ſhall purſue you to the bottomleſs pit, thither muſt ye be driven, into everlaſting fire, to dwell in flames that never can be quenched, where an agonizing body adds to the miſery of the tortured ſoul; and as intolerable as the torment is, ſo eternal is the ſuffering; no ray of hope ſhall ever chear the horrid gloom: there is neither proſpect of an end, nor remiſſion of the torture, but black deſpair adds bitterneſs inexpreſſible to every pang the damned feel: and this not originally deſigned for you, but prepared for the devil and his angels, whom ye have choſen to imitate, his ſervice to obey, his works to follow, and therefore with him muſt ſuffer; alike in ſin, alike in puniſhment. With ſuch companions to ſpend eternity, how terrible! In ſuch torments to lie down, how intolerable! Oh ſin, ſin, what haſt thou done!

6. The reaſon for the ſentence is given, and the criminal's plea over-ruled. The inſtances of their guilt are produced, drawn from the omiſſions of thoſe duties which the righteous practiſed, the ſure evidences of the want of that faith which worketh by love. Engroſſed with ſelfiſh conſiderations, negligent and at eaſe, they cared not for the diſtreſſes of the miſerable, nor ſought to alleviate them; were unconcerned what the faithful ſuffered for their maſter's ſake; and if at any time humanity, ſenſibility to diſtreſs, oſtentation, or ſelf-complacence opened their purſes to the relief of indigence, their gifts never flowed from the divine principle of love to Jeſus and his brethren, nor were directed to his glory alone, therefore they were as reprobate ſilver. They object indeed to the charge, and becauſe they never ſaw Chriſt in the fleſh, preſume they cannot be accuſed of thus neglecting him, but the plea is frivolous. Chriſt is one with every member of his church, ſuffers in them and with them; and every inſult, ſlight, or neglect ſhewn to them, he reckons done to himſelf. And this ſhould comfort the deſpiſed and ſuffering ſervants of Jeſus, he feels and takes a part in all their troubles; and let thoſe who treat them with indignity, tremble. They may pretend indeed, they mean to diſcountenance and diſcourage a deluded ſect, to ridicule or oppreſs a company of enthuſiaſtic religioniſts, and the like; but men need well conſider what they do, and whether they act clearly on the anthority of their bibles, and under the influence of fervent charity, leaſt a perſecuted Jeſus ſhould riſe up terribly to avenge his own and his people's wrongs. If the doom of the negligent, the unmerciful, and uncharitable be ſo dreadful, what will be the caſe with the unjuſt, and the perſecutors of God's people?

7. The ſentence is no ſooner pronounced than executed. Theſe ſhall go away into everlaſting puniſhment; there is no appeal from Chriſt's bar, nor eſcape from his judgment: the doom is irrevocable, the execution immediate. Driven from his preſence, they are caſt into the burning lake, and the ſmoke of their torment aſcendeth up for ever and ever. But the righteous, who in their Redeemer were found complete, and in their characters by his grace approved as faithful, ſhall go into life eternal; to the enjoyment of God in his kingdom of glory; to partake of all the bleſſedneſs which the boundleſs love and power of an all-ſufficient God can beſtow on his moſt favoured children; their holineſs and happineſs perfected, and their bliſs ſecured to eternity.

CHAP. XXVI.

The croſs of Chriſt is the Chriſtian's glory. We here ſee him entering on the ſcene of his ſufferings. We have, 1. The preface to them. [1.] The previous notice given by him of them to his diſciples, ver. 1, 2. [2.] The ruler's conſpiracy againſt him, ver. 3—5. [3.] The anointing of his head at a ſupper in Bethany, ver. 6—13. [4.] Judas's bargain with the prieſts to betray him, ver. 14—16. [5.] Chriſt's eating the paſſover with his diſciples, ver. 17—25. [6.] His inſtituting the Lord's ſupper, and his diſcourſe with his diſciples after it, ver. 26—35. 2. His entrance upon them, and ſome of the particulars of them. (1.) His agony in the garden, ver. 36—46. (2.) The ſeizing of him by the officers, with Judas's help, ver. 47—56. (3.) His arraignment before the chief prieſt and his condemnation in his court, ver. 57—68. (4.) Peter's denying him, ver. 69—75.

1. AND it came to paſs, when Jeſus had finiſhed all theſe ſayings, he ſaid unto his diſciples, 2. Ye know that [a] after two days is the feaſt of the paſſover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified. 3. [b] Then aſſembled together the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high prieſt, who was called Caiaphas, 4. And conſulted that they might take Jeſus by ſubtilty, and kill him. 5. But they ſaid, Not on the feaſt-day, [c] leſt there be an uproar among the people.

[a] Mark xiv. 1. Luke xxii. 1. John xiii. 1.
[b] Pſ. ii. 2. John xi. 47. Acts iv. 26—28.
[c] John vii. 40.

v. 1—5. The time was now at hand fixed in the eternal counſels, when Meſſiah, the prince, ſhould be cut off for the ſins of his people.

1. He gives his diſciples notice of his betrayal and approaching crucifixion, that they might be the leſs ſurprized. He had finiſhed his diſcourſe on the ſufferings they might expect, and their encouragement to bear up under them, and now he was going himſelf to ſet them the bright example they ſhould copy. The views of a ſuffering Chriſt ſhould ſupport every ſuffering chriſtian. Within two days the dreadful plot ſhould be executed; and it is as ſure as if already done, that he is betrayed to be crucified.

2. Juſt at this time the chief prieſts, ſcribes, and elders, the members of the Sanhedrim, and the men of higheſt authority among the Jews, exaſperated now beyond meaſure, and reſolved upon the death of Jeſus, aſſembled to conſult upon the propereſt means of accompliſhing their bloody purpoſe. The high prieſt's palace was the place where theſe conſpirators met; and having weighed the dangers of an uproar which might enſue, if on the feaſt-day they ſhould attempt to arreſt him amidſt the concourſe of people who attended him; they reſolved, if poſſible, to watch their opportunity to ſeize him privately, and either thus make away with him, or get him condemned by the Roman governor, and execute him as a malefactor, on account of crimes they were ready to lay to his charge. Note, The fear of man often reſtrains thoſe from wickedneſs, who are unawed by any fear of God.

6. ¶ [d] Now when Jeſus was in Bethany, in the houſe of Simon the leper. 7. There came unto him a woman having an alabaſter-box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he ſat at meat. 8. But when his diſciples ſaw it, they had indignation, ſaying, To what purpoſe is this waſte? 9. For this ointment might have been ſold for much, and given to the poor. 10. When Jeſus underſtood it, he ſaid unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for ſhe hath wrought a good work upon me. 11. [e] For ye have the poor always with you, [f] but me ye have not always. 12. For in that ſhe hath poured this ointment on my body, ſhe did it for my burial. 13. Verily I ſay unto you, Whereſoever this goſpel ſhall be preached in the whole world, there ſhall alſo this that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

[d] Mark xiv. 3. Luke vii. 37. John xii. 3.
[e] Deut. xv. 11. John xii. 8.
[f] Chap. xxviii. 20. John xiii. 33.

v. 6—13. Jeſus, though he ſpent the day at Jeruſalem, retired at even to Bethany, a village at a little diſtance from thence, and was now in the houſe of Simon the leper; one of thoſe probably who had experienced his healing power, and had become his faithful diſciple. We are told,

1. The ſingular mark of reſpect ſhewn him by a gracious woman who was preſent when they ſat at meat. She poured upon his head a box of precious ointment, as the profeſſion of her faith in him as the Meſſiah, the anointed of God, and as a token of her love to him, as her adored Lord and Saviour.

Some have imagined that this occurrence is the ſame with that related, John xii. 1. and they reconcile the accounts by ſuppoſing, that this woman, there ſaid to be Mary, Lazarus's ſiſter, who with his family, were invited to the entertainment, might not only anoint our Saviour's head, but his feet alſo; though one of the evangeliſts mentions the one, and the other the other; and that this, though here introduced, was done ſix days before. Others ſuppoſe they are two diſtinct occurrences, differing in time, place, and manner, and this to me ſeems moſt probable.

2. The offence the diſciples took at the matter. They among themſelves cenſured the action as an unneceſſary waſte of what might have been more profitably employed, if the money, ſo valuable a box of ointment would bring, had been given to the poor; and perhaps meant tacitly to blame their maſter for permitting this to be done, and not diſcountenancing the woman. Note, (1.) Charity bids us put the beſt conſtruction on what is dubious; and we ſhould be very careful how we cenſure thoſe of over-doing, or as guilty of imprudence, who go farther than we dare or care to do. Probably the fault we complain of will be found more juſtly retorted; and that not their intemperate raſhneſs, but our lukewarmneſs and want of zeal and love for Jeſus is to be blamed. (2.) That is never waſte which is employed for Chriſt and his ſervice.

3. Chriſt rebukes his diſciples, and vindicates this gracious woman. He knew their murmurs, and expoſtulates with them on the unjuſtneſs of their indignation, why trouble ye the woman by ſuch harſh judging, and unkind ſentiments of her conduct? The work was both ſuitable and ſeaſonable, deſerving commendation, not cenſure. Among the poor, for whom they expreſſed ſuch jealouſy; they would always find objects to exerciſe their charity, but his bodily preſence with them was ſhort, and therefore this act of reſpect was not only pleaſing to him, but had a particular view which they knew not: it was intended for his burial, as an embalming of his body though now alive, which ſhe would not have an opportunity to do when he was dead; and this ſhe did either by revelation, or the Holy Ghoſt directed her to the action for this end. So far therefore from iſſuing to her reproach, it ſhould be mentioned to her perpetual honour, as the evidence of her genuine faith and love, wherever the goſpel ſhould be preached in the whole world. Note, (1.) If we knew the principles and motives on which others act, we ſhould often ſee abundant reaſon to approve that conduct which now we condemn. (2.) It is a real grief to a gracious ſoul to be cenſured for well-doing, eſpecially by thoſe whoſe approbation he had reaſon to expect; but our judgment is with the Lord, and our reward with our God. (3.) We never need want opportunities of doing good, if we have hearts to do it; objects of diſtreſs every where abound. (4.) Thoſe who honour Jeſus he will honour. A name in his records, or the book of life of the Lamb, ſecures immortal fame and glory.

14. ¶ Then [g] one of the twelve, called [h] Judas Iſcariot, went unto the chief prieſts, 15. And ſaid unto them, [i] What will you give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him [k] for thirty pieces of ſilver. 16. And from that time he ſought opportunity to betray him.

[g] Mark xiv. 10. Luke xxii. 3.
[h] Chap. x. 4.
[i] 1 Tim. vi. 10.
[k] Zech. xi. 12. Chap. xxvii. 3.

v. 14—16. The traitor Judas provoked with the vindication of the woman, and vexed at the reproof which he peculiarly felt, as having been the chief murmurer and inſtigator of the reſt, given up now to the devil's power, preſently aroſe full of malice and reſentment, and went directly to the chief prieſts, who wanted, but could not hope to find, ſo fit an inſtrument for their helliſh purpoſe. We may not ſtartle that one of the twelve was a traitor, or had a devil: where ſhall we find, among profeſſors in general, ſo ſmall a proportion of hypocrites and apoſtates? We have,

1. The offer he made. What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? This was the very thing they deſired; they dared not ſeize him openly; nothing therefore could be more opportune than to have a traitor among his followers, who could introduce them ſecretly, that they might arreſt him without an uproar. The love of money, backed by reſentment at a ſuppoſed affront, hurried him on; and though conſcious of his maſter's innocence, he does not preſume to vindicate his own baſeneſs, by pretending the diſcovery of any crime, or daring to appear as an evidence againſt him; yet reſolved to ruin him, he propoſes this villainous treachery. Note, (1.) Many want only opportunity and temptation, to ſhew the baſeneſs and hypocriſy of their hearts. (2.) None wound the cauſe ſo deep as thoſe, who from apoſtles turn apoſtates, and employ their bitter enmity againſt the goſpel they once preached and eſpouſed. (3.) When the heart is bent on miſchief, the devil will ſuggeſt the means. (4.) The love of money is the fatal bait by which thouſands have periſhed, and for gold have baſely ſold their God.

2. The chief prieſts' eagerly embraced the offer, and immediately the bargain is ſtruck for thirty ſhekels of ſilver, in value about three pounds fifteen ſhillings, which was by law the price of a ſlave (Exod. xxi. 32.) the goodly price he was valued at by them, Zech. xi. 13. Note, (1.) They who ſell themſelves to work wickedneſs, often find the wages wretched as the ſervice is vile. (2.) Many cry out againſt the falſehood of this traitor, yet by crafty bargains, and inordinate profit on their goods, how often have they lied, deceived, defrauded, and ſold their maſter for leſs than thirty pieces of ſilver?

3. From that time Judas ſought opportunity to betray him, that acquainting them with his retirement, they might ſeize him in the abſence of the multitude. The way of ſin is headlong, one crime draws on another, the conſcience is hardened by the repetition of guilt, and onward the miſerable ſlave of Satan is hurried to the precipice of eternal ruin.

17. ¶ [l] Now [m] the firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread, the diſciples came to Jeſus, ſaying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the paſſover? 18. And he ſaid, Go into the city to ſuch a man, and ſay unto him, The maſter ſaith, My time is at hand, I will keep the paſſover at thy houſe with my diſciples. 19. And the diſciples did as Jeſus had appointed them, and they made ready the paſſover. 20. Now when the even was come, he ſat down with the twelve. 21. And as they did eat, he ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, that [n] one of you ſhall betray me. 22. And they were exceeding ſorrowful, and began every one of them to ſay unto him, Lord, is it I? 23. And he anſwered and ſaid, [o] He that dippeth his hand with me in the diſh, the ſame ſhall betray me. 24. The Son of man goeth as it is written of him: but wo unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed: it had been good for that man if he had not been born. 25. Then Judas, which betrayed him, [p] anſwered and ſaid, Maſter, is it I? He ſaid unto him, Thou haſt ſaid.

[l] Mark xiv. 12. Luke xxii. 7.
[m] Exod. xii. 16.

[n] John xiii. 21.
[o] Pſ. xli. 9.
[p] Pſ. xciv. 7.

v. 17—25. We have here our Lord's celebration of his laſt paſſover.

1. The preparation for that ſolemnity. The firſt day of the feaſt of unleavened bread, when the paſchal Lamb was to be killed and eaten in the evening; the diſciples preſuming their Maſter would keep the paſſover at Jeruſalem, though they knew of no houſe ready for his and their reception, aſked him where they muſt prepare the paſchal ſupper? and Chriſt, at the ſame time that he gave them a ſtriking proof of his omniſcience, directs them to a perſon who, on delivering the meſſage he gave them, would ſhew them the place they ſought. Say unto him, who was probably a diſciple, and well knew Jeſus, the Maſter ſaith, My time is at hand, the time of his departure; I will keep the paſſover at thy houſe with my diſciples; this was therefore the laſt kind office he would be able to ſhew him. The diſciples, without heſitation, obeyed; found all things as he had ſaid; prepared the paſſover; and at even when he came, the twelve ſat down with him at the table. Note, (1.) Chriſt muſt ſend to prepare himſelf a welcome in our hearts; when he ſaith, I will, the work is done. (2.) When we follow Chriſt in his commands, he will make us feaſt with him in his comforts.

2. During the ſupper, he took occaſion to inform them of a circumſtance which many of them would be ſhocked to hear; and this was, that one of them ſhould betray him. He well knew the traitor and the plot, and gave them this notice for the confirmation of their faith, when the thing ſhould come to paſs. Exceedingly diſtreſſed at the thought that he ſhould be betrayed, and more that one of them ſhould be ſo perfidious, with anxious ſollicitude the eleven began ſeverally to aſk him, Lord, is it I? each perhaps trembling at the deceitfulneſs and treachery of their hearts; or rather grieved at the ſuſpicion, and conſcious of their innocence, deſired to clear themſelves from ſuch an imputation. Juſt then, it ſeems, Judas ſtretched out his hand to dip the bread into the diſh, and by this circumſtance Chriſt pointed out the traitor; he that dippeth his hand with me in the diſh, the ſame ſhall betray me, which he mentions, to make the perfidy appear more baſe, and to ſhew the fulfilment of the ſcripture; whilſt he adds a terrible commination, if any thing might ſtartle the hardened conſcience of this apoſtate. The Son of man muſt indeed, according to the determinate counſel and foreknowledge of God, be thus betrayed, but wo to the traitor; it had been good for that man if he had not been born, a convincing proof of the eternal miſery of every damned ſoul. With impudent effrontery, unabaſhed, though conſcious of his guilt, Judas, who had been ſilent before, perceiving himſelf pointed at, endeavoured to brave it out; either fancying that Chriſt could not know of his guilt, or would not directly charge him with it, and therefore ſaid, Lord, is it I? He ſaid unto him, Thou haſt ſaid. The reply is expreſs: he was the man. Note, (1.) True humility will ever make us jealous over theſe vile hearts; we know not to what we may be tempted, nor how weak we are to reſiſt; nothing is too bad for the beſt to do if left one moment to themſelves; therefore we ſhould never be high-minded, but fear. (2.) The more nearly we have been connected with Jeſus, in the participation of his ordinances, the more aggravated will be the guilt of unfaithfulneſs. (3.) Many put a bold face upon a bad cauſe, and they may indeed eſcape the judgment of men, but God trieth the heart.

26. ¶ [q] And as they were eating, [r] Jeſus took bread, and † bleſſed it, and brake it, and gave it to the diſciples, and ſaid, Take, eat; this is my body. 27. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, ſaying, [s] Drink ye all of it: 28. For this is my blood of [t] the New Teſtament, which is ſhed [u] for many for the remiſſion of ſins. 29. But I ſay unto you, [x] I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, [y] until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom. 30. And when they had ſung an ‡ hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

[q] Mark xiv. 22. Luke xxii. 19.
[r] 1 Cor. xi. 24.
† Some read, Gave thanks
[s] Mark xiv. 23. 1 Cor. x. 4.
[t] Jer. xxxi. 31.
[u] Chap. xx. 28. Rom. v. 15.
[x] Luke xxii. 18.
[y] Acts x 41.
‡ Or Pſalm. Some think Pſalms 113—118.

v. 26—30. All Jewiſh ordinances were now about to be abrogated, and among the reſt the paſſover. In its room Chriſt here inſtitutes the great goſpel ordinance, called from hence, The Lord's ſupper, where he is held forth as our paſſover, the Lamb ſlain from the foundation of the world, and we are invited to come and feaſt thereon. The paſchal ſupper being ended,

1. Our Lord took bread which lay by him, and bleſſing it, brake, and gave to his diſciples, commanding them to eat; and explaining the import of what he did, ſaying, this is my body, the repreſentation of the ſacrifice I am about to ſuffer for your redemption, when my body ſhall be thus broken on the tree, the conſtant memorial of which ſhall thus be obſerved in my church to all ages, as the paſſover perpetuated the memory of Iſrael's deliverance from Egypt.

The doctrine of tranſubſtantiation raiſed from hence is too abſurd to need confutation; and not only gives the lie to our ſenſes, and contradicts the very nature of a ſacrament, but would make Chriſt eat his own fleſh and blood.

2. He took the cup, and with thankſgiving and prayer having conſecrated the wine, gave it to them, and commanded them all to drink of it, as the repreſentation and memorial of that blood which he was now juſt ready to ſhed, to confirm and eſtabliſh the New Teſtament, or Covenant, and to procure for them all ſpiritual bleſſings, eſpecially that chief of all, the remiſſion of ſins; and for as many alſo, as afterwards truſting on his atonement, ſhould plead the redemption hereby purchaſed for them, from ſin and guilt for ever.

3. He takes a ſolemn farewell. No more would he ever drink of this paſſover cup: the very ordinance itſelf was henceforth aboliſhed, to give place to this new inſtitution in the goſpel church. No more would they enjoy this free and familiar converſe with him, till the day, the glorious day arrived, when admitted to his eternal kingdom, they ſhould partake of thoſe unutterable joys (ſignified by the new wine) which are at his right hand for evermore. Note, A dying ſaint with delight takes his farewel of all the comforts he ever enjoyed here below; ſweet as ordinances, the word, communion with God were to his ſoul, he is going where, inſtead of the drops he taſted here below, he ſhall be admitted to drink of the living ſtreams of eternal conſolations, that flow uninterrupted, ever new, from the throne of God.

4. They cloſed the ſolemnity with a hymn, and never is the ſong of praiſe more ſuitable than on ſuch an occaſion. Hereupon departing from the houſe, he retired, by moonlight, to the mount of Olives, the place appointed for the ſcene of his agonizing ſorrows.

31. Then ſaith Jeſus unto them, [z] All ye ſhall be [a] offended becauſe of me this night: for it is written, [b] I will ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep of the flock ſhall be ſcattered abroad. 32. But after I am riſen again, [c] I will go before you into Galilee. 33. Peter anſwered and ſaid unto him, [d] Though all men ſhall be offended becauſe of thee, yet will I never be offended. 34. Jeſus ſaid unto him, [e] Verily I ſay unto thee, that this night before the cock crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice. 35. Peter ſaid unto him, Though I ſhould die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewiſe alſo ſaid all the diſciples.

[z] Mark xiv. 27. John xvi. 32.
[a] Chap. xi. 6.
[b] Zech. xiii. 7.
[c] Chap. xxviii. 7, 10.
[d] 2 Kings viii. 13.
[e] John xiii. 38. 1 Cor. x. 12.

v. 31—35. In their way to the mount of Olives, we are told,

1. The prediction of his ſufferings, and of their flight, which Chriſt delivered to his diſciples. He foretels them of the offence they would take at the treatment he muſt meet that very night, inſomuch that every one of them would deſert him, and fulfil the ſcripture, Zech. xiii. 7. but though he ſhould be ſmitten, and die, as it was propheſied of him, yet he ſhould riſe again, and come to them, recover them from their fright and diſperſion, and go before them into Galilee, where they would meet him to their unſpeakable comfort. Note, (1.) We know not our own weakneſs till the trying hour comes, and by our falls we are convinced. (2.) We are never ſafe, and muſt never be ſecure. The ſweeteſt ſeaſons of communion with Chriſt are ſometimes ſucceeded with the ſoreſt temptations. (3.) The Lord is very pitiful; he knoweth our weakneſs, and doth not caſt us off, though for our cowardice and unfaithfulneſs we ſo often deſerve it: he turns again, and reſtores the fallen, by his grace bringing them back to his bleſſed ſelf.

2. Peter, unable to bear ſuch a reflection, with preſumptuous confidence engages for his own fidelity, though all the reſt ſhould fly. He not only truſted on his own reſolutions, but intimates a ſtrong conceit of his ſuperior courage. Note, A haughty ſpirit is ſure to fall. We have loſt our footing the moment we begin to think any thing as of ourſelves; and if Jeſus hath any love to our ſouls, he will let us feel, by ſad experience, our own weakneſs and corruption.

3. Chriſt warns him of the deluſion he was under, in this ſelf-confidence of boaſting; and aſſures him, that all his vaunted courage would quickly fail him. Yea, that he ſhould not only forſake, but diſown him, repeatedly diſown him; and that during the preſent night, before the crowing of the cock announced the approaching return of day. And this he ſolemnly confirms, Verily I ſay unto thee. He knew Peter better than Peter knew himſelf. Note, The forwardeſt to boaſt are uſually the firſt and fouleſt in their falls.

4. Peter ſtill perſiſts in his vain confidence, though warned by him who could not err, and with increaſing vehemence, unable to bear the ſuſpicion of denying his Maſter, ſolemnly affirms that he will ſooner die than be guilty of ſuch baſeneſs. And all the diſciples joined his aſſertion, unwilling to be outdone by Peter, and equally confident of their own zeal for their Lord. Note, (1.) When death and danger are at a diſtance it is eaſy to boaſt great things; but, when they come, how many ſtagger! (2.) It is among the follies bound up in the human heart, that we are all apt to think more highly of ourſelves than we ought to think; and ſad experience is in general needful to bring us to a more humbling view of our weakneſs and wickedneſs.

36. ¶ [f] Then cometh Jeſus with them unto a place called Gethſemane, and ſaith unto the diſciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. 37. And he took with him Peter, and the two ſons of Zebedee, and began to be ſorrowful, and [g] very heavy. 38. Then ſaith he unto them, [h] My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me. 39. And [i] he went a little farther, and fell on his face, and [k] prayed, ſaying, [l] O my Father, if it be poſſible, let [m] this cup paſs from me: nevertheleſs, [n] not as I will, but as thou wilt. 40. And he cometh unto the diſciples and findeth them [o] aſleep, and ſaith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour? 41. [p] Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the ſpirit indeed is willing, [q] but the fleſh is weak. 42. He went away again the ſecond time, and prayed, ſaying, O my Father, if this cup may not paſs away from me, except I drink it, [r] thy will be done. 43. And he came and found them aſleep again: [s] for their eyes were heavy. 44. And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, ſaying the ſame words. 45. Then cometh he to his diſciples, and ſaith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your reſt; behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of ſinners. 46. Riſe, let us be going: behold, he is at hand that doth betray me.

f Mark xiv.
32. Luke
xxii. 39.
John xviii. 1.
g Pſ. xxii.
14. John
xii. 27.
h Pſ. cxvi. 3.
i Iſa. liii. 3.
k Heb. v. 7.
l John xii.
27.
m Chap. xx.
22.
n John vi.
38.
o Ver. 38.
Chap. xxv. 5.
p Mark xiii.
33. Eph. vi.
18.
q Pſ. lxxviii.
39. Rom.
vii. 22.
Gal. v. 17.
r Chap. vii.
20.
s Cant. v. 2.

v. 36—46. With ſacred reverence we are here called to approach the ſcene of the Redeemer's agony. The ſtorm of divine vengeance now aroſe, to diſcharge all its fury on him who bore our ſins and carried our ſorrows.

1. The place whither he retired was called Gethſemane, an olive-preſs; for there it pleaſed the Lord to bruiſe him and put him to grief. The companions he took with him were his diſciples, all but Judas; and, leaving the others at a diſtance, with an injunction to ſit there, He, with Peter, James, and John, retired into ſome more ſecluded part of the garden to pray. They who had ſeen his transfiguration are choſen to be witneſſes of his deepeſt humiliation.

2. There his agony began: the ſorrows of death compaſſed him about, and diſtreſs and conſternation unutterable ſeized upon his ſoul. The words in the original are moſt emphatical, expreſſive of the heavieſt load of grief, perplexity, dejection, and anguiſh. No outward cauſe appeared; the conflict was internal: the powers of darkneſs now rallied their once-defeated forces, and ſummoned up all their fury for this deciſive blow. The wrath of an offended God, due to the ſins of millions of mankind, all centred now on their Redeemer, and weighed him down under the intolerable burden. Death, with all its horrors of ignominy, ſhame, and torture, ſtood before him; and, worſe than ten thouſand deaths of the body, the pains of hell gat hold upon his ſoul, the wages of our iniquities.

3. In this diſtreſs he acquaints his diſciples with the ſorrows of his ſoul, that even now preſſed him down to the gates of death, and only would end entirely with his expiring breath: ſorrows ſuch as mortal never knew before, and perhaps beyond what even the damned ever felt. He enjoins them to tarry there and watch with him, obſerve his agony, and be on their guard againſt their own approaching temptations.

4. He humbly applies to him, whoſe terrors he ſuffered with a troubled mind. Being truly man, as well as God, he could not but wiſh for relief from pain, from pain ſo agoniſing, and therefore poured out ſtrong crying and tears, Heb. v. 7. He went a little further, that alone he might tread the winepreſs of the wrath of God, and there falling on his face, under a load of guilt and miſery to the humanity inſupportable, he poured out his complaints before his Father, O my Father, for with unſhaken faith he ſtill looked through the dark cloud; if it be poſſible, let this cup paſs from me; if, conſiſtent with the glory of the divine perfections and the redemption of his people, theſe torments may be alleviated or removed, his nature craves relief: nevertheleſs, if all I ſuffer is needful to glorify thee and to ſecure their ſalvation, I am all reſignation, I bow my neck, and ſay, Not as I will, but as thou wilt; his human will, with perfect acquieſcence, ſubmits to the divine. Note, (1.) In all our ſorrows it is good to make God our refuge, and in prayer to pour out our griefs into his compaſſionate boſom. (2.) Humble deſire to be delivered from our ſufferings is perfectly conſiſtent with the moſt unfeigned reſignation under them. (3.) Whether our troubles are removed or not, it is a ſure token for good when we can ſay, Not my will but thine be done.

5. Ariſing from the earth, he returned to his three diſciples, and lo! aſtoniſhing to tell, whilſt their maſter was agonizing they were aſleep. Oppreſſed with grief, their ſenſes were ſtupefied and their eyes cloſed: ſo weak and wretched is man, left for a moment to himſelf. But Chriſt rouſes them from their ſlumbers, and gently chides their diſobedience to his commands, and inattention to his ſufferings; and, directing his diſcourſe to Peter, who lately appeared ſo forward in his profeſſions of fidelity and zeal, he ſaid, What! is it poſſible! aſleep! and I overwhelmed with anguiſh. Could not ye, from whom I had ſuch expectations, and whoſe plighted vows of conſtancy till death promiſed other conduct, could ye not watch with me one hour? ſo ſhort the ſpace, ſo little difficult the command. Watch and pray; you have need to be awake, if not to ſympathize and join with me, at leaſt to guard yourſelves, that ye enter not into temptation, and by this ſloth and drowſineſs be expoſed to fall more eaſily, when the approaching hour of your temptation comes. Yet, whilſt he thus gently rebukes and admoniſhes, he alſo pities and kindly excuſes them, the ſpirit truly is willing; he knew their hearts were really attached to him, their love without diſſimulation, and that their deſire was to ſerve him; but the fleſh is weak; the corruptible body weighed down the ſoul, and the remaining corruption and indwelling evil hindred them from doing the things which they would; and he knew whereof they were made, forgave, and caſt the mantle of love over the failings he could not but condemn. Note, (1.) Slothfulneſs, and neglect of prayer, in time of temptation, are the ſure forerunners of a fall. We need always watch; but, when we are forewarned of danger near, we ſhould double our guard, and be more importunate at a throne of grace. (2.) Whilſt we dwell in theſe bodies of fleſh and corruption we ſhall find ſad warrings within, and they whoſe ſouls are moſt ſincere and ſenſible will groan moſt, being burdened with this body of ſin and death, and long to get rid of it. (3.) We have a compaſſionate High-prieſt, who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and will not withdraw his love from us when we fall under temptation, but in mercy will reſtore our ſouls to paths of righteouſneſs for his name's ſake.

6. Our Lord again retires, repeats his fervent ſupplications, and ſubmits to all his Father's will. Again he returns, and finds his diſciples ſleeping; their heavy eyelids were involuntarily cloſed, and all his remonſtrances were ineffectual to keep them awake and watchful. The third time he withdraws, redoubles his prayers, renews his ſelf-reſignation, and is heard: though the cup may not paſs from him, he is ſtrengthened to bear the load, and patiently to yield up his ſoul to God. Coming to his diſciples, ſtill they ſleep, and now he conſigns them to their repoſe, if they can or dare any longer indulge themſelves when his foes and theirs are now at hand. It is high time to awake when the traitor is ſo near. Ariſe, let us be going, not to flee from the ſufferings before him, but to meet them: ſince the hour, fixed in the divine decree, is come, Jeſus is prepared, and reſigns himſelf into the hands of his enemies. Note, (1.) Though we have not an immediate anſwer, we muſt pray and not faint. (2.) Repetition of the ſame requeſts in prayer is often far removed from the vain repetitions which our Lord condemns. Reiterated cries in the ſame words beſpeak the warmeſt importunity of deſire. (3.) When calls and warnings raiſe us not from ſpiritual ſlumbers, it is a mercy if Jeſus ſends heavier judgments, or corrections, to rouſe our ſluggiſh ſouls.

47. ¶ [t] And while he yet ſpake, lo, [u] Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him [x] a great multitude, with ſwords and ſtaves, from the chief prieſts and elders of the people. 48. Now he that betrayed him gave them a ſign, ſaying, Whomſoever I ſhall kiſs, that ſame is he, hold him faſt. 49. And forthwith he came to Jeſus, and ſaid, Hail, maſter; [y] and kiſſed him. 50. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, † Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they and laid hands on Jeſus, and [z] took him. 51. And behold, [a] one of them which were with Jeſus ſtretched out his hand, and drew his ſword, and ſtruck a ſervant of the high-prieſt's, and ſmote off his ear. 52. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, [b] Put up again thy ſword into his place: for [c] all they that take the ſword ſhall periſh with the ſword. 53. Thinkeſt thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and [d] he ſhall preſently give me more than twelve legions of angels? 54. But how then ſhall the ſcriptures be fulfilled, [e] that thus it muſt be? 55. In that

t Mark xiv.
43. Luke
xxii. 47.
John xviii. 3.
u Acts i. 16.
x Pſ. iii. 1.
y 2 Sam. xx.
9, 10.
† Gr. Companion.
Pſ. xli. 9.
& lv. 13.
z Lam. iv.
20. Acts ii.
23.
a John xviii.
10.
b Rom. xii.
19. 2 Cor.
x. 3.
c Gen. ix. 6.
Rev. xiii.
10. d 2 Kings
vi. 17.
e Pſ. xxii.
12, &c.
Iſa. liii. 7.
Dan. ix. 26.
Acts xxvi.
23.

that ſame hour ſaid Jeſus to the multitudes, Are ye come out as againſt a thief, with ſwords and ſtaves for to take me? I ſat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me. 56. But all this was done, [f] that the ſcriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled. [g] Then all the diſciples forſook him and fled.

v. 47—56. As the words dropped from his lips, his enemies appear to ſeize him.

1. Judas, who knew the place of his Maſter's retirement, led the way; one of the twelve, and lately dipping his band with him in the ſame diſh, now the guide to this ſavage band, compoſed of Roman ſoldiers, and the ſervants and officers of the chief prieſts, armed with ſwords and ſtaves, and under their authority pretending to ſeize Jeſus as a criminal. Thus, whilſt good men often ſleep, unappriſed of danger, the wicked are awake, and plotting their deſtruction. It is well for us that one is our Guardian who neither ſlumbers nor ſleeps.

2. He had given them a ſignal before they ſat out, leſt in the night they ſhould miſtake, by the glimmering of torches, the perſon of Jeſus; and this was, that whomſoever he ſhould kiſs, that was he, whom they ſhould ſeize and bind. Accordingly, with the moſt hardened impudence, he no ſooner deſcried his well-known Maſter's face, than he approached with the deepeſt profeſſions of reſpect and warmeſt good wiſhes, and with a kiſs executed his traiterous deſign. Well knowing his villainy, Jeſus rebukes his baſeneſs, and with the piercing title of Friend, that ſhould have ſpoke ten thouſand daggers to his heart, replies, Wherefore art thou come? how durſt thou be preſent? What! loſt to all ſhame? adding ſuch impudence to foul ingratitude? Note, The bittereſt enmity lurks often under the moſt plauſible profeſſions and apparent civilities.

3. Chriſt is immediately arreſted and bound as a malefactor. He quietly yielded up himſelf now his hour was come, and as a criminal ſubmitted to the arreſts of divine judgment for our tranſgreſſions. Though wicked men indeed meant only to gratify their malice, they fulfilled the determinate counſel of God, Acts ii. 23.

4. Peter, fired with zeal at what he ſaw, inſtantly drew his ſword, and, attempting a reſcue, ſtruck at one of the high-prieſt's ſervants, who probably appeared very active on that occaſion, and cut off his ear. His zeal in itſelf was commendable; but this exertion of it was neither enjoined, nor diſcreet; and therefore,

5. Chriſt rebuked him for his raſhneſs, and bid him ſheath his ſword; for they that take the ſword ſhall periſh with the ſword. Reſiſtance at preſent only expoſed them to uſeleſs danger; but, ere long, they would ſee thoſe who arreſted their Maſter fall by the ſword of the Romans, or in ſome civil tumult as their own executioners. As for them, the weapons of their warfare were not carnal, but ſpiritual; patience and prayer were their beſt defence. Beſides, Chriſt neither needed their help nor choſe to be reſcued; if he had, effectual ſuccours were even now at hand; more than twelve legions of angels, upwards of ſeventy thouſand, were ready to appear, one of the leaſt of whom could deſtroy a world. He had only to aſk his Father, and theſe miniſters of flame would attend his orders; but how then ſhould the ſcriptures be fulfilled, that thus it muſt be? and their accompliſhment, wherein alſo was involved the ſalvation of his people, was far dearer to him than his own ſafety. It muſt be that he ſhould ſuffer, that he might redeem; and therefore he willingly reſigned himſelf as a lamb to the ſlaughter, Iſa. liii. 7. Note, (1.) God wants not our ſervices: we miſtake, when we think our feeble arm of importance to his cauſe. (2.) Chriſt's ſufferings were voluntary: he might, whenever he pleaſed, have been releaſed; but his love to ſinful ſouls bound him ſtronger than the cords of his perſecutors. (3.) Surrounded as the people of God are with enemies, ſtill more and mightier are thoſe which are for them than all who can be againſt them; the innumerable company of angels is their guard, and miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation.

6. Chriſt turns from his diſciples to the multitude, and mildly expoſtulates with them on their preſent conduct. What uſe was there in all this armed hoſt? had he behaved as a deſperate villain, who needed ſuch force to overcome him? or had he fled from public juſtice, that at midnight, in this clandeſtine manner, they ſought to arreſt him? The gentleneſs and innocence of all his conduct confuted the one, and his public daily appearance in the temple the other: but the Scripture muſt be fulfilled, and God's eternal counſels thus receive their accompliſhment. Note, They who are the moſt inveterate enemies of Chriſt and his church, are only inſtruments in God's hand, whoſe very wickedneſs he over-rules to bring about the counſels of his own will.

7. His diſciples hereupon ſhamefully deſerted him, and fled. Seeing him paſſively ſubmit, fearing leſt Peter's raſh action ſhould exaſperate the guard, and that they ſhould be murdered, or ſeized with their Maſter, each endeavoured to ſhift for himſelf, and left him alone to bear his burdens. Their baſeneſs and ingratitude herein were highly criminal: but thus it became him to tread the winepreſs alone.

57. ¶ [h] And they that had laid hold on Jeſus led him away to Caiaphas the high-prieſt, [i] where the ſcribes and the elders were aſſembled. 58. But Peter followed him afar off unto the high-prieſt's palace, and went in, and ſat with the ſervants to ſee the end. 59. Now the chief prieſts and elders, and all the council, [k] ſought falſe witneſs againſt Jeſus to put him to death, 60. But found none: yea, though many falſe witneſſes came, yet found they none. At the laſt came two falſe witneſſes, 61. And ſaid, This fellow ſaid, [l] I am able to deſtroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days. 62. And the high-prieſt aroſe, and ſaid unto him, Anſwereſt thou nothing? what is it which theſe witneſs againſt thee? 63. But Jeſus [m] held his peace. And the high-prieſt anſwered and ſaid unto him, [n] I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Chriſt the Son of God. 64. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Thou haſt ſaid: nevertheleſs I ſay unto you, [o] Hereafter ſhall ye ſee the Son of man ſitting on the right hand of power, and [p] coming in the clouds of heaven. 65. [q] Then the high-prieſt rent his clothes, ſaying, He hath ſpoken blaſphemy; what further need have we of witneſſes? behold, now ye have heard his blaſphemy. 66. What think ye? They anſwered and ſaid, [r] He is guilty of death. 67. [s] Then did they ſpit in his face, and buffeted him, and [t] others ſmote him with † the palms of their hands, 68. Saying, Propheſy unto us, thou Chriſt, who is he that ſmote thee?

v. 57—68. Our Lord, being ſeized as a malefactor, is dragged before the rulers, and his proceſs begun.

1. His judges were his inveterate perſecutors, the chief prieſts, ſcribes, and elders, who, though in the dead of night, waked to do him miſchief, and were now aſſembled at the palace of Caiaphas the high-prieſt. Before this confederacy of treacherous men was he preſented as a criminal, whilſt they ſat in judgment upon him. The lamb of God, now about to be offered for the ſins of the world, was thus preſented to the prieſt, ſee Lev. xvii. 5. before he bled on the altar.

2. Peter, whoſe fright began a little to abate, ſollicitous about his maſter's fate, followed at a diſtance the croud, and, mingling with the ſervants in the hall, thought he might, unnoticed there, hear the iſſue of the trial, and ſee whether Chriſt would deliver himſelf by ſome miraculous act of power, or what puniſhment they would inflict upon him. Thus, without a call, having thruſt himſelf into temptation, he could not expect divine ſupport; and his cowardly hypocriſy, of appearing among the croud as one of thoſe who had been employed to ſeize the priſoner, foreboded no good. For they who are aſhamed to be known as Chriſt's diſciples, if brought to the trial, will, like Peter, ſolemnly diſown him.

3. Having brought Chriſt to their bar, and previouſly determined his condemnation, the queſtion was, where to procure evidence to furniſh them with a pretext for putting him to death; nothing leſs than his blood being able to ſatiſfy his merciIeſs and unjuſt judges: but though they endeavoured to procure accuſations, and ſuborn witneſſes againſt him, yet the falſehoods they advanced were ſo palpable and inconſiſtent, that they carried their own confutation, and even before ſuch partial judges could not furniſh the ſhadow of a crime. At laſt two falſe witneſſes appeared, and with virulence and inſolence alledged they had heard him ſay, I am able to deſtroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days. He had ſaid no ſuch thing. His words were, Deſtroy ye this temple, not that made with hands, as they added, Mark xiv. 58. but the temple of his body, John ii. 21. and his raiſing it up referred to his own reſurrection, not the rebuilding of the material houſe of God. But by ſuch a falſe quotation they meant to accuſe him as an enemy to the holy place, and a blaſphemer againſt God, as well as one that dealt in magic, from his preſuming to ſay he could raiſe ſuch a building in three days. A far-fetched accuſation indeed! and too weak to ſupport the bloody ſentence they deſired to ground thereon. Note, If falſe witneſſes roſe up againſt the innocent Jeſus, laying to his charge things he knew not of, let it not appear ſtrange if we meet with the like injurious treatment. The diſciple is not above his Maſter.

4. Unable longer to retain his rage, the high-prieſt in a fury aroſe, vexed to be able to produce no more plauſible an accuſation; and out of all patience to behold the meekneſs and ſilence of Jeſus, dumb as the ſheep before her ſhearers, Iſa. liii. 7. he bids him make his defence inſtantly, if he had ought to ſay why ſentence ſhould not paſs upon him. But Jeſus held his peace. He knew their deſigns, and that the cleareſt evidence of innocence would weigh nothing before ſuch judges. The high-prieſt hereupon adjures and commands him upon oath to anſwer whether he were indeed the Meſſiah, God's eternal Son, or not, that from his own mouth they might obtain a charge againſt him which they ſought for from other witneſſes in vain. Note,

[f] Lam. iv. 20.
[g] Pſ. xxxviii. 11. Iſa. lxiii. 3, 5.

[h] Mark xiv. 53. Luke xxii. 54. John xviii. 12, 24.
[i] Pſ. xxii. 16.
[k] 1 Kings xxi. 13. Pſ. xxvii. 12. & xxxv. 11.
[l] Chap. xxvii. 40. John ii. 19.
[m] Pſ. xxxviii. 13. Iſa. liii. 7. Chap. xxvii. 12, 14.
[n] Lev. v. 1.
[o] Dan. vii. 13. Chap. xvi. 27. & xxiv. 30. Rom. xiv. 10.
[p] Pſ. cx. 1. Rev. i. 7.
[q] 2 Kings xviii. 37.
[r] Lev. xxiv. 16. John xix. 7.
[s] Iſa. l. 6. Chap. xxvii. 30.
[t] John xix 3.
† Or Rods.

The ſilence of Jeſus ſhould teach us meekneſs before our bittereſt perſecutors.

5. To this ſolemn interrogatory Jeſus makes a direct reply. He was appriſed of their captious deſign; but his hour was come; therefore he profeſſes himſelf to be that very Meſſiah concerning whom the high-prieſt ſpoke, though he knew the diſdain with which they would treat his claim: nevertheleſs he made it before them all. And ſince they would admit no preſent proof of it, he would give them one hereafter, which ſhould aſtoniſh them, Ye ſhall ſee the Son of man ſitting at the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. Which would be fulfilled in the effuſion of his Spirit after his aſcenſion, in the ruin of their ſtate and nation, and moſt eminently in the great day of his appearing and glory, when they, who now ſat as his judges, muſt ſtand as criminals at his bar, and periſh under his righteous vengeance. Note, Impenitent ſinners will one day be convinced, when it is too late, of the eternal ruin they have brought upon their heads by rejecting the Lord's Chriſt.

6. Pretending to be ſhocked at ſuch blaſphemy, in token of his abhorrence, the high-prieſt rent his clothes; and, appealing to the council for the evidence of the crime, now clear from the confeſſion of Jeſus, preſumes further witneſſes to be needleſs: and all concurred in the opinion that he deſerved to die as a blaſphemer, for arrogating to himſelf divine power and honours. Thus was he condemned, though innocent, that we might be acquitted, though guilty.

7. No ſooner was he thus unjuſtly condemned, than they began to treat him with all manner of indignities: ſome of the company, or the officers and ſervants, ſpat on his face, in token of deteſtation and contempt; beat and buffeted him with the palms of their hands, or with rods; and in ridicule of his prophetic character, having blindfolded his eyes, bid him tell who ſmote him. To ſuch inſult and ſuffering did the holy Jeſus ſubmit for our ſakes: he hid not his face from ſhame and ſpitting, that our faces might not be covered with everlaſting ſhame and contempt; he was bruiſed for our iniquities, that we might not be cruſhed for ever under the wrath of God. If we then, for his ſake, are rendered contemptible, ridiculed and mocked by wicked men, let it be remembered how much more he bore for us; and let us never be aſhamed of his reproach.

69. ¶ [u] Now Peter [x] ſat without in the palace: and a damſel came unto him, ſaying, Thou alſo waſt with Jeſus of Galilee. 70. But he denied before them all, ſaying, I know not what thou ſayeſt. 71. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid ſaw him, and ſaid unto them that were there, This fellow was alſo with Jeſus of Nazareth. 72. And again he denied with an oath, [y] I do not know the man. 73. And after a while came unto him them that ſtood by, and ſaid to Peter, Surely thou alſo art one of them, for [z] thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee. 74. Then began he to curſe and to ſwear, ſaying, I know not the man. And immediately the cock crew. 75. And Peter remembered [a] the words of Jeſus, which ſaid unto him, Before the cock crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice. And [b] he went out, and [c] wept bitterly.

[u] Mark xiv. 60. Luke xxii. 55. John xviii. 16, 25.
[x] Pſ. i. 1. & cxix. 115.
[y] Chap. xvi. 16. Ver. 33, 35.
[z] Luke xxii. 59.
[a] Ver. 34.
[b] Ezek. vii. 16.
[c] Zech. xii. 10. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

v. 69—75. We have here the memorable event of Peter's fall and recovery. A warning to us never to be ſelf-confident, leſt we ſhould fall like him; nor, when fallen, however foully, to deſpair, ſince the ſame door of hope is open for us.

1. His ſin, with all the aggravations of it, is faithfully recorded; and bleſſed be God for the ſimplicity of the ſacred hiſtorians. Had they, in their account of God's ſaints, like the hiſtories of human biographers, blazoned the excellencies and concealed the faults and infirmities of their worthies, how many a dear child of God would have wrote bitter things againſt his ſoul! Whilſt his Maſter was ſuffering within, Peter ſat with the ſervants without. In bad company no good can ever be expected; in the devil's palace we muſt not hope for protection; and, if we will aſſociate with the croud of his ſervants, the conſequence naturally follows, we muſt be like them, or be laughed at. (1.) The temptation came firſt from one of the ſervant-maids; for the weakeſt inſtrument in the devil's hands can do much miſchief. She ſhrewdly ſuſpected, perhaps by Peter's melancholy looks, that he was a diſciple of Jeſus; or ſhe had ſeen him formerly among Chriſt's attendants; and therefore charged him with her ſuſpicions. Peter, quite diſconcerted, ſhuffled out an anſwer, falſe, as he knew, and faithleſs, pretending not to underſtand her, and before them all denying the charge. Note, Many, who would heſitate at a direct lie, ſtick not at an evaſion; and will pretend not to underſtand what is ſaid, when, in truth, it is becauſe they are aſhamed of their profeſſion, and dare not avow their knowledge of Chriſt: which is moſt baſe, cowardly, and criminal. (2.) The ſecond temptation quickly followed, and from a ſimilar quarter. With infinite contempt of Peter's appearance, another maid-ſervant came up to him as he ſtood in the porch, perhaps meaning to ſteal off for fear of farther diſcovery, and, looking in his face, perfectly recollected his perſon among the followers of Jeſus, and confidently aſſerted before thoſe who ſtood by, that this fellow was certainly a diſciple of Jeſus the Nazarene: as if it was a reproach to admit ſuch a fellow into their company. With ſuch contempt and inſolence are the diſciples of Jeſus often treated by thoſe who know them not, becauſe they knew him not. To ſilence ſuch a ſuſpicion, he ſolemnly denies even his knowledge of the perſon of Jeſus, as if he had never ſeen him; and, to gain credit, backs his aſſertion with an oath; a ſhrewd proof of the falſehood he urged: for they juſtly are to be ſuſpected of making no conſcience of a lie, who make none of raſh oaths. (3.) A little while after, one who, perhaps excited by what had been ſuggeſted, marked Peter more narrowly, and was convinced by his provincial dialect and accent that he muſt be a Galilean, concluded certainly he was a follower of Jeſus, and aſſerted it to his face before the company, with this evident proof, thy ſpeech bewrayeth thee. Quite in a conſternation, and not knowing what to ſay or do, he thought with a reſolute air to carry it off; and, as in a paſſion at being ſuſpected of ſuch a thing, he began to curſe and to ſwear, affirming with moſt horrid imprecations, that he never had the leaſt knowledge or acquaintance with the man they mentioned, nor had ever before in his life ſeen him. He could not indeed have taken a more effectual way to prove he did not belong to Jeſus; his diſciples never uſed ſuch language. Note, (1.) One lie generally paves the way for another, and then perjury becomes needful to ſupport the falſehood. So dreadfully connected are the links of ſin. (2.) A real diſciple of Jeſus may ever be known by his diſcourſe; his ſpeech will indeed bewray him. (3.) Whilſt we look at ſuch a fearful fall, we ſhould tremble for ourſelves, and dread the firſt ſtep of deviation from the path of truth, leſt with Peter we ſhould be hurried down the precipice.

2. His recovery affords us as amazing an inſtance of divine grace as his fall hath done of human weakneſs and corruption. Immediately, as he ſpake, the cock crew, a ſound in Peter's ears more terrible than the burſt of loudeſt thunders: it inſtantly recalled to his memory what Jeſus had foretold, and he had moſt guiltily accompliſhed; his baſeneſs, ingratitude, profaneneſs, perjury, all ſtared him in the face, and overwhelmed him with confuſion. Unable to ſtay there a moment longer, he went out to give vent, in ſome retired corner, to the burſting anguiſh of his ſoul, and with tears of bittereſt ſorrow and unfeigned repentance bewailed his ſin, and found mercy with a pardoning God. Note, (1.) Nothing ſo deeply affects the truly gracious heart as the ſenſe of his ingratitude, and baſe returns for all the love of Jeſus to his ſinful ſoul. (2.) They who have never wept with Peter over their ſins, it is to be feared have never felt their bitterneſs. (3.) It is never too late to return to God. None periſh merely becauſe of the greatneſs of their ſins, but through their impenitence and unbelief.

C H A P. XXVII.

We have in this chapter the affecting ſtory of the ſufferings and death of our Saviour Chriſt, which are the only foundation of every fallen ſinner's hope. We have here, 1. The delivering of him to Pilate, ver. 1, 2. 2. The deſpair of Judas, ver. 3—10. 3. The arraignment and trial of Chriſt before Pilate, ver. 11—14. 4. The clamours of the people againſt him, ver. 15—25. 5. Sentence paſſed and executed upon him, ver. 26—33. 6. The indignities done him, and reproaches caſt upon him, ver. 34—44. 7. Many remarkable ſigns atended his death, ver. 45—56. 8. His burial, and the watch ſet on his grave, ver. 57—66.

1. WHEN the morning was come, [a] all the chief prieſts and elders of the people [b] took counſel againſt Jeſus to put him to death. 2. And when they had bound him, [c] they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor. 3. ¶ Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he ſaw that he was condemned, [d] repented himſelf, and brought again [e] the thirty pieces of ſilver to the chief-prieſts and elders, 4. Saying, I have ſinned, in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they ſaid, What is that to us? ſee thou to that. 5. And he caſt down the pieces of ſilver in the temple, and departed, and went and [f] hanged himſelf. 6. And the chief-prieſts took the ſilver pieces, and ſaid, It is not lawful for to put them into the treaſury, becauſe it is the price of blood. 7. And they took counſel, and bought with them the potters field to bury ſtrangers in. 8. Wherefore that field was called, [g] The field of blood unto this day. 9. (Then was fulfilled [h] that which was ſpoken by Jeremy the prophet, ſaying, And they took the thirty pieces of ſilver, the price of him that was valued, † whom they of the children of Iſrael did value: 10. And gave them for the potters field, as the Lord appointed me.)

[a] Mark xv. 1. Luke xxiii. 1. John xviii. 28.
[b] Pſ. ii. 2. Acts iv. 26.
[c] Iſa. liii. 7, 8.
[d] 2 Cor. vii. 10.
[e] Chap. xxvi. 15.
[f] Acts i. 18.
[g] Acts i. 19.
[h] Zech. xi. 12.
† Or Whom they bought of the children, &c.

v. 1—10. Though they had condemned the innocent Jeſus as worthy of death, they had not in their hands the power of capital puniſhments, and therefore muſt have him ſentenced by the Roman governor before they could proceed to execution, the ſceptre being now departed from Judah, and the country become a Roman province. Hereupon we are told,

1. On a ſecond counſel held in the morning, in order effectually to get their bloody purpoſes executed of putting him to death, they determined to accuſe him before Pilate, at that time the Roman preſident, as an infamous malefactor and incendiary; and accordingly, binding him as a criminal, they led him ignominiouſly through the ſtreets, from the houſe of Caiaphas to the governor's palace, and delivered him up, that ſentence might be pronounced upon him, and that he might die the death of the croſs, unwittingly fulfilling the predictions of Jeſus, chap. xx. 19.

2. Remorſe had by this time ſeized on the conſcience of Judas. When he ſaw that Jeſus was condemned, and ready to be executed, filled with horror, and agitated with ſelf-indignation, anguiſh, and deſpair, he ran to the temple, and there, in one of the chambers to which the council ſeems to have been adjourned, he brought the hated price of his wickedneſs, the thirty pieces of ſilver, and, publickly acknowledging the atrocious crime he had committed in betraying innocent blood, would have returned their wages of unrighteouſneſs. But they, inſtead of being ſtruck with conviction, treated his confeſſion with contempt. He had anſwered their ends; and as to the means employed, or the guilt he had incurred, they cared not about it; as if it was nothing to them that they had bribed him to commit the villainy, and were that moment perſecuting to death the innocent perſon he had betrayed. Made deſperate by ſuch neglect, and the unavailableneſs of this attempt to ſtop the proſecution of Jeſus, his life became a burden, and the devil urged him to put an end to it. Caſting down the abhorred ſilver in the temple before them, and, flying to ſome ſolitude, he immediately hung himſelf, by ſelf-murder finiſhing the meaſure of his iniquities. Note, (1.) The time will come when the ſweeteſt ſins will be turned into the poiſon of aſps. (2.) There is no repentance without reſtitution of ill-gotten gain, and taking ſhame to ourſelves before the accomplices of our guilt. (3.) When wicked men can bring the profeſſors of religion to join them, indifferent to the remorſe they afterwards behold in them, they only mock at the calamity, and at ſin the cauſe of it. (4.) The love of money hath been the fatal ſnare to many a ſoul: for this they have plunged themſelves into the gulph of perdition. (5.) Deſpair is among the greateſt crimes, and often ends in ſelf-murder, a remedy ſtill worſe than the diſeaſe. For the deepeſt guilt there is mercy to be hoped: but, when men fly from God to the devil for eaſe, they are undone for ever.

3. The money being left, they conſulted how to diſpoſe of it. Pretending conſcience, they would not put it into the temple treaſury, though probably it was taken from thence, becauſe it was the price of blood; and therefore, with the ſhew of great piety and humanity, laid it out to purchaſe a ſmall piece of ground which had been dug up by a potter, and was of little value, to bury ſtrangers or proſelytes: whereby they perpetuated their own infamy; the people, who knew what money made the purchaſe, calling it juſtly aceldama, or the field of blood. And herein they exactly fulfilled what the prophet had foretold, Zech. xi. 12, 13. The words are ſaid to be in Jeremy, though only found in Zechariah: concerning which there are many ways ſuggeſted to ſolve the difficulty. The moſt probable ſeems to be, either that, in the diviſion of the ſacred books, the laſt volume began with Jeremiah, and therefore, though containing all the later prophets, bore his name; or that Jeremiah had ſo prophecied firſt, but had not committed it to writing, and Zechariah confirmed and wrote it in his prophecy. The words, as they ſtand in the prophet, are, They weighed for my price thirty pieces of ſilver. And the Lord ſaid unto me, Caſt it to the potter; a goodly price that I was prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of ſilver and caſt them to the potter in the houſe of the Lord. Thus did they, who rejected the Meſſiah, fulfill all the prophecies concerning him. Note, (1.) They who are bitter perſecutors of God's people, ſtill ſtudy to maintain the character of piety and humanity among men. (2.) Chriſt's blood hath provided a reſting-place for poor ſinners after death. And though he was treated with ſuch contempt, and his price ſo low, we ſee in his humiliation peculiar glory; and the deeper his abaſement was, it renders him in the eyes of all that believe more precious.

11. [i] And Jeſus ſtood before the governor; and the governor aſked him, ſaying, Art thou the king of the Jews? And Jeſus ſaid unto him, [k] Thou ſayeſt. 12. And when he was accuſed of the chief prieſts and elders, [l] he anſwered nothing. 13. Then ſaith Pilate unto him, [m] Heareſt thou not how many things they witneſs againſt thee? 14. And he anſwered him to never a word, inſomuch that the governor marvelled greatly. 15. Now at that feaſt the governor was wont to releaſe unto the people a priſoner, whom they would. 16. And they had then [n] a notable priſoner, called Barabbas. 17. Therefore, when they were gathered together, Pilate ſaid unto them, Whom will ye that I releaſe unto you? Barabbas, or Jeſus, which is called Chriſt? 18. For he knew that [o] for envy they had delivered him. 19. ¶ When he was ſet down on the judgment-ſeat, his wife ſent unto him, ſaying, Have thou nothing to do with that juſt man: for [p] I have ſuffered many things this day in [q] a dream becauſe of him. 20. [r] But the chief prieſts and elders perſuaded the multitude that they ſhould aſk Barabbas, and deſtroy Jeſus. 21. The governor anſwered and ſaid unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I releaſe unto you? They ſaid, Barabbas. 22. Pilate ſaith unto them, What ſhall I do then with Jeſus, which is called Chriſt? They all ſay unto him, Let him be crucified. 23. And the governor ſaid, Why, what evil hath he done? But they cried out the more, ſaying, Let him be crucified. 24. ¶ When Pilate ſaw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, [s] he took water, and waſhed his hands before the multitude, ſaying, I am innocent of the blood of this juſt perſon: ſee ye to it. 25. Then anſwered all the people, and ſaid, [t] His blood be on us, and on our children.

[i] Mark xv. 2. Luke xxiii. 3. John xviii. 33.

[k] John xviii. 37. 1 Tim. i. 17.

[l] Chap. xxvi. 63.

[m] Chap. xxvi. 62.

[n] Luke xxiii. 19. John xviii. 40.

[o] Acts vii. 9.

[p] Dan. ii. 1. & iv. 5.

[q] Job xxxiii. 15, 16.

[r] Acts iii. 14.

[s] Deut. xxi. 6.

[t] Acts v. 28.

v. 11—25. Behold the Son of God a priſoner at a human bar, and He, to whom every knee muſt bow, and meet him as their eternal Judge, now appears as a criminal before Pilate: having condeſcended to bear our ſins, he ſubmits to ſuffer in our ſtead as a tranſgreſſor. We have,

1. The charge laid againſt him. Knowing the jealouſy of the Roman government, the chief prieſts, his accuſers, had ſuggeſted that, in aſſuming the character of the Meſſiah, he meant to raiſe an inſurrection, and make himſelf a king. Pilate therefore interrogated him on this head, whether he preſumed to arrogate the title of King of the Jews? and Jeſus acknowledged the charge; though he aſſumed no ſuch temporal dominion as they ſuggeſted; his kingdom was not of this world: ſee John xviii. 36. The chief prieſts and elders were hereupon very loud and clamorous in their accuſations, as if he was a perverter of the people, a ſower of ſedition, forbidding to give tribute to Ceſar, and affecting the ſovereignty of the country. To all which Jeſus, with aſtoniſhing patience, made no reply. What they ſaid was indeed notoriouſly falſe, as themſelves knew: but he wanted not to defend himſelf; his hour was come, and he ſtood prepared to anſwer the demands of divine juſtice, and to bear our ſins in his own body on the tree. Therefore, when Pilate urged him to reply to the charges, and clear himſelf of theſe accuſations, he obſerved a profound ſilence, to the great aſtoniſhment of the governor, who could not account for ſo unuſual a behaviour in a perſon whoſe life was at ſtake, and depended on that moment. Note, (1.) It hath been uſual with the enemies of the ſervants of Jeſus to dreſs them up ſo as to render them ſuſpected by the civil government, and to inſinuate ill deſigns againſt the ſtate, in order the more eaſily to oppreſs them. (2.) Silence is often the beſt anſwer to the accuſations of malice; and when we know our defence is ſure to be over-ruled, it is fruitleſs to contend.

2. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jeſus, and well knowing the motive of the virulence ſhewn againſt him by the chief prieſts, who were ſtung with envy at the excellence of his character, and the high reputation he held with many, which eclipſed their own, wiſhed for a pretext to releaſe him. And hereunto he was yet more induced by a meſſage from his wife, who juſt at that time, whilſt the trial was going on, ſent to entreat him to do nothing againſt that juſt man before him: for ſhe had that morning been terrified by a very uncommon dream concerning him, which bore ſtrong marks of a divine original; and therefore conjured him to diſcharge the priſoner, leſt he ſhould bring down the wrath of God upon himſelf and family by condemning the innocent. Therefore, as it was an eſtabliſhed cuſtom at that feaſt to gratify the people with the releaſe of any priſoner whom they choſe, Pilate thought he could not fail of ſucceeding by propoſing to the people their choice, whether of Barabbas or Jeſus. The infamous character of Barabbas, who for ſedition and murder, and other villanies, was held in greateſt deteſtation, left him no room to doubt that the people would prefer Jeſus, whom they had ſo lately uſhered with hoſannas into the city, and whoſe excellencies all muſt have ſeen. Note, (1.) God hath acceſs to the ſpirit, and can ſpeak to our ſouls when our ſenſes are locked up in deep repoſe. (2.) Sinners have ſometimes ſolemn warnings; but they are too apt to ſlight the heavenly admonition. (3.) The nearer and dearer any perſon is to us, the more are we obliged to watch over them for good.

3. The multitude, inſtigated by the craft of their wily prieſts, who repreſented Jeſus in every black and diabolical colour, engaged them to prefer Barabbas before him; and, to the aſtoniſhment of Pilate, they demanded the murderer, and rejected the Lord of life and glory: and, not content with this, when the governor, willing to releaſe Jeſus, enquired of them what they wiſhed he ſhould do with him whom many regarded as the Chriſt, or Meſſiah; they with one conſent cried out, Let him be crucified, a death the moſt painful, ignominious, and accurſed. Shocked at ſuch a demand, Pilate remonſtrates with them on the injuſtice and cruelty of ſuch an action, Why, what evil hath he done? On ſevereſt ſcrutiny, his judge could ſee no fault in him, his adverſaries prove none, nor did even the traitor ſuggeſt the ſhadow of a crime. A glorious teſtimony of the avowed innocence of Jeſus. But notwithſtanding, this tumultuous aſſembly, wrought up to a pitch of fury by their malignant prieſts and rulers, with louder cries demanded his crucifixion, determined to extort the governor's conſent, and bear down reaſon and juſtice with rage and clamour. Note, (1.) How little dependence is to be placed on popular applauſe. They who one day cried, Hoſanna to the Son of David, now cry, Crucify him, crucify him. (2.) The unſpotted innocency of the Lamb of God evidently ſhews, that he bore not his own ſins, but the ſins of others: he voluntarily ſubmitted to die as a criminal, that he, though juſt, might ſuffer the puniſhment due to the unjuſt, and thereby bring us unto God.

4. Pilate, unable to prevail with them, and not having reſolution to deny their requeſt, ſo importunately and clamorouſly urged, for fear of an uproar; yet conſcious of the innocence of Jeſus, and ſhocked at the thought of murdering a juſt man; bethought himſelf of a miſerable expedient to pacify his conſcience without diſobliging the people: and therefore, though yielding to their importunity, he proteſts againſt the fact; and, taking water before them all, he waſhed his hands, that by this ſignificative action he might appear clear from all the guilt which ſhould enſue, declaring himſelf innocent of this righteous blood; and therefore, ſince they compelled him to condemn the innocent, he lays it wholly upon them to anſwer for the crime before God and the world. An abſurd procedure indeed in a judge, whom nothing ſhould awe from the adminiſtration of impartial juſtice. And it but the more aggravated his guilt, thus avowedly to act againſt his own conſcience, and to do the very thing againſt which he proteſted. But ſuch contradictions muſt follow, where men's convictions are ſtrong, but their corruptions ſtronger.

5. They heſitate not to ſubject themſelves to all the conſequences which might enſue; and, ſince Pilate ſeemed ſcrupulous, they are very ready to quiet his conſcience by ſolemnly transferring all the guilt upon their own, madly imprecating on themſelves, and their lateſt poſterity, the vengeance, if any were due, His blood be on us, and on our children. So daring do preſumptuous ſinners grow: ſo little are they apprehenſive of the conſequences of their impiety. But theſe murderers ſoon found the vengeance they imprecated terribly lighting on their devoted heads in the utter deſtruction of themſelves and families; ſuch multitudes being crucified by Titus during the ſiege, that the croſſes ſtood ſo thick around the walls, that there was no more room for them; five hundred in a day thus miſerably expiring. And to this hour the effects of that imprecation are viſible upon this miſerable people; and will be, till, returning to the Lord whom they once rejected, the wrath ſhall be removed, and their iniquity be forgiven.

26. ¶ [u] Then releaſed he Barabbas unto them: and when he had ſcourged Jeſus, he delivered him to be crucified. 27. [x] Then the ſoldiers of the governor took Jeſus into the † common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of ſoldiers. 28. And they ſtripped him, and [y] put on him a ſcarlet robe. 29. ¶ And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, ſaying, Hail, King of the Jews. 30. And [z] they ſpit upon him, and took the reed, and ſmote him on the head. 31. And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and [a] led him away to crucify him. 32. And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his croſs.

[u] Mark xv. 15. Luke xxiii. 24.
[x] John xix. 1.
† Or Governor's houſe.
[y] Luke xxiii. 11.
[z] Iſa. l. 6. Chap. 26, 67.
[a] Chap. xxi. 39. Heb. xiii. 12.

v. 26—32. The matter being thus determined:

1. Pilate, having releaſed Barabbas, that moſt infamous criminal, delivered Jeſus over to their will, having firſt ſcourged him ſeverely, in hopes of moving their compaſſion, John xix. 1. but finding it all ineffectual, and that they were bent on his deſtruction, he appoints his immediate execution on the croſs, as they inſiſted. And herein we may obſerve, (1.) The fulfilment of the Scriptures, Pſ. cxxix. 3. Iſa. l. 6. liii. 5. where theſe ſtripes had been foretold. (2.) In the releaſe of Barabbas we have an emblem of our own deliverance through Jeſus Chriſt. As guilty are we as this notorious priſoner: we have robbed God of his glory, and often laboured to murder our own and others ſouls. For which we muſt all have periſhed without hope, had not our divine Subſtitute yielded up himſelf that we might go free, and that the chief of ſinners might find in him plenteous redemption. (3.) Bloody as the ſtripes of Jeſus appear, we need bleſs God for them, ſince by theſe ſtripes we are healed.

2. Being delivered into the hands of the inhuman ſoldiers, they dragged him into the common hall, and, to make themſelves merry in his miſeries, and in the view of the character he aſſumed as a king, they ſtripped off his cloaths, arrayed him in a ſcarlet robe in mockery, and platting a crown of thorns, in deriſion placed it on his head, giving him a reed, or hollow cane, for a ſceptre, and, gathering the whole band around him, they, with inſulting homage, bowed the knee, and addreſſed him with the deriding title of King of the Jews; whilſt ſome ſpit in his face in contempt of his majeſty, and others ſnatched the cane out of his hand and ſmote him on the head, that the thorns might wound the deeper his ſacred temples. With horror, indignation, and aſtoniſhment, whilſt we reflect on their wickedneſs, let ſome meaſure thereof be transferred to our own. They were but the inſtruments, we the cauſe, of all his torment. And when we ſee the innocent Lamb of God ſubmitting to theſe indignities, and look on that face, marred more than any man's, defiled with ſpitting, black with buffetings, and dyed with blood ſtreaming from his temples, what emotions of love and gratitude ſhould glow in our boſom towards him who endured ſuch things for us, that we might not be the mockery of devils, the ſcorn of angels, and abhorred of God?

3. Glutted with cruelty, and ſatiated with ſuch inhuman mirth, they ſtripped off his robes of mock majeſty, and put on him again his own ſeamleſs garment, the perquiſite of thoſe who ſhould be more immediately employed in his execution. Then, binding his croſs upon him, John xix. 17. they led him, as a lamb to the ſlaughter, a ſpectacle through the city, to ſuffer without the gate. But, it ſeems, wearied out with his ſufferings, his ſtrength failed him, and they were obliged to releaſe him of his load, leſt they ſhould be diſappointed of their cruelty in nailing him alive to the tree. Seizing on one who was paſſing by, known probably to have been a diſciple of Jeſus, and therefore treated with ſuch indignity, they compel him to bear the croſs after Chriſt to the place of execution. Note, Every faithful ſoul muſt expect his croſs, and be content to go to Jeſus without the camp, bearing his reproach.

33. [b] And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to ſay, a place of a ſkull, 34. ¶ [c] They gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall: and when he had taſted thereof, he would not drink. 35. And they crucified him, and parted his garments; caſting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was ſpoken by the prophet, [d] They parted my garments among them, and upon my veſture did they caſt lots. 36. And ſitting down, they watched him there: 37. And ſet up over his head, his accuſation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS. 38. Then were there [e] two thieves crucified with him: one on the right hand, and another on the left. 39. ¶ And they that paſſed by reviled him, [f] wagging their heads, 40. And ſaying, [g] Thou that deſtroyeſt the temple, and buildeſt it in three days, ſave thyſelf: [h] if thou be the ſon of God, come down from the croſs. 41. Likewiſe alſo the chief prieſts mocking him, with the ſcribes and elders, ſaid, 42. He ſaved others, himſelf he cannot ſave: If he be the King of Iſrael, let him now come down from the croſs, and we will believe him. 43. [i] He truſted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he ſaid, [k] I am the Son of God. 44. [l] The thieves alſo which were crucified with him, caſt the ſame in his teeth. 45. Now [m] from the ſixth hour there was darkneſs over all the † land unto the ninth hour. 46. And about the ninth hour Jeſus [n] cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Eli, Eli, lama ſabachthani? that is to ſay, [o] My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? 47. Some of them that ſtood there, when they heard that, ſaid, This man calleth for Elias. 48. And ſtraightway one of them ran, and took a ſpunge, and [p] filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink. 49. The reſt ſaid, Let be, let us ſee whether Elias will come to ſave him.

[b] Mark xv. 22. Luke xxiii. 33. John xix. 17.
[c] Pſ. lxix. 21.
[d] Pſ. xxii. 18.
[e] Iſa. liii. 12.
[f] Pſ. xxii. 7. & cix. 25. Lam. ii. 15.
[g] Chap. xxvi. 61. John ii. 19.
[h] Chap. xxvi. 63.
[i] Pſ. xxii. 8. Wiſd. ii. 18.
[k] Chap. xxvi. 64.
[l] Luke xxiii. 39, &c.
[m] Amos viii. 9.
† Gr. Earth.
[n] Heb. v. 7.
[o] Pſ. xxii. 1.
[p] Pſ. lxix. 12.

v. 33—49. We have here an account of the crucifixion of Jeſus.

1. The place where he ſuffered was called Golgotha, ſignifying the place of a ſkull; either from the form of the hill, or becauſe the malefactors executed there, were buried on the ſpot. Where death therefore erected his trophies, there Chriſt, who taſted death for every man, erected his croſs, that he might in triumph look down upon his vanquiſhed foe, as it was ſaid, O death, I will be thy deſtruction.

2. Before they nailed him to the tree, they offered him a bitter cup of vinegar mingled with gall, inſtead of the potion uſually given to malefactors to ſtupify their ſenſe of pain; ſtriving thus by every malicious contrivance to ſharpen his ſufferings, and make his death peculiarly bitter. He taſted it, but refuſed to drink. He wanted not to prolong his life, nor would do ought to diſcompoſe his mind, prepared to feel every miſery before him, and deſiring not to be excuſed the ſenſation of any one painful pang he muſt endure. The gall of that cup our ſins ſupplied; had he not atoned for them, we muſt eternally have drank to the dregs the cup of bitterneſs and trembling.

3. They crucified him, which was done by ſtretching the arms on the wood as it lay upon the ground, and nailing them; then they faſtened the feet to a piece of wood fixed to the body of the croſs, and lifting it up, ſtuck it faſt in a hole prepared to receive it, the ſhock of which diſlocated the bones of the criminal; and there hanging upon the nails, in convulſions and torments inexpreſſible, he expired. Thus did the Son of God humble himſelf to death, even the death of the croſs. Whilſt angels with wonder and amaze behold him, what ſentiments of tranſcendent admiration and love ſhould glow in our boſoms, when we ſee him dying on the accurſed tree, for us men and for our ſalvation?

4. As he was hung up naked to bear our ſhame, who by ſin had loſt the robe of innocence, the executioners divided his garments as their fee; and whilſt they ſat down and watched him, that no reſcue might be attempted, ſhould the people now relent, they caſt lots for his outer garment, which was without ſeam, and muſt have been ſpoiled if cut to pieces; thus in the moſt exact manner fulfilling the prophetic word, Pſ. xii. 18. They parted my garments among them, and upon my veſture did they caſt lots.

5. On the croſs a tablet was hung, importing the crime for which he ſuffered, as was uſual on theſe occaſions. But this beſpoke his honour, rather than reproach: This is Jeſus the King of the Jews. Such indeed he really was; and whatever intention they had who wrote it, God deſigned even here that a teſtimony ſhould be born to his Meſſiah.

6. Two thieves were crucified with him, and he placed in the midſt, as if to ſtamp the moſt indelible infamy upon him, as the vileſt of all malefactors. Thus was he numbered with tranſgreſſors, and with the wicked in his death. Though he had done no violence, yet, bearing the ſins of many, divine juſtice treated him as a criminal, and he died under the curſe of our iniquities.

7. On the croſs he endured the greateſt contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf.

[1.] From the common people, and paſſengers who went by as he hung on the tree. Unmoved at his ſufferings, unaffected with the aſtoniſhing patience wherewith he bore them, they vented their blaſphemies againſt him, wagging their heads, as inſulting over his miſeries, (Pſ. xxii. 8.) and triumphing in his torments; upbraiding him with his pretended ability of deſtroying the temple, and raiſing it in three days; and bidding him now put forth ſome of that power of which he boaſted, in coming down from the croſs to which he was nailed, and thus at leaſt prove the truth of the high pretenſions he made, as being the Son of God. Note, (1.) When a man is run down, and caſt out by the great and the rulers, every one is ready to join in the cry. (2.) If Chriſt was thus reviled and ridiculed, let us not think it ſtrange, if the mouth of the ungodly be opened upon us in bitter words.

[2.] From the chief prieſts, ſcribes, and elders. They came to feaſt their eyes with this ſight of miſery, and, inſtead of being at their devotions in the temple, (Lev. xxiii. 7.) meanly mixed with the rabble around the croſs, to gratify their malice, and ſpit their venom; mocking at him, and ſaying, He ſaved others, himſelf he cannot ſave. His preſent ſtate they ſuggeſt evidently proved the deluſion of the miracles to which he pretended, and the impoſſibility of his being the Saviour of the world; whereas in fact, the very reaſon why he cannot ſave himſelf, is becauſe it would not then be poſſible for him to ſave others, ſince on his ſufferings their ſalvation depended. As he aſſumed the honour of Iſrael's King, they upbraid him with his arrogance, and bid him exert his authority, and looſe himſelf from the croſs; then they profeſs they will believe in him, though, after what he had done, this was a mere ſubterfuge for their infidelity. Had he complied with their propoſals, they would inſtantly have found new objections, and would ſuppoſe ſome trick had been played, that he had never been nailed to the tree, as they afterwards evaded the evidence of his reſurrection, by the abſurd pretence that his diſciples ſtole away the body by night. Becauſe Jeſus had profeſſed ſuch unſhaken confidence in God, and claimed ſo near a relation to the Moſt High, they now bid him put it to the proof; intimating, that God's not delivering him in his diſtreſs, ſhewed him a deceiver; and whilſt they thus vilified him in the eyes of the people, they hurled a fiery arrow againſt the faith of the Redeemer, to terrify his innocent ſoul, as if there was no hope for him in his God, (Pſ. xxii. 8.) Unmoved the Saviour heard in ſilence their blaſphemies, and perſiſted patiently in accompliſhing his own glorious work. Note, (1.) Jeſus became a king by ſuffering the croſs; he went from thence to reign. Let us not forget then the way to his kingdom; if we ſuffer with him, we ſhall alſo reign with him. (2.) Many pretend want of evidence as a reaſon for their unbelief; but were Chriſt to indulge them with the grant of what themſelves propoſe, they would be as far from faith in him as ever. The fault is in the heart: they who believe not Moſes and the prophets, will be proof againſt every other method of conviction.

[3.] From the thieves who were crucified with him. Some ſuppoſe, that only one of them reviled him, (See Luke xxiii. 39.) and ſay this is a Hebrew way of ſpeaking, as if they were afraid of aſcribing too much to the ſovereign grace of God herein diſplayed. But I own I ſee no reaſon for doubting, that both at firſt joined in the ſame blaſphemy and abuſe; though one of them, ſtruck with the behaviour of Jeſus, and convinced of his own wickedneſs in this, as well as all his former conduct, afterwards caſt his eyes of faith on the expiring Saviour: and if ſo, this tended only to make the triumphs of boundleſs mercy, and the riches of the redemption of Jeſus, appear the more illuſtrious in his ſalvation.

8. A dreadful darkneſs now came on over all the land. The ſun miraculouſly withdrew his light, as if terrified to behold his Maker's agony, and teſtifying his abhorrence of ſuch tranſcendently atrocious wickedneſs; affording an emblem of that judicial blindneſs to which this devoted people were now abandoned. It might be intended alſo to repreſent the dreadful conflict with the rulers of the darkneſs of this world, which Jeſus maintained on the croſs, when by dying he deſtroyed him that had the power of death, that is the devil. And this eclipſe of the great luminary of heaven was alſo but a faint image of the darker eclipſe in the Redeemer's ſoul, when every chearing beam of conſolation was withdrawn, the light of his Father's countenance withheld, and a ſenſe of this dereliction, ariſing from the wrath of an offended God, compleated the meaſure of his ſufferings. Three ſuch hours had never paſſed ſince darkneſs was upon the face of the deep.

9. After a long and ſilent conflict, about the ninth hour, his agony being now at the ſummit, with a loud but lamentable voice Jeſus cried, Eli, Eli, lama ſabachthani? My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Strange accents from him whom God had repeatedly owned for his beloved Son, and in whom he had teſtified himſelf ſo well pleaſed! We never hear one complaint from theſe ſacred lips of all his inhuman treatment, or bodily torment; what he then felt was infinitely more inſupportable, and extorted this exceeding bitter cry. Not that the hypoſtatic union was diſſolved, or that there was any real abatement of the Father's love towards him; never did he as Mediator appear more amiable than now, when by the eternal Spirit he offered himſelf without ſpot unto God. But ſince he took upon himſelf all the ſins of his people, he was given for a while into the enemy's hands, and all the powers of hell let looſe upon him; every divine ſupport was withdrawn, and the terrors of wrath due from an offended God ſeized on his ſoul, and ſunk him in the loweſt deeps. Deſpair excepted, I queſtion much, whether the ſpirits of the damned have felt the wrath of God in this its utmoſt depth of bitterneſs: yet, though forſaken, firm and unſhaken Jeſus hangs faſt on God, and in this deepeſt dereliction ſtill can ſay, My God.

Laſtly, The by-ſtanders, whether wilfully or ignorantly miſtaking his words, ſaid he called for Elias, as if he wanted his help, and that it was too late for him to cry now. And hereupon one ran and filled a ſpunge with vinegar, and with a cane lifted it to his lips, which might be a ſuggeſtion of compaſſion, ſince his pains muſt have created intolerable thirſt; though uſually it is ſuppoſed to be done to mock and teaze him, and add to his anguiſh; whilſt the reſt deriding ſaid, Let be, let him alone; let us ſee whether Elias will come to ſave him, ſince he is to be the forerunner of the Meſſiah; but no ſuch help they preſume will be afforded him, alike abandoned by heaven and earth.

50. ¶ [q] Jeſus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, [r] yielded up the ghoſt. 51. And behold [s] the vail of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom; and the earth did quake, and the rocks rent, 52. And the graves were opened, and many bodies of ſaints which ſlept, aroſe, 53. And came out of the graves after his reſurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many. 54. Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jeſus, ſaw the earthquake, and thoſe things that were done, they feared greatly, ſaying, [t] Truly this was the Son of God. 55. And many women were there (beholding [t] afar off) [u] which followed Jeſus from Galilee, miniſtring unto him. 56. Among which was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James and Joſes, and the mother of Zebedee's children.

v. 50—56.

[q] Mark xv. 37. Luke xxiii. 46. John xix. 30.

[r] Heb. ix. 14.

[s] Exod. xxvi. 31. 2 Chron. iii. 14. Heb. x. 19.

[t] Pſ. lxxviii. 8. Nah. i. 6. Ver. 40.

[t] Pſ. xxxviii. 11.

[u] Luke viii. 2, 3.

v. 50—56. The conflict is now over, the victory compleat, ſin atoned for, Satan's head bruiſed, juſtice ſatisfied, death vanquiſhed, hell ſhut up, the kingdom of heaven opened for all believers, and all this by the death of Jeſus here recorded; concerning which we are told,

1. The manner in which he expired. Having finiſhed the work the Father had given him to do, he cried, not as a dying man, exhauſted and ſpent, but with a loud voice, the ſhout of victory over all his conquered foes, and thus in his full ſtrength yielded up the ghoſt; freely reſigned his ſoul into his Father's hands, and his body to death, the threatened wages of ſin, which he had conſented to bear. Thus fell the ſpiritual Sampſon, ſpoiling principalities and powers, and triumphing over them on his croſs. Thus died the great Redeemer, juſt at the time when the evening ſacrifice of the lamb was ſlain, the figure of him who in the evening of the world appeared to take away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.

2. The miracles which attended his death.

[1.] Behold, the vail of the temple was rent in twain, which ſeparated the holy of holies from the outer tabernacle, where the table of incenſe ſtood, and the golden candleſtick; and this at the very time probably when the prieſts were there miniſtring, and burning the ſacred incenſe before it. Whereby was ſignified, (1.) The abolition of the Moſaical ſervices, the darkneſs of that diſpenſation being now removed, and its myſteries unveiled; ſo that with open face we now behold the glory of the Lord. (2.) The demolition of the partition-wall between Jews and Gentiles, who are alike called into the fellowſhip of the goſpel, and partakers of the ſame privileges. (3.) The free acceſs which every ſinner hath to God; ſo that he may now come boldly to a throne of grace, and, when death ſhall rend the vail of fleſh, to a throne of glory, by that new and living way which Jeſus hath conſecrated for us through the vail, that is to ſay, his fleſh, Heb. iv. 16. x. 19, 20.

[2.] The earth did quake, and the rocks were rent by it; marks of God's wrath againſt theſe murderers, and of that fury he would pour out upon them, when their rocky hearts ſhould be broken in pieces. Hereby alſo was ſignified the deſtruction of Satan's kingdom, and the wondrous changes now about to be wrought in the world, when the moſt ſtout-hearted ſinners ſhould tremble before the Lord, and feel their ſouls rent with deepeſt conviction when led to look up to a crucified Jeſus.

[3.] The graves were opened, immediately by the earthquake, and many bodies of the ſaints which ſlept, aroſe, and came out of the graves after his reſurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many: a glorious proof of Chriſt's victory over death and the grave, and an aſſurance to all his ſaints of a joyful reſurrection.

Who theſe ſaints were, whether the patriarchs, or ſuch as had ſeen Chriſt in the fleſh; whether they kept their bodies, and aſcended with their Lord into glory, or afterwards returned into the ſtate of the dead; to whom they appeared; what they ſaid or did; theſe and the like enquiries, being matters of mere curioſity, the Holy Ghoſt hath not thought fit to reveal to us. All that is needful for us to know, is told us, and therein we ſhould thankfully acquieſce, not coveting to be wiſe above what is written.

3. The effect which the death of Chriſt and ſubſequent miracles had on the centurion and ſoldiers who kept guard at the place of execution. Though ſoldiers, ſavage and cruel; heathens, and ſtrangers to the true God, yea, the very perſons who had treated Jeſus with ſuch indignity; had dragged him to that place, and nailed him to the tree; theſe ſtrange ſights, the darkneſs, earthquake, and expiring cry of the Redeemer, filled them with conſternation. Their ſtout hearts trembled for fear, leſt they ſhould be ſwallowed up in righteous vengeance; and theſe amazing effects of divine power and interpoſition extorted from them that noble teſtimony to the Saviour's divine miſſion and character, Truly this was the Son of God.

4. To the honour of the weaker ſex, mention is made of ſeveral women, and three of their names are recorded, who, though the diſciples in general had forſaken their Maſter, and fled, continued their attendance in his laſt moments; and having followed Jeſus out of Galilee, and miniſtred to him of their ſubſtance, now ſtood afar off, perhaps not daring to approach nearer, and with broken hearts and floods of tears beheld and lamented their dying Lord, unable to miniſter to him either help or comfort. Note, (1.) The longer and the farther we have followed Chriſt, the more ſhould it engage us to cleave to him, even to the end. (2.) They who love the Lord Jeſus in their hearts, will be happy to employ their ſubſtance in his ſervice.

57. [x] When the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathea, named Joſeph, who alſo himſelf was Jeſus's diſciple; 58. He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jeſus: then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered. 59. And when Joſeph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, 60. And laid it [y] in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock: and he rolled a great ſtone to the door of the ſepulchre, and departed. 61. And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, ſitting over-againſt the ſepulchre. 62. ¶ Now the next day that followed the day of the preparation, the chief prieſts and Phariſees came together unto Pilate, 63. Saying, Sir, We remember that that deceiver ſaid, while he was yet alive, [z] After three days I will riſe again. 64. [a] Command therefore that the ſepulchre be made ſure until the third day, leſt his diſciples come by night, and ſteal him away, and ſay unto the people, He is riſen from the dead: ſo the laſt error ſhall be worſe than the firſt. 65. Pilate ſaid unto them, Ye have a † watch, go your way; make it as ſure as you can. 66. So they went and made the ſepulchre ſure, [b] ſealing the ſtone, and ſetting a watch.

[x] Mark xv. 42. Luke xxiii. 50. John xix. 38.

[y] Iſa. liii. 9.

[z] Chap. xvi. 21. & xvii. 23. & xx. 19.

[a] Pſ. xli. 8.

† Or guard.

[b] Dan. vi. 17.

v. 57—66. It was foretold, that the Meſſiah ſhould make his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death; and we here ſee it fulfilled in the honourable interment given him by Joſeph of Arimathea, after he had died as a malefactor, and ſuffered in our ſtead the wages of ſin. Several circumſtances concerning this burial are here taken notice of.

1. The time. The evening of the day on which he ſuffered, which was Friday, ſome time before the Jewiſh ſabbath commenced.

2. The perſon who charged himſelf with the care of the burial. Joſeph of Arimathea, a man of wealth and diſtinction, one of the Sanhedrim, and a ſecret diſciple of Jeſus, though through fear he had not publicly avowed it; but now, when Chriſt ſeemed deſerted of all, he dared ſtep forth, boldly went in to Pilate, and begged the corpſe, that he might inter it with due reſpect, which was granted immediately, and an order ſent to deliver the body to him. Note, (1.) There are more ſecret diſciples than we are often aware of. (2.) The poſſeſſion of worldly wealth and honour is uſually a grievous check to the faithful and open profeſſion of Jeſus and his cauſe. (3.) In times of trial, when the boldeſt are ready to ſhrink, we ſometimes ſee thoſe who were ſcarce numbered among diſciples before, come forth with unexpected courage and fidelity, and make a noble confeſſion before many witneſſes.

3. The manner of it. He took down the body from the croſs, and wrapped it in clean linnen, according to the cuſtom of the Jews; and he himſelf attended, and performed theſe laſt kind offices to his dear Maſter.

4. The place where Joſeph laid the corpſe. In his own new tomb, hewn out in a rock, and cloſed with a great ſtone at the mouth; which when Joſeph had done, he departed in ſilent ſorrow to bewail his loſs. So Divine providence ordered the circumſtances, that none having lain there before, there could be no doubt, when Chriſt aroſe, concerning the perſon; and the ſolid rock out of which the ſepulchre was hewn, prevented the poſſibility of ſuſpicion of any ſecret acceſs to the body, except by the entrance, and that was ſufficiently guarded. Note, (1.) He who when alive had not a houſe to cover his head, when dead, wanted a grave: ſo deſtitute was the Lord of glory; who then after him dares complain? (2.) Since Jeſus hath lain in the grave, he hath perfumed the noiſome abode; and in this bed of duſt, as the phœnix in her fabled neſt, we now lie down, only to riſe in brighter array, and take our flight to manſions of eternal glory.

5. The care Chriſt's enemies took to have the ſepulchre ſecured. The chief prieſts and Phariſees, who were ſuch ſcrupulous obſervers of the ſabbath, had not patience to wait the evening till it was over, but aſſembled, and went in a body to Pilate, to petition him for a guard, in order to ſecure the body againſt the following day, becauſe they ſuggeſt, that Jeſus, that deceiver, (ſo do they call him who is the truth itſelf) had ſaid, while he was yet alive, ſo that they admit he was now certainly dead, After three days I will riſe again. We find not indeed he had ever expreſsly ſaid ſo to them; and if they founded their ſuggeſtion upon what they had heard, (John ii. 19.) then their own barefaced wickedneſs was yet more evident, ſince on this very paſſage, which they applied to the temple, they formed great part of their accuſation againſt him. Pretending therefore to fear, leſt his diſciples ſhould come by night, and ſteal him away, and ſay he is riſen, they deſire to be furniſhed with a band of ſoldiers, to prevent all ſuch attempts; leſt, if ſuch a trick ſhould be played, the conſequences of this laſt error, in not properly guarding the ſepulchre, ſhould be worſe than the firſt, in ſuffering him to preach and live ſo long; for ſhould this be once believed, the character of Jeſus would then be eſtabliſhed, and his doctrines ſpread with greater rapidity than ever. Pilate readily gratified them in granting their requeſt, though no doubt he regarded their fears as abſurd and ridiculous, and preſumed they had little now to apprehend from a dead man. They had a body of ſoldiers in the tower of Antonia, for the ſervice of the temple, and he permits them to detach what number they pleaſed to guard the ſepulchre, and to uſe every other method to make the place as ſure as they could. Nor did they fail to take every ſtep to prevent the poſſibility of an impoſture; ſetting a guard of ſoldiers, in whom they could confide, to watch the body that night, and ſealing the ſtone with the public ſeal, either of Pilate or the Sanhedrim, that none might preſume to enter, till the next day they ſhould return themſelves, and producing the dead corpſe undeceive the people, and detect the impoſtor. Thus by the gracious providence of God was every circumſtance ſo ordered, reſpecting the reſurrection of Jeſus, that our faith in that grand event might have the moſt unſhaken grounds of evidence indiſputable, and be more ſtrongly confirmed by all the methods his enemies took to guard the body from the poſſibility of being clandeſtinely removed. Indeed it can ſcarce be ſuppoſed, that his diſciples, who all ſo baſely forſook him and fled when he was alive, would ever return to ſteal him away when he was dead: and they could have no end to anſwer by it; for to endeavour, by ſaying he was riſen, to impoſe on the people, would be inconceivable madneſs and folly in them, ſince they muſt thereby expoſe themſelves to every ſuffering for their teſtimony, and be of all men the moſt miſerable in this world; conſcious of dying with a lye in their right hand, and having no hope in the next. But had they deſired or deſigned to execute ſuch a ſcheme, they muſt have been now effectually prevented. In the face of a body of armed ſoldiers, placed as centinels on the ſepulchre, and whoſe lives depended upon their watchfulneſs, to ſuppoſe they would ever have attempted to break the public ſeal, roll back a ponderous ſtone, deſcend into the tomb, and carry off the body by ſtealth, is an abſurdity too glaring to be conceived. So far as human, as diabolical power could go, Chriſt's enemies went; but counſel and might are alike vain againſt the Lord. They who oppoſe his kingdom, will find their attempts not only baffled, but turned to their own confuſion; their guilt but the more aggravated, and their eternal ruin more dreadful.

CHAP. XXVIII.

We left the Lord of life the priſoner of death. The third day arrives; death's bands are looſed; he leads his captivity captive. The Lord is riſen indeed. We have here ſome of the evidences of that ſignal event. 1. The teſtimony of the angel, ver. 1—8. 2. His appearance himſelf to the women, ver. 9, 10. 3. The confeſſion of the adverſaries that were upon the guard, ver. 11—15. 4. Chriſt's appearance to the diſciples in Galilee, and the commiſſion he gave them, ver. 16—20.

1. [a] IN the end of the ſabbath, as it began to dawn towards the firſt day of the week, came Mary Magdalene, and [b] the other Mary, to ſee the ſepulchre. 2. And behold, there † was a great earthquake; for the angel of the Lord deſcended from heaven, and came and rolled back the ſtone from the door, and ſat upon it. 3. [c] His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as ſnow. 4. And [d] for fear of him the keepers did ſhake, and became as dead men. 5. And the angel anſwered and ſaid unto the women, Fear not ye: for I know that ye ſeek Jeſus which was crucified. 6. He is not here: for he is riſen, [e] as he ſaid: Come, ſee the place where the Lord lay. 7. And go quickly, and tell his diſciples that he is riſen from the dead; and behold, [f] he goeth before you into Galilee, there [g] ſhall ye ſee him, lo, I have told you. 8. And they departed quickly from the ſepulchre [h] with fear, and great joy, and did run to bring his diſciples word. 9. ¶ And as they went to tell his diſciples, behold, Jeſus met them, ſaying, All hail. And they came and [i] held him by the feet, and worſhipped him. 10. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell [k] my brethren, that [l] they go into Galilee, and there ſhall they ſee me.

[a] Mark xvi. 2. Luke xxiv. 1. John xx. 1.
[b] Chap. xxvii. 56.
† Or had been.
[c] Dan. x. 6.
[d] Pſ. cxliv. 6. Iſa. xxxiii. 14.
[e] Chap. xii. 40. & xvi. 21. & xvii. 23. & xx. 19.
[f] Chap. xxvi. 32. Ver. 10.
[g] Acts i. 3. & x. 41.
[h] Pſ. ii. 11.
[i] Cant. iii. 4.
[k] John xx. 17. Heb. ii. 11.
[l] Ver. 7.

v. 1—10. The reſurrection of Jeſus being the grand hinge on which our hope of ſalvation turns, it muſt afford the moſt ſingular ſatisfaction to obſerve the amazing force of evidence wherewith this glorious event is atteſted. Had he ſtill lain in the grave, and had death maintained his dominion over him, our faith had been vain, and we muſt have periſhed in our ſins: but, glory be to God, he hath raiſed up Jeſus from the dead, and hath thereby begotten us to a new and lively hope. Some teſtimonies of this fact are here produced; many more will be found in the other Evangeliſts. We have,

1. The viſit made to the ſepulchre by thoſe holy women who had attended Jeſus to the croſs and to the grave, even Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James; and they came now to ſee the ſepulchre, if it was as they left it, bringing ſpices to embalm the body; this was in the end of the ſabbath, as it began to dawn towards the firſt day of the week. Chriſt had lain in the grave part of our Friday, all Saturday, which was the Jewiſh ſabbath, and on the Sunday morning, the third day, very early, probably about four o'clock, he aroſe, after dwelling among the dead about ſix and thirty hours; long enough to ſhew his death real, yet not ſo long as that his body ſhould ſee corruption, Pſ. xvi. 10.

2. As they went, and talked about the difficulty of removing the ſtone at the mouth of the ſepulchre, which ſeems to have been more ponderous than they could roll away, behold! to their aſtoniſhment, there was a great earthquake, which, had the guards indeed ſlept, muſt needs have rouſed them; for the angel of the Lord deſcended from heaven, as the officer of the Moſt High, ſent to releaſe from the arreſts of death the body of the Redeemer: the immenſe debt of our ſins being now paid and cancelled, and the juſtice of God ſatisfied, the ſurety by right became entitled to his diſcharge. Therefore he came and rolled back the ſtone from the door, thus opening the priſon, whilſt Jeſus, as our repreſentative, aroſe for our juſtification, as he had been delivered for our offences; and the angel ſat upon it, defying all the powers of earth or hell to roll it on again; waiting there to welcome the poor women who were on their way, and ſtriking terror and diſmay into the ſtout-hearted ſoldiers. His countenance was bright as the lightning, and his raiment white as ſnow, the emblem of purity and victory. Trembling in every limb, the guards ſhook like the earth which rocked under their feet, and, pale as death, with haſte fled from the tremendous preſence of this angelic miniſter.

The other Evangeliſts mention two angels: one ſat on the ſtone without, and invited and led the women into the ſepulchre, where they found another; the one of which ſtood at the feet, and the other at the head of the grave, where the body had lain.

3. The women being come to the ſepulchre, were at firſt affrighted at the ſight, (Mark xvi. 5.) but the angel kindly accoſting them, endeavoured to ſilence their fears. Fear not ye; whatever terrors ſeize the ſinners in Zion, the redeemed of the Lord need not tremble; for I know that ye ſeek Jeſus that was crucified, and they who ſeek a crucified Jeſus, have nothing to fear; have every thing to hope: none ever ſought his face in vain. He is not here, that you ſhould any longer bedew his corpſe with tears: no; he is riſen for your everlaſting comfort, as he ſaid he ſhould, on the third day. Then graciouſly inviting them to come and ſee the place where the Lord lay, that they might be convinced he was not there, he probably led the way into the ſepulchre, whither they followed him, and ſaw the other angel, mentioned John xx. 12. And hereupon the angel diſmiſſes them with a meſſage to the diſconſolate diſciples; Go quickly, and be the meſſengers of this glad news; tell his diſciples, now dejected and deſpairing, he is riſen from the dead, to their ſurprize and joy; and behold, for the confirmation of your own faith and theirs, he goeth before you into Galilee, where you and they muſt follow him, and there ſhall ye ſee him, converſe with him, and receive the fulleſt aſſurance of his reſurrection. Lo! I have told you; remember to deliver theſe tidings, and be aſſured of the truth of what I have ſpoken.

4. Agitated with ſurprize and joy at what they had ſeen and heard, and eager to communicate the glad news, they ran to the diſciples; and in the way Jeſus himſelf met them, and with kindeſt ſalutation accoſted them, All hail, all peace, happineſs, and joy be with you! With lowlieſt reverence they caſt themſelves inſtantly at his feet, and in a tranſport of love embraced them, adoring him as their riſen Lord and Saviour. Then Jeſus, further to confirm their hearts, and remove every fear, bids them not be afraid; they need apprehend neither danger nor deluſion, but muſt deliver the meſſage his angel had put into their mouths. Go tell my brethren; by ſuch an endearing name was he pleaſed to diſtinguiſh his diſciples; that they go into Galilee, and there ſhall they ſee me. Note, (1.) Chriſt is not aſhamed to call his ſervants brethren; yea, though their unfaithfulneſs hath made them unworthy of ſuch a relation, he will not diſown them. (2.) Faith in a riſen Redeemer effectually ſilences a ſinner's fears: in him we ſee the great ſalvation accompliſhed, and are filled with joy and peace in believing.

11. ¶ Now when they were going, behold, ſome of the watch came into the city, and ſhewed unto the chief prieſts all the things that were done. 12. And when they were aſſembled with the elders, and had taken counſel, they gave large money unto the ſoldiers, 13. Saying, Say ye, His diſciples came by night, and ſtole him away while we ſlept. 14. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will perſuade him, and [m] ſecure you. 15. [n] So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this ſaying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

[m] Acts xii. 19.
[n] 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.

v. 11—15. The reſurrection of Jeſus is proved by a cloud of unexceptionable witneſſes, among whom his very enemies held a diſtinguiſhed place.

1. The guard who had fled, had juſt reached the city as the women were on their return thither; and ſome of them, probably the officers who commanded the detachment, went directly to the chief prieſts; and to their aſtoniſhment related all that had paſſed; the earthquake, the deſcent of the angel, the removal of the ſtone, and the riſing of Jeſus; and if any thing could ever have ſhocked their obdurate hearts, one ſhould conceive the report of ſuch inconteſtible eye-witneſſes of the fact would have convinced them of their wickedneſs, and turned them to the Lord. But they were determined in impenitence and unbelief, and therefore given up to a reprobate mind. Hereupon,

2. The chief prieſts and elders conſulted together, and reſolved to ſupport what they had done at all events, and therefore to invent the moſt plauſible pretext to evade the evidence of the reſurrection of Jeſus, knowing the powerful effects of money, and how ready men are to ſell the truth, nay, their very ſouls for it, they bribed high all the guard to tell a lie as abſurd as wicked, that his diſciples came by night, and ſtole him away while they ſlept. And as the men might juſtly apprehend ſuch a confeſſed criminal neglect in them, as ſleeping upon guard, might be attended with rigorous puniſhment if it came to the governor's ears, the rulers engage to interpoſe their influence, and to ſave them harmleſs. But the whole contrivance was ſo barefaced a ſham, that it carried its own confutation, except to ſuch as choſe their own deluſions. Can it be conceived, that where the truſt was ſo important, and death the penalty of neglect, that a centinel would ſleep? But if one man may be ſuppoſed to be overtaken, would a whole band of men be all aſleep at once? If they had been ſo, would thoſe timid diſciples, who had fled at the firſt approach of danger, when their Maſter was alive, now dare ruſh into the jaws of death, to reſcue his corpſe? Could ſuch a number of them as was requiſite to roll away the ſtone, and remove the body, have been able to accompliſh ſuch a thing without waking one of the numerous hoſt that lay around the tomb? and if they ſlept, how could they poſſibly know that his diſciples came and ſtole him away? Nay, their very living to ſupport the falſhood, was a full proof againſt them; for, had they ſlept as they pretended, theſe very prieſts had been the firſt to have had them put to death for their neglect, inſtead of intereſting themſelves to ſcreen them from puniſhment.

3. The bribe extorted from the heathen ſoldiers an eaſy compliance: they took the money, and ſaid and did as they were taught. And this ſenſeleſs ſtory being induſtriouſly propagated by the prieſts, was readily followed by thoſe who wiſhed to be deceived, and continued long after to be commonly reported among the Jews, to render the diſciples odious, and prevent the effects of their miniſtry. Note, (1.) Money is the grand bait for the groſſeſt crimes: the raging love of that once rooted in the heart, ſwallows up every conſideration of truth, honeſty, and juſtice. (2.) No outward evidence is ſufficient to overcome the infidelity of the heart, without the powerful operations of the Holy Ghoſt. Were we to chuſe what proofs we would, greater could not be given than theſe men beheld, and yet not one of them was converted. No ſigns or wonders will convince thoſe who reject the goſpel. (3.) A malicious lye once raiſed, in its conſequences is often fatally extenſive; but wo to the author!

16. ¶ Then the eleven diſciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain, [o] where Jeſus had appointed them. 17. And when they ſaw him, they worſhipped him: but ſome doubted. 18. And Jeſus came, and ſpake unto them, ſaying, [p] All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. 19. ¶ [q] Go ye therefore and † teach [r] all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt: 20. Teaching them to [s] obſerve all things whatſoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

[o] Chap. xxvi. 32. Ver. 7, 10.
[p] Chap. xi. 27. John xvii. 2. Heb. ii. 8. 1 Pet. iii. 22. Rev. i. 18. & xix. 16.
[q] Mark xvi. 15.
† Gr. Make diſciples of, &c. Acts viii. 12.
[r] Rom. x. 18. Col. i. 23.
[s] Acts ii. 42.

v. 16—20. According to the directions of their Maſter, the eleven Apoſtles went into Galilee to the mountain appointed, having ſummoned a general meeting of all the diſciples, whoſe number amounted to above five hundred. There Jeſus again appeared unto them, and, fully convinced now of his being the Son of God, they paid him divine adoration. But ſome among them ſtill doubted, weak and wavering, and ſcarce able to credit the teſtimony of their ſenſes: ſo very ſlow of heart were they to believe, and ſo little diſpoſed to be credulous in a matter of ſuch infinite importance. But Jeſus ſoon removed all their doubts, converſing familiarly with them, and giving them the moſt indubitable proofs of the identity of his perſon, and the certainty of his reſurrection. Hereupon, as he was now about to take his farewel of earth, he inveſts them with his authority, ſends them out under his influence, directs them in their work, and aſſures them of his bleſſing on their labours.

1. He aſſerts the authority with which he is inveſted, and in virtue of which he puts them in truſt with his goſpel. All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. As Mediator, he had received the univerſal ſovereignty; angels, principalities, and powers above were made ſubject unto him; and on earth all things and perſons were put under his government; which was a moſt encouraging conſideration to them who were about to go forth in his name, ſince his ſupport would make them more than conquerors. Note, When we are diſcouraged with the view of our own weakneſs and inſufficiency, we ſhould look by faith to the all-ſufficiency of Jeſus, and be comforted.

2. He gives them a commiſſion out of the plenitude of his power. Go ye therefore, and all who ſhall in ſucceeding ages be put in truſt with the ſame goſpel, teach all nations; for all reſpect of perſons and people is now at an end: the ſalvation purchaſed is a common ſalvation, and whoſoever will, let him come. They are to carry the glad tidings into all lands, and make diſciples every where; baptizing them, and their houſhold who ſhould be converted by their miniſtry, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghoſt, admitting them by this rite into the viſible communion of the church, on the profeſſion of their faith in the eternal Father, Son, and Spirit, the one God, to whoſe worſhip and ſervice they are hereby dedicated: teaching them to obſerve all things whatſoever I have commanded you; declaring to them the riches of the grace, and the extent of the privileges of the goſpel; with all the mighty obligations to obedience, reſulting from faith, which worketh by love; enjoining the word of Jeſus as the only rule of duty, to which nothing is to be added, and from whence nothing muſt be diminiſhed; and urging the diſciples to adorn the doctrine they profeſs by that conſcientious obſervance of all thoſe moral duties and poſitive ordinances which may prove the truth of the grace which is in them, bring glory to God, and credit to their holy religion.

3. He aſſures them of his conſtant ſpiritual preſence, to teach, comfort, and proſper them in all their labours of love. Lo! I am with you; be aſſured of it, as the moſt undoubted truth, though my bodily preſence be removed, my Spirit ſhall abundantly ſupply that loſs; in all difficulties and dangers I will ſupport you; in all emergences I will direct you; I will give you ſucceſs in all your labours, and conſolation in all your ſufferings; and that alway, even to the end of the world. Not only all your days ſhall you find me near to help you, but to the end of time your ſucceſſors in the miniſtry ſhall experience my continual ſupport and bleſſing, in the preaching that goſpel you deliver unto them. Amen. Verily I ſay unto you, who am the faithful and true witneſs, I will fulfill my promiſes. Or this may be the Evangeliſt's word, expreſſing his own, and the church's faith and prayer, that ſo it may be, and ſo we believe it ſhall be. What Chriſt hath promiſed, we may confidently expect to receive, and pray in faith, nothing doubting.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the GOSPEL according to St. MARK.

We have heard the evidence given in by the firſt witneſs to the doctrine and miracles of our Lord Jeſus; and now here is another witneſs produced, who calls for our attention. The ſecond living creature ſaith, Come and ſee, Rev. vi. 3. The author of this Epiſtle is Mark: whether the ſame perſon mentioned Acts xv. 37, 38. or him whom Peter calls his ſon, 1 Pet. v. 13. is uncertain. He was not of the number of the apoſtles, but might probably be one of the ſeventy. His goſpel is ſhorter than that of Matthew, containing much the ſame matter, with many additional circumſtances. Thus out of the mouth of two or three witneſſes is every word eſtabliſhed.

CHAP. I.

Mark's narrative takes not riſe ſo early as thoſe of Matthew and Luke do, from the birth of our Saviour, but from John's baptiſm, from which he preſently paſſeth to Chriſt's public miniſtry. Accordingly in this chapter we have, 1. The office of John Baptiſt illuſtrated by the prophecy of him, ver. 1—3. and the hiſtory of him, ver. 4—8. 2. Chriſt's baptiſm, and his being owned from heaven, ver. 9—11. 3. His temptation, ver. 12, 13. 4. His preaching, ver. 14, 15, 21, 22, 38, 39. 5. His calling diſciples, ver. 16—20. 6. His praying, ver. 35. 7. His working miracles. (1.) His rebuking an unclean ſpirit, ver. 23—28. (2.) His curing Peter's mother-in-law that was ill of a fever, ver. 29—31. (3.) His healing all that came to him, ver. 32, 34, 35. (4.) His cleanſing a leper, ver. 40—45.

1. THE beginning of the goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt [a] the Son of God, 2. As it is written in the prophets, [b] Behold, I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee. 3. [c] The voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths ſtraight. 4. [d] John did baptize in the wilderneſs, and preach the baptiſm of repentance, † for the remiſſion of ſins. 5. [e] And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jeruſalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confeſſing their ſins. 6. And John was clothed [f] with camel's hair, and [g] with a girdle of a ſkin about his loins: and he did eat [h] locuſts and wild honey: 7. And preached, ſaying, [i] There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whoſe ſhoes I am not worthy to ſtoop down and unlooſe. 8. [k] I indeed have baptized you with water: but he ſhall baptize you [l] with the Holy Ghoſt.

[a] Pſ. ii. 6. Mat. iii. 17. & xvi. 16. & xxvi. 64.
[b] Mal. iii. 1. Mat. xi. 10.
[c] Iſa. xl. 3. Mat. iii. 3. Luke iii. 4. John i. 23.
[d] Mat. iii. 1. Luke iii. 3. John iii. 23.
† Gr. Unto.
[e] Mat. iii. 5.
[f] Zech. xiii. 4.
[g] 2 Kings i. 8.
[h] Lev. xi. 22.
[i] Mat. iii. 11. Luke iii. 16. John i. 27.
[k] Acts i. 5. & xix. 4.
[l] Iſa. xliv. 3. Joel ii. 28. Acts ii. 4. & xi. 15, 16.

v. 1—8. St. Mark commences his hiſtory with the account of John's baptiſm, the meſſenger ſent before the Meſſiah, according to the ancient prophecies, to prepare his way. Iſaiah and Malachi had both ſpoken of him, Iſa. xl. 3. Mal. iii. 1. and agreeable thereunto John commenced his miniſtry in the wilderneſs, calling the people to repentance, and faith in the promiſed Meſſiah, in order that they might obtain remiſſion of their ſins.

1. John's preaching was the beginning of the goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt the Son of God. Not that the goſpel then firſt began to be publiſhed; for it had been the ſubject of the miniſtry of all the prophets, and in the promiſe of the Seed of the woman had been preached to the firſt man immediately after his fall: but the goſpel diſpenſation, in oppoſition to the law, began more immediately from the baptiſm of John, whoſe office it was particularly to point the people to the Lamb of God, now made manifeſt in the fleſh to take away the ſin of the world. This was the glad news John declared, the goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt, who is both the Author and Subject of it; and, as the Son of God, endued with all-ſufficiency for the great work of man's ſalvation, which he came to accompliſh. To him the Baptiſt bore witneſs, acknowledging his ſurpaſſing dignity, and confeſſed his own unworthineſs to be employed in the meaneſt offices by his Lord; and whilſt, in conſequence of his preaching, and the people's profeſſion of repentance, he admitted them to baptiſm in token of the forgiveneſs of their ſins, he bad them expect a more efficacious baptiſm than this of water, even of the Holy Ghoſt, which the Meſſiah, to whom he directed them, ſhould ſhed on them abundantly, to cleanſe them from all their iniquities.

2. His appearance was ſingular, as that of the ancient prophets, and his dreſs and diet beſpoke his mortified ſpirit and deadneſs to the world. A rough camel's hair garment, tied with a leathern girdle, defended him from the cold; and locuſts and wild honey, ſuch as the wilderneſs afforded, ſatisfied his hunger. Note, They who preach the goſpel muſt learn to endure hardneſs, and be ready, whenever duty calls, to forego any of the delights of ſenſe for the ſake of the ſervice in which they are engaged.

3. Multitudes attended him, and appeared deeply affected with John's diſcourſes, confeſſing their ſins, and deſiring to be admitted to his baptiſm. The word of the goſpel is powerful. The doctrines of repentance and faith, when urged upon the heart, awaken the conſcience: and all who truly preach Jeſus Chriſt will aſſuredly ſee the ſucceſs of their miniſtrations. They who have never known themſelves inſtrumental to the convincing and converting one ſinner, have demonſtrative evidence before them, that they are not the meſſengers of Chriſt, and do not preach his truth.

9. [m] And it came to paſs in thoſe days, that Jeſus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. 10. And ſtraightway coming up out of the water, he ſaw the heavens opened, and [n] the Spirit like a dove deſcending upon him. 11. And there came a voice from heaven, ſaying, [o] Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleaſed. 12. [p] And immediately the Spirit driveth him into the wilderneſs. 13. And he was there in the wilderneſs [q] forty days tempted of Satan, and [r] was with the wild beaſts, and [s] the angels miniſtred unto him.

[m] Mat. iii. 13. Luke iii. 21.
[n] Iſa. xi. 2.
[o] Pſ. ii. 7. Iſa. xlii. 1. Chap. ix. 7. 2 Pet. i. 17.
[p] Mat. iv. 1. Luke iv. 1.
[q] Ex. xxxiv. 28. 1 Kings xix. 8.
[r] Job v. 22, 23.
[s] Luke xxii. 43. Heb. i. 14.

v. 9—13. The acount of Chriſt's miniſtry and temptations Matthew hath recorded more at large, ch. iii. iv.

1. He was baptiſed of John in Jordan. Not that he had any ſins to confeſs, though in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh; but he would comply with every inſtituted ordinance of God: and now alſo he was eminently to be pointed out as the Meſſiah, and to enter upon his miſſion. Accordingly the heavens were opened, the Holy Ghoſt viſibly deſcended upon him, and God himſelf by an audible voice bore teſtimony to him as his Son, and declared his perfect ſatisfaction in the undertaking in which he was engaged. Note, (1.) If God is ever well-pleaſed with us, it can only be in and through his dear Son. (2.) Whenever we are truly baptiſed into Chriſt, the Spirit of God will as really be communicated to us as it viſibly deſcended upon him.

2. He immediately entred upon his temptation, led by the Holy Spirit from the brink of Jordan into the howling wilderneſs, to make his abode with beaſts, whilſt Satan ſharpened every poiſoned arrow in his quiver againſt him; but, to his bitter diſappointment, though in this lonely deſart, he found all his arts foiled by this ſecond Adam, which even in Eden he had practiſed with ſuch ſucceſs upon the firſt. Thus forty days Chriſt bore with all the tempter's malice, and baffled all his wiles; till Satan, deſpairing, at laſt quitted the field, unable to make the leaſt impreſſion: and then the angelic hoſts, who had with admiration beheld the dreadful conflict, appeared to congratulate the Saviour's victory, and to miniſter to his hunger. Note, (1.) Every converted ſoul muſt prepare for temptation. (2.) Solitude often proves a dangerous ſnare. (3.) Chriſt knows what ſore temptations mean. He tenderly compaſſionates his ſuffering people, and is near to ſuccour and defend them. (4.) The angels miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation: yea, the Lord upon their right hand is their defence, and keepeth them, that the wicked one toucheth them not.

14. [t] Now after that John was put in priſon, Jeſus came into Galilee, preaching the goſpel of the kingdom of God. 15. And ſaying, [u] The time is fulfilled, and [x] the kingdom of God is at hand: [y] repent ye, and believe the goſpel. 16. [z] Now, as he walked by the ſea of Galilee, he ſaw Simon, and Andrew his brother, caſting a net into the ſea: (for they were fiſhers.) 17. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fiſhers of men. 18. And [a] ſtraightway they forſook their nets, and followed him. 19. And when he had gone a little further thence, he ſaw James the ſon of Zebedee, and John his brother, who alſo were in the ſhip, mending their nets. 20. And ſtraightway he called them: and they left [b] their father Zebedee in the ſhip, with the hired ſervants, and went after him. 21. And [c] they went into Capernaum, and ſtraightway on the ſabbath-day he entıed into the ſynagogue, and taught. 22. And [d] they were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine: for [e] he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the ſcribes.

[t] Mat. iv. 12.
[u] Gal. iv. 4. Eph. i. 10.
[x] Dan. ii. 44.
[y] Mat. iii. 2. & iv. 17.
[z] Mat. iv. 18. Luke v. 2.
[a] 1 Kings xix. 19, 20.
[b] Mat. x. 37. Chap. x. 28.
[c] Luke iv. 31.
[d] Chap. ii. 12.
[e] Mat. vii. 29.

v. 14—22. When John's miniſtry was finiſhed by his impriſonment, Chriſt came into Galilee, and there,

1. He preached the goſpel of the kingdom of God, inviting all his countrymen to come and partake of the ineſtimable bleſſings of that diſpenſation of grace which he was commiſſioned to publiſh; the time being fulfilled which had been marked out for the appearing of the Meſſiah by the prophets, and decreed in the counſels of God; and therefore, as his kingdom was immediately to be erected, he exhorted all his hearers to repent, and believe the goſpel; to diſcover, acknowledge, and bewail their offences againſt God's holy law; to renounce their vain confidences in themſelves; to change their miſtaken ſentiments concerning the nature of the Meſſiah's kingdom; and, inſtantly turning to him, to receive the glad tidings he brought of the ſalvation he came to procure for them, even pardon, peace, righteouſneſs, and eternal life, the gift of God through the ſacrifice and obedience to death of his Son. Note, (1.) The goſpel will be glad tidings to none who do not ſee and feel their miſery and guilt; and, inſtead of flattering themſelves in their own eyes, now change their minds, and ſtand convinced of their loſt eſtate. (2.) Faith in the goſpel word entitles us to claim the fulfilment of all the promiſes: nor is it any preſumption, rejecting all confidence in ourſelves, to be confident of the Saviour's love and faithfulneſs.

2. He called four of his diſciples to a more conſtant attendance upon him, that they might be better qualified for the work in which he deſigned to employ them. (1.) They were fiſhers; for the kingdom of Jeſus was not to be erected by the wiſdom of men, but by the power of God. (2.) He found them at their vocation. Honeſt induſtry in his ſight is highly commendable. (3.) They were two pair of brethren: and that is an additional happineſs, when they, who are ſo near to each other in blood, are united together in one Lord. (4.) They left all to follow Chriſt. When he calls we muſt count nothing too dear to part with for his ſake.

3. With theſe diſciples, his attendants, he entred into Capernaum, and on the ſabbath preached in the ſynagogue, to the aſtoniſhment of the auditory; ſuch a divine power and authority attended his teaching, as the people had never found under their ſcribes and rabbies. Note, The goſpel word is mighty and powerful. No marvel then if the preachers of it are diſtinguiſhed from the inſipid doctors of moral virtue, philoſophical diſquiſitions, or empty formality.

23. [f] And there was in their ſynagogue a man † with an unclean ſpirit, and he cried out, 24. Saying, Let us alone, [g] what have we to do with thee, thou Jeſus of Nazareth? Art thou come to deſtroy us? [h] I know thee who thou art, [i] the holy One of God. 25. And Jeſus rebuked him, ſaying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. 26. And when the unclean ſpirit [k] had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him. 27. And they were all amazed, inſomuch that they queſtioned among themſelves, ſaying, What thing is this? What new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean ſpirits, and they do obey him. 28. And immediately his fame ſpread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

[f] Luke iv. 33.
† Gr. In. 1 John v. 19.
[g] Mat. viii. 29.
[h] Ver. 34.
[i] Dan. ix. 24. Luke i. 35.
[k] Chap. ix. 20.

v. 23—28. Chriſt confirmed his miſſion by his miracles. And, to give the greater weight to his diſcourſe, we find him here,

1. Caſting out a devil from one poſſeſſed. He is called an unclean ſpirit; for he is ſuch in his own nature; by his ſuggeſtions he defiles the conſciences of men, and, by the temptations he preſents before them, ſeduces them into all impurity of body and ſoul. Dreading the preſence and power of Jeſus, he cried out, uſing the man's organs of ſpeech, ſaying, let us alone, what have we to do with thee? They knew themſelves unable to contend, and therefore tremble at the thought of being diſpoſſeſſed of their prey: but, to do him all the miſchief in their power, this fiend ſeems in reproach to call him Jeſus of Nazareth: and though he adds, I know thee who thou art, the holy One of God, there was probably the moſt malicious deſign couched under that fair confeſſion, even to raiſe a ſuſpicion of confederacy between Jeſus and Satan. Chriſt therefore ſilences him, diſdaining to receive a teſtimony from him, and diſappointing his malicious deſigns: with a ſharp rebuke he bids him inſtantly quit his prey, and leave the body which he had poſſeſſed: and, though furious at being diſpoſſeſſed, with a fearful outcry, as if he would have rent the man in pieces, or deſigning to terrify the ſpectators, he departs; compelled, though with reluctance, to yield to the commanding voice of Jeſus. Note, (1.) Though ſuch poſſeſſions may not now be found, how many, under the influence of an unclean ſpirit, are ſtill led captive by the devil at his will! (2.) The grace of Jeſus is ſtill the ſame, and he can and doth ſubdue the ſtrongeſt power of Satan in the ſinner's heart. (3.) Many a poor ſoul, when Chriſt firſt approaches him with the goſpel word, is grievouſly harraſſed, and cries out, as if his miſery was now greater than ever before; but theſe terrors are the forerunners of peace and joy in believing.

2. The people were all amazed at what they heard and ſaw, and could not help ſaying one to another, What thing is this? Never was ſuch aſtoniſhing power before exerted! What new doctrine is this? delivered with ſuch majeſty, and confirmed by ſuch miracles. He acts not as exorciſts, by charms and invocations; but with authority commandeth he even the unclean ſpirits, and they obey him, unable to make the leaſt reſiſtance. Hereupon the fame of his preaching and miracles began to be exceedingly ſpread through all the region round about Galilee. Note, Chriſt's doctrine was not new, but the old doctrine which had been from the beginning; but had for a long time been ſo forgotten and neglected, that it appeared now quite uncommon. As in theſe days, the doctrines of the goſpel are by many called new doctrines, becauſe, alas! we have for a long ſeaſon in general ſo grievouſly departed from them.

[l] Mat. viii. 14. Luke iv. 38. 29. [l] And forthwith, when they were come out of the ſynagogue, they entred into the houſe of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. 30. But Simon's wife's mother lay ſick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her. 31. And he came and took her by the hand, and lift her up; and immediately the fever left her, and ſhe [m] Mat. viii. 16. Luke iv. 40. miniſtred unto them. 32. [m] And at even, when the ſun did ſet, they brought unto him all that were diſeaſed, [n] Gen. xlix. 10. and them that were poſſeſſed with devils. 33. And [n] all the city was gathered together at the door. 34. And he [o] Iſa. liii. 4. healed many that were [o] ſick of divers diſeaſes, and caſt
[p] Acts xvi. 17, 18. out many devils, and [p] ſuffered not the devils † to ſpeak,
† Or to ſay they knew him. becauſe they knew him. 35. And [q] in the morning, [q] Luke iv. 42. riſing up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a ſolitary place, and there prayed. 36. And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him.
37. And when they had found him, they ſaid unto him,
All men ſeek for thee. 38. And he ſaid unto them,
Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there [r] Iſa. lxi. 1. alſo: [r] for therefore came I forth. 39. And he preached in their ſynagogues throughout all Galilee, and caſt out devils.

v. 29—39. Wherever Jeſus went he left the glorious marks of his power and grace.

1. Soon after he had retired from the ſynagogue to Simon's houſe to take ſome refreſhment, ſome of the company informed him of the illneſs of Peter's mother, confined to her bed with a fever. Immediately he aroſe, went to her bed-ſide, lifted her up, and inſtantly the fever left her. The cure was perfect; not ſo much as any weakneſs remained; but ſhe immediately roſe, and waited on Jeſus and the gueſts. Note, When we have experienced the Redeemer's healing grace, it becomes us to ſhew our gratitude by immediately employing the ſtrength he hath given us in his ſervice.

2. A multitude of other cures were wrought by him the ſame day. For no ſooner was the ſabbath ended (before which they might ſcruple to carry the ſick to him) than the door was crouded with patients, and not one went away without a cure; and many devils were ejected by his word, whom he permitted not to ſay that they knew him (as the words may beſt be rendered) not chuſing to have them ſpeak ought concerning him, leſt it ſhould give occaſion to ſuggeſt there was a confederacy between him and them.

3. After ſome needful repoſe, very early in the morning, long before break of day, he retired to a ſolitary place, that he might, uninterrupted, enjoy ſweet communion with his Father in ſecret, and pour out his ſoul in prayer before him. Note, (1.) Early riſing is as profitable to the ſoul as the body; whilſt ſloth is alike hurtful to both. (2.) When our ſpirits are moſt freſh and vigorous, it is then the propereſt time to retire for prayer and communion with God.

4. Peter and his companions no ſooner miſſed him in the morning than they ſought him out, and deſired him to return to Capernaum, there being ſo great enquiries made after him. But Chriſt could not confine himſelf there; the reſt of the country muſt ſhare his miniſtrations, being ſent for this purpoſe to go about preaching and working miracles through the whole land: and accordingly he did ſo, his diſciples attending him in his travels, hearing his divine teaching, and beholding the wonders of his power and love.

[s] Mat. viii. 2. Luke v. 12. 40. And [s] there came [t] a leper to him, beſeeching
[t] Lev. xiii. 46. 2 Chron. xxvi. 21. him, and kneeling down to him, and ſaying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean. 41. And Jeſus, moved with compaſſion, put forth his hand, and touhced him, and ſaith unto him, I will, be thou clean. 42. And as ſoon as he had ſpoken, immediately the leproſy departed from him, and he was cleanſed. 43. And he ſtraitly charged him, and forthwith ſent him away; 44.
[u] Chap. v. 43. And ſaith unto him, [u] See thou ſay nothing to any man:
but go thy way, ſhew thyſelf to the prieſt, and offer for [x] Lev. xiv. 3, 4, 10. thy cleanſing thoſe things [x] which Moſes commanded for a teſtimony unto them. 45. But he went out, and began to publiſh it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, inſomuch that Jeſus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in deſert places: and they came to him from every quarter.

v. 40—45. This miracle was before recorded, Matt. vii. 2. We are taught by it,

1. What we are: poor, defiled, loathſome ſinners, under the incurable diſeaſe of a corrupted nature, and deſperate, unleſs the great Phyſician of ſouls exert his healing power on our behalf.

2. Whither we muſt go: to Jeſus; bowed down under the ſenſe of our vileneſs, and unworthineſs to approach him; yet caſting ourſelves at his feet as alone able to relieve us from our miſery, and with a humble perſuaſion he will not ſpurn us from him, but that he is willing as well as able to help and heal us.

3. Chriſt never rejects the ſouls of the miſerable that fly to him: his bowels of compaſſion yearn over them; the hand of his grace is ſure to be ſtretched out towards them. And though we often come trembling, between fear and hope whether he will receive, pardon, help, and ſave us, he is pleaſed to remove our doubts, and ſaith to our ſouls, I will, and power inſtantly accompanies his promiſe.

4. To thoſe whom Chriſt cures he gives a ſtrict charge; and they muſt carefully obey his injunctions, and eſpecially beware not to return unto folly, leſt a worſe thing happen unto them; but daily they are called to preſent themſelves, body, ſoul, and ſpirit, before the great High-prieſt of their profeſſion, that he, who hath made them clean, may keep them clean.

5. They who have taſted the love of Jeſus delight to ſpread the ſavour of his name, and to teſtify their gratitude towards him both with their lips and in their lives.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's healing a man that was ſick of a palſy, ver. 1—12. 2. His calling Matthew from the receipt of cuſtom, and his eating upon that occaſion with publicans and ſinners, and juſtifying himſelf in ſo doing, ver. 13—17. 3. His juſtifying his diſciples in not faſting ſo much as thoſe of the Phariſees did, ver. 18—21. 4. His juſtifying them in plucking the ears of corn on the ſabbath-day, ver. 23—28. All which paſſages we had before, Mat. ix. and xii.

1. AND again [a] he entred into Capernaum, after [a] Mat. ix. 1.
ſome days, and it was noiſed that he was in the Luke v. 18.
houſe. 2. And ſtraightway many [b] were gathered toge- [b] Gen. xlix.
ther, inſomuch that there was no room to receive them, 10.
no not ſo much as about the door: and [c] he preached [c] Luke iv.
the word unto them. 3. And they come unto him, 18.
bringing one ſick of the palſy, which was born of four,
4. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the preſs, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the ſick of the palſy lay. 5. When Jeſus ſaw their faith, he ſaid unto the ſick of the palſy, Son, [d] thy ſins be [d] Pſ. ciii. 3.
forgiven thee. 6. But there were certain of the ſcribes Iſa. xxxviii.
ſitting there, and reaſoning in their hearts, 7. Why 17. & xlv.
doth this man thus ſpeak blaſphemies? [e] who can for- 22. John v.
give ſins but God only? 8. And immediately, when 14.
[f] Jeſus perceived in his ſpirit that they ſo reaſoned with- [e] Job xiv. 4.
in themſelves, he ſaid unto them, Why reaſon ye theſe Iſa. xliii. 25.
things in your hearts? 9. Whether is it eaſier to ſay to [f] Pſ. cxxxix. 2. John ii. 24. & vi. 64.
the ſick of the palſy, Thy ſins be forgiven thee: or to ſay, Ariſe, and take up thy bed and walk? 10. But that ye may know that [g] the Son of man hath power on [g] John xvii.
earth to forgive ſins, (he ſaith to the ſick of the palſy) 2. Acts v.
11. I ſay unto thee, Ariſe, and take up thy bed, and 31.
go thy way into thine houſe. 12. And immediately he aroſe, took up the bed, and went forth before them all, inſomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, ſaying, We never ſaw it on this faſhion.

v. 1—12. No ſooner had our Lord returned to Capernaum, from his journey through the villages of Galilee, than the rumour of it quickly ſpread through the place; and, eager to improve the precious opportunity of his preſence, ſuch multitudes aſſembled at the houſe, that there was no coming even to the door, ſo thick was the crowd. And a bleſſed ſight it is to behold ſuch numbers flocking to the Saviour.

1. He preached unto them. Some might have thought the time, the place, improper for a ſermon. There were ſynagogues; what need of preaching in a houſe, or at the window? Perhaps to teach us, that no time or place is improper to ſpeak a word for God and for immortal ſouls.

2. During Chriſt's preaching, or in ſome interval of his diſcourſes, the friends of a poor paralytic man, ſollicitous to preſent his pitiable caſe before him, would fain have preſſed through the crowd; but, finding the attempt impracticable, they carried him up to the top of the houſe where Jeſus was, and, breaking up a part of the flat roof, let down the ſick man on his bed before him. Note, They who truly ſeek the Lord, will be diſcouraged by no difficulties from coming to him.

3. Struck with ſuch an inſtance of their faith, the compaſſionate Jeſus kindly accoſts the afflicted patient, and ſeals the pardon of his ſins as the introduction to his cure. This being the cauſe of every ſickneſs and diſeaſe, the bitterneſs of them is paſt, when the ſin that occaſioned them is forgiven.

4. The Scribes and Phariſees who were preſent, regarded it as errant blaſphemy in a mere man, as they regarded Jeſus, to aſſume the incommunicable prerogative of God, in thus by his own authority preſuming to forgive ſin. He knew their ſecret reaſonings, and in his anſwer gave them a proof of his divinity, as the ſearcher of hearts. To ſhew them, therefore, he poſſeſſed the power he aſſumed, he bids the man ariſe and walk, and appeals to themſelves for the concluſion, whether he who could thus ſovereignly, in an inſtant, remove the effects of ſin, could not as eaſily remit the guilt of it. Note, The man Chriſt Jeſus is alſo very God, able to forgive and to ſave to the uttermoſt every poor ſinner that comes to him.

4. The paralytic man received his cure the moment Jeſus commanded him to ariſe; and to the aſtoniſhment of all, he was ſo perfectly reſtored to health and ſtrength, as to carry home the bed on which he had been brought. Such unprecedented cures extorted acknowledgments from every beholder, that the like was never ſeen before in Iſrael.

13. And he went forth again [h] by the ſea-ſide, and all the multitude reſorted unto him, and he taught them. 14. [i] And as he paſſed by, he ſaw Levi the ſon of Alpheus ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom, and ſaid unto him, Follow me. And he aroſe and followed him. 15. And it came to paſs, that as Jeſus ſat at meat in his houſe, many publicans and ſinners ſat alſo together with Jeſus and his diſciples: for there were many, and they followed him. 16. And when the Scribes and Phariſees ſaw him eat with publicans and ſinners, they ſaid unto his diſciples, [k] How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and ſinners? 17. When Jeſus heard it, he ſaith unto them, They that are whole, have no need of the phyſician, but they that are ſick: [l] I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance.

[h] Prov. i. 20. Mat. xxii. 9.

[i] Mat. ix. 9, &c. Luke v. 27.

[k] Gen. xliii. 32. Iſa. lxv. 5. Acts x. 28.

[l] Luke xviii. 10—14. & xix. 10. Rom. v. 6, 8. 1 Tim. i. 15.

v. 13—17. Having departed from the houſe to the ſea-ſide, thither the multitude followed him, and he preached to them the goſpel. After which,

1. He called Levi, or Matthew, a publican, who was ſitting in his office receiving the cuſtoms, and ſuch power accompanied his word, that inſtantly he left his gainful poſſeſſion, and followed Jeſus as his diſciple. Note, (1.) Nothing is too difficult for Almighty grace; they who ſeem moſt deeply involved in the world, and ſunk in guilt and corruption, are often ſnatched in ſovereign love, as brands from the burning. (2.) If Chriſt did not firſt ſeek us, we ſhould never have ſought him.

2. Levi, in tender regard for his brother publicans, longed to make them acquainted with Jeſus, whoſe grace he himſelf had ſo richly taſted, and therefore invited them to his houſe, where Jeſus diſdained not to ſit among them: infamous in general as their characters were, he joined them not as an aſſociate, but, as the great phyſician of ſouls, viſited them as diſeaſed patients. Note, They who have taſted the grace of the Redeemer themſelves, cannot but be ſollicitous that their friends and neighbours ſhould partake with them.

3. Chriſt vindicates his conduct from the cenſorious cavils of the Phariſees. He deſpiſed not the poor ſinner's ſouls; but as this was the very end of his coming to call ſuch to repentance, he was unaffected with the reviling of thoſe who conceited themſelves righteous, and yet were much farther from the kingdom of heaven, than the very ſinners whom they deſpiſed. Note, (1.) The beſt deeds are often moſt baſely miſrepreſented by the invenomed tongue of malice. (2.) None have ought to do with Chriſt but ſin-ſick ſouls, who feel themſelves loſt without him; the proud and ſelf-righteous are left to periſh in the deluſions they have choſen.

18. [m] And the diſciples of John, and of [n] the Phariſees uſed to faſt; and they come and [o] ſay unto him, Why do the diſciples of John, and of the Phariſees faſt, but thy diſciples faſt not? 19. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Can [p] the children of the bride-chamber faſt while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot faſt. 20. But the days will come when [q] the bridegroom ſhall be taken away from them, and [r] then ſhall they faſt in thoſe days. 21. No man alſo ſeweth a piece of † new cloth on an old garment: elſe the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worſe. 22. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles, elſe the new wine doth burſt the bottles, and the wine is ſpilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine muſt be put into new bottles. 23. [s] And it came to paſs that he went through the corn-fields on the ſabbath-day, and his diſciples began as they went [t] to pluck the ears of corn. 24. And the Phariſees ſaid unto him, Behold, why do they on the ſabbath-day that which is not lawful? 25. And he ſaid unto them, Have ye never read [u] what David did, when he had need, and was an hungred, he and they that were with him? 26. How he went into the houſe of God in the days of Abiathar the high-prieſt, and did eat the ſhew-bread, [x] which is not lawful to eat, but for the prieſts, and gave alſo to them which were with him? 27. And he ſaid unto them, The ſabbath was made for man, and not man for the ſabbath: 28. Therefore the Son of man is Lord alſo of the ſabbath.

[m] Mat. ix. 14. Luke v. 33.

[n] Luke xviii. 12.

[o] Prov. xx. 6.

[p] John iii. 29.

[q] Acts i. 9.

[r] Acts xiii. 3.

† Or raw, or unwrought.

[s] Mat. xii. 1. Luke vi. 1.

[t] Deut. xxiii. 25.

[u] 1 Sam. xxi. 6.

[x] Exod. xxix. 33. Luke xxiv. 9.

v. 18—28. Chriſt having juſtified his own conduct from the cenſure of Phariſaical pride, juſtifies alſo his diſciples for not obſerving unneceſſary auſterities; and vindicates them for plucking the ears of corn on the ſabbath-day to ſatisfy their hunger.

1. The diſciples of John, who, after their maſter's example, faſted often; and the Phariſees, who placed great dependance on this bodily exerciſe, expreſs their wonder that Jeſus enjoined no ſuch rigid rules on his diſciples as they practiſed. So ready are thoſe who fancy their own ſtrictneſs meritorious, to cenſure all who come ſhort of their ſtandard of excellence. Chriſt anſwers their queſtion, and vindicates his diſciples; they were but beginners, and it was improper to put them on the more difficult exerciſes of ſelf-denial, leaſt they ſhould be diſcouraged thereby, and contract a diſguſt to the ſervice. Beſides, during his preſence with them, like a newly married bride, it became them to rejoice: it would be time enough when he ſhould be taken from them, to mourn and faſt. Thus ſhould we learn not to exact too much from young converts, and the lambs of the flock; and eſpecially in faſting we ſhould conſider the great end and uſe of it, and that of itſelf, it is no farther good, than theſe are obtained.

2. The Phariſees ſoon ſeized another occaſion of offence, from the diſciples plucking the ears of corn on the ſabbath-day, as they paſſed through the fields. Rigidly ſcrupulous, as many others like them ſtill are, about the form of godlineſs, and ſevere in judging all who do not coincide with them; yet blind to the deep-rooted evil and abominations of their hearts. Chriſt vindicates them by a precedent the Phariſees will not diſpute, and reaſons with them by arguments they cannot diſprove. David had done what ſeemed a much more exceptionable thing in eating the ſhew-bread; and Abiathar, who ſucceeded his father ſoon after as high-prieſt, had conſented to it, becauſe ceremonial obſervances muſt give way to the great law of charity and ſelf-preſervation. Beſides, the very inſtitution of the ſabbath was deſigned for man's benefit, to give reſt to his body, and time to ſpend in the immediate ſervice of God, and caring for his ſoul; and therefore doth not require him to abſtain from what is more immediately neceſſary for the ſupport and preſervation of his life: the proviſion for which was a law of nature, and ſubſiſted previous to the inſtitution of the ſabbath. The Meſſiah, therefore, who can beſt interpret his own laws, and is Lord of the ſabbath, has an undoubted right to permit this liberty to his diſciples, as ſuch refreſhment of their bodies will enable them more effectually to diſcharge the duties of the holy day. Note, (1.) Our ſabbaths ſhould be our delight; and therefore muſt not, by unreaſonable ſtrictneſs, be made a burden. (2.) Though we are allowed to eat and drink, as ſhall beſt enable us for the ſervice of the ſabbath, it is a groſs violation of the day, by indulging our appetite to ſtupify our faculties, and render body and ſoul utterly unfit for the exerciſes of devotion.

CHAP. III.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's healing a man that had a withered hand on the ſabbath-day, and the combination of his enemies againſt him for it, ver. 1—6. 2. The univerſal reſort of people to him from all parts to be healed, and the relief they all found with him, ver. 7—12. 3. His ordaining his twelve apoſtles to be attendants on him, and the preachers of his goſpel, ver. 13—21. 4. His anſwer to the blaſphemous cavil of the ſcribes, who imputed his power to caſt out devils, to a confederacy with the prince of the devils, ver. 22—30. 5. His owning his diſciples for his neareſt and deareſt relations, ver. 31—35.

1. AND [a] he entred again into the ſynagogue, and there was a man there which had a withered hand. 2. And they watched him, [b] whither he would heal him on the ſabbath-day, that they might accuſe him. 3. And he ſaith unto the man which had the withered hand, † Stand forth. 4. And he ſaith unto them, them, Is it lawful to do good on the ſabbath-days, or to do evil? to ſave life, or to kill? but they held their peace. 5. And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the ‡ hardneſs of their hearts, he ſaith unto him, [c] Stretch forth thine hand. And he ſtretched it out: and his hand was reſtored whole as the other. 6. [d] And the Phariſees went forth, and ſtraightway took counſel with [e] the Herodians againſt him, how they might deſtroy him. 7. But Jeſus [f] withdrew himſelf with his diſciples to the ſea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judea, 8. And from Jeruſalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond Jordan, and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him. 9. And he ſpake to his diſciples, that a ſmall ſhip ſhould wait on him, becauſe of the multitude, leſt they ſhould throng him. 10. For he had healed many, inſomuch that they preſſed upon him for to touch him, as many as had ‖ plagues. 11. And unclean ſpirits, when they ſaw him, fell down before him, and cried, ſaying, [g] Thou art the Son of God. 12. And [h] he ſtraitly charged them, that they ſhould not make him known.

[a] Mark xii. 9. Luke vi. 6.

[b] Luke xiii. 14. & xiv. 3. John ix. 10.

† Or, Ariſe, or ſtand up in the midſt.

‡ Or blindneſs.
[c] 1 Kings xiii. 6.
[d] Mat. xii. 14, &c.
[e] Mat. xxii. 16.
[f] Mat. x. 23.
‖ Gr. Chaſtiſements or corrections. Heb. xii. 6.
[g] Luke iv. 41.
[h] Chap. i.

v. 1—12. We ſee here Chriſt diſpenſing his miraculous cures.

1. In the ſynagogue, on the ſabbath-day, he healed a man who had a withered hand. He knew the malignity of his enemies, and that from ſuch a deed of mercy they would ſeek to raiſe an accuſation againſt him as a ſabbath-breaker. He therefore firſt put a queſtion to them for their determination, whether it was lawful on the ſabbath-day to do an act of mercy, or to do evil, by neglecting it? to contribute to man's health and eaſe, or to let him languiſh, perhaps die, for want of aſſiſtance? The queſtion anſwered itſelf; but they reſolved not to admit the conviction, and in ſullen ſilence held their peace. With indignation looking round upon them, grieved and diſpleaſed at their wilful obſtinacy and hardneſs of heart, Jeſus will not ſuffer their malevolence to prevent his works of grace; therefore in the face of the congregation he bids the lame man ſtretch out his hand, and inſtantly it was reſtored to perfect ſtrength and ſoundneſs. Note, (1.) Deeds of mercy and charity are ever pleaſing to God, and no day unſeaſonable for them. (2.) They who are obſtinate in error and unbelief, will be convinced by no arguments. (3.) Jeſus looks ſtill with indignation upon the hard-hearted ſinner; and if he doth not now tremble under his frowns, he muſt quickly be conſumed under his wrath. (4.) It is a grief to the Saviour, and all who are his people, when they behold men wilfully ſinning againſt their own mercies. (5.) If people will be offended at our well-doing, we muſt not be concerned about their cenſures. (6.) He who bids us ſtretch out the arms of faith and prayer, muſt himſelf miniſter the ability. In vain are goſpel-calls, without the effectual power of goſpel-grace.

2. By the ſea-ſide, whither he withdrew to ſhelter himſelf from the malice of his exaſperated foes, who were now conſulting his deſtruction, he liberally diſpenſed his cures to the multitudes, who reſorted to him for healing from all the regions round about; till at laſt he was conſtrained to go into a boat, and put off a little from the ſhore: ſuch crowds of diſeaſed perſons thronging upon him, in the confidence that could they but touch him, it would be ſufficient to heal them of the moſt inveterate plagues. Even the devils, who dwelt in many, whoſe bodies they had poſſeſſed, no ſooner ſaw him, than they were forced to proſtrate themſelves before him, confeſſed his divine power and godhead, and owned him as the Meſſiah. But, to avoid the leaſt appearance of receiving a teſtimony from them of his miſſion and character, leſt his enemies ſhould ſuggeſt there was a confederacy between him and them, he ſealed up their lips in ſilence, and left his own works to ſpeak his glory, enjoining the ſame ſilence on all whom he had healed. Note, (1.) It is grievous to think, that men ſhould ever deny that divinity of our Lord, which even devils confeſſed. (2.) We never ſhould ſeek the applauſe of men; it is enough that our works teſtify for us.

13. [i] And he goeth up into a mountain, and [k] calleth unto him whom he would: and [l] they came unto him. 14. And [m] he ordained twelve, that they ſhould be with him, and that he might ſend them forth to preach: 15. And to have power to heal ſickneſſes, and to caſt out devils. 16. And Simon he ſurnamed Peter. 17. And James the ſon of Zebedee, and John the brother of James (and he ſurnamed them Boanerges, which is [n] the ſons of thunder.) 18. And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew, and Thomas, and James the ſon of Alpheus, and Thaddeus, and Simon the Canaanite, 19. And Judas Iſcariot, which alſo betrayed him: and they went into an houſe. 20. And the multitude cometh together again, [o] ſo that they could not ſo much as eat bread. 21. And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold of him: for they ſaid, [p] He is beſide himſelf.

[i] Mat. x. 1. Luke vi. 12.
[k] John xv. 16. Acts i. 24.
[l] John vi. 37.
[m] Heb. v. 4.
[n] Iſa. lviii. 1.
[o] Chap. vi. 31.
[p] 2 Kings ix. 11. Acts xxvi. 24. 2 Cor. v. 13.

v. 13—21. We have here,

1. The ordination of the twelve apoſtles. Going up into a mountain, he called to him, as the ſovereign diſpenſer of his own gifts, whom he would from among his profeſſed diſciples, and they immediately came to him. Twelve of them he ſelected to be his conſtant attendants, to be witneſſes of his doctrine, life, and miracles, and to preach his goſpel. Their names we had before; but the title given to the ſons of Zebedee Mark particularly mentions: they were called Boanerges, ſons of thunder; either from the loudneſs of their voice, the vehemence of their addreſs, or the powerful energy which ſhould accompany their preaching. John, whoſe epiſtles breathe nothing but love, was one of them; and it would ſeem thereby to be intimated, that nothing acts ſo powerfully and forcibly upon the ſinner's heart, as the doctrines of the rich love and free grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt. Theſe twelve the Lord was pleaſed to inveſt with miraculous powers, to heal ſickneſſes, and caſt out devils, in confirmation of the doctrines they were to teach. And having thus appointed them their office, Chriſt retired with them into an houſe for refreſhment; and they henceforward attended him as his peculiar family, and continued in the greateſt intimacy with him during his abode upon earth. Note, The Saviour's choice is ſovereign, and none but thoſe whom he particularly calls, can be empowered to go forth in his name.

2. No ſooner was he known to be in the houſe at Capernaum, than the multitude aſſembled, eager to hear him; and tho' he and his diſciples had ſcarce time for neceſſrry refreſhment, yet he is ready to inſtruct them. Such inceſſant labours, without reſpite, excited the concern of ſome of his friends, who could not help thinking his zeal carried him too far, and that he would faint with fatigue and want of repoſe. They came therefore to perſuade him to deſiſt for a while, leſt he ſhould impair his health by ſuch uninterrupted toils. Perhaps ſome might think his intellects diſturbed, and would fain conſtrain him to come in and reſt himſelf. Note, (1.) Faithful miniſters will ſometimes find as great trials from the miſtaken affection of their friends, as from the avowed oppoſition of their enemies. (2.) Fervent zeal is often branded with madneſs by thoſe who never felt the love of immortal ſouls; but if we be beſide ourſelves, it is to God, 2 Cor. v. 13.

22. ¶ [q] And the ſcribes which came down from Jeruſalem, ſaid, [r] He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils caſteth he out devils. 23. And he called them unto him, and ſaid unto them in parables, How can Satan caſt out Satan? 24. And if a kingdom be divided againſt itſelf, that kingdom cannot ſtand. 25. And if a houſe be divided againſt itſelf, that houſe cannot ſtand. 26. And if Satan riſe up againſt himſelf, and be divided, he cannot ſtand, but hath an end. 27. [s] No man can enter into a ſtrong man's houſe, and ſpoil his goods, except he will firſt bind the ſtrong man, and then he will ſpoil his houſe. 28. Verily I ſay unto you, All ſins ſhall be forgiven unto the ſons of men, and [t] blaſphemies wherewith ſoever they ſhall blaſpheme: 29. But [u] he that ſhall blaſpheme againſt the Holy Ghoſt, hath never forgiveneſs, but is in danger of eternal damnation: 30. Becauſe they ſaid, He hath an unclean ſpirit.

[q] Mat. xxii. 24, &c. Luke xi. 51, &c.
[r] Mat. ix. 34. John viii. 48, 52.
[s] Iſa. xlix. 24. John xvi. 11.
[t] 1 Tim. i. 13, 16.
[u] 1 Sam. ii. 25. Heb. vi. 6. & x. 26. 1 John v. 16.

v. 22—30. That he did caſt out devils from them that were poſſeſſed, was evident. To evade the force of the miracles therefore, we have here,

1. The cavil raiſed by the Scribes and Phariſees who came down from Jeruſalem. They pretended he was in compact with Beelzebub, the prince of the devils, and derived this power from him.

2. Chriſt confutes their ſuggeſtion, and ſolemnly warns them of the unpardonable guilt they brought hereby upon their ſouls. It was as abſurd and ſelf-contradictory to ſuppoſe, that Satan would caſt out Satan, to confirm doctrines directly tending to deſtroy his power over the ſouls of men, as to ſuppoſe that a kingdom, or a houſe, divided againſt itſelf, can ſtand, or be eſtabliſhed by inteſtine factions and civil wars. The power which Jeſus exerted over the fiends of darkneſs, was like that which the conqueror exerciſes over the vanquiſhed, when he enters the fortreſs, binds the priſoner, and ſpoils his ſubſtance: Satan never would quit his hold, unleſs compelled. Evident therefore it was, that Chriſt came not as his aſſociate, but as his deſtroyer. To impute, therefore, his miracles to diabolical agency, was ſuch wilful obſtinacy and blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt, by whoſe powerful operations theſe miracles were wrought, that though all other ſin might be forgiven, this was eternally unpardonable, and would expoſe them to everlaſting deſtruction, as no other means of conviction or recovery would be ever afforded them.

31. ¶ [x] There came then his brethren and his mother, and ſtanding without, ſent unto him, calling him. 32. And the multitude ſat about him, and they ſaid unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without ſeek for thee. 33. And he anſwered them, ſaying, [y] Who is my mother, or my brethren? 34. And he looked round about on them which ſat about him, and ſaid, Behold, my mother and my brethren. 35. For [z] whoſoever ſhall do the will of God, the ſame is my brother, and my ſiſter, and mother.

x Mat. xii. 46. Luke viii. 19.
y Deut. xxxiii. 9.
z John xv. 14.

v. 31—35. Perhaps theſe were the friends, v. 20, 21. who wanted to lay hold on him, or they got his mother and brethren to join them; and perceiving him ſtill go on diſcourſing, made another effort to call him off. Though the crowd ſat ſo thick around him that they could not come near him, they conveyed to him however, by ſome of the multitude, their deſire to ſpeak with him; but he was too well employed to be diverted from it; and therefore, inſtead of paying any regard to his mother or brethren in this caſe, he turned to thoſe around him, profeſſing a regard for them like that due to a mother or brethren, and declaring thoſe to be his neareſt and deareſt relations who truly believed, and heartily obeyed the revealed will of God. Note, (1.) How great is the folly, as well idolatry of the Romiſh church in worſhipping the virgin, as if ſhe could command her ſon now he is in heaven, when even in the days of his fleſh ſhe was judged ſo unfit to adviſe him? (2.) When we are engaged in the work of Jeſus, and in the way of duty, nothing muſt divert us from the ſervice.

CHAP. IV.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the ſeed, and the four ſorts of ground, ver. 1—9. with the expoſition of it, ver. 10—20. and the application of it, ver. 21—25. 2. The parable of the ſeed growing gradually, but inſenſibly, ver. 26—29. 3. The parable of the grain of muſtard-ſeed, and a general account of Chriſt's parables, ver. 30—34. 4. The miracle of Chriſt's ſudden ſtilling a ſtorm at ſea, ver. 35—41.

1. [a] AND he began again to teach by the ſea-ſide: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, ſo that he entred into a ſhip, and ſat in the ſea: and the whole multitude was by the ſea, on the land. 2. And he taught them many things by parables, and ſaid unto them in his doctrine, 3. Hearken, Behold, there went out a ſower to ſow: 4. And it came to paſs as he ſowed, ſome fell by the way-ſide, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up. 5. And ſome fell on ſtony ground, where it had not much earth, and immediately it ſprang up, becauſe it had no depth of earth. 6. But when the ſun was up, it was ſcorched, and becauſe it had no root, it withered away. 7. And ſome fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up and choked it, and it yielded no fruit. 8. And other fell on good ground, and [b] did yield fruit that ſprang up, and increaſed, and brought forth ſome thirty, and ſome ſixty, and ſome an hundred. 9. And he ſaid unto them, [c] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. 10. And when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve, aſked of him the parable. 11. And he ſaid unto them, [d] Unto you it is given to know the myſtery of the kingdom of God: but unto them that are without, all theſe things are done in parables: 12. [e] That ſeeing they may ſee, and not perceive, and hearing they may hear, and not underſtand; leſt at any time they ſhould be converted, and their ſins ſhould be forgiven them. 13. And he ſaid unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how then will you know all parables? 14. ¶ [f] The ſower ſoweth the word. 15. And theſe are they by the way-ſide, where the word is ſown: but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was ſown in their hearts. 16. And theſe are they likewiſe which are ſown on ſtony ground, who when they have heard the word, [g] immediately receive it with gladneſs: 17. And have no root in themſelves, [h] and ſo endure but for a time: afterward when affliction or perſecution ariſeth for the word's ſake, [l] immediately they are offended. 18. And theſe are they which are ſown [k] among the thorns: ſuch as hear the word, 19. And [l] the cares of this world, and the deceitfulneſs of riches, and the luſts of other things entring in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful. 20. And theſe are they which are ſown on good ground, ſuch as hear the word, and receive it, [m] and bring forth fruit, ſome thirty fold, ſome ſixty, and ſome an hundred.

a Mat. xiii. 1, &c. Luke viii. 4, &c. b John xv. 5. Col. i. 5.
c Mat. xi. 15.
d Ibid. 25. & xvi. 17. 1 Cor. ii. 10. 1 John ii. 27.
e Iſa. vi. 9. John xii. 40. Acts xxviii. 26. Rom. xi. 8.
f Mat. xiii. 19. Luke viii. 11.
g Iſa. lviii. 2. Ezek. xxxiii. 31. Chap. vi. 20. John v. 35.
h Hoſ. vi. 4.
l Mat. xi. 6.
k Jer. iv. 3.
l Mat. xix. 23. 1 Tim. vi. 9. 2 Tim. iv. 10.
m John xv. 18.

v. 1—20. For the convenience of being heard by the vaſt multitudes who attended him, our Lord again returns to the ſea-ſhore; and entring into a boat, ſat down and taught this great and attentive congregation. Preaching to them the doctrines of truth under parables drawn from familiar objects. We have,

1. The parable of the ſower, which repreſents the different effects of the goſpel-word upon the hearts of men, Mat. xiii. 3. He damands attention, v. 3. for all who would underſtand muſt give diligence, and well conſider what they hear. The parable itſelf was plain, but even the twelve were dull of apprehenſion, and underſtood it not; but when they were retired with the reſt of the diſciples, they deſired of Jeſus the explanation of it: to which he graciouſly condeſcends, informing them of the diſtinguiſhed grace beſtowed on them, whilſt others were left to the blindneſs of their hearts; yet wondring withal at their wanting an explanation of what was ſo plain, v. 13. Note, (1.) The human underſtanding is ſtrangely dark in ſpiritual concerns: the plaineſt truths of God's word to the natural man are utterly unintelligible. (2.) It is a diſtinguiſhing act of grace when God is pleaſed to remove the vail from the heart, and opens the underſtanding to underſtand the ſcriptures. (3.) The more we are acquainted with our own ſtupid ignorance in the things of God, the more thankful ſhall we be for divine teaching.

2. The explication Chriſt gives is this. The ſeed is the word of God; himſelf, and all his faithful labourers, are the ſowers. The hearers are the ſoil; to many of them the word preached doth not profit, not being mixed with faith; but few, comparatively ſpeaking, effectually receive it, ſo as to profit thereby. Some are careleſs and inattentive; the ſeed ſown doth not at all abide upon their hearts; Satan, by ſome vanity, amuſement, or avocation, inſtantly ſnatches it away. Others for a moment hear it with joy, their paſſions are affected, but their hearts are unchanged; therefore, no ſooner is the impreſſion worn off, than they are like blaſted corn which withers away. Some are ſo engroſſed with the riches and cares of the world, the eager purſuits of its honours, pleaſures, or eſteem, that theſe, by degrees, eat out the life of their profeſſion, carnalize their ſouls, and make them earthly, ſenſual. Thus for the periſhing trifles of time, they loſe all the glories of eternity. A few, amidſt the general apoſtacy, with patient perſeverance endure; bring forth the gracious fruits of faith and holineſs, in meaſure according as God is pleaſed to diſpenſe to every man his gifts.

21. ¶ And he ſaid unto them, [o] Is a candle brought to be put under a buſhel, or under a bed? and not to be ſet on a candleſtick? 22. For [p] there is nothing hid which ſhall not be manifeſted: neither was any thing kept ſecret, but that it ſhould come abroad, 23. [q] If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. 24. And he ſaid unto them, Take heed what you hear: [r] with what meaſure ye mete, it ſhall be meaſured to you: and unto you that hear ſhall more be given. 25. [s] For he that hath, to him ſhall be given: and he that hath not, from him ſhall be taken even that which he hath. 26. ¶ And he ſaid, [t] So is the kingdom of God, as if a man ſhould caſt ſeed into the ground, 27. And ſhould ſleep, and riſe night and day, and the ſeed ſhould ſpring and grow up, he knoweth not how. 28. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herſelf, firſt the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. 29. But when the fruit is † brought forth, immediately he putteth in the ſickle, becauſe the harveſt is come. 30. ¶ And he ſaid, [u] Whereunto ſhall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what compariſon ſhall we compare it? 31. It is like a grain of muſtard-ſeed, which when it is ſown in the earth, is leſs than all the ſeeds that be in the earth. 32. But when it is ſown, [x] it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and ſhooteth out great branches, ſo that the fowls of the air may lodge under the ſhadow of it. 33. [y] And with many ſuch parables ſpake he the word unto them as they were able to hear it. 34. But [z] without a parable ſpake he not unto them, and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his diſciples.

o Mat. v. 15. Luke viii. 16. & xi. 33.
p Job xii. 22. Mat. x. 26. Luke xii. 2.
q Mat. xi. 15.
r Mat. vii. 2. Luke vi. 38.
s Mat. xiii. 12. Luke viii. 18. & xix. 26. John xv. 2. Rev. xxii. 11.
t Mat. xiii. 24.
† Or ripe.
u Mat. xiii. 31. Luke xiii. 18.
x Pſ. lxxx. 8—11. Prov. iv. 18.
y Mat. xiii. 34. John xvi. 12.
z Ver. 11.

v. 21—34. Our Lord proceeds to teach them under other parabolic repreſentations.

1. By the uſe we make of a candle when lighted up, Chriſt informs them what he juſtly expected of them, even to ſhine as lights in the world; communicating to others the truths they in ſecret learnt of him, and keeping back nothing of the whole counſel of God. Whatever gifts of nature or grace we enjoy, they are to be employed for God's glory and the good of mankind; and not through love of eaſe, or falſe ſhame, concealed or neglected. It is not enough that we walk in the light ourſelves, we muſt let our light alſo ſhine before men.

2. He warns them of the danger of negligence in improving the means and mercies they enjoyed. They are called upon to hear, and to take heed what they hear, that they may not let the word ſlip, nor be deluded; but by a careful uſe of their meaſure of the gift of grace to increaſe their ſtore, God being ready to communicate more abundant knowledge to ſuch attentive hearers, and to give farther aſſiſtances of ſpiritual light and ſtrength to thoſe who employ aright in the ſervice of Chriſt and immortal ſouls the portion they have received, whilſt he puniſhes the negligent and inattentive, by withdrawing from them the privileges wherewith he had favoured them.

3. He deſcribes the progreſs of his goſpel in the world, and of the ſeed of divine grace in the heart, by the growth of corn which, though unſeen for a while, and covered with earth, ſhoots up, increaſes inſenſibly till the harveſt, and then produces the ripe ear. Thus the miniſtry of Jeſus at firſt was ſcarce perceived, but the ſeed he ſowed afterwards ſprang up, continues through his word and ſpirit ſtill to grow, and ſhall ſhortly fill the face of the whole world with fruit. And ſo alſo in every heart, where the ſeed of eternal life is ſown by any miniſter of God, it grows without his care, when perhaps he is removed far away, or ſleeps in death; it is watered with the dew of heavenly influences; and though the manner of the ſpirit's operation in the divine change which is wrought is myſterious, as the manner how the corn vegetates, yet the effects are viſible, the ſoul is renewed day by day; the ſeed of grace, from ſmall beginnings, ſhoots inſenſibly upwards till the time of harveſt, when the ripe corn is gathered in, and perfected in holineſs the ſaints of God enter their eternal reſt. Lord, quicken this ſeed ſown in our ſouls day by day!

4. Much to the ſame purpoſe as the former, is the parable of the grain of muſtard-ſeed, and repreſents, (1.) The progreſs of the goſpel; which, from the ſmalleſt beginnings of the miniſtry of twelve poor fiſhermen, hath ſpread through the earth, and ſhall in due time reach from pole to pole, when all the kingdoms of the world ſhall become the kingdoms of the Lord and his Chriſt. (2.) The work of grace upon the heart. At firſt, like a grain of muſtard-ſeed, it is ſcarce perceptible; but increaſing with the increaſe of God, the herb grows into a tree, and meet to be tranſplanted among the cedars of glorified ſaints in the paradiſe of God.

5. He added many other like parables, that by line upon line, in this familiar manner, he might communicate ſpiritual truths under material objects; and without a parable ſpake he not unto them. They who deſired to underſtand might eaſily do it; and where difficulties aroſe, he was always ready, when alone, to explain them to the diſciples; whilſt thoſe who ſuperficially heard, neglected and forgot the word preached, were juſtly left in their native blindneſs and ignorance.

a Mat. viii. 35. [a] And the ſame day when the even was come, 18, 23. he ſaith unto them, Let us paſs over unto the other Luke viii. ſide. 36. And when they had ſent away the multi-
22. tude, they took him even as he was in the ſhip, and there were alſo with him other little ſhips. 37. And b Iſa. liv. 11. [b] there aroſe a great ſtorm of wind, and the waves beat into the ſhip, ſo that it was now full. 38. And he was c Pſ. x. 1. in the hinder part of the ſhip, [c] aſleep on a pillow: and Iſa. xlv. 15. they awake him, and ſay unto him, Maſter, careſt thou d Pſ. cii. 13. not that we periſh? 39. And he aroſe, and [d] rebuked the wind, and ſaid unto the ſea, Peace, be ſtill: and the wind ceaſed, and there was a great calm. 40. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye ſo fearful? how is it that you have no faith? 41. And they feared exceedingly, and ſaid one to another, What manner of man e Pſ. lxv. 7. & lxxxix. 9. & cvii. 29. is this, that even [e] the wind and the ſea obey him?

v. 35—41. No ſooner had Chriſt finiſhed his diſcourſe, and diſmiſſed the people, than he bids the diſciples croſs the lake, having work that calls him to the other ſide. Jeſus was never weary in well-doing, neither ſhould we.

1. The diſciples, without heſitation, obey; ready to follow their maſter wherever he led them; and accordingly they ſet ſail in the ſame veſſel which had been his pulpit, and a number of other boats accompanied them. For though the multitude departed, thoſe whoſe hearts were affected with what they had heard, choſe to cleave to the Lord, and follow him witherſoever he went, by land or by water. Note, (1.) They who are Chriſt's diſciples indeed, will never leave nor forſake him, whatever dangers may threaten. (2.) If Chriſt be with us, we may boldly launch forth; his preſence and bleſſing will be our ſupport and comfort.

2. A dreadful and ſudden ſtorm brought them into the moſt imminent danger; and, covered with waves, and full almoſt of water, the boat was ready to founder. Note, The church, and every faithful ſoul in it, hath at times been brought into the moſt perilous circumſtances; nothing hath kept either from ſinking but this, that Chriſt was there.

3. He ſlept ſecurely in the ſtern on a pillow, tired with the labours of the day: the ſtorm that drove the diſciples to their wits end, ſeemed but to rock him faſter to repoſe. Note, When we are in our deepeſt diſtreſſes, Chriſt ſometimes appears to diſregard our danger, as if he ſlept, inattentive to our cries; but he ſees, he hears, and will be found a very preſent help in trouble.

4. The diſciples in a fright awake him with their cries; Maſter, careſt thou not that we periſh? art thou indifferent about our danger; and wilt thou ſuffer us to be drowned? Their application to him beſpoke their faith, but their addreſs breathed the language of impatience and diſhonourable fear. Such a mixture of grace and corruption often appears in the beſt of men.

5. The Lord, whom winds and waves obey, aroſe; and at his commanding word, Peace, be ſtill, the billows in a moment ceaſed to roar, the ſwelling ſea ſubſided, the winds were huſhed, not a breath of air dimpled the ocean, not a whiſper broke the ſolemn ſilence. When our unruly paſſions are like the troubled ſea which cannot reſt, Iſa. lvii. 20. the voice of Jeſus, heard by faith, ſubdues their violence, and calms their rage—Under deep afflictions and temptations, when we are ready to abandon ourſelves to deſpair, he ſilences our fears, and ſtills our griefs; ſpeaking that inward peace to the conſcience, that in the midſt of ſorrows can make us rejoice with joy unſpeakable and full of glory.

6. He rebukes their unbelieving fears. Why are ye ſo fearful? ſo unneceſſarily, ſo inordinately fearful? How is it that ye have no faith? not in exerciſe at leaſt; though they had faith in him in general, in this particular their fears prevailed. How often do we under our trials deſerve the ſame rebuke?

7. The miracle filled the mariners with moſt reverential fear of the majeſty in which Jeſus now appeared, and with amazement they obſerved to each other, that he muſt be ſurely more than man, whom ſtormy winds and raging waves ſo inſtantly obey.

CHAP. V.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's caſting the legion of devils out of the man poſſeſſed, and ſuffering them to enter into the ſwine, ver. 1—20. Chriſt's healing the woman with the bloody iſſue in the way as he was going to raiſe Jairus's daughter to life, ver. 21—43. Theſe three miracles we had the ſtory of before, Mat. viii. 28, &c. and Mat. ix. 18, &c. but more fully related here.

1. [a] AND they came over unto the other ſide of the a Mat. viii.
ſea, into the country of the Gadarenes. 2. 28. Luke
And when he was come out of the ſhip, immediately viii. 26.
there met him out of the tombs, a man with an unclean ſpirit, 3. Who had his dwelling among the tombs, and no man could bind him, no not with chains: 4. Becauſe that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked a-ſunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him. 5. And always night and day he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying and cutting himſelf with ſtones. 6. But when he ſaw Jeſus afar off, he ran and worſhipped him, 7. And cried with a loud voice, and ſaid, What have I to do with thee, Jeſus, thou Son of the moſt high God? I adjure thee by God, [b] that thou torment me not. 8. b 2 Pet. ii. 4.
(For he ſaid unto him, Come out of the man, thou un- Jude 6. clean ſpirit). 9. And he aſked him, What is thy name? And he anſwered, ſaying, My name is Legion: for we are many. 10. And he beſought him much, that he would not ſend them away out of the country.
11. Now there was there nigh unto the mountains, a great herd of ſwine feeding. 12. And all the devils be-ſought him, ſaying, Send us into the ſwine, that we may enter into them. 13. And forthwith Jeſus gave them leave. And the unclean ſpirits went out, and entred into the ſwine, and the herd ran violently down a ſteep place into the ſea, (they were about two thouſand) and were choked in the ſea. 14. And they that fed fed the ſwine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to ſee what it was that was done. 15. And they come to Jeſus, and ſee him that was poſſeſſed with the devil, and had the legion, ſitting, and clothed, and in his right mind, and they were afraid. 16. And they that ſaw it, told them how it befel to him that was poſſeſſed with the devil, and alſo concerning the ſwine. 17. And [c] they began to pray him to depart out of their coaſts. 18. And when he was come into the ſhip, he that had been poſſeſſed with the devil, [d] prayed him that he might be with him. 19. Howbeit, Jeſus ſuffered him not, but ſaith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compaſſion on thee. 20. And he departed, and began to publiſh in Decapolis, how great things Jeſus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

[c] Deut. v. 25. Luke v. 8. Acts xvi. 39.

[d] Luke viii. 38.

v. 1—20. What a miſerable creature is man, when left to the power of the devil! What a mercy that Jeſus is come to deſtroy the works of the devil, and to take the prey from the mighty. An eminent inſtance of this here appears. We have,

1. The wretched caſe of a poor demoniack, driven by an unclean ſpirit, to dwell among the tombs; a terror to himſelf, and to all who approached him; ſo raging, that none could ſooth him; ſo ſtrong, no fetters could bind him. Though it had been often attempted, he broke the bands in ſunder, and fled; living in the mountains, and in the tombs; uttering horrid yellings, and cutting himſelf with the ſharp ſtones, till the blood guſhed out. Note, (1.) We have here a lively emblem of the natural man; his mind and conſcience are defiled; his paſſions drive him furiouſly on, and will be reſtrained by no fetters of God's law; under the power of Satan he is hurried to the exceſs of riot, madly wounding his own ſoul by ſin, and dangerous to all around him; inſenſible to every fearful conſequence, and wilful in diſobedience. (2.) Solitude gives peculiar advantage to the temptations of an unclean ſpirit.

2. No ſooner was Jeſus diſembarked, than the man in whom the devil was, ran and worſhipped him: the wicked ſpirit being awed by his preſence, or his power was now ſuſpended. Matthew ſays they were two; perhaps Mark mentions one only, as being the more fierce, and to him the Lord directed his diſcourſe.

3. On beholding ſo pitiable an object, Jeſus bid the unclean ſpirit depart, nor could his expoſtulation or intreaty prevail; though in the greateſt dread and horror the devil addreſſed him, acknowledging his divine power and glory; importunately begging, ſince he could have no intereſt in him, he might have nothing to do with him; and that he would not ſend him into the place of torment, and compel him to retire from the world to the priſon of hell before the day of final judgment. Note, (1.) The confeſſion of the devil was orthodox, but it is not a form of ſound words, but the work of the Holy Ghoſt upon the heart, that can avail to our ſalvation. (2.) When Chriſt comes to viſit our ſouls, he caſts out the unclean ſpirit, gives a new heart, and puts a right ſpirit within us.

4. To ſhew his own power over the fiends of darkneſs, Chriſt demanded the name of this evil ſpirit, and was anſwered, My name is legion, for we are many. A legion of Roman ſoldiers ſome reckon at ſix thouſand, whilſt others increaſe it to more than twelve; and this intimates the immenſe numbers of theſe fallen ſpirits which war againſt the ſouls of men; their vaſt power, regular order, and unanimity: what need then have we, who wreſtle with theſe principalities and powers, to put on the whole armour of God, and to be continually looking up for the ſtrength of our God, that we may be able to ſtand in the evil day.

5. Since they muſt quit their preſent hold, the devils earneſtly beſought him not to expel them from that heathen country, if he diſpoſſeſſed them from Judea. And there being a herd of ſwine feeding near the place, they deſired permiſſion to enter thoſe unclean animals; hoping by deſtroying them, to prejudice the people againſt Jeſus, and to gratify their own delight in miſchief; and for wiſe and juſt reaſons Chriſt permitted their requeſt; when inſtantly the devils ſeized the whole herd, about two thouſand; and filling them with madneſs, hurried them down a precipice into the lake, where they periſhed in the waters.

6. The keepers, who fled affrighted, ſpread through all the country the amazing ſtory of the cure of the demoniack, and the deſtruction of the ſwine. On which a vaſt concourſe of people aſſembled to ſee this ſtrange ſight; and, to their great ſurprize, found the man who had been poſſeſſed, and a terror to the country, now peaceably ſitting at the feet of Jeſus, clothed, and in the perfect exerciſe of his reaſon: and they who had been eye-witneſſes of the cure, reported all the circumſtances concerning the recovery of the man, and the deſtruction of the ſwine. Hereupon afraid, leſt Jeſus ſhould puniſh them yet more condignly if he tarried there, and more concerned for their temporal than eternal intereſts, they intreated him to depart out of the country. And ſince they thus ſinned againſt their own mercies, Jeſus abandons them to the deluſions they had choſen.

7. Though his countrymen rejected Chriſt, the poor man who was cured, would fain have followed him; but Jeſus bid him rather return, and bear teſtimony to the miracle of grace he had experienced, and awaken thereby the concern of his friends to ſeek after the Lord, who had done ſo great things for him. Accordingly the man obeyed his command; and tranſported with gratitude, publiſhed every where in that country what Jeſus had done for him, to the great aſtoniſhment of all who heard the ſtory. Note, (1.) They who know the bleſſing of Chriſt's preſence, long to be ever near him, and cannot but lament if their lot be caſt among the tents of Kedar, where his goſpel hath no place. (2.) They who are reſtored by Jeſus to their right mind, from that moment begin to live to his glory, and to ſpeak his praiſes. (3.) What the Lord doth for the ſinful ſoul are great things indeed, for which we can never enough adore and thank him.

21. And when Jeſus was paſſed over again by ſhip unto the other ſide, much people gathered unto him, and he was nigh unto the ſea. 22. [e] And behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the ſynagogue, Jairus by name, and when he ſaw him, he fell at his feet, 23. And beſought him greatly, ſaying, My little daughter lieth [f] at the point of death, I pray thee come and lay thy hands on her, that ſhe may be healed, and [g] ſhe ſhall live. 24. And Jeſus went with him, and much people followed him, and thronged him. 25. And a certain woman which had [h] an iſſue of blood twelve years, 26. And had ſuffered many things of many phyſicians, and had ſpent all that ſhe had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worſe, 27. When ſhe had heard of Jeſus, came in the preſs behind, and touched his garment. 28. For ſhe ſaid, If I may touch but his clothes, I ſhall be whole. 29. And ſtraightway the fountain of her blood was dried up: and ſhe felt in her body that ſhe was healed of that plague. 30. And Jeſus immediately knowing in himſelf, that [i] virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the preſs, and ſaid, Who touched my clothes? 31. And his diſciples ſaid unto him, Thou ſeeſt the multitude thronging thee, and ſayeſt thou, Who touched me? 32. And he looked round about to ſee her that had done this thing. 33. But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth. 34. And he ſaid unto her, Daughter, [k] thy faith hath † made thee whole: go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.

[e] Mat. ix. 18. Luke viii. 41.

[f] Mat. ix. 18.

[g] John xi. 25.

[h] Lev. xv. 19, &c.

[i] Luke vi. 19.

[k] Mat. ix. 22. Chap. x. 52.

† Gr. Saved thee. Acts xiv. 9.

v. 21—34. Since the Gadarenes rejected him, Chriſt croſſes the lake to Capernaum, where he expected a more welcome reception. Hereupon,

1. A ruler of the ſynagogue, with deepeſt reſpect, made his application to him, in behalf of his little daughter, who lay a dying when he came out from his houſe, and was even then dead; yet ſuch was his faith in the power of Jeſus, that he was perſuaded, deſperate as the caſe appeared, he could ſtill reſtore her to life and health. Note, The ſtate of the ſinner dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, is to human view irrecoverably deſperate, but nothing is impoſſible with God.

2. As Jeſus went with the ruler, a poor diſeaſed woman ſtole a cure. Her malady diſcouraged her from making an open application to Jeſus, and her faith perſuaded her it was needleſs; the very touch of his garments being, in her apprehenſion, ſufficient for her cure; even though her diſorder had baffled the phyſician's ſkill, and under their hands her pockets had not only been emptied, but her complaints aggravated. Nor was ſhe miſtaken; for no ſooner had ſhe through the crowd got near enough to touch his garment, than immediately on ſo doing, her diſeaſe was removed, ſhe felt her health perfectly reſtored, and was retiring with wonder and thankfulneſs. But Jeſus, who perceived the virtue which had gone out of him, for the manifeſtation of his own glory, and the confirmation of the poor patient's faith, turning himſelf, demanded who touched him? which the diſciples anſwered with a kind of ſurprize and rudeneſs, as if, conſidering the crowd, ſuch a queſtion was very ſtrange. But Jeſus overlooked their frowardneſs, and caſting his eyes round to diſcover the perſon he meant, the poor woman, conſcious of what had paſſed, and trembling leaſt the Lord ſhould be diſpleaſed at the manner in which ſhe had ſurreptitiouſly obtained her cure, came and fell at his feet, declaring all that had paſſed. Whereupon, far from being angry, Jeſus encouraged and comforted her, making honourable mention of her faith; and diſmiſſed her not only with a cure, but with his peace and benediction, which was infinitely better.

Note, (1.) We are generally driven to Chriſt by mere neceſſity, having in vain tried all other methods, and convinced at laſt that he muſt ſave us freely, or we muſt periſh. (2.) All our ſpiritual diſeaſes can only be removed by the touch of faith; till virtue come out of Chriſt, we can have no health in ourſelves. (3.) Where he works, a univerſal bleſſed change appears in all the tempers of the mind, and in the whole outward conduct and converſation. (4.) When we are diſcouraged with fear, at the feet of Jeſus we ſhould lay our burdens, and he will ſpeak peace to our troubled ſouls.

35. [l] While he yet ſpake, there came from the ruler of the ſynagogue's houſe, certain which ſaid, Thy daughter is dead, why troubleſt thou the Maſter any further? 36. As ſoon as Jeſus heard the word that was ſpoken, he ſaith unto the ruler of the ſynagogue, Be not afraid, only believe. 37. And he ſuffered no man to follow him, ſave Peter, and James, and John the brother of James. 38. And he cometh to the houſe of the ruler of the ſynagogue, and ſeeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly. 39. And when he was come in, he ſaith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damſel is not dead, [m] but ſleepeth. 40. And they laughed him to ſcorn: but [n] when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damſel, and them that were with him, and entreth in where the damſel was lying. 41. And he took the damſel by the hand, and ſaid unto her, Talitha cumi, which is being interpreted, Damſel (I ſay unto thee) ariſe. 42. And ſtraightway the damſel aroſe, and walked; for ſhe was of the age of twelve years: and they were aſtoniſhed with a great aſtoniſhment. 43. And [o] he charged them ſtraitly, that no man ſhould know it: and commanded that ſomething ſhould be given her to eat.

[l] Luke viii. 49.
[m] John xi. 11.
[n] Acts ix. 40.
[o] Mat. ix. 30. Luke v. 14.

v. 35—43. A diſcouraging meſſage met the afflicted Jairus as Jeſus was now on the way with him. Tidings were brought that his daughter was dead, and his friends conclude it was in vain to trouble Chriſt any farther; ſuppoſing that though he cured the ſick, to raiſe the dead was beyond his power. But,

1. Our Lord encourages the diſtreſſed parent, bids him not to give way to deſpondence, but only believe, and he ſhould ſtill ſee that death, as well as diſeaſe, was under his controul. Note, Faith is the great preſervative from all our fears: when thoſe who are neareſt and deareſt to us are removed, we have a ground of abiding conſolation, that we ſhall meet them at the reſurrection of the juſt.

2. When he came to the houſe, he ſuffered none to enter with him but Peter, James, and John, enough to be witneſſes of the miracle, with the father and mother of the child: and rebuking the exceſſive lamentations of thoſe who were within, he aſſured them there was no real cauſe for them, as the damſel was not irrecoverable, as they apprehended; but though ſleeping in the arms of death, he would awake her. But they, fully aſſured of her death, treated with deriſion this ſuggeſtion. Unworthy, therefore, to be witneſſes of his wondrous power and grace, he put them all out, and permitting only his three diſciples, and the parents of the damſel, to be with him, he went in where the child lay, took her by the hand, and bid her riſe; when inſtantly her ſpirit returned, ſhe aroſe, being about twelve years old, and, to the exceeding amazement of her parents, walked about in perfect health; and to ſhew ſhe ſtill retained her former animal life, and that her appetite was reſtored with her health, he bid them give her ſomething to eat. Note, (1.) We are dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, as this child, till by the goſpel-word awakened Jeſus imparts the effectual power, and enables us to ariſe at his command to newneſs of life. (2.) When Chriſt gives ſpiritual life, it muſt be daily fed in the uſe of thoſe means of grace, whereby he continues to miniſter ſtrength and nouriſhment to the ſoul.

3. He gave them all a ſtrict charge not to divulge this miracle. He knew how his growing fame would exaſperate his enemies, and as his hour was not yet come, he uſed every prudent means to preſerve his life, till he had finiſhed the work which was given him to do.

CHAP. VI.

Here is, 1. Chriſt contemned by his countrymen, ver. 1—6. 2. The power he gave his apoſtles over unclean ſpirits, ver. 7—13. 3. A ſtrange notion which Herod and others had of Chriſt, upon which occaſion, we have the ſtory of the martyrdom of John Baptiſt, ver. 14—29. 4. Chriſt's retirement into a deſart place with his diſciples; the crowds that followed him thither to receive inſtruction from him, and his feeding five thouſand of them with five loaves and two fiſhes, ver. 30—44. 5. Chriſt's walking upon the ſea to his diſciples, and the abundance of cures he wrought on the other ſide the water, ver. 45—56.

1. [a] AND he went out from thence, and came into his own country, and his diſciples follow him. 2. And when the ſabbath-day was come, he began to teach in the ſynagogue: and many hearing him, [b] were aſtoniſhed, ſaying, From whence hath this man theſe things? and what wiſdom is this which is given unto him, that even ſuch mighty works are wrought by his hands? 3. [c] Is not this the carpenter, the ſon of Mary, the brother of James and Joſes, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his ſiſters here with us? and [d] they were offended at him. 4. But Jeſus ſaid unto them, [e] A prophet is not without honour but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own houſe. 5. And [f] he could there do no mighty work, ſave that he laid his hands upon a few ſick folk, and healed them. 6. And he marvelled becauſe of their unbelief. [g] And he went round about the villages, teaching.

[a] Mat. xiii. 54. Luke iv. 16.
[b] Mat. vii. 28. Chap. i. 22. Luke iv. 32.
[c] Iſa. xlix. 7. John vi. 42.
[d] Iſa. liii. 3. Mat. xi. 6.
[e] John iv. 44.
[f] Mat. xiii. 58. Chap. ix. 23.
[g] Mat. ix. 35. Luke xiii. 12.

v. 1—6. From Capernaum our Lord viſited the place of his education, Nazareth, accompanied by his diſciples. And there, as was his cuſtom,

1. On the ſabbath-day he entred into the ſynagogue; and from the law and the prophets preached the things concerning himſelf with ſuch dignity and elocution, as quite amazed his countrymen. He had been bred among them, a carpenter by trade, without any education; his family and relations were all perſons of mean and low circumſtances; how he ſhould be able to diſcourſe with ſuch readineſs, and perform ſuch miraculous works, they could not conceive; and yet their prejudices againſt him, on account of his low birth and education, prevailed over their admiration; and notwithſtanding all the wonders they beheld, they diſdained to be followers of a perſon ſo mean and deſpicable in their account. Note, (1.) The humiliation of Jeſus, at which they were offended, ſhould make him the dearer to us. (2.) If the Lord, in our nature, ſubmitted to earn with the labour of his hands the bread he eat, let it teach us how commendable is induſtry, and never to deſpiſe any man becauſe he is poor.

2. To rebuke their folly, and puniſh their unbelief, he reminds them how they verified that proverbial ſaying, A prophet is not without honour but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own houſe; people ordinarily paying more reſpect to ſtrangers and perſons unknown, than to thoſe with whom having been indulged in familiarity, they are ready to treat them with contempt. Therefore, except healing a few ſick folk, he refuſed to exerciſe his power and grace among them. Their unbelief bound up, as it were, the hands of his omnipotence; and marvelling at it, he left them, in juſt judgment, to the perverſeneſs and impenitence of their hearts, carrying the glad tidings of ſalvation from them to the other villages of Galilee, where greater reſpect would be payed to his perſon and miniſtry.

7. ¶ [h] And he calleth unto him the twelve, and began to ſend them forth by two and two, and gave them power over unclean ſpirits, 8. And commanded them that they ſhould take nothing for their journey, ſave a ſtaff only: no ſcrip, no bread, no money in their purſe: 9. But be [i] ſhod with ſandals: and not put on two coats. 10. And he ſaid unto them, In what place ſoever ye enter into an houſe, there abide till ye depart from that place. 11. And whoſoever ſhall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, [k] ſhake off the duſt under your feet, for a teſtimony againſt them. Verily I ſay unto you, [l] It ſhall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for that city. 12. And they went out, and preached that men ſhould repent. 13. And [m] they caſt out many devils, and [n] anointed with oil many that were ſick, and healed them.

[h] Mat. x. 1. Luke ix. 1.
[i] Acts xii. 8.
[k] Neh. v. 13. Acts xiii. 51. & xviii. 6.
[l] Mat. xi. 22, 24.
[m] Ver. 7.
[n] Jam. v. 14.

v. 7—13. The twelve having now for a while attended their maſter, are here,

1. Sent forth to preach what they had learned of him, and endued with power to work miracles, and caſt out devils, in confirmation of the doctrine they taught. For their mutual comfort and ſupport, they were joined in pairs, and forbid to cumber themſelves with cloaths or proviſions; but muſt ſet off juſt as they were, with only their ſtick in their hand, the cloaths on their backs, and the ſandals on their feet, truſting upon divine providence for a ſupply of their wants during their travels. Their meſſage would deſerve and procure them a welcome. Wherever therefore they came, and were received into a houſe, there they muſt fix their quarters till they removed to another city or village. But if in any place they were refuſed a hoſpitable entertainment, and no attention was paid to their preaching, they are commanded immediately to depart, ſhaking off the duſt of their feet, in teſtimony of abhorrence of their wickedneſs and infidelity; and not Sodom or Gomorrha in the day of Judgment will meet ſo ſevere a doom as that city. Note, (1.) They who reject the calls of the goſpel, periſh under the moſt accumulated guilt. (2.) The miniſters of Chriſt are worthy of their maintenance; and ſince they have renounced the world for the ſervice of men's ſouls, it becomes thoſe to whom they miniſter liberally to ſupply their wants, that they may be wholly without care, to give themſelves up to the word of God and to prayer.

2. The apoſtles went, in obedience to their maſter's orders, preaching the doctrine of repentance, and calling men to turn unto the Lord, and receive his Meſſiah, whoſe kingdom was ready to appear. And in confirmation of their divine authority, they caſt out devils, and miraculouſly healed the ſick, by anointing them with oil in the name of the Lord, in token of their being reſtored to health. Note, The great end of the miniſtry is the converſion of men's ſouls. They who have not this in view, and do not ſee any fruit of their labours, may juſtly ſuſpect they ran without being ſent.

14. [o] And king Herod heard of him, (for his name was ſpread abroad) and he ſaid, That [p] John the Baptiſt was riſen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do ſhew forth themſelves in him. 15. [q] Others ſaid, That it is Elias. And others ſaid, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets. 16. But when Herod heard thereof, he ſaid, It is John whom I beheaded, he is riſen from the dead. 17. For Herod himſelf had ſent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in priſon for Herodias ſake, his brother Philip's wife; for he had married her. 18. For John had ſaid unto Herod, [r] It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife. 19. Therefore Herodias had † a quarrel againſt him, and would have killed him, but ſhe could not. 20. For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a juſt man and an holy, and ‡ obſerved him, and when he heard him, he did many things, and [s] heard him gladly. 21. And when a convenient day was come that Herod on his birth-day made a ſupper to his lords, high captains, and chief eſtates of Galilee: 22. And when the daughter of the ſaid Herodias came in, and danced, and pleaſed Herod, and them that ſat with him, the king ſaid unto the damſel, Aſk of me whatſoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. 23. And [t] he ſware unto her, Whatſoever thou ſhalt aſk of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. 24. And ſhe went forth, and ſaid unto her mother, What ſhall I aſk? And ſhe ſaid, The head of John the Baptiſt. 25. And ſhe came in ſtraightway with haſte unto the king, and aſked, ſaying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger, the head of John the Baptiſt. 26. And the king was exceeding ſorry, yet for his oath's ſake, and for their ſakes which ſat with him, he would not reject her. 27. And immediately the king ſent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the priſon, 28. And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damſel: and the damſel gave it to her mother. 29. And when his diſciples heard of it, they came and took up his corps, and laid it in a tomb.

[o] Mat. xiv. 1. Luke ix. 7.
[p] Pſal. xiv. 5.
[q] Mat. xvi. 14.
[r] Lev. xviii. 16. & xx. 21.
† Or an inward grudge.
‡ Or ſaved him.
[s] Ezek. xxxiii. 32. Chap. iv. 16.
[t] Eſth. v. 3, 6. Prov. vi. 2. Eccleſ. v. 6.

v. 14—29. The fame of Jeſus had by this time reached the ears of Herod. His guilty conſcience ſuggeſted to him that John, whom he had murdered, was now riſen from the dead, and inveſted with greater powers than before, perhaps to avenge his blood upon the head of his murderer. Others thought him to be Elijah, the forerunner of the Meſſiah; others one of the ancient prophets revived; others a new prophet ſent of God, like thoſe of old; but all miſtook his true character, and knew him not as the Saviour of the world. Herod, haunted with the ghoſts of his injuſtice and cruelty, perſiſted in the conviction, that this was ſurely John the Baptiſt, whom he had beheaded. The narrative of which bloody tranſaction is related in nearly the ſame words as before, Mat. xiv. To what was there ſaid, we may here farther obſerve,

1. How far a man may go in his convictions, without being ever effectually wrought upon. Herod was in his conſcience perſuaded that John was a juſt man, and a holy; his whole demeanor ſhewed the Baptiſt to be ſuch, and commanded veneration. And ſo far many go, as to be convinced of the integrity of God's miniſters, and reverence their character; to obſerve them, to attend their miniſtry with ſeriouſneſs and conſtancy, to do many things that are right through their preaching; yea, to take delight in their diſcourſes, and to feel a tranſient joy whilſt ſitting under them: and yet like Herod, may never be divorced from their darling ſins, nor their hearts at all effectually changed.

2. How commendable is fidelity! All the reſpect and kindneſs of Herod did not make John the leaſt indulgent to his ſins; he told him plainly, though a king, the guilt and danger of his ſtate, and charged upon his conſcience his lewdneſs, adultery, and inceſt in marrying his brother's wife: and ſuch ſhould we be, imitating this holy plainneſs and ſimplicity, neither moved by caraſſes, nor deterred by fear; but approving ourſelves to every man's conſcience in the ſight of God.

3. They who will be thus faithful, may expect to be often ſeverely treated. The hearts of ſinners will be exaſperated, and malice will drive them, like Herodias, to contrive ſome miſchief againſt their reprovers, and thus to revenge the honeſt rebukes, which they regard as premeditated affronts.

30. And the apoſtles gathered themſelves together unto Jeſus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. 31. And he ſaid unto them, Come ye yourſelves apart into a deſert place, and reſt a while: for [u] there were many coming and going, and they had no leiſure ſo much as to eat. 32. And [x] they departed into a deſert place by ſhip privately. 33. And the people ſaw them departing and many knew him, and ran a foot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him. 34. And Jeſus when he came out, ſaw much people, and [y] was moved with compaſſion towards them, [z] becauſe they were as ſheep not having a ſhepherd: and he began to teach them many things. 35. And when the day was now far ſpent, his diſciples came unto him, and ſaid, This is a deſert place, and now the time is far paſſed: 36. Send them away, that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themſelves bread: for they have nothing to eat. 37. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, [a] Give ye them to eat. And they ſay unto him, [b] Shall we go and buy two hundred † penny-worth of bread, and give them to eat? 38. He ſaith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and ſee. And when they knew, they ſay, Five, and two fiſhes. 39. And he commanded them to make all ſit down by companies upon the green graſs. 40. And they ſat down in ranks by hundreds and by fifties. 41. And when he had taken the five loaves, and the two fiſhes, he looked up to heaven, and [c] bleſſed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his diſciples, [d] to ſet before them; and the two fiſhes divided he among them all. 42. And they did all eat, and were filled. 43. And they took up twelve baſkets full of the fragments, and of the fiſhes. 44. And they that did eat of the loaves, were about five thouſand men.

[u] Chap. iii. 20.
[x] Mat. xiv. 13. Luke ix. 10.
[y] Mat. ix. 36.
[z] 1 Kings xxii. 17. Jer. l. 6. Ezek. xxxiv. 2.
[a] John vi. 5, &c.
[b] Num. xi. 22. 2 Kings iv. 43.
† A Roman Penny is Seven-pence Halfpenny. Mat. xviii. 28.
[c] Mat. xv. 36. & xxvi. 26. Rom. xiv. 6.
[d] Mat. xxiv. 45.

v. 30—44. The apoſtles having executed the commiſſion with which their maſter had entruſted them, return to give him an account of their miniſtry and ſucceſs. And bleſſed and happy are they who can give up this account to him with joy!

Satisfied in their report, and well pleaſed with their ſervice, our Lord,

1. Teſtifies his tenderneſs and regard for them, by calling them into a retirement, where they might repoſe themſelves awhile after their labours. For where they were, ſuch crowds were perpetually coming and going, deſirous to hear, or wanting to be healed, that they had not leiſure even to eat their neceſſary food. Note, (1.) In theſe frail bodies at preſent, the moſt ardent ſpirits muſt yield to ſome repoſe and relaxation; it is reſerved for the felicity of a better world, to ſerve God day and night without ceaſing. (2.) Our reſt muſt be but for a while, juſt enough to ſtrengthen us to return with freſh vigour to the work of the Lord.

2. He ſhews his compaſſions to the multitude who followed them. For though they withdrew privately, and coaſted the lake in a boat, to a deſert place near the city of Bethſaida, yet many watched the courſe they ſteered, and were ſo eager after the company and teaching of Jeſus, that they ran faſter than the boat went, and were on the ſpot when he arrived, ready to receive him. Jeſus, on diſembarking, beheld them with compaſſion, knowing how deſtitute they were of faithful guides, and neglected as ſheep without a ſhepherd; and therefore well pleaſed to be interrupted and deprived of his purpoſed retirement, he inſtantly ſet himſelf to inſtruct them in the things pertaining to his kingdom, and their own everlaſting peace, in which delightful work, and in healing their ſick, he continued till evening drew on. Note, (1.) They who have a true reliſh for the goſpel of Jeſus, will take many a weary ſtep for the ſake of attending that miniſtry, where it is diſpenſed with power. (2.) It is a peculiar pleaſure to preach to thoſe, who appear a-thirſt for the word of truth.

3. He not only fed their ſouls with the heavenly manna of his doctrine, but their bodies by miraculous food. The diſciples, as the day drew to a cloſe, reminded him how far the people were from any inhabited place, and that the night would ſoon come on; it would be neceſſary, therefore, they ſuggeſt, to diſmiſs the multitude, that they might get ſome refreſhment after faſting ſo long. But He, to prove their faith, bid them provide for them the neceſſary repaſt. In a ſurprize, they look not to his power, but to their own inability: Where ſhould they get bread, or money to buy it, when two hundred pennyworth would not be ſufficient to give a morſel to each? Perceiving they had no notion whence the ſupply ſhould come, he enquired what ſtore of proviſion they had with them? they told him only five barley loaves, and two fiſhes, a quantity utterly inſufficient to ſatisfy ſuch a multitude. Commanding them to be brought, Jeſus took the loaves; and having diſpoſed the people in ranks, a hundred in depth, and fifty in length, he gave thanks, brake, and gave to his diſciples, who waited on the gueſts; and far from want, there appeared enough and to ſpare: they not only made a hearty meal, but left fragments ſufficient to fill twelve baſkets, which Chriſt commanded to be collected with care, not only to ſupply their future wants, but to make the miracle appear more illuſtrious. Note, (1.) They who love the word, will for the ſake of it ſometimes forego their neceſſary food. (2.) Barley loaves, with Chriſt's bleſſing, afford a ſweeter feaſt than the richeſt delicacies without it. (3.) Chriſt's diſciples muſt be content with, and thankful for coarſe fare. (4.) Waſte, even of crumbs of barley bread, is ſinful; no fragments are to be loſt, when there are ſo many who want them.

45. [e] And ſtraightway he conſtrained his diſciples to get into the ſhip, and to go to the other ſide before unto Bethſaida, while he ſent away the people. 46. And when he had ſent them away, he departed into a mountain to pray. 47. And when even was come, the ſhip was in the midſt of the ſea, and he alone on the land. 48. And he ſaw them [f] toiling in rowing: (for the wind was contrary unto them) and [g] about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, [h] walking upon the ſea, and [i] would have paſſed by them. 49. But when they ſaw him walking upon the ſea, they ſuppoſed it had been a ſpirit, and cried out. 50. (For they all ſaw him, and were troubled) And immediately he talked with them, and ſaith unto them, Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid. 51. And he went up unto them into the ſhip, and the wind ceaſed: and they were ſore amazed in themſelves beyond meaſure, and wondred. 52. For they conſidered not the miracle of the loaves, for their heart was † hardned. 53. [k] And when they had paſſed over, they came into the land of Genneſaret, and drew to the ſhore. 54. And when they were come out of the ſhip, ſtraightway they knew him, 55. And ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds thoſe that were ſick, where they heard he was. 56. And whitherſoever he entred, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the ſick in the ſtreets, and beſought him [l] that they might touch, if it were but the border of his garment: and [m] as many as touched him, were made whole.

[e] Mat. xiv. 22. John vi. 17.
[f] Iſa. liv. 11.
[g] Pſ. xlvi. 1.
[h] Job ix. 8.
[i] Luke xxiv. 28.
† Gr. Darkened. Chap. iii. 5. & viii. 17. & xvi. 14.
[k] Mat. xiv. 34.
[l] Chap. v. 27.
[m] Chap. iii. 10. Luke vi. 19. Acts xix. 12.

v. 45—56. The entertainment being finiſhed, Chriſt bid his diſciples firſt embark, and croſs the lake, which they did with reluctance; thinking this a good opportunity for him to declare himſelf, and ſet up, as they expected, his temporal kingdom. But he, diſmiſſing the multitude, retired into a mountain, as he was wont, to ſpend ſome time in prayer; to teach us the neceſſity of keeping up private communion with God, as the beſt means of enabling us to go comfortably through our public miniſtrations. Mean time we are told,

1. The diſtreſs of the diſciples. The wind was tempeſtuous, and directly a head, ſo that though they pulled hard, they got no way, and had advanced in many hours not above thirty furlongs. We may expect in Chriſt's ſervice to meet with difficulties, but if we patiently perſevere, all will be well.

2. After exerciſing their faith and patience till the morning watch, at laſt Chriſt came to them, walking upon the waters, and ſeemed as though he would have paſſed them; but they all diſcovered ſomething walking on the water, and ſuppoſing it an apparition, ſhrieked out, exceedingly affrighted; till his well-known voice ſtilled their fears, ſaying, Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid; and entring the boat, inſtantly the wind and waves ſubſided, to the exceeding aſtoniſhment of the apoſtles, who, forgetting the miracle of the loaves which they had juſt ſeen, were ſo dull and ſtupid in their hearts, as to be ſurprized at this new manifeſtation of their Maſter's divine power, though they were daily eye witneſſes to his ſtupendous miracles. Note, (1.) If Chriſt's people toil hard through a night of temptations, or deſertion, the morning will come, a little faith and patience ſhall bring them to the light of peace and joy. (2.) Our fancies raiſe a thouſand unneceſſary fears; and in our diſtreſs we often ſuſpect that Chriſt is paſſing from us, when he is really coming to us. (3.) It is then comfortable with the troubled ſoul when Jeſus reveals himſelf, and ſaith with the voice of love, It is I, be of good cheer. Lord, ſpeak thou to my ſoul, and it ſhall reſt from all its fears!

3. No ſooner had they reached the ſhore, near Capernaum, than immediately the rumour of his arrival ſpread on every ſide, and vaſt multitudes crowded around him, bringing the ſick and diſeaſed; in every city, town, or village that he paſſed, they were laid on beds in the ſtreets, and beſought him, that they might touch, if but the border of his garment; and as many as touched him were perfectly cured, whatever was their malady. O Jeſus, enable me to touch thee with my trembling hand of faith, and heal thou my ſin-ſick ſoul!

CHAP. VII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's diſpute with the ſcribes and Phariſees about eating meat with unwaſhen hands, ver. 1—13. The needful inſtructions he gave to the people upon that occaſion, and theſe further explained to his diſciples, ver. 14—23. 2. His curing the woman of Canaan's daughter that was poſſeſſed, ver. 24—30. 3. The relief of a man that was deaf, and had an impediment in his ſpeech, ver. 31—37.

1. [a] THEN came together unto him the Phariſees, and certain of the ſcribes, which came from Jeruſalem. 2. And when they ſaw ſome of his diſciples eat bread with defiled (that is to ſay, with unwaſhen) hands, they found fault. 3. For the Phariſees, and all the Jews, except they waſh their hands † oft, eat not, [b] holding the tradition of the elders. 4. And when they come from the market, except they waſh, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the waſhing of cups and pots, braſen veſſels, and of ‡ tables. 5. Then the Phariſees and ſcribes aſked him, [b] Why walk not thy diſciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwaſhen hands? 6. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, Well hath Eſaias propheſied of you hypocrites, as it is written, [c] This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. 7. Howbeit, in vain do they worſhip me, [d] teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. 8. For laying aſide the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the waſhing of pots and cups: and many other ſuch like things ye do. 9. And he ſaid unto them, [e] Full well ye § reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition. 10. For Moſes ſaid, [f] Honour thy father and thy mother: and, [g] Whoſo curſeth father or mother, let him die the death. 11. But ye ſay, If a man ſhall ſay to his father or mother, It is ‖ Corban, that is to ſay, a gift, by whatſoever thou mighteſt be profited by me: he ſhall be free. 12. And ye ſuffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother: 13. Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many ſuch like things do ye. 14. ¶ [h] And when he had called all the people unto him, he ſaid unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and underſtand. 15. [i] There is nothing from without a man that entring into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, thoſe are they that defile the man. 16. [k] If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. 17. And when he was entred into the houſe from the people, his diſciples aſked him concerning the parable. 18. And he ſaith unto them, Are ye ſo without underſtanding alſo? Do ye not perceive, that whatſoever thing from without entreth into the man, it cannot defile him, 19. Becauſe it entreth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats? 20. And he ſaid, [l] That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. 21. For from within, [m] out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, 22. Thefts,

[a] Mat. xv. 1.
† Gr. With the fiſt.
‡ Or beds.
[b] Col. ii. 8.
[c] Iſa. xxix. 13. Ezek. xxxiii. 31.
[d] Col. ii. 18—22.
[e] Prov. i. 25.
§ Or fruſtrate.
[f] Ex. xx. 12. Deut. v. 16.
[g] Ex. xxi. 17. Lev. xx. 9. Prov. xx. 20. & xxx. 17.
‖ i. e. a gift. Mat. xv. 5.
[h] Mat. xv. 10.
[i] Acts x. 15. Rom. xiv. 14. 1 Tim. iv. 4. Tit. i. 15.
[k] Mat. xi. 15. & xiii. 9.
[l] Jam. iii. 6.
[m] Gen. vi. 5. & viii. 21. Prov. vi. 14. Jer. xvii. 9.

† coveтouſneſs, wickedneſs, deceit, laſciviouſneſs, an evil eye, blaſphemy, pride, fooliſhneſs: 23. All theſe evil things come from within, and defile the man.

† Gr. Covetouſneſſes, wickedneſſes.

v. 1—23. The Scribes and Phariſees could not bear to ſee the poor people follow Jeſus, though to be cured; yet they could take a long journey purely to cavil with him.

1. They found fault with his diſciples for eating with unwaſhen hands, contrary to the tradition of the elders, and complained to Chriſt of their criminal neglect; for ſo they eſteemed it, being ſuperſtitiouſly ſcrupulous to waſh before they ſat down to meat, when they returned from market, and on a variety of other occaſions; pretending great carefulneſs to avoid defilement. And for the ſame purpoſe they waſhed alſo their pots, cups, braſen veſſels, and tables, or beds; leſt by the touch of any impure perſon they ſhould have contracted pollution; and fancying much religion conſiſted in theſe abſurd traditions, they were ready to condemn every deviation from them with greater ſeverity, than even the breaches of God's written law.

2. Chriſt vindicates his diſciples, and reproves the hypocriſy and wickedneſs of their accuſers. They truly fulfilled the prophecy of Iſaiah; apoſtate in heart from God, whilſt they pretended to honour him with the lip and the knee in much apparent devotion. They ſtamped human traditions with divine authority; impoſed them as obligatory on men's conſciences; and not only laid great ſtreſs upon the obſervance of theſe ſuperſtitious waſhings, but really ſubverted the plaineſt and weightieſt commands of the law, when they ſtood in competition with their traditions. A more flagrant evidence of which cannot be conceived, than our Lord here produces againſt them. The tradition of the elders had eſtabliſhed it as a rule, that if a man ſwore by Corban, by the gold of the temple, or that he would devote ſuch a thing to the treaſury of the temple, or would regard it as a devoted thing, and not part with it on any occaſion, he was bound to fulfil his vow. And though the commandment of God had ſo expreſsly provided for the honour and ſupport of parents, laying an awful curſe upon the undutiful ſon that ſpoke or acted contemptuouſly againſt them; yet they held he was bound by his vow, and diſpenſed with from obſerving the evident commands of God, and the plaineſt dictates of duty and gratitude; ſo that he might ſafely withhold the leaſt relief from his parents, however indigent, infirm, or aged; yea, was conſcientiouſly obliged to do ſo: a tradition ſo iniquitous and ſhocking, as moſt directly violated the word of God, and made it of no effect. Yet that, and many other things as impious, did the Phariſees impoſe on their diſciples; and, under the maſk of pretended ſanctity, and reverence for the temple, ſapped the very foundations of true religion.

3. To prevent the people from being impoſed upon by theſe blind guides, he demands their attention to his diſcourſe, as being a matter of higheſt importance; for if their principles were right, a correſpondent practice would follow. This great axiom therefore Chriſt lays down, that nothing without a man, which he touches or eats, any farther than it hath a bad influence upon his heart, can render him in God's ſight morally unclean; but that all impurity comes from within: and the evil thoughts and deſires which are expreſſed in words and actions, theſe are what defile the man, and render him odious in the ſight of God; and this he bids them carefully remark and remember. The diſciples, far from being yet emancipated from the vulgar opinions concerning the things by which a perſon was defiled, when they were alone, deſired our Lord to explain his laſt obſervation to them, which appeared to them hard to be underſtood. With an air of ſurprize at their dulneſs, our Lord reproves their ſtupidity: if others were in the dark, they at leaſt ſhould have underſtood him. However, he is pleaſed to explain his meaning, ſo as to prevent the poſſibility of miſtake. Two things he lays down, and ſupports with the cleareſt arguments. (1.) That whatever meats a man may eat, as they do not enter into his heart, which is the ſource of all moral purity or pollution, but merely paſs through the body, therefore without intemperance they can communicate no defilement before God. (2.) That the origin of all evil, and the cauſe of all uncleanneſs, is from within; whence proceeds all that train of evils before obſerved, Mat. xv. 19. to which others are here added, covetouſneſſes, the unſatiſfied cravings of the heart after worldly things; wickedneſs, the contrivances of malice, and delight in miſchief; deceit, in words or deeds, to conceal the deſigns of iniquity; laſciviouſneſs, the impure imaginations, dalliance, or diſcourſe, which the lewd indulge, though deterred from groſſer acts of impurity; an evil eye, envying the enjoyments of others, or coveting what they poſſeſs; pride, the high conceit, the lofty look, the contemptuous or inſolent carriage of the ſwelling heart; fooliſhneſs, the boaſts of vanity, the ebullitions of folly, the raſhneſs of inconſiderate cenſure, and the haſtineſs of imprudence. Theſe, and theſe alone, are the defiling things that ſpring from the fountain-head of evil in the fallen ſpirit, and render the ſoul vile in itſelf, and abominable in the eyes of God.

24. ¶ [n] And from thence he aroſe, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and entred into an houſe, and would have no man know it; but he could not be hid. 25. For a certain woman, whoſe young daughter had an unclean ſpirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet: 26. (The woman was a † Greek, a Syrophenician by nation) and ſhe beſought him that he would caſt forth the devil out of her daughter. 27. But Jeſus ſaid unto her, Let the children firſt be filled: for [o] it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to caſt it unto the dogs. 28. And ſhe anſwered and ſaid unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs. 29. And he ſaid unto her, For this ſaying, [p] go thy way, the devil is gone out of thy daughter. 30. And when ſhe was come to her houſe, ſhe found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

[n] Mat. xv. 21.
† Or Gentile.
[o] Mat. vii. 6.
[p] Iſa. lvii. 16.

v. 24—30. We have here one ſhort excurſion of the divine Redeemer into the coaſts of the Gentiles; an earneſt of the gracious deſigns he had in ſtore for them: but, that he might not offend the Jews, to whom he was particularly ſent, he choſe not to appear in public, and therefore entred into a houſe: but, tho' he would have no man know it, his fame was too much ſpread abroad to admit of his concealment. And we have,

1. The application of a poor Gentile to him in behalf of her daughter who was poſſeſſed. Falling at his feet, ſhe earneſtly importuned him to caſt out the devil from her child. At firſt her addreſs met with ſuch diſcouragement as Jeſus was very unuſed to give to poor petitioners. Compared with the choſen people of Iſrael, he ſpeaks as if the Gentiles were but as dogs, to whom the children's meat (the miracles he wrought) muſt not be thrown, at leaſt, not till the children firſt be filled. Far from deſiſting on ſuch a repulſe, ſhe wonderfully turns the apparent refuſal into an argument for granting the favour ſhe aſked, and deſired, as a dog, only to have one crumb, one miracle, among the multitudes that every day were ſo abundantly diſpenſed to the Jewiſh children. Note, (1.) They who have children poſſeſſed with unclean ſpirits, cannot but earneſtly preſent their ſad caſe before the Lord, who alone can cure them. (2.) A poor ſupplicant at the feet of Jeſus may confidently hope amidſt every diſcouragement for an anſwer of peace at the laſt. If Jeſus delays, it is to exerciſe their faith, and prove their perſeverance.

2. The cure is wrought. Pleaſed with the poor Gentile's addreſs, and admiring her faith, he grants her requeſt: The devil is gone out of thy daughter; as ſhe found to her unſpeakable comfort, when, depending on the accompliſhment of the word of Jeſus, ſhe returned to her houſe. So ſure is the prayer of faith to prevail.

31. ¶ And again [p] departing from the coaſts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the ſea of Galilee through the midſt of the coaſts of Decapolis. 32. And [q] they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his ſpeech: and they beſeech him to put his hand upon him. 33. And [r] he took him aſide from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he ſpit, and touched his tongue. 34. And [s] looking up to heaven, [t] he ſighed, and ſaith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened. 35. And ſtraightway [u] his ears were opened, and the ſtring of his tongue was looſed, and he ſpake plain. 36. And [x] he charged them that they ſhould tell no man: but the more he charged them, ſo much the more a great deal they publiſhed it, 37. And were beyond meaſure aſtoniſhed, ſaying, He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to ſpeak.

[p] Mat. xv. 29.
[q] Mat. ix. 32. Luke xi. 14.
[r] Chap. viii. 23.
[s] John xi. 41. & xvii. 1.
[t] John xi. 33, 38.
[u] Iſa. xxxv. 6.
[x] Chap. v. 43.

v. 31—37. Jeſus was never weary of the delightful work of going about doing good. On his return from the Gentile coaſt into the region of Decapolis, a new object of mercy is preſented before him.

1. The caſe was afflictive: the poor patient was deaf, and either quite dumb, or not able to ſpeak without much difficulty: the emblem of the miſerable ſinner, whoſe ears are cloſed to all the ſweet ſounds of goſpel-grace, and unaffected with the thunders of Sinai; his lips ſealed up, unable to ſpeak the language of prayer or praiſe, or to communicate in converſation grace to the hearers.

2. The cure was ſingular: not by a word merely, as Jeſus uſually wrought his miracles; but taking the poor man aſide, he put his fingers into his ears, and ſpit, and touched his tongue; not as cauſes that could contribute to his cure, but to ſhew he was not bound to any method of procedure. Then looking up to heaven, he ſighed, in compaſſion to the human miſeries, or grieved for the hardneſs of their hearts, who, after ſo many miracles, believed not on him; and then ſaith unto him, Ephphatha, that is in the Chaldee dialect, Be opened; and inſtantly the cure was wrought, he heard diſtinctly and ſpake plainly. And thus by the commanding voice of his Spirit he ſaith to the ſpiritually deaf and dumb, Be opened; and the ears are unſtopped, the tongue is looſed, they know the joyful ſound of goſpel-grace, and ſpeak aloud the praiſes of their Redeemer.

3. To avoid all appearances of vain glory, and not to exaſperate his malicious enemies, he gave the people a charge to conceal the miracle; but they could not be ſilent; nay, rather the more they publiſhed it, that ſuch modeſt excellence might be known; and all with aſtoniſhment heard the report, and from ſuch repeated inſtances were compelled to acknowledge to his honour, that all his works beſpoke the glory of his character, full of power and grace, without the leaſt tincture of oſtentation. He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to ſpeak. Is not this then the Chriſt? See Iſa. xxxv. 5, 6.

CHAP. VIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's miraculous feeding four thouſand with ſeven loaves and a few ſmall fiſhes, ver. 1—9. 2. His refuſing to give the Phariſees a ſign from heaven, ver. 10—13. 3. His cautioning his diſciples to take heed of the leaven of Phariſaiſm and Herodianiſm, ver. 14—21. 4. His giving ſight to a blind man at Bethſaida, ver. 22—26. 5. Peter's confeſſion of him, ver. 27—30. 6. The notice he gave his diſciples of his own approaching ſufferings, ver. 31—33. and the warning he gave them to prepare for ſufferings likewiſe, ver. 34—38.

1. [a] IN thoſe days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jeſus called his diſciples unto him, and ſaith unto them, 2. [b] I have compaſſion on the multitude, [c] becauſe they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat: 3. And if I ſend them away faſting to their own houſes, they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far. 4. And his diſciples anſwered him, [d] From whence can a man ſatisfy theſe men with bread here in the wilderneſs? 5. And he aſked them, How many loaves have ye? And they ſaid, Seven. 6. And he commanded the people to ſit down on the ground: and he took the ſeven loaves, and [e] gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his diſciples to ſet before them: and [f] they did ſet them before the people. 7. And they had a few ſmall fiſhes: and he bleſſed, and commanded to ſet them alſo before them. 8. So they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left, ſeven baſkets. 9. And they that had eaten were about four thouſand; and he ſent them away.

[a] Mat. xv. 32.
[b] Mat. ix. 36.
[c] Pſ. xxxiv. 10.
[d] Num. xi. 22. 2 Kings iv. 43.
[e] Mat. xxvi. 26. Chap. vi. 41. Rom. xiv. 6.
[f] Mat. xxiv. 45.

v. 1—9. The compaſſions of Jeſus flow without ceaſing towards the wretched and indigent. Vaſt multitudes followed him; and, ſo eager were the people to attend him, that neither toil nor hunger diſcouraged them. He therefore who graciouſly fed their ſouls with his heavenly doctrine, here again is pleaſed by a miracle to feed their famiſhed bodies. We have ſeen it recorded in nearly the ſame words, Mat. xv. 32. and may learn, (1.) To count nothing hard in the way of duty, whilſt we are following Chriſt. (2.) To truſt him with our bodies as well as ſouls, and verily we ſhall be fed. (3.) Not to be diſcouraged if we do not ſometimes ſee any immediate proſpect of relief under our difficulties: the Lord can open an unexpected door of deliverance for us.

10. ¶ And ſtraitway he entred into a ſhip with his diſciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha. 11. And the Phariſees came forth, and began to queſtion with him, [g] ſeeking of him a ſign from heaven, tempting him. 12. And he ſighed deeply in his ſpirit, and ſaith, [h] Why doth this generation ſeek after a ſign? verily I ſay unto you, [i] There ſhall no ſign be given to this generation. 13. And he left them, and entring into the ſhip again, departed to the other ſide. 14. ¶ [k] Now the diſciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ſhip with them more than one loaf. 15. And he charged them, ſaying, [l] Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Phariſees, and of the leaven of Herod. 16. And they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, It is becauſe we have no bread. 17. And when Jeſus knew it, he ſaith unto them, Why reaſon ye, becauſe ye have no bread? [m] perceive ye not yet, neither underſtand? have ye your heart yet hardned? 18. Having eyes, ſee ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember? 19. [n] When I brake the five loaves among five thouſand, how many baſkets full of fragments took ye up? They ſay unto him, Twelve. 20. [o] And when the ſeven among four thouſand, how many baſkets full of fragments took ye up? And they ſaid, Seven. 21. And he ſaid unto them, [p] How is it that ye do not underſtand?

[g] Mat. xii. 38. & xvi. 1.
[h] John iv. 48. 1 Cor. i. 22.
[i] Mat. xvi. 4.
[k] Mat xvi. 5, &c.
[l] Luke xii. 1.
[m] Chap. vi. 52.
[n] Chap. vi. 43.
[o] Ver. 8.
[p] Mat. xvi. 11.

v. 10—21. Dalmanutha was a place not far from Magdala, Mat. xv. 39. thither our Lord bent his courſe.

1. The Phariſees there met him, and cavilling as uſual, demanded a ſign from heaven, as if all his other miracles did not ſufficiently prove his divine miſſion: not that they deſired to be convinced, but ſought a pretence for their infidelity. Therefore,

2. Chriſt refuſed to grant their requeſt. Not that he could not work the miracle they ſought, but becauſe he knew the wickedneſs of their intentions in aſking it; and therefore ſighing deeply, as grieved for the hardneſs of their hearts, he expoſtulates with them on the unreaſonableneſs of their infidelity, when ſuch amazing ſigns had been given them for their conviction already; and denying their requeſt, he abandons them to their ruin. Note, They who will not ſubmit to the evidence of the ſcriptures, are juſtly given up to the blindneſs of their minds, and left to periſh in their unbelief.

3. On this he took occaſion, as they were croſſing the lake, to caution his diſciples againſt the leaven of the Phariſees and of Herod; which they, having forgotten to take ſcarce any bread with them, interpreted literally as a rebuke for their careleſsneſs, and an admonition not to apply to the Phariſees for relief, or to eat of their bread. And whilſt they were caſting the blame of their negligence upon each other, Jeſus, who perceived their folly and ſtupidity, ſharply rebuked them for their uneaſineſs in this matter, as arguing great unbelief of his power, which they had ſeen ſo wonderfully and lately exerted, whereof he reminds them; and therefore it was ſtrange they ſhould be ſo ſenſeleſs, and their hearts yet hardened, as not to perceive, that he meant not his diſcourſe concerning bread literally, which he could ſo eaſily ſupply, but of the doctrines of the Phariſees and Herod, which were to be ſhunned as dangerouſly pernicious. Note, (1.) It is amazing to think of the hardneſs of our hearts, that, after multiplied experience of God's goodneſs, we are apt again to diſtruſt his care the moment new difficulties ariſe. (2.) The more we know and underſtand what Chriſt is, and hath done for his people, the more will our hearts be engaged to truſt him in every emergence.

22. ¶ And he cometh to Bethſaida, and they bring a blind man unto him, and beſought him [q] to touch him. 23. And he took the blind man by the hand, and [r] led him out of the town; and when he had [s] ſpit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he aſked him if he ſaw ought. 24. And he looked up, and ſaid, I ſee men as trees walking. 25. After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was reſtored, and [t] ſaw every man clearly. 26. And he ſent him away to his houſe, ſaying, Neither go into the town, [u] nor tell it to any in the town.

[q] Chap. v. 28, 29.
[r] Ver. 12.
[s] John ix. 6. Rev. iii. 18.
[t] Prov. iv. 18.
[u] Ver. 12. Luke xix. 42.

v. 22—26. This miracle is related by Mark alone, and is probably ſelected from the innumerable multitude of others, becauſe ſome circumſtances in it are ſingular.

1. The application was made to Jeſus by this poor blind man's friends, who led him to the Saviour, deſiring that he would touch him, perſuaded that this would effectually work the cure. Note, In our prayers we ſhould not ceaſe to pray for poor blind ſouls, intreating the Lord to open the eyes of their mind.

2. He took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town, chuſing to heal him ſecretly, and perhaps in juſt judgment upon the place, where ſo many miracles had been wrought, and yet they continued in their infidelity.

3. He healed him; and this he did not by a word, but in an unuſual manner, and gradually. He ſpat on his eyes, and aſking what he ſaw, ſome glimmerings of light broke in upon him, and he beheld men as trees walking, his viſion being yet indiſtinct and confuſed; but when Jeſus had put his hands upon his eyes, and bid him look up again, then he ſaw every object clearly. Thus often is he pleaſed to work in the heart: at firſt the light, like the dawning day, breaks upon the ſoul, and ſome glimmerings of ſpiritual things are perceived; of the danger and guilt of ſin; the neceſſity of caring for the ſoul; the want of a Redeemer, &c. Afterwards our views enlarge; we gain deeper diſcoveries of our own corruption, and Chriſt's all-ſufficiency; till at laſt we come to the perfect day in glory, and know even as we are known.

4. He charges the man not to return to Bethſaida, nor acquaint any one there with his cure: their obſtinate impenitence under the miracles they had ſeen rendered them unworthy of any more of thoſe mighty works. They who ſlight their own mercies, juſtly forfeit them.

27. ¶ [x] And Jeſus went out, and his diſciples, into the towns of Ceſarea-Philippi: and by the way he aſked his diſciples, ſaying unto them, Whom do men ſay that I am? 28. And they anſwered, [y] John the Baptiſt: but ſome ſay, Elias; and others, One of the prophets. 29. And he ſaith unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am? And Peter anſwereth and ſaith unto him, [z] Thou art the Chriſt. 30. And [a] he charged them that they ſhould tell no man of him. 31. And [b] he began to teach them, that the Son of man muſt ſuffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief prieſts, and ſcribes, and be killed, and after three days riſe again. 32. And he ſpake that ſaying openly. And [c] Peter took him, and began to rebuke him. 33. But when he had turned about, and looked on his diſciples, he rebuked Peter, ſaying, [d] Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou ſavoureſt not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men. 34. ¶ And when he had called the people unto him, with his diſciples alſo, [e] he ſaid unto them, Whoſoever will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and [f] take up his croſs, and follow me. 35. For [g] whoſoever will ſave his life, ſhall loſe it; but whoſoever ſhall loſe his life for my ſake and the goſpel's, the ſame ſhall ſave it. 36. For what ſhall it profit a man, if he ſhall gain the whole world, and loſe his own ſoul? 37. Or [h] what ſhall a man give in exchange for his ſoul? 38. [i] Whoſoever therefore ſhall be aſhamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and ſinful generation, of him alſo ſhall the Son of man be aſhamed when [k] he cometh in the glory of his Father, [l] with the holy angels.

[x] Mat. xvi. 13. Luke ix. 18.
[y] Mat. xiv. 2.
[z] John vi. 69 & xi. 27. Acts viii. 37. 1 John iv. 15. & v. 5.
[a] Mat. xvii. 9.
[b] Chap. ix. 31. & x. 33.
[c] Mat. xvi. 22.
[d] 2 Sam. xix. 22.
[e] Mat. xvi. 24. Luke ix. 23.
[f] Mat. x. 38. Acts xiv. 22. 1 Theſ. iii. 3. 2 Tim. iii. 12.
[g] Luke xvii. 33. John xii. 25.
[h] Pſ. xlix. 7, 8.
[i] Mat. x. 33. Luke xii. 9. 2 Tim. ii. 12.
[k] Mat. xxvi. 64.
[l] Dan. vii. 10. Jude 14.

v. 27—38. In their journey to the towns of Ceſarea-Philippi, we are told,

1. The enquiry of Chriſt concerning the opinion which the people entertained of him, and what were the ſentiments of the Apoſtles in particular. They inform him of the general veneration in which he was held, though men's opinions concerning him were divided; ſome ſuppoſing him the Baptiſt riſen from the dead; others, Elias; others, one of the former prophets returned. With regard to themſelves, Peter, in the name of the reſt, profeſſes their faith in him as a much greater character, even that of the divine Meſſiah. Hereupon Jeſus commanded them to keep this for the preſent ſecret, the time being not yet come for declaring in ſuch expreſs terms his pretenſions, leſt the people, prepoſſeſſed with the notions of a temporal Meſſiah, ſhould be excited to an inſurrection, or his enemies be exaſperated to cut him off immediately, before he had finiſhed his work. For though nothing happens but by the divine decree, in time and manner as fixed from eternity, and no man dies before his appointed hour; yet he who hath ordained the end, hath ordained the means moſt proper to accompliſh the counſels of his own will.

2. Chriſt hereupon informs them more freely and openly than he had done before, concerning the ſufferings he muſt endure, to wean them from thoſe vain imaginations concerning the temporal kingdom they expected, and to prepare them for ſo afflictive an event. Peter's heart fired at the mention; he could not bear to hear of his Maſter's death, when he had juſt entertained the moſt ſanguine hopes of his greatneſs; and therefore taking him aſide, expreſſed his aſtoniſhment that he ſhould talk in ſuch a manner: for which Peter got a ſevere and juſt rebuke before his fellow-diſciples, to check their aſpiring views, as well as his own. Chriſt tells him, he acted as his bittereſt enemy in oppoſing his ſufferings: Satan could do no worſe: and he ſhewed an utter want of diſcernment concerning the nature of the Meſſiah's kingdom, and the great ends which God deſigned to accompliſh by that death he was about to undergo. In truth, Peter's eyes were ſo fixed on temporal grandeur, that he could reliſh nothing which ſeemed to contradict his aſpiring views. Note, (1.) In true diſciples there may be found what calls for ſharp rebuke. (2.) The croſs is ever diſpleaſing to our fallen nature, and we are too apt, like Peter, to be ſeeking for ourſelves eaſe or greatneſs: hence in ſuffering times ſo many are offended.

3. He takes occaſion hereupon to declare the terms of diſcipleſhip, and to ſuggeſt arguments to engage his faithful followers to meet courageouſly the perſecutions they muſt expect in his ſervice. Self-denial, readineſs to take up the croſs, and conformity to the pattern of a ſuffering Saviour, are abſolutely required of every follower of Jeſus: nor muſt we count our lives dear to us, when his ſervice requires us to part with them. Not that our ſufferings, or even death itſelf, will be our loſs; no: they will prove our greateſt gain, and we ſhall find in life eternal an abundant recompenſe. Whilſt if through fear or dread of ſuffering in this world, we ſave our lives by baſe compliances, our loſs will be irreparable and eternal; we ſhall periſh without remedy; and the gain of ten thouſand worlds will never countervail the loſs of an immortal ſoul: and as ſure as ever we are aſhamed of the cauſe of Jeſus, and diſown him by our unfaithfulneſs, ſo ſurely may we expect to be diſowned by him in the great day of his appearing and glory: let us therefore count the coſt, and with full purpoſe of heart cleave unto the Lord.

CHAP. IX.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's transfiguration upon the mount, ver. 1—13. 2. His caſting the devil out of a child, when the diſciples could not do it, ver. 14—29. 3. His prediction of his own ſufferings and death, ver. 30—32. 4. The check he gave to his diſciples for diſputing who ſhould be greateſt, ver. 33—37. And to John, for rebuking one who caſt out devils in Chriſt's name, and did not follow with them, ver. 38—41. 5. Chriſt's diſcourſe with his diſciples of the danger of offending one of his little ones, ver. 42. and of indulging that in ourſelves which is an offence, and an occaſion of ſin to us, ver. 43—50. moſt of which paſſages we had before, Mat. xvii. and xviii.

1. AND he ſaid unto them, [a] Verily I ſay unto you, that there be ſome of them that ſtand here, which ſhall not taſte of death, [b] till they have ſeen the kingdom of God come with power. 2. ¶ And [c] after ſix days Jeſus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themſelves: and [d] he was transfigured before them. 3. And his raiment became ſhining, [e] exceeding white as ſnow; ſo as no fuller on earth can white them. 4. And there appeared unto them Elias, with Moſes: and they were talking with Jeſus. 5. And Peter anſwered and ſaid to Jeſus, Maſter, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias. 6. For he wiſt not what to ſay, for they were ſore afraid. 7. And there was a cloud that overſhadowed them: and [f] a voice came out of the cloud, ſaying, [g] This is my beloved Son: [h] hear him. 8. And ſuddenly when they had looked round about, they ſaw no man any more, ſave Jeſus only with themſelves. 9. And as they came down from the mountain, [i] he charged them that they ſhould tell no man what things they had ſeen, till the Son of man were riſen from the dead. 10. And they kept that ſaying with themſelves, queſtioning one with another what the riſing from the dead ſhould mean. 11. ¶ And they aſked him, ſaying, Why ſay the ſcribes that [k] Elias muſt firſt come? 12. And he anſwered and told them, Elias verily cometh firſt, and reſtoreth all things, and [l] how it is written of the Son of man, that he muſt ſuffer many things, and be ſet at nought. 13. But I ſay unto you, that [m] Elias is indeed come, and [n] they have done unto him whatſoever they liſted, as it is written of him.

[a] Mat. xvi. 28. Luke ix. 27.
[b] Mat. xxiv. 34.
[c] Mat. xvii. 1. Luke ix. 28.
[d] 2 Pet. i. 16.
[e] Dan. vii. 9.
[f] 2 Pet. i. 17.
[g] Mat. iii. 17. Chap. i. 11.
[h] Deut. xviii. 18. Acts iii. 22.
[i] Chap. viii. 30.
[k] Mal. iv. 5. Mat. xvii. 10.
[l] Pſ. xxii. 6, &c. Iſa. liii. 2, &c. Dan. ix. 26.
[m] Mat. xi. 14. Luke i. 17.
[n] Chap. vi. 27.

v. 1—13. The firſt verſe of this chapter ſhould properly, as in Matthew, have cloſed the preceding; as it is the concluſion of that diſcourſe, and an argument to engage the fidelity of his diſciples, from the view of the nearneſs of the Meſſiah's coming with power and glory, to puniſh the perſecutors of his people by the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate and nation; and, by the mighty effuſion of his Spirit, to erect his church in the world, and bleſs the labours of his faithful miniſters with the moſt aſtoniſhing ſucceſs; and theſe events ſome of thoſe then preſent ſhould live to ſee.

Six days after the former diſcourſe we have an account,

1. Of his transfiguration on the mount, in preſence of three of his diſciples, See Mat. xvii. This glimpſe of his glory would ſerve to prevent the offence of the croſs, and enable them, when they reflected on what they now ſaw and heard, to ſtand faſt, unmoved under all the diſcouragements which their faith might afterwards encounter.

2. Of the diſcourſe which paſſed between Chriſt and his diſciples as they came down from the mountain. However deſirous Peter was of dwelling there, the glorious ſcene was tranſient, like thoſe bright gleams of heavenly conſolation we ſometimes enjoy below; and though we ſay it is good for us to be here, he who knows beſt, will not have us now live by ſight, but by faith. Chriſt, as they went, particularly charged them to take no notice of what they had ſeen and heard; at leaſt, not till after his reſurrection from the dead, when this viſion would gain the more ready credence, and ſerve to prove his divine glory even in the midſt of his humiliations. What this reſurrection from the dead ſhould mean, they were at a loſs to conceive; whether it was to be taken literally, or to be applied metaphorically to his exaltation from his preſent ſtate of poverty and indigence, to the throne of that glorious temporal kingdom which their prejudices ſtill expected. And as they had been taught by their ſcribes, that Elias was to prepare the way for the Meſſiah's coming and kingdom, they enquired of him whether there was any real ground for ſuch an expectation, eſpecially as Elias had made ſo ſhort a ſtay with them on the mount, and had not appeared at all in public. Chriſt clears up their doubts: The perſon ſpoken of by the prophet Malachi, was not to be Elias perſonally, according to the traditions taught by the ſcribes, but one in his ſpirit and power, and he had already appeared, and been rejected; plainly pointing them to John the Baptiſt, in whom the prophecy was fulfilled. And the ſame inſpired writings that foretold the coming of John, predicted alſo the ſufferings and indignities the Meſſiah ſhould ſuffer; theſe therefore alſo they may aſſuredly expect to ſee accompliſhed in their ſeaſon.

o Mat. xvii. 14. Luke ix. 37.
p Chap. i. 26. Rev. xii. 12.
q Chap. xi. 23. Luke xvii. 6.

14. ¶ [o] And when he came to his diſciples, he ſaw a great multitude about them, and the ſcribes queſtioning with them. 15. And ſtraightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him, ſaluted him. 16. And he aſked the ſcribes, What queſtion ye with them? 17. And one of the multitude anſwered and ſaid, Maſter, I have brought unto thee my ſon, which hath a dumb ſpirit: 18. And whereſoever he taketh him, he teareth him: and he foameth, and gnaſheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I ſpake to thy diſciples, that they ſhould caſt him out, and they could not. 19. He anſwered him, and ſaith, O faithleſs generation, how long ſhall I be with you? how long ſhall I ſuffer you? bring him unto me. 20. And they brought him unto him: and [p] when he ſaw him, ſtraightway the ſpirit tare him, and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming. 21. And he aſked his father, How long is it ago ſince this came unto him? And he ſaid, Of a child. 22. And oft-times it hath caſt him into the fire, and into the waters to deſtroy him: but if thou canſt do any thing, have compaſſion on us, and help us. 23. Jeſus ſaid unto him, [q] If thou canſt believe, all things are poſſible to him that believeth. 24. And ſtraightway the father of the child cried out, and ſaid with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief. 25. When Jeſus ſaw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul ſpirit, ſaying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf ſpirit, I charge thee, Come out of him, and enter no more into him. 26. And the ſpirit cried, and rent him ſore, and came out of him; and he was as one dead, inſomuch that many ſaid, He is dead. 27. But Jeſus took him by the hand, and lifted him up, and he aroſe. 28. And when he was come into the houſe, his diſciples aſked him privately, Why could not we caſt him out? 29. And he ſaid unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by faſting and prayer.

v. 14—29. At the return of Jeſus with his three diſciples from the mount, he found their companions in no ſmall perplexity.

1. The cauſe of it was, their being unable to heal a child poſſeſſed of a devil, who was brought to them for cure during their maſter's abſence: whereupon the Scribes triumphed over them, and probably were now diſputing againſt them concerning their Maſter's doctrine and miracles, and the authority they pretended to derive from him. In this juncture Jeſus himſelf appeared; and ſtruck with ſurprize at his critical arrival, the people with eagerneſs ran to him, congratulating him on his return, and giving him a hearty welcome. Note, (1.) They who have ever taſted the ſweetneſs of communion with Jeſus, cannot but mourn his abſence, and welcome his return. (2.) When we are moſt at a loſs what to ſay or do, the Lord then appears peculiarly gracious in coming to our help, and ordering our goings.

2. Addreſſing himſelf to the Scribes on the cauſe of the diſpute, they dared not to anſwer him; but the father of the child repreſented the piteous caſe, and the unſucceſsfulneſs of his application to the diſciples. His child was poſſeſſed of a dumb ſpirit, under whoſe malicious influence he was often thrown into terrible convulſions, foaming at the mouth, gnaſhing his teeth, and pining away under the frequent and violent returns of theſe diabolical agitations. And he had brought him to the diſciples, who had attempted to cure him in vain.

3. With a ſharp rebuke to the malicious Scribes, and all others who had joined them in their diſpute with the diſciples, (among whom, probably, the father of the child might be included, on being diſappointed in his application) he brands them as a faithleſs generation, wilfully blind to all the ſtupenduous evidences of his power which he had ſhown, a people who wearied out his patience; but he would give them, notwithſtanding, a freſh evidence of that divine miſſion they diſputed, and therefore bids the father bring the child to him. If they will not believe, they ſhall, at leaſt, be left without excuſe.

4. No ſooner was the lad brought within ſight of Jeſus, than the ſpirit, enraged at being about to be diſpoſſeſſed, threw him to the ground in the moſt violent agonies, as if he would have torn him in pieces, and there he lay wallowing and foaming. To make the cure appear more ſingular, Jeſus hereupon aſked, How long he had been thus afflicted? The father anſwered, from his very infancy; and repreſenting the imminent dangers to which he was frequently expoſed, of being drowned or burnt, by this malicious ſpirit, who had oft caſt him into the fire and into the water, he importunately begs, if this be not a caſe beyond the power of Jeſus, that he would compaſſionate a parent as well as child ſo diſtreſſed, and help them out of their miſeries. Note, (1.) In our firſt approaches to Chriſt, young converts often meet the moſt violent conflicts. (2.) The poſſeſſion of inveterate corruption is from the womb, and nothing but the almighty grace of Jeſus can cure the deeply-rooted evil. (3.) Sometimes we doubt Chriſt's power, ſometimes his willingneſs to help us, and both ſhew the unbelief of our hearts.

5. In anſwer to his ſuggeſtion, Chriſt replied, If thou canſt believe, all things are poſſible, &c. He had ſaid, If thou canſt do, as if he ſuſpected Chriſt's want of power, therefore he retorts upon him, and bids him ſuſpect his want of faith; yet to encourage his truſt, aſſures him, that this and every other caſe is poſſible, when the application is made in faith. With eagerneſs and tears, between fear and hope, the afflicted father cried out, Lord, I believe thy all-ſufficiency, and grieving over the hardneſs and infidelity of my heart, beg thee to help mine unbelief, and enable me confidently to truſt thee. Note, (1.) If ever we come ſhort of any of our requeſts, we may aſſuredly impute it to our unbelief. (2.) It is a ſure ſign of ſome faith when a man is convinced of, and really cries to be delivered from, the unbelief of his heart. (3.) The ſtrongeſt in faith need every day to pray for the pardon of their remaining unbelief, and an increaſe of this moſt neceſſary grace.

6. Chriſt performs the wondrous cure. The people came running to ſee how the affair would end, and whether Jeſus or Satan prevailed; when with a voice of authority our Lord bids the foul fiend, who had made the child dumb and deaf, to depart, and never more return to him: nor dared the devil diſobey; though with the deepeſt reluctance and moſt violent ſtruggles quitting his hold, inſomuch that the lad lay breathleſs and motionleſs, ſo that many verily thought him dead. But Jeſus ſtretching out his hand, lifted him up, and immediately he aroſe perfectly well. Note, (1.) After Chriſt hath begun his work upon the heart in ſeaſons of ſore temptation, the ſoul, to human view, may appear as if utterly loſt, but Jeſus cauſes it again to revive, and reſtores us from our falls. (2.) Where he hath once diſpoſſeſſed the enemy, he will effectually prevent his return; thoſe whom he will ſave, ſhall never periſh.

7. When the diſciples enquired privately why they had miſcarried, our Lord lets them know it was through want of this kind of faith, and their having neglected the inſtituted means for obtaining it, prayer and faſting. Note, If we neglect the means, our graces will neceſſarily decay and languiſh.

r Mat. xvii. 22. Luke ix. 44.
s Chap. viii. 31. Luke ix. 22, 44.
t Mat. xviii. 1. Luke ix. 46.
u Luke xxii. 24.
x Chap. x. 43.
y Mat. x. 42. Luke x. 16.
z John v. 23. & xii. 44. & xiv. 21.
a Luke ix. 49.
b Num. xi. 28.
c 1 Cor. xii. 3.

30. ¶ [r] And they departed thence, and paſſed through Galilee; and he would not that any man ſhould know it. 31. For he taught his diſciples, and ſaid unto them, [s] The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they ſhall kill him, and after that he is killed, he ſhall riſe the third day. 32. But they underſtood not that ſaying, and were afraid to aſk him. 33. ¶ [t] And he came to Capernaum, and being in the houſe, he aſked them, What was it that ye diſputed among yourſelves by the way? 34. But they held their peace: for by the way [u] they had diſputed among themſelves, who ſhould be the greateſt. 35. And he ſat down, and called the twelve, and ſaith unto them, [x] If any man deſire to be firſt, the ſame ſhall be laſt of all, and ſervant of all. 36. And he took a child, and ſet him in the midſt of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he ſaid unto them, 37. [y] Whoſoever ſhall receive one of ſuch children in my name, receiveth me: and [z] whoſoever ſhall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that ſent me. 38. ¶ [a] And John anſwered him, ſaying, Maſter, we ſaw one caſting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and [b] we forbad him, becauſe he followeth not us. 39. But Jeſus ſaid, Forbid him not: for [c] there is no man which ſhall do a miracle in my name, name, that can lightly ſpeak evil of me. 40. For [d] he that is not againſt us, is on our part.

[d] Mat. xii. 30. Phil. i. 18.

v. 30—40. Being in haſte to go towards Jeruſalem, and deſigning to be alone with his diſciples, he travelled through Galilee with all ſecreſy, to prevent any interruption from the people aſſembling around him. And by the way, we are told,

1. The repeated notices he gave to his diſciples of his approaching ſufferings, death, and reſurrection; but they underſtood not his meaning, clear as the words were. Their prejudices concerning his temporal kingdom, ſpread a vail over their hearts, and they were aſhamed and afraid to aſk him, leſt they ſhould meet with a rebuke for their dulneſs. Note, Many live and die in ignorance, becauſe they are aſhamed to own it, and to enquire of thoſe who would inſtruct them.

2. He reproves them for their pride and affectation of ſuperiority. He knew the ſubject of their diſputes in the way had been, who ſhould poſſeſs the firſt honours in his kingdom; but he put a queſtion, as if he wanted to be informed concerning it; to which, aſhamed of what had paſſed, they returned no anſwer. But Jeſus, to ſhew them that he knew the ſecrets of all hearts, and to check theſe moſt unbecoming deſires of temporal grandeur, aſſured them, that this ambitious affectation of pre-eminence, would be puniſhed with the loweſt degradation: whilſt the ſureſt way to riſe, would be by entertaining the lowlieſt thoughts of themſelves, and ſtudying how to be moſt ſerviceable to the meaneſt of his diſciples. And to impreſs what he had ſpoken the more deeply, he took a little child into his arms, whoſe humility, teachableneſs, and unambitious ſimplicity they ought to imitate; aſſuring them, that whoever ſhewed regard to the loweſt of his people, becauſe of ſuch a ſpirit in them, for the ſake of their reſembling and relation to him, he would regard it as done to himſelf; yea, God the Father, who ſent him, would requite it. Note, (1.) Chriſt obſerves, and is diſpleaſed with the angry diſputes of his diſciples, and will call them to account for them. (2.) Nothing is ſo contrary to the ſpirit of chriſtianity, as the affectation of pre-eminence.

3. He checks the jealouſy and raſhneſs of the beloved diſciple. John in his travels, when he was ſent forth with his fellow-labourers to preach the goſpel, had ſeen a man caſting out devils in Chriſt's name; perhaps one of the Baptiſt's diſciples, who, though a believer in Jeſus as the Meſſiah, had not conſtantly attended him as they had done, nor been inveſted with any particular commiſſion from him. Jealous therefore for their Maſter's honour, or perhaps rather for their own, unwilling others ſhould ſhare theſe miraculous powers with them, they had forbad him, becauſe he had not been a profeſſed diſciple, or inveſted with any ſuch commiſſion as they had received. But Jeſus ſaid, Forbid him not. One who had ſuch faith in his name would not eaſily be brought to ſay or do any thing diſhonourable to his cauſe. Such an one ought rather to be countenanced than diſcouraged; and, as he took not part with the enemy, but rather the contrary, he was to be regarded as a friend. Note, (1.) Partial to our own opinion and party, we are apt to monopolize Chriſt, and to think our cauſe is ſo much his, that all who follow not with us are to be regarded as ſeparated from him: but there may be a great diverſity of opinions in leſſer matters among thoſe who together hold the head, and therefore we ſhould bear and forbear, think and let think, without raſh and rigid cenſures of thoſe who differ from us. (2.) Wherever real good is done, where Chriſt is preached and ſouls reſcued from the power of Satan, though we may count the methods purſued irregular and unauthoriſed, we muſt leave every man to ſtand or fall to his own Maſter, and beware how we oppoſe what is attended with a bleſſing from God. (3.) Where nothing appears contradictory to the faith of the goſpel, charity ever bids us hope the beſt.

[e] Mat. x. 42. Heb. vi. 10.
[f] Mat. xviii. 6. Luke xvii. 1.
[g] Mat. v. 29.
† Or cauſe thee to offend. Ver. 45, 47.
[h] Iſa. lxvi. 24. Judith xvi. 17.
[i] Lev. ii. 13. Ezek. xliii. 24.
[k] Col. iv. 6.
[l] Mat. v. 13. Luke xiv. 34.
[m] Pſ. xxxiv. 14. Rom. xii. 18. Heb. xii. 14.

41. [e] For whoſoever ſhall give you a cup of water to drink, in my name, becauſe ye belong to Chriſt, verily I ſay unto you, he ſhall not loſe his reward. 42. And [f] whoſoever ſhall offend one of theſe little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and he were caſt into the ſea. 43. [g] And if thy hand † offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than, having two hands, to go into hell, into the fire that never ſhall be quenched: 44. [h] Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. 45. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than, having two feet, to be caſt into hell, into the fire that never ſhall be quenched: 46. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. 47. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than, having two eyes, to be caſt into hell-fire: 48. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. 49. For every one ſhall be ſalted with fire; and [i] every ſacrifice ſhall be ſalted with ſalt. 50. [k] Salt is good: [l] but if the ſalt have loſt his ſaltneſs, wherewith will you ſeaſon it? Have ſalt in yourſelves, and [m] have peace one with another.

v. 41—50. Chriſt will not ſuffer the leaſt kindneſs done to his pooreſt diſciples to be unrewarded, nor the leaſt offence given to them to go unpuniſhed. The heavieſt of all judgments hangs over that guilty head that ſhall hinder, diſcourage, or grieve the weak, or do ought to turn them back from Chriſt. And therefore, if any corruption in our hearts, or allurement from the world, or darling idol, would ſeduce us from the path of duty, and lead us and others into ſin, though they were near and dear to us as a hand, a foot, or an eye, they muſt be cut off without pity. Eternity is at ſtake; and as a life of everlaſting glory will amply repay us for every ſuch ſacrifice we make, ſo will the endleſs torments in hell make us rue the indulgence of our ſins, when, for a momentary gratification, we ſhould be doomed to endure the gnawings of a guilty conſcience filled with the wrath of God, and the intolerable agonies of burnings unquenchable and eternal. For as, under the law, every burnt-offering was ſalted before it was laid on the altar, where the fire never went out; ſo every apoſtate ſhall fall a ſacrifice to divine juſtice, and be caſt into the fire of hell, preſerved by the power of God from an extinction of their being, to ſuffer that wrath of God which is for ever wrath to come. And, on the other hand, the ſoul which is ſeaſoned with divine grace, and offered daily a living ſacrifice to God, ſhall be preſerved incorruptible, ſeparated from the taint of this world's pollutions, and kept by the power of God through faith unto ſalvation. For, as ſalt is good to preſerve meat from putrefaction, and render it ſavoury, ſo doth the grace of God preſerve the ſoul from the corruption of ſin, and renders thoſe who poſſeſs this ineſtimable gift bleſſings to others, by ſpreading the ſweet ſavour of Chriſt in the world. But if the ſalt have loſt its ſaltneſs, and they, whoſe hearts, lips, and lives, ſhould be ſeaſoned with this ſalt of grace, prove deſtitute of it, and apoſtatize from their profeſſion, their fall is uſually irrecoverable, and their ruin inevitable. Therefore ſee that ye have ſalt in yourſelves, the life of grace in your ſouls, ſubduing the corruptions within, and ſhewing itſelf in a ſavoury converſation, in every good word and work that may miniſter edification to others; and have peace one with another, united in cloſeſt bonds of love and fellowſhip, laying aſide all diſputes and envyings, and concurring to promote and propagate the goſpel through the world. Note, (1.) The terrors and eternity of hell torments, if really believed, will be a powerful check to the raging paſſions of the ſoul. (2.) They who have the ſalt of grace muſt ſhew it in their lips and in their lives; and, where this is really found, ſuch ſhall never ſee corruption.

CHAP. X.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's diſpute with the Phariſees concerning divorce, ver. 1—12. 2. The kind entertainment he gave to the little children that were brought to him to be bleſſed, ver. 13—16. 3. His trial of the rich man that enquired what he muſt do to get to heaven, ver. 17—22. 4. His diſcourſe with his diſciples upon that occaſion concerning the peril of riches, ver. 23—27. and the advantage of being impoveriſhed for his ſake, ver. 28—31. 5. The repeated notice he gave his diſciples of his ſufferings and death approaching, ver. 32—34. 6. The counſel he gave to James and John, to think of ſuffering with him, rather than of reigning with him, ver. 35—45. 7. The cure of Bartimeus, a poor blind man, ver. 46—52. All which paſſages of ſtory we had the ſubſtance of before, Matt. xix. and xx.

[a] Mat. xix. 1.
[b] Deut. xxiv. 1. Mat. v. 31.
[c] Gen. i. 27. & v. 2. Mal. ii. 15.
[d] Gen. ii. 24. Pſ. xlv. 10. Eph. v. 31.
[e] 1 Cor. vi. 16. & vii. 2.
[f] Mat. v. 32. & xix. 9. Luke xvi. 18. 1 Cor. vii. 11.

1. AND [a] he aroſe from thence, and cometh into the coaſts of Judea, by the farther ſide of Jordan: and the people reſort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again. 2. ¶ And the Phariſees came to him, and aſked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him. 3. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, What did Moſes command you? 4. And they ſaid, [b] Moſes ſuffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away. 5. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, For the hardneſs of your heart he wrote you this precept. 6. But from the beginning of the creation, [c] God made them male and female. 7. For this cauſe [d] ſhall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife; 8. And [e] they twain ſhall be one fleſh: ſo then they are no more twain, but one fleſh. 9. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put aſunder. 10. And in the houſe his diſciples aſked him again of the ſame matter. 11. And he ſaith unto them, [f] Whoſoever ſhall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery againſt her.

12. And if a woman ſhall put away her huſband, and be married to another, ſhe committeth adultery.

v. 1—12. Wherever our Lord journeys, we find him employed in the bleſſed work of preaching the word, to teach us to be inſtant in ſeaſon and out of ſeaſon. Multitudes ſtill followed him, ſome to hear, ſome to be healed, and ſome with a malignant purpoſe to entangle him in his talk, and raiſe ſome matter of accuſation againſt him. Of this number were the Phariſees, who, by an enſnaring queſtion concerning divorce, endeavoured to lead him into a dilemma, either of contradicting Moſes, or being expoſed to the cenſure of a man of looſe morals. He aſked them what Moſes had commanded? They anſwered, that in many caſes he had permitted divorce. Our Lord replies, that it was no more than a permiſſion, granted merely becauſe of the hardneſs of their hearts and their cruel diſpoſition, as a law of the ſtate to prevent worſe conſequences; but at the beginning it was not ſo: the very creation of one man and one woman, and but one, intimated the inſeparable union between them; the ſettling the law of marriage, Gen. ii. 24. declared it, ſince, for the ſake of this relation, a man muſt quit even the deareſt ties of nature, and prefer his wife to father and mother: and the connection ariſing from the marriage-bond is ſo cloſe, that, as Adam and Eve were one fleſh, her body being formed from his, ſo muſt every huſband and wife reckon themſelves as no more twain, but one fleſh. Whom God therefore hath thus indiſſolubly joined together, it would be the higheſt preſumption in man to ſeparate.

The diſciples, who had been uſed, according to the generally received opinion among the Jews, to think divorces lawful, deſired in private farther information on this point. And our Lord informs them there was but one lawful cauſe for divorce; and, except in the caſe of adultery, whatever man or woman divorced their partner, and married again, would themſelves be adulterers, and expoſed the injured party to the like crime. Note, It becomes us firſt well to weigh the caſe before we take a companion for our lives: when once the choice is made, mutual kindneſs and forbearance, and deſire to pleaſe, ſhould every day endear the relation, and remove whatever might occaſion a wiſh of ſeparation.

13. ¶ [g] And they brought young children to him, that he ſhould touch them; and his diſciples rebuked thoſe that brought them. 14. But when Jeſus ſaw it, he was much diſpleaſed, and ſaid unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for [h] of ſuch is the kingdom of God. 15. Verily I ſay unto you, Whoſoever ſhall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he ſhall not enter therein. 16. And [i] he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and bleſſed them.

[g] Mat. xix. 13. Luke xviii. 15.
[h] Mat. xviii. 3. 1 Cor. xiv. 20. 1 Pet. ii. 2.
[i] Iſa. xl. 11.

v. 13—16. Chriſt Jeſus hath a tenderneſs for the lambs of his flock: he doth not refuſe the requeſt of thoſe pious parents who preſent their babes to him before they can liſp his praiſes. The diſciples here indeed oppoſed their application; but Jeſus encouraged it, took up the infants in his arms, laid his hands upon them, and bleſſed them. And, if they were capable of receiving the ſpiritual bleſſings of his kingdom, what ſhould hinder their being admitted by baptiſm into the viſible communion of his church? Of ſuch he declares the kingdom of God conſiſted, as well as of grown perſons, who in humility, teachableneſs, and dependence upon their father's care, muſt become as little children; without which they never can partake of the privileges of this kingdom. Lord give me then this ſpirit of a child, that I may be enabled to cry, Abba, Father!

17. ¶ [k] And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and aſked him, Good Maſter, what ſhall I do that I may inherit eternal life? 18. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Why calleſt thou me good? There is none good, but one, that is God. 19. Thou knoweſt the commandments, [l] Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not ſteal, Do not bear falſe witneſs, Defraud not, [m] Honour thy father and mother. 20. And he anſwered and ſaid unto him, Maſter, [n] all theſe have I obſerved from my youth. 21. Then Jeſus, beholding him, loved him, and ſaid unto him, One thing thou lackeſt: go thy way, [o] ſell whatſoever thou haſt, and give to the poor; and thou ſhalt have treaſure in heaven; and come, take up thy croſs, and follow me. 22. And he was ſad at that ſaying, and [p] went away grieved: for he had great poſſeſſions. 23. ¶ And Jeſus looked round about, and ſaith unto his diſciples, How hardly ſhall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! 24. And the diſciples were aſtoniſhed at his words. But Jeſus anſwered again, and ſaith unto them, Children, [q] how hard is it for them that truſt in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! 25. [r] It is eaſier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 26. And they were aſtoniſhed out of meaſure, ſaying among themſelves, Who then can be ſaved? 27. And Jeſus, looking upon them, ſaith, With men it is impoſſible, but not with God: for [s] with God all things are poſſible. 28. ¶ [t] Then Peter began to ſay unto him, Lo, [u] we have left all, and have followed thee. 29. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, there is no man that hath left houſe, or brethren, or ſiſters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my ſake and the goſpel's, 30. But [x] he ſhall receive an hundred fold now in this time, houſes, and brethren, and ſiſters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with perſecutions; and in the world to come eternal life. 31. But [y] many that are firſt, ſhall be laſt: and the laſt, firſt.

[k] Mat. xix. 16. Luke xviii. 18.
[l] Ex. xx. 13. Deut. v. 17.
[m] Chap. vii. 10.
[n] Phil. iii. 6.
[o] Luke xii. 33. & xvi. 9. Acts iv. 34. 1 Tim. vi. 18, 19.
[p] 2 Tim. iv. 10.
[q] Job xxxi. 24. Pſ. lxii. 10. 1 Cor. i. 26. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
[r] Jer. xiii. 23.
[s] Gen. xviii. 14. Jer. xxxii. 17. Zech. viii. 6. Luke i. 37.
[t] Mat. xix. 27. Luke xviii. 28.
[u] Deut. xxxiii. 9. Mat. iv. 20.
[x] 2 Chron. xxv. 9. Luke xxii. 28, 29.
[y] Mat. xix. 30.

v. 17—31. We have here,

1. The young ruler's application to Chriſt, and ſorrowful departure from him; which we conſidered, Mat. xix. 16. His addreſs was moſt reſpectful, and his queſtion infinitely important; eternal life being our great concern, and to ſecure that the one thing needful: and, where the value of an immortal ſoul is felt, we cannot but be ſollicitous in our applications to Jeſus, who is the way, the truth, and the life. Our Lord perceived the error under which he laboured, and, rebuking him for giving the title of good to any perſon whom he regarded as a mere man, deſired to diſcover to him the inſufficiency of his own righteouſneſs, and his inability to keep that law, by a perfect obedience to which eternal life alone could be ſecured: and in the precepts of the ſecond table our Lord ſets before him the path of duty. Ignorant of the ſpiritual extent of the commandments, he conceives he may venture to ſay he hath kept all theſe from his youth, becauſe he hath eſcaped the groſſer violations of them. So apt are we to flatter ourſelves in our own eyes that we are righteous, when indeed it is our ignorance that hides from us our ſinfulneſs. Something amiable in him attracted the regards of Jeſus, and, looking upon him with compaſſion, he would fain humble thoſe high thoughts of himſelf which he had entertained: and, to bring him to the teſt, he bids him give one proof of his obedience and charity, by ſelling all his poſſeſſions, diſtributing them to the poor, truſting on the promiſe of a more enduring ſubſtance in heaven, and then let him take up his croſs and follow a ſuffering Saviour; and this would infallibly bring him to the eternal life he ſought. But, alas! theſe were too hard ſayings for ſo rich a man to comply with: he went away ſorely chagrined at the propoſal; and, if ſuch was the only alternative, he rather choſe to part with eternal life than his great poſſeſſions. Note, (1.) The only proper uſe of worldly wealth is to do good with it. Though we may not be commanded to ſell all literally, we muſt remember we are really no more than ſtewards, and that a ſolemn account will ſhortly be required concerning every penny we have poſſeſſed. (2.) Great riches often prove a great ſnare. How many by theſe have loſt eternal life? (3.) A man may be poſſeſſed of a thouſand amiable qualities, and yet be utterly deſtitute of true grace.

2. Chriſt obſerves, to the aſtoniſhment of the diſciples, the difficulty of their ſalvation who have the abundance of this world, and whoſe hearts, in conſequence thereof, are engaged to truſt on their riches: and when, by the impracticability of a camel's going through a needle's eye, he intimated the immenſe obſtructions there were in the way of a rich man's ſalvation, the diſciples, above meaſure aſtoniſhed, concluded the impoſſibility of any man's being ſaved, ſince ſuch as were not rich in general wiſhed to be ſo, and they were conſcious to themſelves how much their own hearts were ſet on temporal grandeur. Jeſus, looking with compaſſion upon them, to relieve in ſome meaſure their anxiety, bid them conſider that, though ſuch a change of heart as was needful to every mortified diſciple of his was beyond the power of man, it was not beyond the power of God, who can give the moſt wealthy the deepeſt poverty of ſpirit, and enable thoſe, who have the greateſt obſtructions in their way to glory, to ſurmount them.

3. They who leave all for Chriſt ſhall be no loſers thereby. Peter mentions with ſome ſatisfaction, that, though their poſſeſſions and connections were not great, they had given them up to follow him. And Chriſt aſſures him that what they or any others ſhould part with for his ſake, would prove in the iſſue to be their unſpeakable gain: whether a man quitted his home, his ſubſtance, his relations, or friends, or whatever elſe was dear to him, for the ſake of faithful adherence to Chriſt and his goſpel, he ſhould find his trueſt advantage in it, in preſent comfort, and ſometimes in kind, the Lord would give him a hundred fold, with perſecutions, which all who will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus muſt expect as long as they are in the body, and in the world to come an eternal life of happineſs and glory. But many that are firſt in profeſſion will be ſo outſtripped in zeal and fidelity by others, who will be called after them, as to come in laſt in the race: whilſt the laſt, who ſeemed fartheſt from the kingdom of heaven, and lateſt embraced the offers of the goſpel, by their diligence will often firſt reach the goal; ſee 1 Cor. xv. 10. Note, (1.) The neareſt and deareſt relations muſt not weigh with us, when ſet in competition with our profeſſion of Chriſt, and the ſervice of his goſpel. (2.) Till we come to heaven, however proſperous our circumſtances may be, we are to expect the croſs; it is only then that we ſhall have finiſhed our warfare, and entered into our eternal reſt.

[z] Mat. xx. 32. ¶ [z] And they were in the way going up to Jeru-17. Luke ſalem: and Jeſus went before them; and they were axviii. 31. mazed, and as they followed, they were afraid. And [a] Chap. viii. he took again the twelve, and [a] began to tell them what
31. & ix. things ſhould happen unto him, 33. Saying, Behold, 31. we go up to Jeruſalem, and the Son of man ſhall be delivered unto the chief prieſts, and unto the ſcribes: and [b] Chap. xv. they ſhall condemn him to death, and [b] ſhall deliver him
1. Acts iv. to the Gentiles; 34. And they ſhall mock him, and
27. ſhall ſcourge him, and ſhall ſpit upon him, and ſhall kill [c] Mat. xx. him: and the third day he ſhall riſe again. 35. ¶ [c] And 20. James and John the ſons of Zebedee come unto him, ſaying, Maſter, we would that thou ſhouldeſt do for us whatſoever we ſhall deſire. 36. And he ſaid unto them, [d] Eſth. vii. 2. [d] What would ye that I ſhould do for you? 37. They [e] Jer. xlv. 5. ſaid unto him, [e] Grant unto us that we may ſit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy [f] Jam. iv. 3. glory. 38. But Jeſus ſaid unto them, [f] Ye know not [g] Chap. xiv. what ye aſk: can ye drink of the [g] cup that I drink of?
36. and be baptized with the baptiſm that I am baptized [h] Chap. xiv. with? 39. And they ſaid unto him, [h] we can. And 50. [i] Acts xii. 2. Jeſus ſaid unto them, [i] Ye ſhall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptiſm that I am baptized withal, ſhall ye be baptized: 40. But to ſit on my right hand, and on my left hand, is not mine to give, † Gr. Save † but it ſhall be given to them for whom it is prepared. to them for whom, &c. 41. And when the ten heard it, [k] they began to be Mat. xxv. 34. much diſpleaſed with James and John. 42. But Jeſus John xvii. 2. [k] Mat. xx. called them to him, and ſaith unto them, Ye know that
24. they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles, exer-ciſe lordſhip over them; and their great ones exerciſe authority upon them. 43. But ſo ſhall it not be among [l] 1 Cor. ix. you: but whoſoever will be great among you, [l] ſhall be 19, 20. your miniſter: 44. And whoſoever of you will be the [m] Luke xxii. chiefeſt, ſhall be ſervant of all. 45. For even [m] the Son
27. of man came not to be miniſtred unto, but to miniſter, [n] Iſa. liii. 10. and [n] to give his life a ranſom [o] for many.

Dan. ix. 24.
1 Tim. ii. 6. v. 32—45. The nearer Chriſt drew to the ſcene of his ſuffer-
Tit. ii. 14. 1 Pet. i. 19. ings, the plainer he warns his diſciples of them, that they might [o] Mat. xx. 28. be the leſs ſurprized at them when they came.

1. He here appears eagerly haſtening to face his enemies; whilſt his diſciples, conſidering what he had ſuggeſted would happen to him at Jeruſalem, were amazed at his reſolution, and followed him trembling, apprehenſive, probably, leſt they might be involved in his troubles. To prepare them for this diſtreſſing event, Chriſt again called them, and told them diſtinctly all that would befal him; that, when it came to paſs, they might remember that he ſuffered nothing of which he was not appriſed, and to which he did not voluntarily ſubmit: adding, after all his indignities and death, that he ſhould riſe again; and that, if they underſtood it, would have been a ſufficient ſupport againſt all their fears.

2. He rebukes the pride and ambition of the diſciples, which all theſe warnings could not cure. Two of them wanted to be prime miniſters in his kingdom, and, through their mother, wiſhed to have a general promiſe granted them of beſtowing on them a requeſt they were about to make, which proved to be no leſs than ſecuring the two moſt honourable places next the throne, when Chriſt ſhould, as they expected, ſet up his earthly reign. But, as they miſtook the nature of the Meſſiah's kingdom, which called them to ſuffer, not to bear rule; ſo alſo was their deſire impoſſible to be granted; it being unalterably fixed by the eternal decree of God on whom the honours of glory ſhould be beſtowed. The ten, as culpable as the two petitioners, and equally ambitious of the places they ſought, were exceedingly diſpleaſed at their affecting this precedency, to which they thought themſelves equally entitled. But Jeſus, to ſilence both parties, lets them know, that the kingdom he was about to erect was not to be governed as earthly monarchies, where the rulers exerciſed deſpotic ſway; but, on the contrary, he would be the greateſt in the Meſſiah's kingdom, who was in his own eyes moſt abaſed, and moſt ready in every work and labour of love to ſerve the meaneſt diſciple; for herein he neareſt reſembled his Maſter, who came with deepeſt humility as a ſervant, and was to die upon a croſs as a ſlave, paying down the ranſom for the ſins of many, whom he intended to bring in this way unto glory.

46. ¶ [p] And they came to Jericho: and as he went [p] Mat. xx. out of Jericho with his diſciples, and a great number of 29. Luke xviii. 35.
people, [q] blind Bartimeus, the ſon of Timeus, ſat by [q] Iſa. lix. 10.
the high-way-ſide, begging. 47. And when he heard that it was Jeſus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and ſay, Jeſus, thou ſon of David, have mercy on me. 48.
And many charged him that he ſhould hold his peace:
but [r] he cried the more a great deal, Thou ſon of David, [r] Luke xviii.
have mercy on me. 49. And Jeſus ſtood ſtill, and com- 1. manded him to be called: and they call the blind man, ſaying unto him, Be of good comfort, riſe; he calleth thee. 50. And he, caſting away his garment, roſe, and came to Jeſus. 51. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, [s] What wilt thou that I ſhould do unto thee? The [s] Mat. vii. 7. blind man ſaid unto him, † Lord, [t] that I might receive † Gr. Rabmy ſight. 52. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Go thy way; boni.
[u] thy faith hath ‡ made thee whole. And immediately John xx. 16. [t] Iſa. xxxv. 5.
[x] he received his ſight, and followed Jeſus in the way. [u] Chap. v.

v. 46—52. In Matthew we were told of two blind men, here 34. ‡ Gr. Saved but of one; perhaps he was the moſt remarkable, as the ſon of Ti- thee. [x] Luke i. 79.
meus. He ſat begging by the way-ſide; and no ſooner heard of Jeſus paſſing by, than, crying inceſſantly, he would not be ſilenced till Jeſus ſtood and called him; when, eager to be led to him, he threw off his upper garment, and, coming before the Saviour, preſented his requeſt and received his cure. In him we ſee, (1.) An emblem of the ſinner's miſery, poor, blind, and deſtitute. And a happy thing it is when, brought to a ſenſe of this miſery, he is found at the way-ſide of ordinances, crying after Jeſus. (2.) The blind and lame are among the trueſt objects of charity, and to their cries we muſt never be deaf. (3.) The calls of Jeſus are our encouragement to come to him; and they are ſo general, free, and full, that, whenever a poor, guilty, corrupted creature feels his wants, we may ſafely ſay to ſuch a one, He calleth thee. (4.) When we are coming to Chriſt, whatever would prove a hindrance, like this garment, ſhould be caſt off, particularly that robe of ſelf-righteouſneſs and ſelf-ſufficiency which ſticks ſo cloſe to us. (5.) None truly cry to him, and go away without relief. If we have faith in his power and love, we ſhall aſſuredly ſee the ſalvation of God. (6.) When Chriſt enlightens the eyes of our minds, it is in order that we ſhould henceforth keep him ever in view, and follow him in all his holy ways.

CHAP. XI.

We have here, 1. Chriſt's riding in triumph into Jeruſalem, ver. 1—11. 2. His curſing the barren fig-tree, ver. 12, 13, 14. 3. His driving thoſe out of the temple that turned it into an exchange, ver. 15—19. 4. His diſcourſe with his diſciples concerning the power of faith and efficacy of prayer, on occaſion of the withering of the fig-tree he curſed, ver. 20—26. 5. His reply to thoſe who queſtioned his authority, ver. 27—33.

1. [a] AND when they came nigh to Jeruſalem, unto [a] Mat. xxi. 1.
Bethphage, and Bethany, at the mount of Luke xix. 29.
Olives, he ſendeth forth two of his diſciples, 2. And John xii. 12.
ſaith unto them, Go your way into the village over againſt you; and as ſoon as ye be entred into it, ye ſhall find a colt tied, whereon never man ſat; looſe him, and bring him. 3. And if any man ſay unto you, Why do ye this? ſay ye that the Lord hath need of him; and ſtraightway he will ſend him hither. 4. And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without, in a place where two ways met: and they looſe him.
5. And certain of them that ſtood there ſaid unto them, What do ye looſing the colt? 6. And they ſaid unto them even as Jeſus had commanded: and they let them go. 7. And they brought the colt to Jeſus, and [b] caſt [b] 2 Kings ix.
their garments on him; [c] and he ſat upon him. 8. And 13. [c] Zech. ix. 9.
many ſpread their garments in the way: and [d] others cut [d] Lev. xxiii.
down branches off the trees, and ſtrawed them in the way. 40. 1 Mac.
9. And they that went before, and they that followed, xiii. 51. John xii. 13.
cried, ſaying, [e] Hoſanna, [f] bleſſed is he that cometh in [e] Pſ. cxviii.
the name of the Lord. 10. Bleſſed be [g] the kingdom 25.
of our father David, that cometh in the name of the [f] Pſ. cxviii.
Lord; Hoſanna in the higheſt. 11. And [h] Jeſus entred 26. Mat.
into Jeruſalem, and into the temple; and when he had xxiii. 39. [g] Luke i. looked round about upon all things, and now the even- 32. [h] Mat. xxi.
tide was come, he went out unto Bethany with the 12.
twelve.

v. 1—11. The laſt week of the life of Jeſus now is come, and we ſee him here entring Jeruſalem in triumph, ſo little terrified with the fears of his enemies, or caſt down by the ſufferings he was about to undergo.

1. He enters Jeruſalem amidſt the hoſannas of the people. He ordered his diſciples, when he drew near the city, to bring an aſs's colt from the oppoſite village, directing them to the ſpot, and delivering a meſſage from him, if any queſtioned them for what they did. Accordingly they went as Jeſus had commanded them; and, when the owners of the colt demanded why they looſed him, they told them the Lord hath need of him; and they contentedly let him go. Seated on this mean animal did Jeſus enter the city, whilſt, to expreſs their gladneſs, his poor followers ſpread their garments in the way, and cut down branches from the trees as at the feaſt of tabernacles, ſurrounding him with hoſannas, wiſhing proſperity to the long-expected Meſſiah, now bringing ſalvation to his people; praying that his reign may be long and happy who comes to ſit on his father David's throne, inveſted with divine authority; calling on the angels to join their praiſes, and begging God to pour down the beſt of bleſſings on the Meſſiah and his people.

2. He went directly to the temple: that was his palace: he aimed not at a temporal but ſpiritual dominion. After looking round him to obſerve what was done there, and ſpy out the abuſes which called for his correction, and, as appears from Mat. xxi. 12, 13. caſting out thoſe who trafficked there, he retired in the evening to Bethany with the twelve, the place he choſe for his abode. Note, The eye of Jeſus is upon his temple, to ſee what the prieſts do there; it is upon the living temple of his people's heart, obſerving every riſing thought of evil. How watchful then need we be!

12. ¶ [l] And on the morrow, when they were come from Bethany, he was hungry. 13. And ſeeing a fig-tree afar off, having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and, when he came to it, [k] he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet. 14. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his diſciples heard it. 15. ¶ [l] And they come to Jeruſalem: and Jeſus went into the temple, and began to caſt out them that ſold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the money-changers, and the ſeats of them that ſold doves; 16. And would not ſuffer that any man ſhould carry any veſſel through the temple. 17. And he taught, ſaying unto them, Is it not written, [m] My houſe ſhall be called of all nations the houſe of prayer? but [n] ye have made it a den of thieves. 18. And the ſcribes and chief prieſts heard it, and ſought how they might deſtroy him: for they feared him, becauſe [o] all the people was aſtoniſhed at his doctrine. 19. And when even was come, he went out of the city. 20. ¶ [p] And in the morning, as they paſſed by, they ſaw the fig-tree dried up from the roots. 21. And Peter, calling to remembrance, ſaith unto him, Maſter, behold, the fig-tree, [q] which thou curſedſt, is withered away. 22. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaith unto them, Have faith in God. 23. For verily I ſay unto you, that whoſoever ſhall ſay unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou caſt into the ſea, and [r] ſhall not doubt in his heart, but [s] ſhall believe that thoſe things which he ſaith ſhall come to paſs, he ſhall have whatſoever he ſaith. 24. Therefore I ſay unto you, [t] What things ſoever ye deſire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye ſhall have them. 25. And when ye ſtand, praying, [u] forgive, if ye have ought againſt any: that your Father alſo, which is in heaven, may forgive you your treſpaſſes. 26. [x] But, if you do not forgive, neither will your Father, which is in heaven, forgive your treſpaſſes.

[l] Mat. xxi. 18.
[k] 2 Tim. iii. 5. Rev. iii. 1.
[l] Mat. xxi. 12. Luke xix. 45. John ii. 14.
[m] Iſa. lvi. 7.
[n] Jer. vii. 11.
[o] Chap. i. 22. & vi. 2.
[p] Mat. xxi. 19.
[q] Heb. vi. 8.
[r] Jam. i. 6.
[s] Mat. xvii. 20. Luke xvii. 6.
[t] Mat. vii. 7. John xv. 7. & xvi. 24. 1 John v. 14.
[u] Mat. vi. 14. Eph. iv. 32. Col. iii. 13.
[x] Mat. xviii. 35.

v. 12—26. We have here,

1. The curſing of the barren fig-tree, the type of the deſtruction of the Jewiſh nation. Our Lord, on his return from Bethany to the temple in the morning, being hungry, ſeeing a a very flouriſhing fig-tree, came, expecting to find ſome figs thereon; for the time of figs was not yet, or, it was not a ſeaſon of figs, it was a bad year; but that tree promiſed better than others; or the time of figs, when they ſhould be gathered in, was not yet, and therefore he might expect fruit on the tree; but, finding none, he curſed the tree in the hearing of his diſciples, who took particular notice of it. For the curſes of the Lord are fearful, and never fall in vain.

2. He purges the temple of the buyers and ſellers, who had made that ſacred place a houſe of merchandize. It appears from Mat. xxi. 12. he had done the ſame the preceding day; but, probably ſupported and encouraged by the prieſts, the traders had returned to their former traffick the next day, and were thus again expelled. And, to vindicate his procedure, he quoted the words of the prophet, Iſa. lvi. 6, 7. where God, ſpeaking of the ſons of the ſtranger, the proſelytes, undertakes to welcome them to his houſe, which ſhould be a houſe of prayer to all nations. But the court, which was appropriated to the ſervice of the Gentiles, they had profaned by turning it into a market, and made it by their knavery and extortion a den of thieves.

3. The prieſts and ſcribes, incenſed at what they ſaw and heard, eſpecially thoſe ſevere rebukes which reflected ſo deeply on their characters, were bitterly exaſperated; and being determined to murder him, ſought only how they might do it without expoſing themſelves to the fury of the populace; for they were afraid openly to uſe violence, the people in general expreſſing ſuch a veneration for Chriſt's perſon, and ſuch reſpect and reverence for his doctrine. Note, Envy and malice naturally lead to murder, and it is only the fear of men that in a multitude of inſtances deters the wicked from the very act.

4. In the evening they returned to Bethany, and next morning, in their way to the city, the diſciples took notice with ſurprize of the withering of the fig-tree; and Peter, pointing to the tree, obſerved to his Maſter how it was withered away in conſequence of the curſe he had pronounced upon it. And from thence Chriſt took occaſion to encourage them confidently to exerciſe faith in God at all times; and eſpecially in the exertion of the miraculous powers with which he had furniſhed them, they ſhould find nothing impoſſible, not even to remove the mountain on which they ſtood, and caſt it into the ſea, if they had an unſhaken truſt in the divine power and promiſes, and looked up to God, nothing doubting: for whatever they ſhould aſk in prayer, which ſhould be for his glory to give, and they were warranted from his word to expect, ſhould certainly be given them. And on this occaſion, as what would be eſſential to their obtaining an anſwer to their prayers, he inculcates fervent charity and mutual forgiveneſs: when they ſtood praying for forgiveneſs, they muſt be ready to grant that pardon to others which they themſelves ſought at God's hand. But if, under the ſpirit of uncharitableneſs, they refuſed to forgive their brother his treſpaſſes, their prayers would be in vain, and they may never hope for the pardon themſelves ſought at the hands of their heavenly Father. Note, (1.) Faith is the conquering grace that overcomes the world, and bears down all obſtacles before it. If at any time we are terrified by guilt, or enſlaved by corruption, it is through our want of faith in God. (2.) Nothing can be a more powerful argument to engage our charity and forgiveneſs towards others, than what ariſes from our own prayers.

27. ¶ And they come again to Jeruſalem: and [y] as he was walking in the temple, there come to him the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes, and the elders, 28. And ſay unto him, [z] by what authority doſt thou theſe things? And who gave thee this authority to do theſe things? 29. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, I will alſo aſk of you one queſtion, and anſwer me, and I will tell you by what authority I do theſe things. 30. [a] The baptiſm of John, was it from heaven, or of men? anſwer me. 31. And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, From heaven, he will ſay, [b] Why then did ye not believe him? 32. But if we ſhall ſay, Of men, they feared the people: for [c] all men counted John, that he was a prophet indeed. 33. And they anſwered and ſaid unto Jeſus, [d] We cannot tell. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaid unto them, Neither do I tell you by what authority I do theſe things.

[y] Mat. xxi. 23. Luke xx. 1.
[z] Ex. ii. 14. Acts iv. 7.
[a] Prov. xv. 28.
[b] Chap. ix. 13.
[c] Mat. xiv. 5.
[d] Job v. 13.

v. 27—33. Vexed at the heart to behold the reſpect paid to Jeſus, and impatient to revenge his rebukes, which they conſtrued into reproaches, we have here,

1. The demand of the high-prieſts and elders, challenging Chriſt to produce his authority for what he had ſaid and done the preceding days, as if he had been lord and maſter of the temple.

2. He anſwers their queſtion by another. By what authority did John preach and baptiſe? give me a direct reply. The anſwer was eaſy, but the difficulties in which on either ſide it involved them were great. They ſaw that to confeſs his miſſion divine, was to own all that Jeſus claimed, John having born teſtimony to him; to deny that the Baptiſt was ſent of God, and to brand him as a pretender and impoſtor, would inſtantly enrage the people to riſe up, perhaps, and ſtone them, all men in general being perſuaded of John's prophetic character: therefore, after reaſoning on the matter, they are forced to conceal under a lie a truth they dared not own, and to pretend ignorance of what they knew, as the only way to evade the anſwer Chriſt demanded of them. He therefore was fully juſtified in refuſing them farther information, when it evidently appeared they ſought not conviction of the truth, but merely his deſtruction. Note, (1.)

It is a mercy to be able to put to ſilence the ignorance of fooliſh men, and at leaſt to confound thoſe who refuſe to be convinced. (2.) They who wilfully chuſe to be ignorant are juſtly abandoned to judicial blindneſs.

CHAP. XII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the vineyard let out to unthankful huſbandmen, repreſenting the ſin and ruin of the Jewiſh church, ver. 1—12. 2. Chriſt's ſilencing thoſe who thought to enſnare him with a queſtion about paying tribute to Cæſar, ver. 13—17. 3. His ſilencing the Sadducees, who attempted to perplex the doctrine of the reſurrection, ver. 18—27. 4. His conference with a ſcribe about the firſt and great command of the law, ver. 28—34. 5. His puzzling the ſcribes with a queſtion about Chriſt's being the Son of David, ver. 35, 36, 37. 6. The caution he gave the people to take heed of the ſcribes, ver. 38, 39, 40. 7. His commendation of the poor widow that caſt her two mites into the treaſury, ver. 41—44.

1. [a] AND he began to ſpeak unto them by parables. [b] A certain man planted a vineyard, and ſet an hedge about it, and digged a place for the wine-fat, and built a tower, and let it out to huſbandmen, and went into a far country. 2. And at the ſeaſon [c] he ſent to the huſbandmen a ſervant, that he might receive from the huſbandmen of the fruit of the vineyard. 3. [d] And they caught him, and beat him, and ſent him away empty. 4. [d] And again he ſent unto them another ſervant; and at him they caſt ſtones, and wounded him in the head, and ſent him away ſhamefully handled. 5. And again he ſent another; and him they killed: and many others, beating ſome, and killing ſome. 6. Having yet therefore one ſon, his well-beloved, he ſent him alſo laſt unto them, ſaying, They will reverence my ſon. 7. But thoſe huſbandmen ſaid amongſt themſelves, [e] This is the heir; [f] come, let us kill him, and the inheritance ſhall be ours. 8. And they took him, and killed him, and [g] caſt him out of the vineyard. 9. What ſhall therefore the Lord of the vineyard do? he will come and deſtroy the huſbandmen, and [h] will give the vineyard unto others. 10. And have ye not read this ſcripture? [i] The ſtone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner. 11. This was the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes. 12. And [k] they ſought to lay hold on him, but feared the people; for they knew that he had ſpoken the parable againſt them: and they left him, and went their way.

[a] Mat. xxi. 33. Luke xx. 9.
[b] Pſ. lxxx. 9. Cant. viii. 11. Iſa. v. 1. Jer. ii. 21.
[c] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15.
[dd] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Neh. ix. 26. Mat. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 52. 1 Theſ. ii. 15. Heb. xi. 36, &c.
[e] Heb. i. 2.
[f] Chap. xiv. 1.
[g] Heb. xiii. 12.
[h] Acts xiii. 46. & xviii. 6.
[i] Pſ. cxviii. 22. Iſa. xxviii. 16. Acts iv. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 7.
[k] Chap. xi. 18.

v. 1—12. Since they had thus wickedly rejected their Meſſiah, he here in parables ſets forth before them the guilt and ruin coming upon them in conſequence thereof. The parable of the vineyard we had before, Matt. xxi. 33. The ſcope and deſign of it is to upbraid them with their continual rejection and perſecution of God's prophets from the days of their forefathers to that hour, the meaſure of whoſe guilt they were now about to fill up in the murder of the Son of God, and thus they would bring down the temporal and eternal wrath of God upon their devoted heads; who, inſtead of the Jewiſh people, would admit the Gentiles in their ſtead, and, in ſpite of all their envy and enmity, erect his glorious church on that one foundation and chief corner-ſtone the Meſſiah, whom they rejected, and hereby make his marvellous power and grace evident to all. The parable was too plain for them to miſtake the meaning: the chief prieſts and elders perceived it was levelled at them; and, enraged beyond meaſure at ſuch boldneſs, though they dared not apprehend him publickly, they conſulted how they could privately get him into their power and cut him off. Note, (1.) God expects from thoſe who are placed in his vineyard the church, that they ſhould render him that tribute of love and duty for which they ſtand ſo highly indebted. (2.) In all ages the true miniſters of Chriſt have met with the cruelleſt uſage; and uſually their bittereſt perſecutors have been thoſe who have pretended a divine commiſſion, and to be labourers in God's vineyard. (3.) God will have a church and people in the world, whatever oppoſition may be formed againſt them. (4.) It is a truly marvellous thing in the eyes of a gracious ſoul, when he obſerves the operations of divine grace in himſelf, and how the Lord ſets up his kingdom within him, in ſpite of all the oppoſition from Satan and indwelling ſin. (5.) They who refuſe to be convinced by the truth of God's word, are generally exaſperated both againſt the miniſter and his meſſage; and thus what was ſent as a ſavour of life unto life, to them becomes a ſavour of death unto death.

13. ¶ [l] And they ſend unto him certain of the Phariſees, and of the Herodians, to catch him in his words. 14. And when they were come, they ſay unto him, [m] Maſter, we know that thou art true, and careſt for no man: for thou regardeſt not the perſon of men, but teacheſt the way of God in truth: Is it lawful to give tribute to Ceſar, or not? 15. Shall we give, or ſhall we not give? But he, knowing their hypocriſy, ſaid unto them, Why tempt ye me? bring me † a penny, that I may ſee it. 16. And they brought it: and he ſaith unto them, Whoſe is this image and ſuperſcription? And they ſaid unto him, Ceſar's. 17. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaid unto them, [n] Render to Ceſar the things that are Ceſar's, and to God the things that are God's. And they marvelled at him.

[l] Mat. xxii. 16. Luke xx. 20.
[m] Pſ. xii. 2.
† A ſmall coin, worth ſevenpence-halfpenny. Mat. xviii. 28.
[n] Rom. xiii. 7.

v. 13—17. We have here a new attempt made by the Phariſees and Herodians, bitter enemies to each other, but cloſe leagued againſt Chriſt. They wanted to catch up ſomething which might ſerve to accuſe him, and they thought they had a queſtion which would not fail either to render him obnoxious to the civil powers, or to blaſt his reputation with the people, ſhould he enforce ſubjection to the Roman yoke, which they ſo abhorred. Pretending therefore great reſpect to Chriſt, as a perſon of unſpotted integrity, and above the fear of men, they bring to him a caſe of conſcience, as if they wiſhed to be guided by his ſuperior judgment. The queſtion was whether it was lawful to pay tribute to Ceſar or not? He ſaw their hypocriſy, and confounds their devices; bidding them produce the tribute-money, and tell him whoſe image or ſuperſcription it bore. On their ſaying, Ceſar's, he then bid them render to Ceſar his own. By admitting the currency of his coin, they owned their ſubjection to him, and were bound to pay the tribute required in return for the protection they enjoyed; whilſt God's right over them remained unalienably the ſame: in all religious concerns he was alone the Lord of their conſcience, and to all his commands unreſerved ſubmiſſion muſt be paid: an anſwer ſo wiſe, ſo convincing and unexceptionable, as even aſtoniſhed his very enemies. Note, (1.) The ſects moſt bitter againſt each other will readily unite to oppoſe the power of true Chriſtianity. (2.) The profeſſions of falſe friends are uſually moſt ſpecious, when their deſigns are moſt malignant. (3.) It is a dangerous thing for miniſters to interfere about civil rights; their buſineſs is to teach ſubjection to the powers that are. (4.) Hypocriſy, however artful the vail, cannot be concealed from the knowledge of him who trieth the reins and the heart.

18. ¶ [o] Then come unto him the Sadducees, [p] which ſay there is no reſurrection; and they aſked him, ſaying, 19. Maſter, [q] Moſes wrote unto us, If a man's brother die, and leave his wife behind him, and leave no children, that his brother ſhould take his wife, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother. 20. [r] Now there were ſeven brethren: and the firſt took a wife, and dying left no ſeed. 21. And the ſecond took her, and died, neither left he any ſeed: and the third likewiſe. 22. And the ſeven had her, and left no ſeed: laſt of all the woman died alſo. 23. In the reſurrection therefore, when they ſhall riſe, whoſe wife ſhall ſhe be of them? for the ſeven had her to wife. 24. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaid unto them, Do ye not therefore err, [s] becauſe ye know not the ſcriptures, [t] neither the power of God? 25. For, when they ſhall riſe from the dead, they neither marry nor are given in marriage: but [u] are as the angels which are in heaven. 26. And as touching the dead, that they riſe: have ye not read in the book of Moſes, how in the buſh God ſpake unto him, ſaying, [x] I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob? 27. He is not the God of the dead, but the God of the living: ye therefore do greatly err.

[o] Mat. xxii. 23. Luke xx. 27.
[p] Acts xxiii. 8.
[q] Deut. xxv. 5.
[r] Tob. iii. 8.
[s] Job xix. 25. Ezek. xxxvii. 5—10. Dan. xii. 2.
[t] Acts xxvi. 8.
[u] 1 Cor. xv. 42, 49.
[x] Exod. iii. 6, 16. Acts vii. 32. Heb. xi. 16.

v. 18—27. The Sadducees, the freethinkers and reaſoners of the age, came next, fraught with wiſdom and ſophiſtry, and thought that, though others had been unequal to the taſk, they were able to propoſe a queſtion which the wiſdom of Jeſus would find it hard to anſwer. But they were deceived to their coſt, their ignorance expoſed, their errors detected, and that reſurrection they denied proved by the cleareſt evidence of Moſes, whoſe authority they admitted; ſee Mat. xxii. 23. Note, (1.) Many infidels pretend a reverence for the Scriptures, in order the more artfully to introduce their ſuggeſtions, to ſhake our faith and deſtroy their credit. (2.) It is impoſſible but they ſhould err, not knowing the Scripture, who, inſtead of ſubmitting their fallen reaſon to God's word, inſiſt that even the doctrines of revelation ſhall be firſt cited to this fallacious tribunal, and be admitted only ſo far as they are pleaſed to ſtamp them as rational; but, if found incomprehenſible, they reject them as abſurd.

y Mat. xxii. 35. Luke x. 25.
z Deut. vi. 4.
a Deut. vi. 5. & x. 12. & xxx. 6.
b Lev. xix. 18. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14. 1 Tim. i. 5. Jam. ii. 8.
c Deut. iv. 39. Iſa. xlv. 6, 14.
d Hoſ. vi. 6.

28. ¶ [y] And one of the ſcribes came, and, having heard them reaſoning together, and perceiving that he had anſwered them well, aſked him, Which is the firſt commandment of all? 29. And Jeſus anſwered him, The firſt of all the commandments is, [z] Hear, O Iſrael, The Lord our God is one Lord: 30. And [a] thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy ſtrength: this is the firſt commandment. 31. And the ſecond is like, namely this, [b] Thou ſhalt love thy neighbour as thyſelf: there is none other commandment greater than theſe. 32. And the ſcribe ſaid unto him, Well, Maſter, thou haſt ſaid the truth: for [c] there is one God, and there is none other but he. 33. And to love him with all the heart, and with all the underſtanding, and with all the ſoul, and with all the ſtrength, and to love his neighbour as himſelf, [d] is more than all whole-burnt-offerings and ſacrifices. 34. And when Jeſus ſaw that he anſwered diſcreetly, he ſaid unto him, Thou art not far from the kingdom of God. And no man after that durſt aſk him any queſtion.

v. 28—34. Struck with the force of our Lord's reaſoning, one of the ſcribes, who were of the ſect of the Phariſees, acknowledged he had anſwered well; yet, willing to try his judgment farther, he propoſes,

1. An important queſtion for his ſolution: which is the firſt commandment of all? the greateſt, moſt neceſſary to be obſerved, and moſt influential over the whole tenor of our conduct.

2. Chriſt fully anſwers him. The firſt and great commandment is the love of God. He, who is God alone, demands and deſerves the whole heart and mind, and ſoul and ſtrength: and in this one word is comprehended the principle of all holy obedience, and that which neceſſarily engages in his worſhip and ſervice the whole body, ſoul, and ſpirit; and without this love nothing acceptable to him can be performed. The ſecond commandment is of a like comprehenſive nature, enjoining us to love our neighbour as ourſelves, fervently and unfeignedly, behaving towards him with ſuch juſtice and mercy as we, if our circumſtances were reverſed, might juſtly deſire and expect from him. Theſe two comprehend every ſuppoſable duty towards God and man; and there can be no greater commandment, ſince in theſe the whole law is fulfilled.

3. The ſcribe confeſſes the juſtneſs of our Lord's anſwer, convinced of its admirable propriety and wiſdom; and adds his teſtimony to the truth of his obſervations, that there is one only living and true God, and that to love, worſhip, and ſerve him with the moſt active powers of our ſouls, and to exerciſe this divine charity to our neighbour, is in God's account far more acceptable than the moſt expenſive ſervices, or all the ritual obſervances.

4. Chriſt approves the judicious remarks he made: he ſhewed himſelf a man of underſtanding, unbiaſſed by the generally received traditions; and, as his mind appeared ingenuous and open to conviction, he was not far from the kingdom of God. In ſuch a ſpirit if he had examined the prophets, and weighed, under the divine benediction, the evidence of Chriſt's miſſion and miracles, he would be led into the truth, and become a member of the Meſſiah's kingdom.

5. From that time all the captious cavillers were ſilenced. Such conſummate wiſdom appeared in him, that none durſt any more encounter him. Note, (1.) They who improve the light God hath given them will receive an increaſe of it, and be led into all truth. (2.) Many a man goes to the borders of the truth, not far from the kingdom of God, and yet never enters into it; almoſt but not altogether a Chriſtian.

e Mat. xxii. 41. Luke xx. 41.
f 2 Sam. xxiii. 2.
g Pſ. cx. 1. Acts ii. 34. Heb. i. 13. & x. 13.
h Rev. xxii. 16.
i Mat. xxiii. 1. Luke xx. 46.
k Luke xi. 43.
l 3 John 9.
m Mat. xxiii. 14. Tit. i. 11.

35. ¶ [e] And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, while he taught in the temple, How ſay the ſcribes that Chriſt is the ſon of David? 36. For David himſelf ſaid [f] by the Holy Ghoſt, [g] The LORD ſaid unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footſtool. 37. David therefore himſelf calleth him Lord; and whence is he then his Son? And the common people heard him gladly. 38. ¶ And he ſaid unto them in his doctrine, [i] Beware of the ſcribes, which love to go in long clothing, and [k] love ſalutations in the market-places, 39. [l] And the chief ſeats in the ſynagogues, and the uppermoſt rooms at feaſts: 40. [m] Which devour widows houſes, and for a pretence make long prayers: theſe ſhall receive greater damnation.

v. 35—40. They had frequently endeavoured to puzzle him with queſtions captious and difficult. Our Lord now poſes them with a queſtion, which, as expoſitors of the Scripture, the ſcribes ſhould have thoroughly underſtood.

1. The queſtion was, How the Meſſiah, whom they all admitted to be David's ſon, could at the ſame time be David's Lord, as he expreſsly calls him, Pſ. cx. 1. This was a myſtery to the ſcribes: not underſtanding the twofold nature of the Meſſiah as God and man, they could not anſwer the queſtion. Hereupon the common people, convinced how far Jeſus in wiſdom ſurpaſſed all their teachers, hearkened with delight to his divine diſcourſes. Note, (1.) A babe in Chriſt underſtands more of the myſteries of godlineſs than the wiſeſt unenlightened ſcribe. (2.) Popularity, and the approbation of the vulgar, is often caſt as a reproach on the miniſters of the goſpel by thoſe who envy them, as the ſcribes of old did their Maſter.

2. He takes occaſion to caution the people from being deceived by the ſanctified appearance of their falſe teachers, whilſt in fact they were ſlaves to pride and worldly-mindedneſs. They wore particular garments, long and trailing on the ground, or with fringes of extraordinary breadth, as a token of ſuperior piety, and made long prayers that they might appear men of extraordinary devotion; but all they did was hypocritical and deſigning, in order to gain the ſeat of preeminence and publick ſalutations of high reſpect, and as a cloak under which to worm themſelves into the confidence of widows, whom they plundered to enrich themſelves: for which abominations they would bring down the heavieſt wrath of God upon their ſouls. Note, (1.) Inordinate deſire of human reſpect and honour is the ſure ſymptom of a proud, worldly, and unmortified heart. (2.) Hypocriſy is among the moſt common and moſt crying ſins. Beware of it.

n Luke xxi. 1.
o 2 Kings xii. 9.
p 2 Cor. viii. 2, 12.

41. ¶ And [n] Jeſus ſat over againſt the treaſury, and beheld how the people caſt money into [o] the treaſury: and many that were rich caſt in much. 42. And there came a certain poor widow, and ſhe threw in two mites, which make a farthing. 43. And he called unto him his diſciples, and ſaith unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, that [p] this poor widow hath caſt more in, than all they which have caſt into the treaſury. 44. For all they did caſt in of their abundance: but ſhe of her want did caſt in all that ſhe had, even all her living.

v. 41—44. For the maintenance of the temple-worſhip and ſacrifices, there were coffers placed in the court for the reception of the free-will offerings of the people. Our Lord, being ſeated near the treaſury, where theſe ſtood, obſerved the people who caſt in their money. Many of the rich gave much, as became them; but, among the reſt, a poor widow came and caſt in two mites. Highly applauding the deed, our Lord pointed her out to his diſciples, as having preſented a richer and more acceptable offering than thoſe who out of their abundance had given more liberally. They had enough left ſtill to ſupply their wants; but ſhe, out of love to the ſervice, threw in her little all, truſting on the divine providence for her future ſuſtenance. Note, (1.) Almſgiving is a moſt needful duty; and our Lord expects, according to our abilities, that we ſhould be ready to diſtribute, willing to communicate: but he looks not merely at the gift, but the ſpirit and temper of the giver; for that alone ſtamps the offering with its value in his account. (2.) None can be ſuppoſed poorer than this widow; yet ſhe gave. If we have but little, that muſt be no excuſe; we muſt give our diligence to give of that little, and then it is accepted according to that a man hath, and not according to that he hath not. (3.) A truly gracious and charitable ſoul will ſometimes ſtraiten himſelf to ſupply other's more urgent wants, willing not only to his power, but above his power, to aſſiſt them.

CHAP. XIII.

Chriſt foretels the deſtruction of the city and temple; the figure of the day of final recompenſe; warning all men to watch, leaſt they be ſurprized unawares by judgments in this world, or the ſudden appearing of the Son of man.

a Mat. xxiv. 1. Luke xxi. 5.
b 1 Kings ix. 7. Jer. xxvi. 18. Mic. iii. 12. Luke xix. 44.

1. AND [a] as he went out of the temple, one of his diſciples ſaith unto him, Maſter, ſee what manner of ſtones, and what buildings are here. 2. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid unto him, Seeſt thou theſe great buildings? [b] there ſhall not be left one ſtone upon another, that ſhall not be thrown down. 3. And as he ſat upon the mount of Olives, over againſt the temple, Peter, and James, and John, and Andrew, aſked him privately, 4. Tell us, when ſhall theſe things be? and what ſhall be the ſign when all theſe things ſhall be fulfilled?

v. 1—4. Departing now from the temple to return no more, one of his diſciples, pleaſed with the beauty of that ſtupendous fabric, could not help obſerving to him, of what maſſy ſtones it was built, and how magnificently adorned. But Chriſt aſſures him, admirable as it appeared, and ſtrong as it ſtood, the day was near when it ſhould be ſo utterly raſed from the foundations, that one ſtone ſhould not be left upon another. Struck with ſo ſad a proſpect, four of the diſciples came privately to him, as he ſat in the mount of Olives, deſiring to be informed when theſe awful predictions would come to paſs, and what would be the ſigns of their approaching fulfilment.

5. And Jeſus anſwering them, began to ſay, [c] Take heed leſt any man deceive you. 6. For [d] many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt: and [e] ſhall deceive many. 7. And when ye ſhall hear of wars, and rumours of wars, be ye not troubled: for ſuch things muſt needs be; but the end ſhall not be yet. 8. For [f] nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdom againſt kingdom: and there ſhall be earthquakes in divers places, and there ſhall be [g] famines and troubles: theſe are the beginnings of † ſorrows. 9. ¶ But take heed to yourſelves: for [h] they ſhall deliver you up to councils; and in the ſynagogues [i] ye ſhall be beaten, and ye ſhall be brought before rulers and kings for my ſake, for a teſtimony againſt them. 10. And [k] the goſpel muſt firſt be publiſhed among all nations. 11. But [l] when they ſhall lead you, and deliver you up, take no thought beforehand what ye ſhall ſpeak, neither do ye premeditate: but whatſoever ſhall be given you in that hour, that ſpeak ye: for it is not ye that ſpeak, but the Holy Ghoſt. 12. Now [m] the brother ſhall betray the brother to death, and the father the ſon: and children ſhall riſe up againſt their parents, and ſhall cauſe them to be put to death. 13. And ye ſhall be hated of all men for my name's ſake: but [n] he that ſhall endure unto the end, the ſame ſhall be ſaved.

[c] Jer. xxix. 8. Eph. v. 6. Col. ii. 8. 2 Theſ. ii. 3.
[d] Jer. xiv. 14. & xxiii. 21. John v. 43.
[e] Ver. 22. Acts v. 36, 37. Rev. xiii. 3.
[f] Hag. ii. 22. Zech. xiv. 13.
[g] Acts xi. 28.
† Gr. Child-birth pains. Mat. xxiv. 8.
[h] Mat. x. 17. John xv. 20. & xvi. 2. Rev. ii. 10.
[i] Acts xvi. 23.
[k] Rom. x. 18. Col. i. 6.
[l] Mat. x. 19.
[m] Mic. vii. 6. Mat. x. 21.
[n] Dan. xii. 13. Mat. x. 22. Rev. ii. 10.

v. 5—13. In anſwering the queſtion their curioſity raiſed, Chriſt gives them ſome cautions for the direction of their conſcience, it being infinitely more their concern to be always ready to meet the approaching calamities, than to know the preciſe time of their arrival.

1. He cautions them againſt the falſe Chriſts which ſhould ariſe, and ſeduce many of the Jews, who were ready to run after every impoſtor, whilſt they had rejected the true Meſſiah.

2. He warns them not to be diſcouraged with the wars and commotions, the famines, earthquakes, and peſtilence, which would ravage the earth; theſe being but the beginning of ſorrows, the end is not yet: and what is here ſpoken with an immediate reference to the Jewiſh ſtate and nation, ſeems alſo to have a view to the like calamities which will be the ſigns and preſages of the final diſſolution of all things. But amidſt the wreck of nature, and the flames of a diſſolving world, the ſoul that is ſtayed upon Chriſt need not be troubled; his ſafety is ſecured by the everlaſting promiſes of the unchanging Jehovah.

3. He bids them prepare for perſecutions, and exhorts them to bear up courageouſly under them. Far from poſſeſſing that earthly greatneſs and reſpect with which they flattered themſelves, they muſt expect the very reverſe; they will be hated of all men for his ſake: in enmity to Jeſus and his goſpel, the world in general would combine againſt them: yea, even their neareſt relations would prove falſe and faithleſs, and become the bittereſt enemies; and breaking the ſtrongeſt ties of nature, perſecute them even to death. They would be dragged before the rulers, civil and eccleſiaſtical, and puniſhed as heretical and ſeditious: yea, even before the heathen kings and magiſtrates they would be accuſed, and called to ſeal the teſtimony they bore, with their blood. But diſtreſſing as theſe things might appear, they have abundant reaſon to truſt and not be afraid: Jeſus aſſures them he will ſtand by them. When called to anſwer before the tribunals of the Mightieſt, they need not diſtreſs themſelves about what they ſhall ſay; a divine revelation ſhall be given to them, and they ſhall be directed in the propereſt manner to reply to every charge; yea, their very trials before the kings and rulers ſhall prove a teſtimony againſt them; they will thereby have an opportunity of preaching the goſpel to thoſe who might never elſe have heard it. And whatever attempts are made to ſuppreſs and ſilence them, they ſhall prove abortive; Chriſt will cauſe his goſpel to be preached and ſpread, in defiance of oppoſition, into all lands; and either ſhelter them from the malice of their perſecutors, or reward their fidelity unto death with a crown of everlaſting life and glory: conſiderations, ſufficient to make them welcome the croſs, whilſt ſuch a crown was in view. Note, (1.) Sufferings for Chriſt ſtumble many; we need to take heed that we be not thereby offended. (2.) The image of Jeſus, as it muſt reprove the world, will ever procure the hatred of men againſt thoſe who poſſeſs it. (3.) The ſpirit of bigotry and enmity, which is in the natural heart, againſt Chriſt and his people, ſometimes breaks through the ſtrongeſt ties of blood; makes children rebellious, and parents unnatural, even to wiſh the death of thoſe they are moſt bound to love and cheriſh. (3.) Wherever the goſpel is preached, if it be not received, it will at leaſt riſe up for a teſtimony againſt all who neglect or reject ſo great a ſalvation. (4.) When we are called to ſtand forth for Chriſt, we may ſtill confidently expect to be ſupported by him, and to be taught by his ſpirit how to ſpeak and act for his glory. (5.) All ſufferings, and even death itſelf, will be regarded as light afflictions that are but for a moment, by thoſe whoſe faith realizes to their minds, the far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

14. ¶ [o] But when ye ſhall ſee the abomination of deſolation, [p] ſpoken of by Daniel the prophet, ſtanding where it ought not, ([q] let him that readeth, underſtand) then let them that be in Judea [r] flee to the mountains; 15. And let him that is on the houſe-top, not go down into the houſe, neither enter therein, to take any thing out of his houſe. 16. And let him that is in the field, not turn back again for to take up his garment. 17. But [s] wo to them that are with child, and to them that give ſuck in thoſe days. 18. And pray ye that your flight be not in the winter. 19. For [t] in thoſe days ſhall be affliction, ſuch as was not from the beginning of the creation which God created, unto this time, neither ſhall be. 20. And except that the Lord had ſhortned thoſe days, no fleſh ſhould be ſaved: but [u] for the elect's ſake, whom he hath choſen, he hath ſhortned the days. 21. And then [x] if any man ſhall ſay to you, Lo, here is Chriſt, or lo, he is there: believe him not. 22. For falſe Chriſts, and [y] falſe prophets ſhall riſe, and ſhall [z] ſhew ſigns and wonders, to ſeduce, [a] if it were poſſible, even the elect. 23. But [b] take ye heed: behold, I have foretold you all things.

[o] Mat. xxiv. 15. Luke xxi. 20.
[p] Dan. ix. 27. & xii. 11.
[q] Dan. ix. 25.
[r] Prov. xxii. 3.
[s] Luke xxiii. 29.
[t] Dan. xii. 1. Joel ii. 2.
[u] Iſa. vi. 5, 9. Zech. xiv. 2.
[x] Luke xvii. 23.
[y] Deut. xiii. 1.
[z] 2 Theſ. ii. 9, 10.
[a] John x. 28, 29. Rom. viii. 29, 30. 2 Tim. ii. 19.
[b] Mat. vii. 15. 2 Pet. iii. 17.

v. 14—23. Two things the diſciples are here taught,

1. To ſecure their lives by flight, when the Roman army, the abomination of deſolation, appears before Jeruſalem. No moment muſt be loſt, no attempt made to ſave any thing; they muſt ſeek their ſafety in inſtant flight. Thoſe who are heavy with child, or have babes at their breaſts, will be in that day moſt peculiarly miſerable, as leaſt able to fly, or to bear the hardſhips which they muſt undergo; and if this flight were in winter, the inclemency of the ſeaſon would make the ſituation of the fugitives more deplorable, therefore they need pray that it may not be ſo. But whenever the time comes, ſuch a ſcene of affliction, miſery, and deſolation, will appear, as never was from the creation before, and never will be again to the end of time. They who read the hiſtory of Joſephus, may ſee this prophecy awfully fulfilled. Indeed it is marvellous that any inhabitant of Judea ſurvived this dire cataſtrophe; nothing but the moſt gracious interpoſition of divine providence could have prevented their utter extirpation. But God having ſtill a remnant among the Jewiſh people, and deſigns of grace towards ſome, who, in diſtant ages ſhould deſcend from them, for the ſake of theſe his elect, will ſhorten the days of affliction, and pluck ſome as brands from the burning. Note, Many who abhor and perſecute God's people, know not how much they are indebted to them and their prayers.

2. To take care of their ſouls. Seducers will abound in thoſe evil days, and with large promiſes of procuring them relief from the impending calamities, will perſuade many to join them; giving themſelves out for the Meſſiah, or pretending to have found him; and with lying wonders and falſe miracles, will not only impoſe upon the credulous, but would, if it were poſſible, deceive the very elect. Chriſt warns them, therefore, againſt impoſtures, which he ſo plainly foretels. Note, It is a moſt comfortable conſideration, that in ſpite of Satan's wiles, and all the cunning craftineſs of men who lie in wait to deceive, God's choſen cannot be ſeduced. They have an infallible teſt, his written word, to prove the ſpirits whether they are of God, and he will enlighten their minds, and lead them into all truth.

24. ¶ [c] But in thoſe days, after that tribulation, [d] the ſun ſhall be darkned, and the moon ſhall not give her light: 25. And the ſtars of heaven ſhall fall, and the powers that are in heaven ſhall be ſhaken. 26. And [e] then ſhall they ſee the Son of man coming in the clouds with great power and [f] glory. 27. And then [g] ſhall he ſend his angels, and ſhall gather together his elect from the four winds, from the uttermoſt part of the earth, to the uttermoſt part of heaven. 28. [h] Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: When her branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that ſummer is near: 29. So ye in like manner, when ye ſhall ſee theſe things come to paſs, know that it is nigh, even at the doors. 30. Verily I ſay unto you, [i] that this generation ſhall not paſs, till all theſe things be done. 31.

[c] Mat. xxiv. 29. Luke xxi. 25.
[d] Iſa. xiii. 10. Ezek. xxxii. 7. Joel ii. 10, 31. Rev. vi. 12.
[e] Dan. vii. 13. Chap. xiv. 62. Rev. i. 7.
[f] Mat. xvi. 27.
[g] Mat. xiii. 41. 1 Cor. xv. 52. 1 Theſ. iv. 16.
[h] Mat. xxiv. 32. Luke xxi. 29.
[i] Mat. xvi. 28.

[k] Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away: [l] but my words ſhall not paſs away. 32. ¶ But of that day and that hour knoweth no man, no not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, [m] but the Father. 33. [n] Take ye heed, watch and pray: for ye know not when the time is. 34. For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his houſe, and gave authority to his ſervants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. 35. [o] Watch ye therefore; (for ye know not when the maſter of the houſe cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning) 36. Leſt coming ſuddenly, he find you ſleeping. 37. And what I ſay unto you, I ſay unto all, Watch.

k Iſa. li. 6. 2 Pet. iii. 7, 10.
l Iſa. xl. 8. Mat. v. 18.
m Zech. xiv. 7. Acts i. 7.
n Mat. xxv. 13. 1 Theſ. v. 6.
o 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. xvi. 15.

v. 24—37. The things here predicted primarily refer to the deſtruction of the Jewiſh people; but they ſeem alſo to have reſpect to the final appearing to judgment of our great God and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. As his hand viſibly appeared in the ruin of Jeruſalem, the temple, and Jewiſh nation, and alſo in his ſeparating his diſciples, when the calamity came near, who fled to Pella, and eſcaped the Roman ſword; ſo will he fulfil this prophecy in the approaching diſſolution of all things, when he ſhall perſonally appear, coming in the clouds with power and great glory, to execute judgment on all impenitent ſinners, and to gather his elect into his eternal kingdom. Concerning theſe great events he warns them,

1. That the time of their fulfilment is near, and they might judge of their approach by the preceding ſigns, juſt as ſurely as they would of the ſummer's drawing nigh by the budding of the fig-tree. Some of that generation would live to ſee the utter ruin of Judea and Jeruſalem: his prophetic word muſt infallibly take place, and heaven and earth ſooner paſs away, than one tittle of his predictions fail. Near alſo, even at the door, is the great day of judgment. The period of time, which yet remains, we know is ſhort; how ſhort, who can tell?

2. The time when is uncertain. None in heaven or earth preciſely knows the hour, not even the Son, as man, or in virtue of his deſignation to the mediatorial office; it is a ſecret locked up in God's eternal mind, and neither revealed to men nor angels. We are left in this awful uncertainty, that we may be always ready.

3. He admoniſhes them, in the view of what he had ſpoken, to watch and pray, which he enforces by the following parable. His appearing would be like that of a maſter, who took a long journey, committed to his ſtewards the management of his affairs, and directed the work in which he would have his ſervants employed during his abſence; charging the porter to take eſpecial care that no thief broke in, and that all ſhould be ready to receive him at his return, which he left uncertain, that they might be in conſtant expectation of him, and prepared to welcome him. Thus when Jeſus aſcended up on high, he left a charge with all his ſervants, whether miniſters or private chriſtians, to employ themſelves diligently in the work he hath appointed them, and to be prepared to give an account of their fidelity. He is coming again to make a ſolemn enquiry, the time when is uncertain; every hour we ſtand in jeopardy, not knowing whether by day or by night the calls of death or judgment may place us before him. Our care therefore muſt be, above all things, that we are not ſurprized by him, ſlothful, negligent, and unprepared to meet him, though he come never ſo ſuddenly. What, therefore, our Lord inculcates upon his diſciples, we are alike bound to hear, for unto us it is alike addreſſed, I ſay unto all, Watch. Note, Our great concern upon earth is to be ready for death and judgment; each breath we draw may be our laſt: let us ſeize then the moment as it flies; and whilſt the hour laſts, give all diligence, that we may be found of him in peace.

CHAP. XIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. The plot of the chief prieſts and ſcribes againſt Chriſt, ver. 1, 2. 2. The anointing of Chriſt's head at a ſupper in Bethany, ver. 3—9. 3. The contract Judas made with the chief prieſts to betray him, ver. 10, 11. 4. Chriſt's eating the paſſover with his diſciples, his inſtituting the Lord's ſupper, and his diſcourſe with his diſciples at and after ſupper, ver. 12—31. 5. Chriſt's agony in the garden, ver. 32—42. 6. The betraying of him by Judas, and the apprehending of him by the chief prieſt's agents, ver. 43—52. 7. His arraignment before the high-prieſt, his conviction, and the indignities done him at that bar, ver. 53—65. 8. Peter's denying him, ver. 66—72. Moſt of which paſſages we had before, Matt. xxvi.

1. AFTER two days was the feaſt of the paſſover, and of unleavened bread: and the chief prieſts and the ſcribes [b] ſought how they might take him by craft, and put him to death. 2. But they ſaid, Not on the feaſt-day, [c] leſt there be an uproar of the people. 3. ¶ And being in Bethany, in the houſe of Simon the leper, as he ſat at meat, [d] there came a woman, having an alabaſter-box of ointment of † ſpikenard, very precious; and ſhe brake the box, and poured it on his head. 4. And there were ſome that had indignation within themſelves, and ſaid, Why was this waſte of the ointment made? 5. For it might have been ſold for more than three hundred [e] pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured againſt her. 6. And Jeſus ſaid, Let her alone, why trouble ye her? ſhe hath wrought a good work on me. 7. For [f] ye have the poor with you always, and whenſoever ye will, [g] ye may do them good: but me ye have not always. 8. She hath done what ſhe could: ſhe is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying. 9. Verily I ſay unto you, Whereſoever this goſpel ſhall be preached throughout the whole world, this alſo that ſhe hath done, ſhall be ſpoken of for a memorial of her. 10. ¶ [h] And Judas Iſcariot, one of the twelve, went unto the chief prieſts, to betray him unto them. 11. And when they heard it, they were glad, and promiſed to give him [i] money. And he ſought how he might conveniently betray him.

a Mat. xxvi. 2. Luke xxii. 1.
b Pſ. ii. 2. John xi. 47. Acts iv. 26—28.
c John vii. 40.
d Mat. xxvi. 7. Luke vii. 37. John xii. 3.
† Or pure Nard.
e Mat. xviii. 28.
f Deut. xv. 11. John xii. 8.
g John xiii. 33. & xiv. 19.
h Mat. xxvi. 14. Luke xxii. 4.
i Zech. xi. 12. 1 Tim. vi. 10.

v. 1—11. The ſcene of our Saviour's ſufferings now approaching, we have here the ſteps preparatory thereunto.

1. The anointing him as he ſat in the houſe of Simon the leper; ſo called, probably, as having been cured by Jeſus of that nauſeous diſeaſe. Note, When the ſin is forgiven, and the backſlider reſtored, the reproach will ſtill frequently abide. Whilſt Jeſus was at ſupper, a woman, ſuppoſed to be Mary Magdalene, or Lazarus' ſiſter, came behind him, and poured upon his head a box of precious ſpikenard. Some of the diſciples, with Judas at their head, with indignation beheld what they eſteemed ſuch unneceſſary waſte, the value of the ointment amounting to above nine pounds, which they ſuggeſted might have been much more profitably employed in charitable uſes; but Chriſt, who knew the ſecret murmurs they were afraid to utter, reproved their raſh cenſures, and commended the deed as highly praiſe-worthy; it being intended as a burial unction, which, according to her power, willing to honour her Lord whilſt alive, ſhe thus anticipated, as ſhe would not have an opportunity to do it for him after his death. Their care indeed for the poor was commendable, but they being ever preſent, abundant occaſions would offer to relieve them. But as he was ready to depart, it was the only opportunity of ſhewing him reſpect which would be ever afforded her: therefore to her honour ſhall this be mentioned, wherever in future days the goſpel ſhall be preached, and this remarkable inſtance of her faith and love ſhall for ever accompany the narrative of his death and reſurrection. Note, (1.) They who love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt, never think they can do enough to teſtify their regard for him. (2.) They who honour him, whatever cenſures others may caſt on them, he will honour.

2. The ſcheme laid for his betrayal and ruin. Determined upon his death, the chief prieſts and ſcribes conſulted only on the means of effecting it with the leaſt noiſe; and at firſt bethought them, that on the feaſt-day it would be dangerous to arreſt him, for fear of the people: but whilſt they were in council, a moſt unexpected incident fixed their reſolutions. Judas, one of the twelve apoſtles, came and offered to betray his maſter. The bargain was inſtantly ſtruck, the money engaged for, and immediately he ſet himſelf to find the propereſt opportunity to put him into the hands of theſe his implacable enemies. Note, (1.) Where the love of filthy lucre reigns, whatever profeſſion a man may make, there wants nothing but temptation to draw forth the apoſtacy of his heart. (2.) The devil often favours his ſervants with moſt unexpected ſucceſs, in order to embolden and harden them in wickedneſs, and to bind them faſter in his chains.

12. ¶ [k] And [l] the firſt day of unleavened bread, when they † killed the paſſover, his diſciples ſaid unto him, Where wilt thou that we go and prepare, that thou mayeſt eat the paſſover? 13. And he ſendeth forth two of his diſciples, and ſaith unto them, Go ye into the city, and there ſhall meet you a man bearing a pitcher of water: follow him. 14. And whereſoever he ſhall go in, ſay ye to the good-man of the houſe, The Maſter ſaith, Where is the gueſt-chamber, where I ſhall eat the paſſover with my diſciples? 15. And he will ſhew you a large upper room furniſhed and prepared: there make ready for us. 16. And his diſciples went forth, and came into the city, and found as he had ſaid unto them: and they made ready the paſſover.

k Mat. xxvi. 17. Luke xxii. 4.
l Ex. xii. 16.
† Or ſacrificed.

17. And in the evening he cometh with the twelve.
18. And as they ſat and did eat, Jeſus ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, [m] One of you which eateth with me, ſhall betray me. 19. And they began to be ſorrowful, and to ſay unto him one by one, Is it I? and another ſaid, Is it I?
20. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, It is one of the twelve, that dippeth with me in the diſh. 21. The Son of man indeed goeth, [n] as it is written of him: but wo to that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed:
good were it for that man if he had never been born.
22. ¶ And as they did eat, [o] Jeſus took bread, and bleſſed, and brake it, and gave to them, and ſaid, Take eat, this is my body. 23. And he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them: and [p] they all drank of it. 24. And he ſaid unto them, This is my blood of [r] the New Teſtament, which is ſhed [s] for many. 25.
Verily I ſay unto you, I will drink no more of the fruit of the vine, [t] until that day that I drink it new in the kingdom of God. 26. ¶ And when they had ſung an ‡ hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives. 27. [u] And Jeſus ſaith unto them, All ye ſhall be [x] offended becauſe of me this night: for it is written, [y] I will ſmite the ſhepherd, and the ſheep ſhall be ſcattered. 28. But after that I am riſen, [z] I will go before you into Galilee. 29. But Peter ſaid unto him, [a] Although all ſhall be offended, yet will not I. 30.
And Jeſus ſaith unto him, [b] Verily I ſay unto thee, that this day, even in this night before the cock crow twice, thou ſhalt deny me thrice. 31. But he ſpake the more vehemently, If I ſhould die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wiſe. Likewiſe alſo ſaid they all.

m Pſ. xli. 9. John xiii. 21, &c.
n Pſ. xxii. Iſa. liii. 3, &c. Dan. ix. 26.
o Mat. xxvi. 26. Luke xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 23.
p 1 Cor. x. 4.
r Jer. xxxi. 31.
s Mat. xx. 28. Rom. v. 15.
t Acts x. 41.
‡ Or pſalm. Some think pſalms cxiii—cxviii.
u Mat. xxvi. 31, &c.
x Mat. xi. 6.
y Zech. xiii. 7. John xvi. 32.
z Chap. xvi. 7.
a 2 Kings viii. 13.
b John xiii. 38. 1 Cor. x. 12.

v. 12—31. We have here,

1. Chriſt's celebration of the paſſover with his diſciples. By his orders, two of them had been ſent with particular directions where to prepare it; and having accordingly found the perſon with the pitcher of water, and followed him home, they were ſhewn by the maſter of the houſe a furniſhed room, where they prepared the ſupper; and in the evening Jeſus came with the reſt of the diſciples, and ſat down to eat the paſchal Lamb. Note, (1.) When we have our Lord's orders, we muſt go forth depending on his providence, even when we know not whither we go. (2.) The pureſt communions will not be without falſe brethren this ſide heaven; of twelve apoſtles, one was a traitor.

2. At the table he ſtartled his diſciples with an information the moſt alarming; that one of them, who now appeared ſo friendly, would prove a traitor, and betray him into the hands of his enemies. Exceedingly grieved at ſuch an aſſurance, each unwilling to ſuſpect another, and unconſcious of ſuch deſign, Judas excepted, began to ſay, Lord, is it I? I dread the thought of ſuch villainy, and wiſh not a moment to lie under the ſuſpicion of it. In anſwer to their queſtion, Chriſt points out the traitor, by directing them to one of the twelve then dipping in the diſh with him, adding a moſt fearful commination againſt him, v. 21. if any thing at laſt might touch that hardned traitor's conſcience. Note, (1.) A zealous ſoul is grieved but to be ſuſpected of unfaithfulneſs. (2.) We cannot be too jealous over ourſelves. A ſincere diſciple wiſhes others to ſearch him, and prays the Lord each day to try the ground of his heart, and ſhew him if there be any hidden iniquity there, that it may be repented of and renounced. (3.) Not one jot or tittle of God's word can fail, and all his decrees infallibly have their accompliſhment; even wicked men, when moſt invenomed againſt him, are nevertheleſs made ſubſervient to his purpoſes, though this neither extenuates their guilt, nor will at all mitigate their puniſhment.

3. At the cloſe of the paſchal ſupper, our Lord inſtituted that ordinance, which in his church ſhould ſuperſede, and ſupply the place of this ſolemn feaſt. Having taken bread, he bleſſed it, brake, and gave to each of them, to be eaten in remembrance of his broken body, which ſhould procure for them a more glorious redemption than in the paſſover they commemorated; a redemption from ſin, and death, and hell. Then taking the cup in like manner, after his ſolemn benediction, he bid them all drink of it, as they did; and this he explains as his blood of the New Teſtament; by the ſhedding of which, all the promiſes of the covenant of grace would be confirmed to them, and to as many as in faith received theſe inſtituted ſeals of that covenant. And hereupon our Lord takes his farewell of them, till the day came when they ſhould ſit down with him in glory, and drink the new wine in the kingdom of God, partaking of the joys at his right hand for evermore. Then cloſing the ſolemnity with an hymn, they departed for the mount of Olives.

4. In the way to the retirement whither Jeſus went, he took occaſion to warn his diſciples of their approaching deſertion of him, which the ſcripture had foretold, and they were about to fulfil that very night. But to encourage them to return to him again, he lets them know, though he ſhould be ſmitten, and they ſcattered from him, yet after his reſurrection, they ſhould again ſee him to their comfort in Galilee. Peter, ſhocked at the thought, confident in himſelf, and with warmth reſenting the ſuſpicion, ſolemnly engages, though every one of his brethren, like Judas, ſhould deſert his maſter, he never would. And, notwithſtanding the repeated warnings our Lord gives him, that he would not only forſake, but deny him before the morning returned; more reſolute and peremptory than before, Peter with vehemence inſiſts he will die with him, ſooner than deny him. And all the reſt, unwilling to be outdone in aſſurances of fidelity, declared this alſo to be their determined reſolution. Note, (1.) We know not our own hearts, when we confidently boaſt what we will do. The firſt temptation will prove our weakneſs. (2.) Many are diſcouraged from the Lord's table, for fear of falling afterwards, as if every ſubſequent ſin was mortal; but though no doubt we are called to uſe peculiar watchfulneſs, we muſt not think, if we fall, the door of grace is ſhut. The diſciples, immediately after the ſacrament, fell, and foully too; and yet the Lord recalled and recovered them. Let us not then deſpair.

32. [c] And they came to a place which was named Gethſemane: and he ſaith to his diſciples, Sit ye here, while I ſhall pray. 33. And he taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and began to be ſore amazed, and to be very heavy, 34. And ſaith unto them, [d] My ſoul is exceeding ſorrowful unto death: tarry ye here, and watch. 35. And he went forward a little, and fell on the ground, and [e] prayed, that if it were poſſible the hour might paſs from him. 36. And he ſaid, [f] Abba, Father, all things are poſſible unto thee, take away [g] this cup from me: nevertheleſs, [h] not what I will, but what thou wilt. 37. And he cometh and findeth them [i] ſleeping, and ſaith unto Peter, Simon, ſleepeſt thou? couldeſt not thou watch one hour? 38. [k] Watch ye, and pray, leſt ye enter into temptation: the ſpirit truly is ready, [l] but the fleſh is weak. 39. And [m] again he went away and prayed, and ſpake the ſame words.
40. And when he returned, he found them aſleep again (for [n] their eyes were heavy) neither wiſt they what to anſwer him. 41. And he cometh the third time, and ſaith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your reſt: it is enough, the hour is come; behold, the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of ſinners. 42. Ariſe up, let us go; lo, he that betrayeth me is at hand.

c Mat. xxvi. 36. Luke xxii. 39. John xviii. 1.
d Pſ. xxii. 14. & cxvi. 3. John xii. 27.
e Heb. v. 7.
f Rom. viii. 15. Gal. iv. 6.
g Mat. xx. 22.
h John vi. 38.
i Mat. xxv. 5. Ver. 34.
k Chap. xiii. 33. Eph. vi. 18.
l Pſ. lxxviii. 39. Rom. vii. 22. Gal. v. 17.
m Luke xviii. 1. 2 Cor. xii. 8.
n Cant. v. 2.

v. 32—42. We have before us the amazing ſcene of the Redeemer's agony in the garden Gethſemane. Having left eight of his diſciples at a greater diſtance, he took three of them to be nearer ſpectators of his ſufferings.

1. His anguiſh was unutterable. Amazement and horror ſeized his ſoul, and a ſenſe of the divine wrath oppreſſed his conſcience with its intolerable load. Sorrows, like the agonies of death, compaſſed him about; and pains, like thoſe the damned feel, gat hold upon him. He acquaints his three diſciples with ſomething of what he endured, which words were too feeble to expreſs, and bids them tarry there, and watch with him, in this hour of temptation. We may here, as in a glaſs, obſerve, (1.) The dreadful evil of ſin, and every pang the Redeemer feels ſhould be a dagger to our hearts, begetting deepeſt ſelf-abhorrence and moſt unfeigned grief for thoſe abominations, which nothing but theſe ſufferings of the Son of God could expiate. (2.) The ſure foundation of our faith. The Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all: theſe agonizing pains are the ranſom he pays to ſatisfy the juſtice of an offended God; and having accepted one for all, there is no more condemnation to thoſe that are in Chriſt Jeſus. (3.) The inexpreſſibly tranſcendent love of our Lord and Saviour, willingly reſigning himſelf thus for our ſakes: what returns, then, do we not owe him? (4.) The comfort procured for us under our affliction and dejection. Whatever we ſuffer, Jeſus hath drank deeper of the bitter cup; and having been thus tempted himſelf, can tenderly feel for us, and will ſuccour us under our ſorrows, and bring us happily to the end of them.

2. His prayer was humble, fervent, importunate, ſubmiſſive. As man, he could not but wiſh the bitter cup might remove; as mediator, he bowed ſubmiſſive to his Father's will, content, whatever muſt be endured, to finiſh the work which God had given him to do. Thrice he renews the ſame requeſt, and thrice reſigns himſelf to ſuffer whatever might be for the glory of the divine Juſtice to inflict. Note, (1.) We are not forbid to mourn and pray for the removal of our burdens, even when moſt reſigned to ſuffer God's holy will. (2.) Though our troubles are not ſoon removed, we muſt not be weary in waiting ing upon God. In his time they ſhall end, and we ſhall finally receive the anſwer of peace, if we faint not; either deliverance from our trials, or ſtrength to endure them.

3. On coming to his diſciples, he finds them aſleep, and therefore rouſes them with a juſt and ſharp rebuke, eſpecially addreſſed to Simon, who had lately appeared ſo zealous, and promiſed ſuch diſtinguiſhed fidelity. How ſhameful that they could not watch one hour with their agonizing maſter? or if not for his ſake, at leaſt for their own, when it was ſo needful for them to watch and pray; ſuch temptation being ready to overtake them, as nothing but almighty grace could enable them to bear: but whilſt he thus upbraids and warns, the tender Saviour pities them, and kindly ſeeks to excuſe what he muſt condemn. Their ſpirit was willing, he knew their hearts, but the fleſh was weak to withſtand the effects of wearineſs and the oppreſſions of grief: and the infirmities incident to this feeble frame, diſabled them from doing what they deſired. A ſecond time he goes to pour out his ſorrows before God; again he returns, and they are aſleep, and when awaked, unable to anſwer his juſt rebuke, after having received ſuch repeated admonition. The third time he retires to redouble his cries, yet finds them on his return ſleeping ſtill. Now therefore he bids them ſleep on, if they dared any longer; or rather, will ye ſleep yet? when danger was now at the door; he calls them, therefore, to go with him, to meet his betrayer. Note, (1.) Slothfulneſs in prayer is uſually the forerunner of ſad falls. (2.) Jeſus, by his word and providences, is repeatedly knocking at our ſtupid hearts, to awaken our attention, and rouſe us to watchfulneſs and prayer. (3.) Thoſe who have made the ſtrongeſt profeſſions are peculiarly criminal if they act unſuitably. (4.) It is well for us we have a compaſſionate high prieſt who can be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, and ſees that the ſpirit of his people is willing, even when through the frailty of our nature we cannot always ſtand upright. (5.) They who do not watch and pray when danger threatens, will be unprepared to meet it, and ſink under the temptation.

[o] Mat. xxvi. 47. Luke xxii. 47. John xviii. 3.
[p] Acts i. 16.
[q] Pſ. iii. 1.
[r] 2 Sam. xx. 9.
[s] Lam. iv. 20. Acts ii. 23.
[t] Rom. xii. 19.
[u] Pſ. xxii. 12. Iſa. liii. 7. Dan. ix. 26. Acts xxvi. 23.
[x] Job xix. 13. Ver. 27.

43. ¶ [o] And immediately, while he yet ſpake, [p] cometh Judas, one of the twelve, and with him [q] a great multitude with ſwords and ſtaves, from the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes, and the elders. 44. And he that betrayed him, had given them a token, ſaying, Whomſoever I ſhall kiſs, that ſame is he; take him, and lead him away ſafely. 45. And as ſoon as he was come, he goeth ſtraightway to him, and ſaith, Maſter, maſter; and [r] kiſſed him. 46. ¶ And [s] they laid their hands on him, and took him. 47. And one of them that ſtood by, [t] drew a ſword, and ſmote a ſervant of the high prieſt, and cut off his ear. 48. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Are ye come out as againſt a thief, with ſwords and with ſtaves, to take me? 49. I was daily with you in the temple, teaching, and ye took me not: but [u] the ſcriptures muſt be fulfilled. 50. And [x] they all forſook him and fled. 51. And there followed him a certain young man, having a linen cloth caſt about his naked body; and the young men laid hold on him. 52. And he left the linen cloth, and fled from them naked.

v. 43—52. His internal ſufferings in the garden being ended, his external ſufferings begin; ſo faſt doth billow roll on billow, till all the ſtorms of wrath are gone over him.

1. He is apprehended by a band of men ſent from the chief prieſts, ſcribes, and elders, under the conduct of Judas the traitor; who, as it was night, that they might not miſtake the perſon of Jeſus, gave them this ſignal, that they might know him, by his going up and kiſſing him. And hereupon, with great pretended reſpect, approaching Chriſt, he kiſſed him, and they who were at his heels laid hands upon him. Note, (1.) Apoſtates ever prove the blackeſt inſtruments of hell, and no heighth of office, or profeſſion, is ſafe from temptation. We need not ſtumble at the falls of the greateſt apparent chriſtians, when we ſee an apoſtle a traitor and a devil. (2.) The baſeſt ſchemes of villainy are often crowned with ſucceſs, and the wicked triumphant, but their time is ſhort.

2. Peter, ever violent, no ſooner ſaw his maſter apprehended, than he attempted a reſcue; and drawing his ſword, ſtruck at one of the men who had ſeized Jeſus, and cut off his ear: his intention was good, but his zeal intemperate. Note, (1.) Many have more zeal than prudence, and their good intentions are no excuſe for their raſhneſs. (2.) In times of perſecution, it is much eaſier to draw the ſword and fight, than patiently to bow down and meekly ſuffer.

3. Chriſt expoſtulates with his enemies on this clandeſtine manner of apprehending him, as if he had been ſome infamous villain and murderer that needed to be ſeized, and overpowered with arms and numbers, when they knew he had every day appeared in the temple, where they might eaſily have taken him; but the ſcriptures muſt be fulfilled that ſpoke of his betrayal and ſufferings, and the flight of his diſciples: for they no ſooner ſaw him ſubmit quietly to be bound, than they all forſook him and fled, glad every one to ſhift for himſelf, leaſt they alſo ſhould be apprehended. Note, (1.) The moſt innocent men are often proceeded againſt, as if they were the vileſt of mankind, and ſuch apprehenſions ſtudiouſly raiſed againſt them, to cloak the malice of their perſecutors. (2.) The fulfilment of the ſcriptures ſhould be a great comfort to us under all our ſufferings for Chriſt's ſake: thus, we ſee, it muſt be. (3.) We need not think it ſtrange, if in times when we moſt need ſuch ſupport, our deareſt friends abandon us, through fear of being involved in our troubles. In theſe ſeaſons we ſhould remember Jeſus in the garden.

4. A young man near the garden, probably diſturbed by the noiſe, ſtarted up from his bed, and ran down with only a ſheet about him, or ſome linen garment, to enquire into the cauſe, and followed the crowd a little way. Being obſerved by one of the ſoldiers, and perhaps ſuſpected for a diſciple, they attempted to lay hold of him; but with the loſs of his garment, he got looſe, and fled naked. This incident ſeems to be related to ſhew the inveteracy of theſe enemies of Jeſus; none that looked like his diſciples might expect to meet any quarter with them.

53. ¶ And [y] they led Jeſus away to the high prieſt: and [z] with him were aſſembled all the chief prieſts, and the elders and the ſcribes. 54. And Peter followed him afar off, even into the palace of the high prieſt: and he ſat with the ſervants, and warmed himſelf at the fire. 55. And the chief prieſts, and all the counſel ſought for witneſs againſt Jeſus to put him to death; and found none. 56. For [a] many bare falſe witneſs againſt him, but their witneſs agreed not together. 57. And there aroſe certain, and bare falſe witneſs againſt him, ſaying, 58. We heard him ſay, [b] I will deſtroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands. 59. But neither ſo did their witneſs agree together. 60. And the high prieſt ſtood up in the midſt, and aſked Jeſus, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou nothing? what is it which theſe witneſs againſt thee? 61. But [c] he held his peace, and anſwered nothing. Again the high prieſt [d] aſked him, and ſaid unto him, Art thou the Chriſt, the Son of the Bleſſed? 62. And Jeſus ſaid, I am: and [e] ye ſhall ſee the Son of man ſitting on the right hand of power, and [f] coming in the clouds of heaven. 63. Then the high prieſt [f] rent his clothes, and ſaith, What need we any farther witneſſes? 64. Ye have heard the blaſphemy: what think ye? And they all condemned him [g] to be guilty of death. 65. And ſome began to [h] ſpit on him, and to cover his face, and to buffet him, and to ſay unto him, Propheſy: and the ſervants [i] did ſtrike him with † the palms of their hands.

[y] Mat. xxvi. 57. Luke xxii. 54. John xviii. 13.
[z] Pſ. xxii. 16.
[a] 1 Kings xxi. 13. Pſ. xxvii. 12. & xxxv. 11.
[b] Chap. xv. 29. John ii. 19.
[c] Pſ. xxxviii. 13. Iſa. liii. 7. Chap. xv. 3, 5.
[d] Mat. xxvi. 63.
[e] Dan. vii. 13. Mat. xvi. 27. & xxiv. 30. Rom. xiv. 10.
[e] Pſ. cx. 1. Rev. i. 7.
[f] 2 Kings xviii. 37.
[g] Lev. xxiv. 16. John xix. 7.
[h] Iſa. l. 6. Mat. xxvii. 30.
[i] John xix. 3.
† Or rods.

v. 53—65. Our bleſſed Lord, after being dragged through the ſtreets, as a criminal, is here carried before the high-prieſt and Sanhedrim, in order that ſome matter of accuſation might be found whereon to ground his condemnation: and Peter, now a little recovered from his fright, and prompted by ſtrong curioſity to ſee the end, at a diſtance followed the band; and having got admiſſion into the palace, ſat and warmed himſelf with the ſervants at the fire, preſuming in ſuch company none would take him for a diſciple. We are here informed,

1. What pains were taken to ſuborn falſe witneſſes, in order to have a pretence for putting Jeſus to death: this being their bloody reſolution, and the proceſs a mere vail to cover the murder. But though many, to pleaſe the prieſts, witneſſed againſt him, and ſome perverting the words which he had ſpoken of the temple of his body ſome years before, and applying them to the temple of Jeruſalem, would have repreſented him as the enemy to their worſhip and religion, yet all the charges they could muſter up amounted to nothing capital, whilſt the moſt glaring contradictions appeared in their evidence.

2. Unable to condemn him upon the evidence of others, the high-prieſt ſeeks to extort from himſelf ſomething more material. Finding him ſilent under all theſe frivolous and falſe accuſations, and not to be prevailed upon to reply ought to theſe charges, he roſe with vehemence, and ſolemnly adjured him to ſay directly, whether he really was, as he pretended, the Meſſiah, the Son of the bleſſed God? Then Jeſus, undiſmayed, with dignity becoming his office, aſſerted his divine miſſion and character, with an awful warning to them who now thus deſpiſed and ſet him at nought, that the time would come when they ſhould tremble at his preſence, and behold him executing his temporal judgments on their place and nation, and yet more fearfully meet him at the great day, when they muſt ſtand at his tribunal, and periſh eternally. Pretending indignation againſt what he termed blaſphemy, the high-prieſt rent his cloaths, exclaimed againſt the need of further evidence, and, branding him as a blaſphemer, appealed to the reſt for their opinion; who, following ſuch a wicked example, unanimouſly condemned him to death. Note, (1.) We may not be ſtaggered if we ſee the moſt reverend, aged, wiſe, and noble, conſpiring againſt the cauſe of Jeſus, and perſecuting his people. By ſuch was Jeſus himſelf condemned. (2.) The ſilence of our Redeemer under every accuſation ſhould teach us patience when we are thus reviled, committing our cauſe to him that judgeth righteouſly. (3.) It is eaſy to brand thoſe as blaſphemers who in the higheſt, deſire to give glory to God. The beſt men have often been dreſſed up in the moſt ſhocking colours, and blackened with the moſt opprobrious names, in order to make the perſecution of them appear neceſſary and laudable.

3. No ſooner was judgment given againſt him, than they began to inſult him with the moſt grievous indignities. They ſpit upon him, blindfolded him, buffeted him, ſtruck him on the face, and in deriſion bid him exerciſe his prophetical office, by telling who ſmote him. Thus did not he hide his face from ſhame and ſpitting, that we might be enabled without ſhame to ſtand before the tribunal of God.

66. ¶ [k] And as Peter was beneath in the palace, there cometh one of the maids of the high prieſt. 67. And when ſhe ſaw Peter warming himſelf, ſhe looked upon him, and ſaid, And thou alſo waſt with Jeſus of Nazareth. 68. [l] But he denied, ſaying, I know not, neither underſtand I what thou ſayeſt. And he went out into the porch: and the cock crew. 69. And a maid ſaw him again, and began to ſay to them that ſtood by, This is one of them. 70. And he denied it again. And a little after, they that ſtood by ſaid again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galilean, and thy ſpeech agreeth thereto. 71. But [m] he began to curſe and to ſwear, ſaying, I know not this man of whom ye ſpeak. 72. And the ſecond time the cock crew. And Peter called to mind [n] the word that Jeſus ſaid unto him, Before the cock crow twice, thou ſhalt deny me thrice. And † when he thought thereon, [o] he wept.

[k] Mat. xxvi. 69. Luke xxii. 55. John xviii. 16.
[l] Ver. 29, 31.
[m] Pſ. cxliv. 3. 1 Cor. x. 12.
[n] Ver. 30.
† Or covering his face.
[o] Zech. xii. 10. Mat. xxvi. 75. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

v. 66—72. Peter's fall had been foretold, and we here ſee the prediction ſadly verified.

1. He had ruſhed needleſsly into temptation, and thruſt himſelf into the midſt of bad company, and then no marvel he fell. He was firſt aſhamed of Chriſt, and that was but one ſtep from denying him. Note, They who care not to be found among the diſciples of Jeſus becauſe it is reproachful, and aſſociate with the world in order to gain eſtimation, and to be thought well of, will pierce themſelves through with many ſorrows.

2. On the ſlighteſt trial Peter repeatedly denied and diſowned his Maſter, and from words deſcended to oaths, ſealing perfidy and lies with fouleſt perjury. Lord, what is man, when left to himſelf! A ſervant-maid confounded the chief of the apoſtles, when truſting for a moment to the ſtrength of his own reſolution. Peter's mouth hardly knew how to pronounce an oath, and would before have ſhuddered at the thought; but, when a lie had firſt opened the door, profaneneſs and perjury eaſily entred. When once we turn aſide from the path of truth never ſo little, none know to what dreadful lengths they may be hurried. Complicated crimes loaded the apoſtle's conſcience; denial of his Maſter, falſehood before God, repeated lies, horrid profaneneſs, and wilful perjury. Yet even this is of uſe. Many a poor ſinner might have deſpaired, if he had not ſeen ſuch examples, and read in their pardon and recovery the poſſibility of his own.

3. When he was ſunk into the loweſt depths of ſin, then was the time for the almighty, ſovereign, ſaving grace of Jeſus to appear. Once had the cock crowed, after his firſt denial of his Maſter, and that warning had paſſed unnoticed; for, till God ſoftens the heart, all alarms of providence or the word are diſregarded. The ſecond time after his repeated crimes this herald of God reminds him of his Maſter's words, and his dire fulfilment of them. And now in full view his horrid guilt ſtared him in the face: every reflection ſhocked him; and, unable to bear that place, he retired to pour out in tears his bitter anguiſh. Some render the words, covering his face as a mourner, he wept bitterly, with penitential ſorrow returning to a pardoning God. And it ſtands upon record, for the comfort of the chief of ſinners, that he found mercy with him.

CHAP. XV.

Here we have, 1. Chriſt arraigned and accuſed before Pilate the Roman governor, ver. 1—5. 2. Cried out againſt by the common people at the inſtigation of the prieſts, ver. 6—14. 3. Condemned to be crucified immediately, ver. 15. 4. Abuſed as a mock-king by the Roman ſoldiers, ver. 16—19. 5. Led out to the place of execution with all poſſible ignominy and diſgrace, ver. 20—24. 6. Nailed to the croſs between two thieves, ver. 25—28. 7. Reviled and abuſed by all that paſſed by, ver. 29—32. 8. Forſaken for a time by his Father, ver. 33—36. 9. Dying and rending the vail, ver. 37, 38. 10. Atteſted and witneſſed to by the centurion and others, ver. 39, 40, 41. 11. Buried in the ſepulchre of Joſeph of Arimathea, ver. 42—47.

1. AND [a] ſtraightway in the morning the chief prieſts [b] held a conſultation with the elders and ſcribes, and the whole council, and bound Jeſus, and carried him away, and [c] delivered him to Pilate. 2. And Pilate aſked him, Art thou the king of the Jews? And he anſwering ſaid unto him, [d] Thou ſayeſt it. 3. And the chief prieſts [e] accuſed him of many things: but [e] he anſwered nothing. 4. And Pilate aſked him again, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou nothing? behold how many things they witneſs againſt thee. 5. But Jeſus yet anſwered nothing; ſo that Pilate marvelled. 6. Now at that feaſt he releaſed unto them one priſoner, whomſoever they deſired. 7. And there was one named [f] Barabbas, which lay bound with them that had made inſurrection with him, who had committed murder in the inſurrection. 8. And the multitude crying aloud, began to deſire him to do as he had ever done unto them. 9. But Pilate anſwered them, ſaying, Will ye that I releaſe unto you the king of the Jews? 10. (For he knew that the chief prieſts had delivered him [g] for envy), 11. But [h] the chief prieſts moved the people, that he ſhould rather releaſe Barabbas unto them. 12. And Pilate anſwered, and ſaid again unto them, What will ye then that I ſhall do unto him whom ye call the king of the Jews? 13. And they cried out again, Crucify him. 14. Then Pilate ſaid unto them, Why, what evil hath he done? And they cried out the more exceedingly, Crucify him.

[a] Mat. xxvii. 1. Luke xxii. 66. John xviii. 28.
[b] Pſ. ii. 2. Acts iv. 26.
[c] Luke xviii. 32.
[d] 1 Tim. vi. 13.
[e] Pſ. xxvii. 12. & xxxv. 11.
[f] John xviii. 40.
[g] Acts vii. 9.
[h] Ibid. iii. 14.

v. 1—14. Unwearied in wickedneſs, we ſee thoſe who had great part of the night ſat up to ſeize and condemn the Lord Jeſus, early in the morning again in conſultation how to get their ſentence confirmed by the Roman governor, and executed. Let it ſhame our ſlothfulneſs, that they ſhould be carried farther by enmity againſt Chriſt, than we by zeal to ſerve him.

1. They bound and led him priſoner to Pilate's tribunal. Our mighty Samſon might indeed eaſily have ſnapped theſe cords aſunder; but, faſter bound with bands of love to our ſinful ſouls, he quietly ſubmitted to be led as a lamb to the ſlaughter.

2. Before Pilate our Lord witneſſed the good confeſſion. In anſwer to his interrogatories, he confeſſed, and denied not, that he was the Chriſt, the King of his ſpiritual Iſrael; but to the clamorous charges of the prieſts, his invenomed perſecutors, he obſerved a profound ſilence; nor, when urged to anſwer by Pilate, deigned to make the leaſt reply. He deſpiſed their malice; he was prepared to ſuffer; he deſired not to be delivered; and he knew it in vain to remonſtrate with thoſe who wilfully and obſtinately rejected the truth; and therefore, to Pilate's admiration, he ſtill held his peace. Note, (1.) Chriſt is a king; and they who refuſe to bow as willing ſubjects to his government, will find him able to puniſh the rebels that will not have him to reign over them. (2.) We need not marvel if falſe brethren are our bittereſt accuſers. Read the ſcriptures, and from the beginning it will be ſeen, that wicked, worldly, and ſenſual prieſts are ever the moſt invenomed enemies to the cauſe of truth. (3.) Silence is the beſt anſwer to falſe and ſcurrilous invective.

3. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jeſus, greatly deſired to deliver him from his enemies, as he plainly ſaw, that the envy of the prieſts was alone the cauſe of this malicious proſecution; and as it was an eſtabliſhed cuſtom at the paſſover, to gratify the people by the releaſe of any priſoner they deſired, he bethought him of an expedient which he imagined could ſcarce fail of ſucceſs. There was a moſt infamous miſcreant then in priſon for murder and inſurrection, and he doubted not, but if he propoſed to the people theſe two, Jeſus and Barabbas, they would infallibly prefer the former. The ſuppoſition was reaſonable; but he was diſappointed in the iſſue. Note, (1.) When people think to extricate themſelves from their difficulties by indirect means, becauſe if they act openly and honeſtly it may expoſe them to cenſure, they often but farther involve themſelves. (2.) Whatever many pretend as the ſpecious pleas for reviling the zealous miniſters of truth, it is envy that inſtigates their enmity; they cannot bear the reproof of their lives and doctrine.

4. Swayed by the malignant inſinuations of the prieſts and elders, who, forgetting their dignity, mingled with the crowd, the people rejected Jeſus, and demanded Barabbas. Pilate, amazed, laboured ſtill to get Jeſus off, and propoſed the queſ-tion to them, what he ſhould do with that poor man, who was called the King of the Jews, and more to be pitied than feared. They cried out all together, Crucify him, crucify him. In vain the governor attempted to expoſtulate on the injuſtice, the cruelty of ſuch a puniſhment, where a man had been proved guilty of no crime; they only grew more outrageous and clamorous, and tumultuouſly demanded an inſtant compliance with their requeſt. Note, We muſt not judge of the juſtice of a cauſe by the clamours of the populace: the voice of truth is often ſilenced amidſt the louder cries of prejudice.

15. ¶ [l] And ſo Pilate willing to content the people, releaſed Barabbas unto them, and delivered Jeſus, when he had ſcourged him, to be crucified. 16. And the ſoldiers led him away into the hall, called Pretorium; and they call together the whole band. 17. And they [k] cloathed him with purple, and platted a crown of thorns, and put it about his head, 18. And began to ſalute him, Hail, king of the Jews. 19. And they ſmote him on the head with a reed, and did [l] ſpit upon him, and bowing their knees, worſhipped him. 20. And when they had mocked him, they took off the purple from him, and put his own clothes on him, and [m] led him out to crucify him. 21. [n] And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who paſſed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Ruſus, to bear his croſs.

[l] Mat. xxvii. 26. John xix. 1.
[k] Luke xxiii. 11.
[l] Iſa. l. 6. Chap. xiv. 65.
[m] Chap. xii. 8. Heb. xiii. 12.
[n] Mat. xxvii. 32. Luke xxiii. 26.

v. 15—21. The importunity and clamour of the people overcame the convictions of Pilate's conſcience. To content them, he releaſed Barabbas, pronounced ſentence of crucifixion on Jeſus, and delivered him up for execution, having before ſcourged him, in hopes of moving their compaſſion. But,

1. The ſoldiers, in order more bitterly to inſult him, dragged him to the hall called Prætorium, and gathering their whole company, in deriſion of the pretenſions of Jeſus, arrayed him as a king in a purple robe, placed a crown of thorns upon his head, and, ridiculing his mock-dignity, wiſhed all happineſs to the King of the Jews; ſtriking him on the head with the cane which they had put into his hand, to make the thorns on his head pierce the deeper; ſpitting upon him in contempt, whilſt they fell on their knees pretending to pay him homage. Thus, becauſe ſinful man had affected to be like God, he who came to bear the puniſhment of our pride, muſt ſubmit to the baſeſt indignities to expiate our guilt. With wonder and love then let us behold the man, aſtoniſhed at his humiliation, and bowing with no fictitious homage, but with deepeſt reverence before him, as our incarnate God and king.

2. When they were tired of this inhuman ſport, they diſarrayed him of the purple robe, put on his own garment, and led him away to the place of execution, bearing his croſs. But being unable to ſupport the load, leſt he ſhould die by the way, and diſappoint their cruelty, they took it off from him, and ſeizing one who paſſed by, perhaps known to be a diſciple, the father of Alexander and Rufus, men afterwards of note among the faithful, they compelled him to carry the croſs after Jeſus to Calvary. Note, (1.) Unexpected croſſes often come upon us; it is well to be habitually prepared for them. (2.) However ignominiouſly we may be treated now for Chriſt's ſake, it ſhall hereafter redound to our everlaſting honour.

22. [o] And they bring him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, the place of a ſcull. 23. And [p] they gave him to drink wine mingled with myrrh: but he received it not. 24. And when they had crucified him, [q] they parted his garments, caſting lots upon them, what every man ſhould take. 25. And it was the third hour, and they crucified him. 26. And the ſuperſcription of his accuſation was written over, THE KING OF THE JEWS. 27. And with him they crucified two thieves; the one on his right hand, and the other on his left. 28. And the ſcripture was fulfilled, which ſaith, [r] And he was numbred with the tranſgreſſors. 29. And they that paſſed by, railed on him, [s] wagging their heads, and ſaying, Ah, [t] thou that deſtroyeſt the temple, and buildeſt it in three days, 30. Save thyſelf, and come down from the croſs. 31. Likewiſe alſo the chief prieſts mocking, ſaid among themſelves, with the ſcribes, He ſaved others, himſelf he cannot ſave. 32. Let Chriſt the king of Iſrael deſcend now from the croſs, that we may ſee, and believe. And [u] they that were crucified with him, reviled him.

[o] Mat. xxvii. 33. Luke xxiii. 33. John xix. 17.
[p] Pſ. lxix. 21.
[q] Pſ. xxii. 18. John xix. 23.
[r] Iſa. liii. 12.
[s] Pſ. xxii. 7. & cix. 25. Lam. ii. 15.
[t] Chap. xiv. 58. John ii. 19.
[u] Luke xxiii. 39, &c.

v. 22—32. We are here led to the loweſt ſtep of the Saviour's humiliation, his obedience to death, even the death of the croſs.

1. They crucified him about nine o'clock on mount Golgotha; a puniſhment and death the moſt painful, ignominious, and accurſed. The hands and feet torn with the nails, excited the moſt excruciating pain, the whole body hanging on the wounds; the bones diſlocated; the blood ſtreaming down; and, lingring in agonies inexpreſſible, he felt all the horrors of death in its moſt tremendous form. None but the vileſt miſcreants and ſlaves were thus puniſhed; and God in his law had branded the death upon a tree with his curſe, Deut. xxi. 23. He who ſtood in the room of ſinners, of the chief of ſinners, therefore ſubmitted to bear their ſins in his own body on the tree, to endure all the ſhame, the pain, the curſe, which they had deſerved, and thus to take away ſin by the ſacrifice of himſelf.

2. On the tree he continued to endure every freſh inſult and cruelty which malice could deviſe. [1.] Inſtead of the intoxicating draught uſually given to criminals, he was offered ſome ſour wine, mixed with bitter ingredients, which he refuſed to drink. [2.] Whilſt he hung in agonies, the four ſoldiers, more immediately his executioners, ſported themſelves with dividing his clothes as their fee, and caſting lots for their ſeveral ſhares. [3.] The ſuperſcription over his croſs, though it faſtened no crime upon him, was an inſult on his pretenſions. [4.] Two thieves were crucified with him, one on each ſide, that he might not only appear numbered with the tranſgreſſors, but branded as the vileſt of the vile. Thus undeſignedly they fulfilled the ſcriptures concerning him, Iſa. liii. 12. [5.] Every paſſenger with bittereſt ſarcaſms caſt in his teeth what they regarded as his arrogant boaſts, v. 29. wagging their heads in ſcorn, and bidding him prove the miſſion which he challenged by coming down from the croſs. The chief prieſts and ſcribes alſo, who came to glut their vengeance with this ſpectacle, and to ſee the execution performed with every circumſtance of ignominy and cruelty, now triumphed over him, deriding his pretenſions as a Saviour to others, who was ſo little able to ſave himſelf; inſultingly demanding now that he would ſhew himſelf the Meſſiah, the King of Iſrael, and promiſing to believe on him, if he can give an inſtance of the power he aſſumed, by unfaſtening himſelf from the tree, and coming down before them all. Nay, even the very thieves who hung by his ſide, vented their rage and reviling againſt him, ſo hardened even in the jaws of death. Whilſt with horror and amaze at ſuch wickedneſs we read and tremble, let us fear that we do not repeat theſe crimes we ſo condemn, by our ſins crucifying the Son of God afreſh, and putting him to open ſhame.

33. And [x] when the ſixth hour was come, there was darkneſs over the whole † land, until the ninth hour. 34. And at the ninth hour Jeſus cried with a loud voice, ſaying, Eloi, Eloi, lama ſabachthani? which is, being interpreted, [y] My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? 35. And ſome of them that ſtood by, when they heard it, ſaid, Behold, he calleth Elias. 36. And [z] one ran and filled a ſpunge full of [a] vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink, ſaying, Let alone; let us ſee whether Elias will come to take him down. 37. And Jeſus cried with a loud voice, and [b] gave up the ghoſt. 38. And [c] the veil of the temple was rent in twain, from the top to the bottom. 39. ¶ And when the centurion which ſtood over-againſt him, ſaw that he ſo cried out, and gave up the ghoſt, he ſaid, [d] Truly this man was the Son of God. 40. There were alſo women [e] looking on afar off: among whom was Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James the leſs, and of Joſes, and of Salome; 41. Who alſo when he was in Galilee, [f] followed him, and miniſtred unto him; and many other women which came up with him unto Jeruſalem.

[x] Mat. xxvii. 45. Luke xxiii. 44.
† Gr. earth.
[y] Pſ. xxii. 1.
[z] John xix. 29.
[a] Pſ. lxix. 21.
[b] Heb. ix. 14.
[c] Ex. xxvi. 31. 2 Cor. iii. 14. Heb. x. 19.
[d] Pſ. lxxviii. 8. Nah. i. 6.
[e] Pſ. xxxviii. 11.
[f] Luke viii. 2, 3.

v. 33—41. Death at laſt brings the welcome releaſe from ſuch uncommon wretchedneſs, after Jeſus had hung on the tree about ſix hours; during which we are told,

1. The dreadful darkneſs that for the three laſt hours covered the earth, portending that fearful ſtate of blindneſs and hardneſs of heart to which the Jewiſh people were now abandoned for their wickedneſs. The Sun of righteouſneſs was now ſetting, to riſe on them no more; and moſt juſtly do thoſe who hate the light, deſerve to be deprived of it, and to be left to the darkneſs of their fallen minds.

2. The darkneſs of the ſun was but the emblem of the more dreadful darkneſs which involved the Redeemer's ſoul, and extorted from him that exceeding bitter cry, My God, my God, why haſt thou forſaken me? Such a complaint from the mouth of the Son of God may well amaze every hearer. The arrows of wrath now drank up his ſpirit, the powers of darkneſs ſtruggled with their might, and all that Jeſus could endure was laid upon him. Never had ſuch an hour paſſed ſince the ſun began its revolutions; nor ſhall be again, till he is plucked from his ſphere.

3. Aſtoniſhingly hardened, notwithſtanding all that had paſſed, ſome that ſtood by mocked him, as if he now wanted Elias to come; and running and filling a ſpunge with vinegar, they put it to his lips, the more to inſult him; whilſt others ſaid, Let alone; let us ſee whether Elias will appear to ſave him or no. Thus they regarded him as abandoned of God, and concluded, that none in earth or heaven deſired to help him.

4. Having finiſhed the atonement, he diſmiſſed his ſpirit, and left the lifeleſs corpſe upon the tree. He cried with a loud voice, not as one worn out with pains, but as a triumphant conqueror, and vanquiſhed as he fell, by death deſtroying him that had the power of death, that is, the devil.

5. At that inſtant the vail of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom, intimating the abolition of the ritual ſervice, the rending the Jewiſh ſtate in pieces, and the acceſs opened now through the croſs of Jeſus, and his body there offered, for every ſinner into the holieſt of all; God being reconciled through the blood of his croſs, and willing to receive all that come unto him through this dying Redeemer.

6. This amazing cry, and ſudden departure of Jeſus, deeply affected the Roman centurion, under whoſe command the ſoldiers were; and, convinced by what he ſaw and heard of his innocence, and the truth of that aſſertion for which he ſuffered, he could not but confeſs, that this was verily the Son of God. He was the firſt fruits of the Gentile confeſſors, and appointed to bear teſtimony to the Redeemer's glory in the hour of his deepeſt humiliation.

7. Thoſe pious women who had followed Jeſus from Galilee, and ſupported him out of their ſubſtance, continued with him to the laſt. The names of ſome of them are mentioned to their everlaſting honour. Mary Magdalen was one: much had been forgiven her, and ſhe thus proved how much ſhe loved the Saviour in return: and Mary the mother of James the leſs, ſo called probably from his low ſtature; and Salome, the mother of Zebedee's children: and now all their hopes ſeemed to be extinguiſhed by the death of their Lord. Thus when we ſeem ſunk into the loweſt depths, then doth the glory of God more eminently appear in raiſing our deſponding ſouls, and filling us with the triumphs of faith and joy.

42. ¶ [g] And now when the even was come (becauſe it was the preparation, that is, the day before the ſabbath) 43. Joſeph of Arimathea, an honourable counſeller, [h] which alſo waited for the kingdom of God, came, and went in boldly unto Pilate, and craved the body of Jeſus. 44. And Pilate marvelled if he were already dead: and calling unto him the centurion, he aſked him whether he had been any while dead. 45. And when he knew it of the centurion, he gave the body to Joſeph. 46. And he bought fine linen, and took him down, and wrapped him in the linen, and [i] laid him in a ſepulchre which was hewn out of a rock, and rolled a ſtone unto the door of the ſepulchre. 47. And Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of Joſes, beheld where he was laid.

[g] Mat. xxvii. 57. Luke xxiii. 50. John xix. 38.
[h] Luke ii. 25, 38.
[i] Iſa. liii. 9. Mat. xxvii. 60.

v. 42—47. Nothing now remained but to take down the bodies as the evening approached, longer than which they were forbidden to hang there; and alſo it being the preparation of the ſabbath, the work needed to be haſtened. But who ſhall perform this laſt kind office to the corpſe of Jeſus? The Lord hath prepared an unexpected perſon for the ſervice, Joſeph of Arimathea, a perſon of diſtinction, a counſellor, probably one of the great ſanhedrim, a ſecret diſciple of Jeſus; and who, notwithſtanding his ſufferings and death, expected that his glorious kingdom would come, and in faith waited for it.

1. He went in boldly to Pilate, and begged the body of Jeſus, when none of his apoſtles or followers had the courage to own him. Pilate, who could hardly believe that Chriſt was yet dead, called the centurion, and, when he was aſſured of the fact, readily granted Joſeph's requeſt, and gave an order for delivering the body. Note, (1.) In Chriſt's cauſe we have need of courage. They who dare appear on the ſide of the people that are every where ſpoken againſt, muſt not be ſhamefaced. (2.) God hath his choſen among the great, the noble, and honourable counſellors; though not many, yet enough to leave the reſt inexcuſable in their infidelity.

2. Joſeph with great reſpect having taken down the mangled corpſe of his Lord, and wrapped it in fine linen bought for this occaſion, interred the body in his own new tomb, which was hewn out of a rock, and cloſed the door with a large ſtone; whilſt the two Mary's, who had continued near the croſs, now followed their Maſter to his grave, and marked the place, intending after the ſabbath to embalm the corpſe. Note, (1.) They who love the Lord Jeſus, ſerve him with their beſt, and count nothing too much to beſtow for his honour. (2.) In the grave of Jeſus the poor ſinner beholds with joy all his iniquities buried, and never more ſhall they riſe up to condemn or deſtroy him. (3.) Viſits to the grave are very uſeful; they ſerve to quicken us to prepare for our great change.

CHAP. XVI.

Chriſt here, 1. Riſes from the dead, ver. 1—8. 2. Appears to Mary Magdalene, ver. 9—11. 3. To two of his diſciples; then to the eleven, ver. 12—14. 4. Inveſts them with their commiſſion to preach the goſpel, ver. 15—18. 5. He aſcends into heaven, ver. 19, 20.

1. [a] AND when the ſabbath was paſt, Mary Magdalene, and Mary the mother of James, and Salome, [b] had brought ſweet ſpices, that they might come and anoint him. 2. And very early in the morning, the firſt day of the week, they came unto the ſepulchre at the riſing of the ſun. 3. And they ſaid among themſelves, Who ſhall roll us away the ſtone from the door of the ſepulchre? 4. (And when they looked, they ſaw that the ſtone was rolled away) for it was very great. 5. [c] And entring into the ſepulchre, they ſaw a young man ſitting on the right ſide, clothed in a long white garment; and [d] they were affrighted. 6. And he ſaith unto them, Be not affrighted: ye ſeek Jeſus of Nazareth, which was crucified: [e] he is riſen, he is not here: behold the place where they laid him. 7. But go your way, tell his diſciples and Peter, that he goeth before you into Galilee: there ſhall ye ſee him, [f] as he ſaid unto you. 8. And they went out quickly, and fled from the ſepulchre; for [g] they trembled, and were amazed: neither ſaid they any thing to any man; for they were afraid.

[a] Mat. xxviii. 1. Luke xxiv. 1. John xx. 1.
[b] Luke xxiii. 56. John xix. 39.
[c] John xx. 12.
[d] Dan. x. 8. Luke i. 12, 19.
[e] Chap. viii. 31. & x. 33.
[f] Chap. xiv. 28.
[g] Mat. xxviii. 8.

v. 1—8. No ſooner was the ſabbath paſt, during which Chriſt had lain in the grave, than we find,

1. Early in the morning on the firſt day of the week, the pious women, who the preceding evening had provided ſpices for embalming the body, little expecting his reſurrection from the dead, ſat out from the city for the ſepulchre, which they reached juſt at ſun-riſing; and by the way having expreſſed to each other their concern how to roll back the ponderous ſtone from the mouth of the cave, to their ſurprize they beheld it already done for them. Note, (1.) Though difficulties at a diſtance ſeem unſurmountable, when we go on ſteadily depending upon God, we ſhall often meet with unexpected aſſiſtances. (2.) It is mentioned to their diſtinguiſhed honour, how aſſiduous and faithful the women who followed Jeſus proved, when the men forſook him. The weaker veſſel is often ſeen to be the ſtronger Chriſtian.

2. An angel appears to them. As they entred into the ſepulchre, to their great ſurprize and terror, they beheld one in the likeneſs of a young man, in long white robes ſitting within. But the angel ſoon quieted their fears; bids them not be terrified; he knew their buſineſs there was to ſeek the crucified Jeſus; and, to their inexpreſſible joy, informs them, he is no longer numbered with the dead, but riſen. There was the place where he lay: they are therefore enjoined without delay to carry the glad tidings to Peter and the reſt of the apoſtles, and to tell them, according to his promiſe, that their glorified Maſter will meet them in Galilee, and make them happy with his preſence and converſe. Note, (1.) We are often apt to fear where no fear is, and to dread our mercies as miſeries. (2.) They who ſeek a crucified Jeſus, are ſure to find comfort to their ſouls. (3.) Though we for our unfaithfulneſs might juſtly be left to mourn our folly, Chriſt is a compaſſionate Saviour, willing to pardon, and in haſte to ſpeak peace to the ſouls of his afflicted diſciples. (4.) Peter is particularly mentioned; had he not, perhaps he would have thought the meſſage was good news for the reſt, but not for him, as having rendered himſelf unworthy the name of a diſciple: but where ſin hath abounded, there will the Lord make his grace much more to abound. (5.) They who know the joy of meeting Jeſus, and of his ſpiritual preſence in the ordinances of his worſhip, will not count the way long to go, where his word is diſpenſed, and his voice is ſtill heard.

3. The women ran eagerly to carry the meſſage, trembling with a mixture of ſurprize and joy, and ſpoke to no man by the way, afraid the news was too good to be true, or that the Jews would be exaſperated if they heard it, and ſay they had ſtolen the body. Note, The great good news of a finiſhed ſalvation, perfect and entire in Chriſt Jeſus, appears to the trembling ſinner almoſt beyond belief.

9. ¶ Now when Jeſus was riſen early the firſt day of the week, [h] he appeared firſt to Mary Magdalene, out of whom he had caſt ſeven devils. 10. And ſhe went and told them that had been with him, [i] as they mourned and wept. 11. And they, when they had heard that he was alive, and had been ſeen of her, [k] believed not. 12. ¶ After that he appeared in another form unto [l] two of them, as they walked, and went into the country. 13. And they went and told it unto the reſidue: neither believed they them.

[h] John xx. 14.
[i] Mat. v. 4.

[k] Luke xxiv. 11.
[l] Luke xxiv. 13, &c.

v. 9—13. Chriſt here appears,

1. To Mary Magdalen, the morning he roſe, that remarkable ſinner, out of whom he had caſt ſeven devils. Sometimes the greateſt ſinners prove the greateſt ſaints, and deareſt to the Saviour. She immediately carried the joyful news to the eleven, who, inconſolable, with bitter anguiſh lamented their departed Lord, and their own unfaithfulneſs to him, and ſeemed ſunk in deſpair of ever ſeeing him again. Nay, ſo ſlow of heart were they to believe, notwithſtanding the repeated predictions Chriſt had given them of his riſing from the dead, that they received her declarations as a mere fancy, and imagined her deceived by ſome ſpectre or apparition. Note, (1.) The moſt reviving comforts uſually are ſent when we are moſt dejected and deſponding. (2.) The very incredulity of the diſciples tends to the confirmation of our faith: it ſhews, they were not themſelves willing to believe, but upon the moſt indubitable evidence.

2. The ſame day at evening he appeared to two others of his diſciples, who were going towards Emmaus, a village about ſeven miles from Jeruſalem; but perhaps being in a different dreſs from what he uſually wore, and their eyes being holden that they ſhould not know him, Luke xxiv. 16—31. they converſed with him for a while, and at laſt their eyes were opened, and they knew him: whereupon they inſtantly returned to acquaint their brethren; and even then they would not be perſuaded, though the witneſſes were ſo unexceptionable.

14. ¶ [m] Afterward he appeared unto the eleven as they ſat † at meat, and upbraided them with their unbelief, and hardneſs of heart, becauſe they believed not them which had ſeen him after he was riſen. 15. And he ſaid unto them, Go ye into all the world, and [n] preach the goſpel to every creature. 16. [o] He that believeth and [p] is baptized, ſhall be ſaved; but [q] he that believeth not, ſhall be damned. 17. And theſe ſigns ſhall follow them that believe; [r] In my name ſhall they caſt out devils, [s] they ſhall ſpeak with new tongues, 18. [t] They ſhall take up ſerpents, and if they drink any deadly thing, it ſhall not hurt them; [u] they ſhall lay hands on the ſick, and they ſhall recover.

[m] Luke xxiv. 36. John xx. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 7.
† Or together.
[n] Rom. x. 18. Col. i. 23.
[o] John iii. 18, 36. Rom. x. 9.
[p] Acts ii. 38. 1 Pet. iii. 21.
[q] John xii. 48.
[r] Acts v. 16. & xvi. 18.
[s] Acts ii. 4. & x. 46.
[t] Luke x. 19. Acts xxviii. 5.
[u] Acts xxviii. 8. Jam. v. 14, 15.

v. 14—18. Since they are ſo loth to believe the report of others, Jeſus condeſcends to put the matter beyond diſpute, by appearing himſelf the ſame evening unto all the apoſtles, except Thomas, as they were ſitting at table together.

1. He upbraids them with their unbelief and hardneſs of heart, that they were ſo backward to receive the teſtimony of thoſe who had ſeen him, notwithſtanding the many aſſurances of his riſing again, which he had given them before his death. Note, (1.) Unbelief is a moſt beſetting ſin, and highly diſpleaſing to the Lord Jeſus. (2.) Naturally we are indiſpoſed to believe farther than we can ſee; and yet, if even we did ſee, it would not truly produce faith in any ſoul that is not ſatisfied with the evidence of the goſpel.

2. He ſolemnly inveſts them with authority to go and preach the goſpel among all nations, and to confirm their miſſion by the miracles he would enable them to work. This tranſaction paſſed, it ſhould ſeem, not at the time of his firſt appearing to them, but afterwards, juſt before his aſcenſion.

[1.] He enlarges their commiſſion to go into all the world, and to preach that goſpel, which had been hitherto confined to the Jewiſh people, to every human creature, as far as their labours would reach; with power alſo to ſend out others, as fellow-labourers with them, to ſpread the ſavour of the truth in every place.

[2.] The ſummary of their preaching muſt be faith in the Son of God, in his life, death, and reſurrection; the neceſſity of the ſalvation obtained by his obedience and ſufferings for loſt ſinners; the fulneſs and all-ſufficiency of it to procure pardon, life, and glory for all who truſt in him; and the ſin and danger of thoſe who reject this method of divine wiſdom and love, and refuſe obedience to the faith of the goſpel, their damnation being as inevitable, as the ſalvation of thoſe who believe in Jeſus, and in conſequence thereof make open profeſſion of their faith, and are by baptiſm received into the boſom of the church, is ſure and certain. Note, Under the goſpel none periſh becauſe of the greatneſs of their ſins, but becauſe they ſin againſt the remedy, and ſeal themſelves up under wrath by their unbelief.

[3.] In confirmation of their doctrine they are impowered to work the moſt aſtoniſhing miracles. In the name of Jeſus, depending on his power, and to advance his goſpel, they ſhall be enabled to caſt out devils from thoſe that were poſſeſſed; to ſpeak with new tongues, which they had never learnt, with the moſt entire fluency and readineſs, as if they had ſeverally been their native language. They ſhall take up ſerpents, the moſt venomous, without the leaſt harm, See Acts xxviii. 3—6. If they drink any deadly thing, it ſhall not hurt them; when thus openly or ſecretly their perſecutors might ſtrive to make away with them. They ſhall lay hands on the ſick, and they ſhall recover, every diſeaſe giving way to their healing touch. And theſe miraculous powers they not only poſſeſſed themſelves, but were enabled to impart to others, and were continued till Chriſtianity got firm footing in the world; ſince which theſe miracles, being no longer neceſſary, are ceaſed.

19. ¶ So then [x] after the Lord had ſpoken unto them, [y] he was received up into heaven, and [z] ſat on the right hand of God. 20. And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and [a] confirming the word with ſigns following. Amen.

[x] Luke xxiv. 5. Acts i. 2, 3.
[y] Pſ. lxviii. 18.
[z] Pſ. cx. 1.
[a] Acts xiv. 3. Heb. ii. 4.

v. 19, 20. When our Lord had thus commiſſioned and qualified them for the great work he had committed to their charge, we ſee him,

1. Aſcending to his throne of glory, and exalted to the right hand of Majeſty on high. Having finiſhed the work of redemption in behalf of his people, all power is put into his hands, to beſtow eternal life on as many as the Father hath given him, and to reign in and over them as his faithful ſubjects; whilſt his enemies, as vanquiſhed, muſt bow before him, and whether they are devils or wicked men, will ſhortly receive from his lips their eternal doom.

2. We ſee them going forth according to their Maſter's orders, preaching the goſpel in defiance of all oppoſition from earth and hell, the Lord ſupporting them againſt all their perſecutors, giving the moſt amazing ſucceſs to their labours; by wondrous miracles atteſting their miſſion to be divine; and by the power of the Holy Ghoſt making their word powerfully effectual to the converſion of the hearts of innumerable multitudes. And this ſign will ever follow the goſpel to the end of time; wherever it is preached in ſpirit and in truth, it will be found the power of God unto ſalvation: and as the Evangeliſt adds his Amen hereunto, ſo are we alſo bound to do, aſſured that thus it will be, and praying that thus it may be; that the word may daily run and be glorified, till the ends of the earth ſhall remember themſelves, and be turned to the Lord, and all fleſh ſhall ſee the ſalvation of our God. Amen. So come, Lord Jeſus!

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the GOSPEL according to St. LUKE.

THE penman of this Epiſtle is Luke ; of what country is uncertain : I incline to their opinion who ſuppoſe him a native Iſraelite. He was, it ſeems, a phyſician, Col. iv. 14. and though Religio Medici is uſed as a proverb, we find an Evangeliſt of that profeſſion. He is mentioned with honour as the companion of the bleſſed Apoſtle Paul in his priſon, 2 Tim. iv. 11. and is ſuppoſed to be that brother ſo eſteemed in the churches, 2 Cor. viii. 18. The date of his goſpel is not fixed, ſome regarding him as the firſt of the Evangeliſts ; others ſay, he wrote during his travels with Paul in Achaia, about ſeventeen years after Chriſt's aſcenſion ; and many conclude it was written at Rome, during Paul's impriſonment, and juſt before the hiſtory of the Acts of the Apoſtles ; and then it will be fixed about the twenty-ſeventh year after Chriſt, and the fourth of the reign of Nero : but whenever or wherever he compoſed it, it is generally received as genuine, and written by divine inſpiration, and, as ſuch, ſtands among the records of our holy religion.

CHAP. I.

In this chapter we have, 1. Luke's preface to his goſpel, ver. 1—4. 2. The propheſy and hiſtory of the conception of John Baptiſt, who was Chriſt's forerunner, ver. 5—25. 3. The annunciation of the virgin Mary, ver. 26—38. 4. The interview between Mary the mother of Jeſus, and Eliſabeth the mother of John, ver. 39—56. 5. The birth and circumciſion of John Baptiſt, ſix months before the birth of Chriſt, ver. 57—66. 6. Zachariah's ſong of praiſe, in thankfulneſs for the birth of John, and in proſpect of the birth of Jeſus, ver. 67—69. 7. A ſhort account of John Baptiſt's infancy, ver. 80.

1. FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to ſet forth in order a declaration of thoſe things which are moſt ſurely believed among us, 2. [a] Even as they delivered them unto us, [b] which from the beginning were eye-witneſſes, and miniſters of the word : 3. [c] It ſeemed good to me alſo, having had perfect underſtanding of all things from the very firſt, to write unto thee in order, [d] moſt excellent † Theophilus, 4. [e] That thou mighteſt know the certainty of thoſe things wherein thou haſt been inſtructed.

[a] Heb. ii. 3. 1 John i. 1.
[b] Mark i. 1. John xv. 27.
[c] Acts xv. 19, 25, 28. 1 Cor. vii. 40.
[d] Acts i. 1. Rom. xiii. 7.
† i. e. A friend or a lover of God.
[e] John xx. 31.

v. 1—4. Dedications are uſually but the feather with which flattery tickles the pride of the great ; but here is one, whoſe ſimplicity beſpeaks the Chriſtian ſpirit of the author, and recommends the book not to the patronage of his noble friend, as needing his countenance, but to the conſideration of his pupil, in order to inſtruct his conſcience, and direct his practice.

The Evangeliſt opens with his reaſon for writing. Becauſe many had undertaken to publiſh narratives of the birth, life, doctrines, miracles, ſufferings, death, and reſurrection of Jeſus, who, though probably well-meaning diſciples, wrote under no infallible guidance of the Spirit ; it appeared therefore to be the will of God, and highly proper, that he ſhould compoſe a connected hiſtory, and particular account of all things from the beginning, to prevent the errors and miſtakes which might ariſe from uninſpired writings.

1. He profeſſes to confine himſelf to the things moſt ſurely believed among the faithful : not matters of doubtful diſputation, but facts eſtabliſhed by the moſt indubitable evidence of thoſe who from the beginning were eye-witneſſes, and miniſters of the word ; heard the doctrines, and ſaw the miracles of Jeſus, and were divinely commiſſioned by him to go forth and preach the goſpel he had delivered to them.

2. He was fully qualified for the work he undertook, having had perfect underſtanding of all things from the very firſt ; and this not merely received by tradition from the beſt atteſted reports, but as the words (παρηκολȣθηκοτι ανωθεν) may be rendered, having attained to the exact underſtanding of all things from above ; which inſpiration he had diligently ſought, and ſacredly followed.

3. The end he propoſed was, that Theophilus, whom he addreſſed with the reſpectable title of moſt excellent, being, it ſeems, a man of rank and faſhion, might know the certainty of thoſe things wherein he had been inſtructed, or catechiſed. Probably Luke had been the means of his converſion, and had taught him by word of mouth the great principles of the Chriſtian religion ; and therefore, that his memory might be aſſiſted, his knowledge increaſed, and his faith more firmly eſtabliſhed in the truths of the goſpel, he drew up the following hiſtory. Note, (1.) The goſpel of Jeſus Chriſt is not a cunningly deviſed fable, but contains facts ſupported by the moſt inconteſtible evidence, and truths the moſt ſure and certain, whereon our faith may ſtand unſhaken. (2.) Catechiſing was the antient method of communicating to the youth, and newly-converted perſons, the knowledge of the great doctrines of religion; and perhaps our preſent deplorable ignorance is owing to no one cauſe more than to the perfunctory diſcharge or total neglect of this moſt uſeful method of inſtruction. (3.) Chriſtianity, though it forbids to give flattering titles, enjoins us to pay honour to whom honour is due; it teaches us politeneſs without falſhood; ſimplicity without rudeneſs; reſpect without ſervility; and courteſy without cringing.

5. THERE was [f] in the days of Herod the king of Judea, a certain prieſt named Zacharias, [g] of the courſe of Abia: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Eliſabeth. 6. And [h] they were both righteous before God, [i] walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord, blameleſs. 7. And they had no child, becauſe that Eliſabeth was barren, and they both were now well ſtricken in years. 8. And it came to paſs, that while he executed the prieſt's office before God in the order of his courſe, 9. According to the cuſtom of the prieſt's office, his [k] lot was [l] to burn incenſe when he went into the temple of the Lord. 10. And [m] the whole multitude of the people were praying without, at the time of incenſe. 11. And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, ſtanding on the right ſide of [n] the altar of incenſe. 12. And when Zacharias ſaw him, he was troubled, and [o] fear fell upon him. 13. But the angel ſaid unto him, [p] Fear not, Zacharias: for [q] thy prayer is heard; and thy wife Eliſabeth ſhall bear thee a ſon, and [r] thou ſhalt call his name John. 14. And thou ſhalt have joy and gladneſs, and [s] many ſhall rejoice at his birth. 15. For he ſhall be great in the ſight of the Lord, and [t] ſhall drink neither wine nor ſtrong drink; and he ſhall be filled with the holy Ghoſt, [u] even from his mother's womb. 16. And [x] many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God. 17. And [y] he ſhall go before him in the ſpirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the diſobedient † to the wiſdom of the juſt, [z] to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. 18. And Zacharias ſaid unto the angel, [a] Whereby ſhall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well ſtricken in years. 19. And the angel anſwering ſaid unto him, I am [b] Gabriel, [c] that ſtand in the preſence of God: and [d] am ſent to ſpeak unto thee, and to ſhew thee theſe glad tidings. 20. And behold, [e] thou ſhalt be dumb, and not able to ſpeak, until the day that theſe things ſhall be performed, becauſe thou believeſt not my words, [f] which ſhall be fulfilled in their ſeaſon. 21. And the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried ſo long in the temple. 22. And when he came out, he could not ſpeak unto them: and they perceived that he had ſeen a viſion in the temple: for he beckned unto them, and remained ſpeechleſs. 23. And it came to paſs, that as ſoon as the days of his miniſtration were accompliſhed, he departed to his own houſe. 24. And after thoſe days his wife Eliſabeth conceived, and hid herſelf five months, ſaying, 25. Thus hath the Lord dealt with me, in the days wherein he looked on me, [g] to take away my reproach among men.

[f] Mat ii. 1.
[g] 1 Chron. xxiv. 10. Neh. xii. 4, 17.
[h] Job i. 1, 8. & ii. 3.
[i] Phil. iii. 6.
[k] 1 Chron. xxiv. 5, &c.
[l] Ex. xxx. 7.
[m] Lev. xvi. 17. Rev. viii. 3, 4.
[n] Ex. xxx. 1.
[o] Judg xiii. 22. Dan. x. 8. Ver. 29. Chap. ii. 9. & xxiv. 5.
[p] Judg. vi. 23.
[q] Acts x. 4.
[r] Ver. 60, 63.
[s] Ver. 58.
[t] Num. vi. 3.
[u] Jer. i. 5. Gal. i. 15.
[x] Mal. iv. 6.
[y] Mal. iv. 5. Mat. xi. 14.
† Or by.
[z] Ver. 76.
[a] Gen. xvii. 17.
[b] Dan. viii. 16. & ix. 21.
[c] Mat. xviii. 10.
[d] Heb. i. 14.
[e] Ezek. iii. 26. & xxiv. 27.
[f] Rom. iii. 3, 4.
[g] Gen. xxx. 23. Iſa. iv. 1.

v. 5—25. The other Evangeliſts commenced their hiſtory from the conception and birth of Jeſus; Luke begins farther back, with that of John the Baptiſt, his forerunner, which was attended with extraordinary circumſtances well deſerving our regard.

1. We have an account of his parents. They lived in the reign of Herod, an Idumean, who held his kingdom under the Roman emperor. Both Zechariah and Eliſabeth were of the ſacerdotal family: he was of the courſe of Abia, the eighth of thoſe four and twenty into which the prieſts were divided, (1 Chron. xxiv. 7—19.) To the honour of this aged pair it is recorded, that their piety was moſt exemplary; they approved themſelves to God in a holy blameleſs converſation, living by faith in the expected Meſſiah, whom they regarded in the uſe of all the divine inſtitutions, and were ſincerely obſervant of all the ordinances of worſhip, and duties of morality. But notwithſtanding the diſtinguiſhed excellence of their characters, it was their infelicity to be deſtitute of children, Eliſabeth being barren, and both of them now ſo advanced in years, as in the common courſe of nature to deprive them of the hope of iſſue. Note, (1.) In the worſt of times God preſerves ſome faithful ones, as eminent inſtances of his grace, and reprovers of the world which lieth in wickedneſs. (2.) Our mercies are often long deferred, to make them at laſt the more welcome.

2. An angel appeared to Zecharias as he was diſcharging his miniſtry in the temple. The ſervices to be performed by the courſe in waiting were determined by lot: his office was to burn incenſe in the ſanctuary; and whilſt this was performing, the holy worſhippers without in ſilent aſpirations lifted up their prayers to God, expecting acceptance through the interceſſion of Chriſt, which the ſmoke of the incenſe offered by the prieſt repreſented, See Rev. viii. 1—4. And whilſt Zecharias was thus employed, an angel of the Lord appeared to him on the right ſide of the altar of incenſe; and, ſtruck with the glorious ſight and unuſual appearance, Zecharias trembled, and feared greatly what ſuch a viſion might portend. Note, (1.) Viſits from another world may well fill even good men with terror, not only through the weakneſs of the humanity, but alſo from the conſciouſneſs of their guilt and ſinfulneſs. (2.) Prayer is the ſervice God's people never neglect; and herein their care is to lift up their hearts unto God, not ſo ſollicitous about the choice of words, as that internal fervent deſires may ſpeak the language of their ſouls. (3.) All our ſervices and prayers muſt be offered through the mediation of Jeſus, for then only can they be acceptable unto God.

3. The angel delivers to him the meſſage with which he was ſent. Having firſt kindly quieted his fears, he aſſures him of gracious acceptance with God, and an anſwer to his prayers. Probably at that time he had particularly been crying for the coming of the promiſed Meſſiah, as he had formerly often aſked for a ſon, and both are now granted him; the latter firſt, in order to introduce the former. Thy wife Eliſabeth, ſo long barren, and now aged, ſhall bear thee a ſon, and thou ſhalt call his name John, which ſignifies gracious, and was moſt admirably ſuited for him who ſhould be ſo great in ſpiritual gifts and graces, and the harbinger of the Meſſiah and his kingdom. And thou ſhalt have joy and gladneſs; not only in him, as a welcome child given after ſo long waiting, but in the view of the high character and office he is ordained to bear: and many ſhall rejoice at his birth; congratulating his parents on ſuch an unexpected bleſſing. And it will afford yet farther cauſe of joy to multitudes, who afterwards ſhall be bleſſed with his miniſtry and labours; for he ſhall be great in the ſight of the Lord; highly honoured of God, and bleſſed with ſingular endowments from him: and ſhall drink neither wine nor ſtrong drink; a Nazarite from his birth; for it becomes thoſe deſigned for eminent ſervices, to live a life of eminent ſelf-denial, and deadneſs to ſenſual delights. He ſhall be filled with the Holy Ghoſt, even from his mother's womb; ſanctified, ſet apart, and qualified fully for the miniſtry to which he was appointed: and many of the children of Iſrael ſhall he turn to the Lord their God, the Meſſiah, their incarnate God, then ready to appear: and he ſhall go before him, as his meſſenger and harbinger, the morning-ſtar that uſhers in the riſing ſun; in the ſpirit and power of Elias; endued with the zeal of that eminent reformer, and in auſterity of manners nearly reſembling him: to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children; either the Jews to the Gentiles, removing their prejudices and enmity againſt them; or with the children, converting young and old by his preaching; and the diſobedient to the wiſdom of the juſt, convincing the moſt rebellious ſinners, and leading them to Chriſt for juſtification, even to the wiſdom that maketh wiſe unto ſalvation: and thus to make ready a people prepared for the Lord; raiſing their expectations of him, removing their prejudices, and pointing him perſonally out to them as their Lord and Saviour; or prepared by the Lord, according to his eternal counſels ordained to life and glory, and now by John's miniſtry to be called to faith in the Son of God. Note, (1.) Though our requeſts are long delayed, they are not therefore denied; and the mercy at laſt comes inhanced in value, as the anſwer of many prayers. (2.) True greatneſs is not to be eſtimated by outward grandeur or wealth; God's favour, and the poſſeſſion of the gifts and graces of his Spirit, theſe alone make a man great in his eyes who is the fountain of honour. (3.) The great end of a zealous miniſter of God's word is to convert the ſouls of men, and turn them to the Lord Jeſus: nor need they deſpair of the moſt diſobedient ſinners; almighty grace can bend the moſt ſtubborn heart.

4. Zecharias, looking at human probabilities, ſtaggered at the promiſe through unbelief, and wanted ſome further ſign to remove his doubts. He and his wife being now grown old, the age as well as barrenneſs of Eliſabeth made him regard the event as incredible. Very unlike a ſon of Abraham! Rom. iv. 19, 20.

5. The angel gives him the ſign he aſked, and therewith the juſt puniſhment of his unbelief. I am Gabriel; my very appearance to you ſhould have been ſufficient to beget confidence in my word; becauſe that I ſtand in the preſence of God, attentive to his orders, and employed in his ſervice; and am ſent expreſsly to thee with this meſſage, and to ſhew thee theſe glad tidings, which ſhould have been received with thankfulneſs and joy: but ſince thou aſkeſt a ſign, behold, thou ſhalt be dumb, and no more able to object to the truth of what I ſay, and not able to ſpeak, until the day that theſe things ſhall be performed, as a puniſhment upon thee, becauſe thou haſt not believed my words, which, notwithſtanding all the obſtacles unbelief ſuggeſts, ſhall be fulfilled in their ſeaſon. Note, (1.) Our unbelief is very diſhonourable and diſpleaſing to God. (2.) God's promiſes will take effect, notwithſtanding our unbelief; and though we ſuffer for our diſtruſts of him, he will not caſt us off from him.

6. Zacharias returns to the people, who wondered at the length of his ſtay in the temple, and were waiting for the uſual benediction before they retired. And their wonder increaſed, when coming forth he was unable to ſpeak a word, and by his ſigns they perceived he had ſeen a viſion in the temple, and for a time continued deaf and dumb, (See ver. 62.) The Aaronical prieſthood was now about to be ſilenced, and the dumb ſigns of typical inſtitutions to be ſet aſide by the clear voice of goſpel grace.

7. The angelic meſſage quickly received its accompliſhment. Having ſtayed out the days of his miniſtration in the temple, he returned home with his wife, who immediately conceived by him; and thereupon, as ſhe was to bring forth a Nazarite, kept herſelf for five months cloſe retired from all company, that ſhe might contract no ceremonial uncleanneſs; ſpending the time in thankfulneſs, praiſe, and devotion; bleſſing God for the ſingular mercy, in removing the reproach of barrenneſs from her, under which ſhe had ſo long laboured, and at laſt beſtowing on her, in ſo extraordinary a way, that ſon who ſhould be the harbinger of the Meſſiah. Note, In all our mercies God is ever to be acknowledged; and particularly we are aſſured, that children and the fruit of the womb are the heritage and gift that cometh from the Lord.

26. And in the ſixth month the angel Gabriel was ſent from God, unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth, 27. To a virgin [h] eſpouſed to a man whoſe name was Joſeph, of the houſe of David: and the virgin's name was Mary. 28. And the angel came in unto her, and ſaid, Hail, [i] thou that art † highly favoured, the Lord is with thee: [k] bleſſed art thou among women. 29. And when ſhe ſaw him, ſhe was troubled at his ſaying, and caſt in her mind what manner of ſalutation this ſhould be. 30. And the angel ſaid unto her, Fear not, Mary: for thou haſt found favour with God. 31. And [l] behold, thou ſhalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a ſon, and [m] ſhalt call his name Jeſus. 32. He ſhall be great, and [n] ſhall be called the Son of the Higheſt; and [o] the Lord God [p] ſhall give unto him the throne of his father David. 33. And [q] he ſhall reign over the houſe of Jacob for ever, and [r] of his kingdom there ſhall be no end. 34. Then ſaid Mary unto the angel, How ſhall this be, ſeeing I know not a man? 35. And the angel anſwered and ſaid unto her, [s] The holy Ghoſt ſhall come upon thee, and the power of the Higheſt ſhall overſhadow thee: therefore alſo that holy thing which ſhall be born of thee, ſhall be called the Son of God. 36. And behold, thy couſin Eliſabeth, ſhe hath alſo conceived a ſon in her old age: and this is the ſixth month with her who was called barren. 37. For [t] with God nothing ſhall be impoſſible. 38. And Mary ſaid, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

[h] Mat. i. 18.
[i] Dan. ix. 23. & x. 19.
† Or graciouſly accepted, or much graced.
[k] Ver. 42. Judg. v. 24.
[l] Iſa. vii. 14. Mat. i. 21.
[m] Chap. ii. 21.
[n] Mark v. 7.
[o] Iſa. ix. 6. & xvi. 5.
[p] Pſ. cxxxii. 11. Rev. iii. 7.
[q] Dan. ii. 44. & vii. 14, 27. Mic. iv. 7. Heb. i. 8.
[r] Pſ. xlv. 6. & lxxxix. 36, 37.
[s] Mat. i. 20.
[t] Gen. xviii. 14. Job xlii. 2. Jer. xxxii. 17. Zech. viii. 6. Chap. xviii. 27.

v. 26—38. Six months after the former miraculous conception of Eliſabeth, the ſame angel Gabriel is ſent on a more important meſſage, to foretel the conception and birth of the Lord's Chriſt. We have here,

1. The perſon from whom the human nature of the Son of God was to be taken. Her name was Mary; of the royal race of David, but now reduced to very mean circumſtances; a virgin unſpotted, eſpouſed to Joſeph of the ſame royal line; dwelling in a remote corner of the land, and in a place deſpicable almoſt to a proverb, See John i. 46.

2. The angel's addreſs and ſalutation. Hail, thou that art highly favoured, &c. He wiſhes her all peace, proſperity, and joy; aſſures her of the favour of the Moſt High; that his gracious preſence was with her; and that ſhe of all others was ſingled out to be diſtinguiſhed with peculiar honour, and to be called bleſſed in all generations, as the mother of the adored Meſſiah. The popiſh plea for the adoration of the virgin Mary, taken from hence, is abſurd, and utterly unſupported; theſe words in no wiſe implying prayer or worſhip, but merely a friendly ſalutation.

3. Mary's ſurpriſe on the angel's appearance and addreſs. She was greatly aſtoniſhed at ſuch an unexpected viſit, and the reſpect paid to her, a woman ſo unknown and unnoticed; and much perplexed, reaſoned with herſelf what this bleſſedneſs ſhould mean, which was pronounced with ſuch ſolemnity.

4. The angel, to remove the perplexity and confuſion under which ſhe appeared, proceeds with his meſſage. Fear not, Mary: for thou haſt found favour with God; and when this is the caſe, all diſquieting fears are groundleſs: and behold, aſtoniſhing as the tidings are, yet true, thou ſhalt conceive in thy womb, tho' a virgin immaculate, (Iſa. vii. 14.) and bring forth a ſon, and ſhalt call his name Jeſus, the ſame as Joſhua, or Saviour, of whom the former deliverers of Iſrael were types and figures. He ſhall be great, in dignity, perſon, offices, and works; and ſhall be called the Son of the Higheſt; ſhall really be ſo, partaking of the ſame divine nature: and the Lord ſhall give unto him, as the Meſſiah, the throne of David his father, from whom, as man, he deſcended, and whoſe kingdom was typical of that ſpiritual dominion which Jeſus ſhould erect in the hearts of his people, ſitting as a king upon his holy hill of Sion, the church of his redeemed: and he ſhall reign over the houſe of Jacob, the true Iſrael of God, whether Jews or Gentiles brought to the obedience of the faith; and his throne ſhall be eſtabliſhed for ever, and of his kingdom there ſhall be no end; enduring as the days of time, and ſubject to none of the viciſſitudes and changes which attend earthly ſovereignty; and, when time ſhall end, this kingdom ſhall be continued in a more glorious form, coeval with the ages of eternity.

5. The Virgin, not diſtruſting the truth, or queſtioning the poſſibility of what he ſaid, humbly deſires to be informed by what means this ſhould be brought to paſs, ſeeing ſhe was conſcious of her own virginity.

6. He vouchſafes to inform her as much as ſhe need wiſh to know. The Holy Ghoſt, the power of the Higheſt, exerting his almighty influence, will by his immediate agency, as he moved upon the face of the water in the firſt creation, enable her to conceive: and therefore, becauſe in this miraculous manner the body of the child Jeſus ſhould be formed, he ſhall be a holy thing, from his conception not partaking of the taint of human corruption, as all fleſh do in the ordinary courſe of generation; and ſhall be called the Son of God, being as ſuch now manifeſted in the human nature; and that which ſhe conceived, henceforward indiſſolubly ſubſiſting in perſonal union with the ſecond perſon of the ſacred trinity, ſhould henceforth bear his name. And he adds, as an encouragement to ſtrengthen her faith in his word, that her couſin Eliſabeth, who was by one of her parents allied it ſeems to the houſe of David, as by the other deſcended from Aaron, was now with child, though ſo ſtricken in years, and in the ſixth month of her pregnancy, who had before been barren. The ſame power therefore which had wrought this miracle, would work this greater one, of which he aſſured her; for with God nothing is impoſſible; however it exceeds human power or conception, what he promiſes he can and will ſurely perform.

7. Mary with deep humility and ſubmiſſion yields herſelf up to the Lord, as his handmaid, deſiring him to do with her whatever he pleaſed; utterly unworthy ſo great an honour, yet, ſince ſuch was his promiſe, begging it might be fulfilled, and faithfully depending upon the Lord's almighty power and grace. Hereupon the angel departed, having finiſhed the work the Lord had given him to do. Note, (1.) However wonderful and ſurpaſſing great God's promiſes are, it becomes us to credit his word, and reſt our everlaſting hopes thereon; then we glorify him. (2.) Angelic viſions here below were alway tranſient; ſhortly theſe bleſſed ſpirits will be our companions to eternity.

39. And Mary aroſe in thoſe days, and went [u] into the hill-country with haſte, into a city of Judah, 40. And entred into the houſe of Zacharias, and ſaluted Eliſabeth. 41. And it came to paſs, that when Eliſabeth heard the ſalutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb: and Eliſabeth was filled with the Holy Ghoſt. 42. And ſhe ſpake out with a loud voice, and ſaid. [x] Bleſſed art thou among women, and bleſſed is the fruit of thy womb. 43. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord ſhould come to me? 44. For lo, as ſoon as the voice of thy ſalutation ſounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy. 45. And [y] bleſſed is ſhe that believed: † for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things which were told her from the Lord. 46. And Mary ſaid, [z] My ſoul doth magnify the Lord, 47. [z] And my ſpirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour. 48. For [a] he hath regarded ‡ the low eſtate of his handmaiden: for behold, from henceforth [b] all generations ſhall call me bleſſed. 49. For he that is mighty hath done to me great things, and [c] holy is his name. 50. And [d] his mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation. 51. [e] He hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arm, [f] he hath ſcattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts. 52. [g] He hath put down the mighty from their ſeats, and exalted them of low degree. 53. [h] He hath filled the hungry

[u] Joſh xxi. 10, 11.
[x] Ver. 28.
[y] John xx. 29. 1 Pet. i. 8.
† Or, that there ſhall be, &c.
[z] [z] 1 Sam. ii. 1. Pſ. xxxiv. 3. & xxxv. 9.
[a] Pſ. cxxxvi. 23. & cxxxviii. 6.
‡ Or lowlineſs. Iſa. lxvi. 2. Mat. v. 3.
[b] Chap. xi. 27.
[c] Pſ. cxi. 9.
[d] Ex. xx. 6. Pſ. ciii. 17.
[e] Pſ. xcviii. 1. & cxviii. 15, 16. Iſa. li. 9. & lii. 10.
[f] Pſ. xxxiii. 10. 1 Pet. v. 5.
[g] 1 Sam. ii. 6, &c. Job v. 11. Pſ. cxiii. 6.
[h] Pſ. xxxiv. 10.

hungry with good things, and the rich he hath ſent empty away. 54. He hath holpen his ſervant Iſrael, [i] in remembrance of his mercy, 55. [k] As he ſpake to our fathers; to Abraham and to his ſeed for ever. 56. And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own houſe.

[i] Pſ. xcviii. 3. Jer. xxxi. 3, 20. Ver. 72.
[k] Gen. xvii. 19. Pſ. cxxxii. 11.

v. 39—56. Quickly after the angel's departure we are informed,

1. Of Mary's viſit to her couſin Eliſabeth in haſte, to confer with her on theſe ſtrange events, that they may confirm each other's faith, and rejoice in theſe ſingular mercies. The journey was long from Galilee to the hill-country of Judea, probably to Hebron, a city of prieſts; but the converſe of ſuch a friend as Eliſabeth would repay all her pains. Note, Nothing is more encouraging, comforting, and quickening, than when the faithful communicate their mutual experiences.

2. Their meeting was accompanied with circumſtances very remarkable. No ſooner had Mary entered the houſe of Zacharias, and ſaluted Eliſabeth, than the babe, as under a divine impulſe, leaped in her womb, ſeeming to congratulate the bleſſed Virgin's arrival: and Eliſabeth was filled with the Holy Ghoſt; with the extraordinary afflatus of the divine Spirit, revealing to her mind the Meſſiah's conception, the meſſage of the angel to Mary, her faith therein, and the ſure performance of what was then promiſed: and addreſſing her welcome and highly honoured gueſt, ſhe ſpake aloud, with a tranſport of holy joy, as the Spirit gave her utterance, ſaying, Bleſſed art thou among women; diſtinguiſhed above all others with peculiar marks of divine favour; and, far from envying, Eliſabeth warmly congratulated her on the honour: and bleſſed is the fruit of thy womb; that divine Meſſiah being there conceived, in whom all nations of the world ſhould be bleſſed, and who is in himſelf, in the glory of the divine nature, God over all bleſſed for ever. And whence is this to me? how great the condeſcenſion, that the mother of my Lord ſhould come to me? that ſhe ſhould honour me with her company, from whom a body is preparing for the great Lord of all, to appear in the human nature. For lo! with wonder hear what with wonder I relate; as ſoon as the voice of thy ſalutation ſounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy, as if conſcious of the nearneſs of his Lord, and welcoming her who ſhould bring forth that Meſſiah, whoſe harbinger he is appointed to be. And bleſſed is ſhe that believed; not ſtaggering at the promiſe, but acquieſcing in the divine word, which ſhall infallibly be accompliſhed; for there ſhall be a performance of thoſe things which were told her from the Lord. Note, (1.) True grace makes us thankful for our own mercies, and to rejoice without envy in others greater attainments. (2.) When the goſpel's joyful ſound reaches our ears, and the ſweet name of Jeſus is proclaimed; then ſhould our hearts leap as this babe, and bleſs the God of our ſalvation. (3.) Believing ſouls muſt be bleſſed: Chriſt is now formed in their hearts the hope of glory, and they ſhall aſſuredly ſee the eternal performance of all the great and precious promiſes which the faithful God hath given them.

3. Mary, deeply affected with the words of Eliſabeth, and moved with the ſame divine inſpiration, echoes back her praiſes, and foreſees and foretels the great ſalvation of the Meſſiah now in her womb.

[1.] She rejoices in God for the diſtinguiſhed honour conferred upon her. My ſoul doth magnify the Lord, exalting his great and glorious name, and admiring and adoring the wonders of his goodneſs; and my ſpirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour: and juſtly was it a greater cauſe of joy to her, that ſhe knew herſelf intereſted in his ſalvation, than that after the fleſh ſhe ſhould be honoured as his mother; for without the former, the latter could have profited her nothing. For he hath regarded the low eſtate of his handmaiden; though in outward circumſtances contemptible and mean, and as a poor ſinner, vile and unworthy, he hath been pleaſed to honour me ſo highly: for behold, from henceforth all generations ſhall call me bleſſed; as diſtinguiſhed with this ſingular mark of his favour; as intereſted through faith in the ſalvation of Jeſus; and as the happy inſtrument choſen to bring forth that Redeemer, who ſhould be the great bleſſing of mankind. For he that is mighty hath done to me great things, diſplaying his power beyond all conception, in the incarnation of his ſon, and his ſovereign grace to me, appointed to bring him forth; and holy is his name, as all his works and ways declare; therefore from men and angels to him all praiſe is due; and may it be for ever aſcribed to him by all the hoſts of earth and heaven! Note, (1.) When Chriſt is known as our God and Saviour, then ſhall we rejoice in him, and magnify his name. (2.) The lower we are in our own eyes, the more admiring thoughts ſhall we have of the diſtinguiſhing grace of our Lord.

[2.] She praiſes him for the wonders he doth for his people in the ways of his providence and grace. His mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation; not to me only, but to all who with filial reverence and godly fear worſhip and ſerve him. His mercy to ſuch is rich and gracious; and now more eminently diſplayed than ever, in the incarnation of his Son, given to bring in an everlaſting righteouſneſs, and work out an everlaſting ſalvation, in which whoſoever truſts, from generation to generation, will find mercy for ever. He hath ſhewed ſtrength with his arm; chuſing the weak things of the world to confound the mighty; raiſing up ſo glorious a Redeemer from a birth ſo obſcure: he hath ſcattered the proud in the imaginations of their hearts; diſappointing their ſchemes, and humbling them in the duſt. Both in the diſpenſations of his providence and grace, he hath put down the mighty from their ſeats; the proud oppreſſors of his people of old, as Pharoah, Sennacherib, &c. and the ſpiritually proud, the lofty Phariſees, and all ſelf-righteous ſinners; theſe he hurls from their fancied dignity, deſtroys their vain confidences, and caſts them down as contemptible and vile: and exalted them of low degree; he hath done ſo, and continues ſo to do, raiſing up by his providence the oppreſſed, as Joſeph from the priſon to ſit among the princes; and by his grace reviving the hearts of poor and contrite ſinners, exalting them to his favour, and delighting to honour them. He hath filled the hungry, thoſe that hunger after righteouſneſs, and feel their utter need of Jeſus, with good things, ſatisfying their ſouls out of his fulneſs; and the rich, who, admiring their own excellencies, ſee no want of a better righteouſneſs; thoſe he hath ſent empty away, deſtitute of all true grace, without the leaſt mark of his favour, and given up to their own deluſions. He hath holpen his ſervant Iſrael, in all paſt ages, by extraordinary interpoſitions on their behalf; and now more eminently, in raiſing them up a Saviour from their moſt dangerous ſpiritual enemies; in remembrance of his mercy, which from eternity dwelt in his mind towards them, and which at ſundry times he revealed to them; as he ſpake to our fathers, Abraham and his ſeed for ever; to whom he had promiſed, that in his ſeed all nations of the world ſhould be bleſſed, which promiſe God was now about to fulfil. Note, (1.) Pride will ſurely have a fall. No height of ſtation or ſelf-confidence can protect thoſe whom God abhors. (2.) There is help laid on one mighty to ſave; and all the poor, the weak, and helpleſs of God's Iſrael, may come to him, and be holpen. (3.) All God's promiſes will, ſooner or later, receive their accompliſhment, and bleſſed are they who wait for him.

4. Mary, after a viſit of three months, returned to Nazareth, ſatisfied now of her own conception, and thereby aſſured of the truth of the angel's and Eliſabeth's predictions.

57. Now Eliſabeth's full time came, that ſhe ſhould be delivered; and ſhe brought forth a ſon. 58. And her neighbours and her couſins heard how the Lord had ſhewed great mercy upon her; and [l] they rejoiced with her. 59. And it came to paſs, that [m] on the eighth day they came to circumciſe the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father. 60. And his mother anſwered and ſaid, Not ſo; but [n] he ſhall be called John, 61. And they ſaid unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name. 62. And they made ſigns to his father, how he would have him called. 63. And he aſked for a writing-table, and wrote, ſaying, [n] His name is John. And they marvelled all. 64. And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue looſed, and he ſpake, and praiſed God. 65. And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all theſe † ſayings were noiſed abroad throughout all the hill-country of Judea. 66. And all they that had heard them, [o] laid them up in their hearts, ſaying, What manner of child ſhall this be? And the hand of the Lord was with him.

[l] Ver. 14.
[m] Gen. xvii. 12. Lev. xii. 3.
[n] [n] Ver. 13.
† Or things.
[o] Chap. ii. 19, 51.

v. 57—66. Eliſabeth's full time being come, we have here,

1. The birth of her ſon, and the great joy attending it. Tidings of ſo extraordinary an event were ſoon ſpread among her relations and neighbours, and they could not but magnify the Lord for ſo ſignal a mercy vouchſafed to her, who was both barren and aged; and they came to congratulate her on the occaſion, and rejoice with her. Note, A gracious heart takes pleaſure in the comforts which others enjoy, and rejoices with thoſe that rejoice.

2. On the eighth day, when the child was to be circumciſed, as it was uſual at that time to give him a name after ſome of his anceſtors, the friends and relations, who met on that occaſion, would have called him Zacharias, after his father; but Eliſabeth, informed by writing from her huſband, or by revelation, objected, inſiſting the child ſhould be called John. They who were preſent expreſſed their ſurprize at this, and objected againſt what was ſo unuſual, none of her kindred bearing that name: the matter therefore was referred to the father for his deciſion, who being deaf and dumb, they made ſigns to him that he would fix the child's name; and he making ſigns for a writing-table, to the aſtoniſhment of the company, wrote, His name is John. Note, (1.) The firſt concern we owe our children is, early to dedicate them to God. (2.) Every John ſhould remember the import of his name, and ſhew himſelf truly gracious.

3. Zacharias immediately thereupon recovered his ſpeech, and, as the firſt and beſt uſe of his tongue, offered up his praiſes and thankſgivings to the God of his mercies.

4. Theſe extraordinary events, which now were ſpread, and in every body's mouth, filled the people with aſtoniſhment and reverential fear, in awful expectation of what would be the iſſue, treaſuring up in their memories, and often pondering in their mind, the wonderful circumſtances attending the birth of this extraordinary child; and from his earlieſt infancy ſomething amazingly great and gracious was ſeen in him, which farther engaged their attention, it evidently appearing that the hand of the Lord was with him, and that he was taken under the care and guidance of his peculiar providence and grace. Note, God has ways we know not of, to communicate his grace to the ſouls of infants, and make them partakers of the Holy Ghoſt, even before they are partakers of reaſon: who then can ſay, why ſuch ſhould not be baptized?

67. And his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghoſt, and propheſied, ſaying, 68. [p] Bleſſed be the Lord God of Iſrael, for [q] he hath viſited and redeemed his people, 69. And [r] hath raiſed up an horn of ſalvation for us, in the houſe of his ſervant David; 70. [s] As he ſpake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been ſince the world began; 71. [t] That we ſhould be ſaved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us. 72. To perform the mercy promiſed to our fathers, and [u] to remember his holy covenant: 73. [x] The oath which he ſware to our father Abraham, 74. That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, [y] might ſerve him without fear, 75. [z] In holineſs and righteouſneſs before him all the days of our life. 76. And thou child ſhalt be called the prophet of the Higheſt: for [a] thou ſhalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his ways; 77. To give knowledge of ſalvation unto his people, † by the remiſſion of their ſins, 78. Through the ‡ tender mercy of our God; whereby the § day-ſpring from on high hath viſited us, 79. [b] To give light to them that ſit in darkneſs, and in the ſhadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace. 80. And [c] the child grew, and waxed ſtrong in ſpirit, and [d] was in the deſarts till the day of his ſhewing unto Iſrael.

[p] Pſ. lxxii. 18.
[q] Ex. iii. 16. & iv. 31.
[r] Pſ. cxxxii. 17.
[s] Jer. xxiii. 6. & xxx 10. Acts iii. 21.
[t] Pſ. cvi. 10.
[u] Lev. xxvi. 42.
[x] Gen. xii. 3. & xvii, 4. & xxii. 16. Heb. vi. 13, 17.
[y] Jer. xxiii. 6. Heb. ix. 14.
[z] 2 Theſ. ii. 13. 2 Tim. i. 9. Tit. ii. 12. 2 Pet. i. 4.
[a] Iſa. xl. 3. Mal. iii. 1. & iv. 5. Ver. 17.
† Or for. Chap. iii. 3.
‡ Gr. Bowels of the mercy, &c.
§ Or, ſunriſing, or branch. Num. xxiv. 17. Iſa. xi. 1. Zech. iii. 8. & vi. 12. Mal. iv. 2.
[b] Iſa. ix. 2. & lx. 1. Mat. iv. 16. Acts xxvi. 18.
[c] Chap. ii. 40.
[d] Mat. iii. 1.

v. 67—80. Zacharias, filled with the Holy Ghoſt, among his other aſcriptions of praiſe to the Lord, when his tongue was looſed, uttered the following prophetic ſong, relative to the Meſſiah's incarnation and redemption, and the fulfilment of the everlaſting covenant of grace to his people.

1. He bleſſes, adores, and praiſes the God of his Iſrael for the ſalvation to be obtained by the Meſſiah, who hath viſited and redeemed his people; hath often done it before, but now more ſignally than ever, by that eternal redemption which his incarnate Son was about to obtain for his elect: and hath raiſed up a horn of ſalvation for us in the houſe of his ſervant David; one able to ſave to the uttermoſt, and before whom all his foes muſt fall; ſprung from the royal race of David, according to his faithful promiſes, as he ſpake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been ſince the world began; from the promiſe made to fallen man in Paradiſe had this Saviour been the conſtant ſubject of the prophetic word, as the ſeed of the woman, the deſcendant of Abraham, of the tribe of Judah, and the family of David; and lo, the event verifies all the predictions. The expected Saviour is now incarnate, and ready to appear, that we ſhould be ſaved from our enemies, the worſt of enemies, ſin, Satan, death, and hell; and from the hand of all that hate us; from this preſent evil world, and all the wicked who inhabit it; not a temporal, but, what is infinitely better, a ſpiritual ſalvation from all the powers of darkneſs and corruption: to perform the mercy promiſed to our fathers; that mercy of all mercies, the ſending the Meſſiah; and to remember his holy covenant, which from eternity was eſtabliſhed, and is now about to be fulfilled by the obedience and death of Jeſus in behalf of his people, whereby all our forfeited mercies might be reſtored, and our title to glory be recovered, according to the oath which he ſware to our father Abraham, the father of all the faithful, both Jews and Gentiles, that he would grant unto us, in virtue of our divine Redeemer's undertaking, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies; thoſe ſpiritual enemies by whom we were enſlaved, and muſt have for ever continued under the bondage of corruption, unleſs the Son had made us free: but, bleſſed be his name! he hath brought us by his blood, his righteouſneſs and grace, into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God, that we might ſerve him without fear; no longer in the ſpirit of a ſlave, but under the influence of that free ſpirit of adoption, where love caſteth out ſervile fear, and enables us to walk willingly and chearfully, in holineſs and righteouſneſs before him; in the univerſal diſcharge of the duties of piety towards God, and juſtice towards men; at leaſt, under a prevailing deſire to do ſo, with ceaſeleſs prayer for divine aſſiſtance, all the days of our life, faithful and perſevering until death in his bleſſed ſervice: and they who have found this fulfilled to them, have reaſon indeed to praiſe God without ceaſing.

2. He bleſſes God for the particular mercy ſhewn to himſelf in giving him ſuch a ſon, whoſe office and dignity he in ſpirit foreſees. And thou child ſhalt be called the prophet of the Higheſt; of that divine Immanuel, who is God over all, bleſſed for ever: for thou ſhalt go before the face of the Lord, as the harbinger of the King of Glory, to prepare his ways, by preaching repentance, and directing ſinners to him, as the only Saviour of loſt ſouls: to give knowledge of ſalvation unto his people, of a ſpiritual and eternal ſalvation wrought out by Jeſus, which he declared to them: a ſalvation not obtained by any perſonal righteouſneſs of their own, as a matter of deſert, but feely beſtowed on them by the remiſſion of their ſins thro' the tender mercy of our God, the original fountain from whence all the great ſalvation flows; whereby the day-ſpring, or riſing ſun of righteouſneſs, from on high hath viſited us, with his reviving and refreſhing beams of grace, to give light to them that ſit in darkneſs and in the ſhadow of death; to thoſe who before through a veil darkly in types and figures caught the glimmering day; to diffuſe his bright influences amidſt the heathen world, covered with thickeſt darkneſs of idolatry and ignorance; and to ſhine into the minds of blind, ſtupid, and hardened ſinners, diſpelling the miſts of error, and chaſing the clouds of ſin away, enlightening the conſcience, and ſoftening the heart, in order to guide our feet into the way of peace; to peace with God through the atoning blood; to peace within, through the application of it to our ſouls; to peace with men, through the ſpirit of univerſal love; to eternal peace, the conſummation of our felicity.

3. The younger years of the Baptiſt ſtrongly corroborated this prediction concerning him. He grew, and waxed ſtrong in ſpirit; his parts and capacity increaſed wonderfully with his ſtature, and his ſoul was filled with uncommon wiſdom, fortitude, and grace: and he was in the deſarts till the day of his ſhewing unto Iſrael; living in ſolitude, retirement, and devotion, till the time appointed for his entering upon his prophetic office. Note, They who moſt carefully improve their younger days in the ſchool of true wiſdom, will be beſt qualified to appear, and moſt likely to be ſucceſsful, when they are called forth to miniſter in public.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter we have, 1. The birth of Chriſt at Bethlehem. 2. The notifying of his birth to the ſhepherds in that neighbourhood by an angel, the ſong of praiſe which the angels ſung upon that occaſion, and the ſpreading of the report of it by the ſhepherds, ver. 8—20. 3. The circumciſion of Chriſt, and the naming of him, ver. 21. 4. The preſenting of him in the temple, ver. 22—24. 5. The teſtimonies of Simeon and Anna the propheteſs concerning him, ver. 25—39. 6. Chriſt's growth and pregnancy, ver. 40—52. 7. His obſerving the paſſover at twelve years old, and his diſcourſe with the doctors in the temple, ver. 41—51.

1. AND it came to paſs in thoſe days, that there went out a decree from Ceſar Auguſtus, that all the world ſhould be † taxed. 2. (And this taxing was firſt ‡ made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria) 3. And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city. 4. And Joſeph alſo went up from Galilee, out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called [a] Bethlehem (becauſe [b] he was of the houſe and lineage of David) 5. To be taxed with Mary his eſpouſed wife, being great with child. 6. And ſo it was, that while they were there, the days were accompliſhed that ſhe ſhould be delivered. 7. And [c] ſhe brought forth her firſt-born ſon, and wrapped him in ſwaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, becauſe there was no room for them in the inn.

† Or enrolled.
‡ Or executed.
[a] Mic. v. 2. Mat. ii. 5, 6. John vii. 42.
[b] Mat. i. 1.
[c] Mat. i. 25.

v. 1—7. The morning ſtar being ariſen, the ſun of righteouſneſs cannot be far behind: in the fulneſs of time God ſends forth his Son, born of a woman. We have here,

1. The time of Chriſt's birth; in the reign of Auguſtus Cæſar. When he had extended the Roman monarchy to the greater part of the known world, and was now in perfect peace throughout his vaſt empire, he orders a general enrollment to be made through the provinces, that every man, according to his ability, might pay a ſuitable tax: and this was done under the inſpection of Cyrenius, the governor of Syria, with which Judea was joined as one province; ſo that it evidently appeared the ſceptre was departed from Judah, by this badge of ſervitude, Gen. xlix. 10. the fourth monarchy was now riſen to its glory, Dan. ii. 44. and therefore in this time of peace was the proper and appointed period fixed by the antient prophecies for the appearing of the Prince of peace, the Meſſiah.

2. The place where Jeſus was born; at Bethlehem: whither his parents were obliged to travel, on account of this enrollment, they being of the lineage of David, and therefore called to appear at the ſeat of their anceſtors. Auguſtus only meant his own glory and advantage in this matter, but God had deſigns to ſerve by him, he knew not: it was thus evident that our Lord ſprung from David, and the ſcripture was fulfilled which fixed his going forth from Bethlehem, Micah v. 2. By ſuch myſterious ways doth God work, accompliſhing the purpoſes of his own will, and making thoſe who leaſt intend it, ſubſervient to his own deſigns.

3. The wretched circumſtances in which Chriſt came into the world. Though a firſt-born ſon, and of royal extraction, not to mention his divine honours, yet was he born in the ſtable of an inn, and his cradle a manger; his parents being ſo poor as to be unable to procure better accommodations. Thus did the everlaſting Father become an infant of days; He who bound up the deep in ſwaddling bands, was himſelf ſwathed as a babe; He whom the heaven, and the heaven of heavens cannot contain, was hid in a manger; He, who in uncreated glory on his eternal throne, was the object of adoration to all the angelic hoſts, is thruſt into a ſtable to dwell among the beaſts of the earth: ſo low did he humble himſelf when he became man for us men and for our ſalvation, and took the form of a ſervant, as a prelude to his ſubmitting to the death of a ſlave.

8. And there were in the ſame country ſhepherds abiding in the field, keeping † watch over their flock by night. 9. And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and [d] the glory of the Lord ſhone round about them; and [e] they were ſore afraid. 10. And the angel ſaid unto them, [f] Fear not: for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which ſhall be to all people. 11. For [g] unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, [h] which is Chriſt the Lord. 12. And this ſhall be a ſign unto you; Ye ſhall find the babe wrapped in ſwaddling clothes, lying in a manger. 13. And ſuddenly there was with the angel [i] a multitude of the heavenly hoſt praiſing God, and ſaying, 14. [k] Glory to God in the higheſt, and on earth [l] peace, good will towards men. 15. And it came to paſs, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, ‡ the ſhepherds ſaid one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and ſee this thing which is come to paſs, which the Lord hath made known unto us. 16. And they came with haſte, and found Mary and Joſeph, and the babe lying in a manger. 17. And when they had ſeen it, they made known abroad the ſaying which was told them concerning this child. 18. And all they that heard it, wondered at thoſe things which were told them by the ſhepherds. 19. But Mary [m] kept all theſe things, and pondered them in her heart. 20. And the ſhepherds returned, glorifying and praiſing God for all the things that they had heard and ſeen, as it was told unto them.

† Or night-watches.
[d] Chap. ix. 31.
[e] Ibid. i. 12.
[f] Ibid. 13, 30. Rev. i. 17.
[g] Iſa. ix. 6.
[h] Chap. i. 43.
[i] Heb. i. 6.
[k] Chap. xix. 38.
[l] Iſa. lvii. 19. Mic. iv. 3. Rom. v. 1. & Eph. ii. 17.
‡ Gr. The men, the ſhepherds.
[m] Chap. i. 66. Ver. 51. Gen. xxxvii. 11.

v. 8—20. Amidſt the deepeſt humiliations of Jeſus, ſome bright diſplays of his uncreated glory ſtill broke forth, that we might not ſtumble at the meanneſs of his appearing in the fleſh, but be made to confeſs, truly this is the Son of God. We have here,

1. The appearance of an angelic miniſter to notify the birth of the Prince of peace; not to the mighty monarchs of the earth, that they ſhould come and pay their homage before the King of kings, and Lord of lords, but to poor ſhepherds, who were by night watching their flocks. The things that are deſpiſed from the beginning hath God choſen. They were employed in their honeſt calling, and then were favoured with this unexpected viſit from above: God will put this honour upon induſtry. The angel ſtood over them in the air, and the earth ſhone with his brightneſs; a divine glory compaſſed him about, and fear ſeized their minds at the preſence of this celeſtial meſſenger. Viſits from the unſeen world to men, conſcious how ill they have deſerved at God's hand, may well alarm us, and make even gracious ſouls afraid.

2. The heavenly viſitant ſoon quieted their troubled minds, ſaying, Fear not, no danger is near, no evil portended, but the very contrary; for behold (with wonder and delight attend my meſſage) I bring you good tidings of great joy; the happieſt news that ever reached the ſinful ſons of men, and which ſhall be to all people; not to the Jews only, but to the Gentiles alſo, alike intereſted in this meſſage. For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Chriſt the Lord, the long expected Meſſiah, the Lord of life and glory, the Saviour to the uttermoſt, to you, and all thoſe who come to God by him, and that without him muſt have been for ever undone. And this ſhall be a ſign unto you, whereby you may aſſuredly know him, and a ſtrange ſign indeed it was; ye ſhall find the babe wrapped in ſwaddling clothes, lying in a manger, the laſt place ſurely where they would ever have ſought the Meſſiah, after ſuch a glorious herald had proclaimed his birth and titles; but the moſt eminent diſtinction of God incarnate was his deep humiliation. Note, (1.) If there be a Saviour born, we muſt ſeek him for ourſelves, that we may obtain an intereſt in him. (2.) None periſh in their ſins, but they who will not come to him that they may have life; for he is able to ſave to the uttermoſt all who come to God by him, ſeeing he is Chriſt the Lord.

3. Suddenly a multitude of the angelic hoſt joined this celeſtial meſſenger, to celebrate the divine glory, and to congratulate the ſons of men on this auſpicious occaſion. The morning ſtars that ſang together, and all thoſe ſons of God who ſhouted for joy to ſee the world's foundation laid, now join with greater tranſport to adore this more tranſcendent diſplay of the divine benignity in the redemption of ſinners by the incarnation of Jehovah. (1.) They aſcribe to God glory in the higheſt; all his divine perfections are to the uttermoſt exalted; his infinite mercy that moved him to pity ſinners; his ſurpaſſing wiſdom that contrived, and his Almighty power and grace that accompliſhed the wondrous means of man's ſalvation; his adorable juſtice; his matchleſs love; his unchangeable faithfulneſs to his promiſes, all ſhine with peculiar luſtre in the redemption which is by Jeſus Chriſt. (2.) They congratulate the ſinful ſons of Adam on the peace ſent down from heaven to earth. Peace with God, as reconciled through his Son; peace in the ſinner's conſcience now undiſturbed with fears of guilt; peace between the diſcordant ſons of men; and all theſe bleſſings in time and eternity purely flowing from God's good will; not for the ſake of any thing in us, but according to his good pleaſure, and to the praiſe of the glory of his grace. If angels ſing, ſhall men be ſilent? How ought we to echo back the ſound; for us, and not for them is this ſalvation wrought; to us this mercy is extended; moſt bounden therefore are we for ever to bleſs and praiſe the God of all grace for this ineſtimable gift, the Son of his love.

4. No ſooner had theſe angelic miniſters finiſhed the heavenly ſong, and returned to their ſhining realms of bliſs, than inſtantly the ſhepherds reſolved to go and ſee this wondrous child, fully perſuaded of the truth of what they had heard, and acknowledging the diſtinguiſhing mercy of God in having thus revealed it unto them: haſting therefore to Bethlehem, they found every circumſtance as it had been told them, and the babe lying in the manger. Note, When God ſends us on his errands, we ſhould make no delay: all muſt be left to go where he calls.

5. Fully confirmed in the perſuaſion that this was the promiſed Saviour, they failed not to ſpread the glad tidings, relating all they had ſeen and heard from the angel, or Mary, concerning this child. And as they were plain and undeſigning men, concurred in the ſame report, were eye and ear-witneſſes of the facts they aſſerted, it exceedingly amazed all thoſe to whom they told the ſtory; they knew not how to queſtion the truth, and yet that the Meſſiah ſhould be born in a ſtable; that his parents ſhould be perſons ſo obſcure; that poor ſhepherds only ſhould be favoured with the notice of his birth, and not the chief prieſts and rulers of the nation; all theſe circumſtances ſtaggered them. Thus the report was the wonder of a day, and ſoon died away, and was forgotten; but Mary kept all theſe things, and pondered them in her heart, comparing them with what had before paſſed; confirmed thereby in her faith and hope, and ſilently ſtoring up every circumſtance in her memory againſt ſome future occaſion. Mean time the ſhepherds returned to their former occupation, bleſſing and praiſing God for what they had heard and ſeen, ſo exactly correſpondent with all that the angels had told them; and waiting, no doubt, in hope for the day when this child ſhould come to manhood, and publicly appear as Iſrael's Saviour.

21. And [n] when eight days were accompliſhed for the circumciſing of the child, his name was called [o] JESUS, which was ſo named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb. 22. And when [p] the days of her purification, according to the law of Moſes, were accompliſhed, they brought him to Jeruſalem, to preſent him to the Lord, 23. (As it is written in the law of the Lord, [q] Every male that openeth the womb, ſhall be called holy to the Lord) 24. And to offer a ſacrifice according to that which is ſaid in the law of the Lord, [r] A pair of turtle-doves, or two young pigeons.

[n] Gen. xvii. 12. Lev. xii. 3.
[o] Mat. i. 21. Chap. i. 31.
[p] Lev. xii. 2, &c.
[q] Exod. xiii. 2. & xxii. 29. Numb. iii. 13. & xviii. 15.
[r] Lev. xii. 6, 8.

v. 21—24. He who was made under the law for us, ſubmitted not only to all the moral precepts, but to the ceremonial inſtitutions.

1. He was circumciſed the eighth day, binding himſelf thereby to the obſervance of the law; humbling himſelf to this painful rite, as born in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh; owning himſelf of the ſeed of Abraham, and wearing this badge of the children of God, as under the inſtituted ſeal of the covenant devoted to him. At this time, as uſual, his name was alſo given him, and he was called Jeſus, having been ſo named of the angel before his conception, to ſignify his glorious character as a Saviour from ſin, Satan, death, and hell.

2. He was, at the end of the time appointed for his mother's purification, or forty days, their purification, as ſome copies read, Lev. xii. 24. preſented in the temple as holy to the Lord, Exod. xiii. 21. God having reſerved to himſelf the firſt-born of Iſrael, in commemoration of his ſparing them when he ſlew the Egyptians, and they were to be redeemed at the price of five ſhekels, about Twelve Shillings and Six-pence, Numb. xviii. 16. whilſt his mother alſo brought an offering for herſelf, according to the preſcription of the ſame law, a pair of turtle-doves, or young pigeons, which in caſe of poverty were accepted inſtead of a lamb and a dove, Lev. xii. 6—8. the one as a ſin-offering of atonement, in teſtimony of her unworthineſs of the mercy ſhe had received; the other as a burnt-offering, expreſſive of her thankfulneſs.

25. And behold there was a man in Jeruſalem, whoſe name was Simeon; and the ſame man was juſt and devout, [s] waiting for the conſolation of Iſrael: and the holy Ghoſt was upon him. 26. And it was revealed unto him by the holy Ghoſt, that he ſhould not ſee death before he had ſeen the Lord's Chriſt. 27. And he came by the ſpirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jeſus, to do for him after the cuſtom of the law, 28. Then took he him up in his arms, and bleſſed God, and ſaid, 29. Lord, [t] now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace, according to thy word; 30. For mine eyes [u] have ſeen thy ſalvation: 31. Which thou haſt prepared before the face of all people: 32. [x] A light to lighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Iſrael. 33. And Joſeph and his mother marvelled at thoſe things which were ſpoken of him. 34. And Simeon bleſſed them, and ſaid unto Mary his mother, Behold, this child is ſet [y] for the fall and riſing again of many in Iſrael; and for [z] a ſign which ſhall be ſpoken againſt: 35. (Yea, [a] a ſword ſhall pierce through thy own ſoul alſo) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed. 36. And there was one Anna a propheteſs, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aſer; ſhe was of a great age, and had lived with an huſband ſeven years from her virginity: 37. And ſhe was a widow of about fourſcore and four years: which departed not from the temple, but [b] ſerved God with faſtings and prayers night and day. 38. And ſhe coming in that inſtant, gave thanks likewiſe unto the Lord, and ſpake of him to all them [c] that looked for redemption in Jeruſalem.

[s] Iſa. xl. 10. Mark xv. 43. Ver. 38.

[t] Gen. xlvi. 30. Phil. i. 23.

[u] Iſa. lii. 10. Chap. iii. 6.

[x] Iſa. xlii. 6, 7. & xlix. 6. Acts xiii. 47. & xxviii. 28.

[y] Iſa. viii. 14. Hoſ. xiv. 9. Rom. ix. 32, 33. 1 Cor. i. 23, 24. 2 Cor. ii. 16. 1 Pet. ii. 7, 8.

[z] Acts xxviii. 22.

[a] Pſ. xlii. 10. John xix. 25.

[b] 1 Tim. v. 5.

[c] Mark xv. 43. Ver. 25.

v. 25—38. Amidſt all the meanneſs and poverty of Jeſus, very glorious were the teſtimonies born to him from heaven and upon earth. We have here,

1. The public declarations of Simeon; a man, it ſeems, of diſtinguiſhed note in Jeruſalem, who juſt then came, by divine direction, into the temple.

[1.] The account here given concerning him is greatly to his honour. He was juſt, towards men, and devout, eminently religious toward God, waiting in faith and patience for the conſolation of Iſrael, the promiſed Meſſiah; whoſe coming in the fleſh was to be the great joy of all his people, Gentiles as well as Jews, the time of whoſe appearing, fixed in the prophetic writings, was now at hand: and the Holy Ghoſt was upon him, not only as a ſpirit of holineſs, but as a ſpirit of prophecy. And it was revealed unto him by the ſecret inſpirations of the Holy Ghoſt, that he ſhould not ſee death before he had ſeen the Lord's Chriſt, whom his eyes ſhould behold before they were cloſed in the duſt. And accordingly, juſt at that inſtant, he came by the ſpirit into the temple, under ſome divine warning of what was doing there: and when the parents brought in the child Jeſus, to do for him after the cuſtom of the law, to preſent him to the Lord, and pay the price of redemption, then took he him up in his arms, in a tranſport of joy, as having found him whom he had ſo long and ſo earneſtly expected; and bleſſed God, and broke forth into the following prophetic ſong of praiſe. Note, (1.) We muſt not be weary of waiting; though the Lord may for a while exerciſe our patience, all his promiſes are ſure. (2.) Chriſt is the conſolation of his Iſrael, he makes all thoſe happy who by faith embrace him. (3.) They who have Jeſus in their arms, in their hearts, can look death in the face with confidence.

[2.] His diſcourſe on this occaſion was ſolemn and joyful. He ſaid, Lord, now letteſt thou thy ſervant depart in peace, according to thy word, farewel life, welcome death! He is now content to be gone, ſince God hath thus graciouſly fulfilled his promiſe to him, and chearfully reſigns his ſoul in confidence of exchanging a periſhing world for an eternity of glory: For mine eyes have ſeen thy ſalvation, that Meſſiah, who is come to be the author of eternal ſalvation to his redeemed; which thou haſt prepared before the face of all people, provided according to the eternal counſels, and now manifeſted in the fleſh to accompliſh the glorious work; A light to lighten the Gentiles, who have long ſat in darkneſs, ignorance, and idolatry, but now ſhall be made partakers of the light of truth and the grace of the goſpel, and the glory of thy people Iſrael, among whom his perſonal miniſtry was employed; who were ſpectators of his miracles; from whom he deſcended after the fleſh; by whom, as his apoſtles and evangeliſts, he firſt propagated the knowledge of his ſalvation; and in him all the ſpiritual Iſrael are juſtified, and ſhall glory, Iſa. xlv. 25. Note, (1.) A believing ſight of Chriſt, and of the great things he hath prepared for his people, will not only enable us to overcome the terrors of death, but to triumph in its approach. (2.) We may not leave our poſt till the Lord grants us our diſmiſſion, our time is in his hand; whilſt he hath work for us to do, we muſt be content to be here, till he calls us to depart, and be with Chriſt, which is far better. (3.) Chriſt is the ſun of righteouſneſs; there is nothing but darkneſs and death in the ſpiritual world, till he ariſes with healing in his wings.

[3.] Simeon concludes with his benediction on the parents of Jeſus, and a prediction for their notice. They marvelled at theſe tranſcendently glorious teſtimonies which were born to their infant ſon, whilſt Simeon congratulated them on their diſtinguiſhed felicity, and prayed that the beſt of bleſſings might deſcend upon them. He bleſſed them, and ſaid unto Mary his mother, as more eſpecially the parent of Jeſus, and intereſted in what he was about to ſay; behold, with wonder and confidence of the truth which I declare, this child is ſet for the fall and riſing again of many in Iſrael; he will be to many native Jews a ſtone of ſtumbling, and a rock of offence, Iſa. viii. 14—18. whilſt by his power and grace others ſhall be raiſed up to newneſs of life, even many who at firſt were offended at him; and he ſhall quicken all his ſpiritual Iſrael throughout the world, and bring them to a ſtate of happineſs and glory; and for a ſign which ſhall be ſpoken againſt; his humiliation and ſufferings will give a handle to his perſecutors to blaſpheme and revile him; yea, and ſo bitter will the enmity be againſt him, that it will extend to all his relations and friends, a ſword ſhall pierce through thy own ſoul alſo, ſuch anguiſh and pain you will endure from the view of his inſults and ſufferings, and thoſe you may be called to endure for the profeſſion of your faith in him, that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed, theſe times of perſecution moſt effectually ſerving to diſcover the faithful diſciples from the hypocrites and apoſtates. Note, (1.) The ſame goſpel is to ſome the ſavour of death unto death, which to others is the ſavour of life unto life. (2.) They whom Jeſus raiſes, muſt firſt be laid low in the duſt of humiliation. (3.) All our comforts in this world have ſome bitterneſs annexed to them, we muſt look only for perfect happineſs in a better.

2. Anna the propheteſs confirms, juſt at the ſame inſtant, what Simeon had ſpoken concerning the glory of the child Jeſus.

[1.] Her perſon and character are deſcribed. Her name was Anna, whom the Lord had endued with a ſpirit of prophecy. She was the daughter of Phanuel, a perſon probably of ſome note, and of the tribe of Aſher; a very aged woman, having lived ſeven years with a huſband, and ever ſince continued a widow of about eighty-four years; a great age, if comprehending the whole of her life; but if reckoned as her years of widowhood, will carry her age at loweſt to above a hundred years. Yet though ſo old, ſhe conſtantly attended the ſtated worſhip of the temple morning and evening, and on all ſolemn occaſions; and was much in faſting and prayer, a ſingular inſtance of piety and devotion.

[2.] Her teſtimony concerning Jeſus is recorded. Juſt at the inſtant that Simeon was diſcourſing concerning him, ſhe came in; and with thankſgiving and praiſe to the Lord, confirmed what he had ſpoken concerning this child. And among all her religious acquaintance, who were expecting the Meſſiah's appearing, and looking for his redemption, ſhe ſpake of the Son of Mary, as the perſon raiſed up of God for this great deſign. Note, (1.) They who are conſtant at the temple, and careful to keep up communion with God, will find many a bleſſed and happy viſit from him which they perhaps little expected. (2.) They who know Jeſus themſelves, are in duty bound to ſpread that knowledge far and wide, and to endeavour to bring others to an acquaintance with his ſalvation.

39. And when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city Nazareth. 40. And [d] the child grew, and waxed ſtrong † in ſpirit, filled with wiſdom; and the grace of God was upon him. 41. ¶ Now his parents went to Jeruſalem [e] every year at the feaſt of the paſſover. 42. And when he was twelve years old, they they went up to Jeruſalem after the cuſtom of the feaſt, 43. And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jeſus tarried behind in Jeruſalem; and Joſeph and his mother knew not of it. 44. But they ſuppoſing him to have been in the company, went a days journey; and they ſought him among their kinsfolk and among their acquaintance. 45. And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jeruſalem, ſeeking him. 46. And it came to paſs, that after three days they found him in the temple, ſitting in the midſt of the doctors, both hearing them, and aſking them queſtions. 47. And [f] all that heard him were aſtoniſhed at his underſtanding and anſwers. 48. And when they ſaw him, they were amazed: and his mother ſaid unto him, Son, why haſt thou thus dealt with us? behold thy father and I have ſought thee ſorrowing. 49. And he ſaid unto them, How is it that ye ſought me? wiſt ye not that I muſt be [g] about my Father's buſineſs? 50. And [h] they underſtood not the ſaying which he ſpake unto them. 51. And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was ſubject unto them: but his mother [i] kept all theſe ſayings in her heart. 52. And Jeſus [k] increaſed in wiſdom and ‡ ſtature, and in favour with God and men.

[d] Chap. i. 80. Ver. 52.

† Or by the ſpirit.

[e] Deut. xvi. 1, 16.

[f] Mat. vii. 28. Mark i. 22. Chap. iv. 22, 32. John vii. 15, 46.

[g] John ii. 16.

[h] Chap. ix. 45. & xviii. 34.

[i] Gen. xxxvii. 11. Dan. vii. 28. Ver. 19.

[k] 1 Sam. ii. 26. Ver. 40.

‡ Or age.

v. 39—52. Our curioſity might have tempted us to wiſh for ſome more large and particular accounts of the infancy and childhood of Jeſus; but as till his public appearance in the character of the Meſſiah we had no particular need of it, all that the Holy Ghoſt hath been pleaſed to record of the firſt twenty-nine years of his life, is contained in theſe few verſes; where ſome beams of his glory, even from his earlieſt days, are ſeen to break forth, as preſages of his future greatneſs.

1. After he was preſented in the temple, till twelve years of age, he for the moſt part lived with his parents at Nazareth, whither they were directed to go, after their return from Egypt, Mat. ii. There he grew up as other children do; and as his ſtature increaſed, and reaſon began to dawn, he diſplayed the moſt uncommon natural abilities; was endued with wiſdom far beyond his years; and inſtead of that fooliſhneſs which is bound up in the heart of all other children, and immediately begins to diſcover itſelf with the firſt dawnings of ſenſe, in him nothing was ſeen of folly or perverſeneſs. The grace of God eminently governed his ſpirit and conduct from his tendereſt years, and the favour of God towards him appeared moſt evident and ſingular.

2. At the age of twelve, he gave ſome amazing evidences of his extraordinary wiſdom, and ſome intimations of the great work he had in view.

[1.] At this time he went up to Jeruſalem with his parents to the paſſover, where all the males, from that age, were commanded to appear to celebrate this ſolemnity. Note, It is highly incumbent on parents to acquaint their children betimes with their covenant relation to God, and to endeavour to engage them early, with their own free choice, to ſurrender themſelves up to him as his willing ſervants.

[2.] When they had ſtayed during the ſeven days of the feaſt, and then ſat out on their return for Nazareth, the child Jeſus tarried behind in Jeruſalem; probably when they went up to worſhip, on the morning before they proceeded on their journey, he left them in the temple; and as the men and women travelled in different companies, each of his parents ſuppoſed he had been with the other, or with ſome of their kins-folk; great numbers of which travelled together, till at even, when they met, to their ſurprize they miſſed their Son; and after a fruitleſs ſearch among all their kinsfolk and acquaintance, they turned back to Jeruſalem in the morning to ſeek for him. Note, (1.) They who have loſt the preſence of Jeſus, after having ever taſted the bleſſedneſs of his company, cannot but be ſollicitous to find him again, and will enquire earneſtly, Saw ye him whom my ſoul loveth? (2.) Our kinsfolk and acquaintance are too often unable to direct us to Jeſus, we muſt go farther for our information.

[3.] At laſt they found him on the third day in the temple, in one of the chambers, probably where the Sanhedrim ſat, or where the wiſe men inſtructed their catechumens; there Jeſus was, among other young perſons, hearing their diſcourſes, anſwering their queſtions with the moſt amazing acuteneſs, and propoſing others to them, which ſhewed uncommon wiſdom and penetration, inſomuch that they were all aſtoniſhed at the ſagacity of his replies, and the depth of his underſtanding, ſo exceedingly beyond his years; and ſuch as made him appear worthy a place among the higheſt rabbi's, inſtead of a ſeat at their feet as a catechumen.

[4.] Having found him, they were amazed to ſee him thus admired and eſteemed by the doctors; and his mother began tenderly to expoſtulate with him on his ſtay, which had given them ſuch anxiety and grief: but he gently rebukes her ſollicitude, who, after all that had paſſed, ought not to be ſurprized at finding him there. Where ſhould he be ſo properly as in the courts of his Father's houſe, and what ſo fit an employment for him, as to be thus about his Father's buſineſs? But they underſtood not his meaning: his regal office, as the Meſſiah, the ſon of David, they believed; but his prophetical character, and the nature of his ſpiritual kingdom, they ſeem not yet to have known.

3. He returned to Nazareth, ſubmitting to his parents in every inſtance of filial duty, and his mother ſtored up his ſayings in her mind; expecting, that though ſhe now underſtood them not, hereafter they would be explained more fully. Till he was near thirty years of age, he continued in this obſcure abode, and under the government of his parents, probably working as a carpenter for their maintenance and his own: and as he advanced to manhood, his attainments in wiſdom and underſtanding were amazing, his faculties moſt enlarged, and his ſoul filled with all thoſe gifts and graces which the human nature, by its union with the divine, was prepared to receive. Thus he grew highly in God's favour, and admired and eſteemed by all who were acquainted with his ſingular excellencies. Note, (1.) Let children, when grown up, learn of Jeſus ſubjection to their parents; that is a duty we muſt ever pay. (2.) Though the truths of God which we are taught may not at firſt be underſtood by us, yet the knowledge of them will prove highly uſeful, when afterwards God gives the ſpiritual underſtanding. (3.) Thoſe children are indeed their parents glory and joy, whoſe wiſdom and graces increaſe with their years, and exceed them.

CHAP. III.

In this chapter we have, 1. The beginning of John's baptiſm, and the ſcope and intention of it, ver. 1—6. His exhortation to the multitude, ver. 7—9. And the particular inſtructions he gave to thoſe who deſired to be told their duty, ver. 10—14. 2. The notice he gave them of the approach of the Meſſiah, ver. 15—18. to which is added (though it happened after what follows) the mention of his impriſonment, ver. 19, 20. 3. Chriſt coming to be baptiſed of John, and his entrance therein upon the execution of his prophetical office, ver. 21, 22. 4. His pedigree and genealogy recorded up to Adam, ver. 23—38.

1. NOW in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Ceſar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea, and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lyſanias the tetrarch of Abilene, 2. [a] Annas and Caiaphas being the high prieſts, the word of God came unto John the ſon of Zacharias in the wilderneſs. 3. [b] And he came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptiſm of [c] repentance for the remiſſion of ſins; 4. As it is written in the book of the words of Eſaias the prophet, ſaying, [d] The voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths ſtraight. 5. Every valley ſhall be filled, and every mountain and hill ſhall be brought low; and the crooked ſhall be made ſtraight, and the rough ways ſhall be made ſmooth; 6. And [e] all fleſh ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God. 7. Then ſaid he to the multitude that came forth to be baptized of him, [f] O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from [g] the wrath to come? 8. Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance, and begin not to ſay within yourſelves, [h] We have Abraham to our father: for I ſay unto you, that God is able of theſe ſtones to raiſe up children unto Abraham. 9. And now alſo the ax is laid unto the root of the trees: [i] every tree therefore which bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down, and caſt into the fire. 10. And the people aſked him, ſaying, [k] What ſhall we do then? 11. He anſwereth and ſaith unto them, [l] He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewiſe. 12. Then came alſo [m] publicans to be baptized, and ſaid unto him, Maſter, what ſhall we do? 13. And he ſaid unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed you. 14. And the ſoldiers likewiſe demanded of him, ſaying, And what ſhall we do? And he ſaid unto them, † Do violence to no man, neither accuſe any falſly, and be content with your ‡ wages.

[a] John xi. 49, 51. & xviii. 13. Acts iv. 6.

[b] Mat. iii. 1, &c. Mark i. 4, &c.

[c] Ezek. xviii. 30.

[d] Iſa. xl. 3. John i. 23.

[e] Iſa. lii. 10.

[f] Mat. iii. 7. & xii. 34. & xxiii. 33.

[g] Rom. v. 9. 1 Theſ. i. 10.

[h] John viii. 33, 39. Acts xiii. 26.

[i] Mat. vii. 19. John xv. 6.

[k] Acts ii. 37.

[l] Chap. xi. 41. Jam. ii. 15, 16. 1 John iii. 17.

[m] Mat. xxi. 32.

† Or put no man in fear.

‡ Or allowance.

v. 1—14. Great expectations had been raiſed concerning the ſon of Zacharias from his infancy, and now he appears to anſwer them.

1. The time of his entring publicly on his miniſtry, is here obſerved. It was in the reign of Tiberius, when Pontius Pilate was governor of Judea, Herod tetrarch of Galilee, his brother Philip of Iturea, and Lyſanias of Abilene. They were called tetrarchs, either as having each the fourth part of what was under the dominion of Herod the Great, or as ſtanding in the fourth rank of governors, which are reckoned thus; the emperor, proconſuls, kings, tetrarchs. They were all foreigners, a mark of the ſad ſubjection of the Jewiſh people, now reduced entirely under the Roman yoke, the ſceptre being finally departed from Judah, and the very kingly office aboliſhed in Judea. Annas and Caiaphas being the high-prieſts, not that they both bore that office at the ſame time, but Annas had been, and Caiaphas was now in that ſtation; or as ſome ſuppoſe, Annas was the ſagan, or chief of the prieſts, who ſtood next to the high-prieſt in rank and honour.

2. The origin and tendency of his miniſtry is declared. The word of God came to him in the wilderneſs, he was inwardly moved by the Holy Ghoſt to go forth, being endued with extraordinary gifts and graces, and poſſeſſed of the ſpirit of prophecy; and hereupon leaving the ſolitude where he had hitherto abode, he came into a more populous part of the country near to Jordan, preaching publickly the neceſſity of repentance, and admitting to his baptiſm thoſe who made profeſſion of it, as the ſign and ſeal of the remiſſion of their ſins. Note, All who by faith turn to Jeſus, and repent them truly of their ſins, are aſſured of their pardon.

3. John herein eminently fulfilled the prophecy of Iſaiah, chap. xl. 3—5. He was the voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, loud and vehement, prepare ye the way of the Lord into your hearts, by a deep and humbling ſenſe of your ſins make his paths ſtraight; let every obſtruction from pride and ignorance be removed, as the harbinger clears the way for the entry of the king. Every valley ſhall be filled, the lowly and depreſſed with ſin ſhall be raiſed up by pardoning grace and divine conſolations; and every mountain and hill ſhall be brought low, the proud and ſelf-righteous ſhall be humbled into the duſt of humiliation, or ſunk into the belly of hell; and the crooked ſhall be made ſtraight, the perverſe diſpoſitions and conduct of ſinners ſhall by divine grace be rectified; and the rough ways ſhall be made ſmooth, the moſt untractable ſpirits ſoftened and ſubdued, or every difficulty in the way of men's receiving the Meſſiah ſhall be removed. And all fleſh, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles alſo, ſhall ſee the ſalvation of God; many of all nations, ranks, and ages ſhall embrace the goſpel of Jeſus, and partake of his eternal redemption.

4. He addreſſed himſelf with very awakening language to the multitude who came to him. He charges them as a generation of vipers, full of venom, hypocriſy, and Satanical ſubtilty; and aſks, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? from the national judgments ready to deſcend upon them, or the more terrible and eternal vengeance hanging over every guilty ſinner's head. He warns them therefore of the neceſſity of a ſpeedy and real change of heart and life, evident in the fruits of all holy converſation and godlineſs; without which, their boaſted privilege as Abraham's deſcendants, would profit them nothing, but rather aggravate their guilt. God wanted them not; he could, and would, from ſtones, from Gentiles, raiſe up a more illuſtrious and numerous race, the heirs of Abraham's faith, his ſpiritual children, who ſhould ſupply their place, if they continued hypocritical and impenitent: now therefore the call of mercy was ſent to them, that they might prevent their impending doom, before the ax of divine vengeance was laid to their roots; and they, as barren trees, cut down and caſt into the fire, utterly deſtroyed as a nation; and as the ſinners of old, ſuffering alſo the vengeance of eternal fire. Note, (1.) The ſinner hath no moment to loſe, death and judgment are at his heels. (2.) No outward privilege can profit thoſe, whoſe hearts remain unrenewed and unholy. (3.) True repentance will be ſeen by its fruits; the change will be internal, univerſal, evident, abiding. (4.) It is a fearful thing for an impenitent ſoul to fall into the hands of the living God.

5. The Phariſees and Sadducees were probably diſguſted at theſe hard ſayings, and left him; but the people, the publicans and ſoldiers, were deeply affected, and earneſtly ſollicitous to know what thoſe fruits of repentance were, which they were required to produce: and a bleſſed ſymptom it is of real converſion, when we are thus diligent to enquire what is the mind of God, and really diſpoſed through grace to follow it. To theſe, therefore, John directs his inſtructions ſuited to their ſeveral circumſtances and temptations.

[1.] To the people in general he recommends a liberal diſtribution to the neceſſities of their brethren; ſupplying them according to their ability with food and raiment; and where the call was urgent, ſtraitning themſelves rather than ſuffer their neighbours to periſh with cold, or be famiſhed with hunger: and a truly charitable ſoul is not only to his power, but ſometimes above his power, willing.

[2.] To the publicans, the collectors of the public taxes, many of whom were Jews, he gave in charge that they ſhould uſe no exaction, nor levy more than the government demanded. Their employment, though in general odious to the people, was not in itſelf unlawful, whilſt they demeaned themſelves in it with juſtice and integrity.

[3.] To the ſoldiers, who ſeem to have been alſo Hebrews, perhaps the guards of Philip, or Herod, he ſaid, do violence to no man, extort nothing from the people by threatning, behave not inſolent, nor outrageous in your quarters; when employed in war, uſe no unneceſſary devaſtations, nor wanton cruelty; neither accuſe any falſly, neither their comrades to their officers, or the people where they might be ſtationed, through malice, or for the ſake of money; and be content with your wages, neither increaſing them by plunder, nor ſeeking to advance them by mutiny; a caution well deſerving the notice of all ſervants, who, if once they give way to diſcontent, will ſoon be tempted to uſe unlawful means to gratify their covetouſneſs.

15. And as the people were in † expectation, and all men muſed in their hearts of John, whether he were the Chriſt, or not; 16. John anſwered, ſaying unto them all, [n] I indeed baptize you with water; but one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whoſe ſhoes I am not worthy to unlooſe: [o] he ſhall baptize you with the Holy Ghoſt, and with fire. 17. [p] Whoſe fan is in his hand, and he will throughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner; but [q] the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable. 18. And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people. 19. [r] But Herod the tetrarch, being reproved by him for Herodias his brother Philip's wife, and for all the evils which Herod had done, 20. Added yet this above all, that he ſhut up John in priſon.

† Or ſuſpence.
n Acts i. 5. & xi. 16. & xix. 4.
o Iſa. iv. 4. & xliv. 3. Joel ii. 28. Mal. iii. 2.
p Mal iii. 3.
q Mal. iv. 1.
r Mat. xiv. 3. Mark vi. 17.

v. 15—20. We have here,

1. The general expectations which the people were in of the Meſſiah. The ſceptre was departed from Judah, and the prophecies of Daniel concerning him now required his coming; which made many turn their eyes to John, who appeared with marks of ſuch ſingular diſtinction, and ſpoke with ſuch authority and zeal, that they began to ſuſpect this might be the long-expected Meſſiah.

2. John immediately undeceived them, diſclaiming all pretenſions to that honour, and directs them to expect ſhortly the Great Prophet, whoſe forerunner he was. The meaneſt office under him he acknowledges himſelf unworthy to diſcharge; and his baptiſm was not worthy to be compared with the more powerful and efficacious influences of that Holy Ghoſt, that, under the miniſtry of Jeſus, ſhould be abundantly diſpenſed, and act, like fire, with reſiſtleſs energy upon the ſouls of men. By his goſpel he would make a thorough ſeparation between the faithful and the hypocrites, and by his judgments on the Jewiſh people ſweep them away as the chaff before the fan; and, when he hath gathered in his choſen, the wheat, into his garner, the wicked, the ſelf-righteous, and the apoſtate, will be caſt into the everlaſting burnings. An awful declaration, which deſerves the moſt awakened attention.

Theſe and many other things did John with great freedom and fidelity deliver, preaching the glad tidings of the goſpel (ευηγγελιζετο) to the people, and urging upon their conſciences the importance of the truths he declared. Such miniſters ought all, who are put in truſt with the goſpel, to be; warm, zealous, indefatigable, free, copious, evangelical. Then may we expect to reap the fruit of our labours, in a harveſt of immortal ſouls.

3. After a ſhort but glorious courſe of about a year and a half, a ſudden ſtop is put to the Baptiſt's miniſtry by a moſt unjuſt impriſonment. Unable to flatter, yea zealous to reprove the moſt exalted ſinners, Herod the tetrarch eſcaped not his ſharp rebukes for the complicated crime of taking his brother Philip's wife, and marrying her even during his life, and though ſhe had children by him; thus joining inceſt to adultery; and for all the other evils which Herod had done, which were many and notorious. Exaſperated at this plain and faithful dealing, he added this to all his other wickedneſs, that he ſhut up John in priſon, and after a while was prevailed upon to take away his life. Note, (1.) When God's miniſters are thus compelled to an involuntary ſilence, their ſufferings ſpeak as loud as their ſermons. (2.) Myſterious are the ways of Providence. The excellent of the earth become a prey to perſecutors, who triumph at their fall. Where, will ſome ſay, is the God of judgment? Wait a moment. The myſtery will ſoon be unfolded.

21. Now when all the people were baptized, [s] it came to paſs, that Jeſus alſo being baptized, and praying, the heaven was opened: 22. And the Holy Ghoſt deſcended in a bodily ſhape like a dove [t] upon him, and [u] a voice came from heaven, which ſaid, [x] Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleaſed. 23. And Jeſus himſelf † began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was ſups Mat. iii. 13. Mark i. 9.

t Iſa. xi. 2.
u John xii. 28.
x Pſ. ii. 7. Iſa. xlii. 1. Chap. ix. 35. 2 Pet. i. 17.
† Or being about thirty years old, began his miniſtry. Num. iv. 3, 35, 39.

ſuppoſed) [y] the ſon of Joſeph, which was the ſon of Heli, 24. Which was the ſon of Matthat, which was the ſon of Levi, which was the ſon of Melchi, which was the ſon of Janna, which was the ſon of Joſeph, 25. Which was the ſon of Mattathias, which was the ſon of Amos, which was the ſon of Naum, which was the ſon of Eſli, which was the ſon of Nagge, 26. Which was the ſon of Maath, which was the ſon of Mattathias, which was the ſon of Semei, which was the ſon of Joſeph, which was the ſon of Judah, 27. Which was the ſon of Joanna, which was the ſon of † Rheſa, which was the ſon of Zorobabel, which was the ſon of Salathiel, which was the ſon of Neri, 28. Which was the ſon of Melchi, which was the ſon of Addi, which was the ſon of Coſam, which was the ſon of Elmodam, which was the ſon of Er, 29. Which was the ſon of Joſe, which was the ſon of Eliezer, which was the ſon of Jorim, which was the ſon of Matthat, which was the ſon of Levi, 30. Which was the ſon of Simeon, which was the ſon of Juda, which was the ſon of Joſeph, which was the ſon of Jonan, which was the ſon of Eliakim, 31. Which was the ſon of Melea, which was the ſon of Menan, which was the ſon of Mattatha, which was the ſon of [z] Nathan, [a] which was the ſon of David, 32. [b] Which was the ſon of Jeſſe, which was the ſon of Obed, which was the ſon of Booz, which was the ſon of Salmon, which was the ſon of Naaſſon, 33. Which was the ſon of Aminadab, which was the ſon of Aram, which was the ſon of Eſrom, which was the ſon of Phares, which was the ſon of Juda, 34. Which was the ſon of Jacob, which was the ſon of Iſaac, which was the ſon of Abraham, [c] which was the ſon of Thara, which was the ſon of Nachor, 35. Which was the ſon of Saruch, which was the ſon of Ragau, which was the ſon of Phalec, which was the ſon of Heber, which was the ſon of Sala, 36. Which was the ſon of § Cainan, which was the ſon of Arphaxad, [d] which was the ſon of Sem, which was the ſon of Noe, which was the ſon of Lamech, 37. Which was the ſon of Mathuſala, which was the ſon of Enoch, which was the ſon of Jared, which was the ſon of Maleleel, which was the ſon of Cainan, 38. Which was the ſon of Enos, which was the ſon of Seth, which was the ſon of Adam, which was the ſon of God.

[y] Mat xiii. 55. John vi. 42.

† Theſe 19, from Joſeph to Rheſa, were Chriſt's natural fathers; thoſe mentioned Mat. i. 13—16. were his kindred and fathers by right of government.

[z] Zech. xii. 12.
[a] 2 Sam. v. 14. 1 Chron. iii. 5.
[b] Ruth iv. 18. 1 Chron. ii. 10.

[c] Gen. xi. 24, 26.

§ St. Luke follows the Septuagint, in which Cainan is mentioned, though he is not in the Hebrew. Gen. x. 24. & xi. 12.
[d] Gen. xi. 10.

v. 21—38. The Evangeliſt finiſhes the hiſtory of John's miniſtry, which continued near a year after Chriſt's baptiſm, before he enters upon the publick appearance of Jeſus.

1. After a multitude of others had been baptiſed, at laſt Jeſus alſo comes to John, and is baptiſed of him in Jordan: when, looking up in prayer to his Father, inſtantly the heavens were opened, and the Holy Ghoſt in a bodily ſhape deſcended upon him, both to qualify him for his mediatorial work, and to be a ſign to John that he was the Meſſiah; which was farther confirmed by an audible voice from heaven, God the Father teſtifying his delight in this Son of his love, and his perfect ſatisfaction in his undertaking. Note, (1.) Chriſt prayed, to ſet us the example. In this way the communion between earth and heaven is to be maintained. (2.) If God be well pleaſed in his Son, then may we confidently reſt our ſouls on him as our Saviour, and never doubt of the fulneſs of the redemption he hath obtained for us.

2. The age and pedigree of Jeſus are recorded by the Evangeliſt. He was about thirty years of age when he entered upon the mediatorial office. Deſcended from David by his mother's ſide, whoſe genealogy is here given, as well as by Joſeph's his reputed father. Some difficulties occur, in comparing the genealogies. Joſeph, ſaid in Matthew to be the ſon of Jacob, is here ſaid to be the ſon of Heli, which ſome avoid by reading the words (as was ſuppoſed the ſon of Joſeph) in a parentheſis, intimating that in reality Jeſus was the ſon of Heli, Mary's father. Or Joſeph, being her huſband, might be called, in right of his wife, Heli's ſon.

Some have obſerved alſo, that the words (ως ενομιζετο) as it was ſuppoſed, may be rendered as it was found in the record of the genealogy, which the Evangeliſt copied, and none at that time ever contradicted.

The inſerting the name of Cainan between Sala and Arphaxad is of more difficult ſolution, it not agreeing with the Hebrew copies, nor any ancient verſion except the Septuagint, and is thought not to have been there originally; but that ſome early tranſcriber of Luke's goſpel inſerting this name by miſtake, it afterwards crept into that tranſlation. The matter indeed is of little moment, and doth not in the leaſt affect our ſalvation.

Some, to whoſe ſentiments I accede, chuſe to carry the name of Jeſus through all his anceſtors, inſtead of connecting each with his immediate predeceſſor. As thus, Jeſus the ſon of Heli, of Matthat, &c. till we come to the top of the line, as the ſon of Adam in his human, the Son of God in his divine nature; uniting both in his own perſon, and yet not two, but one Chriſt.

CHAP. IV.

We left Chriſt newly baptized, and owned by a voice from heaven, and the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon him. Now in this chapter we have, 1. A further preparation of him for his public miniſtry by his being tempted in the wilderneſs. 2. His entrance upon his public work in Galilee, ver. 14, 15. particularly, (1.) At Nazareth, the city where he had been bred up, ver. 16—30. which we had no account of before in Matthew. (2.) At Capernaum, where, having preached to admiration, ver. 31, 32. he caſt the devil out of a man that was poſſeſſed, ver. 33—37. Cured Peter's mother-in-law of a fever, ver. 38, 39. And many others that were ſick and poſſeſſed, ver. 40, 41. And then went and did the ſame in other cities of Galilee, ver. 42—44.

1. AND Jeſus, being full of the Holy Ghoſt, returned from Jordan, and [a] was led by the Spirit into the wilderneſs, 2. Being [b] forty days [c] tempted of the devil; and in thoſe days he did eat nothing: and when they were ended, he afterward hungred. 3. And the devil ſaid unto him, If thou be the Son of God, command this ſtone that it be made bread. 4. And Jeſus anſwered him, ſaying, It is written, that [f] man ſhall not live by bread alone, but by every word of God. 5. And the devil, taking him up into an high mountain, ſhewed unto him all the kingdoms of the world in a moment of time. 6. And the devil ſaid unto him, All this power will I give thee, and the glory of them; for [g] that is delivered unto me, and to whomſoever I will I give it. 7. If thou therefore wilt worſhip me, all ſhall be thine. 8. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Get thee behind me, Satan: for it is written, [h] Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve. 9. And he brought him to Jeruſalem, and ſet him on a pinnacle of the temple, and ſaid unto him, If thou be the Son of God, caſt thyſelf down from hence. 10. For it is written, [i] He ſhall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee. 11. And in their hands they ſhall bear thee up, leſt at any time thou daſh thy foot againſt a ſtone. 12. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaid unto him, It is ſaid, [k] Thou ſhalt not tempt the Lord thy God. 13. And when the devil had ended all the temptation, [l] he departed from him [m] for a ſeaſon.

[a] Mat. iv. 1. Mark i. 12.
[b] Ex. xxxiv. 28. 1 Kings xix. 8.
[c] Ecclus. ii. 1.
[f] Deut. viii. 3.
[g] Rev. xiii. 2, 7.
[h] Deut. vi. 13. & x. 20.
[i] Pſ. xci. 11.
[k] Deut. vi. 16.
[l] Jam. iv. 7.
[m] John xiv. 30.

v. 1—13. As the great enemy of ſouls had foiled the firſt man in the midſt of a paradiſe of delights, the ſecond man, the Lord from heaven, who came to deſtroy the works of the devil, that he might render his victory more illuſtrious, gives the tempter every advantage. Though deep retired in a dreary deſert, without human converſe, without food, during forty days, to ſatisfy his hunger, he ſtood like a rock in the midſt of the ſea, defying the impotent attacks of the raging fiend of darkneſs. Being full of the Holy Ghoſt, and juſt then anointed for his mediatorial office, and furniſhed with the fulneſs of divine grace, Satan, to his bitter ſhame and vexation, found him immoveable, and every attack he made but ſignalized his own defeat.

1. He tempted him to diſtruſt his Father's care, and inſinuated his ſuſpicions of the character he aſſumed as the Son of God; ſeeking to ſhake the faith of the Redeemer, and challenging him to give a proof of it by working ſo needful a miracle for his own ſupply. But Jeſus refuſed to gratify him; and by the ſword of the Spirit, the word of God, foiled his aſſault, teſtifying his confidence in his Father's proviſion for him, refuſing to take the matter out of his hands, and perſuaded that he could by other means than by bread alone preſerve his life and ſatisfy his hunger. Hereby teaching us, (1.) Under every temptation to have recourſe to the word and promiſes of God. (2.) Not to give place to the devil, by harbouring for a moment his ſuggeſtions. (3.) Never to deſire to be our own carvers, or think by our own contrivance and wiſdom, excluſive of God, to extricate ourſelves from our difficulties, or gain our own ends, but quietly to reſign ourſelves to him, ſubmiſſive to his providences, and conſtantly depending upon his bleſſing and ſupport. (4.) That we ſhould not eſtimate God's favour by his outward diſpenſations, nor call in queſtion our adoption of him, though never ſo ſeverely exerciſed. Many of God's deareſt children have known the pinchings of hunger, to prove their faith and try their patience.

2. He tempted him with the enticing offers of temporal grandeur. This St. Matthew places the laſt, and ſuch it ſeems to have been; though Luke inverts the order. Taking him up into a mountain, the devil in a moment cauſed all the kingdoms of the world in their greateſt glory to paſs in review before our Lord, as if to dazzle and charm him with their united ſplendor: then boldly challenging them as his own, as if delivered to him, either by the Moſt High, which was falſe; or by the willing ſubjection of theſe nations and their kings, who yielded themſelves up to the devil's power; and, as Lord of all, he pretends therefore a right to diſpoſe of them at his pleaſure: on one condition he proffers to lay them all at the feet of Jeſus, and conſtitute him the univerſal ſovereign, If thou wilt worſhip me, all ſhall be thine. With indignation and abhorrence at ſuch inſolence and impiety, he rejects the tempter's offer; and, ſtill drawing his weapons from the ſacred magazine of Scripture, condemns the daring attempt of this hateful ſpirit thus to invade the divine prerogative, and confounds him with producing that eternal and invariable rule of worſhip, Thou ſhalt worſhip the Lord thy God, and him only ſhalt thou ſerve. Note, All adoration of ſaints, angels, and the Virgin, is in fact but the worſhip of Satan, and as much a ſacrifice to devils, (1 Cor. x. 20.) as the religious ſervices of Paganiſm.

3. Once more the devil returns to the charge, and, ſince Chriſt is unmoved with grandeur, and unſhaken with diſtruſt, he tries to fill him with unwarrantable preſumption; and, ſetting him on a pinnacle of the temple, bids him caſt himſelf down into the court of worſhippers below; and, if he was really the Son of God, to prove it by ſuch a ſign from heaven as the Jews ſought, which, he ſuggeſts, would not fail of engaging them to receive him as the Meſſiah; nor could there be danger in the experiment, ſince God had given him an expreſs promiſe of protection, and he was under angelic care, Pſalm xci. 11, 12. Chriſt ſeemed to lay ſuch ſtreſs upon the Scripture, therefore Satan quotes it too to ſupport his cauſe. The word of God, in the hands of wicked men, is thus often perverted and wreſted to ſerve the vileſt purpoſes. But Jeſus detects Satan's fallacy. God is to be truſted, not tempted, as it is written, Deut. vi. 16. In the way of duty he will hold us up: if, without any warrant from him, we expoſe ourſelves to needleſs danger, we have not the leaſt ground to hope for preſervation.

Utterly defeated now, the devil quits the field, covered with ſhame; in malice ſtill inveterate. Waiting therefore for a more favourable ſeaſon, he departed, reſolving to ſeize the firſt occaſion of returning with ſharpened malignity; ſee Luke xxii. 53.

[n] Mat. iv. 14. ¶ [n] And Jeſus returned in the power of the Spirit
12. John iv. 43. into [o] Galilee: and there went out a fame of him through [o] Acts x. 37. all the region round about. 15. And he taught in their ſynagogues, being glorified of all. 16. ¶ And he came [p] Mat. ii. 23. to Nazareth, [p] where he had been brought up: and as [q] Acts xvii. 2. his cuſtom was [q] he went into the ſynagogue on the ſabbath-day, and ſtood up for to read. 17. And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Eſaias: and when he had opened the book, he found the place where [r] Iſa. lxi. 1. it was written, 18. [r] The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, becauſe he hath anointed me to preach the goſpel to the poor, he hath ſent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of ſight to the blind, to ſet at liberty them that are bruiſed, 19. To preach the acceptable year of the Lord. 20. And he cloſed the book, and he gave it again to the miniſter, and ſat down: and the eyes of all them that were in the ſynagogue were faſtened on him. 21. And he began to ſay unto them, This day is this ſcripture fulfilled in your ears. 22. And all bare him witneſs, and wondered at [s] Pſ. xlv. 2. [s] the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth.
Iſa. l. 4. And they ſaid, [t] Is not this Joſeph's ſon? 23. And he Mat. xiii. 54, &c. ſaid unto them, Ye will ſurely ſay unto me this proverb, Mark vi. 2, &c. Chap. Phyſician, heal thyſelf: whatſoever we have heard done ii. 47. in Capernaum, do alſo here in thy country. 24. And [t] John vi. 42. he ſaid, Verily I ſay unto you, [u] No prophet is accepted [u] John iv. 44. in his own country. 25. But I tell you of a truth, [x] 1 Kings Many widows were in Iſrael in the days of Elias, [x] when xvii. 7. the heaven was ſhut up three years and ſix months, James v. 17. when great famine was throughout all the land: 26.
[y] 1 Kings But unto none of them was Elias ſent [y] ſave unto Sarepta, xvii. 9. a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow. 27.
And many lepers were in Iſrael in the time of Eliſeus
[z] 2 Kings v. the prophet: and [z] none of them was cleanſed ſaving
14. Naaman the Syrian. 28. And all they in the ſynagogue, when they heard theſe things, were filled with wrath,
29. And roſe up and thruſt him out of the city, and led † Gr. edge. him unto the † brow of the hill (whereon their city was [a] John viii. built) that they might caſt him down headlong. 30.
59. & x. 39. But [a] he, paſſing through the midſt of them, went his way.

v. 14—30. Having vanquiſhed his infernal foe in the wilderneſs, Jeſus enters upon his miniſterial office, and publickly appears, deſtroying, by his doctrine and miracles, the power of Satan over the bodies and ſouls of men.

1. In the power of the Spirit he returned to Galilee, ſtrengthened with might in the inner man for the arduous work which he had undertaken; and immediately he ſet himſelf to diſcharge his high commiſſion, preaching in their ſynagogues the goſpel of the kingdom; and ſuch power accompanied his word, and ſuch miracles confirmed his doctrine, that the people in general admired and extolled him, and his fame quickly ſpread through all that country.

2. After paſſing through other parts of Galilee he came to Nazareth, where he had been brought up; and, as his cuſtom was, he went into the ſynagogue on the ſabbath-day, and ſtood up to read ſome ſection of Scripture, as was uſually done on that day: and a moſt laudable cuſtom is this, in every worſhipping aſſembly, to read the word of God. The volume, which was delivered to him for this purpoſe by the miniſter of the ſynagogue, contained the prophecy of Iſaiah; and, unrolling the parchment on which it was written, he found the place, Iſa. lxi. 1, 2. which ſpake ſo evidently of himſelf. Whether it was the portion of Scripture for the day, or that he choſe it as the propereſt introduction to his diſcourſe, is uncertain; but, whichever was the caſe, it gave him the faireſt opportunity to deſcribe his own office and character, and left them inexcuſeable who ſhould reject him, notwithſtanding the voice of the prophets read every ſabbath-day.

(1.) The text gave a full account of the Redeemer's undertaking. 1. He was eminently qualified for his arduous work by that plenitude of gifts and graces conferred upon him by the Spirit of the Lord; and fully commiſſioned by this unction from the Holy One for the diſcharge of his mediatorial office. 2. The great end of his miſſion is ſet forth. (1.) To preach the goſpel to the poor, to evangelize them; not only to ſpeak to their ears, but to make his work effectual, to convert their hearts. And by the poor are meant not merely the indigent and common people, though of ſuch were Chriſt's diſciples chiefly taken, but the poor in ſpirit, who, convinced of their ſpiritual wants and wretchedneſs, would gladly embrace that free pardon, righteouſneſs, and ſalvation, which the goſpel revealed to them. (2.) To heal the broken-hearted, whoſe ſins pierced their ſouls with ſorrow, and whoſe troubled conſciences and corrupted hearts nothing but the balm of his blood and grace could relieve and cure. (3.) To preach deliverance to the captives, to ſinful ſouls enſlaved by Satan's power. Their chains of guilt are broken through the atonement of Jeſus, and by his Spirit they are delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God. (4.) To preach recovering of ſight to the blind, to open the darkened underſtanding of fallen man, and to ſhine into his heart, communicating the knowledge of the ſalvation which is by grace. (5.) To ſet at liberty them that are bruiſed, to break off the galling yoke of the law from the necks of thoſe who, under a ſpirit of bondage, continued miſerable and unhappy; and, in its ſtead, to give them the ſpirit of adoption, and liberty from every ſlaviſh fear. (6.) To preach the acceptable year of the Lord, that joyful year of goſpel jubilee, when inſolvent ſinners ſhall obtain free remiſſion of all their ſins, deliverance from their miſeries, reſtoration to the divine favour, and their forfeited inheritance in the heavenly Canaan.

(2.) Having read this text, and delivered the roll again to the miniſter, he ſat down, as was the cuſtom of the Jewiſh doctors, and began to diſcourſe at large on all the various particulars; ſhewing how the words referred to the Meſſiah and his office, and were that very day fulfilled in himſelf.

3. The audience hung with attention on his lips, their eyes eagerly faſtened on him, and admiration ſeized every hearer; ſuch eminent wiſdom, ſuch energy of diction, ſuch majeſty and grace, appeared in all his words and his addreſs, that they were aſtoniſhed above meaſure, eſpecially conſidering the meanneſs of his birth and education. Is not this Joſeph's ſon, the carpenter? Which, though it increaſed their wonder at his diſcourſe, prejudiced them againſt his perſon, and would not ſuffer them to admit the application to himſelf of this high office of the Meſſiah. Note, (1.) To have our eyes directed to the miniſter ſerves often to fix the attention to his diſcourſe. (2.) Many admire the preaching, and are pleaſed with the orator, whoſe hearts are never truly converted by what they hear.

4. He anticipates and anſwers the objection he ſaw riſing in the hearts of many againſt him. Ye will ſurely ſay to me this proverb, Phyſician, heal thyſelf: if thou art the wondrous Perſonage, as reported, ſhew it, by working the ſame miracles at home which we have heard done in Capernaum. But, in anſwer hereunto, he aſſures them, that, if he did the ſame or greater wonders amongſt them, he knew their prejudices againſt him were ſuch, they would notwithſtanding reject him, no prophet being accepted in his own country; they would ſtill think meanly of him who had known his parentage and education, and been uſed for ſo long a time to regard him as vaſtly their inferior. But he ſhews them, that though he with-held his favours from them it would be no proof againſt him, ſince he had the examples of former prophets to plead, and God was the ſovereign diſpoſer of his own gifts, and beſtows them not on thoſe whom men judge moſt fit, but on ſuch as he pleaſes. Thus Elijah ſupported miraculouſly a widow of Sarepta, a Gentile city, during the famine which raged, whilſt many as neceſſitous remained in Iſrael without any ſuch relief; and Eliſha alſo, paſſing by the multitude of his own leprous countrymen, cleanſed only Naaman the Syrian, a Gentile, and hereditary enemy to Iſrael. As great or greater objections would therefore lie againſt theſe prophets than they ſuggeſted againſt him.

5. The people were highly exaſperated at the reproach which they apprehended was couched under theſe inſtances, as if they of Nazareth were as wicked as the Iſraelites in the days of Ahab, and that even Gentiles would be preferred before them in the divine regard. Though ſo lately they admired his gracious words, this application cut them to the heart; and, riſing in a popular tumult, they caſt him out of the ſynagogue, hurried him through the city, and, dragging him to the brow of the hill on which their city was built, intended to hurl him headlong down, and daſh him in pieces. Note, It is a mercy that even the madneſs of the people is under a divine reſtraint: elſe how many of God's faithful miniſters had met an untimely death?

6. Jeſus diſappoints their malice. His time to ſuffer was not yet come, and therefore, by his divine power, either holding their eyes, or rendering himſelf inviſible, or ſtriking them to the earth, as the guard who afterwards came to arreſt him, he paſſed ſafe through the midſt of them, leaving them to their impenitence and ruin. Note, They who reject Jeſus and his goſpel are juſtly given up to a reprobate mind.

31. [b] And came down to Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and taught them on the ſabbath-days. 32. And they were aſtoniſhed at his doctrine: for [c] his word was with power. 33. ¶ [d] And in the ſynagogue there was a man which had a ſpirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice, 34. Saying, Let us alone; [e] what have we to do with thee, thou Jeſus of Nazareth? art thou come to deſtroy us? [f] I know thee who thou art; [g] the holy One of God. 35. And Jeſus rebuked him, ſaying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And, when the devil had thrown him in the midſt, he came out of him, and hurt him not. 36. And they were all amazed, and ſpake among themſelves, ſaying, What a word is this? for with authority and power he commandeth the unclean ſpirits, and they come out. 37. And the fame of him went out into every place of the country round about. 38. ¶ And he aroſe out of the ſynagogue, and [h] entred into Simon's houſe: and Simon's wife's mother was taken with a great fever; and they beſought him for her. 39. And he ſtood over her, and rebuked the fever, and it left her. And immediately ſhe aroſe and miniſtred unto them. 40. ¶ [i] Now when the ſun was ſetting, all they that had any [k] ſick with divers diſeaſes brought them unto him: and he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed them. 41. And devils alſo came out of many, crying out, and ſaying, [l] Thou art Chriſt the Son of God. And he rebuking them, [m] ſuffered them not † to ſpeak: for they knew that he was Chriſt. 42. And [n] when it was day, he departed, and went into a deſert place: and the people ſought him, and came unto him, and ſtayed him, that he ſhould not depart from them. 43. And he ſaid unto them, I muſt preach the kingdom of God to other cities alſo: [o] for therefore am I ſent. 44. And he preached in the ſynagogues of Galilee.

[b] Mat. iv. 13. Mark i. 21.
[c] Mat. vii. 29. Tit. ii. 15.
[d] Mark i. 23, &c.
[e] Mat. viii. 29.
[f] Ver. 41.
[g] Dan. ix. 20. Chap. i. 35.
[h] Mat. viii. 14. Mark i. 29.
[i] Mat. viii. 16. Mark i. 32.
[k] Iſa. liii. 4. Mat. viii. 17.
[l] Ver. 34.
[m] Acts xvi. 17, 18.
† Or to ſay that they knew him.
[n] Mark i. 35.
[o] Iſa. lxi. 1.

v. 31—44. When Jeſus departed from Nazareth he returned to Capernaum, and, as uſual, on the ſabbath-day he taught the people in their ſynagogues, to the aſtoniſhment of all who heard him; ſuch divine authority and commanding energy accompanied his word. In proof of the doctrine he advanced, we have here,

1. A notable miracle performed in the preſence of the congregation where he preached; ſee Mark i. 23. A man with the ſpirit of an unclean devil was in the ſynagogue. Filled with enmity againſt Chriſt and his goſpel, and terrified with juſt fears that Jeſus would diſpoſſeſs him, the devil, uſing the man's organs of ſpeech, cried out, Let us alone, &c. Theſe wicked ſpirits dread their doom, and fearfully look forward to their terrible judgment. They knew the power of Jeſus of Nazareth, for they had proved it in the wilderneſs; and, fully ſatisfied concerning his miſſion, they confeſs him to be the Holy One of God, though with no kind intention; malice dictated here the language of truth, and they would fain fix upon him the ſuſpicion of a confederacy with them, by bearing ſuch an honourable teſtimony to him. But Jeſus in a moment ſilences this foul fiend, and with a word reſcued the miſerable ſinner from his power. With rage, compelled to depart, the devil vented his laſt efforts, throwing the man down with violent convulſions, as if he would have torn him in pieces; but his power was broken, he was unable to hurt him, and the cure was compleat. Amazed, the whole congregation beheld and queſtioned with each other concerning a miracle ſo wondrous and inconteſtible. Never had ſuch power and authority appeared before, that with a word the infernal ſpirits ſhould thus be diſpoſſeſſed, without the leaſt ability to make reſiſtance. And immediately the fame of the cure ſpread far and wide. Note, The power of Satan, as an unclean ſpirit, over the ſouls of men, is ſtill exceeding great, and nothing but the powerful word of goſpel-grace can caſt him out.

2. No ſooner was he returned from the ſynagogue than Peter's wife's mother, who lay ill of a fever, experienced his healing grace. At the requeſt of ſome of the company, who mentioned her diſorder, he aroſe, ſtood by her bed-ſide, rebuked the fever with a word, and inſtantly ſhe was ſo perfectly reſtored to health as to be able to wait on the gueſts who were in the houſe. Note, (1.) When they who are near and dear to us are ſick, we muſt beſeech Jeſus on their behalf; and the prayer of faith ſtill availeth much. (2.) They who are reſtored to ſpiritual health by the Saviour's grace, will be ready to diſcharge every kind office of love and ſervice to the leaſt of his people.

3. A multitude of other cures were performed by him the ſame day at even. All who had friends or relations diſeaſed applied to him, and, whatever was their malady, he with a touch healed them all: even devils, unable to ſtand before his word, came out of thoſe that were poſſeſſed, confeſſing him to be the Meſſiah; but he ſilenced them, refuſing to receive any teſtimony from ſuch as they were. Note, When they who we know bear enmity towards us ſpeak us moſt reſpectfully, their civilities are to be moſt ſuſpected of deſign.

4. Early next morning he departed from Capernaum to a ſolitude for retirement. Thither the people followed him, and intreated him to return to their city: but he choſe to diffuſe the ſavour of his goſpel, and diſpenſe his miracles of mercy in the country around; for this was the deſign of his miſſion, to be a general bleſſing. Note, (1.) They who have much public work have eſpecial need of ſeaſonable retirement alſo. To be alone with God is the beſt preparative for the pulpit. (2.) They who have found Chriſt's preſence ſo deſireable, naturally wiſh for its continuance. And though he refuſed his bodily preſence to them, he hath engaged to his people, who ſeek him, that he will abide with them for ever.

CHAP. V.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's preaching to the people out of Peter's ſhip, ver. 1—3. 2. The miraculous draught of fiſhes, ver. 4—11. 3. His cleanſing the leper, ver. 12—15. 4. A ſhort account of his private devotion and public miniſtry, ver. 16, 17. 5. His cure of the man ſick of the palſy, ver. 18—26. 6. His calling Levi the publican, and converſing with publicans on that occaſion, ver. 27—32. 7. His juſtifying his diſciples in not faſting ſo frequently as the diſciples of John and the Phariſees did, ver. 33. ad finem.

1. AND [a] it came to paſs, that as the people preſſed upon him to hear the word of God, he ſtood by the lake of Genneſareth, 2. And ſaw two ſhips ſtanding by the lake: but the fiſhermen were gone out of them, and were waſhing their nets. 3. And he entred into one of the ſhips, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thruſt out a little from the land: and he ſat down, and taught the people out of the ſhip. 4. Now, when he had left ſpeaking, he ſaid unto Simon, [b] Lanch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught. 5. And Simon anſwering ſaid unto him, Maſter, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing: nevertheleſs at thy word I will let down the net. 6. And, when they had this done, they incloſed a great multitude of fiſhes; and their net brake. 7. And they beckned unto their partners which were in the other ſhip, that they ſhould come and help them. And they came and filled both the ſhips, ſo that they began to ſink. 8. When Simon Peter ſaw it, he fell down at Jeſus's knees, ſaying, [c] Depart from me, for I am a ſinful man, O Lord. 9. For he was aſtoniſhed, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fiſhes which they had taken: 10. And ſo was alſo James and John the ſons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jeſus ſaid unto Simon, Fear not; from [d] henceforth thou ſhalt catch men. 11. And, when they had brought their ſhips to land, [e] they forſook all, and followed him.

[a] Mat. iv. 18. Mark i. 16.
[b] John xxi. 6.
[c] 2 Sam. vi. 9. 1 Kings 17, 18.
[d] Ezek. xlvii. 10. Mat. iv. 19. Mark i. 17.
[e] Mat. x. 37. Chap. xiv. 33.

v. 1—11. Vaſt was the concourſe that attended the preaching of Jeſus; and whilſt the Scribes and Phariſees, the wiſe doctors of the law, deſpiſed him, the common people were eager to hear him, and preſſed through the crowd to get nearer. Hereupon,

1. Chriſt deſired the uſe of a fiſherman's boat, for the greater convenience of being heard, and to be leſs incommoded with the throng; and there he ſat down and taught the people who ſtood before him on the ſhore.

2. When he had done preaching he deſired Simon, in whoſe boat he was, to lanch out farther into the lake and let down their nets. Simon told him the ill ſucceſs they had met with; but, though they had wearied themſelves all night, and waſhed their nets, if he bid them they would chearfully make another trial. Note, (1.) The moſt diligent and laborious ſometimes meet with diſappointments, and are apt to be diſcouraged by the little fruit they ſee of their labours; but they muſt perſiſt in the way of duty, and leave the event to God. (2.) If our bread be eaſily earned, and our reſt ſweet unto us, we ſhould remember charitably thoſe who labour hard for little gain, and wake, at their toils, when we are ſleeping.

3. Moſt amazing was the quantity of fiſhes they incloſed: their net began to give way with the weight; and, unable to draw them up themſelves, they beckoned to their partners to come to their aſſiſtance, and loaded both their boats ſo deep, that they were in danger of ſinking. Peter was now abundantly repaid for the loan of his boat; and in this diſplay of his Maſter's power in the ſea, as well as on the land, might be confirmed in his faith of the doctrine which he delivered.

4. Peter, deeply affected with what he ſaw, and perceiving the danger they were in, fell down at Jeſus's knees, and, under the deepeſt ſenſe of his own unworthineſs, cried out, ſaying, Depart from me, for I am a ſinful man, O Lord. Conſcious of his guilt and ſinfulneſs, he trembled, leſt the Lord was come to puniſh inſtead of bleſſing him; and was afraid of his very mercies: for he was aſtoniſhed, and all that were with him, at the draught of fiſhes they had taken; though brought up to this buſineſs from their youth, they had never ſeen any thing at all to be compared with this in their whole lives. Note, (1.) The beſt of men are ſinful men, and need continually to fall at Jeſus's feet in deepeſt ſelf-abaſement. (2.) Though we have grievouſly offended our Lord, we may not ſay, Depart from me, but, Stay with me, or, Return to me in mercy; for nothing but his preſence and grace can keep us from ſinking.

5. Jeſus quiets their fears. He is not come to them in anger, but in mercy: and he hath ſtill greater kindneſs in ſtore for them than this cargo of fiſhes; therefore he ſaid unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou ſhalt catch men, and be more ſucceſsful in caſting the goſpel-net, and drawing greater multitudes out of the depths of ſin and miſery to life and ſalvation. Which was eminently fulfilled, Acts ii. 41.

6. No ſooner were they come to land than Simon and Andrew, and the ſons of Zebedee their partners, obeying his call, immediately left their boats, and all they had, quitting their employment at the time when it appeared moſt ſucceſsful, and commenced thenceforward conſtant attendants on the Lord Jeſus. Note, They who know the bleſſedneſs of Chriſt's ſervice will count nothing too much to part with for his ſake.

12. ¶ [f] And it came to paſs, when he was in a certain city, behold, a man [g] full of leproſy: who, ſeeing Jeſus, fell on his face, and beſought him, ſaying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canſt make me clean. 13. And he put forth his hand, and touched him, ſaying, I will; be thou clean.
And immediately the leproſy departed from him. 14.
And [h] he charged him to tell no man: but go and ſhew thyſelf to the prieſt, and offer for thy cleanſing [i] according as Moſes commanded, for a teſtimony unto them.
15. But ſo much the more [k] went there a fame abroad of him: and great multitudes came together to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities. 16. ¶ And [l] he withdrew himſelf into the wilderneſs, and prayed.

[f] Mat. viii. 2. Mark i. 40.
[g] Lev. xiii. 46. 2 Chron. xxvi. 21.
[h] Mark v. 43.
[i] Lev. xiv. 3, 4, 10.
[k] Mat. iv. 24.
[l] Mark vi. 46.

v. 12—16. We have here,

1. The cleanſing of the leper. This ſtory both the former evangeliſts have recorded. It affords us,

(1.) A ſtriking emblem of our true ſtate. So corrupt is our nature; ſo ſpotted are our ſouls; ſo loathſome in the eyes of God; and by all human means ſo utterly incurable is the diſeaſe of ſin.

(2.) It directs us where our only hope lies, even in Jeſus, the great phyſician. To him, with deep humiliation and confuſion of face, in the ſight of our own vileneſs, ſhould we make application; crying earneſtly for his healing grace; depending on his power to ſave to the uttermoſt; and caſting ourſelves wholly on his mercy.

(3.) Chriſt appears a gracious Saviour, ready to hear the prayer of the poor deſtitute, and able to ſave to the uttermoſt all who come to him: both to pardon the ſinner's guilt, however aggravated; and to deliver him from the power of his corruptions, however inveterate.

(4.) Every cleanſed ſinner will obediently follow the commands of Jeſus; will offer up himſelf a living ſacrifice to God; and in the bleſſed, evident, and univerſal change wrought upon him, will leave thoſe without excuſe, who will not acknowledge the divine power and grace magnified in ſuch a converſion.

2. Great multitudes reſorted to him from every quarter to hear him and to be healed. The more he ſought to be hid, the more his fame ſpread. The gratitude and tranſport of joy this poor man felt on his cure would not permit him to hold his tongue and conceal the glory of his great benefactor. Modeſt worth, that wiſhes to be concealed, ſhines the brighter.

3. He withdrew, after the labours of the day, from the crowd, and, retiring into a ſolitary place, ſpent ſome time alone in prayer. To teach us this neceſſary duty, which nothing ſhould intrench upon or interrupt.

17. And it came to paſs on a certain day, as he was teaching, that [m] there were Phariſees and doctors of the law ſitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jeruſalem: and the power of the Lord was preſent to heal them. 18. ¶ [n] And behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with the palſy: and they ſought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him. 19. And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in, becauſe of the multitude, they went upon the houſe-top, and let him down through the tiling with his couch, into the midſt before Jeſus. 20. And when he ſaw their faith, he ſaid unto him, Man, [o] thy ſins are forgiven thee. 21. And the ſcribes and Phariſees began to reaſon, ſaying, Who is this which ſpeaketh blaſphemies? [p] Who can forgive ſins but God alone? 22. But when [q] Jeſus perceived their thoughts, he, anſwering, ſaid unto them, What reaſon ye in your hearts? 23. Whether is eaſier to ſay, Thy ſins be forgiven thee, or to ſay, Riſe up and walk?
24. But that ye may know that [r] the Son of man hath power upon earth to forgive ſins, (he ſaith unto the ſick of the palſy) I ſay unto thee, Ariſe, and take up thy couch, and go into thine houſe. 25. And immediately he roſe up before them, and took up that whereon he lay, and departed to his own houſe, glorifying God.
26. And they were all amazed, and they glorified God, and were filled with fear, ſaying, We have ſeen ſtrange things to day.

[m] Jer. xviii. 18.
[n] Mat. ix. 2. Mark ii. 3.
[o] Pſ. ciii. 3. Iſa. xxxviii. 17. & xlv. 22. John v. 14.
[p] Job xiv. 4. Iſa. xliii. 25.
[q] Pſ. cxxxix. 2. John ii. 24. & vi. 64.
[r] John xvii. 2. Acts v. 31.

v. 17—26. Chriſt ceaſed not his indefatigable labours.

1. He preached in a houſe on a week-day at Capernaum, for no day, no place, is unſuitable or unſeaſonable when an opportunity offers to ſpeak a word for God, and for the good of men's ſouls. Among others of his audience, were a large number of Scribes and Phariſees; who, with no good intention, were come from the diſtant places, not to hear and learn, but to ſit by, to make remarks and cavil; and the power of the Lord was preſent to heal them, not the Phariſees, but many of the multitude who came to him with their ſeveral diſeaſes; thus at leaſt to leave without excuſe thoſe who refuſed the evidence of ſuch inconteſtible miracles. Note, (1.) When perſons come to hear the word of God, not to profit themſelves, but to prejudice others againſt it, great is their guilt. (2.) Though we know the malice of thoſe who watch for our halting, we muſt not be diſcouraged from perſevering in the way of duty. (3.) The power of the Lord is preſent to heal wherever his goſpel is preached, but they who reject the counſel of God againſt their own ſouls, have only themſelves to blame for their deſtruction.

2. Juſt at that time a paralytic man was brought to Jeſus, unable to gain acceſs by the door, becauſe of the multitude, his friends carried him up to the top of the houſe, and let him down through the roof into the room where Jeſus was. Beholding their faith, he pronounces the pardon of his ſins; and notwithſtanding all the cavils of the Phariſees which he knew, Jeſus confirms the divine authority he aſſumed, by an immediate cure of the paralytic man; proving thereby, that he who could thus ſovereignly, by his own power, remove the effects of ſin, had an undoubted right to pardon it. The cure was inſtantaneous and perfect, and to the amaze of all, who were ſtruck with ſacred reverence and awe when they ſaw him, who the moment before lay ſtretched ſo helpleſs, now riſe with full ſtrength and vigour, take up his own bed, and go away glorifying God for the aſtoniſhing mercy; and the people in general acknowledged, that no ſuch ſtrange miracles were ever before ſeen or heard of. Note, (1.) All our diſeaſes are the fruit of ſin, and that ſhould ever humble us under them before God. (2.) Jeſus hath power to forgive ſins, and they who by faith come to him, ſhall know it by bleſſed experience. (3.) If our ſin be pardoned, the bitterneſs of ſickneſs and death is paſſed away: a ſoul rejoicing in God, as his Saviour, hath nothing to complain of. (4.) When we have received mercy at God's hand, we are bound to aſcribe to him the glory due unto his name, and to ſpeak to his praiſe.

27. ¶ [s] And after theſe things he went forth, and ſaw a publican named Levi, ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom: and he ſaid unto him, Follow me. 28. And he left all, roſe up, and followed him. 29. And Levi made him a great feaſt in his own houſe: and there was a great company of publicans, and of others that ſat down with them. 30. But their ſcribes and Phariſees murmured againſt his diſciples, ſaying, [t] Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and ſinners? 31. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaid unto them, They that are whole need not a phyſician, but they that are ſick. 32. [u] I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance. 33. ¶ And they ſaid unto him, [x] Why do the diſciples of John faſt often, and make prayers, and likewiſe the diſciples of [y] the Phariſees; but thine eat and drink? 34. And he ſaid unto them, Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber faſt, while [z] the bridegroom is with them? 35. But the days will come, [a] when the bridegroom ſhall be taken away from them, and [b] then ſhall they faſt in thoſe days. 36. ¶ And he ſpake alſo a parable unto them, [c] No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old: if otherwiſe, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. 37. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; elſe the new wine will burſt the bottles, and be ſpilled, and the bottles ſhall periſh. 38. But new wine muſt be put into new bottles, and both are preſerved. 39. No man alſo, having drunk old wine, ſtraightway deſireth new: for he ſaith, The old is better.

[s] Mat. ix. 9. Mark ii. 13.
[t] Gen. xliii. 32. Iſa. lxv. 6. Acts x. 28.
[u] Chap. xviii. 10—14. & xix. 10. Rom. v. 6, 8. 1 Tim. i. 15.
[x] Mat. ix. 14. Mark ii. 18.
[y] Chap. xviii. 12.
[z] John iii. 29.
[a] Acts i. 9.
[b] Acts xiii. 3.
[c] Mat. ix. 16. Mark ii. 21.

v. 27—39. The converſion of the ſinner's heart to God is equally a matter of wonder, and as great an evidence of divine power, as cleanſing the leper, or raiſing the dead. We have here,

1. The calling of Matthew, or Levi the publican, and his ready obedience to the command of Jeſus; inſtantly leaving all, he followed him. The vileſt ſinners, and thoſe who have the greateſt obſtacles lying in the way of their ſalvation, are, when Jeſus ſpeaks to the heart, effectually wrought upon: Nothing is above his almighty grace.

2. The gracious condeſcenſion of the Lord to thoſe publicans, whom Matthew invited to his houſe. Our Lord diſdained not to ſit down with them, and vindicates his conduct from the envious, malicious, and cenſorious ſuggeſtions of the Phariſees. He aſſociated not with them as approving their ways, or countenancing them in evil, but as a phyſician viſits the diſeaſed; the whole, at leaſt they who fancy themſelves ſo, need not his care. The buſineſs of the Saviour in the world was not with the righteous, or thoſe who were vainly puffed up with a conceit of their own excellence, as was the caſe of the Phariſees, he came to call poor ſinners, as the publicans were, to repentance; and would kindly receive them, when ſenſible of their guilt and ſinfulneſs they turned to him. And he is ſtill the ſame gracious Lord; no miſerable ſinner need deſpair; let him look unto Jeſus and be ſaved; only thoſe periſh who know not their need of him, or proudly fancy they are righteous.

3. He vindicates his diſciples from the cenſures of the Phariſees reſpecting faſting. It was not fit they ſhould faſt, whilſt their Maſter was with them: they were not yet prepared to endure this diſcipline. Such auſterities might tempt them to draw back, as new fermenting wine would burſt old bottles; their exerciſes muſt be proportioned to their ſtrength. At preſent they could not bear it; but hereafter the time would come when loſing their Maſter, and called out to labour in his cauſe, they would learn to faſt, 1 Cor. iv. 11. Not that the Phariſees need lay ſuch a ſtreſs upon their own bodily ſervices: though, like new fermenting wine that ſparkles high, they made a fair ſhew in the fleſh, their form of godlineſs was not to be compared with the life and power of religion, the old wine, which the diſciples poſſeſſed, and which every ſpiritual perſon, who hath a true reliſh for the things of God, far prefers.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter we have, 1. A proof of the lawfulneſs of works of neceſſity and mercy on the ſabbath-day, ver. 1—11. 2. Chriſt's retirement for ſecret prayer, ver. 12. 3. His calling his twelve apoſtles, ver. 13—16. 4. His curing the multitudes of thoſe under various diſeaſes who made their application to him, ver. 17—19. 5. The ſermon that he preached to his diſciples and the multitude, inſtructing them in their duty both to God and man, ver. 20—49.

1. AND [a] it came to paſs on the ſecond ſabbath after the firſt, that he went through the corn-fields: and his diſciples [b] plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands. 2. And certain of the Phariſees ſaid unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the ſabbath-days? 3. And Jeſus, anſwering them, ſaid, Have ye not read ſo much as this, [c] what David did, when himſelf was an hungred, and they which were with him: 4. How he went into the houſe of God, and did take and eat the ſhew-bread, and gave alſo to them that were with him, [d] which is not lawful to eat, but for the prieſts alone? 5. And he ſaid unto them, That the Son of man is Lord alſo of the ſabbath. 6. [e] And it came to paſs alſo on another ſabbath, that he entred into the ſynagogue and taught: and there was a man whoſe right hand was withered. 7. And the ſcribes and Phariſees watched him, [f] whether he would heal on the ſabbath-day: that they might find an accuſation againſt him. 8. But he knew their thoughts, and ſaid to the man which had the withered hand, Riſe up, and ſtand forth in the midſt. And he aroſe, and ſtood forth. 9. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, I will aſk you one thing, Is it lawful on the ſabbath-days to do good, or to do evil? to ſave life, or to deſtroy it? 10. And, looking round about upon them all, he ſaid unto the man, [g] Stretch forth thy hand. And he did ſo: and his hand was reſtored whole as the other. 11. And they were filled with madneſs; and [h] communed one with another what they might do to Jeſus.

[a] Mat. xii. 1. Mark ii. 23.
[b] Deut. xxiii. 25.
[c] 1 Sam. xxi. 6.
[d] Exod. xxix. 33. Lev. xxiv. 9.
[e] Mat. xii. 9. Mark iii. 1.
[f] Chap. xiii. 14. & xiv. 3. John ix. 16.
[g] 1 Kings xiii. 6.
[h] Pſ. ii. 2. Mat. xii. 14.

v. 1—11. Theſe paſſages we had before in the other evangeliſts. The time when the firſt of theſe events happened is ſaid to be the ſecond ſabbath after the firſt, or rather the firſt ſabbath after the ſecond day of the Paſſover, from whence were reckoned the ſeven weeks to the feaſt of Pentecoſt.

1. Our Lord vindicates his diſciples from the cenſures of the Phariſees; and proves, by the example of David, the lawfulneſs of rubbing out the ears of corn, and eating them on the ſabbath, when hunger called for food. Note, (1.) Works of neceſſity are always allowable. (2.) The greateſt cenſurers of the innocent actions of others are often moſt indulgent to their own iniquities.

2. He vindicates himſelf from the ſame malignant cavillers. As he preached in the ſynagogue on another ſabbath, there was a man preſent who had a withered hand. Jeſus bid him ſtand forth in the midſt of the congregation; and, knowing the malicious purpoſes of his watchful enemies, who, from ſuch a gracious work as he was about to do, intended to ground an accuſation againſt him as if he was a ſabbath-breaker, he appeals to themſelves whether they thought the fourth commandmandment could poſſibly forbid the doing good, or ſaving a man's life on the ſabbath-day. Unable to reply, yet reſolved to find fault, they were ſilent. On which he with a word reſtored the withered hand. And thereat his enemies were ſo enraged, that, with fury riſing to madneſs, they conſulted how they might deſtroy him. Note, (1.) They who would be cured of their ſpiritual infirmities muſt be found in the aſſembly of the faithful, where Chriſt uſually diſpenſes his healing grace. (2.) Men's perverſeneſs and wickedneſs muſt not deter nor diſcourage us from the work in which the Lord would have us employed. (3.) All paſſion is temporary madneſs: during its fury neither reaſon nor conſcience are regarded.

12. And it came to paſs in thoſe days, that he went out into a mountain to [i] pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. 13. ¶ And when it was day, [i] he called unto him his diſciples: [k] and of them [l] he choſe twelve, whom he alſo named apoſtles: 14. Simon (whom he alſo named Peter) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15. Matthew and Thomas, James the ſon of Alpheus, and Simon called Zelotes, 16. And Judas [m] the brother of James, and Judas Iſcariot, which alſo was the traitor. 17. ¶ And he came down with them, and ſtood in the plain, and the company of his diſciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jeruſalem, and from the ſea-coaſt of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diſeaſes; 18. And they that were vexed with unclean ſpirits: and they were healed. 19. And [n] the whole multitude ſought to touch him: for [o] there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

[i] Mark iii. 7, 13. Acts i. 24. & xiii. 3.
[k] Mat. x. 1, &c. Mark iii. 13.
[l] Heb. v. 4.
[m] Jude 1.
[n] Mat. xiv. 36.
[o] Chap. viii. 46.

v. 12—19. We have here,

1. Our Lord's retirement. He went out to a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God, (εν τη ϖροσευχη τȣ Θεȣ) which may ſignify either the object to whom his prayer was directed, or the fervency of his requeſts, or, as ſome ſuppoſe, the houſe of prayer, or proſeucha, to which he retired, ſuch oratories, it ſeems, being common in that country. The length of the time he ſpent there beſpoke the importance of the occaſion; he being about to chuſe and ordain his twelve apoſtles. Note, When matters of deep concern lie upon our ſouls, we are eſpecially called to ſpread the caſe before God for his direction and bleſſing.

2. The calling and appointment of the twelve apoſtles. Theſe he ordained to be his chief miniſters in that kingdom which he was come to eſtabliſh, putting them in truſt with his goſpel, and empowering them to work miracles in confirmation of their miſſion. The names of the apoſtles are the ſame as before; only he who was called Lebbeus, and ſurnamed Thaddeus, is here called Judas the brother of James, theſe names belonging to the ſame perſon; and Simon the Canaanite is here named Simon Zelotes, being probably, before his converſion, of the ſect of the Zealots.

3. Having finiſhed this work, he came down with the twelve to the plain, where great multitudes attended from the moſt diſtant parts of the country, to hear his diſcourſes and to partake of his wondrous cures. Nor were they diſappointed: he graciouſly taught them and richly diſpenſed his favours, healing all the diſeaſed, and caſting out the unclean ſpirits from ſuch as were poſſeſſed; yea, ſuch virtue went out of him, that the whole multitude of miſerable patients, who came to him, ſought but to touch him, fully perſuaded that this would be effectual to heal them; and found, according to their faith, that their cure was inſtantly effected.

20. ¶ And he lifted up his eyes on his diſciples, and [p] ſaid, [q] Bleſſed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God. 21. [r] Bleſſed are ye that hunger now: [s] for ye ſhall be filled. [t] Bleſſed are ye that weep now: for ye ſhall laugh. 22. [u] Bleſſed are ye when men ſhall hate you, and when they [x] ſhall ſeparate you from their company, and ſhall reproach you, and caſt out your name as evil, for the Son of man's ſake. 23. [y] Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for behold, your reward is great in heaven: [z] for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. 24. But [a] wo unto you that [b] are rich: for [c] ye have received your conſolation. 25. [d] Wo unto you that are full: for ye ſhall hunger. [e] Wo unto you that laugh now: for ye ſhall mourn and weep. 26. [f] Wo unto you when all men ſhall ſpeak well of you: for ſo did their fathers [g] to the falſe prophets.

[p] Mat. v. 3.
[q] Pſ. li. 17. Prov. xvi. 19. Iſa. lxi. 1. Jam. ii. 5.
[r] Pſ. xlii. 2. 1 Cor. iv. 11. 2 Cor. xi. 27.
[s] Iſa. lxv. 13. Chap. i. 53. John vi. 35.
[t] Iſa. lxi. 3.
[u] Mat. v. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 19. & iii. 14.
[x] John xvi. 2.
[y] Acts v. 41. & xvi. 25. Col. i. 24.
[z] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Mat. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 52. 1 Theſ. ii. 15.
[a] Am. vi. 1. Jam. v. 1.
[b] Chap. xii. 21.
[c] Mat. vi. 2, 5.
[d] Iſa. lxv. 13. Chap. xvi. 25.
[e] Prov. xiv. 13. Eccleſ. ii. 2.
[f] 1 John iv. 5.
[g] Iſa. xxx. 10.

v. 20—26. Some have ſuppoſed this is an abridgment of the ſame diſcourſe preached Mat. v—vii. others that it was delivered at a different time and place, though the matter be ſimilar. And this ſeems moſt probable, as there it is ſaid he went up into a mountain and ſat; here, that he came down and ſtood in the plain.

As the diſciples of Jeſus would, for their attachment to him, be called to endure many hardſhips and ſufferings, he here, fixing his eyes upon them, addreſſes them for their encouragement.

1. He pronounces thoſe bleſſed whom the world in general counts to be of all men moſt miſerable. (1.) Bleſſed are ye poor, deſtitute of all earthly ſubſtance, or who have left all to follow me, and whoſe ſpirits are humbled into the duſt under the ſenſe of your ſinfulneſs and ſpiritual poverty: yours is the kingdom of God; the preſent riches of grace are your treaſure, and the eternal inheritance above is reſerved for you as your exceeding great reward. (2.) Bleſſed are ye that hunger now, either wanting neceſſary food for the ſake of Chriſt and his goſpel, or ſo earneſt after ſpiritual bleſſings as the hungry crave for meat; for ye ſhall be filled with food to ſatisfy the cravings of hunger, or better, with that ſupply of righteouſneſs and grace which the ſoul deſires. (3.) Bleſſed are ye that weep now, under afflictions for Chriſt's ſake, or mourning over ſin in yourſelves and others; for ye ſhall laugh, filled with eternal conſolations in that kingdom where every tear ſhall be for ever wiped away from your eyes. (4.) Bleſſed are ye when men ſhall hate you for your attachment to Chriſt and his goſpel, and when they ſhall ſeparate you from their company, counting it infamous to aſſociate with a perſon ſo obnoxious, as well as from their religious aſſemblies; and ſhall reproach you, branding you with every malicious ſlander, and treating you with inſult and contempt as the vileſt of mankind; and caſt out your name as evil, never mentioning you but with malignity, obloquy, and virulence, abuſing you wherever they go; and all this for the Son of man's ſake, becauſe you eſpouſe his intereſts, profeſs your faith in him, and live to his glory; which is indeed the cauſe of all their enmity at the bottom, with whatever ſpecious pretences they cloak their malevolence. Notwithſtanding their curſes, ye are truly bleſſed. Rejoice ye in that day therefore, and leap for joy; ſuch reproach is your higheſt honour, and will prove your eternal advantage; for behold your reward is great in heaven; and this reward in glory will infinitely overpay all your loſſes and ſufferings: for in like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. In every age, the faithful, from the beginning, have met the ſame treatment from the world of the ungodly. It is your honour to be made vile in ſuch company; and to partake of the ſame croſs they endured is the way to the crown they have won. Let us weigh well theſe things, and we ſhall ſay, welcome reproach, welcome every opprobrious name, welcome enmity, reviling, inſolence. This is the way to glory.

2. He pronounces fearful woes on thoſe whom the world calls happy; ſo different are God's thoughts from man's thoughts. (1.) Wo unto you that are rich, who, poſſeſſed of affluence, idolize the creature, ſeek your happineſs from worldly enjoyments, and truſt in theſe vanities; for ye have received your conſolation; you have your all in hand, and have nothing to hope for in eternity. (2.) Wo unto you that are full, living in all fleſhly gratifications, and faring ſumptuouſly every day; for ye ſhall hunger, emptied of all your preſent abundance, and left to the rage of craving appetite, that can never be ſatisfied, and to raging thirſt, where not a drop of water is granted to cool a flaming tongue. (3.) Wo unto you that laugh now, ſpending your days in mirth, pleaſure, and ſenſual joy; for ye ſhall mourn and weep, where the ſorrow will be as unavailing as the torment which occaſions it will be intolerable and eternal. (4.) Wo unto you when all men ſhall ſpeak well of you, a ſure ſign that you do nothing to reprove them, either by your profeſſion or Chriſtian converſation, flattering them in their ſin, and never offending them by your fidelity to their ſouls; then you will gain their approbation; for ſo did their fathers to the falſe prophets, whoſe ſmooth and deceitful propheciesobtained them the careſſes of their countrymen, whilſt the faithful prophets, who knew not to flatter, were abhorred and perſecuted. And all theſe things are eminently verified and verifying every day.

27. ¶ But I ſay unto you which hear, [h] Love your enemies, [i] do good to them which hate you: 28. [k] Bleſs them that curſe you, and [l] pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you. 29. And [m] unto him that ſmiteth thee on the one cheek, offer alſo the other: and [n] him that taketh away thy cloke, forbid not to take thy coat alſo. 30. [o] Give to every man that aſketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods, aſk them not again. 31. And [p] as ye would that men ſhould do to you, do ye alſo to them likewiſe. 32. For [q] if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for ſinners alſo love thoſe that love them. 33. And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for ſinners alſo do even the ſame. 34. And [r] if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for ſinners alſo lend to ſinners, to receive as much again. 35. But [s] love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again: and your reward ſhall be great, and [t] ye ſhall be the children of the Higheſt: for he is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil. 36. [u] Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father alſo is merciful.

[h] Mat. v. 44.
[i] Ex. xxiii. 4. Prov. xxv. 21. Rom. xii. 20.
[k] Rom. xii. 14. 1 Pet. iii. 9.
[l] Chap. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 60.
[m] Iſa. l. 6. Lam. iii. 30. Mat. v. 39.
[n] 1 Cor. vi. 7.
[o] Deut. xv. 9. 10. Pſ. cxii. 9. Mat. v. 42.
[p] Mat. vii. 12.
[q] Mat. v. 46.
[r] Deut. xv. 8.
[s] Ver. 27.
[t] Mat. v. 45.
[u] Mat. v. 48.

v. 27—36. The ſame truths are here delivered as Matth. v. 38—44. Our Lord inculcates that univerſal charity which is the eminent characteriſtic of his religion. Our love muſt extend even to our bittereſt enemies, and make us ready to every good word and work for their ſervice, rendering to them bleſſings for curſes. Love will make us return prayers for deſpiteful uſage. Chriſtian charity muſt lead us to put up with affronts without reſentment, and to ſuffer wrongs without avenging them, or ſeeking litigious redreſs, v. 29. Charity muſt open our hearts to feel the diſtreſſes of the indigent, and our hands liberally, according to our ability, to relieve them; often lending without the hope of repayment, and willing to cancel the debts of the inſolvent, whom unforeſeen providences have diſabled from the power of diſcharging, v. 30. Charity teaches us to put ourſelves in the place of others, and act towards them in ſuch a manner as, in their circumſtances, we could with reaſon have expected from them, v. 31. And there are three reaſons urged for this gracious converſation:

1. That this is the diſtinguiſhing badge of our profeſſion. To love, ſerve, and lend to thoſe who make us a return in kind, is no more than the moſt ſelf-intereſted worldling doth: and the faith which worketh by love muſt carry us much farther than theſe.

2. Our reward will be great in heaven, whatever ungrateful returns we may meet from men on earth.

3. As we ſhall herein moſt ſtrikingly reſemble the Father of mercies, who is good to the evil and unthankful. He will acknow-away: a ſoul rejoicing in God, as his Saviour, hath nothing to complain of. (4.) When we have received mercy at God's hand, we are bound to aſcribe to him the glory due unto his name, and to ſpeak to his praiſe.

27. ¶ [s] And after theſe things he went forth, and ſaw a publican named Levi, ſitting at the receipt of cuſtom: and he ſaid unto him, Follow me. 28. And he left all, roſe up, and followed him. 29. And Levi made him a great feaſt in his own houſe: and there was a great company of publicans, and of others that ſat down with them. 30. But their ſcribes and Phariſees murmured againſt his diſciples, ſaying, [t] Why do ye eat and drink with publicans and ſinners? 31. And Jeſus, anſwering, ſaid unto them, They that are whole need not a phyſician, but they that are ſick. 32. [u] I came not to call the righteous, but ſinners to repentance. 33. ¶ And they ſaid unto him, [x] Why do the diſciples of John faſt often, and make prayers, and likewiſe the diſciples of [y] the Phariſees; but thine eat and drink? 34. And he ſaid unto them, Can ye make the children of the bride-chamber faſt, while [z] the bridegroom is with them? 35. But the days will come, [a] when the bridegroom ſhall be taken away from them, and [b] then ſhall they faſt in thoſe days. 36. ¶ And he ſpake alſo a parable unto them, [c] No man putteth a piece of a new garment upon an old: if otherwiſe, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new agreeth not with the old. 37. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; elſe the new wine will burſt the bottles, and be ſpilled, and the bottles ſhall periſh. 38. But new wine muſt be put into new bottles, and both are preſerved. 39. No man alſo, having drunk old wine, ſtraightway deſireth new: for he ſaith, The old is better.

[s] Mat. ix. 9. Mark ii. 13.
[t] Gen. xliii. 32. Iſa. lxv. 6. Acts x. 28.
[u] Chap. xviii. 10—14. & xix. 10. Rom. v. 6, 8. 1 Tim. i. 15.
[x] Mat. ix. 14. Mark ii. 18.
[y] Chap. xviii. 12.
[z] John iii. 29.
[a] Acts i. 9.
[b] Acts xiii. 3.
[c] Mat. ix. 16. Mark ii. 21.

v. 27—39. The converſion of the ſinner's heart to God is equally a matter of wonder, and as great an evidence of divine power, as cleanſing the leper, or raiſing the dead. We have here,

1. The calling of Matthew, or Levi the publican, and his ready obedience to the command of Jeſus; inſtantly leaving all, he followed him. The vileſt ſinners, and thoſe who have the greateſt obſtacles lying in the way of their ſalvation, are, when Jeſus ſpeaks to the heart, effectually wrought upon: Nothing is above his almighty grace.

2. The gracious condeſcenſion of the Lord to thoſe publicans, whom Matthew invited to his houſe. Our Lord diſdained not to ſit down with them, and vindicates his conduct from the envious, malicious, and cenſorious ſuggeſtions of the Phariſees. He aſſociated not with them as approving their ways, or countenancing them in evil, but as a phyſician viſits the diſeaſed; the whole, at leaſt they who fancy themſelves ſo, need not his care. The buſineſs of the Saviour in the world was not with the righteous, or thoſe who were vainly puffed up with a conceit of their own excellence, as was the caſe of the Phariſees, he came to call poor ſinners, as the publicans were, to repentance; and would kindly receive them, when ſenſible of their guilt and ſinfulneſs they turned to him. And he is ſtill the ſame gracious Lord; no miſerable ſinner need deſpair; let him look unto Jeſus and be ſaved; only thoſe periſh who know not their need of him, or proudly fancy they are righteous.

3. He vindicates his diſciples from the cenſures of the Phariſees reſpecting faſting. It was not fit they ſhould faſt, whilſt their Maſter was with them: they were not yet prepared to endure this diſcipline. Such auſterities might tempt them to draw back, as new fermenting wine would burſt old bottles; their exerciſes muſt be proportioned to their ſtrength. At preſent they could not bear it; but hereafter the time would come when loſing their Maſter, and called out to labour in his cauſe, they would learn to faſt, 1 Cor. iv. 11. Not that the Phariſees need lay ſuch a ſtreſs upon their own bodily ſervices: though, like new fermenting wine that ſparkles high, they made a fair ſhew in the fleſh, their form of godlineſs was not to be compared with the life and power of religion, the old wine, which the diſciples poſſeſſed, and which every ſpiritual perſon, who hath a true reliſh for the things of God, far prefers.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter we have, 1. A proof of the lawfulneſs of works of neceſſity and mercy on the ſabbath-day, ver. 1—11. 2. Chriſt's retirement for ſecret prayer, ver. 12. 3. His calling his twelve apoſtles, ver. 13—16. 4. His curing the multitudes of thoſe under various diſeaſes who made their application to him, ver. 17—19. 5. The ſermon that he preached to his diſciples and the multitude, inſtructing them in their duty both to God and man, ver. 20—49.

1. AND [a] it came to paſs on the ſecond ſabbath after the firſt, that he went through the corn-fields: and his diſciples [b] plucked the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands. 2. And certain of the Phariſees ſaid unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the ſabbath-days? 3. And Jeſus, anſwering them, ſaid, Have ye not read ſo much as this, [c] what David did, when himſelf was an hungred, and they which were with him: 4. How he went into the houſe of God, and did take and eat the ſhew-bread, and gave alſo to them that were with him, [d] which is not lawful to eat, but for the prieſts alone? 5. And he ſaid unto them, That the Son of man is Lord alſo of the ſabbath. 6. [e] And it came to paſs alſo on another ſabbath, that he entred into the ſynagogue and taught: and there was a man whoſe right hand was withered. 7. And the ſcribes and Phariſees watched him, [f] whether he would heal on the ſabbath-day: that they might find an accuſation againſt him. 8. But he knew their thoughts, and ſaid to the man which had the withered hand, Riſe up, and ſtand forth in the midſt. And he aroſe, and ſtood forth. 9. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, I will aſk you one thing, Is it lawful on the ſabbath-days to do good, or to do evil? to ſave life, or to deſtroy it? 10. And, looking round about upon them all, he ſaid unto the man, [g] Stretch forth thy hand. And he did ſo: and his hand was reſtored whole as the other. 11. And they were filled with madneſs; and [h] communed one with another what they might do to Jeſus.

[a] Mat. xii. 1. Mark ii. 23.
[b] Deut. xxiii. 25.
[c] 1 Sam. xxi. 6.
[d] Exod. xxix. 33. Lev. xxiv. 9.
[e] Mat. xii. 9. Mark iii. 1.
[f] Chap. xiii. 14. & xiv. 3. John ix. 16.
[g] 1 Kings xiii. 6.
[h] Pſ. ii. 2. Mat. xii. 14.

v. 1—11. Theſe paſſages we had before in the other evangeliſts. The time when the firſt of theſe events happened is ſaid to be the ſecond ſabbath after the firſt, or rather the firſt ſabbath after the ſecond day of the Paſſover, from whence were reckoned the ſeven weeks to the feaſt of Pentecoſt.

1. Our Lord vindicates his diſciples from the cenſures of the Phariſees; and proves, by the example of David, the lawfulneſs of rubbing out the ears of corn, and eating them on the ſabbath, when hunger called for food. Note, (1.) Works of neceſſity are always allowable. (2.) The greateſt cenſurers of the innocent actions of others are often moſt indulgent to their own iniquities.

2. He vindicates himſelf from the ſame malignant cavillers. As he preached in the ſynagogue on another ſabbath, there was a man preſent who had a withered hand. Jeſus bid him ſtand forth in the midſt of the congregation; and, knowing the malicious purpoſes of his watchful enemies, who, from ſuch a gracious work as he was about to do, intended to ground an accuſation againſt him as if he was a ſabbath-breaker, he appeals to themſelves whether they thought the fourth commandmandment could poſſibly forbid the doing good, or ſaving a man's life on the ſabbath-day. Unable to reply, yet reſolved to find fault, they were ſilent. On which he with a word reſtored the withered hand. And thereat his enemies were ſo enraged, that, with fury riſing to madneſs, they conſulted how they might deſtroy him. Note, (1.) They who would be cured of their ſpiritual infirmities muſt be found in the aſſembly of the faithful, where Chriſt uſually diſpenſes his healing grace. (2.) Men's perverſeneſs and wickedneſs muſt not deter nor diſcourage us from the work in which the Lord would have us employed. (3.) All paſſion is temporary madneſs: during its fury neither reaſon nor conſcience are regarded.

12. And it came to paſs in thoſe days, that he went out into a mountain to [i] pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. 13. ¶ And when it was day, [i] he called unto him his diſciples: [k] and of them [l] he choſe twelve, whom he alſo named apoſtles: 14. Simon (whom he alſo named Peter) and Andrew his brother, James and John, Philip and Bartholomew, 15. Matthew and Thomas, James the ſon of Alpheus, and Simon called Zelotes, 16. And Judas [m] the brother of James, and Judas Iſcariot, which alſo was the traitor. 17. ¶ And he came down with them, and ſtood in the plain, and the company of his diſciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jeruſalem, and from the ſea-coaſt of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diſeaſes; 18. And they that were vexed with unclean ſpirits: and they were healed. 19. And [n] the whole multitude ſought to touch him: for [o] there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

[i] Mark iii. 7, 13. Acts i. 24. & xiii. 3.
[k] Mat. x. 1, &c. Mark iii. 13.
[l] Heb. v. 4.
[m] Jude 1.
[n] Mat. xiv. 36.
[o] Chap. viii. 46.

v. 12—19. We have here,

1. Our Lord's retirement. He went out to a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God, (εν τη προσευχη τȣ Θεȣ) which may ſignify either the object to whom his prayer was directed, or the fervency of his requeſts, or, as ſome ſuppoſe, the houſe of prayer, or proſeucha, to which he retired, ſuch oratories, it ſeems, being common in that country. The length of the time he ſpent there beſpoke the importance of the occaſion; he being about to chuſe and ordain his twelve apoſtles. Note, When matters of deep concern lie upon our ſouls, we are eſpecially called to ſpread the caſe before God for his direction and bleſſing.

2. The calling and appointment of the twelve apoſtles. Theſe he ordained to be his chief miniſters in that kingdom which he was come to eſtabliſh, putting them in truſt with his goſpel, and empowering them to work miracles in confirmation of their miſſion. The names of the apoſtles are the ſame as before; only he who was called Lebbeus, and ſurnamed Thaddeus, is here called Judas the brother of James, theſe names belonging to the ſame perſon; and Simon the Canaanite is here named Simon Zelotes, being probably, before his converſion, of the ſect of the Zealots.

3. Having finiſhed this work, he came down with the twelve to the plain, where great multitudes attended from the moſt diſtant parts of the country, to hear his diſcourſes and to partake of his wondrous cures. Nor were they diſappointed: he graciouſly taught them and richly diſpenſed his favours, healing all the diſeaſed, and caſting out the unclean ſpirits from ſuch as were poſſeſſed; yea, ſuch virtue went out of him, that the whole multitude of miſerable patients, who came to him, ſought but to touch him, fully perſuaded that this would be effectual to heal them; and found, according to their faith, that their cure was inſtantly effected.

20. ¶ And he lifted up his eyes on his diſciples, and [p] ſaid, [q] Bleſſed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God. 21. [r] Bleſſed are ye that hunger now: [s] for ye ſhall be filled. [t] Bleſſed are ye that weep now: for ye ſhall laugh. 22. [u] Bleſſed are ye when men ſhall hate you, and when they [x] ſhall ſeparate you from their company, and ſhall reproach you, and caſt out your name as evil, for the Son of man's ſake. 23. [y] Rejoice ye in that day, and leap for joy: for behold, your reward is great in heaven: [z] for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. 24. But [a] wo unto you that [b] are rich: for [c] ye have received your conſolation. 25. [d] Wo unto you that are full: for ye ſhall hunger. [e] Wo unto you that laugh now: for ye ſhall mourn and weep. 26. [f] Wo unto you when all men ſhall ſpeak well of you: for ſo did their fathers [g] to the falſe prophets.

[p] Mat. v. 3.
[q] Pſ. li. 17. Prov. xvi. 19. Iſa. lxi. 1. Jam. ii. 5.
[r] Pſ. xlii. 2. 1 Cor. iv. 11. 2 Cor. xi. 27.
[s] Iſa. lxv. 13. Chap. i. 53. John vi. 35.
[t] Iſa. lxi. 3.
[u] Mat. v. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 19. & iii. 14.
[x] John xvi. 2.
[y] Acts v. 41. & xvi. 25. Col. i. 24.
[z] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Mat. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 52. 1 Theſ. ii. 15.
[a] Am. vi. 1. Jam. v. 1.
[b] Chap. xii. 21.
[c] Mat. vi. 2, 5.
[d] Iſa. lxv. 13. Chap. xvi. 25.
[e] Prov. xiv. 13. Eccleſ. ii. 2.
[f] 1 John iv. 5.
[g] Iſa. xxx. 10.

v. 20—26. Some have ſuppoſed this is an abridgment of the ſame diſcourſe preached Mat. v—vii. others that it was delivered at a different time and place, though the matter be ſimilar. And this ſeems moſt probable, as there it is ſaid he went up into a mountain and ſat; here, that he came down and ſtood in the plain.

As the diſciples of Jeſus would, for their attachment to him, be called to endure many hardſhips and ſufferings, he here, fixing his eyes upon them, addreſſes them for their encouragement.

1. He pronounces thoſe bleſſed whom the world in general counts to be of all men moſt miſerable. (1.) Bleſſed are ye poor, deſtitute of all earthly ſubſtance, or who have left all to follow me, and whoſe ſpirits are humbled into the duſt under the ſenſe of your ſinfulneſs and ſpiritual poverty: yours is the kingdom of God; the preſent riches of grace are your treaſure, and the eternal inheritance above is reſerved for you as your exceeding great reward. (2.) Bleſſed are ye that hunger now, either wanting neceſſary food for the ſake of Chriſt and his goſpel, or ſo earneſt after ſpiritual bleſſings as the hungry crave for meat; for ye ſhall be filled with food to ſatisfy the cravings of hunger, or better, with that ſupply of righteouſneſs and grace which the ſoul deſires. (3.) Bleſſed are ye that weep now, under afflictions for Chriſt's ſake, or mourning over ſin in yourſelves and others; for ye ſhall laugh, filled with eternal conſolations in that kingdom where every tear ſhall be for ever wiped away from your eyes. (4.) Bleſſed are ye when men ſhall hate you for your attachment to Chriſt and his goſpel, and when they ſhall ſeparate you from their company, counting it infamous to aſſociate with a perſon ſo obnoxious, as well as from their religious aſſemblies; and ſhall reproach you, branding you with every malicious ſlander, and treating you with inſult and contempt as the vileſt of mankind; and caſt out your name as evil, never mentioning you but with malignity, obloquy, and virulence, abuſing you wherever they go; and all this for the Son of man's ſake, becauſe you eſpouſe his intereſts, profeſs your faith in him, and live to his glory; which is indeed the cauſe of all their enmity at the bottom, with whatever ſpecious pretences they cloak their malevolence. Notwithſtanding their curſes, ye are truly bleſſed. Rejoice ye in that day therefore, and leap for joy; ſuch reproach is your higheſt honour, and will prove your eternal advantage; for behold your reward is great in heaven; and this reward in glory will infinitely overpay all your loſſes and ſufferings: for in like manner did their fathers unto the prophets. In every age, the faithful, from the beginning, have met the ſame treatment from the world of the ungodly. It is your honour to be made vile in ſuch company; and to partake of the ſame croſs they endured is the way to the crown they have won. Let us weigh well theſe things, and we ſhall ſay, welcome reproach, welcome every opprobrious name, welcome enmity, reviling, inſolence. This is the way to glory.

2. He pronounces fearful woes on thoſe whom the world calls happy; ſo different are God's thoughts from man's thoughts. (1.) Wo unto you that are rich, who, poſſeſſed of affluence, idolize the creature, ſeek your happineſs from worldly enjoyments, and truſt in theſe vanities; for ye have received your conſolation; you have your all in hand, and have nothing to hope for in eternity. (2.) Wo unto you that are full, living in all fleſhly gratifications, and faring ſumptuouſly every day; for ye ſhall hunger, emptied of all your preſent abundance, and left to the rage of craving appetite, that can never be ſatisfied, and to raging thirſt, where not a drop of water is granted to cool a flaming tongue. (3.) Wo unto you that laugh now, ſpending your days in mirth, pleaſure, and ſenſual joy; for ye ſhall mourn and weep, where the ſorrow will be as unavailing as the torment which occaſions it will be intolerable and eternal. (4.) Wo unto you when all men ſhall ſpeak well of you, a ſure ſign that you do nothing to reprove them, either by your profeſſion or Chriſtian converſation, flattering them in their ſin, and never offending them by your fidelity to their ſouls; then you will gain their approbation; for ſo did their fathers to the falſe prophets, whoſe ſmooth and deceitful prophecies obtained them the careſſes of their countrymen, whilſt the faithful prophets, who knew not to flatter, were abhorred and perſecuted. And all theſe things are eminently verified and verifying every day.

27. ¶ But I ſay unto you which hear, [h] Love your enemies, [i] do good to them which hate you: 28. [k] Bleſs them that curſe you, and [l] pray for them which deſpitefully uſe you. 29. And [m] unto him that ſmiteth thee on the one cheek, offer alſo the other: and [n] him that taketh away thy cloke, forbid not to take thy coat alſo. 30. [o] Give to every man that aſketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods, aſk them not again. 31. And [p] as ye would that men ſhould do to you, do ye alſo to them likewiſe. 32. For [q] if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for ſinners alſo love thoſe that love them. 33. And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for ſinners alſo do even the ſame. 34. And [r] if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for ſinners alſo lend to ſinners, to receive as much again. 35. But [s] love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again: and your reward ſhall be great, and [t] ye ſhall be the children of the Higheſt: for he is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil. 36. [u] Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father alſo is merciful.

[h] Mat. v. 44.
[i] Ex. xxiii. 4. Prov. xxv. 21. Rom. xii. 20.
[k] Rom. xii. 14. 1 Pet. iii. 9.
[l] Chap. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 60.
[m] Iſa. l. 6. Lam. iii. 30. Mat. v. 39.
[n] 1 Cor. vi. 7.
[o] Deut. xv. 9. 10. Pſ. cxii. 9. Mat. v. 42.
[p] Mat. vii. 12.
[q] Mat. v. 46.
[r] Deut. xv. 8.
[s] Ver. 27.
[t] Mat. v. 45.
[u] Mat. v. 48.

v. 27—36. The ſame truths are here delivered as Matth. v. 38—44. Our Lord inculcates that univerſal charity which is the eminent characteriſtic of his religion. Our love muſt extend even to our bittereſt enemies, and make us ready to every good word and work for their ſervice, rendering to them bleſſings for curſes. Love will make us return prayers for deſpiteful uſage. Chriſtian charity muſt lead us to put up with affronts without reſentment, and to ſuffer wrongs without avenging them, or ſeeking litigious redreſs, v. 29. Charity muſt open our hearts to feel the diſtreſſes of the indigent, and our hands liberally, according to our ability, to relieve them; often lending without the hope of repayment, and willing to cancel the debts of the inſolvent, whom unforeſeen providences have diſabled from the power of diſcharging, v. 30. Charity teaches us to put ourſelves in the place of others, and act towards them in ſuch a manner as, in their circumſtances, we could with reaſon have expected from them, v. 31. And there are three reaſons urged for this gracious converſation:

1. That this is the diſtinguiſhing badge of our profeſſion. To love, ſerve, and lend to thoſe who make us a return in kind, is no more than the moſt ſelf-intereſted worldling doth: and the faith which worketh by love muſt carry us much farther than theſe.

2. Our reward will be great in heaven, whatever ungrateful returns we may meet from men on earth.

3. As we ſhall herein moſt ſtrikingly reſemble the Father of mercies, who is good to the evil and unthankful. He will acknowledge us as his children, which is the moſt exalted honour and dignity.

[x] Mat. vii. 1. Rom. ii. 1. & xiv. 4, 10. Jam. ii. 13. & iv. 11, 12.
[y] Prov. xix. 17. Mat. vii. 2.
[z] Mat. vii. 2. Mark iv. 24.
[a] Iſa. ix. 16. & xlii. 19. Mat. xv. 14.
[b] Mat. x. 24. John xiii. 16. & xv. 20.
[c] Mat. vii. 3.
[d] Prov. xviii. 17.
[e] Mat. vii. 17. & xii. 33.
[f] Mat. vii. 16.
† Gr. A grape.
[g] Mat. xii. 35.
[h] Mal. i. 6. Mat. vii. 21. Chap. xiii. 25.
[i] Mat. vii. 24.
[k] 1 Cor. iii. 11.

37. [x] Judge not, and ye ſhall not be judged: condemn not, and ye ſhall not be condemned: forgive, and ye ſhall be forgiven: 38. [y] Give, and it ſhall be given unto you; good meaſure, preſſed down, and ſhaken together, and running over, ſhall men give into your boſom. For [z] with the ſame meaſure that ye mete withal, it ſhall be meaſured to you again. 39. And he ſpake a parable unto them, [a] Can the blind lead the blind? ſhall they not both fall into the ditch? 40. [b] The diſciple is not above his maſter: but every one that is perfect ſhall be as his maſter. 41. And [c] why beholdeſt thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceiveſt not the beam that is in thine own eye? 42. Either how canſt thou ſay to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyſelf beholdeſt not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, [d] caſt out firſt the beam out of thine own eye, and then ſhalt thou ſee clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye. 43. For [e] a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit: neither doth a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. 44. For [f] every tree is known by his own fruit: for of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble-buſh gather they † grapes. 45. [g] A good man out of the good treaſure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is good: and an evil man, out of the evil treaſure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth ſpeaketh. 46. ¶ And [h] why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I ſay? 47. [i] Whoſoever cometh to me, and heareth my ſayings, and doth them, I will ſhew you to whom he is like. 48. He is like a man which built an houſe, and digged deep, and [k] laid the foundation on a rock: and when the flood aroſe, the ſtream beat vehemently upon that houſe, and could not ſhake it: for it was founded upon a rock. 49. But he that heareth and doth not, is like a man that without a foundation built an houſe upon the earth, againſt which the ſtream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell, and the ruin of that houſe was great.

v. 37—49. Theſe wiſe ſayings we have conſidered before, Mat. vii. and in other places. They give us the moſt noble directions whereon to form our judgment and conduct; happy they who obſerve them.

1. In judging we muſt ever be candid, and lean to the moſt favourable ſide; interpreting the words and actions of others with thoſe allowances which we wiſh and need for our own: and then we ſhall find the ſame candor from others which we exerciſe towards them.

2. We muſt give and forgive, ready to relieve the neceſſitous, and to paſs by the offences of our brethren: charitable and merciful, as we ourſelves expect mercy from God, and live penſioners on his bounty. And this will engage others the more readily to forgive us, and even in this life we ſhall often reap the fruits of our liberality.

3. As we deal with others, we may expect to be dealt with ourſelves. Our rigour and ſeverity to others, will provoke men to treat us with the ſame, when we fall into their power, Judg. i. 7. whilſt our known benevolence will uſually engage a like return.

4. Ignorant and blind guides, who know not the way of ſalvation themſelves, can never lead others aright; they who follow ſuch, will periſh with them. It is hardly poſſible they ſhould teach others the bitterneſs and burden of ſin who have never felt either, nor acquaint them with the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, who have not experimentally found him precious to their own ſouls.

5. Chriſt's followers may not expect kinder treatment from the world than their maſter met. The higheſt perfection of the diſciple lies in conformity to his example; and when like his Lord, he is enabled to lead a life of ſelf-denial and deadneſs to the world, then he will be prepared to ſuffer whatever for his ſake he may be called to.

6. They who ſet up for reformers of others, need firſt look well to their own ſouls: to be quick-ſighted to others faults, and blind to our own, muſt make our rebukes abſurd, and they would be juſtly retorted. When we are enabled to keep our own conſcience void of offence, then our reproofs will come commended by the weight of example, and be doubly weighty.

7. Men's actions will be good, or evil, according to their inward principles. As a tree may be known by its fruit, ſo may a man by his conduct and converſation: according to the good or evil treaſure in the heart, ſuch will be the produce. A good man, by divine grace, truly renewed in the ſpirit of his mind, brings forth the genuine fruits of righteouſneſs and true holineſs: an evil man, whoſe heart is unchanged, and under the power of native corruption, can do nothing truly pleaſing to God; his words and ways are all corrupt before God, either groſsly vicious, or he habitually forgets God; or if he pretends to ſerve him, pride and hypocriſy ſtamp his duties as an abomination.

8. It is not pompous profeſſions, but real fidelity, which makes a man a true diſciple of Jeſus. They who call him Lord, muſt give a proof of their ſincerity by their obedience: it is not merely hearing, but doing, which he requires. They who believe indeed to the ſaving of their ſouls, whoſe practice evidences their faith unfeigned, are like the wiſe builder, whoſe houſe, founded on a rock, defied the floods and ſtorm. They ſtand faſt in the hour of temptation, and are not moved away from the hope of the goſpel; they perſevere in God's holy ways, and are kept by his power unto ſalvation. But the careleſs hearer, on whoſe ſoul the word of Jeſus doth not take effect, builds his hopes of heaven on a ſandy foundation, and flatters himſelf to his ruin. The hour of temptation here often proves him an apoſtate, or at leaſt in death the hope of the hypocrite periſheth. Let us look well then to the ground on which we ſtand, that we may not too late perceive our irretrievable error.

CHAP. VII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt curing the centurion's ſervant, ver. 1—10. and raiſing one to life that was dead, the widow's ſon at Naim, ver. 11—18. 2. Chriſt's anſwer to John's queſtion, ver. 19—23. To which he adds an honourable teſtimony concerning John, and a juſt reproof to the men of that generation for the contempt they put upon him and his doctrine, ver. 24—35. 3. Chriſt comforting and pardoning a poor penitent, and juſtifying himſelf in the favour he ſhewed her, againſt the cavils of a proud Phariſee, ver. 36—50.

[a] Mat. viii. 5, &c.
[b] Prov. xxvii. 2. Ver. 4.
[c] Pſ. cvii. 20.

1. NOW when he had ended all his ſayings in the audience of the people, [a] he entred into Capernaum. 2. And a certain centurion's ſervant, who was dear unto him, was ſick, and ready to die. 3. And when he heard of Jeſus, he ſent unto him the elders of the Jews, beſeeching him that he would come and heal his ſervant. 4. And when they came to Jeſus, they beſought him inſtantly, ſaying, That he was worthy for whom he ſhould do this. 5. For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a ſynagogue. 6. Then Jeſus went with them. And when he was now not far from the houſe, the centurion ſent friends to him, ſaying, Lord, trouble not thyſelf, for [b] I am not worthy that thou ſhouldeſt enter under my roof. 7. Wherefore neither thought I myſelf worthy to come unto thee: but [c] ſay in a word, and my ſervant ſhall be healed. 8. For I alſo am a man ſet under authority, having under me ſoldiers, and I ſay unto one, Go, and he goeth: and to another, Come, and he cometh: and to my ſervant, Do this, and he doeth it. 9. When Jeſus heard theſe things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and ſaid unto the people that followed him, I ſay unto you, I have not found ſo great faith, no, not in Iſrael. 10. And they that were ſent, returning to the houſe, found the ſervant whole that had been ſick.

v. 1—10. When Jeſus had finiſhed his diſcourſe in the audience of the people, an occaſion offers, to confirm by a miracle, the truths he had been declaring. The ſame ſtory we had, Mat. viii. 5. different circumſtances are here inſerted, ſuch as the ſending of the elders of the Jews, and afterwards his friends, before the centurion came himſelf, as it ſeems probable he did at laſt; but his application by them was in fact the ſame, as if he had come in perſon at firſt.

1. Hearing the fame of Jeſus, and having faith in him, he greatly deſired his help in behalf of a ſick ſervant, whoſe fidelity and diligence had endeared him to his maſter; and ſuppoſing that he, who was a Gentile, and a Roman officer, might not ſo eaſily obtain the favour, he engaged the elders of the Jews to be advocates for him, who readily undertook to ſerve him, as being under great obligations to him. They earneſtly therefore beſought Jeſus for him, as one worthy his regard, having ever teſtified a great reſpect for the Jewiſh nation and religion, and at his own expence built them a ſynagogue for divine worſhip. Note, (1.) A ſervant truly faithful and induſtrious deſerves that eſteem he thus ſtudies to engage. (2.) It is good having an intereſt in their prayers whom the Lord Jeſus reſpects.

2. As Chriſt was in the way to the centurion's houſe, he no ſooner heard of his condeſcenſion, than in great humility he ſent other friends in his name, as unwilling to give the Lord this trouble, and counting his houſe unworthy of ſuch a gueſt, and himſelf undeſerving of his honoured preſence, which was indeed the reaſon he did not in perſon at firſt make the application. He profeſſes his faith to be ſuch in Chriſt's power, that all diſeaſes would obey his orders, more readily even than the ſoldiers the word of their commanding officer; and that he need not be preſent to perform the cure; if he ſpoke, he believed it would inſtantly be done.

3. Chriſt expreſſes his admiration and approbation of ſuch uncommon faith: even among all the Jewiſh people had never yet appeared ſo remarkable an inſtance of humble aſſured faith, as in this Gentile; therefore he puts honour upon him, and with pleaſure grants his requeſt. The diſeaſe immediately departed, and the perſons who had been ſent from the centurion's houſe, on their return found the ſervant perfectly reſtored to health. Note, True humility, and firm truſt in his power and love, above all things commend us to the Saviour's regard.

11. ¶ And it came to paſs the day after, that he went into a city called Nain: and many of his diſciples went with him, and much people. 12. Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, [d] the only ſon of his mother, and ſhe was a widow: and much people of the city was with her. 13. And when the Lord ſaw her, he had compaſſion on her, and ſaid unto her, Weep not. 14. And he came and touched the † bier (and they that bare him ſtood ſtill) and he ſaid, Young man, I ſay unto thee, [e] Ariſe. 15. And he that was dead ſat up, and began to ſpeak: and he delivered him to his mother. 16. And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, ſaying, That a great prophet is riſen up among us; and, That [f] God hath viſited his people. 17. And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about. 18. And the diſciples of John ſhewed him of all theſe things.

[d] Zech. xii. 10.
† Or coffin.
[e] Ezek. xxxvii. 4. Eph. v. 4.
[f] Chap. i. 68.

v. 11—18. Another notable miracle wrought the day after the former, is here recorded.

1. The place where it was done was in the gate of the city, in the preſence of all the multitude who followed Jeſus, and of the company who attended the funeral, ſo that there was no want of evidences to atteſt the certainty of the fact.

2. The ſubject of the miracle was the dead corpſe of a young man then carrying to his grave, the only ſon of an afflicted widow, and all the circumſtances of the caſe rendered it peculiarly affecting. (1.) He was a ſon, an only ſon, probably the ſtaff of her old age, and the ſupport and comfort of her widowhood. (2.) He was a young man, cut down in the flower of his age; a warning to every one who looked upon his bier not to promiſe themſelves continuance here, for childhood and youth are vanity. (3.) His mother was a widow; one terrible ſtroke of death had ſeparated her from the partner of her boſom. This ſon alone remained to cheer her ſolitude, the ſtaff of her age, and now he too is taken away; ſo numerous, ſo repeated, are our troubles in this vale of miſery and tears: like Job's meſſengers of evil, ſcarce the ſound of one is out of our ears, before another more grievous follows. May every pang we feel, but diſengage us from the world, and teach us to ſeek more earneſtly our reſt above; then ſhall our ſevereſt loſſes prove our trueſt gain.

3. Compaſſion moved the Saviour's boſom. He ever tenderly felt for human woe, and unaſked he brings relief. It was kind in thoſe who attended this poor diſconſolate widow, to condole with her, and endeavour to alleviate her ſorrows. They could but weep with her, Jeſus alone was able to ſay unto her, weep not; and by removing the cauſe, to wipe away the tears from her eyes. Approaching the bier whereon the corpſe lay, the bearers halted, and with a word of power, in all the majeſty of eſſential deity, he ſaid, Young man, I ſay unto thee, Ariſe; inſtantly his ſpirit returned; he that was dead ſat up on the bier where he was ſtretched out, all his ſenſes were perfectly reſtored, and he began to ſpeak; when with delight Jeſus delivered him back to his tranſported mother. Note, (1.) The bowels of Jeſus yearn over the miſerable, and in all the afflictions of his people he is afflicted. Let the mourners remember, that Jeſus compaſſionates their ſorrows; and if he doth not appear to reſtore thoſe dear pledges which are gone from our arms, he will bring us together at a reſurrection day. (2.) Power accompanies the word of Jeſus. Though dead ſinners cannot of themſelves hear or ariſe, the goſpel call is not therefore in vain; but by the Redeemer's grace is made effectual to quicken the ſoul, and raiſe it from the death of ſin unto the life of righteouſneſs. (3.) Though Jeſus might juſtly have claimed a right in him whom he had thus reſtored to life, he delivered him to his mother, intimating to us the great obligation lying on children to be dutiful to their parents, and a comfort and ſupport to them in their old age.

4. Amazement and fear ſeized on the beholders. Aſtoniſhed at this evidence of divine power, they glorified God for ſuch an eminent inſtance of his goodneſs, and more eſpecially that at laſt he had ſent the Great Prophet, the expected Meſſiah, and in mercy viſited his people, for theſe works of wonder proclaimed aloud that this was he who ſhould come. Swift the fame of Jeſus ſpread through Judea, and the country round; this amazing miracle beſpoke his character, and among the reſt John's diſciples carried the report to their maſter, now bound in priſon for his zeal and fidelity. Note, When dead ſouls are raiſed up to newneſs of life, we muſt give the glory to God of his great work: and theſe miracles, bleſſed be his name, are not yet ceaſed.

19. ¶ And John calling unto him two of his diſciples, [g] ſent them unto Jeſus, ſaying, [h] Art thou he that ſhould come, or look we for another? 20. When the men were come unto him, they ſaid, John Baptiſt hath ſent us unto thee, ſaying, Art thou he that ſhould come, or look we for another? 21. And in that ſame hour he cured many of their infirmities, and plagues, and of evil ſpirits, and unto many that were blind he gave ſight. 22. Then Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have ſeen and heard, how that [i] the blind ſee, the lame walk, the lepers are cleanſed, the deaf hear, the dead are raiſed, [k] to the poor the goſpel is preached. 23. And [l] bleſſed is he whoſoever ſhall [m] not be offended in me. 24. ¶ And [n] when the meſſengers of John were departed, he began to ſpeak unto the people concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderneſs for to ſee? [o] A reed ſhaken with the wind? 25. But what went ye out for to ſee? A man clothed in ſoft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeouſly apparelled, and live delicately, are in king's courts. 26. But what went ye out for to ſee? A prophet? Yea, I ſay unto you, and much more than a prophet. 27. This is he of whom it is written, [p] Behold, I ſend my meſſenger before thy face, which ſhall prepare thy way before thee. 28. For I ſay unto you, [q] Among thoſe that are born of women, there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptiſt: But he that is leaſt in the kingdom of God, is greater than he. 29. And all the people that heard him, and the publicans juſtified God, [r] being baptiſed with the baptiſm of John. 30. But the Phariſees and lawyers rejected [s] the counſel of God againſt themſelves, being not baptized of him. 31. ¶ And the Lord ſaid, [t] Whereunto then ſhall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like? 32. They are like unto children ſitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, and ſaying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced: we have mourned unto you, and ye have not wept. 33. For [u] John the Baptiſt came neither eating bread, nor drinking wine: and ye ſay, He hath a devil. 34. [x] The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye ſay, Behold, a gluttonous man, and a wine-bibber, a friend of publicans and ſinners. 35. But wiſdom is juſtified of all her children.

[g] Mat. xi. 2.
[h] Gen. xlix. 10. Dan. ix. 24. John vi. 14.
[i] Pſ. cxlvi. 8. Iſa. xxix. 18. & xxxv. 5, 6.
[k] Iſa. lxi. 1. or Jam. ii. 5.
[l] 1 Cor. i. 24.
[m] Chap. ii. 34. 1 Pet. ii. 8.
[n] Mat. xi. 7.
[o] Eph. iv. 14.
[p] Mal. iii. 8. Mark. i. 2.
[q] Chap. i. 15.
[r] Mat. iii. 5
[s] Acts xx. 27.
[t] Mat. xi. 16.
[u] Chap. i. 15.
[x] Mat. ix. 11.

v. 19—35. This paſſage of hiſtory was before recorded. It contains,

1. The meſſage ſent by John from his priſon, v. 19. not ſo much for his own ſatisfaction, as for the ſake of his diſciples, whoſe faith needed every confirmation, when combated by all the national prejudices ſo early imbibed. They found nothing of that grandeur and earthly greatneſs about Jeſus, which they expected in the Meſſiah.

2. The anſwer of Jeſus. His works, as well as words, ſufficiently beſpoke his real character. In the preſence of the meſſengers from John, he performed a multitude of miraculous cures, and diſpoſſeſſed many evil ſpirits: then bid them report to their maſter what they had heard and ſeen, that the blind ſee, the lame walk, the lepers are cleanſed, the dead are raiſed, evidences inconteſtible of his miſſion as the Meſſiah, and figures of the more beneficial works which he came to perform on the ſouls of men; opening the eyes of the underſtanding, ſtrengthening the impotent, curing the moſt inveterate habits of ſin, and the deſperate wickedneſs of the heart, and quickening the dead in treſpaſſes and ſin; for which end, to the poor the goſpel is preached, wherein were fulfilled the prophecies which had gone before concerning him, Iſa. lxi. 1. xxxv. 5, 6. Pſal. lxxii. 13. and leaſt, notwithſtanding, they ſhould be in danger of ſtumbling at the meanneſs of his appearance, and the enmity wherewith he was treated by the moſt reſpected characters of the Jewiſh people, the chief prieſts, ſcribes, and phariſees, he cautions them againſt being offended at theſe things; ſince he alone was happy and bleſſed, who through all this cloud of prejudice received him as the Chriſt, and believed in his word.

3. When the diſciples of John were departed, Jeſus began to give him juſt and high commendations. He was a man of unſhaken fortitude and unwavering fidelity, uniformly bearing teſtimony to Chriſt, and not plying like a reed under the contradiction of ſinners, but boldly teſtifying againſt their iniquities: dead to the delights of ſenſe and glory of the world, he affected not ſoft raiment as a courtier, but as a mortified prophet lived what he preached: greater in one ſenſe than any of the former prophets, as the immediate forerunner of the Meſſiah, and as ſeeing him appear of whom they ſpake. His ſucceſs alſo was great; multitudes who heard him, and many of the vileſt ſinners, even publicans, affected by his diſcourſes, glorified God; acknowledging their own ſins, and the juſt puniſhment due to them; and in humble penitence ſought for pardon, ſubmitting to John's baptiſm, and profeſſing thereby for the future to devote themſelves to God's ſervice. But the proud and ſelf-righteous Phariſees, puffed up with the vain conceit of their own excellence, fancied they were juſt perſons who needed no repentance; therefore in general they rejected his preaching, and refuſed to ſubmit to his baptiſm, thereby ſealing themſelves up under wrath; and the caſe is much the ſame to this day. Thoſe who are converted by the miniſtry of the word, are chiefly of the common people, and many whom the ſelf-righteous deſpiſe as vile and abandoned; whilſt the rulers pay little regard to the goſpel-word, the wiſe men of this world diſregard it as fooliſhneſs, and the perſons of moſt admired goodneſs cannot bear to be ſet on a level with the chief of ſinners, cannot ſtoop to receive the grace of Jeſus freely, and thus periſh in their pride.

4. Chriſt upbraids the perverſeneſs of the men of that generation. No ſimilitude could ſufficiently deſcribe their wilfulneſs and obſtinacy; like froward and ſurly children, they neither would join their companions when in their play they imitated a feaſt or a funeral. Thus the auſterities of John, his life of ſelf-denial, and doctrine of repentance diſguſted them, and they reproached him as melancholy, or a demoniac. The Son of man, on the other hand, more familiarly aſſociated with others, refuſed not an invitation to a wedding, or a feaſt, and they reviled him as a glutton, a drunkard, and a looſe companion. But wiſdom is juſtified of all her children; thoſe who are truly made wiſe unto ſalvation, juſtify God in thoſe methods he uſes for their converſion, and approve and honour the Lord Jeſus, who is the wiſdom of God in all his works and ways. Note, (1.) They who reſolve to cavil, will never want a handle. (2.) Different men and miniſters have different tempers and manners; ſome are naturally more auſtere and reſerved, others more free and open; ſome more powerfully urge the thunders of Sinai upon the ſinner's conſcience, others dwell upon the ſofter accents of goſpel-grace. And this diverſity of diſpenſations in which men are led is beautiful, though malice will find alike matter of objection againſt both. (3.) We muſt take care not to judge of others by ourſelves; not branding on the one hand the reſerved, as moroſe; nor, on the other, charging innocent freedom as licentiouſneſs; but ever put the moſt candid conſtructions on men's tempers and manners.

36. ¶ And one of the Phariſees deſired him that he would eat with him. And [y] he went into the Phariſee's houſe, and ſat down to meat. 37. And behold, a woman in the city, which was a ſinner, when ſhe knew that Jeſus ſat at meat in the Phariſee's houſe, brought an alabaſter-box of ointment, 38. And ſtood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to waſh his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kiſſed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment. 39. Now when the Phariſee which had bidden him, ſaw it, he ſpake within himſelf, ſaying, [z] This man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him: for ſhe is a ſinner. 40. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid unto him, Simon, I have ſomewhat to ſay unto thee. And he ſaith, Maſter, ſay on. 41. There was a certain creditor which had two [a] debtors: the one owed five hundred [b] pence, and the other fifty. 42. And when [c] they had nothing to pay, he [d] frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him moſt? 43. Simon anſwered and ſaid, I ſuppoſe that [e] he to whom he forgave moſt. And he ſaid unto him, Thou haſt rightly judged. 44. And he turned to the woman, and ſaid unto Simon, Seeſt thou this woman? I entred into thine houſe, thou gaveſt me no water for my feet: but ſhe hath waſhed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head. 45. Thou gaveſt me no kiſs: but this woman, ſince the time I came in, hath not ceaſed to kiſs my feet. 46. Mine head with oil thou didſt not anoint: but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment. 47. Wherefore I ſay unto thee, [f] Her ſins, which are many, are forgiven; † for ſhe loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the ſame loveth little. 48. And he ſaid unto her, Thy ſins are forgiven. 49. And they that ſat at meat with him, began to ſay within themſelves, [g] Who is this that forgiveth ſins alſo? 50. And he ſaid to the woman, [h] Thy faith hath ſaved thee; go in peace.

[y] Mat. xxvi. 6. Mark xiv. 3. John xi. 2.
[z] Chap. xv. 2.
[a] Mat. vi. 19. Ver. 48.
[b] Mat. xviii. 28.
[c] Pſ. xlix. 7, 8.
[d] Rom. iii. 24.
[e] Ver. 47.
[f] 1 Tim. i. 14, 15.
† Or therefore.
[g] Mark ii. 7.
[h] Mat. ix. 22. Mark v. 34. & x. 52. Chap. viii. 48. & xviii. 42.

v. 36—50. Our Lord behaved himſelf courteous to all, and though the Phariſees had ſhewn themſelves his bitter enemies, he refuſed not the invitation of one of them, and readily went to eat at his houſe. And we are told,

1. A ſingular circumſtance which happen'd on that occaſion. A woman, whoſe character had been notoriouſly infamous, but by the preaching and grace of the Redeemer was become a real penitent, and true believer; came in, urged by her deep affection for her Lord, and ſtanding behind him as he lay along (which was their cuſtom at meals) with penitential tears ſhe bedewed his feet, wiped them with her once braided, but now diſheveled hair, and kiſſing them in humble adoration, anointed them, as a token of her high reſpect, with precious ointment from an alabaſter box. Note, (1.) They who truly draw near to Jeſus, cannot but feel their hearts bleed, and their eyes overflow, in the remembrance of paſt ingratitude. (2.) A ſoul that loves the Lord Jeſus, counts nothing too good to employ in his ſervice. (3.) When the eyes, full of adultery, become fountains of tears, and all the ornaments of pride, the lure of luſt, are laid aſide, theſe are bleſſed ſymptoms of a happy change.

2. The Phariſee was highly offended at Chriſt for ſuffering ſuch a woman to approach him, and thought within himſelf, if Jeſus were the prophet he pretended to be, he muſt have known, and ſpurned from his feet a creature ſo infamous. Thus whilſt perſons of a proud and ſelf-righteous ſpirit are looking with contempt on a poor harlot, and ſaying, Stand by thyſelf, come not near me, I am holier than thou, they are not aware that this high conceit of themſelves, and deſpiſing others, is in God's ſight an abomination far greater, even than thoſe outward evils which they condemn in others.

3. Chriſt juſtifies the woman from Simon's cenſures. The Phariſee queſtioned Chriſt's prophetical character; therefore the Lord, by anſwering his thoughts, will give him an evidence of it, and draw the poor woman's vindication from his own lips: and this he doth by an appoſite parable; having informed Simon he had ſomething of importance to ſay to him, to which he profeſſes himſelf all attention.

(1.) The parable reſpected two debtors, the one of whom owed ten times more than the other; but being both inſolvent, the creditor freely forgave them. Chriſt hereupon appeals to Simon for an anſwer, which of the two will love their gracious benefactor moſt?' The reply was evident, he to whom moſt was forgiven. The debt is ſin, and ſinners are deep in arrear to God; they have never paid him the obedience they owe, and are become liable to the arreſts of judgment. All are guilty; but ſome are more notorious offenders, and have ſinned with greater aggravations than others; yet the leaſt tranſgreſſor is an inſolvent debtor, he can never make God a compenſation for the leaſt of his iniquities, and muſt periſh eternally with the vileſt, unleſs he is convinced of his ſinfulneſs, and flies to the free grace of God in Jeſus Chriſt. In him there is plenteous redemption, the chief of ſinners are ſure of finding pardon thro' the ranſom he hath paid, and none who come to him ſhall be in any wiſe caſt out. A ſenſe of this abounding grace will not fail to engage the believing ſinner's heart; and in proportion to the diſcovery he hath of his own guilt, ſhould his gratitude be for the rich mercy vouchſafed to him. The chief of ſinners are bound to become the chief of ſaints; to love much, becauſe the Lord hath forgiven them much.

(2.) Chriſt applies the parable to the caſe before him. This woman was the debtor who owed the five hundred pence, and ſhe had been forgiven; no marvel, therefore, her expreſſions of gratitude were ſingular; for which, ſo far from being condemned, ſhe rather deſerved to be commended. All ſhe had done flowed from this ſource, and herein ſhe had exceeded Simon in her returns of love, as much as ſhe had done in the offenſiveneſs and notoriety of her tranſgreſſion. (1.) Inſtead of the water, which he had neglected to bring, ſhe had, with penitential tears, bedewed his feet, and wiped them with her hair. (2.) The kiſs of peace and ſalutation Simon had not given to his ſacred gueſt, but this poor ſinner had not ceaſed to expreſs her humble gratitude and love, by repeatedly kiſſing even his feet. (3.) The common civility of oil to anoint his head the Phariſee had with-held, but ſhe had poured this coſtly ointment on his feet, the expreſſion of her faith in him as the Meſſiah, and of that unfeigned regard which made her account the greateſt coſt well employed in his ſervice: therefore he ſeals afreſh the pardon which he had beſtowed upon her, on account of which ſhe loved him ſo greatly. Whilſt ſuch as Simon, who were leſs acquainted with their own guilt and ſinfulneſs, and did not ſee their great need of a pardon, would feel themſelves leſs obliged to the Saviour's grace, and teſtify, as Simon had done, leſs regard for him.

(3.) He particularly addreſſes himſelf to the poor woman, to ſilence her fears, and encourage her under the Phariſee's frowns. He repeats his aſſurances, Thy ſins are forgiven thee; and though he knew the murmurs this raiſed, and the offence it gave among the phariſaical tribe who were at the table, as if his arrogating ſuch a power was impious, nay, blaſphemous, he, ſo far from receding, confirms her ſalvation; to which, through faith in him, ſhe was now aſſuredly entitled, and therefore he bids her go in peace; every fear of guilt removed, her conſcience at eaſe, regardleſs of the reproaches of the proud, and waiting confidently for the eternal reſt that remaineth for the people of God. Note, (1.) As nothing renders us ſo fearful as the conſciouſneſs of guilt, we need promiſe upon promiſe to encourage our truſt and hope. (2.) Faith alone can pacify the conſcience, and produce that genuine love and evangelical ſorrow, which worketh repentance unto ſalvation never to be repented of.

C H A P. VIII.

Here is, 1. Chriſt's preaching, and ſubſiſtence by the charitable contributions of good people, ver. 1—3. 2. The parable of the ſower, ver. 4—18. 3. The preference which Chriſt gave to his obedient diſciples, before his neareſt relations acording to the fleſh, ver. 19—21. 4. His ſtilling a ſtorm at ſea with a word's ſpeaking, ver. 22—25. 5. His caſting a legion of devils out of a man that was poſſeſſed by them, ver. 26—40. 6. His healing the woman that had the bloody iſſue, and raiſing Jairus's daughter to life, ver. 41—56.

1. AND it came to paſs afterward, that he went throughout every city and village preaching, and ſhewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God: and the twelve were with him; 2. And [a] certain women which had been healed of evil ſpirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, [b] out of whom went ſeven devils, 3. And Joanna the wife of Chuza, Herod's ſteward, and Suſanna, and many others, which miniſtred unto him of their ſubſtance.

[a] Mat. xxvii. 55, 56.
[b] Mark xvi. 9.

v. 1—3. With unwearied labours the divine Redeemer went about doing good.

1. He viſited round all the cities and villages in Galilee, preached the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, and opened the nature, bleſſings, and privileges of that goſpel-church which he came to erect. His twelve apoſtles attended him to be witneſſes of his miracles, and to learn from his lips the doctrines they were afterwards appointed to preach.

2. His ſupport aroſe from the contributions of ſome pious women who followed him, who had experienced his healing grace both in their bodies and their ſouls. Among many others, three are particularly mentioned; Mary Magdalene, out of whom Jeſus had caſt ſeven devils; Joanna, the wife, perhaps now the widow, of Chuza, Herod's ſteward, probably a perſon of conſiderable rank and fortune; and Suſanna. Theſe, with many others, furniſhed him with a ſubſiſtence; and he, in great humility, condeſcended to be thus ſupported, rather than by exerting his own miraculous power. Note, (1.) Chriſt lived upon alms, to teach us never to deſpiſe the poor; not, if we are reduced, proudly to ſcorn being obliged to others for a maintenance. (2.) They who love the goſpel, cannot but delight to contribute liberally for the ſupport of it. (3.) If we have been truly healed by the grace of Jeſus, we ſhall commence thenceforward his inſeparable followers in all holy converſation and godlineſs.

4. ¶ And [c] when much people were gathered together, and were come to him out of every city, he ſpake by a parable: 5. A ſower went out to ſow his ſeed: and as he ſowed, ſome fell by the way-ſide, and it was troden down, and the fowls of the air devoured it. 6. And ſome fell upon a rock, and as ſoon as it was ſprung up, it withered away, becauſe it lacked moiſture. 7. And ſome fell among thorns, and the thorns ſprang up with it, and choked it. 8. And other fell on good ground, and ſprang up, and [d] bare fruit an hundred-fold. And when he had ſaid theſe things, he cried, [e] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. 9. And his diſciples aſked him, ſaying, What might this parable be? 10. And he ſaid, [f] Unto you it is given to know the myſteries of the kingdom of God: but to others in parables; [g] that ſeeing they might not ſee, and hearing they might not underſtand. 11. [h] Now the parable is this: The ſeed is the word of God. 12. Thoſe by the way-ſide, are they that hear: then cometh the devil, and taketh away the word out of their hearts, leſt they ſhould believe and be ſaved. 13. They on the rock, are they, which when they hear, [i] receive the word with joy; and theſe have no root, [k] which for a while believe, and in time of temptation fall away. 14. And that which fell [l] among thorns, are they, which when they have heard, go forth, and [m] are choked with cares, and riches, and pleaſures of this life, and bring no fruit to perfection. 15. But that on the good ground, are they which in an honeſt and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and [n] bring forth fruit [o] with patience. 16. ¶ No man [p] when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a veſſel, or putteth it under a bed: but ſetteth it on a candleſtick, that they which enter in may ſee the light. 17. For [q] nothing is ſecret, that ſhall not be made manifeſt: neither any thing hid, that ſhall not be known, and come abroad. 18. Take heed therefore how ye hear: [r] for whoſoever hath, to him ſhall be given; and whoſoever hath not, from him ſhall be taken even that which he ſeemeth to have. 19. ¶ [s] Then came to him his mother and his brethren, and could not come at him for the preſs. 20. And it was told him by certain, which ſaid, Thy mother and thy brethren ſtand without, deſiring to ſee thee. 21. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, [t] My mother and my brethren are theſe which hear the word of God, and do it.

[c] Mat. xiii. 2. Mark iv. 1.
[d] John xv. 5. Col. i. 5.
[e] Mat. xi. 15.
[f] Mat. xi. 25. & xvi. 17. 1 Cor. ii. 10. 1 John ii. 27.
[g] Iſa. vi. 9. John ii. 40.
[h] Mat. xiii. 18. Mark iv. 14.
[i] Iſa. lviii. 2. Ezek. xxxiii. 31. Mark vi. 20. John v. 35.
[k] Hoſ. vi. 4.
[l] Jer. iv. 3.
[m] Mat. xix. 23. 1 Tim. vi. 9. 2 Tim. iv. 10.
[n] John xv. 8.
[o] Heb. x. 36.
[p] Mat. v. 15. Mark iv. 21. Chap. xi. 33.
[q] Job xii. 22. Mat. x. 26. Chap. xii. 2.
[r] Mat. xiii. 12. & xxv. 29. John xv. 2. 1 Cor. x. 12.
[s] Mat. xii. 46. Mark iii. 31.
[t] John xv. 14.

v. 4—21. Great multitudes being collected together from all the neighbouring cities and villages, he took occaſion to repreſent the nature of the goſpel-diſpenſation by the parable of the ſower, which we had, Mat. xiii. 3. the explication of which, he vouchſafes to give to his inquiſitive diſciples in private; it being their peculiar mercy, that what was left myſterious to others, ſhould be explained to them. And a ſingular favour is this, if whilſt others are left in darkneſs, we are brought into the marvellous light of goſpel-truth.

1. Concerning the parable, we may obſerve, (1.) How vigilant is our adverſary the devil, in every place where the word of God is diſpenſed, to harden the heart againſt receiving it, leaſt we ſhould believe and be ſaved; and this he doth, by diſtracting the attention, by ſuggeſting ſome vain or worldly thoughts immediately after we have heard God's word preached, by inſtilling prejudices againſt the ſower, or doubts about the ſcripture itſelf; and thus preventing the admiſſion or abidance of the truth in the minds of the hearers: the conſequence of which is, that men neglect and diſpiſe the great ſalvation of God. (2.) Among the multitudes who appear from time to time to be affected with the goſpel, and make ſome profeſſion, the greater number fall ſhort of the kingdom; diſcouraged by the frowns, or ſeduced by the ſmiles of this preſent evil world, they grow cold and careleſs; the love of pleaſure and eaſe, anxious cares, or inordinate love of riches, deſtroy and choak the word; and they either openly apoſtatize, or in their hearts, at leaſt, depart from the living God. Hence, out of many who are called, few are choſen. (3.) There is a remnant, according to the election of grace, to whom the ſeed of the goſpel-word becomes the power of God unto ſalvation. They ſeriouſly hear, ſedately weigh, and faithfully embrace the truth, as it is in Jeſus: their hearts, by divine grace, are made honeſt and ſincere; and patiently perſevering in well-doing, they hold the beginning of their confidence ſtedfaſt unto the end; not ſeduced by any enticements, nor deterred by any perſecutions, which for the word's ſake may ariſe. Thus their fruit abides and abounds, and they ſtand ready for the harveſt of eternal glory.

2. By another parable of a lighted candle, Chriſt teaches his diſciples, and others, what was expected from them, even to ſhine as lights in the world, holding forth the word of life. This being the great deſign of all the private inſtructions he gave them, that they ſhould afterwards plainly and fully declare to the world, the great truths couched under theſe ſimilitudes. As therefore they muſt give a ſolemn account for the particular advantages they enjoyed, they muſt take heed how they hear, when ſo much was hereby entruſted to them, and expected from them; which, if they improved, farther aſſiſtances of ſpiritual light, and greater gifts ſhould be given them: but if they neglected to profit by theſe means of wiſdom and grace vouchſafed to them, the conſequence would be, that the gifts and knowledge which they ſeemed to have, would decay, and be taken from them, and darkneſs and error ſucceed.

3. Chriſt acknowledges thoſe who truly hear the word of God, and do it, as his neareſt and deareſt relations. His mother and his brethren deſired to ſee and ſpeak with him; but unable to approach him, becauſe of the crowd, ſome of thoſe who ſtood around him, informed him of their requeſt; but he was otherwiſe engaged in his Father's work, and took occaſion hence to encourage thoſe who were his diligent attendants, aſſuring them they ſhared his regards above the neareſt relatives after the fleſh.

22. ¶ [u] Now it came to paſs on a certain day, that he went into a ſhip with his diſciples: and he ſaid unto them, Let us go over unto the other ſide of the lake. And they launched forth. 23. But as they ſailed, [x] he fell aſleep: and there came down [y] a ſtorm of wind on the lake, and they were filled with water, and were in jeopardy. 24. And they came to him, and awoke him, ſaying, Maſter, maſter, we periſh. Then he aroſe, and [z] rebuked the wind, and the raging of the water: and they ceaſed, and there was a calm. 25. And he ſaid unto them, Where is your faith? And they being afraid, wondred, ſaying one to another, What manner of man is this? for [a] he commandeth even the winds and water, and they obey him. 26. ¶ And [b] they arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, which is over againſt Galilee. 27. And when he went forth to land, there met him out of the city a certain man which had devils long time, and ware no clothes, neither abode in any houſe, but in the tombs. 28. When he ſaw Jeſus, he cried out, and fell down before him, and with a loud voice ſaid, What have I to do with thee, Jeſus, thou Son of God moſt high? I beſeech thee [c] torment me not. 29. (For he had commanded the unclean ſpirit to come out of the man. For oftentimes it had caught him: and he was kept bound with chains, and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was driven of the devil into the wilderneſs). 30. And Jeſus aſked him, ſaying, What is thy name? And he ſaid, Legion: becauſe many devils were entred into him. 31. And they beſought him that he would not command them to go out into [d] the deep. 32. And there was there an herd of many ſwine feeding on the mountain: and they beſought him that he would ſuffer them to enter into them. And he ſuffered them. 33. Then went the devils out of the man, and entred into the ſwine; and the herd ran violently down a ſteep place into the lake, and were choked. 34. When they that fed them ſaw what was done, they fled, and went and told it in the city and in the country. 35. Then went they out to ſee what was done; and came to Jeſus, and found the man out of whom the devils were departed, ſitting at the feet of Jeſus, clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid. 36. They alſo which ſaw it, told them by what means he that was poſſeſſed of the devils was healed. 37. ¶ Then the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about, [e] beſought him to depart from them; for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ſhip, and returned back again. 38. Now [f] the man out of whom the devils were departed, beſought him that he might be with him: but Jeſus ſent him away, ſaying, 39. ¶ Return to thine own houſe, and ſhew how great things God hath done unto thee. And he went his way, and publiſhed throughout the whole city, how great things Jeſus had done unto him.

[u] Mat. viii. 23. Mark iv. 35.
[x] Pſ. x. 1. Iſa. xlv. 15.
[y] Iſa. liv. 11.
[z] Pſ. cii. 13.
[a] Pſ. lxv. 7. & lxxxix. 9. & cvii. 25, 29.
[b] Mat. viii. 28. Mark v. 1.
[c] 2 Pet. ii. 4. Jude 6.
[d] Rev. xx. 3.
[e] Deut. v. 25. Chap. v. 8. Acts xvi. 39.
[f] Mark v. 18.

v. 22—39. We had before an account of theſe two illuſtrious miracles, Mat. viii. We ſee,

1. Chriſt's wonders in the deep. He, at whoſe word the ſtormy waves ariſe, can in a moment alſo reſtrain their rage, and ſilence their roaring. Chriſt ſent his diſciples by ſea, on purpoſe to give them this freſh evidence of his omnipotence. They embarked at his word, and little expected danger; but oftentimes, when we are lulled into ſecurity, our peril is moſt imminent: they had him with them however, and therefore need not fear: but he was aſleep; for ſo regardleſs he ſometimes appears towards his people in their diſtreſs; and their danger ſtaggered their faith, and filled their hearts with fears, as their boat was filled with water. The ſtrongeſt believers are ſometimes ſhaken; prayer was now their recourſe; to Chriſt they fly, and awaken him with their cries. He ſlept with this deſign, to quicken their deſires after him, to affect them with a deeper ſenſe of their want of him, and teſtify towards them more abundantly his power and his love. When we feel ourſelves undone and periſhing, then is Chriſt truly precious to us; none ever periſhed who thus fled to him. He aroſe, and with a word ſtilled the raging ſea, and quieted their fears. He delights to ſpeak peace to the troubled conſcience, and they who wait on him ſhall not be aſhamed of their confidence. Their only ſhame will ariſe from their diſhonourable diſtruſts of him; for theſe he juſtly reproves them, Where is your faith? Faith they had in habit, but not in exerciſe; their jeopardy for a moment ſuppreſſed its vigorous actings; their ſudden deliverance amazed them; and filled with reverential fear at ſuch a diſplay of divine power, they could not but conclude he muſt be more than man, whom winds and waves obeyed.

2. Chriſt's dominion over the powers of darkneſs; raging devils can no more reſiſt his power, than raging winds: and this is an unſpeakable comfort to all God's people, that Satan is a vanquiſhed foe, and cannot harm, even a ſwine, without permiſſion. A legion here poſſeſſed one man; how numberleſs then theſe malignant ſpirits; how unequal a match muſt we be for them, if left to ourſelves! No chains could hold this poor demoniac; in cold and nakedneſs, without clothes or covering, he was driven to the tombs: ſo ungovernable are we when under the influence of Satanical tempers, a terror to others, a burden to ourſelves. At the feet of Jeſus he fell, whilſt the foul ſpirit within cried out in terror, dreading to be diſpoſſeſſed, and ſent to the abyſs, the place of torment. A ſlaviſh fear of hell ſometimes drives men thus to their knees: they dread the puniſhment, but do not loath their ſins; they cry for releaſe from their pains, not for deliverance from their corruptions. When the devil is compelled to quit his hold of the man, he fain would be doing miſchief, if but among the ſwine; and in correction to ſome, and as a warning to others, Chriſt permits this viſitation on their property. But when they heard from the affrighted keepers the loſs they had ſuſtained, they deſired him to depart out of their coaſt, dreading the conſequences of his ſtay; and he departed. The viſitations which ſhould humble, often ſerve but to harden the ſouls of ſinners: inſtead of coming to Chriſt, they would get as far from him as poſſible. The poor man, however, who was now reſtored to his right mind, and ſitting at Jeſus's feet, would fain have followed him; but he is ſent back to proclaim the mercy he hath experienced. When by divine grace a right mind is reſtored to us, and the power of ſin and Satan is broken, we are called upon to acknowledge the mercy to the praiſe of Jeſus, and to tell what great things he hath done for our ſouls, inviting others to come and taſte how gracious the Lord is.

40. And it came to paſs, that when Jeſus was returned, the people gladly received him: for they were all waiting for him. 41. ¶ [g] And behold, there came a man named Jairus, and he was a ruler of the ſynagogue: and he fell down at Jeſus feet, and beſought him that he would come into his houſe: 42. For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and ſhe lay [h] a dying: But as he went, the people thronged him. 43. ¶ And a woman [i] having an iſſue of blood twelve years, which had ſpent all her living upon phyſicians, neither could be healed of any, 44. Came behind him, and touched the border of his garment: and immediately her iſſue of blood ſtanched. 45. And [k] Jeſus ſaid, Who touched me? When all denied, Peter, and they that were with him, ſaid, Maſter, the multitude throng thee, and preſs thee, and ſayeſt thou, Who touched me? 46. And Jeſus ſaid, Some body hath touched me: for I perceive that virtue is gone out of me. 47. And when the woman ſaw that ſhe was not hid, ſhe came trembling, and falling down before him, ſhe declared unto him before all the people, for what cauſe ſhe had touched him, and how ſhe was healed immediately. 48. And he ſaid unto her, Daughter, be of good comfort: [l] thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace. 49. ¶ While he yet ſpake, there cometh one from the ruler of the ſynagoge's houſe, ſaying to him, Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Maſter. 50. But when Jeſus heard it, he anſwered him, ſaying, Fear not: [m] believe only, and ſhe ſhall be made whole. 51. And when he came into the houſe, he ſuffered no man to go in, ſave Peter, and James, and John, and the father and the mother of the maiden. 52. And all wept, and bewailed her: but he ſaid, Weep not; ſhe is not dead, but [n] ſleepeth. 53. And they laughed him to ſcorn, knowing that ſhe was dead. 54. And [o] he put them all out, and took her by the hand, and called, ſaying, Maid, ariſe. 55. And her ſpirit came again, and ſhe aroſe ſtraightway: and he commanded to give her meat. 56. And her parents were aſtoniſhed: [p] but he charged them that they ſhould tell no man what was done.

[g] Mat. ix. 18. Mark v. 22.
[h] Mat. ix. 18.
[i] Lev. xv. 25.
[k] Mark v. 30.
[l] Chap. vii 50. & xvii. 19. & xviii. 42.
[m] John xi. 25.
[n] John xi. 11.
[o] Acts ix. 40.
[p] Mat. viii. 4. & ix. 30. Chap. v. 14.

v. 40—56. Though the Gadarenes were glad to get rid of Jeſus, the men of Galilee with open arms received him, eagerly waiting for his return. If in one place the goſpel be deſpiſed and expelled, another door of utterance ſhall be opened, and ſome will be glad to welcome the ejected miniſters of Chriſt.

No ſooner was Jeſus arrived, than we find an application made to him by a ruler, in behalf of his daughter at the point of death; and whilſt he goes to perform one miracle, by the way he works another.

1. A poor diſeaſed woman, who was aſhamed to make a public application to him, perſuaded that a touch of his garment would effect that which all her phyſicians had attempted in vain, came in ſecret among the crowd; and touching his garment, found, according to her faith, a perfect cure. But it was neither poſſible nor proper that it ſhould be hid: for the glory of Jeſus, and the comfort of her own ſoul, ſhe is called upon to make an acknowledgment of the mercy. Perſuaded, that he who felt virtue go out of him, and wrought the cure, could not be at a loſs to find out the patient, no ſooner did ſhe hear his enquiries, than ſhe fell trembling at his feet, acknowledged her boldneſs, and owned the bleſſing ſhe had received. Far from being diſpleaſed, he who healed her body, now comforts her ſoul; and commending her faith, diſmiſſes her in peace. Note, (1.) There is that fulneſs of grace in Chriſt, that whoever comes to him, ſhall be holpen. (2.) We cannot be hid from the eye of Jeſus, and a gracious ſoul deſires it not; he would tell him of all his wretchedneſs, and pour out his heart in ſimplicity before him. (3.) Chriſt delights to raiſe up the trembling ſinner, and ſpeaks comfort to his poor in ſpirit: ſuch need not fear, the language of Jeſus to them ſhall be the voice of peace and love.

2. The ruler's daughter had now cloſed her eyes in death, and therefore his friends imagined it uſeleſs to trouble Jeſus farther. In leſſer trials many thus pretend to truſt him, who, in greater, are ready to deſpair; but he, who by a word can heal the diſeaſed, can by the ſame power raiſe the dead; he encourages, therefore, the ruler's faith; not only whilſt there is life there is hope, but even in death the caſe is not deſperate; when he, who is the reſurrection and the life, is the phyſician. With three of his diſciples, and the parents of the child, he went into the room where ſhe lay, ſending forth thoſe as unworthy to be ſpectators of his power, who, when he would dry up their tears with good words and comfortable, laughed at his ſaying that ſhe only ſlept, becauſe they knew ſhe was dead; but knew not that to him it was as eaſy to call her from the arms of death, as to awaken her from ſleep. The bed of death is the place of repoſe for thoſe who fall aſleep in Jeſus; there they ſweetly reſt, till they are awakened in the reſurrection morn to riſe in that eternal day, when ſleep and death will be no more. At his word the damſel aroſe; his hand of grace, his word of power, communicated life, and brought back the ſpirit which had fled: in perfect health her aſtoniſhed parents beheld her reſtored to their longing arms. He commanded them hereupon to give her ſome food, and charged them to conceal the miracle; he wanted not men to ſpread his fame, his works were ſufficient heralds. By the effectual word of Jeſus is the ſinner, dead in treſpaſſes, thus quickened to ſpiritual life; and when the union between the body and ſoul is diſſolved, he takes care of both in their ſtate of ſeparation, and will bring the ſpirit again in the reſurrection-day, and prepare for it a body glorified like his own.

CHAP. IX.

In this chapter we have, 1. The commiſſion Chriſt gave his twelve apoſtles to preach the goſpel, and confirm it by miracles, ver. 1—6. 2. Herod's terror at the growing greatneſs of our Lord Jeſus, ver. 7—9. 3. The apoſtles return to Chriſt, his retirement with them into a place of ſolitude; the great reſort of people to them notwithſtanding, and his feeding five thouſand men with five loaves and two fiſhes, ver. 10—17. 4. His diſcourſe with his diſciples concerning himſelf, and his own ſufferings for them, and theirs for him, ver. 18—27. 5. Chriſt's transfiguration, ver. 28—36. 6. The cure of a lunatick child, ver. 37—42. 7. The repeated notice Chriſt gave his diſciples of his approaching ſufferings, ver. 43—45. 8. His check to the ambition of his diſciples, ver. 46—48. and to their monopolizing of the power over devils to themſelves, ver. 49, 50. 9. The rebuke he gave them for their reſentment of an affront given him by a village of the Samaritans, ver. 51—56. 10. The anſwers he gave to ſeveral that were inclined to follow him, but not conſiderately, or not zealouſly and heartily ſo inclined, ver. 57—62.

1. [a] THEN he called his twelve diſciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diſeaſes. 2. And he ſent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the ſick. 3. And he ſaid unto them, [b] Take nothing for your journey, neither ſtaves, nor ſcrip, neither bread, neither money; neither have two coats apiece. 4. And [c] whatſoever houſe ye enter into, there abide, and thence depart. 5. And whoſoever will not receive you, when ye go out of that city, [d] ſhake off the very duſt from your feet for a teſtimony againſt them. 6. And they departed and went through the towns, preaching the goſpel, and [e] healing every where. 7. ¶ [f] Now Herod the tetrarch heard of all that was done by him: and he was [g] perplexed, becauſe that it was ſaid of ſome, that John was riſen from the dead: 8. And of ſome, that [h] Elias had appeared: and of others, that one of the old prophets was riſen again. 9. And Herod ſaid, John have I beheaded: but who is this of whom I hear ſuch things? And he deſired to ſee him.

[a] Mat. x. 1. Mark vi. 7.

[b] Chap. x. 4.

[c] Chap. x. 5, 6.

[d] Acts xiii. 51. & xviii. 6.

[e] Ver. 1.

[f] Mat. xiv. 1. Mark vi. 14.

[g] Pſ. xiv. 5.

[h] Mat. xvi. 14.

v. 1—9. Our Lord having called his twelve apoſtles to cloſer attendance upon himſelf, that they might be qualified for the work in which he deſigned to employ them, now ſends them forth in his name, and inveſts them with miraculous powers, as a proof of their divine miſſion.

1. He directs them what to ſay and do. The ſubject of their preaching muſt be the goſpel of the kingdom; and by their beneficent acts of healing men's bodies, they would not only confirm, but recommend alſo their doctrine to men's ſouls.

2. He directs them how to go on this errand. They muſt make no preparation for the journey; but in their fiſher's garments, without change of raiment, without money, or proviſion, they muſt go forth, truſting entirely on divine providence for the ſupply of all their wants; taking up their quarters with the firſt family who ſhould receive them, and abiding in the ſame houſe during their ſtay, to avoid all appearance of fickleneſs or nicety. But if any refuſed them a welcome entertainment, leaving that city to its fate, they need only ſhake off the duſt of their feet, and that ſhould ſtand as an eternal teſtimony againſt them for rejecting the goſpel, and enſure their deſtruction.

3. They immediately obeyed, and executed their commiſſion; for every gracious ſoul delights to be employed for Chriſt, and runs at his command.

4. Herod the tetrarch was exceedingly perplexed and terrified at the reports, which on this occaſion reached his ears. The country rang with the miracles performed by Jeſus and his apoſtles, and people offered various conjectures concerning this great perſonage; who not only wrought ſuch wonders himſelf, but was able to communicate this extraordinary power to others. Some ſaid it was John revived; others that Elias was come, the expected forerunner of the Meſſiah; others, that one of the old prophets was riſen again. Herod's guilty conſcience ſmote him, juſtly fearing that the murdered Baptiſt was indeed riſen, or ſome more mighty inſtrument of God to avenge his quarrel, and he deſired to ſee him.

10. ¶ And the apoſtles when they were returned, told him all that they had done. [i] And he took them, and went aſide privately into a deſert place, belonging to the city called Bethſaida. 11. And the people when they knew it, followed him: and he received them, and ſpake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed them that had need of healing. 12. [k] And when the day began to wear away, then came the twelve and ſaid unto him, Send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, and get victuals: for we are here in a deſert place. 13. But he ſaid unto them, Give ye them to eat. And they ſaid, We have no more but five loaves and two fiſhes; [l] except we ſhould go and buy meat for all this people. 14. For they were about five thouſand men. And he ſaid to his diſciples, Make them ſit down by fifties in a company. 15. And they did ſo, and made them all ſit down. 16. Then he took the five loaves, and the two fiſhes, and looking up to heaven, [m] he bleſſed them, and brake, and gave to the diſciples [n] to ſet before the multitude. 17. And they did eat, and were all filled: and there was taken up of fragments that remained to them, twelve baſkets.

[i] Mat. xiv. 13. Mark vi. 31.

[k] John vi. 5.

[l] Num. xi. 22. 2 Kings iv. 43.

[m] Mat. xv. 36. & xxvi. 26. Rom. xiv. 6.

[n] Mat. xxiv. 45.

v. 10—17. When they had finiſhed their work, they returned to give their maſter an account. He is the chief ſhepherd to whom we are all reſponſible. The remembrance that we muſt appear before him ſhortly to anſwer for our miniſtry, ſhould quicken our diligence. Chriſt took them for a while into a retirement: he is a good maſter, and deſires not to weary out his ſervants: reſt after labour is needful. But the people, eager to hear and be healed, broke in upon their retirement; and Jeſus, unwearied in labours of love, preached to them, as uſual, the goſpel of the kingdom, and healed their diſeaſes. He is ſo gracious, that none who come to him with their complaints, ſhall be in any wiſe caſt out. Yea, he not only feeds their ſouls with heavenly manna, but their bodies with miraculous food: five thouſand men, beſides women and children, are made to feaſt on five loaves and two ſmall fiſhes. This miracle is recorded by all the evangeliſts, and affords us ſtill food for our faith. (1.) In times of want and diſtreſs, our care muſt be caſt on the Lord; he feedeth the hungry. (2.) If we have but little, yet let us not fear to divide our morſel with the poor; like the widow's cruſe, it ſhall not be diminiſhed hereby. (3.) When we look up to heaven for a bleſſing from God, though we by our ſins have forfeited all title to our creature-comforts, in Chriſt Jeſus they will be reſtored to us; and then when we eat and drink, it will be to the glory of God.

18. ¶ [o] And it came to paſs as he was alone praying, his diſciples were with him: and he aſked them, ſaying, Whom ſay the people that I am? 19. They anſwering, ſaid, John the Baptiſt: but ſome ſay, Elias: and others ſay, that one of the old prophets is riſen again. 20. He ſaid unto them, But whom ſay ye that I am? Peter anſwering, ſaid, [p] The Chriſt of God. 21. And [q] he ſtraitly charged them, and commanded them to tell no man that thing, 22. Saying, [r] The Son of man muſt ſuffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and chief prieſts, and ſcribes, and be ſlain, and be raiſed the third day. 23. ¶ And he ſaid to them all, If any man will come after me, let him deny himſelf, and [s] take up his croſs daily, and follow me. 24. For [t] whoſoever will ſave his life, ſhall loſe it: but whoſoever will loſe his life for my ſake, the ſame ſhall ſave it. 25. For what is a man advantaged, if he gain the whole world, and loſe himſelf, or be caſt away? 26. For [u] whoſoever ſhall be aſhamed of me and of my words, of him ſhall the Son of man be aſhamed, when [x] he ſhall come in his own glory, and in his Father's, and [y] of the holy angels. 27. But I tell you of a truth, there be ſome ſtanding here which ſhall not taſte of death, [z] till they ſee the kingdom of God.

[o] Mat. xvi. 13. Mark viii. 27.
[p] John vi. 69. & xi. 27. Acts viii. 37. 1 John iv. 15. & v. 5.
[q] Mat. xvii. 9.
[r] Ver. 44. Chap. xviii. 31. & xxiv. 7.
[s] Mat. x. 38. Acts xiv. 22. 1 Theſ. iii. 3. 2 Tim. iii. 12.
[t] Chap. xvii. 33. John xii. 25.
[u] Mat. x. 33. Chap. xii. 9. 2 Tim. ii. 12.
[x] Mat. xxvi. 64.
[y] Dan. vii. 10. Jude 14.
[z] Mat. xxiv. 34.

v. 18—27. Chriſt having diſmiſſed the multitude whom he had fed, retired with his diſciples, to pray with them and for them, as the maſter of this little family, and to teach us in our houſes to follow his example. And when he had finiſhed, we are told,

1. The enquiries he made concerning the general opinion formed of him. The diſciples informed him the people were divided in ſentiment: ſome ſaid he was John, revived; others, Elias; others, one of the old prophets riſen again. On putting the queſtion to them, what they thought of him, Peter, the ſpokeſman for his brethren, declared their faith in him as the Chriſt of God. He ſaid the truth; but as it was not proper that this ſhould be publicly and expreſsly urged, leaſt tumults ſhould enſue among the people who expected a temporal Meſſiah, he at preſent enjoined them ſilence on this head, till the great day of his reſurrection ſhould manifeſt the glory of his character.

2. The warning he gave them of his own ſufferings and death, and this he immediately adds after the confeſſion they had made of him as the Meſſiah, in order to prepare them for what might ſtagger them if it came upon them unawares, and to correct the common prejudices concerning the Meſſiah's temporal kingdom, which they, as well as their countrymen, had imbibed.

3. The admonitions he gave them of the ſufferings they muſt expect to endure for his ſake. Inſtead of the ambitious hopes they entertained, they muſt prepare by a courſe of habitual ſelf-denial for the hardneſs and perſecutions they would be called to endure in his ſervice, and be ready to take up every croſs which in the way of their duty was laid upon them; even, if need be, of martyrdom itſelf. They might be tempted, indeed, by the terrors of ſuffering, or the allurements of the world, to ſave their lives by baſe compliances, but this was the way aſſuredly in eternity to loſe what they meant to preſerve; whilſt a bold and faithful profeſſion, though it expoſed them even to death, would be recompenſed with a better life in the eternal world. If they were unfaithful and apoſtatized, nothing could balance their loſs; the gain of the whole world would be no compenſation for the perdition of an immortal ſoul: and if they were aſhamed of, and diſowned him, their Maſter, the conſequence would inevitably be, that they muſt be diſowned by him, when in his own glory, as mediator, and in his Father's glory, as having all power in heaven and earth delegated to him; and in the glory of his holy angels, the attendants of his triumphs, and the ſpirits that miniſter before his throne, he ſhall appear to judge the world. Note, The realizing views of a judgment day are powerfully effectual to engage the believer to take up every croſs, to heſitate at no loſs, ſhame, or ſuffering, for Chriſt's ſake. He knows that theſe ſhall finally prove his eternal gain, his immortal honour.

4. The encouragement he ſuggeſts for his diſciples ſupport. Some of them then preſent ſhould live to ſee the kingdom of the Meſſiah erected, in defiance of all oppoſition; his goſpel ſpread through the earth, and condign vengeance executed on the Jewiſh people their perſecutors and his murderers. It is a comfort to every ſuffering ſaint of God that the time is ſhort; in a moment he ſhall be triumphant over every foe.

28. ¶ [a] And it came to paſs about an eight days after theſe ſayings, he took Peter and John and James, and went up into a mountain to pray. 29. And as he prayed, [b] the faſhion of his countenance was altered, and his raiment was [c] white and gliſtering. 30. And behold, there talked with him two men, which were Moſes and Elias. 31. Who appeared in glory, and ſpake of his deceaſe which he ſhould accompliſh at Jeruſalem. 32. But Peter, and they that were with him, [d] were heavy with ſleep: and when they were awake, they ſaw his glory, and the two men that ſtood with him. 33. And it came to paſs, as they departed from him, Peter ſaid unto Jeſus, Maſter, it is good for us to be here; and let us make three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moſes, and one for Elias: not knowing what he ſaid. 34. While he thus ſpake, there came a cloud, and overſhadowed them: and they feared as they entred into the cloud. 35. And [e] there came a voice out of the cloud, ſaying, [f] This is my beloved Son, [g] hear him. 36. And when the voice was paſt, Jeſus was found alone: and [h] they kept it cloſe, and told no man in thoſe days any of thoſe things which they had ſeen.

[a] Mat. xvii. 1. Mark ix. 2.
[b] 2 Pet. i. 16.
[c] Dan. vii. 9.
[d] Dan. viii. 18. & x. 9.
[e] 2 Pet. i. 17.
[f] Mat. iii. 17. Chap. iii. 22.
[g] Deut. xviii. 18. Acts iii. 22.
[h] Eccleſ. iii. 7.

v. 28—36. The ſtory of the transfiguration was recorded in the other evangeliſts. Some circumſtances are here added.

1. Chriſt went up into this mountain to pray, and then his glory broke forth, which ſhould be an engagement and encouragement to us to maintain communion with God in prayer; ſince by ſuch approach to him the glory of transforming grace is derived from him, and we become changed into his image.

2. Moſes and Elias appeared in glory, as all Chriſt's ſaints ſhall ſhortly do. They ſpake of his departure (ἔξοδον) his Exodus, in alluſion to the departure of Iſrael from Egypt; ſo happy an exit was Jeſus ſhortly to make from this miſerable world to the land of eternal reſt and bleſſedneſs. The prophets had foretold his ſufferings, and they talk with him on this ſubject; the time being at hand, and Jeruſalem the place where he muſt be put to death. The way to glory lies through the grave; in our happieſt days on earth this ſhould be ever in our view; and this will reconcile us to all the horrors of death, when we conſider it as opening the door of eternal life.

3. The diſciples were heavy with ſleep; probably it was night, and they had been wearied with the labours of the day: but when they were awake, they beheld their maſter and his two attendants beaming with irradiation, and bright as the light. Note, By our drowſy frame of ſpirit we are ready to loſe many of thoſe glorious viſits from above, which the watchful and praying ſaints of God are favoured with; and it is a mercy that recovering grace ſuffers us not to ſleep the ſleep of death.

4. Peter, charmed with the viſion, is for taking up his abode there, and propoſes erecting three tabernacles, not knowing what he ſaid. The ſaints of God who have once quitted this miſerable abode, wiſh not again to take up their dwelling here; they have an infinitely nobler place, a houſe not made with hands eternal in the heavens.

5. Fear ſeized them, as the bright cloud, the emblem of the divine preſence, overſpread them, and ſeparated Moſes and Elias from their view; but the voice of God ſilenced their fears, enjoining them with ſolemn attention to hear and obey his well-beloved Son. If he be with us, and we are following his revealed word, we need not be diſmayed with any cloud which may come over us, he will bring us ſafely through.

6. The apoſtles kept the viſion cloſe, and told no man in thoſe days, as Jeſus had commanded them. The relation would meet with readier credence after his reſurrection, for which time it was reſerved.

37. ¶ [i] And it came to paſs, that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him. 38. And behold, a man of the company cried out, ſaying, Maſter, I beſeech thee, look upon my ſon, for he is mine only child. 39. And lo, a ſpirit taketh him, and he ſuddenly crieth out, and it teareth him that he foameth again, and bruiſing him, hardly departeth from him. 40. And I beſought thy diſciples to caſt him out, and they could not. 41. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid, O faithleſs and perverſe generation, how long ſhall I be with you, and ſuffer you? Bring thy ſon hither. 42. And [k] as he was yet a coming, the devil threw him down, and tare him: and Jeſus rebuked the unclean ſpirit, and healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.

[i] Mat. xvii. 14. Mark ix. 14.

[k] Mar. i. 26. Rev. xii. 12.

v. 37—42. It ſeems that Jeſus and his three diſciples continued all night on the mountain. The next day, deſcending to the multitude, he found his preſence greatly needed. The people eagerly ran to him, and the father of a poor lunatic child earneſtly beſought that help from him, which his diſciples had in vain attempted to give. The caſe was very afflictive: he was an only child; and ſo fearfully torn by the malicious ſpirit. What a mercy we are not left to his power! what an invaluable privilege that we have the almighty Jeſus near, to whom we can apply, and who is able to ſave to the uttermoſt. Rebuking the unbelief of that perverſe generation, particularly of the ſcribes and Phariſees, who began to inſult over the diſciples, he gives them a convincing proof that his arm is not ſhortened, nor his power abated. With a word the raging devil is diſpoſſeſſed, and the child is delivered to his father perfectly cured.

43. ¶ And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God: But while they wondered every one at all things which Jeſus did, he ſaid unto his diſciples, 44. Let theſe ſayings ſink down into your ears: for [l] the Son of man ſhall be delivered into the hands of men. 45. But [m] they underſtood not this ſaying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to aſk him of that ſaying. 46. ¶ [n] Then there aroſe a reaſoning among them, which of them ſhould be greateſt. 47. And Jeſus, perceiving the thought of their heart, took a child, and ſet him by him, 48. And ſaid unto them, [o] Whoſoever ſhall receive this child in my name, receiveth me: and [p] whoſoever ſhall receive me, receiveth him that ſent me: for he that is leaſt among you all, the ſame ſhall be great. 49. ¶ [q] And John anſwered and ſaid, Maſter, we ſaw one caſting out devils in thy name; and [r] we forbad him, becauſe he followeth not with us. 50. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Forbid him not: for [s] he that is not againſt us, is for us.

[l] Ver. 22.
[m] Chap. xviii. 34.
[n] Mat. xviii. 1. Mark ix. 34. Chap. xxii. 24.
[o] Mat. x. 42. Chap. x. 16.
[p] John v. 23. & ii. 44. & xiv. 21.
[q] Mark ix. 38.
[r] Numb. xi. 28.
[s] Mat. xii. 30. Phil. i. 18.

v. 43—50. The works of the Lord are great, and worthy our admiration.

1. This miracle filled the people with amazement at the mighty power of God. His hand herein evidently appeared. Is any ſoul recovered from Satan's power, much more may we ſay, This is the finger of God.

2. Chriſt informs the diſciples of his approaching ſufferings. They were very backward to receive what was ſo contrary to their ideas of the Meſſiah's kingdom, and ſo deſtructive of the ambitious hopes they had entertained. Therefore he prefaces his diſcourſe with a ſolemn warning to them deeply to conſider and carefully to remember what he ſaid; but they underſtood not his meaning, blinded by their prejudices, and afraid to aſk him, leſt they ſhould be reproached with their dulneſs, or meet the ſame reproof as Peter had before received, if they preſumed to raiſe objections. Note, The plaineſt truths, when we are under the power of prejudice, are miſtaken or perverted.

3. All that they heard had no effect upon them to cure their aſpiring views. They diſputed among themſelves, as they travelled, who ſhould have the firſt poſt of honour in that temporal kingdom which they expected. Jeſus knew the ſubject of their reaſoning, and, by a moſt appoſite emblem of a little child, teaches them the only ſpirit and temper which would make a ſoul truly great in the eyes of God. So meek, ſo lowly, ſo free from ambition, envy, and malice, ſhould they be; delighting in, and receiving with warmeſt affection, all who ſhewed ſuch a childlike temper: and every kindneſs ſhewn to ſuch perſons, he tells them, he would receive as done to himſelf; yea, God the Father would regard it with higheſt approbation, and reward them. Note, (1.) Jeſus is the ſearcher of hearts; our thoughts are known to him; we need keep a ſtrict guard over them. (2.) Nothing is more contrary to the ſpirit of a diſciple of the lowly Jeſus, than the affectation of earthly grandeur and the pride of life.

4. Chriſt checks the narrow party ſpirit which appeared in John and others of his diſciples. He had forbad one whom he ſaw caſting out devils in the name of Jeſus, becauſe he followed not with them; and for this probably expected his Maſter's approbation: but Chriſt ſaith, Forbid him not; for he that is not againſt us, is for us. Though he may not join us, if he concurs in carrying on the ſame deſign, he is to be encouraged rather than ſilenced. Note, Though others follow not exactly our mode of worſhip, or refuſe to join in our communion, let us not therefore ſtamp them as heretical or ſchiſmatic, and oppreſs or ſilence them. Do they labour to pull down Satan's kingdom, and ſpread the ſavour of the Redeemer's name? then, however Chriſt is preached, it becomes us therein to rejoice.

51. ¶ And it came to paſs, when [t] the time was come that he ſhould be received up, he ſtedfaſtly ſet his face to go to Jeruſalem, 52. And ſent meſſengers before his face: and they went, and entred into a village of the Samaritans to make ready for him. 53. And [u] they did not receive him, becauſe his face was as though he would go to Jeruſalem. 54. And when his diſciples James and John ſaw this, they ſaid, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven and conſume them, [x] even as Elias did? 55. But he turned, and rebuked them, and ſaid, Ye know not what manner of ſpirit ye are of. 56. For [y] the Son of man is not come to deſtroy mens lives, but to ſave them. And they went to another village.

[t] Mar. xvi. 19. Acts i. 2.
[u] John iv. 4, 9.
[x] 2 Kings i. 10, 12.
[y] John iii. 17. & xii. 47.

v. 51—56. Nothing is more contrary to the ſpirit of Chriſtianity, which breathes univerſal love, than the fury of bigotry and the flames of perſecution. We have here,

1. Our Lord ſtedfaſtly ſetting his face to Jeruſalem, which was ſhortly to be the ſcene of his ſufferings. The time fixed in the divine decree was come, when he ſhould go up from Galilee, to return thither no more till after his reſurrection; or this may refer to his aſcenſion, when he ſhould be received up into glory: and, knowing what ſorrows awaited him, with unſhaken courage and confidence he went forth to meet them. Note, (1.) When ſufferings for Chriſt's ſake ſtand in the way of duty, like him we ſhould ſtedfaſtly ſet our face to meet them, and neither fail nor be diſcouraged. (2.) It is a comfort to look forward to the day when all our preſent troubles ſhall have an end, and we ſhall be received up to the place whither Jeſus is gone before.

2. As Samaria lay in his way, he ſent ſome of his diſciples forward to prepare ſome refreſhment in one of the villages, that he might not be delayed in his journey. But, as there was the moſt deadly feud between the Jews and Samaritans about the proper place for worſhip, each preferring their own, when they perceived that Chriſt and his diſciples were bent for Jeruſalem, probably to celebrate the feaſt of tabernacles there, they were incenſed againſt him for thus preferring the temple in mount Zion to theirs on mount Gerizzim, and therefore refuſed to grant him or his followers any entertainment among them. Note, If we are treated with rudeneſs and incivility, our Maſter was thus uſed before us.

3. John and James, fired at this indignity put on their Maſter, would inſtantly, with their Lord's permiſſion, have poured vengeance on the place, conſuming them with fire from heaven, as Elias did, 2 Kings i. 9—12. They knew, if Chriſt gave them leave, one word would compleat the overthrow of the city, and make it as Sodom and Gomorrah. But he rebukes their fiery ſpirit, and ſaid, Ye know not what manner of ſpirit ye are of. They ſeemed to be actuated by zeal for his glory, but really were under the influence of pride, paſſion, and revenge. How different from that ſpirit of peace, love, patience, and forbearance, which his goſpel breathed! for the Son of man is not come to deſtroy mens lives, by making his enemies monuments of vengeance, but to ſave them; not only by miracles of healing to cure their bodies, but by all meekneſs and long-ſuffering, and every mild and endearing method of grace, to work upon their hearts, and melt them with theſe coals of love heaped upon them. Note, (1.) Even good men are ſometimes carried away, and do not ſee the malignity and ſelfiſh paſſions which lurk under the guiſe of zeal for God. (2.) The examples of former ſaints are not to be pleaded as precedents, unleſs the caſes be parallel, and we have the ſame warrant and authority under which they acted. (3.) The religion of Jeſus is never to be propagated by fire and ſword, but by ſoft perſuaſion, and every work and labour of love. Force may make men hypocrites: choice alone can make them Chriſtians.

4. Chriſt hereupon patiently put up the affront, and quietly went with his diſciples to another village, where they met a more hoſpitable reception. Note, To conquer our own ſpirit is a greater victory than to lay our bittereſt enemy at our feet.

57. ¶ [z] And it came to paſs that as they went in the way, a certain man ſaid unto him, Lord, I will follow thee whitherſoever thou goeſt. 58. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have neſts, but the ſon of man hath not where to lay his head. 59. And he ſaid unto another, Follow me: But he ſaid, Lord, ſuffer me firſt to go and bury my father. 60. Jeſus ſaid unto him, Let the dead bury their dead; but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. 61. And another alſo ſaid, Lord, I will follow thee: [a] but let me firſt go bid them farewel which are at home at my houſe. 62. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough, and [b] looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

[z] Mat. viii. 19, &c.
[a] 1 Kings xix. 20.
[b] Gen. xix. 26.

v. 57—62. They who would ſollow Chriſt muſt count the coſt, and be ready, without heſitation, to part with all for his ſake. We have here,

1. The offer of one who, expecting the Meſſiah was about to ſet up his kingdom, profeſſes his zeal to ſerve him, in hopes he ſhall be well rewarded for it. But Chriſt undeceives him. He would meet with none of the honours he expected, and innumerable hardſhips of which he ſeemed not to be aware. The Son of man, ſo far from providing for his followers, was more deſtitute than the foxes of the deſert or the fowls of heaven, having neither houſe nor home. So poor, for our ſakes, he became, to teach us contentment in the loweſt ſtation of life; never to aſpire at this world's greatneſs; patiently to ſubmit to every want we may be called to endure; to expect tribulations; and look for no reſt below, till the day comes that we ſhall reſt in the duſt, and then enter into our kingdom.

2. Another, called to follow Chriſt, wanted to make excuſe, and ſollicits a delay, pretending piety towards an aged parent, and deſiring to perform the laſt offices to him before he commenced Chriſt's conſtant follower. But Chriſt denies his requeſt: a more urgent duty lay upon him: there were enough dead ſinners to bury the dead corpſe; whilſt he, as a living ſoul, was needed to preach the everlaſting goſpel. Note, (1.) Delays are dangerous: many a ſoul hath been loſt by plauſible excuſes for withdrawing from preſent duty, and putting off the concerns of eternity to a more convenient ſeaſon. (2.) Religion teaches us to ſhew piety at home, and to requite our parents; but, if the deareſt relations in life would divert us from the ſervice of Jeſus and his goſpel, then we muſt leave father and mother to follow the Maſter's call, and ſhew our obedience to his commands.

3. A third perſon makes a voluntary tender of his ſervice to Chriſt, and only begs that he may firſt bid adieu to his friends, and ſettle his worldly affairs. But Chriſt, who ſaw that his heart was entangled with worldly things, lets him know the impoſſibility of uniting the incompatible ſervices of God and Mammon. No man, having laid his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God. Whilſt he hankers after the world, and parts from it with reluctance, he will not heartily diſcharge the goſpel miniſtry. Note, (1.) Worldly things are the moſt dangerous ſnares to draw the heart from Chriſt: even thoſe that we may lawfully mind are apt to engage unlawful and inordinate affections after them. (2.) When we have once ſet our faces heavenward, let us never look back. Remember Lot's wife.

CHAP. X.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's commiſſion to the ſeventy diſciples, ver. 1—16. 2. The reports which the ſeventy diſciples made to their Maſter of the ſucceſs of their negociation, and his diſcourſe thereupon, ver. 17—24. 3. Chriſt's diſcourſe with a lawyer concerning the way to heaven, and the inſtructions Chriſt gave him by a parable to look upon every one as his neighbour, ver. 25—37. 4. Chriſt's entertainment at Martha's houſe, the reproof he gave to her for her care about the world, and his commendation of Mary for her care about her ſoul, ver. 38—42.

1. AFTER theſe things, the Lord appointed other ſeventy alſo, and ſent them two and two before his face into every city and place whither he himſelf would come. 2. Therefore ſaid he unto them, [a] The harveſt truly is great, but the labourers are few: [b] pray ye therefore the Lord of the harveſt, that he would ſend forth labourers into his harveſt. 3. Go your ways: [c] behold, I ſend you forth as lambs among wolves. 4. [d] Carry neither purſe, nor ſcrip, nor ſhoes: and [e] ſalute no man by the way. 5. And [f] into whatſoever houſe ye enter, firſt ſay, Peace be to this houſe. 6. And, if the ſon of peace be there, your peace ſhall reſt upon it: if not, it ſhall turn to you again. 7. And in the ſame houſe remain, [g] eating and drinking ſuch things as they give: for [h] the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from houſe to houſe. 8. And into whatſoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat ſuch things as are ſet before you. 9. And heal the ſick that are therein, and ſay unto them, [i] The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. 10. But into whatſoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the ſtreets of the ſame, [k] and ſay, 11. Even the very duſt of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off againſt you: notwithſtanding, be ye ſure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you. 12. But I ſay unto you, that [l] it ſhall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom than for that city. 13. Wo unto thee, Chorazin, wo unto thee, Bethſaida: for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon, which have been done in you, [m] they had a great while ago repented, [n] ſitting in ſackcloth and aſhes. 14. But it ſhall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment than for you. 15. And thou, Capernaum, [o] which art exalted to heaven, ſhalt be thruſt down to hell. 16. [p] He that heareth you, heareth me: and [q] he that deſpiſeth you, deſpiſeth me: and he that deſpiſeth me, deſpiſeth him that ſent me.

[a] Mat. ix. 37. John iv. 35.
[b] 2 Theſ. iii. 1.
[c] Mat. x. 16.
[d] Mat. x. 9, 10.
[e] 2 Kings iv. 29.
[f] Mat. x. 11.
[g] 1 Cor. x. 27.
[h] 1 Cor. ix. 4, &c. 1 Tim. v. 18.
[i] Mat. iii. 2. & iv. 17.
[k] Chap. ix. 5. Acts xiii. 51. & xviii. 6.
[l] Mat. x. 15. & xi. 22, 24.
[m] Ezek. iii. 6.
[n] Jonah iii. 7, 8.
[o] Iſa. xiv. 13. Jer. li. 53.
[p] Mat. x. 40. John xiii. 20.
[q] Ex. xvi. 8. 1 Theſ. iv. 8.

v. 1—16. The harveſt was plenteous, but hitherto the labourers had been few. We have here ſeventy diſciples ordained to the miniſtry, inveſted with miraculous powers, and ſent as harbingers to prepare the way of Chriſt in all the adjacent country whither he was preparing to go. Their number correſponds with the elders of Iſrael on whom the Spirit of the Lord reſted in the wilderneſs; and they were ſent two and two for their mutual comfort and encouragement.

1. They muſt addreſs themſelves in prayer to God for ſucceſs upon their own labours, and that he would raiſe up and qualify many more to go forth and preach the goſpel. And this muſt be ſtill the conſtant ſubject of our requeſts to God: the more we look round on the world, and ſee immortal ſouls periſhing for lack of knowledge, the more zealouſly ſhould we labour, and the more fervently pray that the Lord would ſend forth labourers into his harveſt.

2. He tells them what they may expect to meet. Though they were never ſo harmleſs and inoffenſive, and their diſcourſes breathed nothing but peace and love, they would have enemies to encounter, fierce and ſavage as wolves: but he who ſent them would afford them protection, and miniſter ſtrength and courage to them in their work. And, if God be with us, we need not fear who are againſt us.

3. He orders them to make no proviſion for their journey, but truſt on Providence for the ſupply of their wants: and, as their work required diſpatch, they muſt not loſe any time in unneceſſary diſcourſe or civilities with any perſon whom they met. Not that Chriſt enjoined rudeneſs and incivility; but there was now no time for compliments, when the ſervice was urgent.

4. Where-ever they entered into a houſe, and were hoſpitably received, there he orders them to ſay, Peace be to this houſe, praying that all bleſſings, ſpiritual, temporal, and eternal, might reſt upon thoſe who dwelt there. And if the ſon of peace be there, any into whoſe hearts the Son of God hath put a deſire to hear and receive the goſpel of peace, then an anſwer of peace ſhould be given to their prayers, your peace ſhall reſt upon it; but if not, if there be no choſen veſſel in the family, whoſe hearts are open to embrace the truth, it ſhall return unto you again, and your prayers for them ſhall be anſwered in bleſſings on your own ſouls. Note, (1.) They who preach the goſpel of peace cannot but fervently deſire, for all thoſe among whom they miniſter, that God would ſpeak peace by them to the conſciences of their hearers. (2.) Some receive, but more reject, our preaching and prayers; yet even to thoſe that periſh our labours and prayers are not in vain; we are ſtill a ſweet ſavour of Chriſt; and, though they reject the ſalvation we bring, Chriſt will approve and reward our fidelity.

5. In whatever houſe they were at firſt received, there they muſt abide; thankfully and chearfully making uſe of the proviſion ſet before them, and not doubting but their labours would procure them that welcome they deſerved. They muſt be content with the meaneſt fare, and never, affecting nicety, change their lodgings for better accommodations, leſt they ſhould incur the ſuſpicion of fickleneſs, or fleſh-pleaſers. Note, (1.) Chriſt's miniſters have a right to a maintenance. (2.) When the love of ſouls, not of filthy lucre, draws men to labour in the goſpel, they will learn in whatſoever ſtate they are, therewith to be content, and put up with the pooreſt accommodations.

6. He directs them what muſt be the ſubject of their preaching. They muſt ſay, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you; the kingdom of the Meſſiah, with all its ineſtimable bleſſings and privileges, is now ready to appear; prepare to receive him; and he empowers them to heal the ſick, in confirmation of their preaching, as well as in return for the kind civilities which they received. Note, Nothing is ever loſt by kindneſs ſhewn to Jeſus and his ſervants.

7. In caſe their miniſtry is rejected, and they are driven from their work, they are to leave that devoted city, publickly declaring the doom ready to light upon the place, and ſhaking off the duſt of their feet for a teſtimony againſt them, aſſuring them of the nearneſs of the Meſſiah's kingdom, and the dreadful conſequences which muſt unavoidably enſue from their obſtinacy and impenitence. And in a day of judgment it ſhall be more tolerable for Sodom than for that city, becauſe they have rejected greater means of grace than were vouchſafed to that abandoned city. Note, (1.) None ſink under ſuch aggravated guilt as thoſe who deſpiſe and reject the goſpel. (2.) The day is near when theſe deſpiſers will wonder and periſh.

8. On this occaſion our Lord turns his diſcourſe to thoſe cities where ſuch multitudes of his miracles had been wrought, and who notwithſtanding continued impenitent. Chorazin, Bethſaida, have their fearful doom read. Had the moſt wicked cities of the Gentiles enjoyed their bleſſings and privileges, and calls to repentance, even Tyre and Sidon had long ago been brought into the duſt of humiliation. Therefore the judgment of the heathen, in the day of vengeance, ſhall be more tolerable than theirs: and Capernaum, exalted to heaven in privileges, ſhall ſink as low in hell under the wrath of God, provoked by their hardened infidelity. Let the lands and places that enjoy the goſpel light hear and tremble at theſe denunciations.

9. He encourages the ſeventy to go forth. They are his ambaſſadors: he will reckon the treatment they meet with as ſhewn to himſelf. Thoſe who heard and reſpected them he would regard, as if they ſhewed this attention and kindneſs to his own perſon; whilſt they who deſpiſed their perſons, and rejected their miniſtry, inſulted him, and put contempt on God who ſent him. Note, Many ill-uſe, ſlight, and contemn Chriſt's miniſters, and treat them as mean and deſpicable; but they will ſhortly feel, to their coſt, that the King of glory will fearfully avenge the inſults ſhewn to his ambaſſadors.

17. ¶ And the ſeventy returned again with joy, ſaying, Lord, even the devils are ſubject unto us through thy name. 18. And he ſaid unto them, [r] I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven. 19. Behold, [s] I give unto you power to tread on ſerpents and ſcorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing ſhall by any means hurt you. 20. Notwithſtanding in this rejoice not, that the ſpirits are ſubject unto you: but rather rejoice, becauſe [t] your names are written in heaven. 21. ¶ In that hour Jeſus rejoiced in ſpirit, and ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that [u] thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and [x] haſt revealed them unto babes: even ſo, Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight. 22. [y] All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and [z] who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him. 23. ¶ And he turned him unto his diſciples, and ſaid privately, [a] Bleſſed are the eyes which ſee the things that ye ſee. 24. For I tell you, that [b] many prophets and kings have deſired to ſee thoſe things which ye ſee, and have not ſeen them; and to hear thoſe things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

r John xii. 31. Rev. xii. 9.
s Mark xvi. 18. Acts xxviii. 5.
t Ex. xxxii. 32. Pſ. lxix. 28. Dan. xii. 1. Phil. iv. 3. Heb. xii. 23. Rev. xiii. 8. & xxi. 27.
u Iſa. xxix. 14. & xliv. 18. 2 Cor. iii. 14.
x Pſ. viii. 2. 1 Cor. i. 27.
y Pſ. viii. 6. Mat. xxviii. 18. John xvii. 2.
z John i. 18. & x. 15.
a Mat. xiii. 16.
b 1 Pet. i. 10.

v. 17—24. Having finiſhed their miniſtry, we have here,

1. The return of the diſciples to their Maſter, tranſported to find that even the devils were ſubject unto them, and aſcribing the glory to him, in whoſe name they were enabled to work ſuch ſtupenduous miracles. Note, All our victories over Satan muſt be aſcribed to the grace and power of the great Captain of our ſalvation, and in him we may and ought to rejoice greatly.

2. He received them very graciouſly.

(1.) He informs them it was no news to him that the devils were ſubject unto them. I ſaw, when I ſent you forth to preach the goſpel and work miracles, Satan falling as lightning from heaven; his power and kingdom began now to be ſhaken and totter; and this was the preſage of his more irrecoverable ruin, when in the Gentile world the goſpel ſhould quickly ſpread, and, rooting up idolatry and ſpiritual darkneſs, turn the hearts of ſinners from the power of Satan unto God.

(2.) He enlarges their powers, as the reward of their fidelity, and an encouragement to perſevere. They ſhall tread upon ſerpents and ſcorpions unhurt; and the old ſerpent, and his venomous aſſociates, whether men or devils, ſhould be bruiſed under their feet. And nothing ſhall by any means hurt you. Under almighty protection you may defy every danger. Note, They have nothing to fear who have Chriſt for their maſter, and execute his commiſſion.

(3.) He checks their joy on this ſingular diſtinction with which he endued them, and directs them to a nobler cauſe for it; rather rejoice that your names are written in heaven; elſe, though they had caſt out devils, they might themſelves finally periſh, and become companions with them. It is not gifts, but graces, that evidence our adoption of God, which ſhould afford us moſt joy. Note, (1.) God knoweth thoſe that are his; their names are regiſtred in the records of eternity. (2.) The eternal predeſtination of God is matter of moſt comfortable meditation to thoſe who, by faith embracing the promiſes, feel in their hearts the working of God's Spirit, ſealing them unto the day of redemption.

(4.) Chriſt expreſſes his delight and thankfulneſs for the bleſſing conferred on theſe his poor diſciples: and to this hour nothing rejoices the hearts of his people ſo greatly as beholding the progreſs of his goſpel, the fall of Satan, and the converſion of men's ſouls. He ſaid, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, the great Diſpoſer of all things, that thou haſt hid theſe things from the wiſe and prudent, and haſt revealed them unto babes, leaving the proud ſcribes and doctors of the law under the darkneſs of pretended ſcience, prejudiced againſt and ſtrangers to the myſteries of grace; whilſt poor illiterate men, of low capacities, and contemptible in the eyes of the worldly wiſe, are put in truſt with the goſpel, and enlightened with the Spirit of truth. Even ſo, Father, for ſo it ſeemed good in thy ſight: ſuch was the pleaſure of infinite wiſdom, who ſovereignly diſpenſes his gifts, the more to manifeſt his own glory. All things are delivered to me of my Father, all power and authority, all wiſdom and grace to communicate to his choſen. In Jeſus are all the treaſures laid up, and out of his fulneſs we muſt receive. And no man knoweth who the Son is but the Father, and who the Father is but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him: the perfections of the divine nature are only fully known by the divine Perſons themſelves; and we can only be acquainted with them, and their eternal purpoſes of infinite wiſdom and grace, ſo far as the Son of God is pleaſed to reveal them to us.

(5.) Turning to his diſciples privately he pronounces them truly bleſſed, favoured with the ſight of the Lord's Chriſt, and enjoying the cleareſt diſcoveries of that kingdom of grace which the Meſſiah was now come to erect in the world. Prophets and kings in former ages deſired in vain to ſee and hear what they, more highly favoured, ſaw and heard. Note, The diſtinguiſhing mercies we enjoy ſhould excite our thankfulneſs, and quicken our diligence to improve them.

25. ¶ And behold, a certain lawyer ſtood up, and tempted him, ſaying, [c] Maſter, what ſhall I do to inherit eternal life? 26. He ſaid unto him, What is written in the law? how readeſt thou? 27. And he anſwering, ſaid, [d] Thou ſhalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy ſoul, and with all thy ſtrength, and with all thy mind; and [e] thy neighbour as thyſelf. 28. And he ſaid unto him, Thou haſt anſwered right: [f] this do, and thou ſhalt live. 29. But he, [g] willing to juſtify himſelf, ſaid unto Jeſus, And who is my neighbour? 30. And Jeſus anſwering, ſaid, A certain man went down from Jeruſalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which ſtripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead. 31. And by chance there came down a certain prieſt that way; and when he ſaw him, [h] he paſſed by on the other ſide. 32. And likewiſe a Levite, when he was at the place, came and looked on him, and paſſed by on the other ſide. 33. But a certain [i] Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he ſaw him, he had compaſſion on him, 34. And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and ſet him on his own beaſt, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him. 35. And on the morrow, when he departed, he took out two [k] pence, and gave them to the hoſt, and ſaid unto him, Take care of him; and whatſoever thou ſpendeſt more, when I come again, I will repay thee. 36. Which now of theſe three, thinkeſt thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves? 37. And he ſaid, He that ſhewed mercy on him. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, Go, and do thou likewiſe.

c Mat. xxii. 35. Mark xii. 28.
d Deut. vi. 5. & x. 12. & xxx. 6.
e Lev. xix. 18. Rom. xiii. 9. Gal. v. 14. 1 Tim. i. 5. Jam. ii. 8.
f Lev. xviii. 5. Ezek. xx. 11, 13, 21. Rom. x. 5.
g Chap. xvi. 15.
h Pſ. xxxviii. 11.
i John iv. 9.
k Mat. xviii. 28.

v. 25—37. We have the ſame queſtion propoſed by one of the ſcribes as was put by the young ruler, Mark x. 17. not ſo much with a view to be informed, as with the intention to entangle our Lord in his talk.

1. In anſwer to his queſtion Chriſt turns him over to the law, in which he fancied himſelf deeply converſant, and bids him ſay what he read there, as the way of obtaining the eternal life he ſought: and when the ſcribe replied the conditions there preſcribed were the perfect love of God and our neighbour, Chriſt approves the anſwer, and aſſures him, Do this, and thou ſhalt live. Such perfection of obedience will entitle thoſe who can plead it to the reward. But where, alas! is this to be found? The more we read the tenor of the covenant of works, the more, if our minds are enlightened, ſhall we be driven to deſpair of ourſelves, conſcious how far we have been from continuing in all the things written in the book of the law to do them. But with this view had not the lawyer read. For,

2. He, willing to juſtify himſelf, as if he had kept the whole law, deſired to know who was to be reckoned his neighbour; conceiting, probably, his juſtice and charity had been ſo extenſive to the whole houſe of Iſrael, that he might juſtly claim the reward of perfect obedience.

3. Chriſt, by an appoſite caſe in point, lets him ſee his ignorance of the divine law, and the defectiveneſs of his charity; correcting at the ſame time the corrupt notions of the Jewiſh teachers, who reckoned themſelves not at all obliged to ſhew the leaſt kindneſs to thoſe who were out of the pale of their communion. The ſtory here repreſented is very beautiful and affecting.

1. A Jew, as he travelled from Jeruſalem to Jericho, fell among thieves, with which the road was greatly infeſted, and theſe, not ſatisfied with having plundered and ſtripped him of his raiment, inhumanly wounded him, and departed, leaving him weltering in his blood, half dead, and ready to expire. This caſe may fitly repreſent the ſtate of mankind; way-laid by Satan the great enemy of ſouls, robbed of the garments of innocence, wounded and dying in their ſins, without power or ſtrength to help themſelves.

2. In this diſaſtrous condition, in which the poor wounded traveller lay, by chance, ſo Providence ordered it, there came down a certain prieſt that way, whoſe office and character ſhould have engaged him to exerciſe his humanity and compaſſion towards an object ſo pitiable, eſpecially to one of his own nation and religion; but his unfeeling heart was ſteeled againſt his brother, and, turning to the other ſide of the road, he purſued his journey unconcerned. A Levite quickly followed, as callous to every humane ſenſation: he juſt came and looked on; and, not caring to be at the trouble or expence of providing for a dying man, he kept on his way, and left him to periſh there. Hard-hearted monſters! cries every tongue. But, alas! ſuch Levites and prieſts are found in every age, who not only with-hold their hand from relieving the wants of the miſerable, but leave the more precious ſouls of men to periſh, unconcerned what becomes of them. Some ſuppoſe that theſe repreſent the law of Moſes, from which no mercy is to be expected: it makes no proviſion for man a ſinner, nor ſpeaks one word of comfort to the guilty; but leaves the ſoul under a curſe which extends to eternal death.

3. A Samaritan, one of that deſpiſed and deteſted nation, travelling that way, ſaw the miſerable object, and compaſſion inſtantly melted his heart. Without waiting to know of what country he was, he went to him, and pouring oil and wine into his wounds, he bound them carefully up, perhaps with the very linnen garments he wore, and, gently ſetting him on his own beaſt, he carried him to the neareſt inn, and ſaw every accommodation provided for him which the place would afford. And on the morrow, having waited that night to ſee the poor patient well provided for, he gave the hoſt, on parting, two pence, about fifteen pence of our money, with a charge to take all poſſible care of the wounded man, and engaged to defray, on his return, whatever expence might be farther incurred. A noble inſtance indeed of humanity and generoſity. We cannot be at a loſs to whom this character of the good Samaritan eminently belongs. Jeſus is come down from heaven; he ſees his people lying in their blood, helpleſs and deſperate; his compaſſions are kindled towards them; he binds up the wounds of the guilty ſinner's ſoul; his own blood is the healing balm he pours into them; he brings them into his church, were they are fed with the proviſion of his ordinances; he clothes them with his righteouſneſs, revives them with the cordials of his love, and bears their charges through the inn of this world, ſupporting them with the riches of his grace; he commends them to the care of his miniſters, and at his ſecond coming will not fail to reward their care and diligence.

4. Chriſt propoſes to the lawyer the queſtion, which of theſe was the neighbour to the wounded traveller? and the caſe was too clear to admit of heſitation; he could not but anſwer, He that ſhewed mercy on him. Then ſaid Jeſus nnto him, Go, and do thou likewiſe. Think not you have kept the law, or even underſtood the extent of the command, before you feel the ſame compaſſionate ſpirit, the ſame readineſs to relieve even a Samaritan, as he ſhewed towards this Jew. An extent of charity to which he had been hitherto an utter ſtranger; and therefore his ſelf-juſtification was but ſelf-deluſion.

38. ¶ Now it came to paſs, as they went, he entred into a certain village: and a certain woman, named [l] Martha, received him into her houſe. 39. And ſhe had a ſiſter called Mary, [m] which alſo [n] ſat at Jeſus's feet, and heard his word. 40. But Martha was cumbred about much ſerving, and came to him, and ſaid, Lord, doſt thou not care that my ſiſter hath left me to ſerve alone? bid her therefore that ſhe help me. 41. And Jeſus anſwered, and ſaid unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful, and troubled about many things: 42. But [o] one thing is needful. And Mary hath choſen that good part, which ſhall not be taken away from her.

[l] John xi. 1. & xii. 2, 3.
[m] 1 Cor. vii. 32.
[n] Chap. viii. 35. Acts xxii. 3.
[o] Pſ. xxvii. 4.

v. 38—42. We have here,

1. The hoſpitable entertainment given to our bleſſed Lord by a good woman who lived at Bethany, named Martha. Though his character was obnoxious, and his retinue numerous and poor, yet ſhe was not aſhamed of owning her reſpect for him, and was happy to furniſh him with the beſt her houſe afforded. A gracious heart makes an open hand. We ſhould grudge no expence when Chriſt's cauſe demands our ſupport.

2. Mary, the ſiſter of Martha, ſat at Jeſus's feet, attentive to his divine inſtructions; and as, according to his uſual cuſtom, he began to diſcourſe about the glad tidings of his ſalvation, ſhe liſtened with eagerneſs to the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. Note, (1.) Miniſters, not only in public, but from houſe to houſe, ſhould delight to diſpenſe the goſpel-word. They are profitable viſits when a gracious diſcourſe ſeaſons the entertainment. (2.) They who would be wiſe unto ſalvation muſt ſit at Jeſus's feet. We cannot hear his voice indeed; but in his bleſſed word he yet ſpeaketh.

3. Martha, deſirous to ſhew her reſpect for her honoured gueſt, was very buſy in providing the entertainment. Her diligence was commendable; but ſhe was too much taken up, cumbered with much ſerving; ſhe wanted to make the feaſt ſplendid, and was ſo diſtracted with theſe worldly engagements, that ſhe could not find leiſure to attend the heavenly diſcourſe of the Redeemer. Note, (1.) Family cares inordinately engaging the mind are a great ſnare to our ſouls. (2.) Chriſt's ſervants ſhould not cumber themſelves with much ſerving. They who eat and drink to the glory of God will not affect dainties.

4. Diſpleaſed that Mary came not to her aſſiſtance, Martha brings her complaint to Chriſt; Lord, doſt thou not care that my ſiſter hath left me to ſerve alone? She ſeems not only to blame Mary's backwardneſs to aſſiſt her, but to reflect upon Jeſus, that he ſhould ſuffer her to ſit there, when ſhe wanted her help in the family; and therefore ſuggeſts that it was but reaſonable, that he ſhould bid her go and aſſiſt in providing for the gueſts. Note, (1.) They who have their own hearts much ſet upon the world are ready to find fault with thoſe as negligent who ſhew not the ſame anxiety after it. (2.) Too many, like Martha, are apt to think, that the exerciſes of religion incroach upon the duties of our ſtation; but, uſually ſpeaking, the fault is, as here, far on the other ſide.

5. Chriſt reproves her inordinate carefulneſs. Martha, Martha; he ſpeaks with earneſtneſs and pity, thou art careful, and troubled about many things; giving herſelf unneceſſary anxiety, when Chriſt required no ſuch ſumptuous entertainment. But one thing is needful, to know Chriſt and partake of his ſalvation. Compared with this, every thing beſides is unimportant; therefore ſhould this engage our firſt and chief concern: and we are highly culpable when other things divert us from attending to the intereſts of our immortal ſouls. Note, (1.) Faithful rebukes are the trueſt marks of genuine love. (2.) They who are full of inordinate care are ſure to involve themſelves in many troubles. (3.) Chriſt's diſciples have need deeply to remember this reproof and caution; for Martha's anxiety is a beſetting evil.

6. Inſtead of blaming Mary, as her ſiſter expected, Chriſt commends her choice, and approves her conduct, She hath choſen that good part, which ſhall not be taken from her. Note, (1.) However ſerious godlineſs may provoke the cenſures of the lukewarm, Jeſus will commend what they condemn. (2.) They who have choſen Chriſt as their portion, and his word as their rule, have wiſely determined, and ſhall never repent of their choice. (3.) If we have by faith embraced the Saviour, and truly been made partakers of his grace, then we have an intereſt in that eternal bleſſedneſs, of which none of the powers of earth or hell can deprive us.

CHAP. XI.

In this chapter, 1. Chriſt teacheth his diſciples to pray, ver. 1—13. 2. He fully anſwereth the blaſphemous imputation of the Phariſees, ver. 14—26. 3. He ſhews the honour of obedient diſciples to be greater than that of his own mother, ver. 27, 28. 4. He upbraids the men of that generation for their infidelity and obſtinacy, ver. 29—36. 5. He ſeverely reproves the Phariſees and lawyers for their hypocriſy, pride, and their oppreſſing the conſciences of thoſe that ſubmitted to them, and their hating and perſecuting thoſe that witneſſed againſt their wickedneſs, ver. 37—54.

1. AND it came to paſs, that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceaſed, one of his diſciples ſaid unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John alſo taught his diſciples. 2. And he ſaid unto them, [a] When ye pray, ſay, Our Father [b] which art in heaven, [c] Hallowed be thy Name. [d] Thy kingdom come. [e] Thy will be done, [f] as in heaven, ſo in earth. 3. [g] Give us day by day our daily bread. 4. And forgive us our ſins; for we alſo forgive every one that is indebted to us. And [h] lead us not into temptation, but [i] deliver us from evil. 5. And he ſaid unto them, Which of you ſhall have a friend, and ſhall go unto him at midnight, and ſay unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves; 6. For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to ſet before him: 7. And he from within ſhall anſwer and ſay, Trouble me not: the door is now ſhut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot riſe and give thee. 8. I ſay unto you, Though he will not riſe and give him, becauſe he is his friend: [k] yet becauſe of his importunity, he will riſe and give him as many as he need-

[a] Mat. vi. 9, &c.
[b] Pſ. xi. 4. Iſa. lxvi. 1.
[c] John xii. 28.
[d] Mat. iv. 17.
[e] Mat. xxvi. 42. Acts xxi. 14.
[f] Pſ. ciii. 20, 21.
[g] Job xxiii. 12. Mat. iv. 4. John vi. 33—58.
[h] Mat. xxvi. 41. 1 Cor. x. 13. Rev. iii. 10.
[i] John xvii. 15. 1 Pet. v. 8.
[k] Chap. xviii. 1, &c.

[l] Pſ. cxviii. 5. Mat. vii. 7. & xxi. 22. John xvi. 23, 24. Jam. i. 5, 6. 1 John v. 14.
[m] Prov. viii. 17. Jer. xxix. 12.
[n] Mat. vii. 9.

needeth. 9. And I ſay unto you, [l] Aſk, and it ſhall be given you: ſeek, and ye ſhall find: knock, and it ſhall be opened unto you. 10. For [m] every one that aſketh, receiveth: and he that ſeeketh, findeth: and to him that knocketh, it ſhall be opened. 11. If a ſon ſhall aſk bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a ſtone? or if he aſk a fiſh, will he for a fiſh give him a ſerpent? 12. Or if he ſhall aſk an egg, will he offer him a ſcorpion? 13. [n] If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more ſhall your heavenly Father give the holy Spirit to them that aſk him?

v. 1—13. Prayer is the great inſtituted means of maintaining communion with God: it is as the breath of every ſpiritually living ſoul. There can be no ſurer proof of our being dead in treſpaſſes and ſins than the habitual neglect of it. The prayerleſs live without God, and muſt die without hope. Our Lord himſelf was much in prayer, to ſet us an example: and his diſciples, deſirous to follow him, are repreſented here as preferring their requeſt to him, that he would inſtruct them both concerning the matter and manner of their prayers, and give them a form or directory, as John had done for his diſciples. Note, Unleſs the Lord teach us to pray, and pour out upon us the ſpirit of prayer and ſupplications, we can offer no acceptable ſervice.

1. Chriſt condeſcends to grant their requeſt, and gives them the following ſhort but moſt comprehenſive form of prayer:

Our Father which art in heaven; thou great Creator and univerſal Lord, whoſe throne is in the heavens, and to whom ten thouſand times ten thouſand angels and archangels pay their ceaſeleſs adorations; to thee do we ſinful worms and duſt of the earth addreſs our prayer, regarding thee not only as our common Parent and Maker of all things, but in the more endeared relation of our reconciled God and Father in Jeſus Chriſt. Hallowed be thy name: may I and every other creature exalt thy glory; and, according to the diſplays of thy glorious perfections made in thy works and word, may we ever admire, adore, honour, love, and ſerve thee. Thy kingdom come: erect the throne of thy grace in our hearts; O viſit us with thy ſalvation; give us the light of thy truth, and the effectual influences of thy Spirit, that we may become thy faithful ſubjects and ſervants. Send forth thy goſpel into the world; accompany it with thy mighty power, and make it effectual to the converſion of ſinners ſouls; build us up together in thy faith, fear, and love, and prepare us daily, in the exerciſe of all holy converſation and godlineſs, for thy eternal preſence; then come and take us to thy throne above, where, day and night for ever, we may ſerve thee in thy temple, and go out no more. Thy will be done, as in heaven, ſo in earth; may we emulate the lively, conſtant, univerſal obedience paid by thy celeſtial hoſts. Let thy revealed word be our invariable rule; and may we, without partiality and without hypocriſy, deſire to know and with delight fulfil what thou doſt command: and in every diſpenſation of thy providence may our ſpirits be reſigned, ſubmiſſive, ſatisfied, content to wait thy leiſure, and meekly caſting our care upon thee. Give us day by day our daily bread: on thee, O Lord, we depend for the needful proviſion for our bodies during the days of our pilgrimage; let us, as thy children, be ſupplied by thy bounty; enable us to live in a conſtant dependence upon thee, content with the portion thou art pleaſed to aſſign us, and confident thou wilt not leave us to want any manner of thing which is good for us: and, whilſt our bodies are fed by thy providence, let our ſouls be nouriſhed with the better bread of life which cometh down from heaven. And forgive us our ſins, many, great, and aggravated as they have been: blot them out through the Redeemer's blood, ſpeak peace and pardon to our guilty ſouls, and glorify thyſelf in mercy. And we are emboldened, Lord, to hope for an anſwer of peace; for we alſo forgive every one that is indebted to us, readily paſſing by their offences and treſpaſſes againſt us, as we hope to be forgiven ourſelves, and pleading thy promiſe, that, when we are enabled thus to do, we ſhall aſſuredly find mercy with thee our moſt highly and juſtly offended God. Remember therefore the word wherein thou haſt cauſed us to put our truſt. And lead us not into temptation; keep us from every ſnare laid for our ſouls, and ſuffer us not to fall under the trials we may be called to endure: but deliver us from evil, from the evil one, the evil world, and that greateſt enemy our own evil hearts, deceitful above all things and deſperately wicked. Save us with thine uttermoſt ſalvation, and bring us at laſt to that eternal kingdom where no temptation nor evil can ever enter.

2. Chriſt directs them as to the manner of their prayers; to be fervent, perſevering, and importunate; the effects of which he inſtances in the caſe of a man, who, having a ſudden viſit from a friend on his journey, and nothing for him to eat, ſhould run to his neighbour's houſe at midnight, and deſire to borrow three loaves. At that unſeaſonable hour his neighbour would be apt to make many excuſes, and endeavour to put him off, rather than diſturb his family: yet, if he is very importunate, that will uſually prevail; and, if but to be rid of his importunity, he will lend him what he aſks. Now if one, who ſhews ſo much reluctance to yield, is overcome by entreaty, much more will our gracious God, who is ever more willing to hear than we to pray, and wont to give more than we deſire or deſerve, anſwer the ſupplications of his people, if they faint not. Let them aſk in faith, nothing doubting; let them ſeek with diligence unwearied; let them knock aloud, with cries fervent and reiterated; and then they will ſurely find an anſwer of peace; their prayers ſhall be heard, their requeſts granted, and the door of mercy be opened.

3. Our Lord ſuggeſts yet farther encouragement to prayer from the conſideration of our relation to God as our father. If the bowels of earthly parents yearn over their children's wants, and none are found ſo inhuman as, inſtead of the bread and meat which they crave, to give them things noxious and poiſonous. If men, by nature ſinful, feel ſuch tenderneſs towards their offſpring, how infinitely ſurpaſſing are the compaſſions of our Father in heaven; and, as his power is equal to his love, much more will he ſupply all the ſpiritual neceſſities of our ſouls, and give his Holy Spirit, which compriſes all bleſſedneſs, to them that aſk him.

14. ¶ And [o] he was caſting out a devil, and it was dumb. And it came to paſs, when the devil was gone out, the dumb ſpake: and the people wondred. 15. But ſome of them ſaid, [p] He caſteth out devils through † Beelzebub the chief of the devils. 16. And others, tempting him, [q] ſought of him a ſign from heaven. 17. But he, knowing their thoughts, ſaid unto them, Every kingdom divided againſt itſelf is brought to deſolation: and a houſe divided againſt a houſe falleth. 18. If Satan alſo be divided againſt himſelf, how ſhall his kingdom ſtand? becauſe ye ſay, that I caſt out devils through Beelzebub. 19. And if I by Beelzebub caſt out devils, by whom do your ſons caſt them out? therefore ſhall they be your judges. 20. But if I [r] with the finger of God caſt out devils, no doubt [s] the kingdom of God is come upon you. 21. [t] When a ſtrong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace. 22. But [u] when a ſtronger than he ſhall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he truſted, and divideth his ſpoils. 23. [x] He that is not with me, is againſt me: and he that gathereth not with me, ſcattereth. 24. [y] When the unclean ſpirit is gone out of a man, [z] he walketh through dry places, ſeeking reſt: and finding none, he ſaith, I will return unto my houſe whence I came out. 25. And when he cometh, he findeth it ſwept and garniſhed. 26. Then goeth he, and taketh to him ſeven other ſpirits more wicked than himſelf, and they enter in, and dwell there: and [a] the laſt ſtate of that man is worſe than the firſt.

[o] Mat. ix. 32. & xii. 22.
[p] Mark iii. 22. John viii. 48, 52.
† Gr. Beelzebub.
Ver. 18, 19.
[q] Mat. xii. 38. & xvi. 1.
Ver. 29.
1 Cor. i. 22.
[r] Ex. viii. 19.
[s] Dan. ii. 44. Chap. i. 33.
[t] Mat. xii. 29.
[u] Iſa. xlix. 24. & liii. 12. Col. ii. 15.
[x] Mat. xii. 30.
[y] Mat. xii. 43.
[z] Job i. 7. 1 Pet. v. 8.
[a] Heb. vi. 4, &c. & x. 26. 2 Pet. ii. 20.

v. 14—26. The moſt amazing manifeſtations of Chriſt's power and glory, and his noble acts of beneficence towards men's bodies and ſouls, could not prevent the invenomed tongue of malice from caſting upon him the moſt malignant aſperſions. We have here,

1. The wicked inference drawn by the Phariſees, on ſeeing a moſt aſtoniſhing inſtance of Chriſt's power in the diſpoſſeſſing a devil from a man that was dumb, who immediately recovered his ſpeech to the amazement of the ſpectators. To counteract the effects of this miraculous cure among the people, ſome of them, who could not deny the fact, ſuggeſted that it was performed by a confederacy between Jeſus and the prince of the devils: whilſt others challenged him to give a ſign from heaven of his divine miſſion, as if all beſides was unſatisfactory. So perverſe and abſurd are uſually the objections of obſtinate infidelity.

2. Chriſt knew their thoughts, and what ſuggeſtions they were labouring to inſtil into the minds of the people, and confutes them with the moſt unanſwerable arguments. It was as abſurd to ſuppoſe ſo ſubtil an enemy as Satan would ever concur in eſtabliſhing that doctrine which radically overthrew his empire over the ſouls of men, as that any community or family ſhould propoſe their eſtabliſhment by diviſion between the members that compoſe it, which muſt evidently tend to their mutual deſtruction. Beſides, they condemned themſelves herein, when they admitted that many of their own kindred and followers, by exorciſms were, in the name of God, enabled to caſt out devils; and never ſuppoſed any diabolical combination in their caſe. This malignant oppoſition to him therefore tended moſt effectually to their own ruin and deſtruction; for, ſince the finger of God was evident in theſe miraculous works, and proved the kingdom of God was come, which the Meſſiah ſhould erect in the world, in rejecting the evidence of his miſſion they excluded themſelves from all the bleſſings and privileges of his kingdom. And to ſhew farther the real deſtruction of Satan's power by his miracles and doctrine, he illuſtrates the matter by a ſimilitude, v. 21, 22. As a ſtrong man will not quit his palace, which he holds with an armed force, unleſs he be vanquiſhed by a ſuperior foe, no more will Satan quit his hold of men's bodies and ſouls till compelled by the power of the almighty Saviour. When the prey therefore is taken from this mighty one, it is a ſure proof that his power is broken, and his intereſts ruined. Nor can there be any neutrality between Chriſt and Belial. They who halt between two opinions, who do not join Chriſt's cauſe, admit the evidence of his miſſion, and profeſs diſcipleſhip, muſt expect to be treated by him as enemies, and to be ſcattered in his wrath.

The Redeemer's victories over Satan are ſtill daily ſeen; yea, we are bound to experience them in our own ſouls, or it had been good for us we had never been born. For by nature we are children of wrath, born ſlaves of corruption, and under the power of this wicked one. Our deſperately wicked hearts are the palace where he ſits enthroned, and there his deſpotic orders are obeyed; by every prejudice, every allurement, every temptation, he ſtrengthens his intereſt againſt Chriſt and his truth; and flatters with viſions of peace the ſinner's ſoul, filling him with falſe confidence, keeping him in darkneſs with reſpect to his danger, lulling him aſleep in ſecurity, ſuffering him to entertain no doubt of the goodneſs of his heart and the ſafety of his ſtate, and turning him away from whatever tends to diſturb this deceitful repoſe. But, when Chriſt comes by his word and Spirit, the conflict begins, unuſual diſtreſs and terrors ſeize the ſoul, the enemy ſtruggles hard to keep his hold, but the ſtronger grace and power of the Saviour prevail, the ſtrong holds of Satan are laid low, the ſinner's proud imaginations humbled, his falſe confidences, his own righteouſneſs and ſelf-ſufficiency, levelled with the duſt, Chriſt comes and takes poſſeſſion of the heart, by his enlightening, ſanctifying grace diſpels the darkneſs of ignorance and error, and looſes the bonds of ſin and corruption, taking the prey from the mighty, and employing to his own glory the body, ſoul, ſpirit, and all the faculties of the redeemed ſinner.

3. Chriſt intimates to them their truly deplorable condition, under another ſimilitude. They were like a man, out of whom the evil ſpirit departed for a while, ſeeking a ſettlement elſewhere; but, finding none to his mind, he returned to his former houſe, and found it ready prepared for his reception; where, entering with ſeven worſe ſpirits, he took up his abode; and the caſe of that man was more deſperate than ever. Thus now that Satan's kingdom was ſhaken in Judea, he had retired for a while into the Gentile world; but when, after the reſurrection of Jeſus, and the preaching of his goſpel among the heathen, he could find no reſt there, his idols being demoliſhed and his votaries converted, then would he return again to the Jewiſh people, who had rejected their Meſſiah, and find them ready to welcome him into their hearts: with ſevenfold greater influence over them he ſhall take poſſeſſion of them for his own, and, by hurrying them on to fill up the meaſure of their iniquities, will haſten the deſtruction of their country, and effectually ruin both body and ſoul in hell.

This alſo repreſents the ſtate of every hypocrite and apoſtate. An outward reformation may be wrought, and Satan's power for a time ſuſpended; the houſe may be ſwept from groſſer immoralities, and garniſhed with the form of godlineſs, with common gifts of ſpeculative knowledge, or a fair ſhew of profeſſion, whilſt the heart remains unchanged, unhumbled, and unholy: for a while they endure; but, when the hour of temptation comes, Satan finds a ready acceſs, and enters with greater power than ever into the heart; the ſins which were before hid under the veil of hypocriſy break forth; apoſtaſy enſues: and theſe uſually prove the vileſt and moſt abandoned of all ſinners, and will receive the greater damnation.

27. ¶ And it came to paſs, as he ſpake theſe things, a certain woman of the company lift up her voice, and ſaid unto him, [b] Bleſſed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou haſt ſucked. 28. But he ſaid, Yea, [c] rather bleſſed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

b Chap. i. 48.

c Mat. vii. 21. Chap. viii. 21. Jam. i. 25.

v. 27, 28. Struck with the miracle ſhe had ſeen, and deeply affected with the convincing force of evidence which appeared in our Lord's diſcourſe, a gracious woman of the company could not reſtrain the glowing rapture of her heart, and burſt forth into expreſſions of wonder and admiration at what ſhe heard and ſaw, counting her inexpreſſibly bleſſed and happy who was the mother of ſuch a ſon. But Chriſt took occaſion to point her to an unſpeakably greater honour and happineſs, of which ſhe herſelf might become poſſeſſed: to hear the word of God and keep it, ſo to receive the love of the truth as to be ſaved thereby, was a far greater bleſſedneſs than, after the fleſh, to have been found among his neareſt relatives.

29. ¶ [d] And when the people were gathered thick together, he began to ſay, This is an evil generation: [e] they ſeek a ſign, and there ſhall no ſign be given it, but the ſign of Jonas the prophet. 30. For [f] as Jonas was a ſign unto the Ninevites, ſo ſhall alſo the Son of man be to this generation. 31. The queen of the ſouth ſhall riſe up in the judgment with the men of this generation, and condemn them: for [g] ſhe came from the utmoſt parts of the earth, to hear the wiſdom of Solomon; and behold, a greater than Solomon is here. 32. The men of Nineveh [h] ſhall riſe up in the judgment with this generation, and ſhall condemn it: for [i] they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here. 33. [k] No man, when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a ſecret place, neither under a buſhel; but on a candleſtick, that they which come in may ſee the light. 34. [l] The light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is ſingle, thy whole body alſo is full of light: but when thine eye is evil, thy body alſo is full of darkneſs. 35. Take heed therefore, that the light which is in thee be not darkneſs. 36. If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole ſhall be full of light, as when † the bright ſhining of a candle doth give thee light.

d Mat. xii. 38.

e 1 Cor. i. 22.

f Jon. i. 17. & ii. 10.

g 1 Kings x. 1.

h Jer. iii. 11. Ezek. xvi. 51. Rom. ii. 27.

i Jon. iii. 5.

k Mat. v. 15. Mark iv. 21. Chap. viii. 16.

l Mat. vi. 22.

† Gr. A candle by its bright ſhining.

v. 29—36. As they were ſo obſtinate in rejecting the ſigns he had given them, and ſtill demand one from heaven, as a ſubterfuge for their unbelief, Chriſt rejects their petition, and, before the people, who were gathered thick around him, aſſures them,

1. That no ſign ſhall be given them from heaven but only that of which Jonas was the type and figure, even the reſurrection of the Son of man from the dead; and their rejection of that would ſeal them up under final impenitence.

2. He warns them of the dreadfulneſs of their guilt, and the aggravated ruin which muſt be the conſequence of rejecting him and his goſpel. As he was far greater than Solomon or Jonah, the queen of Sheba who came ſo far to hear the wiſdom of the one, and the Ninevites who repented at the preaching of the other, would riſe up in a judgment-day to upbraid and condemn their perverſeneſs and unbelief.

3. They had yet the light of truth among them; they were therefore inexcuſable if they abode in darkneſs, and wilfully ſhut their eyes againſt conviction. They who embraced the goſpel, receiving it in the light and the love of it, would be infinitely bleſſed and benefited thereby; thoſe who rejected it would be given up juſtly to the blindneſs of their heart, and left to fall into eternal darkneſs. Note, (1.) The goſpel is the lighted candle, ſet up on the candleſtick of the public miniſtry, to guide benighted ſouls into the paths of everlaſting peace. (2.) What the eye is to the body, that faith is to the ſoul, enabling us to ſee the great things which pertain unto our eternal life, and to embrace them; and, as the bleſſed effect thereof, we are enabled to walk in comfort and holineſs, growing in grace, till the bleſſed day comes when no cloud of ignorance, or ſpot of ſin, ſhall hide the full luſtre of the beatific viſion. (3.) Whilſt the heart remains under the power of native corruption, the underſtanding is darkened, the judgment corrupted by depraved affections, and all the glories of the goſpel-day ſhine around ſuch in vain: as the ſun's brighteſt beams convey no light to the perſon whoſe organs of viſion are obſtructed by vicious humours. (4.) We have great need to beware how we trifle with the goſpel; left we provoke the Lord to withdraw the light of truth from us, and ſeal us up under judicial blindneſs and hardneſs of heart; and then, how great is that darkneſs!

37. ¶ And as he ſpake, a certain Phariſee beſought him to dine with him: and he went in and ſat down to meat. 38. And [m] when the Phariſee ſaw it, he marvelled that he had not firſt waſhed before dinner. 39. And the Lord ſaid unto him, [n] Now do ye Phariſees make clean the outſide of the cup and the platter: but [o] your inward part is full of ravening and wickedneſs. 40. Ye fools, did not he that made that which is without, make that which is within alſo? 41. But rather [p] give alms of ſuch things as you have: and behold, all things are clean unto you. 42. But [q] wo unto you Phariſees: for ye tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and [r] paſs over judgment and the love of God: theſe ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. 43. Wo unto you Phariſees: for [s] ye love the uppermoſt ſeats in the ſynagogues, and greetings in the markets. 44. [t] Wo unto you ſcribes and Phariſees, hypocrites: for [u] ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them. 45. ¶ Then anſwered one of the lawyers, and ſaid unto him, Maſter, thus ſaying, thou reproacheſt us alſo. 46. And he ſaid, [x] Wo unto you alſo, ye lawyers: for [y] ye lade men with burdens grievous to be born, and ye yourſelves touch not the m Mark vii. 3.

n Mat. xxiii. 25.

o Tit. i. 15.

p Iſa. lviii. 7. Dan. iv. 27. Chap. xii. 33.

q Mat. xxiii. 23.

r 1 Sam. xv. 22. Hoſ. vi. 6. Mic. vi. 8. Mat. ix. 13. & xii. 7.

s Mat. xxiii. 6. Mark xii. 39. 3 John 9.

t Mat. xxiii. 27.

u Pſ. v. 9.

x Mat. xxiii. 4.

y Iſa. x. 1. Acts xv. 10. Gal. vi. 13.

the burdens with one of your fingers. 47. [z] Wo unto you: for ye build the ſepulchres of the prophets, and your fathers killed them. 48. Truly [a] ye bear witneſs that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: for [b] they indeed killed them, and ye build their ſepulchres: 49. Therefore alſo ſaid the wiſdom of God, [c] I will ſend them prophets and apoſtles, and [d] ſome of them they ſhall ſlay and [e] perſecute: 50. That the blood of all the prophets, which was ſhed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation; 51. From [f] the blood of Abel unto [g] the blood of Zacharias, which periſhed between the altar and the temple: verily I ſay unto you, it ſhall be required of this generation. 52. [h] Wo unto you, lawyers: for [i] ye have taken away the key of knowledge: ye entred not in yourſelves, and them that were entring in, ye † hindred. 53. And as he ſaid theſe things unto them, the ſcribes and Phariſees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to ſpeak of many things: 54. Laying wait for him, and ſeeking to catch ſomething out of his mouth, that they might accuſe him.

[z] Mat. xxiii. 29.
[a] Pſ. lxiv. 8.
[b] Acts vii. 51, 52.
[c] Mat. xxiii. 34.
[d] Acts vii. 59. & xii. 2.
[e] Acts viii. 4.
[f] Gen. iv. 8.
[g] 2 Chron. xxiv. 21.
[h] Mat. xxiii. 13.
[i] Ezek. xxii. 25.
† Or forbad.

v. 37—54. We have here,

1. The invitation which one of the Phariſees gave our Lord to dine with him, which he accepted, went to the houſe, and ſat down to meat.

2. The Phariſee obſerved, and was much offended, that Chriſt did not waſh before he ſat down at the table, according to the tradition of the elders, which he and his brethren ſo ſcrupulouſly obſerved.

3. Chriſt, who knew this proud Phariſee's thoughts, took occaſion freely to reprove their folly and hypocriſy, who had placed the ſubſtance of their religion in theſe uſeleſs and ſuperſtitious obſervances, whilſt they neglected the great and moſt important commands of God. He denounces therefore his woes againſt them, [1.] For their hypocriſy, in ſhewing ſuch ſollicitude to obſerve the various waſhings of their cups and platters, in conformity with the traditions of the elders; whilſt they took no pains to cleanſe their ſouls from the deep pollutions of ſin, from the inward extortion and covetouſneſs, which rendered them abominable in the ſight of God. What egregious folly! If God required outward cleanneſs, muſt he not much more expect internal purity? The way to have a ſanctified uſe of their creature-comforts was by charitable diſtribution to the poor, (Deut. xxvi. 12—15.) and when this proceeded out of a pure heart, and faith unfeigned, all things would then be clean unto them (Tit. i. 15.) but without this, all the water in Jordan would never cleanſe them from their filthineſs. [2.] For their injuſtice and irreligion: whilſt they pretended the moſt ſcrupulous regard to God's ſervice, tithing even the herbs in their garden, they lived in the groſs violation of the moſt weighty precepts of the moral law; paſſing over judgment, partial as magiſtrates, extortioners in their dealings, and as void of the love of God, as of charity to their neighbour: duties, which being of the firſt importance, demanded their chief attention. [3.] For their pride. They were fond of preeminence; expected the moſt honourable ſeat in places of worſhip, where humility was eſpecially required; and affected ſounding titles of homage to be paid them in public, as if they were beings of a ſuperior rank. [4.] For their inward filthineſs. Notwithſtanding all the ſpecious appearances of devotion and piety which they wore, their hearts were a ſink of uncleanneſs; and as graves concealed, which men, ere they were aware, walked over, and were defiled by them; ſo did their principles, practice, and converſation, corrupt thoſe who followed their deſtructive ways.

4. One of the lawyers, or Scribes, whoſe office it was in general to expound the law to the people, conceived theſe reproofs on the Phariſees included reproaches on them alſo; and our Lord, without reſpect of perſons, does not ſpare them. They were alike culpable, and the ſame woes and wrath hung over them. [1.] Becauſe they added to the divine precepts an inſupportable load of human traditions; and whilſt to themſelves they were abundantly indulgent, and made the path of ſelf-denial ſufficiently eaſy, they exacted with rigour a ſcrupulous conformity from others to their human impoſitions. [2.] Becauſe they pretended reverence for the memory of the prophets, and erected noble monuments over the graves of thoſe whom their fathers had murdered; but even the care of the prophets tombs perpetuated the memory of their anceſtors crimes, which they were ready to repeat, being actuated by the ſame malignant ſpirit; therefore alſo ſaid the wiſdom of God, Jeſus the divine Logos, in whom are hid all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge, I will ſend them prophets and apoſtles, and ſome of them they ſhall ſlay and perſecute, exceeding all the outrages of their forefathers; more bloody-minded and inveterate againſt the miniſters of the goſpel; filling up hereby the meaſure of their iniquities, and bringing upon themſelves the vengeance due for all the righteous blood ſhed from Abel to Zacharias, who for his fidelity was ſtoned in the very courts of the temple, (2 Chron. xxiv. 20—22.) At the hands of this generation, ſaith he, ſhall it be required: and the prediction was fearfully verified in the dreadful and utter deſtruction ſhortly after poured out upon their city, temple, and nation. [3.] Becauſe they had taken away the key of knowledge; arrogating to themſelves the right of expounding the ſcriptures, they miſled the people by corrupt gloſſes. They perverted the texts which had the haineſt reference to the Meſſiah, and the cleareſt accompliſhment in Jeſus; inſtilling wrong notions of his temporal kingdom, they prejudiced the people againſt Chriſt and his goſpel; and refuſing to enter themſelves into the number of his diſciples, they uſed all their art and influence to prevent others from joining them who were diſpoſed to acknowledge his miſſion and character.

5. Cut with theſe ſharp rebukes, which unhumbled ſinners regard as affronts and reproaches, they began to urge him vehemently, with captious queſtions, and to provoke him to ſpeak of many things; trying to ruffle his temper, or draw from him ſome unguarded expreſſion, whereon to ground ſome accuſation againſt him; either to render him odious to the people, or obnoxious to the government; but his patience and prudence diſappointed their malice. Note, Fidelity in reproving men's ſins will often procure us inveterate enemies; and we have need watch over the temper of our hearts, and the door of our lips, when in the midſt of thoſe who we know lie in wait for our halting.

CHAP. XII.

Chriſt here, 1. Warns his diſciples to take heed of hypocriſy, and of cowardiſe in profeſſing Chriſtianity and preaching the goſpel, ver. 1—12. 2. He gives a caution againſt covetouſneſs, ver. 13—21. 3. He encourageth his diſciples to caſt all their care upon God, and engageth them to make religion their main buſineſs, ver. 22—34. 4. He ſtirs them up to watchfulneſs, ver. 35—48. 5. He bids them expect trouble and perſecution, ver. 49—53. 6. He warns the people to obſerve and improve the day of their opportunities, and to make their peace with God in time, ver. 54—59.

1. IN the mean time, [a] when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, inſomuch that they trode upon one another, he began to ſay unto his diſciples firſt of all, [b] Beware ye of the leaven of the Phariſees, which is hypocriſy. 2. For [c] there is nothing covered, that ſhall not be revealed; neither hid, that ſhall not be known. 3. Therefore whatſoever ye have ſpoken in darkneſs, ſhall be heard in the light: and that which ye have ſpoken in the ear in cloſets, ſhall be proclaimed upon the houſe-tops. 4. [d] And I ſay unto you, [e] my friends, [f] Be not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do. 5. But I will forewarn you whom you ſhall fear: Fear him, which after he hath killed, hath power to caſt into hell; yea, I ſay unto you, Fear him. 6. Are not five ſparrows ſold for two † farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God? 7. But even [g] the very hairs of your head are all numbred. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many ſparrows. 8. Alſo I ſay unto you, [h] Whoſoever ſhall confeſs me before men, [i] him ſhall the Son of man alſo confeſs before the angels of God. 9. But [k] he that denieth me before men, ſhall be denied before the angels of God. 10. And [l] whoſoever ſhall ſpeak a word againſt the Son of man, it ſhall be forgiven him: [m] but unto him that blaſphemeth againſt the Holy Ghoſt, it ſhall not be forgiven. 11. And [n] when they bring you unto the ſynagogues and unto magiſtrates and powers, [o] take ye no thought how or what thing ye ſhall anſwer, or what ye ſhall ſay: 12. For the holy Ghoſt ſhall teach you in the ſame hour what ye ought to ſay.

[a] Mat. xvi. 6. Mark viii. 16.
[b] Mat. xvi. 12.
[c] Mat. x. 26. Mark iv. 22. Chap. viii. 17.
[d] Mat. x. 28, &c.
[e] John xv. 15.
[f] Iſa. li. 13.
† Mat. x. 29.
[g] 1 Sam. xiv. 45. Chap. xxi. 18. Acts xxvii. 34.
[h] Rom. x. 10.
[i] Rev. iii. 5.
[k] Chap. ix. 26. 2 Tim. ii. 12.
[l] Mat. xii. 31. Mark iii. 28.
[m] 1 John v. 16.
[n] Mat. x. 19. Mark xiii. 11.
[o] Jer. i. 7. Chap. xxi. 14.

v. 1—12. Our Lord inculcated the ſame truths on different occaſions. We need line upon line, and precept upon precept. A vaſt auditory was now aſſembled; and, as he was ever ready to ſpeak when they deſired to hear, he took occaſion,

1. To caution his diſciples in public againſt that hypocriſy of the Phariſees whhich he had juſt before ſo ſharply rebuked in private. He calls it the leaven of the Phariſees. Their hearts, lips, and lives were wholly infected thereby: ſwoln with pride and ſelf-importance, and ſoured with envy and malice, all their ſpecious pretences to religion were but an abomination. Chriſt therefore warns his diſciples to ſhun this hateful evil themſelves, and not to be impoſed upon by the fair profeſſions of theſe deſigning men. And he urges, as a powerful argument, the ſure detection of hypocriſy, either in this world, or in the day when the ſecrets of all hearts ſhall be revealed. Their moſt retired communications, even the whiſpers in a cloſet, muſt all ſhortly be proclaimed before the aſſembled world. How careful then need we be over every thought and word, conſidering that all-ſeeing and heart-ſearching God with whom we have to do.

2. He charges them to be faithful to their truſt, and never to ſuppreſs, through fear or ſhame, one tittle of their meſſage; but what they have learnt of him in private, that muſt they boldly and publicly declare in the face of all oppoſition. And to encourage them to approve their fidelity unſhaken, he addreſſes them, [1.] As his friends, whom he dearly loved, and would not fail to ſupport under every trial. [2.] He lets them know, that the moſt inveterate malice of their foes can only reach the periſhing body; they cannot touch the immortal ſoul. Better therefore, infinitely better would it be for them, by a ſteady teſtimony to the truth, bravely to put their lives in their hands, and meet, if the Lord ſo permitted, the worſt death their enemies could inflict; than by a cowardly ſilence, or ſuppreſſion of the offenſive doctrines of the goſpel, to provoke a jealous God, whoſe wrath reaches not only to the body, but to the ſoul, ſinking both into the flames of hell, and enduring to eternity. The fear of him ſhould ſwallow up every other fear. [3.] That guardian Providence, which watches over and orders the moſt minute events, would take peculiar care of them. Not a ſparrow is forgotten of God, or falls unnoticed; yea, the very hairs of their head are numbered; their moſt invenomed foes cannot touch one of them without divine permiſſion; therefore they need not fear what man can do unto them. [4.] According to their fidelity or unfaithfulneſs, ſo would they be owned or diſowned by him at the laſt great day. They who, fearleſs of reproach or ſuffering, dared make confeſſion of him in the world, ſhall be with honour acknowledged as his diſciples, in the preſence of angels at the reſurrection of the juſt; whilſt to decline bearing a teſtimony for him before men, to avoid loſs or infamy, would infallibly provoke Jeſus to renounce all relation to them, and expoſe them to everlaſting ſhame and contempt in the dreadful day of judgment. When we are tempted to be aſhamed of or to deny our profeſſion, let us ſeriouſly remember this warning, and be wiſe. [5.] Contempt of their teſtimony, and blaſphemy againſt the Holy Ghoſt, would expoſe their perſecutors to endleſs wrath. All the revilings now caſt out againſt the Son of man in his ſtate of humiliation were pardonable; but after his aſcenſion, and the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon them, to aſcribe the miracles they wrought in confirmation of the reſurrection of Jeſus, to diabolical agency, would be to reſiſt the only means of conviction, and muſt exclude ſuch blaſphemers from the poſſibility of repentance or forgiveneſs. [6.] In all emergencies, where they were called to anſwer before the tribunals of their perſecutors, whether Jews or Gentiles, Chriſt undertakes to furniſh them with a tongue, and wiſdom which none of their adverſaries ſhall be able to gainſay or reſiſt. They need not take thought a moment what to ſpeak in their own defence; the Holy Ghoſt ſhould effectually furniſh them with every thing proper for the occaſion; and with ſuch encouragements before them, they may boldly go forth, and fear not.

13. ¶ And one of the company ſaid unto him, Maſter, ſpeak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance [p] John xviii. 36. with me. 14. And he ſaid unto him, [p] Man, who made me a judge, or a divider over you? 15. And he ſaid [q] 1 Tim. vi. 7. unto them, [q] Take heed and beware of covetouſneſs: for a man's life conſiſteth not in the abundance of the things which he poſſeſſeth. 16. And he ſpake a parable unto them, ſaying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully: 17. And he thought within himſelf, ſaying, What ſhall I do, becauſe I have no room where to beſtow my fruits? 18. And he ſaid, This will I do:
I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I beſtow all my fruits and my goods. 19. And I [r] Eccleſ. xi. 9. 1 Cor. xv. 32. Jam. v. 5. will ſay to my ſoul, [r] Soul, thou haſt much goods laid up for many years; take thine eaſe, eat, drink, and be merry. 20. But God ſaid unto him, Thou fool, this night [s] Job xx. 22. & xxvii. 8. Pſ. lii. 7. [s] thy ſoul ſhall be required of thee: [t] then whoſe ſhall [t] Pſ. xxxix. 6. Jer. xvii. 11. thoſe things be which thou haſt provided? 21. [u] So is [u] Mat. vi. 20. Ver. 33. 1 Tim. vi. 18. he that layeth up treaſure for himſelf, and is not rich towards God.

v. 13—21. We have here,

1. The application made to Chriſt by one of the company, deſiring him, as a perſon of authority, to interpoſe on his behalf with his brother, who either unjuſtly kept him out of his part of the inheritance, or being the elder, and having by law a double portion, this worldly-minded man would fain come in for an equal ſhare.

2. Chriſt refuſes to interpoſe. The exerciſe of temporal power and authority did not belong to that kingdom he came to eſtabliſh; nay, had he interfered, they would have perhaps made it a ground of accuſation, and quarrelled with him for daring to make himſelf a ruler and a judge. (See Exod. ii. 14.)

3. He takes occaſion from this unſeaſonable application to warn his diſciples againſt the great ſin and danger of covetouſneſs, which being a moſt inſinuating evil, they had need carefully guard their hearts againſt it. Men are apt to fancy, that this world's goods are moſt eſſential to happineſs; but a man's life conſiſteth not in the abundance of the things which he poſſeſſeth: they conduce nothing to the ſpiritual ſatisfaction of the ſoul; they cannot prolong our lives a day, an hour; nay, inſtead of being comforts to us, they often prove a plague and ſnare here below, beſides all the hindrances they put in our way, to obſtruct our entrance into the kingdom of heaven. To give the greater force to his admonition, he illuſtrates it by a ſtriking example.

The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully. (χωρα, a region.) His eſtate was vaſt, as the produce of it was abundant. Theſe common gifts of providence the evil and unthankful often enjoy in the largeſt meaſure; but we may not judge of God's love or of real felicity from hence. The rich man is far from being uſually the happy man. We are told,

[1.] What anxious cares his wealth occaſioned. He thought within himſelf, ſaying, What ſhall I do, becauſe I have no room where to beſtow my fruits? He appears as full of perplexity as if he knew not where to get another morſel to ſatisfy the cravings of hunger. Such is the uſual effect of increaſing wealth; it brings an increaſe of cares and diſquietude.

[2.] The reſult of his thoughts was this: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I beſtow all my fruits and my goods; a reſolution, that ſpoke great folly, as well as ungodlineſs. He calls thoſe his fruits, which were really but lent him of the Lord. To hoard up all, when ſo many empty barns of the poor, and hungry bellies might have charitably eaſed him of ſomewhat of his load of plenty, was vilely covetous. To call theſe his goods, which muſt periſh in the uſing, proved his utter ignorance of a better portion. Greater barns would only bring greater expence and greater care, beſides the plague of building; and his preſumptuous I will, ſhewed he left God far above out of his ſight. So ready are they who truſt in uncertain riches to forget the living God.

[3.] He flatters himſelf with the moſt pleaſing proſpects, when his ſchemes were compleated, of ſitting down and enjoying at eaſe the ſtore he had collected. I will ſay to my ſoul, Soul, thou haſt much goods laid up for many years; take thine eaſe, eat, drink, and be merry. How abſurd the concluſion? Could his ſoul reliſh the gratifications of a beaſt, or feel any ſatisfaction from the indulgence of appetite? The wealth of the world, and the pleaſures of ſenſe, are not a portion at all ſuited to its wants: theſe God alone with a ſenſe of his love and favour can ſupply. He promiſed himſelf many years to enjoy his affluence, when he knew not what a day might bring forth; and enſured the ſafety of his goods, when in the ſhorteſt ſpace fire or tempeſt might lay his ſtorehouſes in ruins: ſo precarious are all our earthly poſſeſſions. But if he ſaw his barns riſe, and brooded over his plenty, eaſe was what he could no more ſecure to his body than his ſoul. All his fruits and his goods could no more alleviate the pains of an aching head, than cure the pangs of an aching heart. One ſtroke of ſickneſs or diſeaſe muſt embitter all his abundance, and leave him pining in the midſt of plenty: one unhappy incident in his family might forbid him to taſte the leaſt ſatisfaction in all his affluence. So poor, ſo precarious a portion is all ſublunary good.

[4.] God ſuddenly confounds his ſchemes, and blaſts his hopes. He ſaid unto him, Thou fool, this night thy ſoul ſhall be required of thee: then whoſe ſhall thoſe things be which thou haſt provided? Death in a moment darkens all the gay proſpect, and daſhes the gaudy bubble which flattering hope had blown. The day is near, when every carnal worldling, whom men admired as wiſe, and praiſed as doing well for himſelf, (Pſ. xliv. 18.) ſhall feel with terrible conviction his egregious folly, and hear thou fool pronounced upon him by the lips of eternal wiſdom. The affluence of the wicked muſt quickly change its owner, and nothing remain for them but a dreary grave, and a certain fearful looking-for of judgment. Death, whenever it comes to them, will be a terrible ſurprize; a dreadful night of horror will ſurround them; and, dragged reluctant from the body, their ſoul, their guilty ſoul, muſt go where riches profit not to bribe a verdict in their favour, nor can all their wealth procure one drop of water to cool their tongue in thoſe eternal flames which never ſhall be quenched.

[5.] Our Lord applies the parable in general to every worldly-minded man, that layeth up treaſure for himſelf; ſets his heart upon riches; expects his happineſs from them; and all whoſe concerns are engroſſed merely about himſelf, without regard to God's glory, or care for his neighbour: and is not rich towards God; deſtitute of the treaſures of grace, and without the leaſt title to the eternal inheritance: ſo is he; ſo abſurd are his ſchemes, ſo fruitleſs his cares, and ſo miſerable will be his end. Let us be warned therefore in time, and not fooliſhly prefer gold to godlineſs, the body to the ſoul, and time to eternity.

22. ¶ And he ſaid unto his diſciples, Therefore I ſay unto you, [x] Take no thought for your life, what ye [x] Mat. vi. 25. Phil. iv. 6.
ſhall eat; neither for the body, what ye ſhall put on.
23. The life is more than meat, and the body is more than

than raiment. 24. Conſider the ravens: for they neither ſow nor reap; which neither have ſtorehouſe nor barn; and [y] God feedeth them: How much more are ye better than the fowls? 25. And which of you with taking thought can add to his ſtature one cubit? 26. If ye then be not able to do that thing which is leaſt, why take ye thought for the reſt? 27. Conſider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they ſpin not: and yet I ſay unto you, that Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of theſe. 28. If then God ſo clothe the graſs, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is caſt into the oven: how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith? 29. And ſeek not ye what ye ſhall eat, or what ye ſhall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind. 30. For all theſe things do the nations of the world ſeek after: and your Father knoweth that ye have need of theſe things. 31. ¶ But rather [z] ſeek ye the kingdom of God, and all theſe things ſhall be added unto you. 32. Fear not, † little flock; [a] for it is your Father's good pleaſure to give you the kingdom. 33. [b] Sell that ye have, and give alms: provide yourſelves bags which wax not old, a treaſure in the heavens that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth. 34. [c] For where your treaſure is, there will your heart be alſo. 35. [d] Let your loins be girded about, and [e] your lights burning? 36. And ye yourſelves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. 37. [f] Bleſſed are thoſe ſervants, whom the Lord when he cometh ſhall find watching: verily I ſay unto you, that he ſhall gird himſelf, and make them to ſit down to meat, and will come forth and ſerve them. 38. And if he ſhall come in the ſecond watch, or come in the third watch, and find them ſo, bleſſed are thoſe ſervants. 39. And this know, that [g] if the good man of the houſe had known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have ſuffered his houſe to be broken through. 40. [h] Be ye therefore ready alſo: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

[y] Job xxxviii. 41. Pſ. civ. 27. & cxlvii. 9.
[z] 1 Kings iii. 11, &c. Pſ. xxxiv. 9, 10. & xxxvii. 25. Mark x. 30. 1 Tim. iv. 8.
† Gr. Little little flock. Chap. xiii. 23.
[a] Mat. xi. 25, 26.
[b] Mat. xix. 21. Chap. xvi. 9. Acts ii. 45. & iv. 34. 1 Tim. vi. 19.
[c] Mat. vi. 21.
[d] Eph. vi. 14. 1 Pet. i. 13.
[e] Mat. xxv. 1.
[f] Mat. xxiv. 46.
[g] Mat. xxiv. 43. 1 Theſ. v. 2. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. iii. 3. & xvi. 15.
[h] Mat. xxiv. 44. & xxv. 13. 1 Theſ. v. 6.

v. 22—40. The following inſtructions we have conſidered before in the other Evangeliſts; but they are of ſuch importance, as to deſerve our hearing once, yea twice, that they may be graven on our hearts; for nothing is a more fatal ſnare to the ſoul, than inordinate deſire after the wealth of this world.

1. Chriſt enjoins his diſciples to caſt their care upon God, and never to diſquiet or perplex themſelves about a worldly proviſion, anxious ſollicitude being as criminal as ſenſual indulgence. We muſt take no thought about the neceſſaries of life, diſquieting ourſelves with the fears of hunger or nakedneſs; but in the way of duty chearfully truſt him with our ſupport, who gave us our being, v. 23. Even the ravens are fed by his providence, and the lily is cloathed with beauty, ſuch as Solomon arrayed in all his glory could not vie with: and ſhall he not much more feed and cloathe us, who in excellence, as creatures, are ſo much better, and, as his peculiar people, are ſo much dearer to him? The cauſe of all our anxious cares and fears is our unbelief: not that our ſollicitude will mend our circumſtances; it is as uſeleſs as it is needleſs. We cannot add to our ſtature a cubit, or to our age a day; and if in the leaſt things all our thought muſt be unavailing, why ſhould we diſtreſs ourſelves about the reſt? Dependent therefore on the Divine Providence, we need not be diſtreſſed, perplexed, and fluctuating like meteors, about a ſubſiſtence; for this would ſhew we had no more confidence in God than heathens, and intimate the moſt criminal diſtruſt of the power and care of him we call our Father, who knows all our wants, is able to ſupply them, and hath engaged that we ſhall want no manner of thing that is truly good for us. We have indeed greater things in view than food and raiment, even the kingdom of God, the bleſſings of grace and glory: theſe muſt engage our firſt concern, and then we may ſafely truſt the Lord with all our temporal affairs.

2. He encourages them not to fear want, when they are the aſſured heirs of the eternal King. Fear not, little flock: Chriſt's children are like a flock, united in love under their kind ſhepherd's care: a little flock; few, compared with the world which lieth in wickedneſs: yet, though compaſſed with enemies, they need not fear: their Redeemer is mighty as he is gracious. It is your Father's good pleaſure to give you the kingdom; a kingdom of glory that fadeth not away; the gift of ſovereign grace, beſtowed not according to our deſert, but the good pleaſure of his own will; and if he hath provided a throne in the heavens, we may reſt aſſured he will not leave us to want on earth. Inſtead therefore of deſiring to hoard unneceſſary wealth, or being under anxiety about food or raiment, our hearts and hands ſhould be open, according to our abilities, to relieve the neceſſitous; and, when God's providence calls for it, ready to part with all we poſſeſs, ſending it before us, as the ſureſt and moſt abiding portion, which will enrich us in the eternal world, where it will be incorruptible and inexhauſtible. This will raiſe our affections to high and heavenly things, and then where our treaſure is, our heart will be.

3. He bids them prepare for the day when he, their Maſter, ſhall come to take them with him to the manſions provided for them, and to partake of the pleaſures which are at his right hand for evermore. Chriſt, our Maſter, is gone up to heaven, to prepare for himſelf his ſpouſe, the church; we are his ſervants, appointed to watch till his return, and to be ready to meet him, the oil of grace burning in our lamps, and our ſouls active in his ſervice. As many as he finds thus expecting him, and welcoming his arrival, he will reward with diſtinguiſhed bleſſedneſs, and entertain them with all the unutterable delights of the eternal world, taking them with him to ſit down in the kingdom of God. As the time of Chriſt's coming is uncertain, like the wiſe houſholder, we need be habitually on our guard, and awake with the firſt alarm, that we may not be unexpectedly ſurpriſed, as by a thief in the night; for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not, and wo to thoſe whom he finds ſleeping in ſin and carnal ſecurity.

41. ¶ Then Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, ſpeakeſt thou this parable unto us, or even to all? 42. And the Lord ſaid, [i] Who then is that faithful and wiſe ſteward, whom his lord ſhall make ruler over his houſhold, to give them their portion of meat in due ſeaſon? 43. Bleſſed is that ſervant, whom his lord when he cometh ſhall find ſo doing. 44. Of a truth I ſay unto you, that [k] he will make him ruler over all that he hath. 45. But and if that ſervant ſay in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and ſhall begin to beat the men-ſervants, and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken: 46. The lord of that ſervant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, [l] and will cut him in ſunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. 47. And [m] that ſervant which knew his Lord's will, and prepared not himſelf, neither did according to his will, ſhall be beaten with many ſtripes. 48. But [n] he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of ſtripes, ſhall be beaten with few ſtripes. For unto whomſoever much is given, of him ſhall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will aſk the more. 49. ¶ [o] I am come to ſend fire on the earth, and what will I, if it be already kindled? 50. But [p] I have a baptiſm to be baptized with, and how am I ſtraitned till it be accompliſhed! 51. Suppoſe ye that I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; [q] but rather diviſion. 52. For from henceforth there ſhall be five in one houſe divided, three againſt two, and two againſt three. 53. [r] The father ſhall be divided againſt the ſon, and the ſon againſt the father: the mother againſt the daughter, and the daughter againſt the mother: the mother-in-law againſt her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law againſt her mother-in-law.

[i] Mat. xxiv. 45. & xxv. 21. 1 Cor. iv. 2.
[k] Chap. xxii. 29.
[l] Mat. xxiv. 51.
[m] Num. xv. 30. Deut. xxv. 2. Jam. iv. 17.
[n] Lev. v. 17.
[o] Mat. x. 34. Ver. 51.
[p] Mat. xx. 22.
[q] Mic. vii. 6. John ix. 16. & x. 19.
[r] Mat. x. 35.

v. 41—53. Peter, the warm-hearted diſciple, the ready ſpokeſman, deſires to know if our Lord's diſcourſe was directed to the apoſtles in particular, or to all the diſciples in general? Hereupon,

1. Chriſt replies to his queſtion. What he had ſpoken had both a general view to all the diſciples, and was particularly applicable to them who were advanced to the moſt honoured poſts, as ſtewards of the Lord's houſhold. (1.) Their duty was, as put in truſt with the care of men's ſouls, to be wiſe and faithful diſpenſers of the goſpel, and the inſtituted ordinances of grace, conſidering the ſeveral caſes and ſtates of thoſe to whom they miniſtred, and ſeaſonably and rightly dividing to each the word of truth, for their conviction, edification, or comfort. (2.) The bleſſedneſs of fidelity would be great: whoever ſhall be found at Chriſt's appearing thus zealouſly, diligently, perſeveringly employed, ſhall be highly advanced by him in glory, and placed, like Joſeph in Egypt, at the king's right hand. (3.) As great will be the miſery, ſin, and danger of thoſe who ſhall be found unfaithful. It is ſhocking to think there ſhould be ſuch a character as a miniſter of Chriſt in profeſſion, quarrelſome, oppreſſive, abuſive, prophane, drunken; yet ſuch there have been, there will be; and the cauſe of theſe, and the like enormities, is intimated, ſuch a one ſaith, My Lord delayeth his coming, and therefore in ſecurity goes on; negligent and treacherous to his truſt, and inſenſible to the awful account he muſt ſhortly make. But ſuch inſenſibility retards not the approach of danger, the dreadful hour of reckoning draws near, the Judge will ſuddenly and unexpectedly appear, and pronounce their tremendous doom: according to the light and advantages they have enjoyed, ſhall be the meaſure of their puniſhment. The ſtripes ſhall be fewer, where through ignorance men have erred and offended; whilſt the heavieſt ſtrokes of vengeance ſhall fall on thoſe who have abuſed the greateſt gifts, and in oppoſition to knowledge and conſcience have been unfaithful to their truſt: and this is agreeable to the ſtricteſt rules of equity, that where a greater truſt hath been committed, a proportionable improvement ſhould be required; whilſt unfaithfulneſs and negligence in ſuch a caſe, become more aggravatedly criminal.

2. Chriſt admoniſhes them of the fiery trials which he and they muſt go through. His goſpel, though breathing the ſpirit of peace and love, yet being ſo oppoſite to the pride and prejudices of men, would give occaſion to the bittereſt animoſities and perſecutions. This fire was already kindled in the rancour ſhewn him by the Scribes and Phariſees, but will he deſiſt from his glorious undertaking, or ſuppreſs the offenſive truths? No, in no wiſe. Since by no other means, than the ſufferings he foreſaw, the ſalvation of his people could be obtained, he willingly offers himſelf to the bloody baptiſm before him, eagerly longing for the time when it ſhould be accompliſhed in the garden, and on the croſs. How aſtoniſhing his love towards us! He forewarns his diſciples, that they muſt expect their croſs alſo; far from that temporal kingdom of peace and proſperity with which they flattered themſelves, war and tumult are before them. The goſpel they preached would be oppoſed with the fierceſt rage of men and devils, and the greateſt miſeries and confuſions be the conſequence. Even among neareſt relations it would occaſion the moſt grievous diviſions: in families where part ſhould be converted, and part remain in their ſins, the bittereſt animoſities would ariſe in the boſoms of thoſe who rejected the counſel of God. And ſuch will be their enmity againſt thoſe who embrace the truth, that it will break through all ties of blood, duty, and friendſhip; making the father unnatural, the ſon undutiful; even in the hearts of thoſe, whoſe ſofter ſex ſhould breathe greater mildneſs, the ſpirit of ſuperſtition and bigotry will quench all natural affection, ſo that even parents ſhall perſecute their children, and children their parents; exaſperated by the reproof of their holy lives, and inflamed with rage at the gentleſt remonſtrances, and the moſt endearing perſuaſions of thoſe who labour for their converſion. And thus it continues to this day, and muſt to the end of the world: let us not think it ſtrange.

[s] Mat. xvi. 2. 54. ¶ And he ſaid alſo to the people, [s] When ye ſee a cloud riſe out of the weſt, ſtraightway ye ſay, There cometh a ſhower; and ſo it is. 55. And when ye ſee the ſouth-wind blow, ye ſay, There will be heat; and it cometh to paſs. 56. Ye hypocrites, ye can diſcern the face of the ſky, and of the earth: but how is it, [t] Chap. xix. 44. that [t] ye do not diſcern this time? 57. Yea, and why even of yourſelves judge ye not what is right? 58. ¶ [u] [u] Mat. v. 25. When thou goeſt with thine adverſary to the magiſtrate, [x] Pſ. xxxii. 6. Iſa. lv. 6. [x] as thou art in the way, [y] give diligence that thou mayeſt be delivered from him; leſt he hale thee to [z] the judge, [y] Job xxii. 21. and the judge deliver thee to [a] the officer, and the officer [z] John v. 22. caſt thee into priſon. 59. I tell thee, thou ſhalt not de[a] Mat. xiii. 41. part thence, till thou haſt paid the very laſt mite.

v. 54—59. The former diſcourſe was addreſſed to the diſciples, this to the multitude.

1. Chriſt upbraids them for their ſtupidity and perverſeneſs in not attending to, or rejecting the evidences of his miſſion. They judged what weather there would be by the prognoſticks which experience had taught them: how inexcuſable then were they not to diſcern this time, fixed for the Meſſiah's appearing; and how hypocritical and falſe their pretences to wiſdom and knowledge of the prophets, when they diſregarded or perverted the plaineſt declarations of the ſcriptures, concerning the birth, family, life, doctrine, and kingdom of the Meſſiah, and thus knew not the day of their viſitation! Amazing, that they ſhould not, even of themſelves, diſcern what was right, where the evidence was ſo cogent; and that whilſt they ſhewed obſervation and judgment in matters of leſs concern, in this of infinitely greater moment to their ſouls, they ſhould act ſo ſtrangely infatuated!

2. He admoniſhes them of the neceſſity of a ſpeedy accommodation of their matters with an offended God, before it was too late. As common prudence would dictate the neceſſity of ſeeking an amicable agreement with our adverſary, rather than puſh matters to extremities where the cauſe muſt infallibly be carried againſt us, and a priſon be the iſſue of the trial; much more ſhould we, in the matters of our ſouls, ſhew greater concern to obtain reconciliation with God, who by our ſins is become our adverſary. To attempt our own juſtification before him, were folly; as to eſcape from his ſentence, is impoſſible. Whilſt therefore, we are in the way of life, our wiſdom is to caſt ourſelves at his feet, acknowledging our offences; and through faith in Jeſus, our ſurety, to plead for mercy, leaſt death ſhould drag us to his dread tribunal in unpardoned guilt, and the miniſters of vengeance ſeize us in conſequence of the judgment pronounced, and caſt us into the priſon of hell; where even eternal torments can never ſatisfy offended juſtice, or cancel the infinite debt of ſin.

CHAP. XIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The good improvement Chriſt made of the maſſacre of ſome Galileans, ver. 1—5. 2. The parable of the barren fig-tree, ver. 6—9. 3. Chriſt's healing a poor infirm woman on the ſabbath-day, ver. 11—17. 4. A repetition of the parables of the grain of muſtard-ſeed, and the leaven, ver. 18—22. 5. His anſwer to the queſtion concerning the number of the ſaved, ver. 23—30. 6. The ſlight he put upon Herod's malice and menaces, and the doom of Jeruſalem read, ver. 31—35.

1. THERE were preſent at that ſeaſon, ſome that told him of the Galileans, whoſe blood Pilate had mingled with their ſacrifices. 2. And Jeſus an-ſwering, ſaid unto them, Suppoſe ye that theſe Galileans were ſinners above all the Galileans, becauſe they ſuffered ſuch things? 3. I tell you, Nay: but except ye repent, ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh. 4. Or thoſe eighteen, upon whom the tower of Siloam fell, and ſlew them, think ye that they were † ſinners above all men † Gr. Debtors. Mat. vi. 12. & xviii. 24. that dwell in Jeruſalem? 5. I tell you, Nay: but [a] except ye repent, ye ſhall all likewiſe periſh. [a] Ezek. xviii. 30.

v. 1—5. We have here,

1. A tragical ſtory reported to our Lord by ſome who were preſent. Probably theſe Galileans had been followers of Judas of Galilee, Acts v. 37. of whom Pilate having got information, fell upon them when they came up to the temple to worſhip, and mingled their blood with their ſacrifices. Perhaps what our Lord had been ſpeaking of the neceſſity of always watching, and the importance of ſecuring peace with God, gave occaſion to the remark: or, as it ſeems from the ſequel, they meant to inſinuate, that theſe muſt needs be very wicked perſons, who were given up to ſo dreadful a judgment.

2. Jeſus ſeeks to turn this event to their profiting, and to ground thereon an exhortation to repentance. He reproves the uncharitable cenſure they ſeemed to caſt on theſe unhappy men, as if their crimes had brought them to this untimely death, whereas ſuch afflictive viſitations were no proof of guilt; the beſt of men have ſometimes ſuffered moſt. Nor may we judge of God's love or hatred to any man by the outward diſpenſations of his providence. If they meant to reflect on them as Galileans, and thereby to throw ſome reproach on Chriſt and his diſciples, who were their countrymen, Chriſt inſtances a recent calamity of as melancholy a nature which lately happened at Jeruſalem, when eighteen perſons were ſuddenly cruſhed to death by the fall of a tower in Siloam; ſo that theſe calamities were not ſingular, or confined to perſons in one place more than another; nor were they to conclude, that theſe men periſhed becauſe they were greater ſinners than others in Galilee or Jeruſalem. But he ſolemnly warns them, that a heavier doom hung over their heads except they repented, when their blood too ſhould be ſhed by the Roman ſword in the midſt of their ſacred ſolemnities, and they be buried as the men in the tower of Siloam, under the ruins of their city, and periſh temporally and eternally; and this is applicable to every ſinner. (1.) His deſert is to periſh under the wrath of God. (2.) Nothing but repentance can prevent his ruin. (3.) The judgments of God on others are loud warnings to us. (4.) Conſciouſneſs of our own ſinfulneſs and provocations, ſhould make us very careful how we cenſure others. (5.) They who are ſevere in judging, may expect judgment without mercy.

6. ¶ He ſpake alſo this parable: [b] A certain man had [b] Iſa. v. 2. Mat. xxi. 33.
a fig-tree planted in his vineyard, and he came and ſought [c] fruit thereon, and found none. 7. Then ſaid [c] John xv. 2, 8.
he unto the dreſſer of his vineyard, Behold, theſe three years I come ſeeking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none: [d] cut it down, why cumbreth it the ground? 8. [d] Dan. iv. 23.
And he anſwering, ſaid unto him, Lord, [e] let it alone [e] Heb. vii. 25.
this year alſo, till I ſhall dig about it, and dung it: 9.
And if it bear fruit well: and if not, then [f] after that, [f] Rom. ix. 22.
thou ſhalt cut it down.

v. 6—9. This parable is deſigned to enforce the foregoing admonition. It ſeems primarily to be applicable to the Jewiſh people, bleſſed with peculiar advantages, but diſappointing God's expectations; yet ſpared a little longer at the Redeemer's interceſſion, till having tried them another ſpace, and uſed in vain the moſt powerful means for their converſion in the miſſion of his apoſtles, at laſt he devotes them to utter ruin for their unbelief and impenitence, cutting them down as a barren tree, and caſting them into the fire. But whatever reference the parable hath to them, it is of more extenſive uſe, as containing a warning to all who enjoy the means of grace; and who, if they are not converted by them, will fall under heavier wrath and condemnation.

1. Great were the advantages this fig-tree enjoyed. It was planted in a vineyard, in the beſt ſoil, and under the owner's peculiar care and culture. The church is the vineyard of God, every viſible member hath a place there, ſitting under the rain of goſpel doctrine, and bleſt with the miniſterial labours of Chriſt's faithful ſervants.

2. The owner juſtly expected to find fruit on this tree, as the Lord doth from all who have a place in his church, of whom he requires the fruits of grace and holineſs, as well as the leaves of profeſſion.

3. Great was his diſappointment: he found none, and therefore complains to the vine-dreſſer how long he had waited, and how uſeleſs was this tree, which impoveriſhed the ground, and occupied the room of one that might be profitable. With much more reaſon may the Lord complain of many profeſſors, who bring him no honour, and continue barren and unfruitful. He comes from year to year, for three, for thirty, yea, ſometimes for threeſcore years together; ſo wonderful is his patience and forbearance, and finds them ſtill cumberers of the ground, whoſe ill example is more extenſively pernicious the longer they are permitted to ſtand.

4. He dooms it to fall, cut it down; ſince the tree bore no fruit, it was only fit for the flames. Such is the awful ſentence of God againſt the impenitent ſinner; cut it down, and death is ready to lift the ax, and caſt body and ſoul into the fire of hell. How awful, how alarming the thought!

5. The vine-dreſſer begs another year; if it be ſpared, he will take freſh pains, it may yet bear, and then all will be well; but if not, he conſents to leave the tree to its juſt doom. Chriſt is this vine-dreſſer; at his interceſſion are ſinners ſpared, and every miniſter under him fails not in like manner to be an advocate for thoſe among whom he labours. But, (1.) If through the interceſſion of Jeſus our lives are prolonged, and we have another year granted, we ſhould know and improve the day of our viſitation. The time is ſhort, reprieves are not pardons; though we are ſpared never ſo long, if we continue in our ſins, we muſt periſh at the laſt. (2.) Whilſt the Lord ſpares the ſinner, miniſters muſt never be weary of labouring, and ſhould try every method; digging up the heart by the terrors of the law, and ſeeking to dung it with the quickening manure of the goſpel. (3.) It is never too late to amend; the moſt barren and unfruitful, who by grace at laſt are turned to God, will find mercy with him; the paſt tranſgreſſions ſhall be forgiven, the preſent ſervice accepted, and all ſhall be well. (4.) God's patience, though it bear long, will not bear always; they who provoke and grieve his holy ſpirit by their obſtinate impenitence, will at laſt be left to the deſtruction they have choſen, and every day of his forbearance which they have abuſed, ſhall add a treaſure of wrath againſt the day of wrath.

10. And he was teaching in one of the ſynagogues on the ſabbath. 11. ¶ And behold, there was a woman which had a ſpirit of infirmity eighteen years, and was bowed together, and could in no wiſe lift up herſelf. 12. And when Jeſus ſaw her, he called her to him, and ſaid unto her, Woman, thou art looſed from thine infirmity. 13. And [g] he laid his hands on her: and immediately ſhe was made ſtraight, and glorified God. 14. And the ruler of the ſynagogue anſwered with indignation, becauſe that Jeſus had healed on the ſabbath-day, and ſaid unto the people, [h] There are ſix days in which men ought to work: in them therefore come and be healed, and [i] not on the ſabbath-day. 15. The Lord then anſwered him, and ſaid, Thou hypocrite, [k] doth not each one of you on the ſabbath looſe his ox or his aſs from the ſtall, and lead him away to watering: 16. And ought not this woman, [l] being a daughter of Abraham, whom Satan hath bound, lo theſe eighteen years, be looſed from this bond on the ſabbath-day? 17. And when he had ſaid theſe things, all his adverſaries were aſhamed: and all the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by him.

[g] Mark xvi. 18. Acts ix. 17.
[h] Exod. xx. 9. & xxiii. 12.
[i] Chap. vi. 7. & xiv. 3.
[k] Chap. xiv. 5.
[l] Chap. xix. 9.

v. 10—17. Chriſt was an unwearied preacher, and, as uſual, was now in the ſynagogue on the ſabbath-day. To confirm the doctrine he taught, we are told,

1. The notable miracle he wrought on an infirm woman who was preſent. Her caſe was very pitiable: under the power of Satan her body was ſo convulſed and contracted, that ſhe was bent double, and could not ſtand erect; and as the diſorder had been of ſo long ſtanding as eighteen years, all hope of a cure was deſperate. Yet ſhe made a ſhift to crawl to the ſynagogue, and did not, as many might have done, make her weakneſs, or deformity, a plea for abſenting from God's worſhip. There the compaſſionate eye of Jeſus remarked her unhappy ſituation; and, unſollicited, he called and cured her, looſing her from Satan's bonds, and enabling her inſtantly to ſtand upright; for which ſhe moſt heartily expreſſed her gratitude, glorifying and praiſing God for this extraordinary and unexpected mercy. Note, (1.) So weak and infirm are our ſouls by nature, unable to lift up their affections to high and heavenly things, and ever bowed down to earthly ſenſual objects. (2.) Chriſt ſeeks us, not we him, and is pleaſed to call to us in the goſpel-word, that coming to him we might be cured. (3.) The powerful hand of his grace effectually relieves the ſoul from the bondage of guilt and corruption; and when at any time we are afterwards bowed down with fear, and go heavily through manifold temptations, he giveth ſtrength to the weak. (4.) It will be the delight and duty of all who experience his healing, to glorify him in their lips and in their lives, walking upright before him.

2. The envious and malicious ruler of the ſynagogue, inſtead of glorifying God for the miracle, hardened with bigotry and prejudice, ſharply reprimanded the people, as if the ſabbath was violated by their coming to be healed on that day. Note, They who reſolve to find fault, and not to be convinced, will cavil againſt the moſt glaring evidence.

3. Our Lord juſtifies his own conduct, and upbraids him with his hypocriſy. The zeal he pretended for the ſabbath was a mere pretence, to hide that enmity which raged in his heart againſt Chriſt and his goſpel. His own daily practice condemned and confuted his unreaſonable and uncharitable cenſures. None of thoſe, who moſt rigidly obſerved the ſabbath, thought it any breach of the ſacred reſt, to looſe their beaſt from the ſtall, and lead him to water. And if an ox or an aſs might have ſuch pains beſtowed on them on the ſabbath, with how much greater reaſon did mercy and charity plead, that a human creature, a daughter of Abraham too, bound by Satan's power, and ſo long and ſo grievouſly afflicted, ſhould be relieved, when without the leaſt labour it could be done by a ſingle word?

4. The argument was moſt concluſive, and confuſion covered his adverſaries; whilſt all the people, who were ſtruck with wonder at his miracles, and the force of his reaſoning, rejoiced at theſe glorious works of power and grace which they beheld. Note, Sooner or later all the foes of Chriſt and his people ſhall be confounded, and all his faithful triumph in his great ſalvation.

18. ¶ [m] Then ſaid he, Unto what is the kingdom of God like? and whereunto ſhall I reſemble it? 19. It is like a grain of muſtard-ſeed, which a man took and caſt into his garden, and it grew, and [n] waxed a great tree: and the fowls of the air lodged in the branches of it. 20. And again he ſaid, Whereunto ſhall I liken the kingdom of God? 21. [o] It is like leaven, which a woman took and [p] hid in three † meaſures of meal, [q] till the whole was leavened. 22. And [r] he went through the cities and villages, teaching and journeying towards Jeruſalem.

[m] Mat. xiii. 31. Mark iv. 30.
[n] Pſ. lxxx. 8—11. Prov. iv. 18.
[o] Mat. xiii. 33.
[p] Pſ. cxix. 11.
† Mat. xiii. 33.
[q] 1 Cor. v. 7.
[r] Mat. ix. 35. Mark vi. 6.

v. 18—22. We have here,

1. Two parables which were before recorded, Mat. xiii. 31. repreſenting the gradual increaſe of Chriſt's church, and the ſecret, but effectual ſpreading of the goſpel-leaven. Though the beginnings were ſmall, as the grain of muſtard-ſeed when ſown; yet, in proceſs of time, like a fair-ſpreading tree, the kingdom of the Meſſiah would be erected throughout all the world; and Gentiles, as well as Jews, flock into it. And like leaven, though no external force be employed, the doctrines of truth would inſenſibly, but powerfully work, till their influence was diffuſed through all the earth.

2. Our Lord continued his courſe towards Jeruſalem, preaching and teaching in all the cities and villages as he journeyed. Wherever Providence directs our way, we ſhould be glad to improve every opportunity to ſpeak a word for the good of immortal ſouls.

23. Then ſaid one unto him, Lord, are [s] there few that be ſaved? And he ſaid unto them, 24. ¶ † Strive to [t] enter in at the ſtrait gate: for [u] many, I ſay unto you, will ſeek to enter in, and ſhall not be able. 25. [x] When once the maſter of the houſe is riſen up, and [y] hath ſhut to the door, and ye begin to ſtand without, and to knock at the door, ſaying, [z] Lord, Lord, open unto us; and he ſhall anſwer, and ſay unto you, [a] I know you not whence you are: 26. Then ſhall ye begin to ſay, We have eaten and drunk in thy preſence,

[s] 2 Eſd. viii. 1.
† Gr. Agonize. Mat. xi. 12.
[t] Mat. vii. 13.
[u] John vii. 34. & viii. 21. Rom. ix. 31.
[x] Pſ. xxxii. 6. Iſa. lv. 6.
[y] Mat. xxv. 10.
[z] Chap. vi. 46.
[a] Mat. vii. 23. & xxv. 12.

and thou haſt taught in our ſtreets. 27. But he ſhall ſay, I tell you, I know you not whence you are; [b] depart from me all ye workers of iniquity. 28. [c] There ſhall be weeping and gnaſhing of teeth, [d] when ye ſhall ſee Abraham, and Iſaac, and Jacob, and all the prophets in the kingdom of God, and you yourſelves thruſt out. 29. And [e] they ſhall come from the eaſt, and from the weſt, and from the north, and from the ſouth, and ſhall ſit down in the kingdom of God. 30. And behold, [f] there are laſt which ſhall be firſt, and there are firſt which ſhall be laſt.

b Pſ. vi. 8. Mat. xxv. 41.
c Mat. viii. 12. & xiii. 42. & xxv. 51.
d Mat. viii. 11.
e Mark xiii. 27.
f Mat. xix. 30 & xx. 16.

v. 23—30. We have here,

1. The queſtion put to our Lord, Are there few that ſhall be ſaved? Perhaps the deſign of it was captious, to repreſent him as rigid and uncharitable, or it might be mere curioſity; many being more inquiſitive who ſhall be ſaved, and who not, than about what they muſt do to ſecure their own ſalvation.

2. Our Lord anſwers the queſtion in a way which ſeemed moſt profitable for the enquirer, directing him at leaſt to give diligence to enſure the ſalvation of his own ſoul.

(1.) His exhortation is, Strive to enter in at the ſtrait gate; the way to heaven is difficult; ten thouſand obſtructions, both without and within, ſtraiten the paſſage; great diligence and inceſſant prayer, therefore, are needful; that, ſtrengthened by power from on high, we may be able to hold on, and to hold out, and ſo to run as to obtain the prize.

(2.) He enforces his exhortation by various motives, [1.] Many will ſeek to enter in, and ſhall not be able, willing indeed to go to heaven, but unwilling to uſe the neceſſary means; reſting in cold formality, or lazy endeavours; bound with the fetters of ſloth, or blinded with pride and ſelf-righteouſneſs, and ſo miſtaking the way, or coming ſhort of the kingdom. [2.] If the preſent moment be neglected, it will ſhortly be too late. The door of mercy through the goſpel, which is now open, will ſhortly be ſhut, when Jeſus the maſter of the houſe, in death or judgment, requires the ſinner's ſoul; and then the moſt importunate cries will be unavailing: it is now or never that prayer can profit us. [3.] Many who entertained the moſt confident hopes of heaven, will be found to have a lie in their right hand. They will knock as if they had a right to admiſſion, plead relation to Chriſt as their Lord, that they were conſtant attendants on his word, and communicants at his table, yet will Chriſt utterly diſown them in that day, and drive them with indignation from his preſence, as workers of iniquity; whatever pretences to religion they made, their hearts were not whole with him; their profeſſions were hypocritical, and ſecret ſins were harboured, delighted in, and gratified. Doomed, therefore, to be thruſt into the outer darkneſs, with every dreadful expreſſion of horror and deſpair, with weeping, and gnaſhing of teeth, in vain ſhall they bewail their folly; and pining with envy and vexation, ſhall behold the patriarchs, prophets, and ſaints of God in glory exalted, and enjoying thoſe unutterable delights of the heavenly kingdom, from which themſelves muſt be eternally excluded; the ſight of which will aggravate every pang they feel. How awful a ſcene! what diligence, what carefulneſs ſhould it beget in us, that we come not into this place of torment! How jealous need we be over our hearts, that we reſt not in outward privileges, and deceive not ourſelves with vain hopes: thouſands have gone out of this world dreaming of heaven, and have awaked in hell.

(3.) Some ſhall be ſaved: though few, comparatively ſpeaking, in any one place or age; yet many, when collected into the great congregation: and theſe, ſuch as ſeemed the moſt unlikely, coming from Gentile lands, from the eaſt, and from the weſt, and from the north, and from the ſouth, and admitted into the church of the redeemed, whilſt the Jewiſh people, who were firſt in privileges, ſhall be laſt, rejected for their impenitence; and the heathen, who were laſt in their call, ſhall be firſt in the kingdom. Note, When we come to heaven, we ſhall meet many there whom we leaſt expected, and miſs many, of whom we entertained the moſt confident aſſurances.

31. ¶ The ſame day there came certain of the Phariſees, ſaying unto him, Get thee out, and depart hence: for Herod will kill thee. 32. And he ſaid unto them, Go ye and tell that fox, Behold, I caſt out devils, and I do cures to day and to morrow, and the third day [g] I ſhall be perfected. 33. Nevertheleſs, I muſt walk to-day and to morrow, and the day following: for it cannot be that a prophet periſh out of Jeruſalem. 34. [h] O Jeruſalem, Jeruſalem, [i] which killeſt the prophets, and ſtoneſt them that are ſent unto thee: how often would [k] I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood [l] under her wings, and [m] ye would not? 35. Behold, [n] your houſe is left unto you deſolate: And verily I ſay unto you, ye ſhall not ſee me, until the time come when ye ſhall ſay, [o] Bleſſed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

g Heb. ii. 10.
h Mat. xxiii. 37.
i 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15. Neh. ix. 26.
k 2 Eſd. i. 30.
l Pſ. xvii. 8. & xci. 4.
m Pſ. lxxxi. 11, 12.
n Iſa. i. 7. Mic. iii. 12.
o Pſ. cxviii. 26.

v. 31—35. Chriſt's inveterate enemies are ceaſeleſs in their malice, ſeeking to diſtreſs and deſtroy him.

1. Certain Phariſees pretending regard for his ſafety, brought him information that his life was in danger from Herod: either this was a contrivance of their own, who wanted to get rid of Chriſt, whoſe preaching and practice ſo reproved and cut them to the heart; or it may be, Herod employed them to drive Chriſt out of his dominions, being willing enough to have done him a miſchief, but fearing the conſequences of attempting to ſeize him, becauſe of his intereſt in the people. Note, It is no unuſual artifice with wicked men to ſeek, by ſuggeſtions of danger, to deter the faithful from their duty.

2. Chriſt defies Herod's menaces. Go tell that fox, ſaith he, whoſe craft, treachery, and rapine were notorious, Behold, I caſt out devils, and do cures to day and to morrow; not deſiſting from his work, nor intimidated with theſe threatnings; and the third day I ſhall be perfected, ſhortly my work will be finiſhed, and by my ſufferings and death I ſhall compleat the ſalvation of my people: and till then, it is neither in the power of Herod, or any of the emiſſaries of hell, to ſtop me in my work, and take away my life. Nevertheleſs, as my hour is not yet come, I muſt walk to day and to morrow, and the day following, continuing his miniſtry in Galilee, without fear of interruption: for as my death, and the place of it, are fore-ordained of God, it cannot be that a prophet periſh out of Jeruſalem, where alone the great council ſat, to whom it belonged to judge thoſe who laid claim to the gift of prophecy, and to put thoſe whom they counted impoſtors to death. Note, (1.) All the powers of earth or hell cannot hurt or deſtroy us, till the appointed time comes. (2.) The day of death will be the time when the faithful ſhall be perfected; a conſummation devoutly to be wiſhed for.

3. On this occaſion, at the mention of Jeruſalem, Chriſt laments over her wickedneſs, and foretels the wrath ready to deſcend on that devoted city. Not knowing the day of her viſitation, ſhe was abandoned to ruin; and too late would be convinced of his divine miſſion, and wiſh for a part in his ſalvation, when he ſhould come ſhortly to execute his temporal judgments; or in the great day, to pour the vials of his eternal wrath on thoſe who had rejected him.

CHAP. XIV.

In this chapter we have, 1. The cure which Chriſt wrought upon a man that had the dropſy, on the ſabbath-day, and his juſtifying himſelf therein, againſt thoſe who were offended at his doing it on that day, ver. 1—6. 2. A leſſon of humility given to thoſe who were ambitious of the higheſt rooms, ver. 7—11. 3. A leſſon of charity to thoſe who feaſted the rich and did not feed the poor, ver. 12, 13, 14. 4. The ſucceſs of the goſpel foretold in the parable of the gueſts invited to a feaſt, ver. 15—24. 5. The great law of diſcipleſhip laid down, with a caution to all that will be Chriſt's diſciples, to undertake it deliberately, and with conſideration, and particularly to miniſters, to retain their ſavour, ver. 25—35.

1. AND it came to paſs, as he went into the houſe of one of the chief Phariſees to eat bread on the ſabbath-day, that they watched him. 2. And behold, there was a certain man before him, which had the dropſy. 3. And Jeſus anſwering, ſpake unto the lawyers and Phariſees, ſaying, [a] Is it lawful to heal on the ſabbath-day? 4. And they held their peace. And he took him and healed him, and let him go: 5. And anſwered them, ſaying, [b] Which of you ſhall have an aſs, or an ox fallen into a pit, and will not ſtraightway pull him out on the ſabbath-day? 6. And they could not anſwer him again to theſe things.

a Chap. xiii. 14.
b Exod. xxiii. 5. Deut. xxii. 4. Chap. xiii. 15.

v. 1—6. Chriſt refuſed not the invitations of thoſe he knew were his enemies; and though he was well aware of their malicious intentions, he behaved to them with all kindneſs and courteſy.

1. He dined with a chief Phariſee on the ſabbath-day; and there being preſent a pitiable object, who was ſwollen with a dropſy; they watched whether he would heal him; intending, if he did, to accuſe him as a ſabbath-breaker.

2. Chriſt, who knew their thoughts, interrogates them on the ſubject, Whether it was lawful to heal on the ſabbath-day? But they obſerved a ſullen ſilence, unwilling to preclude the accuſation they meditated, by admitting it to be lawful, and yet not knowing how to maintain the unlawfulneſs of ſo good a deed.

3. He took the man aſide, and healed him, reducing in a moment his diſtended body, and ſending him away perfectly cured.

And in his own juſtification, and to their conviction and confuſion, urges their own practice, to prove the lawfulneſs of ſuch a work of charity. If they admitted that an ox or an aſs fallen into a pit, ſhould be lifted out on the ſabbath-day, leaſt it ſhould periſh there, how much more forcible was the argument for the cure of a diſeaſed perſon, whoſe life was in danger? and how evident did it appear, that their zeal for the ſabbath was mere hypocriſy, deſigned only to cover their malignity againſt him?

4. They could not anſwer him again to theſe things, their own conduct ſpoke their condemnation. Note, At Chriſt's bar every mouth ſhall be ſtopped.

7. ¶ And he put forth a parable to thoſe which were bidden, when he marked how they choſe out the chief rooms; ſaying unto them, 8. When thou art bidden of any man to a wedding, ſit not down in the higheſt room: leſt a more honourable man than thou be bidden of him; 9. And he that bade thee and him, come and ſay to thee, Give this man place; and thou begin with ſhame to take the loweſt room. 10. But [c] when thou art bidden, go and ſit down in the loweſt room; that when he that bade thee cometh, he may ſay unto thee, Friend, go up higher; then ſhalt thou have worſhip in the preſence of them that ſit at meat with thee. 11. For [d] whoſoever exalteth himſelf, ſhall be abaſed; and [e] he that humbleth himſelf, ſhall be exalted. 12. ¶ Then ſaid he alſo to him that bade him, When thou makeſt a dinner or a ſupper, call not thy friends, nor thy brethren, neither thy kinſmen, nor thy rich neighbours; leſt they alſo bid thee again, and a recompenſe be made thee. 13. But when thou makeſt a feaſt, [f] call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind: 14. And thou ſhalt be bleſſed; for they cannot recompenſe thee: for thou ſhalt be recompenſed at the reſurrection of the juſt.

[c] Prov. xxv. 6, 7.
[d] Job xxii. 29. Pſ. xviii. 27. Prov. xxix. 23. Chap. i. 52. & xviii. 14. Jam. iv. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5.
[e] Prov. xv. 33.
[f] Neh. viii. 12. Tobit iv. 7.

v. 7—14. Though our Lord was courteous, he was far above the flattery of compliment. When he ſaw occaſion for rebuke, he would not, even in the company of perſons moſt diſtinguiſhed, refrain from faithful admonition.

1. He rebukes the gueſts for that affectation of preeminence which he obſerved among them, each coveting the moſt honourable ſeat at the table. Such pride would expoſe them to contempt, whilſt humility was the way to honour: for they who aſſumingly thruſt themſelves into the ſeat of precedence which did not belong to them, might expect to be degraded, when a more honourable perſonage coming in, the maſter of the houſe would ſay, Give this man place; and this could not fail of covering with confuſion the conceited intruder, who muſt go down lower, and expoſe himſelf to the contempt of the company. Much more to their honour would it be, humbly to take the loweſt place, as ready to give the preference to others; for then the maſter, attentive to place his gueſts, according to their rank, would reſpectfully deſire them to come up higher, and their modeſty and humility would gain the regard and eſteem of all that ſit at table. And as this is the caſe among men, ſo is it alſo before God; whoſoever exalteth himſelf, in a proud conceit of his own excellence above other men, ſhall be abaſed, treated with contempt and abhorrence by him who trieth the heart, and knows the true characters of men; and he that humbleth himſelf, under the deepeſt ſenſe of his vileneſs and unworthineſs, ſhall be exalted to the favour of God on earth, and to the enjoyment of his glory in heaven. Note, (1.) Pride is a ſin alike odious in the ſight of God and man. (2.) Modeſt diffidence gives a brighter luſtre to real worth.

2. He rebukes the maſter of the houſe for his inviting the rich, and neglecting the poor. It beſpeaks the pride, ſelfiſhneſs, and luxury of the heart, to make profuſe entertainments, and invite only the wealthy, at whoſe tables we expect to be entertained in return. Such feaſting is evil; it is an abuſe of the creatures of God, and robbery of the poor: not that we are forbid welcoming our friends, or returning their viſits: it is the profuſion, which would render us incapable of relieving the indigent, the vain affection of ſhow, the ambition of keeping grand company, and the expectation of a recompence in kind, which our Lord condemns. He bids us, on the contrary, with charitable hoſpitality feed the poor; not ſturdy beggars, for that is no charity, but an encouragement to idleneſs; but the maimed, the lame, the blind; theſe cannot indeed return the favour; but we ſhall be no loſers, God will remember and reward theſe labours of love at the reſurrection of the juſt.

15. ¶ And when one of them that ſat at meat with him, heard theſe things, he ſaid unto him, [g] Bleſſed is he that ſhall eat bread in the kingdom of God. 16. Then ſaid he unto him, [h] A certain man made a great ſupper, and bade many: 17. And [i] ſent his ſervant at ſupper-time to ſay to them that were bidden, Come, for all things are now ready. 18. And they all with one conſent [k] began to make excuſe. The firſt ſaid unto him, [l] I have bought a piece of ground, and I muſt needs go and ſee it: I pray thee have me excuſed. 19. And another ſaid, [l] I have bought five yoke of oxen, and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excuſed. 20. And another ſaid, I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come. 21. So that ſervant came and ſhewed his lord theſe things. Then the maſter of the houſe being angry, ſaid to his ſervant, Go out quickly into the ſtreets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither [m] the poor, and the maimed, and [n] the halt, and [o] the blind. 22. And the ſervant ſaid, Lord, it is done as thou haſt commanded, and yet there is room. 23. And the Lord ſaid unto the ſervant, Go out into [p] the highways, and hedges, and [q] compel them to come in, that my houſe may be filled. 24. For I ſay unto you, that [r] none of thoſe men which were bidden, ſhall taſte of my ſupper.

[g] Rev. xix. 9.
[h] Mat. xxii. 2.
[i] Prov. ix. 3, &c.
[k] John v. 40.
[l] 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10.
[m] Mat. v. 3. Jam. ii. 5.
[n] Mic. iv. 6, 7. Zeph. iii. 19.
[o] John ix. 39. Rev. iii. 17, 18.
[p] Prov. i. 20.
[q] Chap. xxiv. 29. Acts xvi. 15. 2 Cor. v. 20. 2 Tim. iv. 2.
[r] Mat. xxii. 8.

v. 15—24. Affected with the diſcourſe of Chriſt, which breathed ſuch humility and charity, one of the gueſts broke forth as in a tranſport, looking forward to the days of the Meſſiah, when they expected that all plenty, piety, and happineſs would univerſally abound, and ſaid, Bleſſed is he that ſhall eat bread in the kingdom of God. Chriſt immediately replied to this obſervation by a parable, drawn from the feaſt before them, and containing intimations which they would be very backward to receive; inſinuating to them, that however great the Meſſiah's kingdom might be, the Jews in general would reject it, and the deſpiſed Gentiles chiefly partake of the privileges of the goſpel.

1. A certain man made a great ſupper, and bade many. Chriſt is the maſter of the feaſt; all the riches of goſpel-grace are provided by him for the entertainment of miſerable ſinners, and his invitation is free and gracious. He bids his ſervants ſay, whoſoever will, let him come, for all things are now ready; the preſent moment is the accepted time; there muſt be no delay; and if we feel our want of pardon, peace, grace, and glory, we ſhall make none, but preſs eagerly to be fed with theſe heavenly proviſions.

2. The gueſts gave the ſervants a cold reception, and pretended other engagements. The Jewiſh people in general rejected the goſpel, and turned a deaf ear to the apoſtles and evangeliſts; and too many in every age reſemble them, and find ſome frivolous excuſe for their conduct. One had purchaſed a farm, and he muſt needs go and ſee it; another had bought five yoke of oxen, and he wanted to try them; and a third is juſt married, and therefore pleads, I cannot come. But the truth is, I will not; his wife would have found a welcome too, that need not have hindred him. Note, (1.) Any thing will ſerve for a hindrance to thoſe who want an excuſe; and the devil will take care that they ſhall not be at a loſs, who have no inclination to duty. (2.) Hearts full of worldly cares, and ſet on amaſſing wealth, muſt needs be deaf to goſpel-calls. (3.) The folly of the men of the world is great as their ſin; for what trifles do they barter heaven! (4.) Inordinate affection to lawful comforts, even to our deareſt relatives, may prove a dangerous ſtumbling-block in our way to glory.

3. The ſervants returned with grief to their maſter, and reported the repulſe they had met with; and juſt indignation kindled in the maſter's boſom at the ingratitude and contempt ſhown to his gracious invitation. Note, (1.) Miniſters carry their complaints to God againſt the ſouls among whom they have laboured in vain, and ſpent their ſtrength for nought; and a fearful account will ſuch deſpiſers of the goſpel ſhortly give. (2.) Abuſed mercy turns to fierceſt wrath; rejection of the calls of grace muſt needs iſſue in ruin.

4. Though they who were invited refuſed to come, the feaſt ſhall not be loſt. The maſter bids his ſervants go into the ſtreets and lanes of the city, and bring in the poor, the maimed, the halt, and the blind; ſince the Scribes and Phariſees, with all the rich and noble among the Jews, rejected his ſalvation, the goſpel was to be preached to the loweſt of the people, many of whom were brought to the obedience of faith. And when the ſervants having executed their commiſſion, reported that yet there was room, their Lord ſends them into the highways and hedges, even to the Gentile world, to call the vileſt ſinners, and urge them to come in, aſſuring them of a hearty welcome. Note, (1.) The unbelief of the impenitent ſhall not prevent the promiſe of God from taking effect. Chriſt will have a church and people in the world, though the wiſe, mighty, and noble reject him. (2.) The goſpel hath uſually moſt ſucceſs among thoſe whom the proud, the wiſe, and ſelf-righteous, deſpiſe, even the ignorant, the poor, the publicans and open ſinners; nor muſt the ſervants think it any diſparagement to themſelves or their maſter, that of ſuch is the kingdom of heaven. (3.) The compulſion which Chriſt's miniſters muſt uſe is, the force of argument and perſuaſion; not violence, or the civil power, which can only make men hypocrites. (4.) None are excluded from Chriſt who do not exclude themſelves; there is room, and we are welcome: if we refuſe to come, our ruin lieth at our own door.

5. He ſeals up the deſpiſers of the goſpel under wrath and reprobacy. I ſay unto you, that none of thoſe who were bidden, ſhall taſte of my ſupper. The unbelieving Jews, to whom the goſpel was firſt preached, and all who hear and reject the counſel of God againſt their own ſouls, are juſtly abandoned to the deluſions they have choſen, and left to periſh in their ſins.

25. ¶ And there went great multitudes with him: and he turned, and ſaid unto them, 26. [s] If any man come to me, [t] and hate not his father, and mother, and wife, and children, and brethren, and ſiſters, [u] yea, and his own life alſo, he cannot be my diſciple. 27. And [x] whoſoever doth not bear his croſs, and come after me, cannot be my diſciple. 28. For [y] which of you intending to build a tower, ſitteth not down firſt, and counteth the coſt, whether he have ſufficient to finiſh it? 29. Leſt haply after he hath laid the foundation, and [z] is not able to finiſh it, all that behold it, begin to mock him, 30. Saying, This man began to build, and was not able to finiſh. 31. Or [a] what king going to make war againſt another king, ſitteth not down firſt, and conſulteth whether he be able with ten thouſand to meet him that cometh againſt him with twenty thouſand? 32. Or elſe, while the other is yet a great way off, he ſendeth an ambaſſage, and deſireth conditions of peace. 33. So likewiſe, whoſoever he be of you, that forſaketh not all that he hath, he cannot be my diſciple. 34. ¶ [b] Salt is good: [c] but if the ſalt have loſt its ſavour, [d] wherewith ſhall it be ſeaſoned? 35. It is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; but men caſt it out. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

[s] Deut. xiii. 6. & xxxiii. 9. Mat. x. 37.
[t] Rom. ix. 13.
[u] Rev. xii. 11.
[x] Chap. ix. 23. 2 Tim. iii. 12.
[y] Prov. xxiv. 27.
[z] 2 John 8.
[a] Prov. xx. 18.
[b] Col. iv. 6.
[c] Mat. v. 13. Mark ix. 50.
[d] Heb. vi. 4—6.

v. 25—34. Multitudes followed Chriſt, probably in hopes to ſhare in that temporal kingdom which they expected the Meſſiah would ſet up. To undeceive them, he lets them know,

1. The terms of diſcipleſhip. They will not find that eaſe, affluence, and honour, with which they flattered themſelves, but the very reverſe: they muſt be ready to quit their neareſt and deareſt relations, when Chriſt's ſervice calls for them; muſt be content to leave all behind, and to be baniſhed from their beſt friends: if parents commands come in competition with our duty to him, we muſt not heſitate whom we ſhall obey: nay, our own lives muſt not be dear to us, when his glory requires us to lay them down. The love of him muſt conſtrain us ſtronger than death; every croſs which he is pleaſed to lay upon us, chearfully ſhould we take up; content to be nailed to it, if he ſo ordained. And if without ſuch entire ſurrender of ourſelves to him, we cannot be his diſciples, much leſs may we think we belong to him, if we are afraid to diſoblige a friend or a relation for his ſake, if we cannot bear a name of infamy, or a badge of reproach. Such as ſhrink from theſe leſſer trials, and are aſhamed to make profeſſion of him, will certainly never go with him to priſon, or to death.

2. He exhorts his followers ſeriouſly and deliberately to weigh the difficulties and dangers, before they embark in his cauſe; leaſt after having made a profeſſion, they ſhould expoſe themſelves to contempt, and bring heavier ruin upon their ſouls, by drawing back unto perdition; and this he illuſtrates by two compariſons, (1.) By a man ſitting down to build a tower, who makes an eſtimate of the charge before he begins the fabric; leaſt otherwiſe, raſhly embarking in a work for which his abilities are not ſufficient, the unfiniſhed ruins ſhould expoſe him to contempt. We have this tower of ſalvation to build on Jeſus, the ſure foundation; it will coſt us much labour, prayer, ſelf-denial, reproach, loſs, perhaps of life itſelf, ere it be finiſhed. Before, therefore, we commence profeſſed diſciples, we ſhould well weigh the conſequences, whether we have really power from on high, divine faith, and a vital principle of grace, to carry us through. Many have begun, and failed, and thereby expoſed themſelves to juſt contempt; for even the wicked world, to whom they return, will ridicule and deſpiſe thoſe who draw back from their holy profeſſion. (2.) By one king going to war againſt another. Before he takes the field, he will weigh the danger, and conſider whether he is a match for his antagoniſt; and if he finds his ſtrength utterly unequal, it is wiſeſt, before matters are driven to extremities, to ſend ambaſſadors, and ſeek peace. Such is our caſe: a chriſtian is a ſoldier, who muſt expect and prepare to endure hardneſs: the powers of earth, corruption, and hell, under Satan, their king, are the twenty thouſand with whom we have to conflict. Clothed, therefore, in the panoply of God, and ſupported with his might in the inner man, we ſhould go forth; and the ſword once drawn, we muſt never ſheath it till death. But if deterred by difficulties, perſecutions, and ſufferings, we ſeek an ignominious peace with the world which lieth in wickedneſs, under the government of that wicked one; and inſtead of forſaking all, ſtagger in the hour of trial; the caſe is deſperate, we ſhall continue enſlaved by ſin, and cannot be Chriſt's diſciples.

3. He warns them againſt apoſtacy, whether miniſters or people. Salt is good; my goſpel, and they who diſpenſe it, are the ſalt of the earth; but if the ſalt hath loſt its ſavour, and thoſe who profeſs to ſpread the lively truths of God, adulterate the word, and grow degenerate in their temper and manners, wherewith ſhall it be ſeaſoned? The caſe appears deſperate, where ſuch rooted departure from the truth in practice and principle prevails; it is neither fit for the land, nor yet for the dunghill; ſuch perſons are not only uſeleſs, but noxious, and therefore men caſt it out; all good men abandon ſuch faithleſs profeſſors, and they ſhould be caſt out of the church, as they will infallibly be ſeparated eternally from the communion of the faithful in heaven. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear; and let him that thinketh he ſtandeth, take heed leſt he fall.

CHAP. XV.

Chriſt vindicates himſelf from the cavils of the Phariſees, offended at his converſing with publicans and ſinners, ver. 1, 2. in three parables. 1. Of the loſt ſheep, ver. 3—7. 2. Of the loſt ſilver, ver. 8, 9, 10. 3. Of the prodigal ſon, ver. 11—32.

1. THEN drew near unto him [a] all the publicans and ſinners for to hear him. 2. And the Phariſees and ſcribes murmured, ſaying, [b] This man receiveth ſinners, and [c] eateth with them. 3. ¶ And he ſpake this parable unto them, ſaying, 4. [d] What man of you having an hundred ſheep, if he [e] loſe one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderneſs, and [f] go after that which is loſt, until he find it? 5. And when he hath found it, [g] he layeth it on his ſhoulders, rejoicing. 6. And when he cometh home, he calleth together his friends and neighbours, ſaying unto them, Rejoice with me, for [h] I have found my ſheep which was loſt. 7. I ſay unto you, that likewiſe joy ſhall be in heaven over one ſinner that repenteth [i], more than over ninety and nine juſt perſons, which need no repentance. 8. ¶ Either what woman having ten † pieces of ſilver, if ſhe loſe one piece, doth not light a candle, and ſweep the houſe, and ſeek diligently till ſhe find it? 9. And when ſhe hath found it, ſhe calleth her friends, and her neighbours together, ſaying, Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece which I had loſt. 10. Likewiſe I ſay unto you, There is joy in the preſence of the angels of God, over one ſinner that repenteth.

[a] Mat. ix. 10. Chap. v. 20.
[b] Mat. xi. 28. Chap. xix. 10. 1 Tim. i. 15.
[c] Acts xi. 3. Gal. ii. 12.
[d] Mat. xviii. 12.
[e] Iſa. liii. 6. Jer. l. 6.
[f] Ezek. xxxiv. 16. Chap. xix. 10.
[g] Iſa. xl. 11.
[h] 1 Pet. ii. 10, 25.
[i] Chap. v. 32.
† A Drachma was equal to a Roman Penny, and worth Sevenpence Halfpenny.

v. 1—10. Offended, perhaps, with the hard ſayings of the former chapter, many of his attendants withdrew, and made way for another ſet of hearers.

1. The publicans and ſinners drew near to hear him. The publicans were uſually perſons of the moſt infamous character, and the ſinners were either public and notorious offenders; or it may be ſome of the heathen, as from the multitude of ſtrangers who dwelt there, the country was called Galilee of the Gentiles; theſe aſſembled around him, they needed ſuch a gracious Saviour.

2. The proud Phariſees and Scribes hereupon expreſſed their diſpleaſure; offended, that one who profeſſed himſelf a prophet, ſhould deign to permit ſuch wretches to approach him, receive them with kindneſs, and ſit with them at the ſame table. Their inſolent ſelf-conceit would have ſaid, Come not near me; but he, who came to be the ſinner's friend, did not diſdain their company; they were the loſt he came to ſave. Note, The cenſure of the ſelf-righteous falls heavieſt uſually on the moſt excellent perſons, in their nobleſt exerciſes of charity.

3. Chriſt vindicates himſelf from their reproaches, in two parables; and ſhews, that the higheſt glory would redound to God from the converſion of theſe ſinners, and joy fill the celeſtial hoſts on that occaſion. We have,

(1.) The parable of the loſt ſheep, wherein we may obſerve, [1.] The caſe of the miſerable ſinner; he is loſt, gone aſtray from God's fold; wandering endleſsly in mazes of ignorance and error; a ſtranger to all ſpiritual comfort and happineſs; running headlong to deſtruction, and ready to periſh everlaſtingly. [2.] The peculiar care of the Saviour towards his people in their loſt eſtate; like a ſhepherd who leaves his flock in the wilderneſs to ſeek one ſtraying ſheep, ſo doth the Lord purſue his wanderers; he finds them when they do not ſeek him, takes them up in the arms of his grace, weak and impotent of themſelves to return, and brings them back to his fold with that effectual power and tender pity, which ſecures them from all harm. (3.) There is greater joy in heaven over one ſuch ſinner recovered by ſovereign grace, than over ninety and nine juſt perſons which need no repentance; which ſeems to be ſpoken with a peculiar reference to the Phariſees who truſted that they were righteous, and needed no repentance. Theſe our Lord left in the wilderneſs of unregeneracy, to periſh in their pride: the converſion of one poor Gentile ſinner, the recovery of the moſt notorious offender, was matter of greater rejoicing in heaven, and brought more glory to God, than that form of godlineſs in which they boaſted.

(2.) The parable of the loſt piece of money, which is nearly of the ſame import as the foregoing. The woman repreſents the Lord, the poſſeſſor of all; the ſilver, the ſouls of men, infinitely more precious; the nine pieces deſign the Scribes and Phariſees, and all ſelf-righteous perſons; the one loſt piece, the heathen, or any poor periſhing ſinner, ſunk in the dregs of pollution, or loſt in the dirt of worldly-mindedneſs and ſenſuality; The candle is the bleſſed goſpel which ſhines in this dark place the world, where the ſinner lies buried in corruption; the ſweeping the houſe repreſents the diligence of the faithful miniſters of Chriſt, whoſe inſtrumentality he uſes to ſeek after loſt ſouls; and when he hath deſigns of grace towards a ſoul, he never ceaſes ſeeking him, till the means are made effectual to his converſion and ſalvation; and great is the joy ariſing from this happy event. The angels of God rejoice in it, and the more deſperate the caſe ſeemed, and the more unexpected the recovery, the more ſenſible is the pleaſure. To ſee the chief of ſinners brought to repentance, raiſes their loudeſt ſongs of praiſe. Thoſe therefore, who made ſuch objections to his receiving ſinners, evidently ſhewed themſelves deſtitute of a heavenly mind, and unlike the angels of God.

11. ¶ And he ſaid, A certain man had two ſons:
[k] Mal. ii. 12. And the younger of them ſaid to his father, [k] Father, 10. give me the portion of goods that falleth to me. And he divided unto them his living. 13. And not many days after, the younger ſon gathered all together, and [l] Iſa. i. 4. [l] took his journey into a far country, and there waſted Jer. ii. 13, his ſubſtance with riotous living. 14. And when he had
17. [m] Amos viii. ſpent all, there aroſe a mighty [m] famine in that land;
11. and he began to be in want. 15. And he went and joined himſelf to a citizen of that country; and he ſent [n] Iſa. lv. 2. him into his fields to feed ſwine. 16. And [n] he would Ezek. vii. fain have filled his belly with the huſks that the ſwine 19. Hoſ. xii. 1. did eat, and no man gave unto him. 17. And when he came to himſelf, he ſaid, How many hired ſervants of my father's have bread enough and to ſpare, and I [o] Hoſ. ii. 7. periſh with hunger! 18. [o] I will ariſe and go to my father, and will ſay unto him, Father, I have ſinned a-gainſt heaven, and before thee, 19. And am no more [p] Pſ. lxxxiv. worthy to be called thy ſon: [p] make me as one of thy
10. hired ſervants. 20. And he aroſe, and came to his [q] Acts ii. 39. father. But when [q] he was yet a great way off, his
Eph. ii. 13, 17. father ſaw him, and [r] had compaſſion, and ran and fell [r] Hoſ. xi. 8. on his neck, and kiſſed him. 21. And the ſon ſaid
[s] Ezek. xvi. unto him, Father, [s] I have ſinned againſt heaven, and [t]
6. [t] Pſ. li. 4. in thy ſight, and [u] am no more worthy to be called thy [u] Jer. xxxi. ſon. 22. [x] But the father ſaid to his ſervants, Bring
19. [x] Ezek. xviii. forth [y] the beſt robe, and put it on him, and put a
22. ring on his hand, and ſhoes on his feet. 23. And [y] Iſa. lxi. 10. Gal. bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it; and let us eat iii. 27. Rev. iii. 18. and be merry. 24. For this my ſon [z] was dead, and is [z] Ver. 32. alive again; he was loſt, and is found. And they be-Eph. ii. 1. & v. 14. gan to be merry. 25. Now his elder ſon was in the field: and as he came and drew nigh to the houſe, he heard muſic and dancing. 26. And he called one of the ſervants, and aſked what theſe things meant. 27. And he ſaid unto him, Thy brother is come, and thy father hath killed the fatted calf, becauſe he hath received him ſafe and ſound. 28. And he was angry, and would not go in: therefore came his father out, and intreated him. 29. And he anſwering, ſaid to his father, Lo, theſe many years do I ſerve thee, neither tranſgreſſed I at any time thy commandment, and yet thou never gaveſt me a kid, that I might make merry with my friends:
30. But as ſoon as this thy ſon was come, which hath devoured thy living with harlots, thou haſt killed for him the fatted calf. 31. And he ſaid unto him, Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine.
32. It was meet that we ſhould make merry, and be glad: for this thy brother was dead, and is alive again;
and was loſt, and is found.

v. 11—32. Yet farther, to ſhew how little cauſe the Scribes and Phariſees had to murmur at the favour ſhewn to publicans and ſinners, he added a third beautiful parable, wherein miſerable and wretched ſinners may ever read the compaſſions of a pardoning God, and be engaged by the riches of his grace to return to the arms of his mercy.

The certain man here ſpoken of, is God, the common Father of all: the two ſons are either the Jews, the elder brother, and the Gentiles, the younger; or rather, by the one are meant the Scribes and Phariſees, by the other the publicans and ſinners; both, as deſcendants of Abraham, the children of God, in a covenant of peculiarity. And to this latter ſenſe, the occaſion of the parable ſeems to direct us.

The character of the miſerable ſinner is here drawn under the figure of the younger ſon. We have,

1. His departure from home, and the miſeries into which his extravagance brought him.

(1.) He was impatient of reſtraint, as young men uſually are; wanted to get from his father's eye; conceited himſelf able to manage better for himſelf than his aged parent for him, and therefore forwardly demands, Give me the portion of goods which falleth to me, as if he had a right to challenge them as his due: juſt ſuch are we all by nature. (1.) Diſcontent under God's government, and affecting independency. (2.) Deſirous to fly from him, and fooliſhly flattering ourſelves that we can be hid. (3.) Puffed up with high imaginations of our own abilities and excellence. (4.) Looking upon God's gifts as our own property, for the uſe of which we are accountable to none. (5.) Coveting a preſent portion, and ſeeking all our happineſs from the world, careleſs and unconcerned about our future ſtate.

(2.) The father, though he might juſtly except to ſuch a forward demand, divided his ſubſtance, and gave the younger ſon his ſhare; evidently ſhewing, he was not that moroſe and harſh parent, which this headſtrong youth probably repreſented him. Thus God beſtows liberally the bounties of his providence on the evil and unthankful; and leaves his own children for a while to the devices of their own hearts, that dire conviction may teach them their folly and their ſin.

(3.) No ſooner had he got his ſhare, than in haſte to be gone, he ſtayed but a few days to pack up his all, and took his journey into a far country, where he apprehended no rebuke from his watchful father; and there giving a looſe to every appetite, he ſoon diſſipated his fortune among women, wine, and riotous living. How exact the repreſentation! (1.) Such wanderers are we; as ſoon as we are born we go aſtray. (2.) In this alienation from God the ſinner habitually continues, fulfilling the deſires of the fleſh and of the mind. (3.) We are enſlaved by vile affections, and naturally devoted to thoſe youthful luſts which war againſt the ſoul. (4.) Preſent gratification uſually weighs with us more than any conſiderations about futurity. (5.) As extravagance and whoredom have the moſt direct tendency to rob us of our ſubſtance, much more will theſe, and the like ſins, infallibly ruin our ſouls.

(4.) Great were the miſeries in which this prodigal now felt himſelf involved. When he had ſpent all, which would not hold long in ſuch bad company as he kept, there aroſe a mighty famine in that land; and as thoſe on whom he had laviſhed his money, now dropped off from his acquaintance as the leaves in autumn, he began to be in want, without a morſel of bread to appeaſe the cravings of hunger. Reduced now to the utmoſt diſtreſs, without a farthing in his pocket, without a friend to aſſiſt him, neceſſity drives him to court the meaneſt drudgery to keep life and ſoul together, he went and joined himſelf to a citizen of that country, and he ſent him into his fields to feed ſwine; yet even there he could not earn enough to ſatisfy his hunger; he envied the very ſwine their huſks, and would fain have filled his belly with them, but could not, or was not permitted that favour, and no man had the leaſt compaſſion for his caſe, or gave unto him the leaſt morſel of ſuſtenance: ſuch is the miſery of the ſinner. (1.) He is in want of all true comfort, and deſtitute of all grace; the favour of God, as the dew of heaven, is with-held; his hard heart produces nothing good, and he pines away in his iniquities. (2.) He is the vileſt ſlave in nature; the devil is the citizen, in whoſe hard ſervice he is employed; he is like the ſwine, wallowing in the luſts of uncleanneſs, or groveling in worldly-mindedneſs. (3.) His ſoul is harraſſed with raging deſires, which none of his purſuits can gratify; for they who depart from God, to ſeek ſatisfaction in the creature, muſt feel the curſe of inceſſant hunger, and find nothing but huſks before them. The world, and all the things of it, can provide no ſolid food for an immortal ſoul.

Some give a different interpretation of the words. They ſuppoſe the citizen of that country to be a Phariſaical legal preacher, to whom the awakened ſinner flies under his diſtreſs. He ſets him to work in his fields; directs him to moral duties, to the law, to the conditions of the covenant, in order to obtain peace with God; but the huſks of ſelf-righteouſneſs are unſatisfactory; conſcience is unappeaſed; guilt unatoned for; corruption unmortified; and he continues a companion of ſwine.

2. Diſtreſs at laſt brought him to conſider the wofulneſs of his ſtate, and what poſſibility there yet was of preventing his dying for want in that ſtrange land. When he came to himſelf, for hitherto he had acted as a madman, or one poſſeſſed, he began to reflect on the plenty which reigned in his father's family, where there was not a hired ſervant, but had bread enough and to ſpare; and I, ſays he, periſh with hunger. He reſolves therefore to return, and caſt himſelf on his father's mercy, acknowledging his ſin againſt heaven and againſt him, owning it his juſt deſert to be diſowned for a ſon, and begging it, as the higheſt favour he dares aſk, to be admitted among the hired ſervants. And what he reſolved, he immediately executed; his urgent want admitted not of delay: happy the ſoul in whom ſuch a gracious purpoſe is ſtirred up! Note, (1.) Every impenitent ſinner is beſide himſelf; all his thoughts, words, and ways beſpeak the madman; fancying himſelf wiſe, great, happy, when infatuated, poor, and miſerable; and putting a value upon the ſtraws of his cell, the gain and pleaſures of this world, as if they were ſterling gold, whilſt he is inſenſible to all the eternal glories that are above. (2.) In our moſt deſperate eſtate, whilſt there is life there is hope; it is never too late to return unto God; the vileſt ſinner may find mercy, the moſt abominable be converted and changed. (3.) Afflictions are often made the bleſſed means of driving our ſouls to God: ſoftened by the rod of correction the heart is made tender, and diſpoſed to liſten to the words of wiſdom, which were before deſpiſed and rejected. (4.) Though the converſion of the ſoul to God is alone effected by the power of divine grace, yet he works in ſuch a way as that it is our own choice, and the reſult of reaſon, conſideration, and conviction. He opens our underſtandings to ſee our true ſtate, and beholding the inevitable ruin which is before us, we are driven by mere neceſſity to Chriſt for pardon and ſalvation. (5.) None need periſh who return unto God right humbly; there is with him grace abounding, bread enough, and to ſpare. (6.) In our returns to God, we muſt all adopt the prodigal's ſpirit and language: we have ſinned more than we can expreſs or conceive; we ſhould reflect upon all the aggravations of our ſin, how ungratefully we have behaved towards the Father of mercies, how impiouſly affronted the Moſt High, whoſe throne is in the heavens, that ſo we may truly loath ourſelves for all our abominations. (7.) We are never truly humbled for ſin, till we feel and own our unworthineſs of the leaſt mercy, and our juſt deſert of being utterly abandoned and rejected of God; ſo that if the leaſt favour be ſhewn us, we ſhall acknowledge it with deepeſt gratitude. (8.) Vile and wicked as we may have been, we muſt not forget that endearing name of Father, to encourage our hopes, to awaken genuine and godly ſorrow, and to embolden our faith to approach him. (9.) When God is working with our hearts, all depends upon our immediate obedience to his calls and warnings. To day, whilſt it is called to day, harden not your hearts.

3. His reception was unſpeakably beyond his expectations. He came to his Father, and was welcomed with open arms. Let offended parents learn ſuch compaſſions towards their returning prodigals. When he was yet a great way off, as if the Father's longing eyes had been looking out for his coming, he ſaw him, and though in rags and nakedneſs, emaciated and changed, ſo that another could ſcarce have known him, he diſcerned the long-loſt child. Melted with compaſſion at his piteous caſe, yet overjoyed once more to behold him, he ran with eagerneſs and fell on his neck, embracing him with the warmeſt emotions of parental tenderneſs, and kiſſed him, the token of welcome, the ſeal of pardon: ſuch are the tender mercies of our God towards poor ſinners; he ſees, well-pleaſed, the firſt riſing deſire in our hearts towards him; he pities our miſery, though we have brought it upon ourſelves, and have ſo highly diſhonoured him; his arms of grace are open to receive us; he will not upbraid our folly, but is ready inſtantly to pardon our ſin, and through Chriſt Jeſus to forgive and forget all that is paſt, ſealing our pardon, and ſpeaking peace to our ſouls. The prodigal, deeply affected with his own vileneſs, and now more deeply ſtruck with his ingratitude than ever, under the reſentment of ſuch amazing tenderneſs as his father ſhewed him, with grief and ſhame unfeigned, cries, Father, I have ſinned, &c. The ſenſe of God's pardoning love, inſtead of making the ſinner proud, abaſes him to the duſt, and makes him abhor himſelf for having ever offended a God ſo gracious. The ſon would have proceeded, but the father's heart is ſo overjoyed, he prevents him with bleſſings and loving kindneſs, commanding the moſt ſplendid dreſs and the nobleſt entertainment to be provided for him. So far is the Lord from upbraiding poor returning penitents, that their iniquities, like a cloud, are blotted out, and glory and honour are put upon them.

[1.] The father commands his ſervants to bring forth the beſt robe, to put a ring on his hand, and ſhoes on his feet, that his nakedneſs may not only be covered, and his filthy garments taken away, but that he may be adorned as became a dear child of that noble family: and how much more glorious the proviſion which Jeſus hath made for his returning prodigals! A robe of righteouſneſs, perfect and everlaſting, is provided for them, arrayed in which, they appear without ſpot even in the preſence of God. Their filthy garments of ſin are taken away, and beautiful in holineſs impreſſed, as well as righteouſneſs imputed, they all are ſeen to be the children of a king. The ring, the ſeal of reconciliation and union, the ſpirit of Jeſus gives, ſealing them unto the day of redemption; and ſhod with the preparation of the goſpel of peace, they run the way of God's commandments with delight.

[2.] The nobleſt entertainment is ordered. Bring hither the fatted calf, and kill it, and let us eat and be merry. Hungry and faint, he had long been a ſtranger to ſuch rich proviſion; and pining in want and wretchedneſs, was a ſtranger to joy: but now he ſhall be fed to the full, and partake of the general gladneſs which his return occaſions. Note, (1.) In the goſpel, the richeſt proviſion is made for the hungry; Chriſt with all his fulneſs is provided, and faith feeds upon him, to the ſtrengthening and refreſhing of the ſoul. (2.) They who are brought by grace to taſte of the ſweetneſs of God's love, will truly ſay, that every thing compared with that, is but huſks. (3.) There is joy among all the houſhold of God when one poor ſinner returns to join the happy family.

[3.] The cauſe of the father's joy is this, My ſon was dead and is alive again; he was loſt, and is found; he was as bad as dead, yea, worſe than dead, whilſt living in riot and exceſs; loſt to his family, undone himſelf; but his return is life from the dead. Note, (1.) Every impenitent ſinner in the midſt of life is in death; ſpiritually dead to God, and ready to ſuffer the wages of eternal death in hell. (2.) The ſoul loſt in ſin, is loſt for ever, unleſs recovered by ſovereign grace. (3.) Though God's deareſt children may lie down in common with others, ſunk under guilt, and enſlaved by corruption, yet in God's purpoſes they are ſtill his; and this bleſſed and happy change ſhall paſs upon them, The dead ſhall live, the loſt be found.

4. The family readily joined the maſter of the houſe, rejoicing with him on the preſent happy occaſion. The elder ſon alone appeared diſcontented; he was in the field when his brother returned, and heard with ſurprize, as he drew near to the houſe, the muſic and dancing. Enquiring of one of the ſervants, he ſoon learns the occaſion, and expreſſes his diſguſt and diſcontent againſt his father's behaviour, as if the kindneſs ſhewn to his brother was an injury done to himſelf; who, he conceives, had deſerved ſo much better at his father's hand. This character properly belonged to the Phariſees, and is applicable to all who are influenced by the ſame ſpirit of pride and ſelf-righteouſneſs. They are in the field of this world, in a ſtate of unregeneracy; the ſlaves of earth, minding worldly things, working for life, and expecting to receive the harveſt of eternal glory as the fruit of their own labours. They draw nigh to the houſe, the church of God, in profeſſion, but never enter it by a ſpiritual union with the head of the church, Chriſt Jeſus. They hear the muſic and dancing, the ſweet ſound of the great and precious promiſes, which makes the hearts of the miſerable and guilty dance for joy; and ſtrangers to this divine conſolation themſelves, they are vexed that any others ſhould partake of it; and angry, that thoſe ſhould be admitted to the enjoyment of all the riches of his grace who have behaved ſo profligately, and be put on a level with themſelves, who have, as they conceit, deſerved ſo well at God's hands. They will not go in, not ſubmitting to the righteouſneſs, nor content to receive the ſalvation of God freely, as loſt and undone, as much as the vileſt of mankind. In vain the Lord, by the miniſtry of the word, remonſtrates with them on their perverſeneſs, and urges upon them the neceſſity of a better righteouſneſs than their own; intreating them to accept of that provided by the Redeemer, and thus come in and partake of the feaſt. They vaunt their own meritorious ſervices, and in their own conceit fancy they never tranſgreſſed at any time the commandments, and therefore have a claim to the divine favour. They cannot regard publicans as their brethren, and think the kindneſs of God to periſhing ſinners is injuſtice to them, and unbecoming him; that theſe, inſtead of being received into his arms, ſhould ſmart under his rod; and at leaſt only be received into a lower place, after having done long penance for their offences.

Some ſuppoſe that the elder brother repreſents a gracious man, who having himſelf eſcaped from the groſſer pollutions that are in the world, is apt to entertain too high thoughts of himſelf, and too little compaſſion towards ſuch as have more groſsly offended. To avoid which, we ſhould learn, (1.) To entertain the lowlieſt thoughts of ourſelves, and eſpecially to watch againſt ſpiritual pride. (2.) Never to complain of God as unjuſt to us, but to acknowledge ourſelves unworthy of the leaſt of all his mercies. (3.) Not to harbour unkindneſs againſt, and treat with ſeverity, thoſe who may have diſhonoured their profeſſion by their unfaithfulneſs, but to be happy to give them again the right hand of fellowſhip, whenever they return to God. (4.) To rejoice in the gifts and graces of thoſe who have been moſt eminent ſinners, and not to envy them their diſtinguiſhed mercies, though they may now far outſhine and eclipſe ourſelves.

5. The father ſilences and rebukes his unreaſonable murmurs. Son, thou art ever with me; the Scribes and Phariſees, or the Jewiſh people, enjoyed peculiar privileges, the ordinances of worſhip, and the ſpecial preſence of God in the midſt of them; and all that I have is thine; if by their unbelief they did not cut themſelves off, the mercy ſhewn to Gentiles, to the chief of ſinners, would prove no diminution of the favours they ſhould enjoy. It was meet that we ſhould make merry and be glad: for this thy brother was dead and is alive again, and was loſt and is found; the converſion of the Gentiles and other notorious ſinners, dead in treſpaſſes, and ready to periſh for ever, ſo far from being a ground of diſcontent, ſhould be to all matter of rejoicing. Note, (1.) They who are truly God's children, may be aſſured that all things are theirs, all ſpiritual bleſſings in time and in eternity. (2.) The abounding grace of God is never exhauſted by the myriads who partake of it: the happineſs of others is no diminution of our own, but rather increaſes our delight. (3.) Whatever God doth is well done; every murmur muſt be ſilenced before him; and in all the diſpenſations of his providence and grace, he is ever to be acknowledged as righteous, juſt, and good.

CHAP. XVI.

We have here, 1. The right uſe of worldly enjoyments repreſented in the parable of the unjuſt ſteward, ver. 1—13. 2. A reproof of the Phariſees for their covetouſneſs, ver. 14—18. 3. The danger of ſetting our hearts on an earthly portion, illuſtrated in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, ver. 19—31.

1. AND he ſaid alſo unto his diſciples, There was a certain rich man which had a ſteward; and the ſame was accuſed unto him that he had waſted his goods. 2. And he called him, and ſaid unto him, How is it that I hear this of thee? give an account of thy ſtewardſhip: for thou mayeſt be no longer ſteward. 3. Then the ſteward ſaid within himſelf, What ſhall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the ſtewardſhip: I cannot dig, to beg I am aſhamed. 4. I am reſolved what to do, that when I am put out of the ſtewardſhip, they may receive me into their houſes. 5. So he called every one of his lords debtors unto him, and he ſaid unto the firſt, How much oweſt thou unto my lord? 6. And he ſaid, An hundred † meaſures of oil. And he ſaid unto him, Take thy bill, and ſit down quickly, and write fifty. 7. Then ſaid he to another, And how much oweſt thou? And he ſaid, An hundred ‡ meaſures of wheat. And he ſaid unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourſcore. 8. And the lord commended the unjuſt ſteward, becauſe he had done wiſely: for the children of this world are in their generation wiſer than [a] the children of light. 9. And I ſay unto you, [b] Make to yourſelves friends of the ‖ mammon of unrighteouſneſs; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlaſting habitations. 10. [c] He that is faithful in that which is leaſt, is faithful alſo in much: and he that is unjuſt in the leaſt, is unjuſt alſo in much. 11. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your truſt the true riches? 12. And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who ſhall give you that which is your own? 13. ¶ [d] No ſervant can ſerve two maſters: for either he will hate the one and love the other; or elſe he will hold to the one, and deſpiſe the other. Ye cannot ſerve God and mammon. 14. And the Phariſees alſo, [e] who were covetous, heard all theſe things: and they derided him. 15. And he ſaid unto them, Ye are they which juſtify yourſelves before men; but [f] God knoweth your hearts: for [g] that which is highly eſteemed amongſt men, is abomination in the ſight of God. 16. [h] The law and the prophets were until John: [i] ſince that time the kingdom of God is preached, and [k] every man preſſeth into it. 17. And [l] it is eaſier for heaven and earth to paſs, than one tittle of the law to fail. 18. [m] Whoſoever putteth away his wife, and marrieth another, committeth adultery: and whoſoever marrieth her that is put away from her huſband, committeth adultery.

† The Batus contained nine gallons three quarts. Ezek. xlv. 11, 14.
‡ This meaſure contained fourteen buſhels and a pottle.
[a] John xii. 36. Eph. v. 8. 1 Theſ. v. 5.
[b] Dan. iv. 27. Mat. vi. 19. & xix. 21. Chap. xi. 41. 1 Tim. vi. 19.
‖ Or riches.
[c] Chap. xix. 17.
[d] Mat. vi. 24.
[e] Ibid. xxiii. 14.
[f] Pſ. vii. 9.
[g] 1 Sam. xvi. 7.
[h] Mat. xi. 12, 13.
[i] Ibid. iii. 2.
[k] Chap. vii. 29.
[l] Pſ. cii. 26. Iſa. xl. 8. & li. 6. Mat. v. 18. 1 Pet. i. 25.
[m] Mat. v. 32. & xix. 9. Mark x. 11. 1 Cor. vii. 10, 11.

v. 1—18. To direct us in the right improvement of worldly wealth, we have here,

1. The parable of the unjuſt ſteward. God is our maſter and lord; all who are intruſted with any of his gifts, are his ſtewards, and ſhould improve them to his glory. This man was accuſed of waſting his maſter's goods; and how juſtly liable are we to the ſame charge? How often have we abuſed the ſubſtance we have enjoyed, and the abilities we have been bleſt with, to God's diſhonour? In conſequence of his ill management, he is called to an account, ordered to leave the ſervice; and a terrible reckoning will that be for us, if, hurried away by death, we are called to God's bar, cut off in the midſt of our ſins, and baniſhed for ever from his preſence. Too lazy to dig for his maintenance, too proud to beg, he reſolves, by deeper frauds, to ſecure for himſelf a maintenance, and calling privately his lord's debtors, whoſe accounts were in his hands, he agreed with them to draw a new ſtate of their debts, abating twenty meaſures of wheat to one, and fifty of oil to another; thus endeavouring to make them his friends, that, when he was diſmiſſed from his lord's ſervice, he might have their houſes to receive him. Note, (1.) One ſtep in ſin always tends to lead on to farther abominations. (2.) Pride and lazineſs often drive men to the moſt wicked methods to ſupply their wants, unable to bear the labours of honeſt induſtry for a ſubſiſtence, or to ſubmit to aſk relief. (3.) They who truſt too much to ſtewards, and ſeldom inſpect their own accounts, will uſually ſuffer for it.

2. The Lord commended the unjuſt ſteward's conduct; not as truly laudable in itſelf, but as an inſtance of foreſight, care, and contrivance, worthy imitation in a better way; for the children of this world, ſuch as this man was, who place their happineſs in earth and a portion here below, are in their generation wiſer, act more prudently, and ſhew greater induſtry to ſecure worldly advantages, than the children do to obtain the infinitely more momentous acquiſitions of grace and glory. Let us go to them, therefore, to learn, and be aſhamed to ſee ourſelves outdone in diligence by thoſe who purſue a periſhing world, when we have at ſtake the intereſt of an immortal ſoul and an awful eternity.

3. Chriſt applies the parable to his diſciples. I ſay unto you, Make to yourſelves friends of the mammon of unrighteouſneſs, employ your worldly goods in ſuch a way, as ſhall be to your own advantage in the day of judgment; that when ye fail, and at death this periſhing world is left behind with all its enjoyments, they may receive you into everlaſting habitations; they who have received the comfort of your bounty, God's poor ſaints, or Chriſt and God himſelf, who will reward ſuch works of faith, and labours of love, with everlaſting glory. Note, (1.) This world's wealth is called the mammon of unrighteouſneſs, or of deceit, becauſe uſually it is abuſed to the vileſt purpoſes, and gotten by unjuſt and deceitful means. (2.) The only way of turning thoſe riches to our advantage, which others abuſe to their ruin, is by employing them for the glory of God, and the good of our fellow-creatures, and then they will be bleſſings. (3.) At death all things fail us, nothing of our earthly affluence can go down with us to the grave; unleſs we have ſent our treaſures before us, they can then afford us no ſatisfaction. (4.) Our one great buſineſs here below is to ſecure for ourſelves the everlaſting habitations; and though no money can purchaſe a manſion in glory, yet will they, who have laid out their talents in God's bleſſed ſervice, find themſelves hereafter repaid with the richeſt intereſt.

4. Our Lord enforces his exhortation by the following arguments, (1.) That the miſimprovement of the gifts of God's providence muſt effectually exclude them from the treaſures of his grace; for as a ſervant who is faithful in a little matter, gains our confidence to be entruſted with more; ſo where he is unjuſt in trifles, no prudent maſter would care to employ him in matters of greater importance. If therefore we are unfaithful in the abuſe of worldly things, it cannot be thought we ſhould make a better improvement of the nobler talents, the means of divine wiſdom and grace; and therefore theſe true riches he will juſtly with-hold from us, v. 11. and if we have behaved as diſhoneſt ſtewards in that which God hath entruſted us with, and which is not our own, but his, how can it be expected that we ſhould poſſeſs that good part, the riches of grace, which moſt properly may be called our own, becauſe once poſſeſſed, it ſhall never be taken from us? (2.) It is impoſſible to ſerve two maſters, God and mammon, becauſe their demands being oppoſite and contradictory, ſo far as we love and ſerve the world, we muſt hate and diſobey God: and on the other hand, if we love and ſerve him, we muſt be dead to the world, and ready to forego all its honours, intereſts, pleaſures, and eſteem, whenever they ſtand in competition with his glory. God requires the heart, he cannot ſuffer a rival, nor will admit of an allowed partition: to attempt reconciling the inconſiſtent ſervices of God and mammon, is all the devil aſks to enſure our ruin.

5. The Phariſees were highly offended with truths which touched them ſo nearly. Their character was drawn in this unjuſt ſteward, and their covetous, worldly-minded hearts, under all their moſt plauſible guiſe of religion, were the ſlaves of mammon: they treated him therefore with the greateſt diſdain and contempt. Note, (1.) The inordinate love of this world is the bane of many a fair profeſſor. (2.) When the word of God preſſes the conſcience hard, the obſtinate ſinner often affects to deſpiſe, and turn off with a laugh, what he feels himſelf unable to anſwer. (3.) If we are treated with inſult and deriſion by thoſe to whom we miniſter the goſpel, Jeſus our maſter endured the like treatment before us.

6. Chriſt ſharply rebukes their hypocriſy and worldly-mindedneſs. He deſpiſed their reviling, yet warns them of their ruin, that they might yet repent of their ſins before it was too late. Ye are they which juſtify yourſelves before men, pretending the ſtricteſt piety and moſt ſcrupulous devotion; but God knoweth your hearts, that they are full of deadly poiſon, of pride, envy, covetouſneſs, falſehood, and oppreſſion: for that which is highly eſteemed among men, theſe pompous ſhews of exterior ſanctity, is abomination in the ſight of God, who ſees the odious principles which actuate your whole conduct, and abhors all your pretended ſervices. Note, (1.) The moſt rigid ſervices of formal religion, inſtead of juſtifying men before God, render them only the more abhorred. (2.) The opinion of the world is a very fallacious rule of judgment: uſually the moſt admired characters in the eyes of men, are in his regards an abomination; and they who are ſet up as patterns of piety, will be found in fact a ſink of iniquity.

7. He turns to the poor publicans and ſinners, whom the Phariſees deſpiſed, encouraging them to preſs into that kingdom which his grace had opened to them. The Old Teſtament diſpenſation was now at an end, ſince the preaching of John the Baptiſt; the prophecies concerning the Meſſiah were about to receive their accompliſhment, and the free grace of the goſpel to be univerſally publiſhed through the world, when the diſtinction of Jew and Gentile ſhould ceaſe. Every man therefore, without excluſion of any ſinners, whatever crimes he may have committed, is welcome to the Saviour, and ſure to find mercy. And theſe glad tidings engaged the hearts of many, whom the ſelf-righteous Phariſees deſpiſed, to preſs into it amidſt all oppoſition. Note, They muſt ſtrive againſt the world who would enter into heaven.

8. He precludes an objection which his ſelf-righteous enemies would be ready to ſtart, that he meant to invalidate the authority of the divine law. No. The frame of heaven and earth ſhall ſooner be diſſolved than one tittle of the law can fail; all the prophecies, types, and figures, muſt receive their accompliſhment; the precepts, in their true ſpiritual meaning, were now more than ever explained by Chriſt's preaching, and magnified by his own obedience to them; and, far from admitting a laxer ſyſtem of moral duty, this holy law muſt abide the unchangeable rule of righteouſneſs; and conformity to it would now be enforced by the ſtrongeſt motives: as for inſtance in the article of marriage: divorce under the law of Moſes was permitted to prevent greater evils; but under the goſpel it is entirely prohibited, and marriage reſtored to its primitive inſtitution, nothing being admitted as a plea for its diſſolution but unfaithfulneſs to the marriage bed. Whoſoever therefore for any other cauſe putteth away his wife, and marries again, is an adulterer; as is he alſo who ſhall marry her who is divorced. The goſpel, wherever it is truly received, ſtrikes at the root of corrupt affections, and engages us to walk not after the fleſh, but after the ſpirit.

19. ¶ There was a certain rich man [n] which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared ſumptuouſly every day. 20. And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, [n] which was laid at his gate full of ſores, 21. And deſiring to be fed with the crumbs which fell from the rich man's table: moreover, the dogs came and licked his ſores. 22. And it came to paſs that [o] the beggar died, and was carried by the angels into Abraham's boſom: [o] the rich man alſo died, and was buried. 23. And in hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, and [p] ſeeth Abraham afar off, and Lazarus in his boſom. 24. And he cried and ſaid, Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and ſend Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and [q] cool my tongue; for [r] I am tormented in this flame. 25. But Abraham ſaid, Son, remember that [s] thou in thy life-time receivedſt thy good things, and likewiſe Lazarus evil things: but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. 26. And beſides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed: ſo that they which would paſs from hence to you, cannot; neither can they paſs to us, that would come from thence. 27. Then he ſaid, I pray thee therefore, father, that thou wouldeſt ſend him to my father's houſe: 28. For I have five brethren; that he may teſtify unto them, leſt they alſo come into this place of torment. 29. Abraham ſaith unto him, [t] They have Moſes and the prophets; let them hear them. 30. And he ſaid, Nay, father Abraham: but if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent. 31. And he ſaid unto him, If they hear not Moſes and the prophets, [u] neither will they be perſuaded, though one roſe from the dead.

nn Pſ. lxxiii. 5, &c.
oo Job xxi. 23, 25, 26.
p Chap xiii. 28.
q Zech. xiv. 12.
r Iſa. lxvi. 24. Mark ix. 44, &c.
s Job xxi. 13. Chap. vi. 24.
t Iſa. viii. 20. & xxxiv. 16. John v. 39, 46. Acts xv. 21. & xvii. 11.
u John xii. 10, 11.

v. 19—31. This parable ſeems to be particularly deſigned to rebuke the pride of the Jews, who, enriched with outward privileges, treated the poor Gentiles with diſdain, as unworthy a place among the dogs of their flock; and yet there was grace in ſtore for the poor diſeaſed ſinners whom they deſpiſed, whilſt, through their unbelief and impenitence, they themſelves would be rejected and ruined. It is alſo more generally applicable to what we ſee ſadly verified every day, that rich epicures wallow in luxury, whilſt God's dear children pine under want and hunger; whoſe end will be as it is here repreſented; where the veil is taken off from the world to come, and we behold the glories of the one, and the unutterable miſeries of the other.

1. The ſtate of a rich wicked man is ſet before us. There was a certain rich man, whoſe fortune enabled him to gratify every appetite: he appeared in the moſt ſplendid robes, equalling the majeſty of princes, clothed in purple and fine linnen; and his table was ſpread with every delicacy, he fared ſumptuouſly every day. It may be ſaid, Where is the harm of this? he was born to his eſtate, and the expence was no more than he could afford. Admit the fact. The harm was not in the uſe, but the abuſe, of the creatures of God. He lived a life of ſenſuality, and ſat unconcerned about the miſeries of others. And it is deſigned to teach us, (1.) That this world's riches are often given to thoſe who know not God, and that his love and favour are never to be judged of by outward things. (2.) That wealth and affluence are dangerous to the ſoul, and, affording the means to gratify men's beſtial appetites, often plunge them in perdition and deſtruction.

2. The ſtate of a poor godly man. He is called Lazarus; and to the miſeries of poverty were added the more afflicting portion of a nauſeous diſeaſe: wanting a morſel of bread, overſpread with ulcers, without even rags to cover them, unable to walk, he is carried to the rich man's gate, and laid on the cold ground, deſiring to be fed, if but with the crumbs which fell from the table. We hear no complaints, no murmuring at his condition: he was reduced to want, and not aſhamed to beg; but, for what appears, he begged in vain; either his requeſts were refuſed, or, which amounted to the ſame thing, neglected and diſregarded: but the dogs, poſſeſſed of more humanity than their maſter, came and licked his ſores. Behold here the condition of a dear ſaint of God, and learn of him, (1.) Not to eſtimate a man's ſpiritual ſtate by his afflictions: for it is often ſeen, that thoſe whom the Lord moſt loveth he is pleaſed moſt ſeverely to exerciſe. (2.) Patient ſubmiſſion to God's providential chaſtiſements is a gracious proof of our adoption. (3.) The cries of the poor, which have been rejected or unnoticed, will by and by be remembred to the confuſion of thoſe who thus unkindly treated them. (4.) They will have a grievous account to anſwer for, who have ſpent more on their dogs than they ever gave to the neceſſitous; and ſee them well fed, when many of their fellow-creatures are famiſhing.

3. Death at laſt came with friendly hand to remove at once all the poor beggar's miſeries. Emaciated with hunger and diſeaſe, worn down with pain and miſery, he cloſed his eyes, and bid adieu to human wretchedneſs; ſeeking a refuge in the grave, where the wicked ceaſe from troubling. We hear of no burial given him: probably ſome hole was dug to remove the nuſance from the gate; and, buried with the burial of an aſs, not a friend followed the bier, not a tear was dropped over the grave: but he reſts in peace, and now his eternal triumphs begin: attending angels, who miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation, and hover round their dying beds, received the departing ſpirit, and, on their wings mounting to the ſkies, ſhouted aloud, Lift up your heads ye gates, and be ye lift up ye everlaſting doors, that an heir of glory may come in. Led to his ſeat on high, admitted to the richeſt entertainments of that bleſt world, he is placed next to Abraham, and receives that diſtinguiſhed honour of leaning on the patriarch's boſom. What a glorious proſpect does this preſent! amidſt all our preſent evil, how ſhould ſuch a hope ſupport and comfort us! Death muſt be the fartheſt limits of a believer's ſufferings; beyond the grave, all is happineſs eternal and bliſs uninterrupted.

4. The rich man alſo died, and was buried. Probably his funeral was pompous, as his living was grand. A noble tomb received the corpſe, and ſpices and perfumes made the clods of the valley ſweet unto him, whilſt perhaps charity wept on the monument, and the flattering marble proclaimed his munificence, liberality, and every virtue that ever yet adorned man. How vain this pageantry! to which the body is now inſenſible; and the ſoul, alas! whither is it fled? In hell he lift up his eyes, being in torments, the juſt puniſhment of his abuſed affluence: and now how changed are circumſtances! He ſees, with aſtoniſhment, Abraham afar off, and Lazarus, the poor deſpiſed Lazarus, in his boſom, admitted to this ſtate of higheſt honour and dignity. Note, (1.) The miſery of the wicked, and the happineſs of the juſt, immediately commence at their death. (2.) Every ſight in hell is aggravating; even the proſpects of heaven before the damned can only torment them with the views of that glory into which they muſt never enter.

5. In this fearful ſituation we have the rich man's requeſt. He cried, with eagerneſs and importunity, extorted by the pangs he felt. How different from the ſongs of riot that before echoed through his palace! Father Abraham, have mercy on me: perhaps in his cups he had ridiculed the old ſtory of Abraham; or it may be he had depended upon his outward privileges as deſcended from him, but now found how vain were his expectations. Note, Many, who have never prayed before, will pray loud enough in hell, but pray in vain. His requeſt ſeems ſmall; Send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame: how is his proud creſt fallen? he who did not give this poor beggar a crumb from his table now would fain crave a drop of water at his hands. He little thought once he ſhould be ſo reduced. Obſerve, (1.) His complaint, I am tormented in this flame. Damned ſinners have nothing but wrath before them, that preys like fire upon their ſouls, as much as their bodies are tortured by the everlaſting burnings. They who will not hear and fear, and do no more wickedly, in this day of mercy, will then feel, when every pang will be embittered with deſpair. (2.) The day is near, when they who deſpiſed the people of God would be glad to receive from them the leaſt favours.

6. Abraham's anſwer is moſt confounding and upbraiding: for in hell no requeſts are granted, not even a drop of water to cool a flaming tongue. They who neglect the day of grace have nothing before them but miſery, without abatement, and without end. Son, remember that thou in thy life-time receivedſt thy good things, and likewiſe Lazarus evil things; but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. (1.) He addreſſes him as a ſon, the remembrance of which relation aggravated the guilt of his degenerate conduct. Our abuſed privileges will increaſe the meaſure of our guilt. (2.) He bids him remember; for conſcience then will be awake, and ſelf-tormenting reflections embitter every pang. The ſinner will remember every means of grace he hath trifled with, every call of God he hath ſlighted, every affliction which he hath miſimproved, every bleſſing he hath abuſed. (3.) He reminds him of the good things which he had received, and miſapplied; unthankful for them; placing his happineſs in them; proſtituting them to the baſeſt purpoſes of ſerving his luſts and pleaſures; and, as he reckoned theſe during life his chief good, he had his all in hand, and nothing to expect after death but wrath to the uttermoſt. (4.) He leads him to reflect on the evil things Lazarus had received; which patiently he had born, though denied at his gate a crumb which fell from the table. (5.) He bids him now obſerve how the tables are turned: he is comforted; the miſeries of a child of God, however ſharp, are, comparatively ſpeaking, light afflictions, which are but for a moment: death will put an end to every ſorrow, and inſtantly his everlaſting bliſs will commence. But thou art tormented: the triumphing of the wicked is but for a moment; they can carry nothing with them into the grave; and the joys and delights, in which they wallowed before, will only make the change more terrible, when they are driven into the everlaſting burnings, where there is weeping and wailing and gnaſhing of teeth. (6.) He leaves him without hope of mercy, or proſpect of the leaſt relief: for, beſides all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed, impaſſable on either ſide; ſo that they who would paſs from hence to you cannot: if a glorified ſaint wiſhed to afford the leaſt relief to a damned ſinner, it would be in vain: not that he will ever feel ſuch a deſire, but will approve and applaud the juſtice of God in their eternal torments. Neither can they paſs to us that would come from thence: when once the pit of hell hath cloſed its mouth upon the miſerable ſoul, deſpair ſeals up the door of mercy; no gleam of hope ever reaches that dire abode: the decree once gone forth is irreverſible; as the tree falleth it muſt lie. How awful! how awakening the thought! Sinner, hear and tremble. The door of mercy yet is not ſhut againſt thee. Oh flee quickly thither. Cry mightily to God, if yet there may be hope; in a moment it will be too late to knock when the door is ſhut.

7. Again he prefers another requeſt, but meets with a ſecond repulſe. Since he is doomed in deſpair to ſuffer himſelf, he cannot, without increaſing horror, reflect on meeting his brethren in that place of torment, whom he probably had greatly been inſtrumental to ruin by his bad example and influence, and whoſe bitter upbraidings he wiſhed to prevent: for not love of their ſouls, but deſire to prevent an increaſe of his own miſery, ſeems to have dictated the requeſt. Earneſtly therefore doth he intreat, that, if Lazarus may not come to him, he may go to them, and prevent their eternal ruin, if he may not alleviate his torment. Note, (1.) They who have been tempters to others, and companions in ſin, will ſhortly become mutual tormentors. (2.) Even a tormented ſinner in hell expreſſes a concern for the ſouls of his brethren, when thouſands on earth never give themſelves a thought about them.

Abraham denies the requeſt: it is unneceſſary as it is impoſſible. They have Moſes and the prophets, let them hear them. They wanted not the means of conviction and converſion, if they did not obſtinately harden their hearts. Note, The Scriptures are the ordinary means God employs to turn men's hearts. They who neglect to attend to theſe ſacred oracles are left to their own devices, and ſealed up under wrath.

8. Once more he redoubles his plea, yet meets with no more ſucceſs. In hell no prayers are anſwered; it is here alone that prayers can profit us. He replied, Nay, father Abraham; tho' they may pay no regard to Moſes and the prophets, too long, it may be, accuſtomed to treat all revelation with contempt, yet, if one went unto them from the dead, they will repent: ſuch a meſſenger muſt needs carry conviction along with him, and compel them to turn from the error of their ways. So ready are fooliſh men to be requiring evidence which God is not pleaſed to give, and which, ſhould he comply with their requeſt, would ſtill be utterly ineffectual: for, as Abraham declares, if they hear not Moſes and the prophets, neither will they be perſuaded though one roſe from the dead. Indeed it is impoſſible they ſhould. One from the dead could not ſpeak with more authority and certainty than the Scriptures. We ſhould have much more reaſon there to ſuſpect a deluſion, than in the oracles of truth. And though we might perhaps be terrified with the apparition, our hearts could never be changed thereby, ſince that the power of God alone can effect. We ſhould by degrees recover from the fright, or be laughed out of our fears, and our corruptions would ſoon get the better of our convictions. The word of God therefore is ordinarily the alone, and ſufficient, means he is pleaſed to uſe: it is preſumption in us to preſcribe, and folly to deſire any other. If we harden our hearts againſt the warnings therein contained, viſits from the dead, yea being dragged through the belly of hell itſelf, and ſent back again to earth, would be utterly ineffectual to convert our ſouls. To the law therefore and the teſtimony, Iſa. viii. 19, 20.

CHAP. XVII.

In this chapter, 1. Chriſt teaches his diſciples to take heed of giving offence, and to forgive the injuries done them, ver. 1—4. To pray for the increaſe of their faith, ver. 5, 6. And then teacheth them humility, whatever ſervice they had done for God, ver. 7—10. 2. He cleanſes ten lepers, one of whom only thanks him, and he a Samaritan, ver. 11—19. 3. He diſcourſes with his diſciples upon occaſion of an enquiry of the Phariſees, when the kingdom of God ſhould appear, ver. 20—37.

1. THEN ſaid he unto the diſciples, [a] It is impoſſible but that offences will come: [b] but wo unto him through whom they come. 2. It were better for him that a milſtone were hanged about his neck, and he caſt into the ſea, than that he ſhould offend one of theſe little ones. 3. ¶ Take heed to yourſelves: [c] If thy brother treſpaſs againſt thee, [d] rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. 4. And if he treſpaſs againſt thee ſeven times in a day, and ſeven times in a day turn again to thee, ſaying, I repent; thou ſhalt forgive him. 5. And the apoſtles ſaid unto the Lord, Increaſe our faith. 6. And the Lord ſaid, [e] If ye had faith as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, ye might ſay unto this ſycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the ſea; and it ſhould obey you. 7. But which of you having a ſervant plowing, or feeding cattle, will ſay unto him by and by, when he is come from the field, Go, and ſit down to meat? 8. And will not rather ſay unto him, Make ready wherewith I may ſup, and gird thyſelf, [f] and ſerve me till I have eaten and drunken; and afterward thou ſhalt eat and drink? 9. Doth he thank that ſervant becauſe he did the things that were commanded him? I trow not. 10. So likewiſe ye, when ye ſhall have done all thoſe things which are commanded you, ſay, [g] We are unprofitable ſervants: we have done that which was our duty to do.

[a] Mat. xviii. 6, 7. Mark ix. 42. 1 Cor. xi. 19.
[b] Mat. xxvi. 24.
[c] Mat. xviii. 15, 21.
[d] Lev. xix. 17. Prov. xvii. 10. Jam. v. 19.
[e] Mat. xvii. 20. & xxi. 21. Mark xi. 23. 1 Cor. xiii. 2.
[f] Chap. xii. 37.
[g] Job xxii. 3. & xxxv. 7. Mat. xxv. 30. Rom. iii. 12.

v. 1—10. This diſcourſe is particularly addreſſed to the diſciples, and contains,

1. A warning againſt giving offence. It muſt needs be, conſidering the corruption of our nature, the craft of Satan, and the temptations of the world, that offences come; but wo to perſecutors, who diſcourage and oppoſe the work of God; wo to ſeducers, who corrupt the truth, and deceive the ſouls of men with pernicious hereſies; wo to faithleſs profeſſors, whoſe carnal lives ſtumble the weak and harden the wicked: better were it for them to die with the vileſt of malefactors than live to increaſe their everlaſting miſery.

2. A command to forgive all injuries. Take heed to yourſelves, as not to give offence, ſo alſo not to take it. When others are provoking, hold in your own ſpirit, and in patience poſſeſs your ſouls; let no angry thought, no paſſionate word nor wiſh, no violence break forth. Mildly endeavour to convince an offending brother, and, the moment he expreſſes his repentance, let the arms of forgiveneſs and reconciliation be open to him; yea, if he, through careleſſneſs or forgetfulneſs, ſeven times in a day repeat the offence, and turns again, profeſſing his ſorrow, and promiſing greater watchfulneſs, we muſt ſtill forgive, and neither upbraid him, nor keep in mind his repeated provocations.

3. Here is inſtruction given, how we can alone diſcharge this difficult duty. Lord, ſay the apoſtles, Increaſe our faith. This is the root from whence all other graces flow; as this ſtrengthens, they are in exerciſe. The apoſtles themſelves were conſcious of the weakneſs of their faith; they knew his grace alone could ſupply their wants; therefore in prayer to him they make their application. We muſt go to the ſame Saviour, and he will not ſend us empty away. To their requeſt the Lord replied, If ye had faith as a grain of muſtard-ſeed, ye might ſay unto this ſycamine-tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the ſea; and it ſhould obey you; ſuch being the mighty efficacy of divine faith; and every duty, under its influence, becomes practicable.

4. Chriſt enjoins upon them humility in all their ſervices. Whatever works they were enabled to perform, whatever difficulties they might be called to encounter, they muſt regard themſelves as his ſervants, and fulfil the duties of their ſtation; nor think they had merited any thing by their labours: for, as a ſervant, when he returns from his work in the field, doth not expect to be attended, but is required firſt to wait on his maſter before he ſups himſelf, nor is thanked for ſo doing, becauſe it is his duty; in like manner muſt Chriſt's miniſters and ſervants, when they have done their beſt, acknowledge they are unprofitable ſervants; and, if they had indeed performed all things commanded them, they would have done no more than was their duty to do, and would have no merit to plead; our goodneſs extendeth not to God, we can never make him our debtor for duty; whilſt we muſt daily own ourſelves his debtors for pardoning and ſanctifying grace.

11. ¶ And it came to paſs, as he went to Jeruſalem, that he paſſed through the midſt of Samaria and Galilee. 12. And as he entred into a certain village, there met him ten men that were [h] lepers, [i] which ſtood afar off: 13. And they lifted up their voices, and ſaid, [k] Jeſus, Maſter, have mercy on us. 14. And when he ſaw them, he ſaid unto them, [l] Go ſhew yourſelves unto the prieſts. And it came to paſs that, as they went, they were cleanſed. 15. And one of them, when he ſaw that he was healed, turned back, and with a loud voice glorified God, 16. And fell down on his face at his feet, giving him thanks: and he was a Samaritan. 17. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid, Were there not ten cleanſed? but where are the nine? 18. There are not found that returned to give glory to God, ſave this ſtranger. 19. And he ſaid unto him, Ariſe, go thy way; [m] thy faith hath made thee whole.

[h] Lev. xiii. 46. 2 Chron. xxvi. 21.
[i] Chap. xviii. 13.
[k] Mat. xv. 22.
[l] Lev. xiii. 2. & xiv. 2. Chap. v. 14.
[m] Chap. vii. 50. & viii. 48. & xviii. 42.

v. 11—19. The leproſy was a diſorder not only incurable, and moſt nauſeous, but which rendered the unhappy patient ceremonially defiled, and excluded him from the comforts of human ſociety. We have here the miraculous cure of ten men afflicted with that miſerable diſeaſe.

1. They met Chriſt on his journey, hearing it may be of his coming that way, and aſſembled to move his compaſſion, and unite their ſupplications to him. Keeping at a humble diſtance, they lifted up their voice and cried aloud for mercy to him, whom fame had proclaimed the Saviour of the miſerable. Note, (1.) A humble ſenſe of our own vileneſs ſhould deeply affect our ſouls in all our approaches to God. (2.) Joint ſufferers ſhould unite their prayers, and thus more powerfully beſiege the throne of grace.

2. Chriſt ſent them to the prieſts for inſpection, whom the law had made the judges of leproſy. And herein he intimated his deſign to cleanſe them, if they in faith obeyed his direction; and withal hereby his power and glory would be made evident to thoſe in the ſanctuary, who, pronouncing theſe perſons clean, might learn by what means the wondrous cure was wrought.

3. As they went they were healed. They did not heſitate about the journey, or ſay, To what purpoſe ſhould we go? but went in faith, and were accordingly healed: for in the way of duty we may expect Chriſt's powerful hand of grace to work effectually for us where we are utterly unable to help ourſelves.

4. One of the poor lepers no ſooner received his cure than he immediately returned, with a loud voice glorifying God, adoring the power and grace which he had ſo richly experienced, and fell at the feet of Jeſus, with warmeſt gratitude expreſſing his acknowledgments of the mercy which he had received. Note, The leaſt we can render to God for his goodneſs towards us is praiſe; and therein we are bound to be ſpeedy and hearty, deeply ſenſible that we are leſs than the leaſt of all his mercies.

5. Chriſt expreſſes his approbation of his conduct, and encourages his faith. Nine out of the ten went on; but this man, though a Samaritan, a ſtranger to the commonwealth of Iſrael, evidenced deeper gratitude and more unfeigned religion than thoſe who profeſſed to know the true God. Our Lord therefore diſmiſſes him with an aſſurance of his ſalvation. His faith had not only obtained his cure in common with the reſt, but had ſaved his ſoul alſo. Note, (1.) Ingratitude is a common ſin. How many more receive mercies from God than are thankful for them? (2.) We often meet with the greateſt gratitude where we leaſt expected it; whilſt ſometimes they who make profeſſion of religion moſt grievouſly diſappoint us.

20. ¶ And when he was demanded of the Phariſees, when the kingdom of God ſhould come; he anſwered them, and ſaid, The kingdom of God cometh not with † obſervation. 21. Neither ſhall they ſay, Lo here, or lo there: for behold, the kingdom of God is ‡ within you. 22. And he ſaid unto the diſciples, The days will come when ye ſhall deſire to ſee one of the days of the Son of man, and ye ſhall not ſee it. 23. And [n] they ſhall ſay to you, See here, or ſee there: go not after them, nor follow them. 24. [o] For as the lightning that lightneth out of the one part under heaven, ſhineth unto the other part under heaven: ſo ſhall alſo the Son of man be in his day. 25. But firſt [p] muſt he ſuffer many things, and be rejected of this generation. 26. And [q] as it was in the days of Noe, [r] ſo ſhall it be alſo in the days of the Son of man. 27. They did eat, they drank, they married wives, they were given in marriage, until the day that Noe entred into the ark: and the flood came and deſtroyed them all. 28. Likewiſe alſo as it was in the days of Lot, they did eat, they drank, they bought, they ſold, they planted, they builded: 29. But the ſame day that Lot went out of Sodom, [s] it rained fire and brimſtone from heaven, and deſtroyed them all: 30. Even thus ſhall it be in the day [t] when the Son of man is revealed. 31. In that day, he [u] which ſhall be upon the houſe-top, and his ſtuff in the houſe, let him not come down to take it away: and he that is in the field, let him likewiſe not return back. 32. [x] Remember Lot's wife. 33. [y] Whoſoever ſhall ſeek to ſave his life, ſhall loſe it: and whoſoever ſhall loſe his life, ſhall preſerve it. 34. [z] I tell you, in that night there ſhall be two men in one bed; the one ſhall be taken, and the other ſhall be left. 35. Two women ſhall be grinding together; the one ſhall be taken, and the other left. 36. § Two men ſhall be in the field; the one ſhall be taken, and the other left. 37. And they anſwered and ſaid unto him, Where, Lord? And he ſaid unto them, [a] Whereſoever the body is, thither will the eagles be gathered together.

† Or outward ſhew.
‡ Or among you.
[n] Mat. xxiv. 23. Mark xiii. 21. Chap. xxi. 8.
[o] Mat. xxiv. 27.
[p] Chap. ix. 22. & xviii. 31. & xxiv. 7, 26.
[q] Gen. vi. 3—5. & vii. 5, &c. Mat. xxiv. 37. 1 Pet. iii. 20.
[r] 1 Theſ. v. 3.
[s] Gen. xix. 24.
[t] 2 Theſſ. i. 7.
[u] Mat. xxiv. 17. Mark xiii. 15.
[x] Gen. xix. 26.
[y] Chap. ix. 24. John xii. 25.
[z] Mat. xxiv. 40, 41. 1 Theſ. iv. 17.
§ Some Greek copies want this verſe.
[a] Job xxxix. 30. Mat. xxiv. 28.

v. 20—37. We have here our Lord's anſwer to the Phariſees queſtion, when the kingdom of God ſhould come; that glorious temporal kingdom of the Meſſiah which their prejudices taught them to expect.

1. He informs them that it will come with none of that outward ſhew which they imagined, nor occaſion any ſuch obſervation; as when a prince makes his progreſs through the kingdom, every mouth is full of it, Lo here he comes, or lo there he reſides: for behold the kingdom of God is within you; the heart is the ſeat of the Meſſiah's kingdom; there he ſets up his throne, bringing the ſoul, with all its faculties, into obedience to his bleſſed Self. Note, (1.) Chriſtianity knows no ſect or party; Chriſt is not confined here or there; but all, who believe in him and love him in ſincerity, are ſubjects of his happy government. (2.) We muſt look into our hearts, whether Chriſt be formed in us. All true religion is internal and experimental, and without this the form and ſhew of godlineſs avail nothing.

2. He directs his diſcourſe to his diſciples, with a view to warn them of the difficulties they muſt encounter. Far from becoming great men in this world, eſteemed and honoured as they flattered themſelves, they would meet with ſuch ſeaſons of diſtreſs and perſecution, as would make them look back with deſire and regret upon one of theſe days, when they enjoyed Chriſt's perſonal preſence with them, and wiſh for it in vain.

3. He foretells them of his ſpeedy and unexpected appearance to deſtroy the Jewiſh people; when, driven to extremities, they would be ready to hearken to every impoſtor who pretended Chriſt was here or there, ready to reſcue them from the power of the Romans; but, like lightning, he would appear and utterly conſume that devoted city and nation. Or this may repreſent alſo the mighty efficacy of his goſpel, which, with irreſiſtible power and rapidity, ſhould ſpread to the ends of the earth, notwithſtanding all oppoſition.

4. He informs them the Meſſiah muſt ſuffer many things, and be rejected of that generation: but when, by death, he hath accompliſhed the ſalvation of his people, then all his enemies and theirs muſt fall before him.

5. His coming to deſtroy Jeruſalem would be ſudden and terrible, as the flood which conſumed the old world, and the fire that devoured the cities of Sodom; whilſt the ſenſuality and carnal ſecurity of the Jewiſh people would be like that which prevailed in the days of Lot and Noah, whoſe warnings were deſpiſed and diſbelieved, till the threatned ruin came, and, too late, brought the dire conviction of their truth. So would the unbelieving Jews reject the warnings of Chriſt and his apoſtles, and periſh as theſe deſpiſers of old. Note, (1.) The inordinate purſuit of this world's gratifications is apt to lull the ſoul into a fatal ſecurity. (2.) It is common for ſinners to go faſt aſleep into eternal miſery, and not to be apprehenſive of their danger till they lift up their eyes in torments. (3.) A few, in the moſt evil days, are reſcued, whom God will take care of amidſt every danger. (4.) The coming of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt will be matter of the ſame ſurprize to a careleſs world at the laſt day as his judgments of old have been.

6. He admoniſhes his diſciples, as ſoon as they ſaw the danger approach, and the Roman army advancing to Jeruſalem, to flee without delay; nor to regard what they may have left behind in the city, nor ſtop to caſt a look thitherwards, leſt, as Lot's wife was made a monument of divine vengeance, a like deſtruction ſhould overtake them, if, ſollicitous about what they left, they ſhould look back, or go back to ſave it. In theſe days of perſecution, when tempted to ſave their lives by baſe compliances, they muſt remember this would be the ſure way to periſh everlaſtingly; whilſt readineſs to meet death itſelf, in the way of duty, would moſt effectually ſecure their eternal life and glory. Note, (1.) We ſhould often remember Lot's wife, and tremble at the thought of drawing back. (2.) If we would make a right eſtimation of our gain and loſs, we muſt look forward to eternity, and take that into the reckoning.

7. God's diſtinguiſhing providence will in that day take care of his own people, who, though expoſed to the ſame dangers as others, ſhall be then ſingularly preſerved, and eſcape from the general deſolation. Note, God knoweth thoſe that are his, and will always take care they ſhall be ſafe, either beneath the ſun or above it.

8. In anſwer to his diſciples, who enquired, Where, Lord? what will become of thoſe who are left, and where ſhall the judgment light, he informs them, Where the body is, there will the eagles be gathered together: wherever the Jews are, the Romans, as eagles, will purſue them, ſeize them in their faſtneſſes, and utterly root them out of the land. And this may be applied to Chriſt himſelf, to whom all his people eagerly flock, and feed on him, to the great ſtrengthening and comfort of their ſouls.

C H A P. XVIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The parable of the importunate widow, deſigned to teach us fervency in prayer, ver. 1—8. 2. The parable of the Phariſee and Publican, deſigned to teach us humility, and humiliation for ſin in prayer, ver. 9—14. 3. Chriſt's favour to little children that were brought to him, ver. 15, 16, 17. 4. The rich man, who loved his wealth more than Chriſt, ver. 18—30. 5. Chriſt's foretelling of his own death and ſufferings, ver. 31—34. 6. His reſtoring ſight to a blind man, ver. 35—43. And theſe four paſſages we had before in Matthew and Mark.

1. AND he ſpake a parable unto them, to this end, that [a] men ought always to pray, and not to faint; 2. Saying, There was in a city a judge, which feared not God, neither regarded man. 3. And there was a widow in that city, and ſhe came unto him, ſaying, Avenge me of mine adverſary. 4. And he would not for a while: but afterward he ſaid within himſelf, Though I fear not God, nor regard man; 5. [b] Yet, becauſe this widow troubleth me, I will avenge her, leſt by her continual coming ſhe weary me. 6. And the Lord ſaid, Hear what the unjuſt judge ſaith. 7. And [c] ſhall not God avenge his own elect, which cry day and night unto him, though he bear long with them? 8. I tell you that [d] he will avenge them ſpeedily. Nevertheleſs, when the Son of man cometh, ſhall he find faith on the earth?

[a] Chap. xxi. 36. Rom. xii. 12. Eph. vi. 18. Col. iv. 2. 1Theſ. v. 17.

[b] Chap. xi. 8.

[c] Pſ. ix. 18. Hab. ii. 3. Rev. vi. 10.

[d] Heb. x. 37. 2Pet. iii. 8, 9.

v. 1—8. The intention of the parable before us, as we are informed in the firſt verſe, is to encourage us in perſevering prayer, even though we may not always find the immediate anſwer of our requeſts. We have,

1. The parable of the importunate widow and unjuſt judge. He was a man of abandoned principles, deſtitute of religion and honeſty, neither fearing God nor regarding man: and miſerable is that country where ſuch magiſtrates are in office. A poor oppreſſed widow appealed to him for redreſs: cruelly taking advantage of her weakneſs, ſome crafty or covetous wretch had defrauded or injured her; and with ceaſeleſs importunity, at the judge's gate, ſhe cried for juſtice to be done her. Deaf for a while to her intreaties, he paid no regard to her cauſe, till, wearied out with her perpetual clamour, merely to get rid of it, he granted her ſuit, and redreſſed her wrongs.

2. Chriſt applies the caſe, for the encouragement of his praying people. If the unjuſt judge was thus prevailed upon by importunity, how much more ſhall God avenge his own elect, who cry to him day and night, though he bear long with them? I tell you that he will avenge them ſpeedily. Note, (1.) God's people are his elect; they have not choſen him, but he hath choſen them. (2.) Dear as they are to him, they meet with many a ſore trial, and much oppreſſion in this world; and to him they carry all their complaints. (3.) We muſt not be weary, though our requeſts do not immediately ſucceed, but patiently perſevere in calling upon God day and night. (4.) God bears long with his enemies, to ſee if they will yet repent and turn to him; and he defers long the prayers of his people, to exerciſe their graces; but he will ſpeedily avenge them, puniſhing their enemies, and reſcuing them from their ſufferings.

3. He foretells his diſciples how little faith would be found among the Jewiſh people when he came to judge them: and at his ſecond coming the remnant of the faithful would be alike ſmall: a fearful conſideration! Let him that thinketh he ſtandeth take heed leſt he fall, and redouble his prayers that he may never faint nor fail under any trials.

9. ¶ And he ſpake this parable unto certain [e] which truſted in themſelves † that they were righteous, and deſpiſed others: 10. Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Phariſee, and the other a publican. 11. The Phariſee ſtood and prayed thus with himſelf; [f] God, I thank thee, that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjuſt, adulterers, or even as this publican. 12. I faſt twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I poſſeſs. 13. And the publican, ſtanding afar off, [g] would not lift up ſo much as his eyes unto heaven, but [h] ſmote upon his breaſt, ſaying, God be merciful to me [i] a ſinner. 14. I tell you, this man went down to his houſe juſtified rather than the other: for [k] every one that exalteth himſelf, ſhall be abaſed; and he that humbleth himſelf, ſhall be exalted.

[e] Chap. xvi. 15.

† Or becauſe.

[f] Iſa. i. 15. & lviii. 2. Rev. iii. 17.

[g] Pſ. xl. 12.

[h] Jer. xxxi. 19.

[i] Job xl. 4. Rom. vii. 24.

[k] Job xxii. 29. Chap. xiv. 11. Jam. iv. 6. 1Pet. v. 5, 6.

v. 9—14. The purport of this parable is intimated in the opening of it, He ſpake this parable unto certain who truſted in themſelves that they were righteous, and deſpiſed others. They were puffed up with a vain conceit of their excellence above other men; they preſumed their own doings and duties would enſure their acceptance with God; and, high in ſelf-opinion, looked down with contempt on the herd of vulgar ſinners as far beneath them: though in God's ſight they were infinitely more vile and abominable than thoſe whom they deſpiſed. We have,

1. The account of two men of very different characters, who went up to the temple to pray. The one a Phariſee, proud, ſelf-righteous, who, confident of his own goodneſs, expected the admiration of men, and counted even God his debtor. The other a publican, a poor broken-hearted, ſelf-condemned ſinner, who, feeling his miſery, fled to God for mercy. Note, (1.) Prayer is every man's duty. They muſt be inexcuſable who live in the neglect of it. (2.) The temple was the type of Jeſus Chriſt, through whom alone our prayers can come up before God with any proſpect of acceptance.

2. The Phariſee's addreſs to God beſpoke the abominable arrogance of his heart. He ſtood and prayed thus with himſelf, in ſome conſpicuous place where others might admire his devotion and piety, God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjuſt, adulterers, or even as this publican. He pretends to thank God, but in fact all he ſaid was merely a compliment on himſelf. Much evil he had avoided, much good he had done; not only abſtaining from groſſer vices, from extortion, adultery, injuſtice, but alſo he was often in faſtings, and ſcrupulous in paying tythes of all that he poſſeſſed; and with much ſelf-complacence congratulates himſelf that he was ſo much ſuperior to other men, and boaſts to God how far he exceeded in goodneſs that vile publican, whom he paſſed in the outer court of the temple. Thus ſpoke this ſwelling worm: what he called his prayers breathed nothing but the language of pride, uncharitableneſs, and cenſure. Yet, deteſted as this character appears, how many who hope for heaven come ſhort of it, and live indulging thoſe vices from which even this Phariſee was free?

3. The publican's prayer was juſt the very reverſe. In humility, ſelf-abhorrence, and earneſt deſire after mercy, he bows into the duſt before God. He ſtood afar off, keeping a humble diſtance from the Phariſee, whom he counted ſo much his ſuperior; or in the outer court of the Gentiles, as unworthy a place among true Iſraelites; and would not lift up ſo much as his eyes unto heaven; with down-caſt looks, which beſpoke the deep dejection of his ſoul, as if he was unworthy to turn even his eyes toward's God's holy habitation; but ſmote upon his breaſt, where that vile heart lodged in which ſo much evil had dwelt, and againſt which he would expreſs a holy indignation. Then raiſing, as it were, a deep ſigh from his inmoſt ſoul, in one ſhort ejaculation he breathed forth the deſires of his ſinful ſoul, God be merciful to me a ſinner! He owns his guilt, by nature, by practice, ill-deſerving, hell-deſerving; he diſclaims all hope and dependence upon himſelf, and truſts alone upon the promiſed mercy of God through the blood of atonement; aſſured he muſt otherwiſe eternally periſh: and therefore he caſts his ſoul down before the throne of God's grace, earneſtly begging that mercy which he ſo greatly needed. A pattern which every poor ſinner muſt imitate; and in this way alone may the miſerable hope to find mercy. We are all in this publican's ſtate; and, if ever we would be ſaved, we muſt learn his ſpirit and adopt his prayer.

4. Very different was the acceptance which theſe men's prayers met at a throne of grace. However to outward view the ſpecious Phariſee might be generally among men preferred to this deſpiſed publican, God ſeeth not as man ſeeth: this poor, ſelf-abaſed, and penitent ſinner went down to his houſe juſtified, his ſins pardoned, his perſon accepted, his prayer granted, and peace ſpoken to his ſoul; and not the other; the proud ſelf-juſtifier was left to his native guilt and ſin, abhorred of God, his very prayers an abomination, and all his boaſts were but deluſion, and muſt prove his deſtruction. And the reaſon of this is added, which contains alſo an axiom which will be for ever proved true; every one that exalteth himſelf, in the vain imagination of his own ſelf-ſufficiency and righteouſneſs before God, looking down with diſdain upon others, as ſo much his inferiors in goodneſs, he ſhall be abaſed; his pride will be mortified, his ſins will take hold of him, and the wrath of God in hell for ever abide upon him: whilſt he that humbleth himſelf, taking ſhame for his ſinfulneſs and baſeneſs before God, confeſſing his guilt, and acknowledging his unworthineſs of the leaſt mercy, ſhall be exalted to the favour of God in this world, and to his eternal glory in a better.

15. And [l] they brought unto him alſo infants, that he would touch them: but, when his diſciples ſaw it, they rebuked them. 16. But Jeſus called them unto him, and ſaid, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for [m] of ſuch is the kingdom of God. 17. [n] Verily I ſay unto you, Whoſoever ſhall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, ſhall in no wiſe enter therein.

l Mat. xix. 13. Mark x. 13.
m Pſ. cxxxi. 2. 1 Cor. xiv. 20. 1 Pet. ii. 2. n Mark x. 15.

v. 15—17. This paſſage of ſtory hath before been twice recorded; and a third time it is profitable to conſider it:

1. As an encouragement to parents early to bring their babes to Jeſus, in prayer committing them to his benediction, by baptiſm offering them to become viſible members of his church, and engaging to bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

2. We muſt not be diſheartened in our applications, if we find thoſe diſcountenance us from whom we hoped for encouragement; the Maſter himſelf will treat us more kindly.

3. The longeſt day we live we need ſtill to ſet before us a little child for our pattern. In the ſchool of teachableneſs, humility, and ſimplicity, the beſt and wiſeſt have yet many leſſons to learn.

18. And [o] a certain ruler aſked him, ſaying, Good Maſter, what ſhall I do to inherit eternal life? 19. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Why calleſt thou me good? none is good ſave one, that is God. 20. Thou knoweſt the commandments, [p] Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not ſteal, Do not bear falſe witneſs, [q] Honour thy father and thy mother. 21. And he ſaid, [r] All theſe have I kept from my youth up. 22. Now when Jeſus heard theſe things, he ſaid unto him, Yet lackeſt thou one thing: [s] Sell all that thou haſt, and diſtribute unto the poor, and thou ſhalt have treaſure in heaven: and come, follow me. 23. And when he heard this, he was very ſorrowful: for he was very rich. 24. And when Jeſus ſaw that he was very ſorrowful, he ſaid, [t] How hardly ſhall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! 25. For it is eaſier for a camel to go through a needle's eye, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. 26. And they that heard it ſaid, Who then can be ſaved? 27. And he ſaid, The things which are impoſſible with men, [u] are poſſible with God. 28. Then Peter ſaid, Lo, [x] we have left all, and followed thee. 29. And he ſaid unto them, Verily I ſay unto you, there is no man that hath left houſe, or parents, or brethren, or wife, or children, for the kingdom of God's ſake, 30. [y] Who ſhall not receive manifold more in this preſent time, and in the world to come life everlaſting.

o Mat. xix. 16. Mark x. 17.
p Ex. xx. 13. Deut. v. 17. Rom. xiii. 9.
q Mark vii. 10. Eph. vi. 2. Col. iii. 20.
r Phil. iii. 6.
s Chap. xii. 33. & xvi. 9. Acts iv. 34. 1 Tim. vi. 19.
t Prov. xi. 28. 1 Cor. i. 26. 1 Tim. vi. 17.
u Gen. xviii. 14. Jer. xxxii. 17. Zech. viii. 6. Chap. i. 37.
x Deut. xxxiii. 9. Mat. iv. 20.
y Job xlii. 12.

v. 18—30. We have here,

1. Our Lord's diſcourſe with the young ruler, who enquired after the way to eternal life. The enquiry was important, and what the greateſt of men need ſeriouſly to conſider; for they are dying worms as well as others. Could man keep the commandments, this would be ſtill the road to glory; but ſince the fall, that door of paradiſe is barred, and none can any longer hope to enter heaven by perſonal obedience, ſince all have ſinned and come ſhort of the glory of God. To flatter ourſelves we have kept the commandments would prove our ignorance of the ſpirituality of God's law, and of the corruption of our own hearts. Thus deceived was this young ruler; and the deluſion was evident the moment he was called upon to part with all for Chriſt; when, unable to bear that hard ſaying, he departed ſorrowful. Note, Worldly things are uſually dire hindrances in the way to glory: for the ſake of ſome one darling luſt, how many make ſhipwreck of their ſouls.

2. Our Lord took occaſion from hence to warn his diſciples, whoſe hearts were too full of the hopes of temporal grandeur, how difficult, and next to impoſſible, it was for a rich man to enter the kingdom of God. And, when they expreſſed their aſtoniſhment thereat, he refers them to that almighty grace which can effect that for us which we could never do for ourſelves. Note, Inſtead of graſping at abundance, we ſhould tremble at the perilouſneſs of our ſituation, if God in his providence gives us much: we have ſo many more hindrances in our way to heaven, unleſs he gives us alſo proportionable grace to improve our talents to his glory.

3. In anſwer to Peter's queſtion, what they ſhould have who left all to follow him, Chriſt replies, they ſhould be abundant gainers thereby, receiving manifold more in this preſent time, if not in kind, yet in comfort, in the preſent graces and gifts of God's Spirit, and in the enjoyment of his love and favour; and in the world to come life everlaſting, which will infinitely overpay all our preſent loſſes.

31. ¶ [z] Then he took unto him the twelve, and ſaid unto them, Behold, we go up to Jeruſalem, and [a] all things that are written by the prophets concerning the Son of man ſhall be accompliſhed. 32. For [b] he ſhall be delivered unto the Gentiles, and ſhall be mocked, and ſpitefully entreated, and [c] ſpitted on; 33. And they ſhall ſcourge him, and put him to death: and the third day he ſhall riſe again. 34. And they underſtood none of theſe things: and this ſaying was hid from them, neither knew they the things which were ſpoken.

z Chap. ix. 22. & xvii. 25. & xxiv. 7.
a Pſ. xxii. Iſa. liii.
b Chap. xxiii. 1, &c.
c Iſa. l. 6.

v. 31—34. We have here,

1. The warning Chriſt gave his diſciples of the ſufferings he muſt endure, to arm them againſt that dire event. He was about to ſuffer every indignity, and at laſt death itſelf. Nor ought this to ſurprize them, ſince the Scriptures had foretold that thus it muſt be; and not one jot or tittle of the divine word can fail. But as they declared his ſufferings, they had inſured his reſurrection alſo; and therefore his diſciples need not deſpond, having this glorious event in their view.

2. So ſtrong were the unhappy prejudices the apoſtles had imbibed, that they underſtood none of theſe things. The prophecies which ſpoke of the Meſſiah's ſufferings and reproaches were hid from them; they could not reconcile the glorious things ſpoken of his kingdom to ſuch a ſcene of indignities and humiliation: and, having their eyes dazzled with the temporal grandeur of the Meſſiah's kingdom, they overlooked all beſide. But then, now, and ever, ought we to remember, that the way to glory, both for the head and the members, lies through much tribulation; and no croſs, no crown.

35. ¶ [d] And it came to paſs, that as he was come nigh unto Jericho, a certain [e] blind man ſat by the wayſide begging. 36. And hearing the multitude paſs by, he aſked what it meant. 37. And they told him, that Jeſus of Nazareth paſſeth by. 38. And he cried, ſaying, Jeſus, thou ſon of David, have mercy on me. 39. And they which went before rebuked him, that he ſhould hold his peace: but [f] he cried ſo much the more, Thou ſon of David, have mercy on me. 40. And Jeſus ſtood and commanded him to be brought unto him: and, when he was come near, he aſked him, 41. Saying, [g] What wilt thou that I ſhall do unto thee? And he ſaid, Lord, [h] that I may receive my ſight. 42. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Receive thy ſight: [i] thy faith hath ſaved thee. 43. And immediately [k] he received his ſight, and followed him, glorifying God: and all the people, when they ſaw it, gave praiſe unto God.

d Mat. xx. 29. Mark x. 46.
e Iſa. lix. 10. John ix. 39.
f Ver. 1.
g Mat. vii. 7.
h Iſa. xxxv. 5.
i Chap. xvii. 19.
k Chap. i. 79.

v. 35—43. It was propheſied of the Meſſiah, that he ſhould open the eyes of the blind: here we ſee him fulfilling the prophetic word. And he who gave light to the darkened body ſhines ſtill with brighter beams as the ſun of righteouſneſs into the benighted ſoul, and communicates alſo the faculty of ſpiritual viſion to thoſe whoſe ſouls the God of this world had blinded.

1. The patient here was blind and poor; and ſuch beggars have a claim upon our charity.

2. He ſat by the way-ſide, where he hoped for relief, and there he found more than his moſt ſanguine wiſhes expected: for, whilſt we are waiting upon God in his ways, he is pleaſed often to give us more than we can aſk or think. He heard of the multitude that Jeſus paſſed by, and now reſolved to ſeize the happy moment to prefer his requeſt; nor would be ſilenced by any rebukes of thoſe who were near him, crying with loud and ceaſeleſs importunity, Jeſus, thou ſon of David, have mercy on me. Note, Wherever God thus pours out a ſpirit of prayer and ſupplication, it is a ſure earneſt that he intends to grant our petitions.

3. Chriſt, in his wonted compaſſion, calls the poor man, bids him prefer his petition, and grants his requeſt, giving him ſight according to his deſire. The tender-hearted Saviour feels for human wretchedneſs, and will not ſend the poor and humble ſupplicant away without an anſwer of peace. If we have faith to truſt him, he hath power and willingneſs to heal all our infirmities, and to ſupply all our wants.

4. The poor beggar, now reſtored to ſight, with delight followed Jeſus in the way, glorifying God for the mercy he had experienced; and all the people joined his praiſes. Note, (1.) If we have received ſpiritual ſight, then ſhall we follow Jeſus without delay in all his holy ways. (2.) The mercies of others demand our thankfulneſs, as well as our own; for we are members one of another.

CHAP. XIX.

In this chapter we have, 1. The converſion of Zaccheus the publican at Jericho, ver. 1—10. 2. The parable of the pounds which the king intruſted with his ſervants, and of his rebellious citizens, ver. 11—27. 3. Chriſt's riding in triumph into Jeruſalem, and his lamentation in proſpect of the ruin of that city, ver. 28—44. 4. His teaching in the temple, and caſting the buyers and ſellers out of it, ver. 45—48.

1. AND Jeſus entred, and paſſed through Jericho. 2. And behold, there was a man named Zaccheus, which was the chief among the publicans, and he was rich. 3. And he ſought to ſee Jeſus, who he was, and could not for the preſs, becauſe he was little of ſtature. 4. And he ran before, and climbed up into a ſycamore-tree to ſee him; for he was to paſs that way. 5. And when Jeſus came to the place, he looked up and ſaw him, and ſaid unto him, Zaccheus, make haſte, and come down; for to day I muſt abide at thy houſe. 6. And he made haſte, and came down, and received him joyfully. 7. And when they ſaw it, they all murmured, ſaying, that [a] he was gone to be gueſt with a man that is a ſinner. 8. And Zaccheus ſtood, and ſaid unto the Lord, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to the poor: and if I have taken any thing from any man by falſe accuſation, [b] I reſtore him four-fold. 9. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, This day is ſalvation come to this houſe, foraſmuch as [c] he alſo is [d] the ſon of Abraham. 10. For [e] the Son of man is come to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt.

[a] Mat. ix. 11.
[b] Ex. xxii. 1. Chap. iii. 14.
[c] Rom. iv. 11, 12, 16. Gal. iii. 7.
[d] Chap. xiii. 16.
[e] Mat. x. 6. & xviii. 21. Chap. xv. 24.

v. 1—10. Whilſt the converſion of every ſinner's heart beſpeaks the great power of God, the change wrought on ſome appears ſtill more worthy to be remembered and admired; as in the caſe of Zaccheus.

1. He was a publican, yea chief among the publicans, and rich; two great obſtructions, in human view, to the ſalvation of his ſoul: but Chriſt has his elect among the great and wealthy, as well as among the poor, and nothing is too hard for his almighty grace. The chief of ſinners he can make the chief of ſaints.

2. He took great pains to get a ſight of Chriſt, and to ſatisfy a curioſity which the great fame of him had raiſed: being ſhort, and unable to overlook the crowd of people that uſually attended Jeſus in his travels, he ran before, and climbed up into a ſycamore-tree, that he might ſee him as he paſſed by. Note, (1.) They who would gain a ſight of Jeſus muſt break through every obſtacle in their way. (2.) Curioſity, though often blameable, in many caſes is praiſe-worthy. To ſee and hear thoſe of whom there are ſtrange reports is the beſt way to judge for ourſelves.

3. There the eye of Jeſus diſcovered him; and, as he had led him to that tree by the hand of his providence, he now ſurprizes him with the calls of his grace, and, by name addreſſing him, deſires him to come down quickly, intending to be that day his gueſt. With joy the publican obeyed, little expecting ſuch a favour, and received him with heartieſt welcome. Note, (1.) Many who have come merely through curioſity to hear and ſee ſome miniſter, whoſe fame hath been ſpread abroad; have been graciouſly ſurpriſed with the call of God, and from that hour converted unto him. (2.) There is a wondrous providential diſpoſition of our affairs, which, when we are turned to God, we can reflect upon with amazement, and ſee his hand leading us when we had not one thought of his deſigns. (3.) When Chriſt calls we ſhould gladly run; his word can open for him a welcome into our houſe and our hearts, and make us with delight reply, Come in, dear Lord, to me. (4.) Come down is the goſpel call; we muſt ſink low in our own eyes, to riſe high in God's favour.

4. Many, who were preſent, were exceedingly offended, that one, who profeſſed himſelf a prophet of ſuch diſtinguiſhed ſanctity, ſhould go to eat with a perſon who was ſo notorious a ſinner. His profeſſion made him odious as a publican, his riches might be regarded as the fruit of extortion, and his character might be known as infamous: but it did not follow, becauſe he had been bad, that he was ſo, as their cenſure implied; nor was Jeſus to be blamed for viſiting thoſe, who, the more deſperate their caſe ſeemed, ſo much the more needed his healing grace.

5. Whatever Zaccheus had been, he now gives the moſt undoubted proofs of genuine and unfeigned repentance. The grace of Jeſus had powerfully wrought upon his heart, and the effects of it appeared viſible in his words and actions. However graſping he had been of wealth, and intent on gain, now at a ſtroke half his goods he gives to the poor, and, if any man had ought to lay againſt him of fraud or extortion, he was ready to make the utmoſt reſtitution which the law demanded. Note, (1.) One of the beſt ſymptoms of real converſion to God is deadneſs to the world. (2.) There can be no true repentance without reſtitution, at leaſt without the deſire to make it to the utmoſt of our power. (3.) They who would ſhew the ſpirit of true charity, ſhould not leave it merely to their wills to bequeath their wealth to pious uſes, but employ it during their lives.

6. Chriſt teſtified his approbation of Zaccheus's conduct, and comforted him with the aſſurance of that ſalvation which was now come to him and to his houſe, foraſmuch as he alſo was a ſon of Abraham. He now ſhewed himſelf a genuine deſcendant of this father of the faithful: his ſalvation was therefore ſecured, his ſins pardoned, his perſon accepted, and eternal glory his portion; whilſt all his family alſo ſhared his mercy. And what Chriſt had done in this caſe was in direct conformity with the great deſign of his coming into the world, to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt. Note, (1.) Every ſinner is a loſt ſoul; loſt in error and ſin, unable to recover himſelf, and ready to periſh eternally: and a great point is gained, when we begin to be deeply convinced of this alarming truth. (2.) Chriſt is the Saviour of the deſperate: none are ſo far gone as to be paſt his recovery. (3.) He muſt firſt ſeek us, or we ſhall never ſeek to him for ſalvation.

11. And as they heard theſe things, he added, and ſpake a parable, becauſe he was nigh to Jeruſalem, and becauſe they thought that the kingdom of God ſhould immediately appear. 12. He ſaid therefore, [f] A certain noble-man [g] went into a far country, to receive for himſelf a kingdom, and to return. 13. And he called his ten ſervants, and delivered them ten † pounds, and ſaid unto them, [h] Occupy till I come. 14. But his citizens hated him, and ſent a meſſage after him, ſaying, We will not have this man to reign over us. 15. And it came to paſs, that when he was returned, having received the kingdom, then he commanded theſe ſervants to be called unto him, to whom he had given the ‡ money, [i] that he might know how much every man had gained by trading. 16. Then came the firſt, ſaying, Lord, [k] thy pound hath gained ten pounds. 17. And he ſaid unto him, Well, thou good ſervant: becauſe thou haſt been faithful in a very little, [l] have thou authority over ten cities. 18. And the ſecond came, ſaying, Lord, thy pound hath gained five pounds. 19. And he ſaid likewiſe to him, Be thou alſo over five cities. 20. And another came, ſaying, Lord, behold, here is thy pound which I have kept laid up in a napkin: 21. For I feared thee, [m] becauſe thou art an auſtere man: thou takeſt up that thou layedſt not down, and reapeſt that thou didſt not ſow. 22. And he ſaith unto him, [n] Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked ſervant. Thou kneweſt that I was an auſtere man, taking up that I laid not down, and reaping that I did not ſow: 23. Wherefore then gaveſt not thou my money into the bank, that at my coming I might have required

[f] Mat. xxv. 14.
[g] Acts i. 11.
† A mina was worth 3l. 2s 6d.
[h] 1 Cor. xii. 7.
‡ Gr. Silver. Ver. 23.
[i] Rom. xiv. 12.
[k] Jam. ii. 18.
[l] Gen. xxxix. 4. Mat. xxiv. 47. & xxv. 21.
[m] Ezek. xviii. 25.
[n] 2 Sam. i. 16. Job xv. 6. Mat. xii. 37.

quired mine own with uſury? 24. And he ſaid unto them that ſtood by, Take from him the pound, and give it to him that hath ten pounds. 25. (And they ſaid unto him, Lord, he hath ten pounds). 26. For I ſay unto you, that [o] unto every one which hath ſhall be given: and from him that hath not, even that he hath ſhall be taken away from him. 27. But thoſe mine enemies, which would not that I ſhould reign over them, bring hither, and ſlay them before me.

[o] Mat. xiii. 12. & xxv. 29. Chap. viii. 18.

v. 11—27. What Chriſt had ſaid to Zaccheus gave occaſion to ſome, who heard him, to conclude, that the temporal kingdom of the Meſſiah was about to be ſet up in the world, and that, on his arrival at Jeruſalem, he would declare himſelf openly. To rectify ſuch a miſtake therefore he ſpake the following parable, intimating to them therein, that the generality of the Jewiſh people would not ſubmit to the kingdom of his grace, and that the kingdom of his glory was more diſtant than they imagined.

1. A certain nobleman, a perſon of high birth, went into a far country, to receive for himſelf a kingdom; to be inveſted with ſovereign authority, as the governors of Judah were by the Roman emperors; and to return, with full power and authority, to reward or puniſh his ſubjects. Thus the Lord Jeſus aſcended into heaven, to receive the mediatorial kingdom, and ſat down at the right hand of the Majeſty on high; being quickly to return from thence in the miſſion of his Spirit, to ſpread his goſpel through the earth; in the deſtruction of the Jewiſh people and nation; and finally at the day of judgment. And as ſurely as he once came into the world, ſo ſurely will he return again, and will not tarry.

2. He committed to his ſervants a certain ſum of money, that during his abſence they might trade (πραγματευσασθε) and improve their capital, in order that at his return he might receive the fruits of their induſtry. The miniſters of Chriſt in particular, and all his people in general, are thoſe ſervants; each hath his portion of gifts, natural or providential, which he is required to employ for his Maſter's honour and intereſt. All we have is derived from him, and ſhould be devoted to him. Till he comes, we are called upon to uſe all diligence. Every ſoul won by us will prove our own unſpeakable gain; and whatever be the ſucceſs of our labours, whether more or leſs, if we approve ourſelves faithful to him till death, we are ſure not to loſe our reward.

3. Two of the ſervants, on their maſter's return, with ſatisfaction appeared before him, and rendered him a faithful account of the truſt committed to them. The one had gained more, the other leſs; but both had been diligent, received his commendation, and were preferred according to the advantages they had made. Whence we are taught, (1.) That we muſt one day be called upon to give a ſolemn account to our great Lord and Maſter of all the means and mercies, gifts and grace, which we have enjoyed, and our profiting thereby. (2.) They who are found faithful will receive the approbation of the Chief Shepherd, and be rewarded by him. (3.) Whatever ſucceſs we have, we muſt, to the glory of our Lord, own, that it is thy pound hath gained it; for not to our endeavours, but to his grace, are we indebted for the effect of our miniſtry. (4.) If we have the Saviour's commendation of our diligence, we need not care who may find fault with us. (5.) They who are moſt zealous in their labours for Chriſt will receive the greater reward, exalted, as one ſtar differeth from another ſtar in glory.

4. The third, ſunk in ſloth and careleſſneſs, began to ſeek excuſes; and, having produced the pound committed to his charge, pretended his fear of his maſter's auſterity, as if he would caſt on him the blame of his own idleneſs. But out of his own mouth was this wicked ſervant condemned; ſince that apprehenſion he pleaded of his maſter's auſterity ſhould at leaſt have led him to place the money at the banker's, where, with lawful intereſt, he might have received his own. Juſtly therefore he commands the pound to be taken from him, and given to him who had gained the ten pounds: for his having ſo much is ſo far from being an objection, as ſome preſent intimated, v. 25. that it was a reaſon why he ſhould have more, having made ſo good a uſe of the former truſt; whilſt he, who made no uſe, or ſo bad a one, of the pound delivered to him, juſtly deſerved to have it taken from him. Note, (1.) Not only the abuſe of our gifts, but our negligence to improve and employ them for Chriſt's honour and the good of men's ſouls, will be eſteemed highly criminal. (2.) The pleas of ſlothful profeſſors, in a judgment-day, ſhall turn to their everlaſting confuſion and condemnation. (3.) Idle ſervants are wicked ſervants. Miniſters who are not active in Chriſt's ſervice effectually ſerve the intereſts of Satan. (4.) Hard thoughts of God are at the bottom of every unhumbled ſinner's heart. (5.) Diligence to improve the gifts and graces, which the Lord hath beſtowed on us, is the ſure way to have both abundantly increaſed under his bleſſing; whilſt ſloth makes all our attainments to wither and decay.

5. He foretells the ruin of the Jewiſh people in general. They were the citizens who ſent after him in his abſence, refuſing to ſubmit to his government: they paid no regard to his apoſtles and miniſters when he was aſcended into heaven: and, having filled up the meaſure of their iniquities by rejecting his goſpel, he ſeized the rebels with his arm of judgment, and the Roman ſword miſerably maſſacred innumerable multitudes of this devoted people, and ruined their country. And ſuch will be the caſe with all impenitent ſinners. They ſay, in the pride and rebellion of their hearts, We will not have this man to reign over us, rejecting the government of his laws and the warnings of his ſervants: but their terrible deſtruction approaches: the King, their Judge, clothed with vengeance, is ready to be revealed from heaven, when wrath to the uttermoſt will come upon them; and they who refuſed to bow to the ſceptre of his grace ſhall be broken with the rod of his judgments. They who will not be ruled muſt be eternally ruined.

28. ¶ And when he had thus ſpoken, he went before, aſcending up to Jeruſalem. 29. [p] And it came to paſs, when he was come nigh to Bethphage and Bethany, at the mount called the mount of Olives, he ſent two of his diſciples, 30. Saying, Go ye into the village over againſt you; in the which at your entring ye ſhall find a colt tied, whereon yet never man ſat: looſe him, and bring him hither. 31. And if any man aſk you, Why do ye looſe him? thus ſhall ye ſay unto him, Becauſe the Lord hath need of him. 32. And they that were ſent, went their way, and found even as he had ſaid unto them. 33. And as they were looſing the colt, the owners thereof ſaid unto them, Why looſe ye the colt? 34. And they ſaid, The Lord hath need of him. 35. And they brought him to Jeſus: and [q] they caſt their garments upon the colt, and [r] they ſet Jeſus thereon. 36. And as he went, they ſpread their clothes in the way. 37. And when he was come nigh, even now at the deſcent of the mount of Olives, the whole multitude of the diſciples began to rejoice, and praiſe God with a loud voice, for all the mighty works that they had ſeen, 38. Saying, [s] Bleſſed be the King that cometh in the name of the Lord: [t] peace in heaven, and glory in the higheſt. 39. And ſome of the Phariſees from among the multitude ſaid unto him, Maſter, rebuke thy diſciples. 40. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, I tell you, that if theſe ſhould hold their peace, [u] the ſtones would immediately cry out.

[p] Mat. xxi. 1. Mark xi. 1. John xii. 12.
[q] 2 Kings ix. 13.
[r] Zech. ix. 9.
[s] Pſ. cxviii. 26.
[t] Chap. ii. 14. Eph. ii. 14.
[u] Hab. ii. 11.

v. 28—40. Eager to accompliſh the ſalvation of his people, the bleſſed Jeſus haſtens to the ſcene of his ſufferings, not intimidated by all the dreadful events he foreſaw. Was he ſo willing to die for us, and ſhall we be cowards in his ſervice? We have here what we met with twice before:

1. The triumphant entry of Jeſus into Jeruſalem, amidſt the acclamations of the multitude. He was mounted, not as a conqueror on a triumphal car, but, as Zion's lowly King, on an aſs's colt; and that not his own. He ſent to borrow it for this occaſion; and, having the dominion over all creatures, and in his hands the hearts of all men, the owners readily ſent him at the Saviour's bidding. Mounted thereon, the garments of his poor diſciples were the trappings, and ſerved as carpets ſpread to adorn his entry: whilſt, filled with wonder and praiſe at all the miracles they had ſeen, the multitude cried, Bleſſed be the King, Meſſiah; may all happineſs and proſperity attend him that cometh in the name of the Lord, inveſted with divine authority and power: peace in heaven; let the God of heaven bleſs his undertaking, and crown it with ſucceſs, appearing now a reconciled God to us; and glory in the higheſt; let the greateſt honour, praiſe, and adoration redound to him for this ſalvation, and be aſcribed to him by men on earth and angels in heaven.

2. Chriſt vindicates his diſciples from the envious cavils of the Phariſees, who could not bear to hear ſuch acclamations, and would inſinuate that it was the higheſt pride to permit ſuch incenſe to be offered to him. But, though he came in great humility, the preſent occaſion demanded theſe praiſes; and, if the multitude had been ſilent, he aſſured theſe cavillers the very ſtones would cry out, reproaching their ſtupidity, and aſcribing to God the glory due unto his name.

41. ¶ And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, 42. Saying, If thou hadſt known, even thou, at leaſt in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! but now they are hid from thine eyes. 43. For the days ſhall come upon thee, that thine enemies ſhall caſt a trench about thee, and compaſs thee round, and keep thee in on every ſide, 44. And [x] ſhall lay thee even with the ground, and thy children within

[x] 1 Kings ix. 7, 8. Mic. iii. 12.

within thee; and [y] they ſhall not leave in thee one ſtone upon another: [z] becauſe thou kneweſt not the time of thy viſitation. 45. [a] And he went into the temple, and began to caſt out them that ſold therein, and them that bought, 46. Saying unto them, It is written, [b] My houſe is the houſe of prayer: but [c] ye have made it a den of thieves. 47. And he taught daily in the temple. But [d] the chief prieſts and the ſcribes, and the chief of the people thought to deſtroy him, 48. And could not find what they might do: for all the people † were very attentive to hear him.

[y] Chap. xxi. 6.
[z] Dan. ix. 27. 1 Pet. ii. 12.
[a] Mat. xxi. 12. Mark xi. 15.
[b] Iſa. lvi. 7.
[c] Jer. vii. 11.
[d] Mark xi. 18. John vii. 19. & viii. 37.
† Gr. Hung upon him.

v. 41—48. We have here,

1. The tears of Jeſus ſhed over the devoted city Jeruſalem. Being now in full view of that rejected place, and foreſeeing the impending miſeries ready to overwhelm the inhabitants, he wept over it, as man, feeling the tendereſt compaſſion towards them; ſaying, If thou hadſt known, or, O that thou hadſt known! even thou, a wicked and bloody city as thou haſt been, at leaſt in this thy day, when the moſt abundant means of grace have been vouchſafed to thee, the things which belong unto thy peace, temporal and eternal; but now they are hid from thine eyes; thou art abandoned to judicial blindneſs, and utter reprobacy, the conſequence of which will ſhortly be utter ruin; when thine enemies ſhall beſiege and enter into thee, maſſacre the inhabitants, and leave not one ſtone upon another; becauſe thou kneweſt not the time of thy viſitation; rejecting the light of my goſpel, the warnings of my miniſters, and the overtures of mercy, which were vouchſafed to thee. Note, (1.) A Chriſtian's heart, like his Maſter's, feels the tendereſt compaſſion towards periſhing ſinners, and grieves to behold their approaching miſeries. (2.) There is a time of viſitation, when the Lord is pleaſed to ſet before us the things which belong to our pardon, peace, and ſalvation, and to urge them upon us by his providence, his word, his Spirit: not to know, or abuſe this day of grace, is to be undone. (3.) However long we have treſpaſſed on God's patience, or however greatly we have provoked him; if at laſt we are prevailed upon to return to him, it is never too late to find favour with him. Let none therefore deſpair, who deſire now to return without delay to the Lord. (4.) Juſtly are they given up to judicial blindneſs and hardneſs of heart, who reject the counſel of God againſt their own ſouls. (5.) All the threatnings of Jeſus will be as ſurely fulfilled, as we have ſeen this againſt Jeruſalem accompliſhed in the total overthrow of that city and people. Let every ſinful city, every ſinful ſoul, take warning by her fall.

2. Being come to Jeruſalem, he goes immediately to the temple, cleanſes it from the profanations there practiſed; caſting out the buyers and ſellers, who had made that houſe of prayer a den of thieves; teſtifying his zeal for his Father's honour; and when he had thus purged this holy place from ſuch groſs abuſes, he preached there to the people the doctrines of his rich grace. Note, The preaching of the goſpel is the great glory of every temple devoted to the Saviour's honour.

3. The chief prieſts, ſcribes, and rulers, were highly exaſperated at his diſcourſes and conduct, which ſo deeply reflected on their corruptions, and therefore ſought how to murder him immediately; but they could not juſt then contrive any ſcheme for the execution of their bloody purpoſes, the people in general being very attentive to his diſcourſes, (εξεκρεματο) they hung upon his lips, eagerly catching every word which dropped; for he ſpoke with ſuch power, energy, and conviction, as from their own ſcribes they had never heard before.

CHAP. XX.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's anſwer to the chief prieſts queſtion concerning his authority, ver. 1—8. 2. The parable of the vineyard let out to the unjuſt and rebellious huſbandmen, ver. 9—19. 3. Chriſt's anſwer to the queſtion propoſed to him concerning the lawfulneſs of paying tribute to Ceſar, ver. 20—26. 4. His vindication of the reſurrection of the dead and the future ſtate, from the fooliſh cavils of the Sadducees, ver. 27—38. 5. His puzzling the ſcribes with a queſtion concerning the Meſſiah's being the ſon of David, ver. 39—44. 6. The caution he gave his diſciples to take heed of the ſcribes, ver. 45—47.

1. AND [a] it came to paſs, that on one of thoſe days, as he taught the people in the temple, and preached the goſpel, the chief prieſts and the ſcribes came upon him, with the elders, 2. And ſpake unto him, ſaying, Tell us, [b] by what authority doſt thou theſe things? or who is he that gave thee this authority? 3. And he anſwered and ſaid unto them, I will alſo aſk you one thing; and anſwer me: 4. [c] The baptiſm of John, was it from heaven, or of men? 5. And they reaſoned with themſelves, ſaying, If we ſhall ſay, from heaven; he will ſay, Why then believed ye him not? 6. But and if we ſay, Of men; all the people will ſtone us: for [d] they be perſuaded that John was a prophet. 7. And they anſwered, that [e] they could not tell whence it was. 8. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do theſe things.

[a] Mat. xxi. 23. Mark xi. 27.
[b] Ex. ii. 14. Acts iv. 7. & vii. 27.
[c] Prov. xv. 28.
[d] Mat. xiv. 5.
[e] Job. v. 13.

v. 1—8. Whilſt Jeſus was engaged in the bleſſed work of preaching to the people the glad tidings of ſalvation, the chief prieſts, ſcribes, and elders came upon him, to interrupt him in theſe labours of love. Note, We may not wonder, if in the ſervice of the goſpel we meet with many interruptions from the great enemy of ſouls, and his emiſſaries.

They demanded his authority for what he ſaid and did; inſinuating, that as it belonged to them to judge of the pretenſions of thoſe who aſſumed the prophetical character, unleſs he produced his commiſſion, they muſt proceed againſt him as a deceiver. He anſwers their queſtion by another, reſpecting the baptiſm of John, which not caring to anſwer for fear of the people, and unwilling to own the divine miſſion of the Baptiſt, they pretended ignorance, and gave him a juſt reaſon to refuſe them a farther account of himſelf, ſeeing they had already rejected the plaineſt evidence. Note, It is but loſt labour to endeavour to perſuade thoſe, who are before reſolved not to be convinced.

9. [f] Then began he to ſpeak to the people this parable: [g] A certain man planted a vineyard, and let it forth to huſbandmen, and went into a far country for a long time. 10. And at the ſeaſon, [h] he ſent a ſervant to the huſbandmen, that they ſhould give him of the fruit of the vineyard: but the huſbandmen [i] beat him, and ſent him away empty. 11. And again he ſent another ſervant, and they beat him alſo, and entreated him ſhamefully, and ſent him away empty. 12. And again he ſent the third; and [i] they wounded him alſo, and caſt him out. 13. Then ſaid the lord of the vineyard, What ſhall I do? I will ſend my beloved ſon: it may be they will reverence him when they ſee him. 14. But when the huſbandmen ſaw him, they reaſoned among themſelves, ſaying, [k] This is the heir: [l] come, let us kill him, that the inheritance may be ours. 15. So [m] they caſt him out of the vineyard, and killed him. What therefore ſhall the lord of the vineyard do unto them? 16. He ſhall come and deſtroy theſe huſbandmen, and [n] ſhall give the vineyard to others. And when they heard it, they ſaid, God forbid. 17. And he beheld them, and ſaid, What is this then that is written, [o] The ſtone which the builders rejected, the ſame is become the head of the corner? 18. Whoſoever ſhall fall upon that ſtone ſhall be broken: but [p] on whomſoever it ſhall fall, it will grind him to powder. 19. ¶ And the chief prieſts and the ſcribes the ſame hour ſought to lay hands on him; and [q] they feared the people: for they perceived that he had ſpoken this parable againſt them.

[f] Mat. xxi. 33. Mark xii. 1.
[g] Pſ. lxxx. 9. Cant. viii. 11. Iſa. v. 1. Jer. ii. 21.
[h] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15.
[i] 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16. Neh. ix. 26. Mat. xxiii. 34. Acts vii. 52. 1 Theſ. ii. 15. Heb. xi. 36.
[k] Heb. i. 2.
[l] Chap. xxii. 2.
[m] Heb. xiii. 12.
[n] Acts xiii. 46. & xviii. 6.
[o] Pſ. cxviii. 22. Iſa. xxviii. 16. Acts iv. 11. 1 Pet. ii. 7.
[p] Dan. ii. 34, 35. Mat. xxi. 44.
[q] Ver. 6.

v. 9—19. This parable is deſigned for a warning to the prieſts and rulers, of the ruin coming upon them and their nation, for their perſecutions of the meſſengers of God, and their rejection of the Meſſiah.

1. This vineyard was the Jewiſh people, which had been taken under God's peculiar care; and having inſtituted a magiſtracy and miniſtry among them, he expected ſuitable returns of love and duty from them; but inſtead of that, they treated with the greateſt cruelty thoſe divinely-appointed meſſengers, whom he ſent to remind them of his juſt expectations, and now were about to murder the ſon, who was come on the ſame errand, the conſequence of which would be the ruin of the nation, and the eternal deſtruction of theſe miſcreants. Note, (1.) The beſt of men have often met with the cruelleſt uſage from thoſe, whoſe good alone was the object of their labours. (2.) The end of obſtinate tranſgreſſors is to be rooted out at the laſt.

2. Struck with the denunciation of vengeance, they could not but deprecate the wrath threatened, and expreſs their abhorrence of ſuch a crime as the murder of the Meſſiah; but Chriſt with deepeſt concern beheld them, aſſured of their determined obſtinacy, and approaching ruin. Though their efforts would all be fruitleſs, that ſtone which theſe Jewiſh builders rejected, would, notwithſtanding, become the head of the corner. This Jeſus, whom they deſpiſed, would be exalted to the right hand of Majeſty on high, and inveſted with all power and authority in heaven and in earth; and his enemies, who were offended at him, and on whom his vengeance would light, muſt terribly periſh.

3. The chief prieſts plainly perceived the drift of the parable, and rage boiled in their boſoms. They would gladly have ſeized and murdered him on the ſpot, but were deterred through fear of the people, and forced reluctantly to defer their bloody purpoſe to a more convenient opportunity. So little effect have the faireſt warnings upon thoſe who harden their hearts againſt conviction.

20. And they watched him, and [r] ſent forth ſpies, which ſhould feign themſelves juſt men, that they might take hold of his words, that ſo they might deliver him unto the power and authority of the governor. 21. And they aſked him, ſaying, [s] Maſter, we know that thou ſayeſt and teacheſt rightly, neither accepteſt thou the perſon of any, but † teacheſt the way of God truly. 22. Is it lawful for us to give tribute unto Ceſar, or no? 23. But he perceived their craftineſs, and ſaid unto them, Why tempt ye me? 24. Shew me ‡ a penny: whoſe image and ſuperſcription hath it? They anſwered and ſaid, Ceſar's. 25. And he ſaid unto them, [t] Render therefore unto Ceſar the things which be Ceſar's, and unto God the things which be God's. 26. And they could not take hold of his words before the people: and they marvelled at his anſwer, and held their peace.

[r] Mat. xxii. 15. Mark xii. 13.
[s] Pſ. xii. 2.
† Or, of a truth thou teacheſt the way of God.
‡ Mark xii. 15.
[t] Rom. xiii. 7.

v. 20—26. Reſolved if poſſible to deſtroy him, and not having the power in their own hands, they determined to try if they could not enſnare him, and render him obnoxious to the Roman government, as a ſeditious perſon; for which purpoſe we have here,

1. The inſidious queſtion propoſed to him by certain of the Phariſees and Herodians, who, under the guiſe of conſcientious regard to their duty, pretended a great concern to know whether it was lawful to give tribute to Ceſar, or not, and thereby acknowledge themſelves the ſubjects of a foreign power. They ſuggeſt their fulleſt confidence in the rectitude of his deciſions, their opinion of his integrity unawed by the fear of men, and their ſatisfiedneſs in that divine commiſſion under which he acted; and thus they endeavoured to flatter him into an unguarded freedom, which either muſt embroil him with the civil powers, or render him odious to the people. Note, (1.) The garb of piety hath often ſerved to cover the vileſt deſigns. We need be on our guard againſt ſome who feign themſelves juſt men, and not credulouſly truſt to every ſpecious profeſſor. To be wiſe as ſerpents is our duty, as well as to be harmleſs as doves. (2.) It hath been the common artifice of perſecutors to endeavour to repreſent the faithful as enemies to the ſtate, and thus to gain the civil powers to oppreſs them.

2. His anſwer confounds and ſilences his enemies. He perceived their craftineſs; for from him nothing is hid, nothing is ſecret; and out of their own mouth draws a deciſion of the queſtion, to which they cannot object. As they own their money bore Ceſar's image and ſuperſcription, he had certainly a right to his own; though this interfered not with God's demands, to whoſe worſhip and ſervice their hearts and lives muſt be devoted. Unable to object, in ſullen ſilence they held their peace, marvelling at his wiſdom, yet obſtinate in their infidelity.

27. ¶ [u] Then came to him certain of the Sadducees ([x] which deny that there is any reſurrection) and they aſked him, 28. Saying, Maſter, [y] Moſes wrote unto us, If any man's brother die, having a wife, and he die without children, that his brother ſhould take his wife, and raiſe up ſeed unto his brother. 29. [z] There were therefore ſeven brethren: and the firſt took a wife, and died without children. 30. And the ſecond took her to wife, and he died childleſs. 31. And the third took her; and in like manner the ſeven alſo. And they left no children, and died. 32. Laſt of all the woman died alſo. 33. Therefore in the reſurrection, whoſe wife of them is ſhe? for ſeven had her to wife. 34. And Jeſus anſwering ſaid unto them, The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage: 35. But they which ſhall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the reſurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage. 36. [a] Neither can they die any more; for [b] they are equal unto the angels, and are the children of God, [c] being the children of the reſurrection. 37. Now that the dead are raiſed, even Moſes ſhewed at the buſh, when [d] he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Iſaac, and the God of Jacob. 38. For he is not a God of the dead, but of the living: for [e] all live unto him.

[u] Mat. xxii. 23. Mark. xii. 18.
[x] Acts xxiii. 8.
[y] Deut. xxv. 5.
[z] Job iii. 8.
[a] 1 Cor. xiii. 42, 53.
[b] 1 John iii. 2.
[c] Rom. viii. 23.
[d] Ex. iii. 6. Acts vii. 32. Heb. xi. 16.
[e] Eccleſ. xii. 7.

v. 27—38. This confutation of the Sadducean objection to the reſurrection of the dead was conſidered before, Mat. xxii. 23. Mark xii. 18. But our Lord here enlarges ſomewhat concerning that awful ſtate which after death ſucceeds. The children of this world marry, and are given in marriage: neceſſary it is that the world ſhould thus be ſupplied with inhabitants, and the ravages of death be repaired by the riſing generation: but they which ſhall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the reſurrection from the dead, have higher joys than even the marriage ſtate can afford, and need not to increaſe, where death is ſwallowed up in victory. They are ſaid to be accounted worthy, not that in and of ourſelves we have any merit; our worthineſs conſiſts in being found in Chriſt, juſtified by his blood, complete in his righteouſneſs, and ſanctified by his ſpirit. In that unſeen world to which the bleſſed go, [1.] They neither marry, nor are given in marriage; their holineſs and happineſs is compleat without it: the delights of ſenſe are ſwallowed up in the infinitely ſurpaſſing ecſtacies of the ſoul. [2.] Neither can they die any more: that world needs not to be repleniſhed with new inhabitants, where life eternal reigns, and death never enters. [3.] They are equal to the angels; partaking in their ſervice, enjoying the ſame bliſs; glorious and immortal as theſe ſeraphic ſpirits. [4.] They are the children of God, being the children of the reſurrection; as adopted ſons, they have now the title to the eternal glory, and at the reſurrection day will be put in poſſeſſion of the purchaſed inheritance.

39. ¶ Then certain of the ſcribes anſwering, ſaid, Maſter, thou haſt well ſaid. 40. And after that they durſt not aſk him any queſtion at all. 41. And he ſaid unto them, [f] How ſay they that Chriſt is David's ſon? 42. And David himſelf ſaith in the book of Pſalms, [g] The LORD ſaid unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, 43. Till I make thine enemies thy foot-ſtool. 44. David therefore calleth him Lord, [h] how is he then his ſon? 45. ¶ Then in the audience of all the people, he ſaid unto his diſciples, 46. [i] Beware of the ſcribes, [k] which deſire to walk in long robes, and [l] love greetings in the markets, and the higheſt ſeats in the ſynagogues, and the chief rooms at feaſts; 47. [m] Which devour widows houſes, and for a ſhew make long prayers: the ſame ſhall receive greater damnation.

[f] Mat. xxii. 42. Mark xii. 35.
[g] Pſ. cx. 1. Acts ii. 34. Heb. i. 13.
[h] Rev. xxii. 16.
[i] Mark. xii. 38, &c.
[k] Mat. xxiii. 5.
[l] Chap. xi. 43.
[m] Mat. xxiii. 14. 2 Tim. iii. 6. Tit. i. 11.

v. 39—47. The ſcribes, the eſtabliſhed expoſitors of the law, expreſſed their high approbation of his anſwer to their Sadducean opponents; and, ſtruck with the ſurpaſſing wiſdom which appeared in all his diſcourſes, declined attempting any further to encounter him, conſcious of his ſuperiority. But though they had done with him, Chriſt hath not done with them.

1. He propoſes to them a queſtion, which ſeemed of eaſy ſolution, but which quite diſconcerted them for an anſwer. Ignorant of the myſtery of the perſon of the Meſſiah, in whom the divine and human natures ſhould be united, they could not account how David's Son ſhould be David's Lord. To us this myſtery is unfolded: we behold God and man in one Chriſt.

2. He condemns the hypocriſy and covetouſneſs of the ſcribes, and cautions his diſciples againſt them. They made a vaſt parade of profeſſion, and with flowing robes in ſolemn ſtatelineſs as they paſſed, expected homage, as due to their ſuperiority; delighted in hearing the incenſe offered to their vanity; proudly affected precedency; and whilſt by their long prayers they inſinuated themſelves into the confidence of widows, they baſely and wickedly abuſed the truſt repoſed in them, and devoured their ſubſtance. Theſe ſhall receive greater damnation: wickedneſs committed under ſuch a veil of piety, brings the moſt aggravated guilt on the conſcience, and muſt be attended with the moſt terrible vengeance of God.

CHAP. XXI.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's approbation of a poor widow that caſt two mites into the treaſury. ver. 1—4. 2. A prediction of the deſtruction of Jeruſalem, and of the ſecond coming of Jeſus Chriſt to judge the world, under the type and figure of that, ver. 5—33. 3. A practical application of this by way of caution and counſel, ver. 34—36. An account of Chriſt's preaching, and the people's attendance on it, ver. 37, 38.

1. AND he looked up, and [a] ſaw the rich men caſting their gifts into [b] the treaſury. 2. And he ſaw alſo a certain poor widow caſting in thither two mites. 3. And he ſaid, Of a truth I ſay unto you, [c] that this poor widow hath caſt in more than they all. 4. For all theſe have of their abundance caſt in unto the offerings of God: but ſhe of her penury hath caſt in all the living that ſhe had.

[a] Mark xii. 41.
[b] 2 Kings xii. 9.
[c] 2 Cor. viii. 12.

v. 1—4. The commendation of this poor widow's offering we heard, Mark xii. 41. We may obſerve, (1.) That it is the duty of all, according to their ability, to contribute to the ſervice of the ſanctuary, the maintainance of a goſpel miniſtry, the education of youth, and the relief of the neceſſitous. (2.) The leaſt mite which is given to the offerings of God from a heart zealous for his glory, and breathing fervent charity, ſhall be remembered, and infinitely recompenſed in the great day.

5. ¶ And [d] as ſome ſpake of the temple, how it was adorned with goodly ſtones and gifts, he ſaid, 6. As for theſe things which ye behold, the days will come, in the which [e] there ſhall not be left one ſtone upon another, that ſhall not be thrown down. 7. And they aſked him, ſaying, Maſter, but when ſhall theſe things be? and what ſign will there be when theſe things ſhall come to paſs? 8. And he ſaid, [f] Take heed that ye be not deceived: for [g] many ſhall come in my name, ſaying, I am Chriſt; and the time draweth near: go ye not therefore after them. 9. But when ye ſhall hear of wars and commotions, be not terrified: for theſe things muſt firſt come to paſs, but the end is not by and by. 10. Then ſaid he unto them, [h] Nation ſhall riſe againſt nation, and kingdom againſt kingdom; 11. And great earthquakes ſhall be in divers places, and [i] famines, and peſtilences, and fearful ſights, and great ſigns ſhall there be from heaven. 12. But before all theſe, they ſhall lay their hands on you, and [k] perſecute you, [l] delivering you up to the ſynagogues, and [m] into priſons, [n] being brought before kings and rulers [o] for my name's ſake. 13. And [p] it ſhall turn to you for a teſtimony. 14. Settle it therefore in your hearts, not to meditate before what ye ſhall anſwer. 15. For [q] I will give you a mouth and wiſdom, [r] which all your adverſaries ſhall not be able to gainſay nor reſiſt. 16. And [s] ye ſhall be betrayed both by parents and brethren, and kinsfolks and friends; and [t] ſome of you ſhall they cauſe to be put to death. 17. And ye ſhall be hated of all men for my name's ſake: 18. But [u] there ſhall not an hair of your head periſh. 19. In your patience poſſeſs ye your ſouls.

[d] Mat. xxiv. 1. Mark xiii. 1.
[e] 1 Kings ix. 7. Jer. xxvi. 18. Mic. iii. 12. Chap. xix. 44.
[f] Jer. xxix. 8. Eph. v. 6. Col. ii. 8. 2 Theſ. ii. 3. 1 John iv. 1.
[g] Jer. xiv. 14. & xxiii. 21. Acts v. 36, 37.
[h] Hag. ii. 22. Zech. xiv. 13.
[i] Acts xi. 28.
[k] John xv. 20.
[l] Mat. x. 17.
[m] Acts v. 18. & xii. 4. & xvi. 24. Rev. ii. 10.
[n] Acts iv. 7. & xxv. 23.
[o] 1 Pet. iv. 14.
[p] Phil. i. 28.
[q] Ex. iv. 12. Jer. i. 9. Chap. xii. 12. Acts ii. 4.
[r] Iſa. liv. 17. Acts vi. 10.
[s] Mic. vii. 6. Mat. x. 21.
[t] Acts vii. 59. & xii. 2.
[u] Mat. x. 30.

v. 5—19. The diſciples, vaſtly pleaſed with the magnificence of the temple, and the gifts with which it was enriched, could not but grieve at the thoughts that it ſhould be utterly deſtroyed, and fain would move the Saviour's compaſſion to reverſe the ſentence he had pronounced; but he confirms the doom of that devoted place, and in anſwer to their requeſt informs them of the ſigns preceding the threatned deſolation.

1. Falſe Chriſts would ariſe, making great profeſſion of delivering the Jews from the Roman yoke, and affirming the time fixed in the antient prophecies was near, when the temporal kingdom of the Meſſiah ſhould be ſet up. But they are to beware of ſuch deceivers, and neither follow nor be led by them. His kingdom they had been often adviſed was not of this world, nor muſt they look for any other Meſſiah but himſelf.

2. Terrible commotions and awakening judgments would precede the day of his coming to deſtroy the Jewiſh nation. Bloody wars and tumults would ravage the country; earthquakes rock the ground; famines and peſtilence deſolate the land; and fearful ſights in the heavens terrify the beholders, and portend the approaching dire calamities. But they muſt not be terrified at the ſigns, nor apprehenſive of the conſequence; for they ſhall be under the peculiar care of the divine Providence, though greater evils are ſtill behind.

3. They muſt expect fiery perſecutions, and will find their neareſt and deareſt relations, filled with enmity againſt the goſpel, their bittereſt enemies. They will be ſcourged in the ſynagogues by their own countrymen; caſt into priſon; brought before heathen magiſtrates and kings; hated of all men; and called to reſiſt unto blood, ſealing the truth they profeſſed with martyrdom. But to ſupport and encourage them herein, Chriſt aſſures them, [1.] That their ſufferings and perſecutions ſhall tend to make the goſpel-word more diffuſed, and be a teſtimony againſt thoſe who maliciouſly and cruelly perſecuted them. [2.] He promiſes them extraordinary aids in times of extraordinary trials. They need not be ſollicitous about the anſwer they ſhould make, when cited before the tribunals of magiſtrates and kings; nor muſt they depend upon their own prudence for their defence, but expect divine aſſiſtance. I will give you a mouth and wiſdom, which all your adverſaries ſhall not be able to gainſay or reſiſt. The Holy Ghoſt ſhould furniſh them with matter and words; fill their mouths with ſuch arguments, and give ſuch energy to their diſcourſe, as ſhould quite confound and ſilence their perſecutors, if it did not convince them. And all God's faithful miniſters and people, when ſuffering for the truth's ſake, and called in defence of the goſpel to anſwer before the rulers, may ſtill depend on the ſame ſuperior help, (See Acts iv, v, vi.) [3.] Out of all their ſevereſt trials God will ſave them harmleſs. Not an hair of your head ſhall periſh: either literally he would ſtrangely deliver them from the moſt imminent perils, as he ſaved them out of Jeruſalem when the Romans came to beſiege the city; or figuratively it expreſſes his ſingular care of them; ſo that though they ſhould be delivered to priſon, or to death, his eye ſhould be upon them for good, and give them at leaſt a happy iſſue out of all their afflictions; bringing them through theſe tribulations to eternal life and glory; ſo that they ſhould be infinitely gainers by all their ſufferings. [4.] He exhorts them patiently to bear up under every temptation, and not be ruffled or diſcompoſed, but with holy ſerenity and calm reſignation to caſt their care upon God, and quietly wait for his ſalvation. Note, (1.) In trying times the hardeſt conflict is within, to preſerve the tranquility of our own ſouls by humble confidence in God. (2.) A little patience will bring us to the end of every human woe.

20. And [x] when ye ſhall ſee Jeruſalem compaſſed with armies, then know that [y] the deſolation thereof is nigh. 21. Then let them which are in Judea, [z] flee to the mountains; and let them which are in the midſt of it, depart out; and let not them that are in the countries enter thereinto. 22. For theſe be the days of vengeance, that all things [a] which are written may be fulfilled. 23. But [b] wo unto them that are with child, and to them that give ſuck in thoſe days: for [c] there ſhall be great diſtreſs in the land, and wrath upon this people. 24. And they ſhall fall by the edge of the ſword, and ſhall be led away captive into all nations: and Jeruſalem ſhall be troden down of the Gentiles, [d] until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. 25. ¶ And [e] there ſhall be ſigns in the ſun, and in the moon, and in the ſtars; and upon the earth diſtreſs of nations, with perplexity, the ſea and the waves roring; 26. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after thoſe things which are coming on the earth: for the powers of heaven ſhall be ſhaken. 27. And [f] then ſhall they ſee the Son of man coming in a cloud with power and [g] great glory. 28. And when theſe things begin to come to paſs, then look up, and lift up your heads; for [h] your redemption draweth nigh.

[x] Mat. xxiv. 15. Mark xiii. 14.
[y] Chap. xix. 43.
[z] Prov. xxii. 3.
[a] Dan. ix. 26, 27. Zech. xi. 1.
[b] Chap. xxiii. 29.
[c] Dan. xii. 1.
[d] Dan. ix. 27. & xii. 7. Rom. xi. 25.
[e] Iſa. xiii. 10. Ezek. xxxii. 7. Joel ii. 10, 31. & iii. 15. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. vi. 12.
[f] Dan. vii. 13. Mat. xxvi. 64. Rev. i. 7.
[g] Mat. xvi. 27.
[h] Rom. viii. 19, 23.

v. 20—28. Having exhorted them to bear up in theſe dangerous days that ſhould precede the final deſtruction of Jeruſalem, he paſſes on to deſcribe her utter overthrow.

1. After a variety of fearful ſigns, at laſt the deſtroying army of the Romans ſhall approach, the ſignal for the faithful to leave the devoted place, and fly for their lives, as hiſtory informs us every Chriſtian did, ſo that not one periſhed in Jeruſalem. The days of vengeance then ſhall come upon the Jewiſh nation for all their wickedneſs, and eſpecially for that blood of the Meſſiah, the curſe of which they imprecated upon their heads, and now ſhall terribly ſeize them. Great indeed would be the diſtreſs of thoſe who fled, eſpecially of ſuch as were with child, or who gave ſuck, becauſe this muſt retard their ſpeed, and add to their other afflictions; yet greater far would be the miſery of thoſe who remained, on whom the full vials of wrath would be poured out; the ſword making the moſt fearful ravages among them, and the few who remained alive after the ſiege being led captives, and diſperſed into all nations; whilſt their once glorious city, razed from the foundations, ſhould long lie in ruins, and never be reſtored to its former grandeur, but continue under the power of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled; when the fulneſs of them in the laſt days being come in, we have hope that Iſrael ſhall again be gathered, and Jeruſalem, as ſome ſuppoſe, be again reſtored, and inhabited by the Jewiſh converts. This deſolation of Judea would be terrible, as if the very elements were diſſolving around them: their whole civil and eccleſiaſtical polity would be utterly deſtroyed; and, half dead with terror and diſmay, the wretched inhabitants would ſink under the load of complicated evils. Then to their confuſion they will too late perceive, that he whom they crucified was the true Meſſiah, when, according to his predictions, they ſhall behold him coming thus terribly to take vengeance on them, and to ſet up his goſpel kingdom, in defiance of all oppoſition. Such fearful ſigns ſhall alſo precede the final diſſolution of all things, when the Judge of quick and dead ſhall at laſt be revealed from heaven, taking vengeance on all that know not God, and obey not his goſpel.

2. Chriſt encourages his diſciples, when theſe calamities begin, to lift up their heads in joyful hope, knowing that their redemption draweth nigh. The deſtruction of the Jewiſh people, who were the moſt inveterate perſecutors of the firſt Chriſtians, would be to them a great deliverance, and afford matter for their thankfulneſs to God, who had avenged them of theſe bitter enemies. And thus in the day of final judgment ſhall the deſtruction of the ungodly be the triumph of the ſaints.

29. [i] And he ſpake to them a parable, Behold the fig-tree, and all the trees; 30. When they now ſhoot forth, ye ſee and know of your own ſelves that ſummer is now nigh at hand. 31. So likewiſe ye, when ye ſee theſe things come to paſs, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand. 32. Verily I ſay unto you, [k] This generation ſhall not paſs away, till all be fulfilled. 33. [l] Heaven and earth ſhall paſs away: [m] but my word ſhall not paſs away. 34. ¶ And [n] take heed to yourſelves, leſt at any time your hearts be overcharged with ſurfeiting and drunkenneſs and cares of this life, and ſo that day come upon you unawares. 35. For [o] as a ſnare ſhall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. 36. [p] Watch ye therefore, and [q] pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to eſcape all theſe things that ſhall come to paſs, and [r] to ſtand before the Son of man. 37. And [s] in the day-time he was teaching in the temple, and [t] at night he went out, and abode in the mount that is called the mount of Olives. 38. And all the people came early in the morning to him in the temple for to hear him.

[i] Mat. xxiv. 32. Mark xiii. 28.

k Mat. xvi. 28.
l Iſa. li. 6. 2 Pet. iii. 7, 10.
m Iſa. xl. 8. Mat. v. 18.
n Rom. xiii. 13. 1 Theſ. v. 6. 1 Pet. iv. 7.
o 1 Theſ. v. 2. 2 Pet. iii. 10. Rev. iii. 3. & xvi. 15.
p Eph. vi. 18.
q Chap. xviii. 1. 1 Theſ. v. 17.
r Eph. vi. 13.
s John viii. 1, 2.
t Chap. xxii. 39.

v. 29—38. Theſe ſigns of the times which Chriſt had ſet before them, if duly remarked, would as clearly point out to them the approach of the threatned judgments, as the ſummer is known to be at hand, when the buds and flowers of ſpring appear. The time for the fulfilment of this prophecy was near, and the accompliſhment of it ſure: therefore,

1. He cautions them to beware of ſenſuality and ſecurity, leſt the day of his coming ſhould ſurprize them unprepared to meet him. Note, (1.) We are in jeopardy every hour: the day of death and judgment is uncertain; we need be every moment on our guard. They who are immerſed in the cares and pleaſures of the world, will be terribly ſurprized by it; and wo to thoſe on whom it ſhall come as a ſnare, and ſeize them in their ſins. (2.) If we would meet our Judge with comfort, and be found of him in peace, we muſt keep a ſtrict rein on inordinate appetite, and learn to die daily to the world, and ſit looſe to all its cares and enticements. They who are dead to the world whilſt they are in it, will be the readieſt to go out of it at the moſt ſudden ſummons. (3.) Surfeiting and drunkenneſs muſt neceſſarily unqualify us to meet our God. A glutton! a drunkard! what a fearful reckoning muſt he make in the day of judgment! (4.) The cares of this world as effectually ſtupiſy the conſcience, as the fumes of liquor do the body; and though men are apt to think a ſober worldling a decent character, compared with a notorious drunkard; yet is their ſtate equally dangerous, and perhaps the former the moſt difficult to be wrought upon. The drunkard ſleeps, and is ſober; but the worldly-minded riſes up as he lay down, overcharged with the ſame load of worldly anxiety and carking ſollicitude.

2. He exhorts them to watch and pray always, that they may be accounted worthy to eſcape all theſe things that ſhall come to paſs, and to ſtand before the Son of man, with comfort and confidence of his favour and regard. Not that our watchfulneſs and prayers confer any merit; we muſt be counted worthy and accepted in the beloved; but theſe are the means God hath appointed, in the uſe of which he hath promiſed his grace and bleſſing to us: and whilſt we are awake, and expect our Lord's arrival, and look up to him for ſtrength continually, he will bring us ſafe through every temptation, and give us to partake at laſt in his final ſalvation.

3. During theſe few days between his triumph and his ſufferings, he continued indefatigable in his labours, preaching daily in the temple; and when the evening came, he retired to the Mount of Olives for prayer and meditation, returning in the morning to his delightful work in the temple, where an attentive auditory waited eager to hear his divine diſcourſes.

CHAP. XXII.

In this chapter we have, 1. The plot to take Jeſus, and Judas's coming into it, ver. 1—6. 2. Chriſt's eating the paſſover with his diſciples, ver. 7—18. 3. The inſtituting of the Lord's ſupper, ver. 19, 20. 4. Chriſt's diſcourſe with his diſciples after ſupper, upon ſeveral heads, ver. 21—38. 5. His agony in the garden, ver. 39—46. 6. The apprehending of him, by the aſſiſtance of Judas, ver. 47—53. 7. Peter's denying him, ver. 54—62. 8. The indignities done to Chriſt by thoſe that had him in cuſtody, and his trial and condemnation in the eccleſiaſtical court, ver. 63—71.

1. [a] NOW [b] the feaſt of unleavened bread drew nigh, which is called the paſs-over. 2. And the chief prieſts and ſcribes [c] ſought how they might kill him; for they feared the people. 3. ¶ Then [d] entred Satan into Judas ſurnamed Iſcariot, being of the number of the twelve. 4. And he went his way, and communed with the chief prieſts and captains, how he might betray him unto them. 5. And they were glad, and covenanted to [e] give him money. 6. And he promiſed, and ſought opportunity to betray him unto them † in the abſence of the multitude.

a Mat. xxvi. 2. Mark xiv. 1.
b Ex. xii. 15.
c Pſ. ii. 2. John xi. 47. Acts iv. 27.
d John xiii. 2, 27. Acts v. 3.
e Zech. xi. 12.
† Or without tumult.

v. 1—6. The awful hour now approaches, when the great Redeemer muſt offer himſelf a ſacrifice for the ſins of his people. We have,

1. The chief prieſts and ſcribes conſulting how to perpetrate the bloody deed they had reſolved. The fear of the people reſtrained them from open violence, and now they plotted how to take him off ſecretly.

2. Judas, the traitor, opportunely appeared to further their ſcheme. Satan, whoſe ſlave he had ever continued, even tho' advanced to the dignity of an Apoſtle, now urged him on to the precipice of ruin; and going to the chief prieſts, in council aſſembled, who gladly embraced the offer he made, they ſoon ſtruck up the bargain, and for thirty pieces of ſilver he engaged to betray his Maſter; and accordingly he watched for a ſecret opportunity, when, in the abſence of the people, they might ſeize him without fear of a tumult. Note, (1.) All the malice of open enemies do not ſtrike at the cauſe of Chriſt ſo deeply as the perfidy of falſe diſciples. (2.) The devil watches the weak ſide of profeſſors; and whether it be gold, or wine, or women, &c. he prepares the bait, and apoſtates readily catch at it.

7. ¶ [f] Then came [g] the day of unleavened bread, when the paſſover muſt be killed. 8. And he ſent Peter and John, ſaying, Go and prepare us the paſſover, that we may eat. 9. And they ſaid unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare? 10. And he ſaid unto them, Behold, When ye are entred into the city, there ſhall a man meet you, bearing a pitcher of water; follow him into the houſe where he entreth in. 11. And ye ſhall ſay unto the good man of the houſe, The Maſter ſaith unto thee, Where is the gueſt-chamber, where I ſhall eat the paſſover with my diſciples? 12. And he ſhall ſhew you a large upper room furniſhed: there make ready. 13. And they went and found as he had ſaid unto them: and they made ready the paſſover. 14. And when the hour was come, he ſat down, and the twelve apoſtles with him. 15. And he ſaid unto them, With deſire I have deſired to eat this paſſover with you before I ſuffer. 16. For I ſay unto you, I will not any more eat thereof, [h] until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God. 17. And he took † the cup, and gave thanks, and ſaid, Take this, and divide it among yourſelves. 18. For I ſay unto you, I will not drink of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God ſhall come. 19. ¶ And [i] he took bread, and [k] gave thanks, and brake it, and gave unto them, ſaying, This is my body which is given for you: this do in remembrance of me. 20. Likewiſe alſo the cup after ſupper, ſaying, This cup is the new teſtament in my blood, which is ſhed for you.

f Mat. xxvi. 17. Mark xiv. 12.
g Ex. xii. 16.
h Chap. xiv. 15. Rev. xix. 9.
† This firſt cup belonged to the paſſover.
i 1 Cor. xi. 23, 25.
k Rom. xiv. 6. 1 Tim. iv. 4, 5.

v. 7—20. The day of the preparation of the paſſover being come, we have,

1. The ſolemnization of it according to the law. His diſciples, Peter and John, had been ſent to make ready, and directed whither to go; and having followed the orders of their Maſter, and prepared the paſchal lamb, at even he came and ſat down with the twelve, Judas being ſtill of the number, his treachery not having yet openly appeared. Being ſeated, with warm affection he addreſſed them, ſaying, With deſire I have deſired to eat this paſſover with you before I ſuffer. He was happy to have this laſt meeting with them; he longed for the hour when the great work he had undertaken ſhould be accompliſhed, and that was now at hand. He welcomed thoſe approaching ſufferings which procured their ſalvation, and was now about to put a period to all the ceremonial inſtitutions. Therefore he adds, I will not any more eat thereof, until it be fulfilled in the kingdom of God: for when, as the Lamb of God, he ſhould be offered, who was the true paſſover, this typical ordinance muſt ceaſe of courſe. In the goſpel kingdom, the ſupper he was now about to inſtitute, would ſuperſede it; and in the great day of his appearing and glory, moſt eminently they ſhould rejoice together in the final accompliſhment of their glorious liberty; when departed from this world, the houſe of their priſon, they ſhould enter with him into the heavenly Canaan of eternal reſt. Preſenting therefore the paſſover-cup to the diſciples, in which it was uſual for the company to pledge the maſter, he takes a ſolemn farewel of the fruit of the vine, until the kingdom of God come; either when, after his exaltation, his goſpel ſhould be ſpread through the earth, and his preſence be manifeſted in the midſt of his church, where his diſciples aſſembled to partake of his ſupper : or when the heavenly kingdom ſhould come, where his redeemed people ſhall be for ever ſatisfied with the pleaſures that are at his right hand.

2. The inſtitution of the Lord's ſupper, which ſhould be continually celebrated in his church, in memory of a greater redemption than that from Epypt, even the deliverance which he hath obtained for us by the ſacrifice of himſelf, from Satan, ſin, death, and hell. The bread is broken in token of his body being broken on the croſs : it is given us as ſpiritual food for our immortal ſouls, that by faith feeding upon the great doctrines of his atonement and righteouſneſs, we may be comforted and ſtrengthened with might in the inner man. And the wine repreſents to us that blood he ſhed for the remiſſion of our ſins, and ſeals to us all the promiſes of the everlaſting covenant, of which we are aſſured partakers, when faith realizes the ſigns, and makes Chriſt's fleſh meat indeed, and his blood drink indeed, for then we have everlaſting life in him.

21. ¶ But behold, [l] the hand of him that betrayeth me, is with me on the table, 22. And truly the Son of man goeth [m] as it was determined : but wo unto that man by whom he is betrayed. 23. And they began to inquire among themſelves, which of them it was that ſhould do this thing. 24. ¶ And there was alſo a ſtrife among them, which of them ſhould be accounted the greateſt. 25. And he ſaid unto them, [n] The kings of the Gentiles exerciſe lordſhip over them ; and they that exerciſe authority upon them, are called benefactors. 26. [o] But ye ſhall not be ſo : but he that is greateſt among you, let him be as the younger ; and he that is chief, [p] as he that doth ſerve. 27. For whether is greater, he that ſitteth at meat, or he that ſerveth ? is not he that ſitteth at meat ? but [q] I am among you as he that ſerveth. 28. Ye are they which have continued with me in [r] my temptations. 29. And [s] I appoint unto you a kingdom, as my Father hath appointed unto me : 30. [t] That ye may eat and drink at my table in my kingdom, and [u] ſit on thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Iſrael. 31. ¶ And the Lord ſaid, Simon, Simon, behold, [x] Satan hath deſired to have you, that he may ſift you as wheat : 32. But [y] I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not ; and [z] when thou art converted, ſtrengthen thy brethren. 33. And he ſaid unto him, Lord, I am ready to go with thee both into priſon, and to death. 34. [a] And he ſaid, I tell thee, Peter, the cock ſhall not crow this day, before that thou ſhalt thrice deny that thou knoweſt me. 35. [b] And he ſaid unto them, When I ſent you without purſe, and ſcrip, and ſhoes, lacked ye any thing ? And they ſaid, Nothing. 36. Then ſaid he unto them, But now he that hath a purſe, let him take it, and likewiſe his ſcrip : and he that hath no ſword, let him ſell his garment, and buy one. 37. For I ſay unto you, that this that is written, muſt yet be accompliſhed in me, [c] And he was reckoned among the tranſgreſſors : for the things concerning me have an end. 38. And they ſaid, Lord, behold, here are two ſwords. And he ſaid unto them, It is enough.

[l] Pſ. xli. 9. Mat. xxvi. 21. Mark xiv. 18. John xiii. 21.
[m] Acts ii. 23. & iv. 28.
[n] Mat. xx. 25. Mark x. 42.
[o] 1 Pet. v. 3.
[p] 1 Cor. ix. 19.
[q] Mat. xx. 28. John xiii. 13, 14. Phil. ii. 7.
[r] Heb. iv. 15.
[s] Mat. xxiv. 47. Chap. xii. 32.
[t] Chap. xiv. 15. Rev. xix. 9.
[u] Pſ. xlix. 14. Mat. xix. 28. Rev. iii. 21.
[x] 1 Pet. v. 8.
[y] John xvii. 9, 11, 15.
[z] Pſ. li. 12, 13. John xxi. 15—17.
[a] Mat. xxvi. 34. Mark. xiv. 30. John xiii. 38.
[b] Chap. ix. 3. & x. 4.
[c] Iſa. liii. 12. Mark xv. 28.

v. 21—38. Chriſt having finiſhed the ſupper, addreſſes himſelf to his diſciples.

1. He admoniſhes them, that, though ſtrange the relation, yet one of them ſhould betray him. That he ſhould thus go, was ordained by the determinate counſel and foreknowledge of God ; yet dreadful would be the guilt of that wretch who ſhould perpetrate the horrid deed. Aſtoniſhed at the information, the diſciples with anxious ſollicitude began to enquire which of them he pointed at, ſhocked with the thought of being guilty of ſuch enormous wickedneſs. Note, (1.) There are in every age traitors, who eat of Chriſt's bread, and yet betray him. (2.) Though God foreſees and permits the wickedneſs of ſinners, yet will not this at all exculpate them from their guilt. (3.) Holy jealouſy over ourſelves, leſt we ſhould be faithleſs, is the ſureſt way to preſerve our fidelity inviolable.

2. He rebukes the ſinful affectation of precedency, for which his apoſtles, whoſe heads were ſtill full of his temporal kingdom, had been diſputing among themſelves. He corrects their vain imaginations, and aſſures them, that the kingdom he was about to erect, was in no wiſe like the kingdoms of the Gentiles, where the princes and rulers exerciſed deſpotic ſway over their ſubjects, affected the title of benefactors, and were flattered with it by their ſubjects : but they who bore his commiſſion muſt not imitate ſuch examples, nor think of lording it over their brethren. The way in which his miniſters can only hope to riſe in eminence, is by condeſcending to every work and labour of love ; to ſerve the meaneſt and leaſt of his diſciples ; in honour preferring others to themſelves, and being ever little and low in their own eyes. His own example was a powerful argument to enforce humility upon them. Though he was their Maſter, and they his ſervants, he ſubmitted even to waſh their feet, that they might learn of him. Hitherto they had continued with him during all his trials and humiliations ; they have only to perſevere in the ſame way, expecting nothing on earth but ſufferings, and looking for higher honours than the fading ones of this world ; either in the kingdom of grace, in which they ſhould fill the moſt important ſtations, be made eminent inſtruments of God for good to men's ſouls, and partake of the rich proviſion of goſpel ordinances ; or, in the kingdom of glory, where they ſhould reign with their exalted Lord, filled with eternal conſolations, and ſit down on thrones prepared for them at his right hand, aſſeſſors with him in the judgment, as he himſelf was now about to take the mediatorial throne appointed to him by his Father, and ſhould reign over his redeemed people in glory everlaſting. Note, (1.) In Chriſt's kingdom humility is the only way to honour ; and our ambition muſt be, not to be admired as great, but to lay ourſelves out in doing good. (2.) They who faithfully adhere to the Saviour in the midſt of manifold temptations, ſhall find, that as their tribulations abound for Chriſt, their conſolations even in this world ſhall abound alſo, and that they ſhall, in the world to come, obtain a throne of glory that fadeth not away. (3.) Thoſe who receive the kingdom of grace or glory, are purely indebted for it to the gift of Jeſus. (4.) The ſaints of God are now uſually deſpiſed and trampled upon ; but ſhortly their revilers and perſecutors ſhall ſee them exalted to a throne, and aſſeſſors with the great Judge, before whoſe bar they muſt ſtand trembling, and be covered with everlaſting ſhame and contempt.

3. He warns Peter of his approaching fall, but aſſures him withal of his grace to recover him, that he ſhould not finally be caſt away. Simon, Simon, Satan hath deſired to have you, even all of you, as he deſired God's permiſſion to tempt Job, without which he dared not touch a hair of his head : and his purpoſe is, to ſift you as wheat ; hoping either to prove them chaff, and deſtroy them by apoſtacy ; or at leaſt to diſtreſs, terriſy, and ſcatter them in the hour of temptation : but I have prayed for thee, in particular, againſt whom the fierceſt attack will be made, that thy faith fail not, totally and finally, though it will be grievouſly ſhaken. And when thou art converted, recovered from this grievous fall and temptation, ſtrengthen thy brethren ; taught by experience, admoniſh others of the rock of ſelf-confidence on which thou haſt ſtruck, and to beware of temptation : but if they are overcome, encourage them again to return, and not to deſpair, ſince there is mercy for the baſeſt backſliders, and no repenting ſinner is rejected. Note, (1.) Satan is unable without leave to hurt the leaſt of God's ſaints. (2.) A perſon may be overcome by temptation, and yet their faith not utterly fail. (3.) Where true faith is in the heart, the ſoul cannot finally periſh. (4.) All our perſeverance and ſtability is not to be aſcribed to any reſolution of our own, but to the ceaſeleſs interceſſion of our divine advocate. (5.) When we have fallen, we may not lie down in deſpair, but ariſe, and return with ſhame and humble confeſſion to a pardoning God, that we may find mercy. (6.) They who have been moſt tempted and exerciſed themſelves, are the beſt counſellors for others under the like trials, and will have moſt compaſſion for them, and be able by their own experience to comfort and encourage them in their diſtreſs.

4. He ſilences Peter's boaſts with expreſs aſſurances of his being about to deny him thrice. Peter reſolutely declared, neither a priſon nor death ſhould ever make him be falſe to his Maſter, or quit him for a moment : but Chriſt aſſures him, that night he would have a dire conviction of the weakneſs of his reſolutions, and the ſtrength of the tempter's power over him, even ſo far as to make him deny that he ever knew his Maſter. Note, We could not ſuſpect there was ſo much evil in our hearts, if in a day of temptation we had not proved it to our grief ; but Chriſt knows it all, and provides the grace for our recovery, even before we have fallen.

5. He appeals to his diſciples for his paſt care over them ; and they own, that in all their journeys, when they travelled without money or proviſions, they lacked nothing. Note, (1.) The more we reflect on the divine Providence in the days that are paſt, the more we ſhall be compelled to acknowledge, that hitherto God hath helped us. (2.) Paſt experience of the Lord's goodneſs ſhould engage our preſent confidence in his mercy. (3.) Chriſt's diſciples muſt be ſatisfied with a little, and their Maſter will take care they ſhall not be deſtitute.

6. He bids them now prepare for and expect more perilous times, and days of greater diſtreſs. He was about to ſuffer among tranſgreſſors, in the greateſt torment and ignominy, according to the antient prophecies concerning him, all which now were ready to be accompliſhed : and they, for the teſtimony of his goſpel, would be expoſed to want and ſuffering. They muſt now take all they have, and employ it in providing thoſe neceſſaries for themſelves which they will want ; and need, tho' at the expence of their garments, purchaſe a ſword, as more needful for their own defence againſt the perils of robbers, which they may be called to encounter in their travels. Or, figuratively, this may rather refer to the perſecutions and violence of their enemies, againſt which it would require all their fortitude and courage to bear up. The diſciples, ſuppoſing that he meant literally, that they ſhould repel force by force, replied, Lord, here are two ſwords, as if they wiſhed to know whether they ſhould procure more; but he ſaid unto them, It is enough; theſe were ſufficient to anſwer the inſtructive deſign for which he mentioned them. It was not by thoſe weapons of war that his kingdom was to be ſpread, or their ſafety ſecured; but by the ſword of the Spirit, which is the word of God, and by the armour of righteouſneſs on the right hand and the left.

39. ¶ [d] And he came out, and [e] went, as he was wont, to the mount of Olives; and his diſciples alſo followed him. 40. And when he was at the place, he ſaid unto them, [f] Pray, that ye enter not into temptation. 41. And [g] he was withdrawn from them about a ſtone's caſt, and kneeled down, and prayed, 42. Saying, Father, if thou be willing, remove [h] this cup from me: nevertheleſs, [i] not my will, but thine be done. 43. And [k] there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, ſtrengthning him. 44. And being in an agony, [l] he prayed more earneſtly: and his ſweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. 45. And when he roſe up from prayer, and was come to his diſciples, he found them ſleeping for ſorrow, 46. And ſaid unto them, Why ſleep ye? riſe and [m] pray, leſt ye enter into temptation.

d Mat. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32. John xviii. 1.
e Chap. xxi. 37.
f Chap. xi. 4. Ver. 46.
g Mat. xxvi. 39.
h Mat. xx. 22.
i John v. 30. & vi. 38.
k Mat. iv. 11. Heb. i. 14.
l Heb. v. 7.
m Ver 40.

v. 39—46. We have here Chriſt's agony in the garden, the account of which the other Evangeliſts had given us in nearly the ſame words. See Mat. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32. Three circumſtances are here particularly taken notice of.

1. That an angel appeared from heaven, ſtrengthening him in his agony; probably ſuggeſting to him, as man, ſome powerful inducements to encourage and ſupport him under his unutterable diſtreſs; that the conflict would be ſhort, the iſſue glorious, the victory ſure, and the eternal ſalvation of his people be the great reward. So low did the Son of God humble himſelf, as to need their ſervices, who were the work of his own hands: and they who miniſtred to him, will not fail to perform the like kind offices to the heirs of ſalvation. If the Lord lays upon us heavy burdens, he will ſend us help in the needful time of trouble.

2. That being in an agony, he prayed more earneſtly. All the ſtorms and billows of divine wrath were now going over him, and the great enemy of ſouls with all his fury hurled his fiery darts againſt him. With ſtrong crying and tears he redoubled therefore his ſupplications, and was heard. Note, Prayer is at all times ſeaſonable; but when we are under diſtreſs of body or ſoul, we are peculiarly called to cry mightily to him, whoſe ſtrength is made perfect in weakneſs, and every wreſtling Jacob will be a prevailing Iſrael.

3. His ſweat was as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground. The intenſeneſs of his agony threw the humours of his body into ſo violent a fermentation, that though it was night, and he lay on the cold ground, the blood tranſuded with his ſweat through the pores, and the reeking drops trickling down, dyed the earth on which he lay. What a bloody baptiſm was he baptized with? My ſoul, behold, admire, and adore! It was love for thee that brought thy Saviour thus low: theſe drops of bloody ſweat are the expiation of thy iniquities.

47. ¶ [n] And while he yet ſpake, behold, a multitude, and he that was called Judas, one of the twelve, [o] went before them, and drew near unto Jeſus, [p] to kiſs him. 48. But Jeſus ſaid unto him, Judas, betrayeſt thou the Son of man with a kiſs? 49. When they which were about him, ſaw what would follow, they ſaid unto him, Lord, ſhall we ſmite with [q] the ſword? 50. ¶ And one of them [r] ſmote the ſervant of the high prieſt, and cut off his right ear. 51. And Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, Suffer ye thus far. And he touched his ear, and healed him. 52. Then Jeſus ſaid unto the chief prieſts, and captains of the temple, and the elders which were come to him, Be ye come out as againſt a thief, with ſwords and ſtaves? 53. When [s] I was daily with you in the temple, ye ſtretched forth no hands againſt me: But [t] this is your hour, and the power of darkneſs.

n Mat. xxvi. 47. Mark xiv. 43. John xviii. 3.
o Acts i. 16.
p 2 Sam. xx. 9.
q 2 Cor. x. 4.
r Rom. xii. 19.
s Chap. iv. 16.
t John xii. 27.

v. 47—53. The traitor with an armed band now appears, and we have,

1. Chriſt betrayed. The ſignal given by Judas was a kiſs. Adding hypocriſy to his treachery he approached him, and Jeſus, who well knew his deſign, with one kind word of expoſtulation on his baſeneſs, readily ſurrendered himſelf into the hands of his enemies. Note, The Lord is privy to the ſecret thoughts of apoſtates in heart, and ſees the traitor under all the ſpecious profeſſion he makes.

2. The diſciples, who inſtantly would have ſtood on their defence, and reſcued him, aſked his leave to unſheath their ſwords; but Peter, too impatient to wait for an anſwer, drew, and aiming a blow at one of thoſe who were active in ſeizing on his Maſter, a ſervant of the high prieſt's, the ſword glanced down the ſide of his head, and took off his right ear. But Chriſt rebuked Peter for his raſhneſs, and deſires his enemies not to reſent the blow which Peter had ſtruck, the damage of which he immediately repairs, and on the ſpot gave them an evidence of his power and grace, by healing the ſervant, and reſtoring his loſt ear; which, if their hearts had not been hardened as the nether milſtone, could not fail to have convinced them both of the wickedneſs and ingratitude of their conduct. May we learn of our Lord thus ever to render good for evil.

3. He expoſtulates with the chief prieſts, and the captains of the temple, and elders, ſome of whom, even at that unſeaſonable hour, forgetting their dignity, and inſtigated by their malice, now mingled with the ſoldiers, and came to make ſure of their prey. Chriſt reaſons with them on the uſeleſsneſs of ſuch a military force, when he never would have attempted reſiſtance, nor ever meant to abſcond, ſince he appeared daily in public at the temple: But, ſays he, this is your hour, and the power of darkneſs. Till that hour came, all the powers of earth and hell could not prevail againſt him; now it was come, they would find no difficulty in performing what was the predetermined counſel of God.

54. Then [u] took they him, and [x] led him, and brought him into the high prieſt's houſe. And Peter followed afar off. 55. And when they had kindled a fire in the midſt of the hall, and were ſet down together, [y] Peter [z] ſat down among them. 56. But a certain maid beheld him as he ſat by the fire, and earneſtly looked upon him, and ſaid, This man was alſo with him. 57. And [a] he denied him, ſaying, Woman, I know him not. 58. And after a little while another ſaw him, and ſaid, Thou art alſo of them. And Peter ſaid, Man, I am not. 59. And about the ſpace of one hour after, another confidently affirmed, ſaying, Of a truth this fellow alſo was with him; for he is a Galilean. 60. And Peter ſaid, Man, I know not what thou ſayeſt. And immediately, while he yet ſpake, the cock crew. 61. And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter; and Peter remembred the word of the Lord, how he had ſaid unto him, [b] Before the cock crow, thou ſhalt deny me thrice. 62. And Peter [c] went out, and [d] wept bitterly.

u Lam. iv. 20. Acts ii. 23.
x Mat. xxvi. 57. Mark xiv. 53. John xviii. 13.
y Mat xxvi. 69. Mark xiv. 66. John xviii. 16.
z Pſ. i. 1.
a Ver. 33.
b Ver. 34.
c Ezek. xx. 16.
d Zech. xii. 10. 2 Cor. vii. 11.

v. 54—62. We have here,

1. Peter's ſad fall. Willing to ſee what would be the end of his Maſter's trials, he ſtole into the palace, and hoped to paſs unperceived among the croud; but his look, his behaviour, his ſpeech, diſcovered him, and excited repeated charges from the by-ſtanders, which he ſolemnly diſowned, declaring he did not know the man Jeſus whom they ſpoke of, and confirming the horrid lie with the moſt profane oaths and perjury. One wilful lie has often led men on to the moſt dreadful lengths. None know where they ſhall ſtop, when for a moment they deviate from the path of truth.

2. His gracious recovery. The cock crew to warn him of his guilt, and rung in Peter's ears a peal of loudeſt thunder; and one look of Jeſus broke his heart with anguiſh. He turned, and looked upon Peter; and that glance ſpoke more than words could utter. It ſhewed him, that, though now on his trial, Chriſt was apprized of all that paſſed: it conveyed the deepeſt conviction, the tendereſt expoſtulation, the kindeſt compaſſion, and the moſt effectual calls of grace to his heart. Peter's guilt now roſe in blackeſt colours to his view; his baſeneſs, his ingratitude, every aggravating circumſtance returned to his memory; and, overwhelmed with grief, anguiſh, horror, and ſhame, he went out, and wept bitterly.

63. ¶ [e] And the men that held Jeſus [f] mocked him, and ſmote him. 64. And when they had blindfolded him, they [g] ſtruck him on the face, and aſked him, ſaying, Propheſy, who is it that ſmote thee? 65. And many other things blaſphemouſly ſpake they againſt him. 66. ¶ And as ſoon as it was day, [h] the elders of the people, and the chief prieſts, and the ſcribes came together, and led him into their council, 67. Saying, Art thou the Chriſt? tell us. And he ſaid unto them, If I tell you, you will not believe. 68. And if I alſo aſk you, you will not anſwer me, nor let me go. 69. [i] Hereafter ſhall the Son of man ſit on the right hand of the power of God. 70. Then ſaid they all, Art thou then e Mat. xxvi. 67. Mark xiv. 65.

f Chap. xxiii. 11.
g Job xvi. 10.
h Pſ. ii. 2. Acts iv. 26.
i Dan. vii. 13. Chap. xxi. 27. 1 Theſ. iv. 16. Rev. i. 7.

the Son of God? And he ſaid unto them, [k] Ye ſay that I am. 71. And they ſaid, What need we any further witneſs? for we ourſelves have heard of his own mouth.

[k] Mark xiv. 62.

v. 63—71. Behold with horror and indignation,

1. The inſults put on this innocent ſufferer by the abjects who gathered themſelves againſt him. The ſervants who kept Jeſus in cuſtody till the council met, mocked him, buffeted him; and blindfolding him, in deriſion of his prophetical character, ſtruck him on the face, and bid him tell who ſmote him: with other blaſphemies, which he ſilently and patiently endured.

2. The injuſtice and cruel oppreſſion which his judges, the chief prieſts and Scribes, ſhewed at his trial. Early they aroſe, at break of day, eager to haſten his condemnation; and having brought him before them, demanded a direct anſwer, whether he were the Meſſiah, or no. Chriſt knew that their wicked deſign was to employ his own words as the ground of his condemnation, and therefore expoſtulates with them on their unfair and unreaſonable proceedings. If I tell you, ye will not believe; they were reſolved at all events, in hardened obſtinacy, to reject his pretenſions; and if I aſk you what you can object to the evidences of my divine miſſion which I have given, you will not anſwer me; unable to refute them, yet determined not to be convinced by them, though reduced to ſilence: nor will you let me go, though unable to prove a ſingle charge againſt me. Therefore he refers them for conviction to his coming with vengeance on the throne of judgment; when they ſhould know, to their coſt, whether he really was poſſeſſed of that character which he aſſumed. With indignation they tumultuouſly aſked, whether he dared arrogate the title of the Son of God? He boldly replied in the affirmative, ſo they ſaid, and ſo indeed he was. With one voice they inſtantly condemned him as a blaſphemer, counting any farther witneſs unneceſſary; when his own confeſſion proved, as they concluded, the blaſphemy of his pretenſions. So were they given up to a reprobate mind, and blind to the cleareſt evidence of truth, wilfully ruſhed on their eternal ruin, filling up the meaſure of their iniquities.

CHAP. XXIII.

This chapter carries on and concludes the hiſtory of Chriſt's ſufferings and death. We have here, 1. His arraignment before Pilate the Roman governor, ver. 1—5. 2. His examination before Herod, ver. 6—12. 3. Pilate's ſtruggle with the people, to releaſe Jeſus; at laſt he condemns him to be crucified, ver. 13—25. 4. An account of what paſſed as they led him to be crucified, ver. 26—34. 5. An account of what paſſed at the place of execution, ver. 32—38. 6. The converſion of one of the thieves, as Chriſt was hanging on the croſs, ver. 39—43. 7. The death of Chriſt, and the prodigies that attended it, ver. 44—49. 8. His burial, ver. 50—56.

1. [a] AND the whole multitude of them aroſe, and [b] led him unto Pilate. 2. And they began to accuſe him, ſaying, We found [c] this fellow perverting the nation, and [d] forbidding to give tribute to Ceſar, ſaying, [e] that he himſelf is Chriſt a king. 3. And Pilate aſked him, ſaying, [f] Art thou the king of the Jews? And he anſwered him and ſaid, [g] Thou ſayeſt it. 4. Then ſaid Pilate to the chief prieſts, and to the people, I find no fault in this man. 5. And they were the more fierce, ſaying, He ſtirreth up the people, teaching throughout all Jewry, beginning from Galilee to this place. 6. When Pilate heard of Galilee, he aſked whether the man were a Galilean. 7. And as ſoon as he knew that he belonged unto [h] Herod's juriſdiction, he ſent him to Herod, who himſelf was alſo at Jeruſalem at that time. 8. ¶ And when Herod ſaw Jeſus he was exceeding glad: for [i] he was deſirous to ſee him of a long ſeaſon, becauſe [k] he had heard many things of him; and he hoped to have ſeen ſome miracle done by him. 9. Then he queſtioned with him in many words; but he anſwered him nothing. 10. And the chief prieſts and ſcribes ſtood and vehemently accuſed him. 11. And Herod with his men of war [l] ſet him at nought, and mocked him, and arrayed him in a gorgeous robe, and ſent him again to Pilate. 12. ¶ And the ſame day [m] Pilate and Herod were made friends together; for [n] before they were at enmity between themſelves.

[a] Mat.xxvii. 2. Mark xv. 1. John xviii. 28.
[b] Chap.xviii. 32.
[c] 1 Kings xviii. 17. Acts xvii. 7.
[d] Mat. xvii. 27. & xxii. 21.
[e] John xix. 12.
[f] 1 Tim. vi. 15.
[g] 1 Tim. vi. 13.
[h] Chap. iii. 1.
[i] Chap. ix. 7.
[k] Mat. xiv. 1.
[l] Iſa. liii. 3, &c.
[m] Acts iv. 27. Pſ. lxxxiii. 5, &c.
[n] Chap. xiii. 1.

v. 1—12. Though they had condemned our Lord as worthy to die as a blaſphemer, yet not having the power of life and death in their hands, and this pretended crime not being of ſuch a nature as the Roman government might deem capital; in order to execute their bloody purpoſes, the chief prieſts are obliged to have recourſe to ſome other charge. Therefore,

1. They accuſe him to Pilate, as a fomenter of ſedition, ſetting up himſelf for king, and forbidding to give tribute to Cæſar; though he had ſo expreſsly enjoined it, when they meant to enſnare him; and ſo far from affecting royalty, had oppoſed the miſtaken zeal of his followers, who would have ſet him up for their king, John vi. 15. but the pureſt innocence is no defence againſt the blackeſt calumny. Nay, in the preſent caſe, they knew themſelves in their hearts to be the rebels; they abhorred the Roman government, and ſo far from thinking it a crime to oppoſe it, would gladly have embraced the firſt favourable occaſion to revolt. And by the juſt judgment of God, that pretended crime, on account of which they demanded the condemnation of Jeſus, was ſhortly after the real crime, for which themſelves, and the whole Jewiſh nation, were deſtroyed by the Romans. Note, The poiſoned chalice will return to him who mingled it.

2. Chriſt plainly and directly anſwers Pilate's interrogatories, and confeſſes himſelf indeed King of the Jews; but not in oppoſition to Cæſar, with whoſe government he never interfered. His kingdom was of a quite different nature, not of this world, but purely ſpiritual over the hearts of men.

3. Pilate, convinced of the innocence of Jeſus, declares he can find no fault in him; whatever religious doctrines he taught, they came not under his cognizance, and therefore he would have releaſed him: but the chief prieſts, exaſperated even to fury at the thought of his being diſcharged, inſiſted upon it they could prove him guilty of many ſeditious diſcourſes, and attempts to raiſe inſurrections through Galilee, the chief ſcene of his preaching, and in all Judea.

4. Pilate, on the mention of Galilee, having found he was of that country, would very gladly have rid himſelf of this diſagreeable affair; and Herod the tetrarch of Galilee, being then at Jeruſalem, to whoſe juriſdiction he belonged, he referred them to him: and thus was the ſcripture fulfilled, Pſal. ii. 2. Acts iv. 26, 27.

5. Herod was highly pleaſed at the ſight of Jeſus. The fame of his mighty works had long excited a deſire to ſee him, and he hoped his curioſity would be gratified by ſeeing ſome miracle now performed by him. But he was miſtaken: as Chriſt knew the ſpirit with which he put the ſeveral queſtions to him relative to his miracles, he deigned not to make the leaſt reply. The pooreſt beggar that came with his diſeaſed body, would have met the kindeſt words and ſpeedieſt relief, but he will not proſtitute his power to gratify the curioſity of the proudeſt potentate.

6. Whilſt Jeſus held his peace, his accuſers, with open mouths, belched out their malice, endeavouring to exaſperate Herod againſt him, and to awaken his jealouſy with charges of his ſeditious conduct in Galilee: but Herod thought him an object rather to be deſpiſed than feared; and after treating him as a weak ſilly wretch, and ſuffering his ſoldiers to make ſport of him, in deriſion of the pretences which Jeſus was ſaid to form, he decked him in a robe of mock-majeſty, and ſent him back to Pilate, deſirous he ſhould determine concerning him as he thought fit. Note, If we are ſet at nought, inſulted, deſpiſed, and treated as fools or madmen, let it not be grievous to us: we are but like our Lord.

7. Pilate and Herod were on this occaſion reconciled. They had been at enmity between themſelves, on what account is not ſaid; perhaps on account of the ſlaughter of the Galileans, Herod's ſubjects, mentioned Luke xiii. 1. but the mutual civilities which paſſed on this occaſion, healed the breach, and made them friends again. He who came to remove the enmity which ſubſiſted between God and man, is here the peace-maker even between his perſecutors.

13. ¶ And [o] Pilate, when he had called together the chief prieſts and the rulers and the people, 14. Said unto them, Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and behold, I having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching thoſe things whereof ye accuſe him; 15. No, nor yet Herod: for I ſent you to him, and lo nothing worthy of death is done unto him. 16. I will therefore chaſtiſe him, and releaſe him. 17. For of neceſſity he muſt releaſe one unto them at the feaſt. 18. And they cried out all at once, ſaying, [p] Away with this man, and releaſe unto us Barabbas: 19. (Who for a certain ſedition made in the city, and for murder was caſt into priſon) 20. Pilate therefore willing to releaſe Jeſus, ſpake again to them. 21. But they cried, ſaying, Crucify him, crucify him. 22. And he ſaid unto them the third time, Why, what evil hath he done? I have found no cauſe of death in him: I will therefore chaſtiſe him, and let him go. 23. And they were inſtant with loud voices, requiring that he might be crucified:

[o] Mat.xxvii. 23. Mark xv. 14. John xviii. 38. & xix. 4.
[p] Acts iii. 14. & xxii. 22.

and the voices of them, and of the chief prieſts prevailed. 24. And Pilate gave ſentence that it ſhould be as they required. 25. And [q] he releaſed unto them him that for ſedition and murder was caſt into priſon, whom they had deſired; but he delivered Jeſus to their will.

[q] Prov. xvii. 15. Iſa. v. 23. & lix. 14.

v. 13—25. Jeſus being brought again from Herod to Pilate,

1. He called the chief prieſts and rulers, and the people; and convinced of the innocence of the priſoner, he declares, after the ſtricteſt examination, he can find no ſhadow of a crime: nor had Herod teſtified the leaſt mark of his diſpleaſure againſt Jeſus as a criminal, or as one deſerving capital puniſhment. He offers, therefore, to chaſtiſe him, as if he were a criminal, to gratify them, and cover their proſecution from the ſuſpicion of malice: and ſince he muſt releaſe one to them at the feaſt, he propoſes Chriſt as the perſon; who, though his life was ſpared, would be thus ſtigmatized as a malefactor. Thus doth this corrupt judge deſire to trim between his conſcience and the people, unwilling to imbrue his hands in innocent blood, yet ſollicitous to ſhow his utmoſt complaiſance to them.

2. The propoſal was abortive. The people, inſtigated by their prieſts and rulers, rejected the offer, demanding the releaſe of Barabbas, whoſe notorious crimes of murder and inſurrection called for the ſevereſt puniſhment, and cried out for the immediate execution of Jeſus. In vain Pilate, again and again, remonſtrated againſt the injuſtice and cruelty of ſuch a demand, but they only grew more outrageous at his oppoſition; and not ſatisfied with the chaſtiſement he offered to inflict upon Jeſus, demanded his crucifixion with ſuch clamour, noiſe, and violence, as quite terrified Pilate into a compliance. He feared men more than God, and dared not diſoblige a lawleſs multitude, though at the expence of innocent blood.

3. Pilate, though reluctantly, at laſt pronounces the ſentence of execution upon the innocent Saviour; and having releaſed that infamous criminal Barabbas, as preferred before him, delivers Jeſus to their will; and the enmity which they had ſhewn againſt him plainly foretold, that their tender mercies would be cruelty.

26. [r] And as they led him away, they laid hold of one Simon a Cyrenian, coming out of the country, and on him they laid the croſs, that he might bear it after Jeſus. 27. ¶ And there followed him a great company of people, and of women, which alſo bewailed and lamented him. 28. But Jeſus turning unto them, ſaid, Daughters of Jeruſalem, weep not for me, but weep for yourſelves, and for your children. 29. For behold, the days are coming, in the which they ſhall ſay, Bleſſed are the barren, and the wombs that never bare, and the paps which never gave ſuck. 30. [s] Then ſhall they begin to ſay to the mountains, Fall on us; and to the hills, Cover us. 31. [t] For if they do theſe things in a green tree, what ſhall be done in the dry?

[r] Mat. xxvii. 32. Mark xv. 21.

[s] Iſa. ii. 19. Hoſ. x. 8. Rev. vi. 16. & ix. 6.

[t] Jer. xxv. 29. Ezek. xx. 47. 1 Pet. iv. 17.

v. 26—31. Behold the Lamb of God led to the ſlaughter, amidſt the tears of Jeruſalem's daughters.

1. His executioners ſeized on Simon, a Cyrenian, compelling him to bear the croſs under which Chriſt was ready to expire; and not out of pity, but leaſt by death he ſhould elude their malice, they releaſed him for a moment, that they might ſhortly bind him faſter to it with iron.

2. A multitude followed him, and among them many women bewailing his unhappy fate, and touched with tendereſt ſympathy at his innocent ſufferings. Note, A ſight of the croſs-bearing Saviour may well excite our deepeſt grief. For he bore our ſins, and carried our ſorrows.

3. He addreſſes the mourners, and kindly bids them direct their tears into another channel; weep not for me, but weep for yourſelves, and for your children; deep as his agonies were, he freely ſubmitted to them; his ſufferings were voluntary, and the iſſue of them would be glorious; but the judgments coming upon their people and nation, would be imbittered with the wrath of God, and end in their utter deſtruction. Then barrenneſs would be accounted a bleſſing: for better were it to be deſtitute of children, than to ſee them devoured by famine and the ſword. A refuge then, under falling rocks and mountains would be welcome, rather than to meet the fearful executioners of God's vengeance; for if they have done this thing in the green tree, what ſhall be done in the dry? If theſe wicked men have inflicted ſuch ſufferings on me, who am innocent, what ſhall be done to them who, by their ſins, are as fuel prepared for the devouring flames? And if the Romans, whom they have inſtigated, are permitted to exerciſe ſuch cruelty on me who have never given them provocation, what vengeance will they wreak on the Jewiſh people, when to the utmoſt exaſperated, and conſuming them as fire doth the dry wood? Note, (1.) Though barrenneſs is often counted a miſery, the days may come when not to have children may be reckoned among our mercies. (2.) They who will not fly to the arms of Jeſus for mercy, will cry in vain to rocks and mountains to ſhelter them from the frowns of his wrath. (3.) Every view of the ſufferings of Jeſus ſhould fill us with horror at the dreadful evil and danger of ſin; if when it was imputed to him only, the wrath of God fell ſo heavy upon him, with what an intolerable load muſt the impenitent ſoul be overwhelmed, when all the wrath of God due for his own ſins ſhall light down on his devoted head. If Chriſt's ſufferings were ſo great, what muſt the torment of the damned be?

32. And [u] there were alſo two other malefactors led with him to be put to death. 33. And [x] when they were come to the place which is called † Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors; one on the right hand, and the other on the left. 34. ¶ Then ſaid Jeſus, Father, [y] forgive them; for [z] they know not what they do. And [a] they parted his raiment, and caſt lots. 35. And [b] the people ſtood beholding: and the rulers alſo with them derided him, ſaying, He ſaved others; let him ſave himſelf, if he be Chriſt the choſen of God. 36. And the ſoldiers alſo mocked him, coming to him, and [c] offering him vinegar, 37. And ſaying, If thou be the king of the Jews, ſave thyſelf. 38. And a ſuperſcription alſo was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew, THIS IS THE KING OF THE JEWS. 39. ¶ And one of the malefactors which were hanged, railed on him, ſaying, If thou be Chriſt, ſave thyſelf and us. 40. But the other anſwering, rebuked him, ſaying, Doſt not thou fear God, ſeeing thou art in the ſame condemnation? 41. And we indeed juſtly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiſs. 42. And he ſaid unto Jeſus, Lord, remember me when thou comeſt into thy kingdom. 43. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Verily I ſay unto thee, To day ſhalt thou be with me in paradiſe.

[u] Iſa. liii. 12.

[x] Mat. xxvii. 33. Mark xv. 22. John xix. 17.

† i. e. The place of a ſcull.

[y] Mat. v. 44. Acts vii. 60. 1 Cor. iv. 12. 13.

[z] Acts iii. 17. 1 Cor. ii. 8.

[a] Pſ. xxii. 18.

[b] Ibid. 17. Zech. xii. 10.

[c] Pſ. lxix. 21.

v. 32—43. We have here,

1. The crucifixion of the Son of God between two malefactors; who, to increaſe the ignominy of his ſufferings, were led with him to Calvary, the place of execution, and crucified on each ſide of him. There, amidſt the taunts and inſults of his enemies, he was hung up, in torments to expire: and over his head his pretended crime was written in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, This is the King of the Jews. Whilſt they are mocking, let us bow down with adoration, and wonder at that love which faſtened him to the accurſed tree. If, as they challenged him to do, he refuſed to ſave himſelf, it was becauſe he could not then have ſaved us; it was needful that he ſhould die upon the croſs, that we might not eternally periſh under the wrath of God.

2. His prayer for his murderers. Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do; they were blinded by prejudice and ignorance; and as the dying Sufferer forgave them, he became, as mediator, their advocate with his Father, that he might obtain their pardon, and prevailed. Some of thoſe who nailed him to the tree, experienced the glorious efficacy of that atoning blood with which their hands were ſtained. Note, (1.) There are no crimes ſo great but the blood of Jeſus can cleanſe us from them; even murder itſelf is not unpardonable. (2.) The perſecutors of God's people know not what they do, and that ſhould be an argument with us, after our Lord's example, to bear with, forgive, pity, and pray for them.

3. The converſion of the thief upon the croſs, wherein we behold a moſt glorious evidence of the mighty efficacy of the Saviour's grace, even in the loweſt ſtep of his humiliation, and a ſtriking diſplay of the great deſign of his ſufferings, to ſave that which was loſt. We are told by the other evangeliſts, that both the malefactors reviled him, as I am inclined to believe at firſt they did; though afterwards one of them, by the effectual ſovereign grace of God, became a ſignal monument of mercy, as is here related. One indeed continued hardened to the laſt, railing on him, and challenging him if he was the Chriſt, to ſave himſelf and them. Thus afflictive providences, without the grace of God, ſerve only to harden and exaſperate, inſtead of humbling the impenitent. The other, ſnatched as a brand from the burning, is here held up an illuſtrious monument of the ſalvation of Jeſus, even to the uttermoſt; an object which ſtains the pride of human glory, and renders all ſelf-wrought human righteouſneſs contemptible, when ſuch a wretch enters the eternal kingdom, from which the moſt devout, decent, and orderly Phariſee muſt be for ever excluded. The fears which ſome have expreſſed, leaſt this example ſhould embolden ſinners, and the many inſinuations they have ſuggeſted to advance the good character of the thief, as if he had never heard of Chriſt before, this was the firſt crime, &c. appear unneceſſary, not to ſay unchriſtian; and whatever ſpecious ſhews of piety they bear, are calculated merely to tarniſh the tranſcendent luſtre of the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, and to derogate from the ſovereignty and freedom of the grace of God. It is enough that the Saviour was pleaſed to exerciſe a ſignal act of favour towards one deſperate ſinner, as an encouragement to the moſt miſerable ſtill to truſt in his mercy.

(1.) The behaviour of this malefactor evidenced the bleſſed influence which a ſenſe of redeeming love inſtantly wrought on his heart. No ſooner was he ſtruck with the conviction, that this ſuffering man who hung by his ſide was the true Meſſiah, and God's eternal Son, than inſtantly his tone is changed to every expreſſion of real penitence. (1.) He ſharply rebukes his companion, Doſt thou not fear God? When ready to appear at his tremenduous bar, how unſuitable is ſuch reviling in thy lips, ſeeing thou art in the ſame condemnation, ſuffering the ſame kind of puniſhment, and therefore humanity dictated mutual compaſſion. (2.) He reminds him of the juſtneſs of their puniſhment, and takes ſhame to himſelf for his crimes. We indeed ſuffer juſtly, for we receive the juſt reward of our deeds, and that ſhould have covered them both with confuſion, and ſealed up their lips in ſilence. Thus every real penitent juſtifies God in his judgments, and owns all he ſuffers to be no more than his ſins deſerve. (3.) He bears teſtimony to the innocence of Jeſus, this man hath done nothing amiſs; he was fully convinced his ſufferings were for ſins not his own, and his confeſſion ſeems to intimate he was well acquainted with the Saviour's character; and what he had ſeen of Chriſt's behaviour on the croſs, his meekneſs, patience, and charity towards his murderers, were ſtriking evidences of his innocence. (4.) He addreſſes himſelf to the dying Redeemer, as a dying ſinner commending himſelf to his mercy, Lord, remember me when thou comeſt into thy kingdom. His faith ſtaggered not at the ignominious circumſtances in which he beheld the Son of God; he pays him tho divine honours due to him as the Lord of life and glory; he profeſſes unſhaken dependance on his all-ſufficiency to ſave, even at the lateſt gaſp, the vileſt of ſinners. Humbly he preſents his requeſt; one kind remembrance only he aſks, unworthy the leaſt regard; but if the Lord will think of him in that glorious kingdom, to which he is now aſſured he is about to be advanced, that will be enough to enſure his ſalvation. Lord, give me like faith in thy power and love! Thus dying, may I be able to commend my ſpirit into thy hands! Content to ſtand on a level with this wretched malefactor, and founding all my hopes on thy rich and ſovereign grace alone!

(2.) Chriſt is pleaſed moſt graciouſly to anſwer his requeſts, and to give him even more than he aſks. Verily I ſay unto thee, and my word is truth, my promiſes ſure, this day ſhalt thou be with me in paradiſe; thy ſoul, as ſoon as it departs from the body, ſhall join the aſſembly of the bleſſed in that ſtate of happineſs and glory, which God hath prepared for his redeemed people. Note, (1.) The prayer of faith is ſure of an anſwer of peace; the chief of ſinners, when they return to God, ſhall be placed among his ſaints in glory everlaſting. (2.) There is a ſtate of bleſſedneſs immediately prepared for the ſouls of the faithful, where they are in joy and felicity before the reſurrection day, when in body and ſoul their happineſs will be compleat. (3.) Where Chriſt is, there is heaven; to be with him, is to be eternally bleſſed.

44. [d] And it was about the ſixth hour, and there was a darkneſs over all the earth until the ninth hour. 45.
And [e] the ſun was darkened, and [f] the vail of the temple was rent in the midſt. 46. ¶ And when Jeſus had cried with a loud voice, he ſaid, Father, [g] into thy hands I commend my ſpirit: and having ſaid thus, [h] he gave up the ghoſt. 47. Now when the centurion ſaw what was done, he glorified God, ſaying, [i] Certainly this was a righteous man. 48. And all the people that came together to that ſight, beholding the things which were done, ſmote their breaſts, and returned. 49. And all his acquaintance, and the women that followed him from Galilee, [k] ſtood afar off beholding theſe things.

[d] Mat xxvii. 45. Mark xv. 33.
[e] Amos viii. 9.
[f] Ex. xxvi. 31. 2 Cor. iii. 14. Heb. x. 19.
[g] Pſ. xxxi. 5. Acts vii. 59.
[h] Heb. ix. 14.
[i] Mat. xxvii. 54. Mark xv. 39.
[k] Job xix. 13. Pſ. xxxviii. 11.

v. 44—49. We are told,

1. The prodigies which happened whilſt Jeſus hung on the tree. The ſun was eclipſed from twelve o'clock at noon till three, and the vail of the temple rent, ſignifying the ſtate of judicial blindneſs, to which the Jewiſh people were abandoned; the abolition of all the typical inſtitutions, the one great ſacrifice being now offered which they repreſented; and the free acceſs which all, whether Jews or Gentiles, now have to a throne of grace, through this new and living way conſecrated through the vail, that is to ſay, his fleſh, Heb. x. 19, 20.

2. The laſt dying words of Jeſus, which he uttered aloud, not as one exhauſted, but as having ſtill his full ſtrength, Father, into thy hands I commend my ſpirit: and having thus ſaid, he gave up the ghoſt. He borrows the Pſalmiſt's words, for ſcripture language is ever moſt expreſſive in our addreſſes to God. He teſtifies the fulleſt confidence in the favour of God his Father, as the great high-prieſt and ſacrifice; he, by the eternal Spirit, offers himſelf for the ſins of his people; and now, by his death, pays down the ranſom in full to divine juſtice; he commits his human body and ſoul, that now were to be ſeparated, to his Father's care, and waits in hope until the third day, when they ſhould be reunited, and he ſhould riſe again. And thus muſt the dying ſaints of God, by faith, chearfully commend their departing ſouls to their Father's keeping, until the happy reſurrection morn; when, faſhioned like to Chriſt's glorious body, our ſleeping aſhes ſhall be re-animated, and we ſhall be taken to dwell with him in his eternal kingdom.

3. The centurion's confeſſion. Deeply affected with what he ſaw and heard, he could not refrain from expreſſing his fulleſt conviction of the innocence of Jeſus; and, to the glory of God, acknowledges the righteouſneſs of his eternal Son.

4. The ſpectators, many of them at leaſt, perhaps ſome alſo who had cried, Crucify him, now full of anguiſh and remorſe, returned ſmiting on their breaſts. The prodigies they beheld ſtartled their conſciences, and terrified them with the apprehenſion of what would be the conſequence of this atrocious deed, at which even the heavens above, and the earth under their feet, teſtified their indignation.

5. A multitude of his diſciples, and of the women who followed Jeſus from Galilee, ſtood at a diſtance, overwhelmed with grief at what they ſaw, and under the deepeſt dejection, as if the croſs of Jeſus was the death of all their hopes; when, in fact, by theſe ſufferings alone his victories were to be obtained, and his kingdom eſtabliſhed.

50. ¶ [l] And behold, there was a man named Joſeph, a counſellor, and he was a good man, and a juſt: 51.
(The ſame had not conſented to the counſel and deed of them) he was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews
([m] who alſo himſelf waited for the kingdom of God.)
52. This man went unto Pilate, and begged the body of Jeſus. 53. And he took it down, and wrapped it in linen, and [n] laid it in a ſepulchre that was hewn in ſtone, wherein never man before was laid. 54. And that day was the preparation, and the ſabbath drew on. 55. And the women alſo [o] which came with him from Galilee, followed after, and beheld the ſepulchre, and how his body was laid. 56. And they returned, and prepared ſpices and ointments; and reſted the ſabbath-day, [p] according to the commandment.

[l] Mat. xxvii. 57. Mark xv. 42. John xix. 38.
[m] Chap. ii. 25, 38.
[n] Iſa. liii. 9. Mat. xxvii. 60.
[o] Chap. viii. 2.
[p] Ex. xx. 10.

v. 50—56. The corpſe of Jeſus was now in danger of being caſt with thoſe of the malefactors into a common grave; but when none of his other diſciples had courage to appear, or ability to give him an honourable interment, God is pleaſed to raiſe up one to diſcharge this laſt kind office.

1. His name and character are here given us. He was called Joſeph, a man of ſignal piety and probity; a counſellor, probably one of the great Sanhedrim, who conſented not to the counſel and deed of them; either he entered his proteſt againſt their proceedings, or ſeeing oppoſition in vain, withdrew. He was of Arimathea, a city of the Jews, who alſo himſelf waited for the kingdom of God, expecting, according to the prophecies, that it would ſhortly appear.

2. He went unto Pilate, and having obtained permiſſion to take down the body from the croſs, he wrapped it in linen, and laid it in his own new tomb, where never man before lay, in haſte to finiſh the funeral, becauſe the ſabbath drew on. The women, the conſtant attendants of Jeſus, followed the corpſe to the grave; and returning, prepared ſpices and ointments, that they might come and embalm him, as ſoon as the ſabbath was paſt; during which, they obſerved the reſt enjoined on that holy day. Note, The Lord's day now, as the ſabbath of old, is ſacred; all our affairs muſt be ſo ordered, as not to break in upon the hours expreſly ſet apart for the immediate ſervice of God.

CHAP. XXIV.

We have here glorious teſtimonies born to the reſurrection of Jeſus, 1. By two angels, to the women, who reported it to the apoſtles, ver. 1—12. 2. By Chriſt himſelf, to two of the diſciples, as they went to Emmaus, ver. 13—35. 3. He appears to the eleven diſciples themſelves, the ſame day at evening, ver. 36—48. 4. He aſcends into heaven, to the joy and praiſe of his diſciples, whom he left behind, ver. 49—53.

1. [a] NOW upon the firſt day of the week, very early in the morning, they came unto the ſepulchre, bringing the ſpices [b] which they had prepared, and certain others with them. 2. And they found the ſtone rolled away from the ſepulchre. 3. And they entred in, and found not the body of the Lord Jeſus. 4. And it came to paſs, as they were much perplexed thereabout,

[a] Mat. xxviii. 1. Mark xvi. 1. John xx. 1.
[b] Chap. xxiii. 56.

about, behold, [c] two men ſtood by them in ſhining garments. 5. And as they were afraid, and bowed down their faces to the earth, they ſaid unto them, Why ſeek ye † the living among the dead? 6. He is not here, but is riſen: remember [d] how he ſpake unto you when he was yet in Galilee. 7. Saying, The Son of man muſt be delivered into the hands of ſinful men, and be crucified, and the third day riſe again. 8. And [e] they remembered his words, 9. And returned from the ſepulchre, and told all theſe things unto the eleven, and to all the reſt. 10. It was Mary Magdalene, and [f] Joanna, and Mary the mother of James, and other women that were with them, which told theſe things unto the apoſtles. 11. And their words ſeemed to them as idle tales, and [g] they believed them not. 12. Then aroſe Peter, and [h] ran unto the ſepulchre, and ſtooping down, he beheld the linen clothes laid by themſelves, and departed, wondring in himſelf at that which was come to paſs.

[c] Gen. xviii. 2. Joſh. v. 13. Acts i. 10.

† Gr. The living one. Heb. vii. 8.

[d] Chap. ix. 22. & xviii. 33.

[e] John ii. 22.

[f] Chap. viii. 3.

[g] Ver. 25.

[h] John xx. 3, 6.

v. 1—12. The ſabbath being ended, the good women who had prepared the ſpices to embalm the body, were early up, to viſit the ſepulchre; and, to their ſurprize, found the ſtone rolled away from the door: and, to increaſe their perplexity, on entring the ſepulchre, they found not the body. Whereupon we are told,

1. The glorious viſion which appeared to them of two angels, whoſe preſence at firſt greatly terrified them, and with deep reſpect they bowed their faces to the ground; but theſe heavenly meſſengers ſoon relieved them from their diſtreſs, with words of kindeſt conſolation, Why ſeek ye the living among the dead? He is not here, but is riſen; Jeſus, your maſter, is no longer the priſoner of the grave; he lives, for ever lives, the conqueror of all his foes; remember how he ſpake unto you when he was yet in Galilee; it need not ſurprize them when he had ſo repeatedly foretold the ſufferings and death he muſt undergo from the hands of wicked men, and his reſurrection which would follow: and on being reminded of this, they remembered the prediction which the angel mentioned. Note, We are ſtrangely forgetful of the great things which Jeſus hath ſpoken, and need to have our memories often refreſhed, that we may not let them ſlip.

2. The haſte the women made to apprize the apoſtles, and the reſt of the diſciples, of what they had ſeen and heard. But, though the fact was aſſerted by the women, ſo ſlow of heart were they to believe, that they treated the report as idle tales, and believed them not; they imputed it to the power of imagination, and were ſo ſunk in deſpair, and ſo totally unapprehenſive of Chriſt's reſurrection, that they ſeem not to have the leaſt expectation of it, nor the leaſt remembrance of the aſſurances concerning his riſing again, which he had ſo repeatedly given them.

3. Peter, rouſed by the report, reſolved however to ſee for himſelf, and ran immediately to the ſepulchre; and ſtooping down, ſaw the grave cloaths regularly folded up, and laid ſeparate, but the body gone; whereupon he departed, wondring in himſelf at that which was come to paſs. Not having the leaſt expectation of his maſter's reſurrection, he could not account for theſe ſtrange circumſtances. Had he remembered the words of Jeſus, his wonder muſt have ceaſed.

13. ¶ [i] And behold, two of them went that ſame day to a village called Emmaus, which was from Jeruſalem about threeſcore furlongs. 14. And they talked together of all theſe things which had happened. 15. And it came to paſs, that while they communed together, and reaſoned, [k] Jeſus himſelf drew near, and went with them. 16. But their eyes were holden, that they ſhould not know him. 17. And he ſaid unto them, What manner of communications are theſe that ye have one to another, as ye walk, and are ſad? 18. And the one of them, whoſe name was Cleopas, anſwering, ſaid unto him, Art thou only a ſtranger in Jeruſalem, and haſt not known the things which are come to paſs there in theſe days? 19. And he ſaid unto them, What things? And they ſaid unto him, Concerning Jeſus of Nazareth, [l] which was a prophet [m] mighty in deed and word before God and all the people: 20. And how the chief prieſts and our rulers delivered him to be condemned to death, and have crucified him. 21. But we truſted that it had been he [n] which ſhould have redeemed Iſrael: and beſide all this, to day is the third day ſince theſe things were done. 22. Yea, and certain women alſo of our company made us aſtoniſhed, [o] which were early at the ſepulchre: 23. And when they found not his body, they came, ſaying, that they had alſo ſeen a viſion of angels, which ſaid that he was alive. 24. And [p] certain of them which were with us, went to the ſepulchre, and found it even ſo as the women had ſaid; but him they ſaw not. 25. Then he ſaid unto them, O fools, and ſlow of heart † to believe all that the prophets have ſpoken! 26. [q] Ought not Chriſt to have ſuffered theſe things, and to enter into his glory? 27. And beginning at [r] Moſes, and [s] all the prophets, he expounded unto them in all the ſcriptures the things concerning himſelf. 28. And they drew nigh unto the village whither they went: and he made as though he would have gone further. 29. But [t] they conſtrained him, ſaying, Abide with us, for it is towards evening, and the day is far ſpent. And he went in to tarry with them. 30. And it came to paſs as he ſat at meat with them, he took bread, and bleſſed it, and brake, and gave to them. 31. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vaniſhed out of their ſight. 32. And they ſaid one to another, Did not our heart burn within us, while he talked with us by the way, and while he opened to us the ſcriptures? 33. And they roſe up the ſame hour, and returned to Jeruſalem, and found the eleven gathered together, and them that were with them, 34. Saying, The Lord is riſen indeed, and [u] hath appeared to Simon. 35. And they told what things were done in the way, and how he was known of them in breaking of bread.

[i] Mark xvi. 12.

[k] Mat. xviii. 20. Ver. 36.

[l] Mat. xxi. 11. Chap. vii. 16. John iv. 19. & vi. 14.

[m] Acts vii. 22.

[n] Chap. i. 68. & ii. 38. Acts i. 6.

[o] Ver. 3—9.

[p] John xx. 3—8.

† Or in believing.

[q] Ver. 46. Acts xvii. 3. 1 Pet. i. 11.

[r] Gen. iii. 15. & xxvi. 4. & xlix. 10. Deut. xviii. 15.

[s] Pſ. cxxxii. 11. Iſa. vii. 14. & ix. 6. & xl. 10. & liii. 3, &c. Jer. xxiii. 5. & xxxiii. 15. Ezek. xxxiv. 23. Dan. ix. 24, &c. Mic. vii. 20. John i. 45.

[t] Gen. xix. 3. Acts xvi. 15. Heb. xiii. 2.

[u] 1 Cor. xv. 5.

v. 13—35. This paſſage juſt mentioned by Mark, is here more at large related. We have,

1. The diſcourſe of two of the diſciples as they walked to a village called Emmaus, about ſeven or eight miles from Jeruſalem. Their buſineſs we are not told; perhaps deſpair had ſeized upon their hearts of ever again ſeeing their crucified maſter, and they were now returning homewards. And as they went, the melancholy events which had paſſed, were the ſubject of their converſation; together with the report which the women had ſpread of the reſurrection of their Lord, on the probability of which they might be reaſoning. Note, Godly converſation makes the moſt pleaſing journey.

2. An unknown ſtranger, to appearance, joins them on the road, as they were in deep diſcourſe; and walking with them, kindly enquires what cauſed their melancholy looks and earneſt converſation. They little thought who now was of their company; either their ſight was miraculouſly affected, or their downcaſt eyes were never lifted up to look upon the perſon who had overtaken them. Note, (1.) Where two of Chriſt's diſciples meet to talk about the things which appertain to his kingdom and glory, he will be in the midſt of them, inſtructing and comforting them. (2.) The children of God are often, without reaſon, ſad, and fear their caſe is deſperate, when their ſalvation is moſt ſecure; but their eyes are holden: through the weakneſs of their faith they cannot take the comfort which is offered them. (3.) When we are ſad and dejected, ſolitude increaſes the evil; whilſt the converſe of a gracious friend ſerves to alleviate our ſorrows: and where we are fellow-mourners, by comparing our caſes, we ſhould ſeek to be mutual comforters.

3. In anſwer to his queſtion, Cleopas replied, Art thou only a ſtranger in Jeruſalem, and haſt not known the things which are come to paſs there in thoſe days? The city had rung of the horrid execution of Jeſus, and Cleopas preſumes that no man who came from thence, could poſſibly be unacquainted with the tranſactions which had paſſed on that occaſion.

4. When Chriſt ſtill pretended ignorance of the things to which Cleopas alluded, in order to draw on farther diſcourſe in anſwer to his queſtion, Cleopas ſuccinctly relates the paſt and preſent ſtate of the affair. He begins with an account of his dear Lord and Maſter Jeſus of Nazareth, who was a prophet, a teacher come from God, who confirmed his divine miſſion by the heavenly doctrine he taught. and the miracles he wrought; was evidently approved of the Moſt High, who endued him with ſuch mighty powers, and bore witneſs to him from heaven; and was for a while greatly careſſed and admired by the people, who in crowds attended his miniſtry. Him, at the inſtigation of the chief prieſts and rulers, the Roman governor had crucified, though confeſſedly innocent; the remembrance of which grievous ſcene deeply afflicted them: eſpecially as they acknowledge themſelves his diſciples, and own their late ſanguine hopes, that this had been he, who ſhould have redeemed Iſrael; the promiſed Meſſiah, the great prophet, whom Moſes had bid them expect. But, alas! their hopes were now almoſt buried in their Maſter's grave: it was true indeed, he talked about riſing on the third day, which was now drawing to a period, and certain ſtrange reports had been ſpread by ſome women of their company, who had been that morning at the ſepulchre to look after the body, and aſtoniſhed them with an account of having ſeen a viſion of angels, who ſaid he was alive, but they gave little credit to the report. Some of their men, however, hereupon ran to the tomb, and found the body gone, as the women had ſaid, but ſaw nothing of the angels, or their Maſter, which rendered the matter very ſuſpicious, and made them ſuppoſe the women miſtaken; ſince if he was really ariſen, they could not but conclude he would rather have notified it to his apoſtles than to them, ſo that on the whole they were deeply dejected, and ſcarce entertained the leaſt proſpect of ever ſeeing him again.

5. The unknown traveller hereupon took up the diſcourſe. He begins with a juſt rebuke of their folly and unbelief; O fools, and ſlow of heart to believe all that the prophets have ſpoken. Had ye reflected upon, and embraced the prophetic writings, you might as ſoon have entertained ſuſpicions about the riſing of the ſun, as the reſurrection of Jeſus: for ought not Chriſt to ſuffer theſe things, according to the eternal counſels of God, the expreſs declarations of his prophets, and for the honour of the divine juſtice, and to enter into his glory, the reward of his ſufferings and death? So far, therefore, from harbouring doubts becauſe of theſe, that he could not be the Meſſiah, nor would ever riſe again, what he endured was abſolutely a proof of the reality of the character he aſſumed; and ſhould have encouraged their fulleſt confidence, that as they had beheld his humiliation on the croſs, they ſhould alſo ſee his exaltation to the mediatorial throne. Then beginning from the books of Moſes, he proceeded through the prophets, expounding to them the types and prophecies which related to himſelf, and ſpoke of his ſufferings, and the glory which ſhould follow. Note, The Old Teſtament, as well as the New, is full of Chriſt. We never underſtand Moſes and the prophets aright, unleſs we ſee him as the great object which they continually hold forth to us.

6. At laſt Chriſt diſcovers himſelf unto them. Drawing nigh to Emmaus, he made as if he would have parted company, and paſſed on farther; but they were too much charmed with his diſcourſe to let him go, and therefore as the evening was advanced, they preſſed him to ſtay: and at their importunate requeſt he went in with them. And ſitting down at table, with authority, as the maſter of the houſe, took bread, according to his uſual manner; and craving the divine benediction, brake, and gave to them. Immediately their eyes were opened; they looked up, and diſcovered the well-known features of their crucified Maſter; when inſtantly he became inviſible and withdrew, leaving them to reflect on what they had ſeen and heard. Note, (1.) They who wiſh for Chriſt's company muſt ſollicit the favour; he loves the importunity of prayer. (2.) If we have taſted the ſatisfaction of communion with Jeſus, like the ſpouſe we ſhall hold him faſt in the arms of faith and love, and deſire never to let him go. (3.) Our meals muſt be ſanctified by prayer and thankſgiving, and then they will ſerve to miniſter food to our ſouls as well as our bodies. (4.) In the ways of his ordinances, the Lord opens the eyes of our faith, and enables us to behold his glory; he hath often ſince this made himſelf known to his people in the breaking of bread at his table. (5.) The viſits of Jeſus upon earth are tranſient; in heaven alone we can expect the uninterrupted beatific viſion.

7. The diſciples could not help hereupon reflecting on the lively impreſſions the diſcourſe of Jeſus had made upon them in the way. On comparing, they found that both their hearts had glowed with holy fervour as he ſpoke; ſuch irradiation darted on their minds, whilſt he opened to them the ſcripture; ſuch life and energy accompanied his diſcourſe, that they cannot but marvel at their own ſtupidity not to have diſcovered him before; ſince none could have taught them with ſuch demonſtration of the ſpirit and power, but he who ſpake like as never man ſpake before. Note, Nothing can warm the ſinner's frozen heart like the preaching of a crucified Jeſus, and his delightful name ſhould be the continual ſubject of our diſcourſes.

8. They immediately reſolved to return, and carry the glad tidings to their brethren at Jeruſalem. Not a moment was to be loſt; they knew by what themſelves had felt how melancholy and diſtreſſed their fellow-diſciples were, and now they could bring them news that would warm their hearts, as it had fired their own. Accordingly, though it was evening, they haſted back, and found opportunely the apoſtles aſſembled with the reſt of the faithful; who, before they had power to ſpeak, eagerly prevented them, ſaying, the Lord is riſen indeed, and hath appeared unto Simon; ſo that it is not a woman's report merely, but a certain fact. The two diſciples then corroborated the evidence with what had paſſed in the way, and the diſcovery which Jeſus made of himſelf to them in breaking of bread, when they ſat down together to take ſome refreſhment. Note, (1.) The gracious experiences which the Saviour gives us of his love, we ſhould delight to communicate for the comfort and encouragement of our brethren. (2.) Nothing ſerves more to confirm the faith, and enliven the hopes of real chriſtians, than comparing their obſervations, and the dealings of God with their ſouls. As iron ſharpneth iron, ſo doth ſuch gracious communication mutually quicken and ſtrengthen the heart.

36. ¶ [x] And as they thus ſpake, Jeſus himſelf ſtood in the midſt of them, and ſaith unto them, Peace be unto you. 37. But they were terrified and affrighted, and ſuppoſed that they had ſeen a ſpirit. 38. And he ſaid unto them, Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts ariſe in your hearts? 39. Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myſelf: [y] handle me, and ſee, for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones, as ye ſee me have. 40. And when he had thus ſpoken, he ſhewed them his hands and his feet. 41. And while they yet believed not [z] for joy, and wondered, he ſaid unto them, [a] Have ye here any meat? 42. And they gave him a piece of a broiled fiſh, and of an honey-comb. 43. And he took it, and did eat before them. 44. And he ſaid unto them, [b] Theſe are the words which I ſpake unto you, while I was yet with you, that all things muſt be fulfilled which were written in the law of Moſes, and in the prophets, and in the pſalms concerning me. 45. Then [c] opened he their underſtanding, that they might underſtand the ſcriptures. 46. And ſaid unto them, [d] Thus it is written, and thus it behoved Chriſt to ſuffer, and to riſe from the dead the third day: 47. And [e] that repentance and [f] remiſſion of ſins ſhould be preached in his name [g] among all nations, [h] beginning at Jeruſalem. 48. And [i] ye are witneſſes of theſe things. 49. ¶ And behold, [k] I ſend the promiſe of my Father upon you: [l] but tarry ye in the city of Jeruſalem, until ye be endued with power from on high.

[x] Mark xvi. 14. John xx. 19. 1 Cor. xv. 7.
[y] John xx. 20, 27. 1 John i. 1.
[z] Gen. xlv. 26.
[a] John xxi. 10.
[b] Chap. ix. 22. & xviii. 31. Ver. 6, 7.
[c] Acts xvi. 14.
[d] Pſ. xxii. Iſa. liii. Acts xvii. 3.
[e] Zech. xii. 10. Acts v. 31.
[f] 1 John ii. 12.
[g] Iſa. xlix. 6. Mal. i. 11.
[h] Acts iii. 26. & xiii. 46.
[i] John xv. 27. Acts i. 8.
[k] Iſa. xliv. 3. John xiv. 16, 26. & xv. 26. & xvi. 7. Acts ii. 4.
[l] Acts i. 4.

v. 36—49. This is the fifth appearance of Jeſus the ſame day he aroſe. Firſt he was ſeen by Mary, John xx. 14. Then by the women, Mat. xxviii. 9. By Peter alone, 1 Cor. xv. 5. By the two diſciples; and now by all who were aſſembled together.

1. He ſuddenly appeared in the midſt of them, whilſt they were talking over this glorious event, the reſurrection of their Lord; and with moſt encouraging words of conſolation, wiſhes them all peace and happineſs. He mentions not one upbraiding word of their perfidy in forſaking him; of Peter's profaneneſs and perjury in denying him; they had turned again, and he had ſealed their pardon; the paſt, therefore, is not only forgiven, but forgotten, and he is come to aſſure them of his unchangeable love.

2. They were terrified and affrighted at his preſence, and ſuppoſed at firſt it was an apparition, or a ſpirit, that had aſſumed the form of Jeſus. So ſurprized were they, that they forgat the proofs of his reſurrection for a moment, on which they had been juſt diſcourſing.

3. He ſoon convinced them of the groundleſſneſs of their fears, and their folly to be ſtartled at his appearance, which ſhould have been their greateſt joy, Why are ye troubled, and why do thoughts ariſe in your hearts? Note, We often cauſe ourſelves needleſs diſquiet, brooding over melancholy apprehenſions, when perhaps the very diſtreſs we feel is a ſymptom for good; as the deep convictions of ſin ſhew the ſpirit of God is at work with our hearts, and will ſhortly iſſue in peace and joy in believing. To remove, therefore their doubts,

(1.) He bids them examine him, and gain the fulleſt evidence to their ſenſes. There were his hands and his feet, where ſtill the ſcars of the nails remained; thoſe glorious ſcars in his victorious conflict over all the powers of darkneſs, their enemies, and his: handle me, and ſee, ſatisfy yourſelves fully in the certainty of my reſurrection, and the identity of my body; for a ſpirit hath not fleſh and bones, as ye ſee me have, but is incorporeal, though it may appear under the reſemblance of a human form. Accordingly he ſhewed them his hands, his feet, his ſide, that they might have the fulleſt conviction of his being the ſame Jeſus; for bearing teſtimony to whoſe reſurrection, they would afterwards be expoſed to the moſt furious perſecutions, and therefore it was needful that their own aſſurance of the fact ſhould be put beyond a doubt.

(2.) He eats and drinks with them, to prove moſt fully to them, that he had really a living body like their own. The aſtoniſhment they were in, and the inexpreſſible joy they felt, quite overcame them; they were ready to believe, that what they ſaw and heard, was too great and too good news to be true, and could not yet credit the teſtimony of their own ſenſes. To give them time to recover from this ecſtaſy, and confirm their faith, he ſat down with them, and did eat in their preſence ſome broiled fiſh, and a piece of an honey-comb, which they gave him; ſo that they might be aſſured hereby he was no ſpectre.

(3.) He not only gave this conviction to their ſenſes, but poured a flood of divine light upon their ſouls. He refers them to his former diſcourſes with them, concerning the things written in the law, the prophets, and pſalms, relative to his ſufferings and glory; and by the powerful operations of his ſpirit he wonderfully brought all he had ſpoken to their memory, and opened the intent and meaning of the ſcriptures to their hearts with ſuch evidence, clearneſs, and certainty, that they perceived the full accompliſhment of all in him. Note, (1.) Our underſtandings are darkened, till Chriſt ſhines upon us as the ſun of righteouſneſs, and alſo by his ſpirit communicates the faculty of viſion. (2.) The moſt enlightened mind hath daily need to cry, open thou mine eyes. (3.) The way in which Chriſt teaches is in and by the ſcriptures; we muſt look for no wiſdom unto ſalvation out of the written word. Though, (4.) The plaineſt truths of God's revealed will are never be ſpiritually diſcerned, till the Holy Ghoſt guides us into the ſenſe and meaning of them.

(4.) He gives them inſtructions for the work in which they were now about to be employed. (1.) They were to be witneſſes of his death and reſurrection, proving from the ſcriptures the predictions concerning both, which were now accompliſhed in him; in conſequence whereof, repentance and remiſſion muſt be preached by them in his name among all nations, beginning at Jeruſalem. He being exalted at the right hand of God, in conſequence of his ſufferings, to beſtow thoſe ineſtimable bleſſings on as many as believed in his name; not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles alſo: and nothing could ſo powerfully influence and engage the hearts of ſinners to return to God, as this free and full ſalvation preached to them in his name. They muſt begin at Jeruſalem, which had been the chief ſcene of his life and ſufferings; the oracles of God, to which they appealed, were in the hands of the Jews; there the facts were tranſacted, to the truth of which they might moſt confidently appeal; and there his murderers dwelt, who moſt eſpecially needed to be called to repentance; and to many of whom he would ſignalize the riches of his grace, in pardoning and ſaving them. The goſpel is grace abounding to the chief of ſinners. (2.) He bids them wait a while at Jeruſalem, and in a few days he would pour out upon them the Spirit from on high, which he had promiſed them, to qualify them for their arduous undertaking, and ſtrengthen them in the diſcharge of it. His kingdom was to be eſtabliſhed, not by human endeavours, but by divine energy; therefore the inſtruments were poor weak illiterate fiſhermen, and this the more magnified the effectual working of that mighty power which appeared in them. They were endued with ſuch wiſdom as none of their adverſaries could reſiſt; with ſuch courage, that no danger could diſmay them; with ſuch miraculous powers, as evidently ſpoke the finger of God; and were bleſſed with ſuch amazing ſucceſs, that in ſpite of all oppoſition, they were enabled to lay the foundations of that church, againſt which the gates of hell can never prevail.

50. ¶ And he led them out [m] as far as to Bethany: and he lift up his hands, and bleſſed them. 51. And it came to paſs, while he bleſſed them, [n] he was parted from them, and carried up into heaven. 52. [o] And they worſhipped him, and returned to Jeruſalem with great joy: 53. And [p] were continually in the temple, praiſing and bleſſing God. Amen.

v. 50—53. We have here the account of the aſcenſion of Jeſus into heaven, after he had forty days converſed with his diſciples after his reſurrection.

1. He gives them his parting benediction. He led them out as far as to Bethany, from whence he had made his triumphant entry into Jeruſalem, ſome few days before his death. And lifting up his hands, as the great high prieſt, Lev. ix. 22. he pronounced a bleſſing upon them.

2. He was parted from them juſt as he had finiſhed his benediction, as Elijah from Eliſha, and carried up into heaven; either by the miniſtry of angels, or his own divine power; making his triumphant entry into the glorious courts above, and ſitting down on the mediatorial throne prepared for him as the reward of his ſufferings. Note, Though deareſt friends muſt now part, we follow Jeſus to that kingdom where we ſhall part no more.

3. The diſciples bowed down in adoration before him, as the very God, who though in his human nature removed out of ſight, yet filled heaven and earth with his preſence. Note, The incarnate Jeſus juſtly claims the worſhip and ſervice of all his faithful followers.

4. They returned to Jeruſalem with great joy. Their ſorrows now were baniſhed, bright hope and burning love poſſeſſed every boſom, and they waited confidently expecting the fulfilment of the promiſe their Lord had given them; and were continually in the temple, at the ſtated hours of worſhip; perhaps, as ſome ſuggeſt, they took up their abode in one of the rooms which adjoined to it, through the favour of ſome Levite, who might be a diſciple, Acts i. 14. praiſing and bleſſing God, joining the temple ſongs, and offering their joyful acknowledgments for all the wondrous mercies they had received, and for the promiſes of greater yet in ſtore for them. Amen: May we in our bleſſing and praiſes ſeek to emulate theſe happy diſciples, till we come to join the ſongs of eternity; and in the better temple, among the bleſſed, ſhall day and night for ever celebrate redeeming love.

[m] Acts i. 12.

[n] Mark xvi. 19. Acts i. 9.

[o] Mat. xxviii. 9, 17.

[p] Acts ii. 46. & v. 42.

THE

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT
Upon the GOSPEL according to
St. JOHN.

JOHN, the writer of this Goſpel, was the favoured diſciple whom Jeſus peculiarly loved, and who leaned on his boſom. He wrote the laſt of all the apoſtles, and ſome ſuppoſe, even after he had lived to ſee the deſtruction of Jeruſalem; though the year and place when and where this goſpel was written are not certainly fixed. He relates much of what the other evangeliſts had omitted, eſpecially ſome of the moſt ſpiritual diſcourſes of Jeſus, and explicitly aſſerts and proves his divine power and Godhead. He is ſaid to have lived to a great age, and to be the only one of the twelve apoſtles who died a natural death, the reſt having all ſealed their teſtimony with their blood.

CHAP. I.

The ſcope and deſign of this chapter is to confirm our faith in Chriſt as the eternal Son of God, and the true Meſſiah and Saviour of the world, that we may be brought to receive him, and rely upon him as our prophet, prieſt, and king, and to give up ourſelves to be ruled, and taught, and ſaved by him. In order to this, we have here, 1. An account given of him by the inſpired penman himſelf, ver. 2—5. And again, ver. 10—14. And again, ver. 16, 17, 18. 2. The teſtimony of John Baptiſt concerning him, ver. 6—9. And again, ver. 15. But moſt fully and particularly, ver. 19—37. 3. His own manifeſtation of himſelf to Andrew and Peter, ver. 38—42. to Philip and Nathanael, ver. 43—51.

1. [a] IN the beginning was the Word, and [b] the Word was with God, and [c] the Word was God. 2. [d] The ſame was in the beginning with God. 3. [e] All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. 4. [f] In him was life, and [g] the life was the light of men. 5. And [h] the light ſhineth in darkneſs, and the darkneſs comprehended it not.

[a] Prov. viii. 22, &c. Col. i. 17. 1 John i. 1. Rev. xix. 13.
[b] Prov. viii. 30. Chap. xvii. 5. 1 John i. 2.
[c] Chap. x. 33. Phil. ii. 5, 8.
[d] Gen. i. 1.
[e] Pſ. xxxiii. 6. Ver. 10. Col. i. 16. Heb. i. 2. Rev. iv. 11.
[f] Chap. v. 26. 1 John v. 11.
[g] Chap. viii. 12. & ix. 5. & xii. 46.
[h] Chap. iii. 19.

v. 1—5. St. John opens his goſpel with an account of that divine perſonage, concerning whom he was about to write. He is called the Word, or Logos; the eſſential word of God, to whom he aſcribes all the attributes peculiar to the One Jehovah. We have,

1. His eternal ſelf-exiſtence. In the beginning was the Word, not only before his incarnation, but ere creation roſe, or time began to meaſure its periods; from everlaſting he exiſted, as the great I AM.

2. His co-exiſtence with the Father. The Word was with God, and the Word was God; not as one God with another, but as one divine perſon co-exiſting with another in the ſame godhead, and partaking with the Father in the ſame divine nature and eſſential perfections. The ſame was in the beginning with God, before any creature had yet been ſpoken into being.

3. His agency, in the formation of the world, and all things therein. All things were made by him, not as a ſubordinate inſtrument, but as the ſelf-ſufficient author of them; and without him was not any thing made that was made; from the higheſt to the loweſt all are the creatures of his hand, and ſuch power proves him to be very God, Iſa. xliv. 24.

4. He is the original of life and light to all the creatures he hath made. In him was life, ſelf-exiſtent and independent; and he is the eternal fount from whence all beings, ſenſitive or rational, receive their life, and are maintained by ſupplies out of his fulneſs; and the life was the light of men; from him was communicated to us all that reaſon and underſtanding of which we are poſſeſſed, and from him alone comes all divine light and life ſince the fall, by which we can be reſtored to the knowledge and enjoyment of God.

5. The light ſhineth in darkneſs. By the fall all divine light is utterly baniſhed from the minds of men, and they are by nature ſunk in the blackneſs of ſpiritual darkneſs. The glimmering of tradition, and the brighter light of revelation, ſhining in the ſhadows and types of the law, or the prophecies and promiſes of the Old Teſtament, were utterly ineffectual to lead men to eternal life and ſalvation, without divine illumination: the darkneſs comprehended it not: the plaineſt and moſt obvious truths the natural man can no more comprehend, than the blind can diſcern the objects before them. He, therefore, who firſt gave eyes to our bodies, muſt, by the ſame divine power, give ſight to our darkened minds, or we muſt for ever remain under ſpiritual darkneſs and ignorance.

6. ¶ [i] There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John. 7. The ſame came for a witneſs, to bear witneſs of the light, that all men through him might believe. 8. He was not that light, but was ſent to bear witneſs of that light. 9. [k] That was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

[i] Mal. iii. 1. Mat. xi. 10. Ver. 33.
[k] Iſa. xlix. 6. Luke ii. 32. Ver. 4.

10. He was in the world, and [l] the world was made by him, and the world knew him not. 11. [m] He came unto his own, and [n] his own received him not. 12. But [o] as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe on his name: 13. [p] Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the fleſh, nor of the will of man, but of God. 14. And [q] the Word [r] was made [s] fleſh, and dwelt among us (and [t] we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father) [u] full of grace and truth.

[l] Ver. 3. Eph. iii. 9. Heb. i. 2. & xi. 3.
[m] Mat. xv. 24. Acts iii. 26. Rom. xv. 8.
[n] Luke xix. 14.
[o] Iſa. lvi. 5. Rom. viii. 15. Gal. iii. 26. 2 Pet. i. 4. 1 John iii. 1.
[p] Chap. iii. 5. Jam. i. 18. 1 Pet. i. 23.
[q] Mat. i. 16. 1 Tim. iii. 16.
[r] Rom. i. 3. Gal. iv. 4.
[s] Heb. ii. 14.
[t] Iſa. xl. 5. Mat. xvii. 2. 2 Pet. i. 17.
[u] Col. i. 19. & ii. 3, 9.

v. 6—14. The cleareſt revelation of goſpel light began with the Baptiſt's miniſtry. To him therefore the Evangeliſt refers, as bearing the moſt glorious teſtimony to the uncreated Word.

1. He relates the miſſion and preaching of John. There was a man ſent from God, whoſe name was John: his miraculous birth, his extraordinary gifts, and remarkable ſanctity, were plain indications of his miſſion from above. The ſame came for a witneſs, to bear witneſs of the light; to point out to their notice the Sun of righteouſneſs, that was now about to ariſe; but to whom, through the blindneſs of their hearts, they were indiſpoſed to pay due attention and regard; and to teſtify that this was the Meſſiah of God: that all men through him might believe; not every individual, but men of all ſorts, who were, without diſtinction, invited by him to look to Jeſus and to be ſaved. He was not that light; though his energetical diſcourſes, and mighty influence, raiſed in the minds of many an apprehenſion that he was the promiſed Chriſt, he aſſumed no ſuch title; but his honour was to be the morning ſtar, the harbinger of day, to uſher in the riſing Sun: he was ſent to bear witneſs of that light, and prepare the way of the Lord. Whilſt we rejoice in the light of miniſters, we muſt remember they are only witneſſes to the Light; and as they preach not themſelves, but Chriſt Jeſus the Lord, to him muſt our eyes be alone directed.

2. Before he proceeds farther with John's teſtimony, the Evangeliſt enlarges on the glorious character and office of him, to whom the Baptiſt bore record. That was the true light, in oppoſition to the falſe lights of Gentile philoſophy, and in contradiſtinction to the glimmering taper of ceremonial types and figures: he was eminently the true light, the fountain from which all wiſdom and knowledge flow, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world, either as the author of natural reaſon to all men, or as ſending the light of his goſpel to all nations, or rather as the giver of ſpiritual light to the ſoul of every ſinner who is brought out of the kingdom of darkneſs, and tranſlated into that new world the kingdom of God's dear Son. He was in the world, and the world was made by him: from the beginning his power and providence were diſplayed; but ſuch was the blindneſs and ſtupidity of mankind, that the world knew him not, nor in the expanded volume of nature, opened to their view, diſcerned his eternal Godhead. Nay, he came unto his own, appearing incarnate in the fulneſs of time, and manifeſting himſelf by his doctrine and miracles to the Jewiſh people, who were his own in a covenant of peculiarity, and his kinſmen according to the fleſh; and his own received him not; they were in general hardened and obſtinate, and rejected their God and Saviour. But a remnant according to the election of grace received, and to as many as received him in his real character, as the promiſed Meſſiah, the Prophet, Prieſt, and King of his people, to them gave he power to become the ſons of God, even to them that believe in his name. By faith embracing him as their God and Saviour, and placing their whole dependance on his atonement and righteouſneſs, they were advanced to the high dignity and privilege of being accounted the ſons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, entitled to the inheritance of glory as joint-heirs with Chriſt, and endued with all thoſe heavenly graces and filial diſpoſitions which proved their adoption of God. And all who truly believe in and receive the ſame Jeſus into their heart, truſting on him alone as the atoning Saviour, and are devoted to him as their Lord and Maſter, ſhall be made partakers of the ſame invaluable bleſſings and honours. We, who were by nature children of wrath, are now become the children of God by faith in Jeſus Chriſt. And this is not merely a relative change, but a real one: where God confers the dignity of a child, he gives the ſpirit of adoption. Thoſe therefore are his ſons, which were born not of blood, not by natural deſcent, for nothing but corruption runs in the blood of all the fallen ſons of Adam; nor by circumciſion, which was only the outward ſign of an inward and ſpiritual grace, without which that bloody rite availed nothing to the ſoul; nor of the will of the fleſh; our regeneration ſprings not from any power or ability in ourſelves, for we are not ſufficient of ourſelves to think any thing as of ourſelves; nor doth it come of the will of man; the wiſeſt reaſoners, the moſt powerful orators, ſpend their rhetorick in vain, moral ſuaſion is ineffectual, unleſs enforced by divine operation; and therefore the Evangeliſt adds, but of God; the renovation of the ſoul is the work of ſovereign and almighty grace alone, and we can only be quickened from the death of treſpaſſes and ſins to ſpiritual life by the ſame divine power and energy which firſt breathed into the lifeleſs clay a living ſoul. And, in order to this great deſign of man's ſalvation, the Word was made fleſh, became incarnate, not by the converſion of the Godhead into fleſh, but by taking the manhood into God: he took our nature, that, in the likeneſs of ſinful fleſh, he might make reconciliation; and dwelt among us, in all the fulneſs of the Godhead taking up his abode in the body, which was prepared for him, as the Shechinah dwelt in the temple. (And we beheld his glory, the brightneſs of which darted through the veil that for a time obſcured its luſtre, and appeared in all the miracles he wrought, in the tranſcendent wiſdom, goodneſs, grace, power, and majeſty he diſplayed on various occaſions, and particularly blazed forth at his transfiguration, his reſurrection, and aſcenſion; all which divine manifeſtations of himſelf, the more they conſidered, the more were they filled with reverence and godly fear, and could not but regard the glory of Jeſus as the glory of the only begotten of the Father) ſuch as it became this divine Perſonage to appear in, who was the brightneſs of his Father's glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon; and who was full of grace and truth; full of grace, of all ſpiritual bleſſings to beſtow on his people; and of truth, fulfilling in his own perſon, as the ſubſtance, all thoſe typical inſtitutions which were the ſhadows of good things to come, together with the prophecies which chiefly centred in him, and accompliſhing all the engagements he had undertaken in the behalf of his people. With what entire ſatisfaction then may we reſt our ſouls on this adored Redeemer, ſo admirably qualified for the office of Mediator, poſſeſſed of all the excellence which the human nature is capable of receiving, and infinitely exalted in the uncreated glory of the divine? The more we conſider his humiliation in becoming incarnate, the more deeply ſhould we be affected with the ſenſe of his grace and love; and, whilſt we view the man Chriſt Jeſus as the very God of very God, the more confidently ſhould we truſt upon his compleat ſalvation.

15. ¶ [x] John bare witneſs of him, and cried, ſaying, This is he of whom I ſpake, [y] He that cometh after me, is preferred before me; for [z] he was before me. 16. And of [a] his fulneſs have all we received, and grace for grace. 17. For [b] the law was given by Moſes, but grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt. 18. [c] No man hath ſeen God at any time; the only begotton Son, which is in the boſom of the Father, he hath declared him.

[x] Chap. v. 33.
[y] Ver. 27, 30. Chap. iii. 31.
[z] Chap. viii. 58. Col. i. 17.
[a] Chap. iii. 34. Col. i. 19. & ii. 9, 10.
[b] Exod. xx. 1, &c.
[c] Ex. xxxiii. 20. Luke x. 22. 1 Tim. vi. 16. 1 John iv. 12.

v. 15—18. We have here,

1. The Baptiſt's farther teſtimony to Chriſt. John bare wit- of him, and cried, ſaying, This is he of whom I ſpake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me. He was the herald ſent to prepare the way of the King Meſſiah, to proclaim aloud the coming of the incarnate God, and at his baptiſm to point him out to the notice of the world, as infinitely his ſuperior in dignity, though after him, in point of time, entering upon his miniſtry and miſſion. And this preeminence he juſtly aſcribes to him, both in the view of his eternal exiſtence as a divine Perſon, and alſo of his conſtitution to the office of Mediator before the worlds were; for he was before me. Note, (1.) The greateſt of miniſters and the chief of ſaints are always moſt careful to aſcribe nothing to themſelves, but ever to exalt the name of their adored Lord and Maſter as alone worthy of all honour and glory. (2.) The younger in office is often ſeen to be the greater in grace.

2. The Evangeliſt takes up the word, and expatiates on the unſearchable riches of Chriſt, in connection with what he had ſaid, v. 14. Out of his fulneſs, the plenitude of gifts and graces reſident in this Son of God's eternal love, have we all received: not only they, as apoſtles, were indebted to their incarnate Lord for all the wondrous abilities with which they were qualified for the diſcharge of the truſt committed to them, but alſo all Chriſtians, of every degree, in every age, draw from the ever-flowing, overflowing, fountain of a Saviour's grace the ſupply of all their ſpiritual wants; and grace for grace; which ſingular expreſſion is differently interpreted; either as repreſenting the fulneſs as well as freedom of the goſpel bleſſings, as grace upon grace, heaped up unto glory; or as the ſupply ſuited to our neceſſities, and effectual to ſtrengthen us for all the work and duty to which the Saviour calls us; or ſuch grace as exactly correſponds to that which is in him, transforming us into the ſame image, as the wax bears the impreſſion of the ſeal; or as deſcriptive of the more abundant meaſures of grace diſpenſed under the goſpel than under the law, to which ſenſe the following verſe ſeems to direct us. For the law came by Moſes: he, as the miniſter of God, declared his will to the Jewiſh people; and it was a matter of grace and favour that God by him revealed himſelf and his law unto them: but one unſpeakably greater than Moſes is here, the author of a new diſpenſation, which in glory far excelleth, 2 Cor. iii. 10. for grace and truth came by Jeſus Chriſt. He is the ſum and ſubſtance of all the types and prophecies, and in him they receive their accompliſhment: the goſpel, which he declared, contained the brighteſt diſcoveries of the divine grace and goodneſs, and the moſt reviving promiſes, confirmed by the veracity of the unchangeable God; and as he reveals the only way of obtaining the divine favour, and how we may walk ſo as to pleaſe God, he miniſters alſo the ability for that which he enjoins, and his goſpel is a law of the Spirit of life, communicating ſpiritual life and power to the ſoul. The greateſt prophets who went before him are not to be compared with him; and his word muſt needs, in the clearneſs and fulneſs of it, excel all the other revelations of his will which God hath been pleaſed to vouchſafe to the ſons of men; for no man hath ſeen God at any time; neither men nor angels are capable of that intimate knowledge of the divine counſels, nor were ever admitted into his ſecrets: the only begotten Son, which is in the boſom of the Father, and by his participation of the Godhead moſt perfectly underſtands all the deſigns of grace which were in the eternal mind; in nature one with the Father, and infinitely dear to him; he hath declared him, being moſt tranſcendently qualified to make ſuch diſcoveries of God and his eternal counſels, particularly of his wiſdom and grace in the redemption of loſt ſinners, as none of the prophets, nor John himſelf, could be ſuppoſed to do, they being but ſervants over the houſe of God; He the Son in his own houſe; and therefore hath more glorioufly and diſtinctly than ever, brought life and immortality to light by his goſpel. They who went before us ſaw but through a glaſs darkly; we with a diſtinctneſs of viſion, like that of face to face. May the light of goſpel truth, ſo clearly revealed to us in and by the Son, be accompanied with the effectual power of goſpel grace to our hearts!

[d] Chap. v. 19. ¶ And [d] this is the record of John, when the 33. Jews ſent prieſts and Levites from Jeruſalem to aſk him, [e] Luke iii. Who art thou? 20. And [e] he confeſſed, and denied 16. Chap. iii. 28. not; but confeſſed, I am not the Chriſt. 21. And they Acts xiii. 25. aſked him, What then? Art thou [f] Elias? And he [f] Mal. iv. 5. [g] Deut. xviii. ſaith, I am not. Art thou [g] that prophet? And he 15, 18. anſwered, No. 22. Then ſaid they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an anſwer to them that ſent us:
[h] Mat. iii. 3. what ſayeſt thou of thyſelf? 23. [h] He ſaid, I am the Chap. iii. 28. voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, Make ſtraight
[i] Iſa. xl. 3. the way of the Lord, [i] as ſaid the prophet Eſaias.
24. And they which were ſent, were of the Phariſees.
25. And they aſked him, and ſaid unto him, Why baptizeſt thou then, if thou be not that Chriſt, nor Elias, neither that prophet? 26. John anſwered them, ſay-[k] Mat. iii. ing, [k] I baptize with water: but there ſtandeth one 11. Acts i. 5. among you, whom ye know not; 27. [l] He it is who [l] Ver. 15, coming after me, is preferred before me, whoſe ſhoes
30. Acts xix. 4. latchet I am not worthy to unlooſe. 28. Theſe things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

v. 19—28. The teſtimony of John is here reaſſumed, which he delivered to thoſe who were ſent from Jeruſalem to examine into his credentials.

1. The ſanhedrim, whoſe buſineſs it was to take cogniſance of all religious matters, ſent prieſts and Levites to enquire who he was, and what character he aſſumed? the time being at hand when the Meſſiah, according to the prophets, was now about to appear. And as many took John to be the Chriſt, or at leaſt an extraordinary perſonage raiſed up for ſome great purpoſes, they wanted to hear from his own lips what he profeſſed himſelf to be.

2. John's anſwers to their queſtions were direct and faithful. As to his being the Meſſiah, he freely and earneſtly diſclaims every ſuch pretenſion: he confeſſed, and denied not; but confeſſed, I am not the Chriſt. Note, We muſt never arrogate to ourſelves honours which do not belong to us; but ſhould reject every temptation to pride with abhorrence. In reply to their queſtion, whether he were Elias? he ſaid, No. The Jews looked for the perſon of Elias; John only came in the ſpirit and power of that zealous reformer; and therefore was not the Elijah they expected. He declares himſelf to be neither Jeremias nor that prophet of which Moſes ſpake, nor any of the ancient prophets riſen again, one of whom they ſuppoſed would precede the coming of Elias. Hereupon they urge him to give them a poſitive anſwer who he was, if he was neither of thoſe whom they had mentioned, that they might carry back ſomething determinate to thoſe who ſent them. To this he gave a direct anſwer in the words of Scripture, Iſa. xl. 3. I am the voice of one crying in the wilderneſs, Make ſtraight the way of the Lord, as ſaid the prophet Eſaias. He is the harbinger of the Meſſiah: his office was to cry aloud and ſpare not, rebuking the ſins and rectifying the errors of the people, and thus calling upon them to prepare to meet their God incarnate. And this is the great work of every true miniſter of Chriſt: with zeal, which fires his diſcourſes, he labours to call ſinners to the Saviour; and, eager in his exhortations, deſires to lead them to repentance unto life.——Since he diſclaimed the character of the Meſſiah, and thoſe prophets which they had mentioned, they expoſtulated with him on his aſſuming authority to baptiſe; for it ſeems thoſe Phariſees, who were now delegated in this commiſſion, tenacious of their traditions, and proud in the conceit of their own goodneſs, fancied they needed no repentance, and unable to brook the freedom and ſeverity of the Baptiſt's rebukes, would gladly have taken occaſion to ſuppreſs and ſilence him. In anſwer to their queſtion he replied, I baptiſe with water, as the outward ſign of an inward and ſpiritual grace, which I pretend not to confer; but there ſtandeth one among you, or there lately ſtood one among you, even Jeſus, who had been baptiſed by him, whom ye know not, he not having yet publickly appeared in his glorious character as the Meſſiah; He it is who, coming after me, is preferred before me, as infinitely my ſuperior, whoſe ſhoes latchet I am not worthy to unlooſe: ſo tranſcendently glorious and exalted is his dignity, that to be employed in the meaneſt office about his perſon is an honour far beyond all that I can pretend to deſerve. This converſation paſſed at Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptiſing; but we find no enquiries made fter him, concerning whom John informed them.

29. ¶ The next day John ſeeth Jeſus coming unto him, and ſaith, Behold [m] the Lamb of God, which † taketh [m] Ex. xii. 3. away the ſin of the world. 30. [n] This is he of whom Iſa. liii. 7. Ver. 36.
I ſaid, After me cometh a man which is preferred be- Acts viii. 32.
fore me: for he was before me. 31. And I knew him 1 Pet. i. 19. † Or beareth.
not: but that he ſhould be made manifeſt to Iſrael, therefore am I come [o] baptizing with water. 32. And John [n] Ver. 15, 27.
bare record, ſaying, [p] I ſaw the Spirit deſcending from [o] Mat. iii. 6. [p] Mat. iii. heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him. 33. And I 16. Mark i. knew him not: but he that ſent me to baptize with 10. Luke iii. 22.
water, the ſame ſaid unto me, Upon whom thou ſhalt ſee the Spirit deſcending and remaining on him, [q] the [q] Mat. iii.
ſame is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghoſt. 34. 11. Acts i. 5.
And I ſaw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.
35. ¶ Again the next day after, John ſtood, and two of his diſciples: 36. And looking upon Jeſus as he [r] Ver. 29.
walked, he ſaith, [r] Behold the Lamb of God.

v. 29—36. Jeſus had now finiſhed his glorious conflict with the great enemy of ſouls, and was returned from the wilderneſs victorious to the banks of Jordan. There John ſaw him, and bore repeated teſtimony to him as the Chriſt of God.

1. He points out Jeſus to the notice of his diſciples, as he walked near the river's ſide, ſaying, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the ſin of the world. He is the Lamb without ſpot and blemiſh, which the daily ſacrifice and paſchal lamb prefigured; he is the Lamb of God, appointed by him as the great oblation which ſhould once be offered, with whoſe ſacrifice he would be well pleaſed; taking away the ſin of the world, of all his people, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles alſo; and by the one oblation he hath once offered hath fully, compleatly, and everlaſtingly made the atonement; ſo that all, in every age or place, under whatever degrees of guilt or power of corruption they lie, who come to him, are ſure to find a complete ſalvation wrought out for them: and therefore we are directed to behold him, to look to him with an eye of faith, that we may be made partakers of the eternal redemption that is in him.

2. He declares this is the perſon to whom he had before born witneſs. This is he of whom I ſaid, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me; for he was before me: a man, yet more than man, even God-man. And I knew him not; there was no perſonal acquaintance between them before, nor were they in league together to ſerve any ſiniſter end or purpoſe: but that he ſhould be made manifeſt to Iſrael, therefore am I come baptizing with water: this was the great end of John's miniſtry, to point out to Iſrael the anointed Saviour.

3. He mentions the ſign which the Lord had given him to diſcover that diſtinguiſhed Perſonage whoſe forerunner he was, but of whom till then he had no perſonal knowledge. The ſign given was the viſible deſcent of the Spirit as a dove, and on whomſoever of thoſe, who came to him to be baptiſed, he ſhould ſee it light, he might be fully aſſured that this was he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghoſt. This he ſaw at Jordan, when Jeſus came to be baptiſed of him, and heard the voice from heaven mentioned Matth. iii. 17. On theſe ſure grounds therefore he bare record then, and ever after continued to repeat the ſame teſtimony, that this is the Son of God incarnate, the true Meſſiah promiſed from the beginning.

4. The next day again looking earneſtly on Jeſus as he walked, he pointed him out to two of his diſciples, ſaying, Behold the Lamb of God, deſirous to engage their attention to the heavenly Saviour, and to lead them to value, regard, and embrace him, as the one great atoning ſacrifice for the ſins of men, which all thoſe offered under the law prefigured and repreſented. Note, (1.) The doctrine of Chriſt's ſacrifice for our ſins is the glorious ſubject on which miniſters muſt continually inſiſt. (2.) They who have beheld the excellency of Jeſus cannot but delight to recommend him to the regard and notice of others.

37. And the two diſciples heard him ſpeak, and they followed Jeſus. 38. Then Jeſus turned, and ſaw them following, and ſaith unto them, What ſeek ye? They ſaid unto him, Rabbi, (which is to ſay, being interpreted, Maſter) where † dwelleſt thou? 39. He ſaith unto them, Come and ſee. They came and ſaw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the ‡ tenth hour. 40. One of the two which heard John ſpeak, and followed him, was [a] Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. 41. He firſt findeth his own brother Simon, and ſaith unto him, We have found the Meſſias, which is, being interpreted, § the Chriſt. 42. And he brought him to Jeſus. And when Jeſus beheld him, he ſaid, Thou art Simon the ſon of Jona: [t] thou ſhalt be called Cephas, which is by interpretation, ‖ a ſtone.

† Gr. abideſt.
‡ i. e. Two hours before night.
[a] Mat. iv. 18.
§ Or the anointed.
[t] Mat. xvi. 18.
‖ Or Peter.

v. 37—42. The firſt diſciples of Jeſus here begin to commence their acquaintance with him.

1. The two, who were with John when he pointed out Jeſus to their notice, immediately followed him, deſiring to be indulged in a greater intimacy with him. And the gracious Lord, who obſerves and is delighted with the firſt ſteps a ſoul takes in approaching him, kindly accoſted them, and enquired what they ſought. With reſpectful addreſs and humble enquiry they replied, Rabbi, where dwelleſt thou? Rabbi was the title given to the moſt famed of their wiſe men; and moſt deſerving of it muſt be he in whom dwelt all the treaſures of wiſdom and knowledge. They deſire to be admitted to a longer converſation with him than they could enjoy as they walked, and would gladly, if they might be permitted, wait upon him to receive his divine inſtructions. Note, Abiding communion with Jeſus is the thing a ſoul, who is at all acquainted with him, importunately deſires. Chriſt courteouſly invites them to his lodgings; Come and ſee: he was ready to give them an immediate welcome; for his arms are ever open to receive thoſe who deſire to come to him. With thankfulneſs and joy they immediately embraced the offer. Where the ſoul is at ſtake, every delay is dangerous. They came and ſaw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour: ſo that they ſpent that day in delightful converſation with him. The name of one of theſe diſciples was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother; the other probably the author of this goſpel, who here, as in other places, modeſtly ſuppreſſes his own name, when the mention of it would be to his honour. A noble inſtance of his unfeigned humility.

2. A third diſciple is added. Andrew, eager to communicate the glad tidings to his brother Simon, findeth him, and with exultation relates the important diſcovery they had made, We have found the Meſſiah, (which is, being interpreted in the Greek language, the Chriſt) the anointed of the Lord, ſo often ſpoken of in the Scriptures; and he brought him to Jeſus, who took particular notice of him; and calling him by his name, which, though a ſtranger to him probably before, he well knew, he gives him a new name, Cephas, which ſignifies a ſtone, as adopting him into his family, and intimating the ſteadineſs of his heart in the work of the goſpel, and his being appointed one of thoſe pillars on which, with his brethren the apoſtles, the church ſhould ſtand firm, grounded on Jeſus the chief cornerſtone and ſure foundation. Note, (1.) They who have taſted the riches of a Saviour's grace themſelves cannot but be active to draw others unto him. There is in Chriſt enough and to ſpare. (2.) They who are nearly related to us in blood claim a peculiar intereſt in our regard and prayers; and the beſt token of our love to them will be ſhewn in leading them to Jeſus. (3.) The faithful in Chriſt Jeſus ſtand firm as a rock, unmoved with the ſtorms of tribulation which for his ſake they may be called to endure.

43. ¶ The day following Jeſus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and ſaith unto him, Follow me. 44. Now [u] Philip was of Bethſaida, the city of Andrew and Peter. 45. Philip findeth [x] Nathanael, and ſaith unto him, We have found him of whom [y] Moſes in the law, and [z] the prophets did write, Jeſus [a] of Nazareth, the ſon of Joſeph. 46. And Nathanael ſaid unto him, [b] Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip ſaith unto him, Come and ſee. 47. Jeſus ſaw Nathanael coming to him, and ſaith of him, Behold [c] an Iſraelite indeed, [d] in whom is no guile. 48. Nathanael ſaith unto him, Whence knoweſt thou me? Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou waſt under the fig-tree, I ſaw thee. 49. Nathanael anſwered and ſaith unto him, Rabbi, thou art [e] the Son of God, thou art [f] the King of Iſrael. 50. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Becauſe I ſaid unto thee, I ſaw thee under the fig-tree, believeſt thou? thou ſhalt ſee greater things than theſe. 51. And he ſaith unto him, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [g] Hereafter you ſhall ſee heaven open, and the angels of God aſcending and deſcending upon the Son of man.

[u] Chap. xii. 21.
[x] Chap. xxi. 2.
[y] Gen. xlix. 10. Deut. xviii. 18.
[z] Iſa. liii. 3, &c. Dan. ix. 24. Mic. v. 2. Zech. vi. 12. & ix. 9. Luke xxiv. 27.
[a] Mat. ii. 23.
[b] Chap. vii. 41, 42.
[c] Rom. ii. 28. & ix. 6.
[d] Pſ. xxxii. 2.
[e] Pſ. ii. 7.
[f] Mat. xxi. 5. & xxvii. 11.
[g] Gen. xxviii. 12. Mat. iv. 11. Luke ii. 9, 13. & xxii. 43. & xxiv. 4. Acts i. 10.

v. 43—51. Our Lord having begun to make choice of his diſciples, adds two more to the number, in Galilee, whither he went the day following.

1. Chriſt himſelf calls Philip. He found him, not by accident, but deſign, as the great Shepherd, ſeeking after his loſt ſheep, and gathering them unto himſelf; not one of whom ſhall periſh: he knoweth their wanderings, and will bring them to his fold. He ſaith unto him, Follow me; and Chriſt's word inſtantly wrought effectually upon him. He was of Bethſaida, a town on the lake of Genneſareth, and a place very abandoned, Matth. xi. 21. yet there Andrew and Peter alſo dwelt; for in the worſt of places God hath ſome choſen veſſels, to be to the praiſe of the glory of his grace.

2. Philip immediately went in queſt of ſome friends to whom he might carry the glad tidings; and finding Nathanael, he with joy communicates the news, We have found him of whom Moſes in the law, and the prophets did write, Jeſus of Nazareth, the ſon of Joſeph. Probably our Lord had opened theſe ſcriptures concerning himſelf to Philip's fulleſt ſatisfaction. But Nathanael, on the mention of Nazareth, ſtarts an objection, Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? a place vile and deſpicable to a proverb. Philip, unable to ſolve the difficulty, yet not ſhaken in his own faith, ſaith, Come and ſee, perſuaded that Jeſus himſelf could eaſily ſilence that and every other objection which might be raiſed againſt him. Note, (1.) They, who have found Chriſt, cannot but exult in this happy acquiſition. (2.) Tho' we may not be capable of anſwering every objection which may be ſtarted, we are not therefore to conclude our religion is a deluſion, but examine farther, and then we ſhall find enough to ſatisfy us that we have not believed cunningly deviſed fables. (3.) When we are in doubt we muſt come to Jeſus, and by prayer and attention to his word may be confident he will lead us into all truth.

3. Nathanael yielded to Philip's invitation, and quickly was convinced of the unreaſonableneſs of the prejudices which he had entertained. (1.) Chriſt highly commends his character as he ſaw him coming near, ſaying to thoſe who were in company with him at that time, Behold an Iſraelite indeed, in whom is no guile, a genuine ſon of ſimple-hearted Jacob. Note, It is a great thing to be an Iſraelite indeed, in ſpirit and temper ſuch as our profeſſion demands, without allowed guile either towards God or man, but with regard to both keeping a conſcience void of offence. (2.) Nathanael expreſſes his ſurprize how Jeſus ſhould know him, whom he had never ſeen before; but the confirmation of it, which Chriſt gave, yet more amazed him, and ſilenced all his doubts, as it proved his omniſcience: Before that Philip called thee, when thou waſt under the fig-tree, I ſaw thee. Probably Nathanael had retired thither for ſome religious exerciſes, where no eye could ſee him, and there had offered up his fervent ſupplications to God for the Meſſiah's coming, or might be employed in meditation, perhaps on that dream of Jacob, Gen. xxviii. 12. to which our Lord refers, v. 51. and ſuch an inſtance of his knowing both the place of his retirement, and the very ſentiments of his ſoul, could not but give Nathanael the ſtrongeſt evidence of his being indeed the Meſſiah, as Philip had affirmed. Note, The eye of Jeſus is upon us in our moſt retired moments, and he is acquainted with every ſentiment of our ſouls. And this cannot but afford as much comfort to a gracious ſoul as it ſpeaks confuſion to every hypocrite. (3.) Nathanael, fully convinced, bows down before him, and makes ſolemn profeſſion of his faith in him as the Meſſiah, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Iſrael. His prejudices inſtantly vaniſhed, and, aſſured of the divine miſſion and character of Jeſus, he gladly yields himſelf up a loyal ſubject to Iſrael's King, truſting on him for ſalvation from all enemies.

4. Chriſt, with approbation of his faith, and admiration of his noble confeſſion, aſſures Nathanael he ſhall ſhortly ſee greater and more glorious evidences of his infinite wiſdom and power, to confirm his confidence. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, who am the faithful and true witneſs, Hereafter you ſhall ſee heaven opened, or from henceforth, when, entering upon his publick miniſtry, he ſhould begin to manifeſt his glory in the miracles he wrought and the doctrines he taught; and ye ſhall ſee the angels of God aſcending and deſcending upon the Son of man, either literally, in their miniſtrations to him at his reſurrection and aſcenſion, or rather figuratively, ſuch a friendly intercourſe between heaven and earth would now appear to be reſtored, and ſuch wonders wrought by Jeſus in confirmation of his miſſion, that it would be proved with evidence ſtrong and ſtriking as if they ſaw the heavens themſelves opened, and the angels employed in carrying on a correſpondence between God the Father and the Son, become man for us men and for our ſalvation. Note, Through the Son of man the kingdom of heaven is opened to all believers, the angels of God miniſter to the heirs of ſalvation, and we may now enter boldly into the holieſt of all, aſcending by him, who is unto us, as the ladder of Jacob, the way to God and glory.

CHAP. II.

In this chapter we have, 1. The ſtory of the firſt miracle which Jeſus wrought, turning water into wine, at Cana of Galilee, ver. 1—11. and his appearing at Capernaum, ver. 12. 2. The ſtory of the firſt paſſover he kept at Jeruſalem after he began his public miniſtry. His driving the buyers and ſellers out of the temple, ver. 13—17. and the ſign he gave to thoſe who quarreled with him for it, ver. 18—22. with an account of ſome that followed him thereupon for ſome time, ver. 23, 24, 25. but he knew them too well to put any confidence in them.

1. AND the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jeſus was there. 2. And both Jeſus was called, and his diſciples, to the marriage. 3. And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jeſus ſaith unto him, They have no wine. 4. Jeſus ſaith unto her, [a] Woman, what have I to do with thee? [b] mine hour is not yet come. 5. His mother ſaith unto the ſervants, Whatſoever he ſaith unto you, do it. 6. And there were ſet there ſix water-pots of ſtone, [c] after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece. 7. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim. 8. And he ſaith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feaſt. And they bare it. 9. When the ruler of the feaſt had taſted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was, (but the ſervants which drew the water knew) the governor of the feaſt called the bridegroom, 10. And ſaith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth ſet forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worſe: but thou haſt kept the good wine until now. 11. This beginning of miracles did Jeſus in Cana of Galilee, and [d] manifeſted forth his glory; and his diſciples believed on him.

[a] Chap. xix. 26. Deut. xxxiii. 9.
[b] Chap. vii. 6.
[c] Mark vii. 3.
[d] Chap. i. 14.

v. 1—11. The firſt miracle of Jeſus was wrought at a marriage-feaſt in Cana of Galilee. It was probably a marriage of ſome near relation of his mother Mary's, who ſeemed not to be there merely as a gueſt, but as one of the family. Chriſt was invited, and refuſed not the invitation given him on this occaſion, but went with his diſciples to grace the bridal feaſt with his preſence and company, and put an honour upon the inſtitution. Note, (1.) Our marriages can only then be expected to iſſue happily, when Jeſus with his benediction crowns the indiſſoluble union. (2.) Religion teaches none to be unſocial or uncivil, but commands us to rejoice with thoſe that rejoice. We are told,

1. The concern expreſſed by the mother of Jeſus to her Son on account of the deficiency of the wine at this entertainment. The number of the gueſts, perhaps more than were expected, conſumed the ſmall quantity which theſe perſons, who were probably in mean circumſtances, had provided, and they might not be able to afford more. It ſeems ſhe expected that he would ſoon begin to diſplay his glorious power, and intimated that the preſent neceſſity afforded an opportunity for his miraculous aſſiſtance. Note, (1.) In the height of our earthly joys, ſomething ſtill is wanting. We muſt look only for perfect bliſs in that kingdom, where they neither marry nor are given in marriage. (2.) A gracious heart intereſts himſelf in the diſtreſſes of his friends, and, when he can do no more to relieve them, fails not to commend their caſe to the kind Saviour's notice.

2. He gives her a reprimand for interfering in matters which did not belong to her. Though he was her ſon after the fleſh, yet in the exerciſe of his miraculous powers he acted as Son of God, and owed her no obedience: and to intermeddle in the direction of his conduct, reſpecting the affairs of his kingdom, was a very blameable preſumption. What a direct condemnation of the horrid idolatry of that church, which prays to the mother to command her Son? Beſides he adds, My hour is not yet come; either it was not yet time to work this miracle, till all the wine was ſpent; or rather the time for the publick manifeſtation of his glory, by his open performing miracles, was not yet come; and, whatever he might do in private, he was not to be directed by her, or any other, when or how to act.

3. Though his mother ſilently ſubmitted to his pleaſure, ſhe entertained apprehenſions that he would grant her requeſt, and take the matter into his conſideration; and therefore privately bid the ſervants obey whatever orders he ſhould give them. Note, (1.) We muſt not be diſcouraged in our faith, if our prayers are not immediately anſwered. (2.) Chriſt's commands are implicitly to be obeyed, without reaſoning or heſitation.

4. Chriſt performs the needful miracle; and with circumſtances that eminently diſplayed his glory. Six water-pots of ſtone were placed there, containing about two or three firkins each, which ſome ſuppoſe to be in quantity about nine gallons; it being cuſtomary with the Jews to make uſe of frequent waſhings, ſome of which were enjoined by the law of God, and more by the tradition of the elders, and therefore, where ſuch a number of gueſts were preſent, much water was neceſſary. Theſe water-pots Chriſt bids the ſervants fill with water to the brim, that there might be no ſuſpicion of fraud in the miracle. They obeyed, and inſtantly the ſtrange converſion was wrought. He orders them hereupon to draw out and carry this liquor to the governor of the feaſt, the perſon who was either the maſter of the ceremonies, or ſat in the moſt honourable place on that occaſion; or was the chaplain, the prieſt or Levite, who bleſſed the cup before it was ſent round to the gueſts. No ſooner had he taſted the wine which had been water, than he was ſtruck with the delicious flavour, and, unacquainted whence it came, he obſerved with ſurprize to the bridegroom his unuſual method of procedure. Others uſually produced their beſt wine firſt, and afterwards, when men have well drank, that which is worſe, (τον ελασσω) of a weaker body; but he had kept the good wine to the laſt, as the grace-cup, to conclude the entertainment. Note, (1.) God's creatures, and wine among the reſt, are given us richly to enjoy. It is no ſin to be pleaſed with the delicious flavour of the grape, when we remember with thankfulneſs who gave it that quality; only we muſt beware that we do not by intemperance abuſe our mercies, and turn our bleſſings into a curſe by exceſs or drunkenneſs. (2.) Feaſts need a governor to reſtrain the irregularities of thoſe who elſe perhaps, to their ſhame, would have no government over themſelves. (3.) Whatever conſolations believers here enjoy, the greateſt are reſerved for them at laſt, when, at the marriage-ſupper of the Lamb, they ſhall drink the new wine in the kingdom of God.

5. At the concluſion of this miracle the Evangeliſt obſerves, that this was the firſt Jeſus performed after his entrance on his miniſtry. Wherein he manifeſted forth his glory in ſuch diſplays of his power and grace, wrought by his authoritative word, as exalted his own great name, and proved his own eternal Godhead and glory; and his diſciples believed on him, confirmed in their aſſurance of the truth of that high character which he aſſumed. Note, The more we become acquainted with Chriſt in his word, the more ſhall we be convinced that this is he who ſhould come, and ſhall be engaged to reſt our ſouls on him for life and ſalvation.

12. ¶ After this, he went down to Capernaum, he, and his mother, and [e] his brethren, and his diſciples, and they continued there not many days. 13. ¶ And the [f] Jews paſſover was at hand, and Jeſus went up to Jeruſalem, 14. And [g] found in the temple thoſe that ſold oxen, and ſheep, and doves, and the changers of money, ſitting: 15. And when he had made a ſcourge of ſmall cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the ſheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changers money, and overthrew the tables; 16. And ſaid unto them that ſold doves, Take theſe things hence; make not my Father's houſe an houſe of merchandiſe. 17. And his diſciples remembred that it was written, [h] The zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me up. 18. ¶ Then anſwered the Jews, and ſaid unto him, [i] What ſign ſheweſt thou unto us, ſeeing that thou doſt theſe things? 19. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, [k] Deſtroy this temple, and in three days I will raiſe it up. 20. Then ſaid the Jews, Forty and ſix years was this temple in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days? 21. But he ſpake of [l] the temple of his body. 22. When therefore he was riſen from the dead, [m] his diſciples remembred that he had ſaid this unto them: and they believed the ſcripture, and the word which Jeſus had ſaid.

[e] Mat. xii. 46.
[f] Exod. xii. 24, &c.
[g] Mat. xxi. 12. Mark xi. 15. Luke xix. 45.
[h] Pſ. lxix. 9.
[i] Mat. xii. 38. Chap. vi. 30.
[k] Mat. xxvi. 61. & xxvii. 40.
[l] Heb. viii. 2.
[m] Luke xxiv. 8.

v. 12—22. Capernaum was the place where Chriſt uſually reſided, Math. iv. 13. Hither he came with his mother, brethren, and diſciples, who, ſtruck with what they had ſeen, attended him to obſerve the further manifeſtations of his divine power and glory which he ſhould make. His abode at this time at Capernaum was not many days, the Paſſover being at hand, which called him up to Jeruſalem. Where we find him,

1. Purging the temple of thoſe intruders who had defiled that holy place. Under pretence of accommodating thoſe, who came up to worſhip, with ſacrifices and change of money, a market was kept in the temple by the connivance of the prieſts, who probably made ſome conſiderable advantage by permitting ſuch a profanation. But Chriſt, beholding with indignation ſuch corruptions in the houſe of God, immediately began to vindicate the honour of that ſacred incloſure, and, having made a ſcourge of cords, he drove out the traders with their beaſts, overturned the tables of the money-changers, and bad thoſe who ſold doves to take them away; remonſtrating with them on the wickedneſs of their conduct, Make not my Father's houſe an houſe of merchandiſe; and, ſtanding in ſo near a relation to the God of the temple, he could not endure to ſee him thus diſhonoured. Note, (1.) The love of filthy lucre is generally at the root of the corruptions which creep into the church of God. (2.) If God is our father, we cannot but be grieved to ſee him diſhonoured, and ſhall zealouſly appear in his cauſe. (3.) They who are bold and faithful for God will often ſee that one can chaſe a thouſand, and that, if we dare ſtand up in his name, the conſciences of ſinners will cover them with confuſion.

2. The diſciples remembred that it was written, The zeal of thine houſe hath eaten me up. And this confirmed ſtill the more their faith, as they obſerved all the Scripture prophecies accompliſhed in him.

3. Being queſtioned by the Jews concerning the authority on which he acted, and required to give a ſign in proof of the miſſion to which he pretended, He anſwered and ſaid unto them, Deſtroy this temple, and in three days I will raiſe it up. Since they refuſed to be convinced by other miracles, he refers them to the laſt ſign which ſhould be wrought, even his reſurrection from the dead by his own divine power, after they had deſtroyed the temple of his body: as he had now cleanſed his houſe from their profanations, ſo would he raiſe his own body, which they ſhould ſlay, and never ſuffer it to ſee corruption. They underſtood him as if he meant the material temple where he then was, which had now been forty-ſix years building and beautifying; ſince Herod took down that erected by Zerubbabel, and raiſed the preſent fabric on the ſame ſpot, which, though the body of it was finiſhed in eight years, might probably till that time have continued to be more highly ornamented: though ſome ſuppoſe the words are to be interpreted of the time which Zerubbabel's temple was in building. However, they looked upon it as a moſt abſurd pretenſion, for a mere man, as they preſumed him to be, to aſſert he could do that in three days, which had employed thouſands of workmen ſo many years. Thus they ridiculed his aſſertion, though it appears they underſtood not his meaning. Note, (1.) It is juſt with God to give thoſe up to their vain imaginations, who have no love of the truth, but have pleaſure in unrighteouſneſs. (2.) The groſſeſt miſtakes have been entertained by underſtanding literally what the Scriptures have ſpoken figuratively, as in the doctrine of tranſubſtantiation, drawn from the words of Chriſt, This is my body. (3.) The body of Jeſus was the true temple, in which the fulneſs of the Godhead dwelt; and of him the temple at Jeruſalem was but the type and figure. (4.) As the temple was the medium of worſhip, and they who prayed turned their faces thitherwards, ſo is it through Chriſt Jeſus alone that we can have acceſs to and acceptance with God.

4. His diſciples, though they, no more than the Jews, underſtood his meaning at that time, yet afterwards, when the events verified the prediction, and the Spirit poured out from on high opened their minds to underſtand the Scriptures, reflected on this prophecy, and, ſeeing the accompliſhment of it in his reſurrection, they were the more deeply confirmed in their faith of the ſcripture, and the word which Jeſus had ſaid. Note, The truths of Scripture which we learn in younger years, though not underſtood at that time, yet are of ſingular uſe when, in any future time, it pleaſes God to ſhine into our hearts, and open the eyes of our minds.

23. ¶ Now when he was at Jeruſalem at the paſſover, in the feaſt-day, many believed in his name, when they ſaw the miracles which he did. 24. But Jeſus did not commit himſelf unto them, becauſe he knew all men, 25. And needed not that any ſhould teſtify of man: for [n] he knew what was in man.

[n] 1 Sam. xvi. 7. 1 Chron. xxviii. 9. Chap.vi. 64. Acts i. 24. Rev. ii. 23.

v. 23—25. During the ſeven days of the feaſt Chriſt preached openly the doctrines of his kingdom, and wrought mighty miracles in confirmation of the truths he taught. The effect of which, we are told, was,

1. That many believed in his name; at leaſt for the time they were ſo ſtruck with his miracles as to give their aſſent to his doctrine, and own him as the Meſſiah. But,

2. Jeſus did not commit himſelf unto them, did not truſt himſelf with them, or repoſe any confidence upon them; becauſe he knew all men; the wickedneſs of ſome, who would play the hypocrite in order to betray him; and the weakneſs of others, who in a time of danger might through timidity be tempted to deſert him, or through miſtake and indiſcretion raiſe ſome diſturbance, through their vain imaginations that his kingdom was temporal, and his throne to be eſtabliſhed by arms. And, being thus allwiſe, he needed not that any ſhould teſtify of man: for he knew what was in man, how deceitful above all things and deſperately wicked his heart was; and therefore how little to be truſted. Note, (1.) We ſhould be cautious in whom we confide, and try before we truſt. (2.) Chriſt knows the ſecrets of all hearts; he ſees the devices of his ſubtle enemies, aud the falſehood of his pretended friends, and he will bring every ſinner to judgment, and every ſecret thing, whether it be good or whether it be evil.

CHAP. III.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's diſcourſe with Nicodemus, ver. 1—21. 2. John Baptiſt's diſcourſe with his diſciples concerning Chriſt, ver. 22—36.

1. THERE was a man of the Phariſees, named Nicodemus, [a] a ruler of the Jews: 2. [b] The ſame came to Jeſus by night, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for [c] no man can do theſe miracles that thou doſt, except [d] God be with him. 3. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, [e] Except a man be born † again, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God. 4. Nicodemus ſaith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? can he enter the ſecond time into his mother's womb, and be born? 5. Jeſus anſwered, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born [f] of water and [g] of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God. 6. [h] That which is born of the fleſh, is fleſh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is ſpirit. 7. Marvel not that I ſaid unto thee, Ye muſt be born again. 8. [i] The wind bloweth where it liſteth, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth: [k] ſo is every one that is born of the Spirit. 9. Nicodemus anſwered and ſaid unto him, [l] How can theſe things be? 10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, Art thou a maſter of Iſrael, and knoweſt not theſe things? 11. [m] Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, We ſpeak that we know, and teſtify that we have ſeen; and [n] ye receive not our witneſs. 12. If I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how ſhall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things. 13. And [o] no man hath aſcended up to heaven, [p] but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven. 14. ¶ And as [q] Moſes lifted up the ſerpent in the wilderneſs, even ſo [r] muſt the Son of man be lifted up: 15. That [s] whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have eternal life. 16. ¶ For [t] God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him, ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. 17. [u] For God ſent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be ſaved. 18. ¶ [x] He that believeth on him, is not condemned: but [y] he that believeth not, is condemned already, becauſe he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. 19. And this is the condemnation, [z] that light is come into the world, and men loved darkneſs rather than light, becauſe their deeds were evil. 20. For [a] every one that doth evil, hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, leſt his deeds ſhould be ‡ reproved. 21. But he that doth truth, cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifeſt, that they are wrought in God.

[a] Chap. vii. 48.
[b] Chap. vii. 50. & xix. 39.
[c] Chap. ix. 16, 33.
[d] Acts x. 38.
[e] 2 Cor. v. 17. Tit. iii. 5. Jam. i. 18. 1 Pet. i. 23.
† Or From above.
[f] Eph. v. 26. 1 Pet. iii. 21.
[g] Mat. iii. 11. Ver. 3. 1 Pet. i. 2.
[h] Rom. viii. 5. Ver. 31. 1 Cor. xv. 47.
[i] Eccleſ. xi. 5.
[k] 1 Cor. ii. 11. & xii. 11.
[l] Chap. vi. 52, 60.
[m] Chap. vii. 16. & viii. 28. & xii. 49. & xiv. 24.
[n] Ver. 32.
[o] Prov. xxx. 4. Chap. vi. 62. Eph. iv. 9.
[p] Chap. xvi. 28.
[q] Numb. xxi. 9.
[r] Chap. viii. 28. & xii. 32.
[s] Iſa. xlv. 22. Ver. 36. Chap. vi. 47. & xi. 26.
[t] Rom. v. 8. 1 John iv. 9.
[u] Luke ix. 56. Chap. v. 45. & viii. 15. & xii. 47. 1 John iv. 14.
[x] Chap. v. 24. & vi. 40, 47. & xx. 31.
[y] Mark xvi. 16.
[z] Chap. i. 4, 10, 11.
[a] Job xxiv. 13, &c. Eph. v. 13.
‡ Or diſcovered.

v. 1—21. Though not many mighty are called, we have here a ſingular inſtance of one made a monument of divine grace.

1. There was a man, of great note and eminence, of the Phariſees, the ſect which ever expreſſed the bittereſt enmity againſt our Lord, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews, a member of the ſanhedrim; the ſame came to Jeſus by night, ſollicitous to have ſome particular diſcourſe with him concerning the things he had heard him preach; and he choſe this time, as ſome ſuppoſe, out of ſhame and cowardice, as not daring to appear publickly with him for fear of the Jews; or becauſe this was the ſeaſon when Chriſt would be moſt at leiſure, being engaged all the day in publick, and when he might more freely and at large talk over with him the important points concerning which he deſired to be reſolved. With great reſpect he addreſſed him, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God: for no man can do theſe miracles that thou doſt, except God be with him. Theſe were ſuch credentials of his divine miſſion, and wrought with ſuch notorious evidence, that the more they were examined, the more forcibly they proved the author of them ſent from God. Note, (1.) The grace of Jeſus can reach thoſe whoſe condition in life is moſt dangerous, and their prejudices the ſtrongeſt againſt his goſpel. (2.) When the profeſſion of the true religion is reproachful and unfaſhionable, ſome, who dare not openly avow their ſentiments, in ſecret approve the truths which others deſpiſe, and will ſlip in among the faithful, if they cannot be ſeen, as Nicodemus by night. (3.) Chriſt is come to be a teacher of babes, to lead a dark world to the light of life, and guide the erring feet of ſinners into the paths of everlaſting peace. May we be humble ſcholars then, and learn of him!

2. In conſequence of the application of Nicodemus, Chriſt addreſſes him in the following inſtructive diſcourſe:

(1.) On the nature and neceſſity of regeneration. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, Except a man be born again, or from above, he cannot ſee the kingdom of God. Nicodemus, as the reſt of his countrymen, tinctured with the common prejudices concerning the Meſſiah's kingdom, ſuppoſed the ſeed of Abraham would be all admitted to an honourable place in it. But Chriſt ſtrikes at that radical miſtake; aſſuring him, that no man's external privileges, religious profeſſion, or moral attainments, availed any thing, if his heart and life were not effectually wrought upon by the regenerating influences of the Spirit of God. For, as we are born by nature corrupt and polluted with ſin, and ſpiritually dead in treſpaſſes, we muſt receive another, a new, a divine nature, the work of God, as much as the life which he firſt gave to the clay, in order that man might be a living ſoul. And, unleſs this ſupernatural change paſſes upon us, we can neither underſtand the nature of the Meſſiah's kingdom, nor receive any of the bleſſings and benefits which it was deſigned to convey to us.

Nicodemus, miſtaking Chriſt's meaning, and underſtanding the words in a literal ſenſe, expreſſes his ſurprize at the aſſertion, not comprehending how it was poſſible for a man, old as he was, to paſs the ſecond time through his mother's womb. In anſwer to his objection, Chriſt enforces and explains his declarations, Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, a truth that is of moſt infallible certainty, Except a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God: Chriſt's word, however ſtrange and unintelligible to the natural man, cannot change. There can be no entrance into glory, without that new birth which gives a meetneſs for it. The ſoul, by the powerful agency of the Spirit of God, muſt be cleanſed from its natural pollution, as water purifies the body from any filth it hath contracted; and by the ordinance of baptiſm, as the initiatory rite, regenerate ſouls are to be admitted into the viſible communion of the faithful. And the neceſſity of ſuch a ſpiritual change is evident, becauſe that which is born of the fleſh is fleſh: could a man a thouſand times paſs through the womb, he would come forth ſtill the ſame corrupted creature, unfit for the kingdom of God, man's nature being utterly ſenſual in his preſent fallen ſtate, and all his appetites, delights, and purſuits, being after the fleſh, and the things which gratify his beſtial part: ſo that the ſoul is utterly enſlaved, and the whole man fleſh and not ſpirit. Whilſt, on the contrary, that which is born of the Spirit is ſpirit: when the Holy Ghoſt works effectually on the heart, it is refined from the dregs of ſenſuality, the ſoul is reſtored to ſpiritual underſtanding, and the whole man, now brought under the influence of a new, divine, implanted principle of grace, becomes ſpiritual, in his affections, purſuits and deſigns, delivered from the bondage of baſe luſts and vile corruption into the glorious liberty of the ſons of God, and reſtored to a capacity of enjoying him. Marvel not therefore, adds the Lord, that I ſaid unto thee, Ye muſt be born again; nor, though we are ignorant of the manner in which this divine change is wrought, is that any objection to the thing: for, in the world around us, we ſee effects, the immediate cauſe of which we are ignorant of. As for inſtance, The wind bloweth where it liſteth, without controul from any creature, and thou heareſt the ſound thereof, but canſt not tell whence it cometh, nor whither it goeth: the effects produced by it are ſenſibly felt; but why it blows at one time ſtronger than at another, why from one point rather than another, where it begins and where it ends, theſe are ſecrets known only to him who bringeth the winds out of his treaſures. So is every one that is born of the Spirit: with ſuch ſovereignty doth the uncreated Spirit work, affecting the conſciences of ſome, and not of others; with power irreſiſtible bearing down every obſtruction; quickening, comforting, ſanctifying the ſinner's ſoul, and giving him bleſſed experience of his effectual power and influence; though he works myſteriouſly, and leaves the manner of his operations ſtill a ſecret to us.

(2.) When yet Nicodemus appeared ignorant, and queſtioned how theſe things could be; for to the natural man the things of the Spirit of God are fooliſhneſs; Chriſt proceeds to reprove his dulneſs, and to enlarge on the certainty and ſublimity of thoſe glorious truths which he advanced: Art thou a maſter in Iſrael, a famed teacher, and profeſſor of divinity, and knoweſt not theſe things? Note, It is a ſhame for thoſe who undertake to inſtruct others to be ignorant themſelves, and, whilſt they affect to paſs for men of deep learning and erudition, to be unacquainted with the moſt important truths that pertain unto ſalvation. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, We ſpeak that we do know: the truths Chriſt taught were of infallible certainty; he ſpoke as commiſſioned by his Father, and under the influences of the Spirit, in correſpondence with what all the prophets and John had before declared: and teſtify that we have ſeen; not ſpeaking on hearſay, but on the moſt undoubted evidence, and with the cleareſt aſſurance: and ye receive not our witneſs: ſuch was the blindneſs, ſuch the prejudices, that had ſpread over the Jews in general, and the Phariſees and rulers in particular, that they refuſed to receive and embrace the doctrines of ſalvation taught by the Son of God, though ſo infallibly true, ſo plainly delivered, and atteſted by ſuch miracles: ſo that they were without excuſe. As all infidels are, who refuſe to ſubmit to the evidence of revelation. If therefore I have told you earthly things, illuſtrating, with the familiar inſtances of water and the wind, the neceſſity of a ſpiritual change in the hearts of ſinners here below, and ye believe not, comprehend not the meaning, nor give credit to the truths advanced, how ſhall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things? of the more ſublime doctrines of the goſpel, the amazing union of the divine and human nature, the deſign of the incarnation of the Son of God; his ſufferings, death, exaltation; the nature of his ſpiritual kingdom, and of the beatific viſion: how much more muſt theſe be myſterious, when delivered in language ſuitable to the vaſt ſubject, if the plainer truths appear ſo difficult to be underſtood? For inſtance, No man hath aſcended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven: the prophets of God indeed had ſpoken under a divine inſpiration, and what they ſaid came from heaven; but none of them ever ſpoke of their own knowledge, nor had been with God in glory, acquainted with all the ſecrets of his will; this was the diſtinguiſhed privilege of the Son of man, the Meſſiah, who from eternity lay in the boſom of the Father, and was now come down from heaven, as a teacher eminently ſent from God; and who, though upon earth, was even then the Son of man which is in heaven; though in his human nature he ſtood and talked with Nicodemus, his divine nature filled heaven and earth, was every where preſent, and, in virtue of that communication of properties which ſubſiſts between the two natures, the Son of man, though on earth, was, as God, in heaven; as the Lord of life and glory is ſaid to be crucified, 1 Cor. ii. 8. and God, who is incorporeal, is ſaid to purchaſe the church with his own blood, Acts xx. 28. that which was done by him in one nature being aſcribed to him in the other. Note, (1.) There are myſteries above our comprehenſion, which are to be received on the evidence of God's word. Where reaſon fails, faith muſt be exerciſed. (2.) In all the humiliations of the Son of man, we muſt never forget that he is unchangeably the ſame, God over all, bleſſed for ever.

(3.) As the great prophet he proceeds to deſcribe the end of his incarnation, and the eternal bleſſedneſs of thoſe who truly believe in him. He came to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt, to heal our mortal wounds, and to recover our periſhing ſouls.

[1.] He came to heal our mortal wounds, as the antitype of the brazen ſerpent which Moſes in the wilderneſs lifted up, that thoſe who were ſtung by the fiery ſerpents might look and live. And as Moſes lifted up the ſerpent in the wilderneſs, even ſo muſt the Son of man be lifted up, that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. (1.) We are mortally ſtung by the old fiery ſerpent Satan, and the deadly poiſon of ſin is diffuſed through our nature; the wound is incurable, the torment intolerable and eternal, unleſs more than human help and healing be vouchſafed to us. (2). Chriſt is the only hope of the deſperate, the brazen ſerpent lifted up, for the healing of the nations, on the pole of the everlaſting goſpel, as crucified on a tree, but now exalted to the throne, bright-ſhining with beams of grace on every miſerable ſoul that turns the eye of faith towards him. (3.) It is looking to him alone which performs the wondrous cure. The ſoul that ſeeks to any other phyſician, or refuſes this ſimple method of cure, Look to me, and be ye ſaved, Iſa. xlv. 22. periſhes without remedy; whilſt faith infallibly brings health and healing: for, (4.) However obnoxious we are by ſin to the wrath of God, however deep our guilt, or aggravated our iniquities, he is a Saviour to the uttermoſt: whoſoever looks to him ſhall live, though, like the dying thief, reduced to the laſt gaſp; not only the chief of ſinners ſhall be reſcued from the eternal ruin he juſtly apprehends and fears, but ſhall have eternal life, entitled to all the bliſs and bleſſedneſs of glory, through the complete and finiſhed ſalvation which is in Jeſus Chriſt, and can never afterwards periſh.

[2.] He came to ſave our loſt ſouls by the ſacrifice of himſelf. For God ſo loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoſoever believeth in him ſhould not periſh, but have everlaſting life. (1.) Chriſt is the univerſal Saviour, not of the Jews only, but of the Gentiles alſo; and, as his free ſalvation is preached to all, whoſoever will is invited to come to him. They who reject his calls ſin againſt their own mercies. (2.) He is the only begotten of God, which beſpeaks his infinite dignity and all-ſufficiency to ſave thoſe for whoſe ſake he came into the world. (3.) The love of God in thinking upon us in our ruined ſtate, and ſending his Son to be the propitiation for our ſins, is the aſtoniſhment of angels, and ſhould be matter of our unceaſing wonder, praiſe, and adoration. (4). Whoſoever by faith receives the Lord Jeſus, as the Son of God and the Redeemer of loſt ſouls, placing their whole dependance on his blood and righteouſneſs, are ſure to obtain the remiſſion of all their ſins, and, in the world to come life everlaſting. For God ſent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, as the Jews ſuppoſed their Meſſiah would deſtroy the Gentile nations, and exalt them; but that the world through him might be ſaved. Even the vileſt and moſt guilty, who believe in him, whether Jews or Gentiles, may now through him obtain ſalvation; whilſt, out of him, ruin and deſpair muſt ſeize the whole fallen race. He that believeth on him is not condemned: there is no condemnation to them that are in Chriſt Jeſus; nor will any charge lie againſt thoſe whom God juſtifieth, and for whom the Saviour of ſinners ſhed his blood. But, (5.) Deſtruction inevitable and eternal muſt be the portion of thoſe who neglect or deſpiſe ſo great a ſalvation, he that believeth not the goſpel-word preached unto them, whether Jew or Gentile, is condemned already; lies at preſent under the curſe which is the wages of ſin, and is as ſurely a loſt ſoul, as when the ſentence ſhall be executed in the great day, becauſe he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. Unbelief is the great damning ſin: there can be no cure for thoſe who reject the only remedy; and when God hath been ſo rich in grace, as to give his only begotten Son, the baſeneſs of the ingratitude in rejecting him cannot but bring aggravated guilt and perdition on the ſinner's ſoul. And this is the greateſt and moſt fatal cauſe of their condemnation, that light is come into the world, the light of the glorious goſpel of Chriſt, in which he ſhines as the ſun of righteouſneſs ariſen to guide our feet into the ways of peace: and men, notwithſtanding, loved darkneſs rather than light. The Jews hold faſt their corrupt traditions; the Gentiles, their idolatrous ſuperſtitions; and both ſhun the light of truth, which makes manifeſt and condemns their works of darkneſs, becauſe their deeds are evil; therefore are they ſealed up under wrath; and ſuch wilful ignorance, and obſtinate rejection of the truth, muſt needs fill up the meaſure of their iniquities. (6.) This then will be the teſt between the wilfully impenitent and the ſincere enquirer after truth. For every one that doth evil; makes it his practice and his delight, and is wedded to his ſins; hateth the light; his carnal mind is at enmity with Chriſt and his goſpel; neither cometh to the light, but ſhuns the means of grace, the miniſtrations of the faithful, and the company and converſe of ſuch whoſe words and works would be a rebuke to his darkneſs; leſt his deeds ſhould be reproved; leſt his darling corruptions ſhould be held up to him in their own hideous form, his danger faithfully ſet before him, and his conſcience wounded with remorſe. But he that doth the truth, in ſimplicity following the mind of God, as far as it is revealed to him, open to conviction, and willing to be ſearched, cometh to the light of God's word, deſirous to know, and diſpoſed to follow it, however contrary to his own natural inclination or worldly intereſts; that his deeds may be made manifeſt, his heart examined, his principles brought to the teſt, his mind enlightened, and his conduct regulated; ſo that it may appear he is now under the influence of a regenerate ſpirit, deſigning in all his works the divine glory, and evidencing that they are wrought in God, by his gracious influence, according to his holy will, and in a ſtate of union and communion with him. Bleſſed and happy are the people who are in ſuch a caſe!

22. ¶ After theſe things came Jeſus and his diſciples into the land of Judea, and there he tarried with them, and [b] baptized. 23. ¶ And [c] John alſo was baptizing in Enon, near to Salim, becauſe there was much water there: and they came, and were baptized. 24. For [d] John was not yet caſt into priſon. 25. ¶ Then there aroſe a queſtion between ſome of John's diſciples and the Jews, about purifying. 26. And they came unto John, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, [e] to whom thou beareſt witneſs, behold, the ſame baptizeth, and all men come to him. 27. John anſwered and ſaid, [f] A man can † receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven. 28. Ye yourſelves bear me witneſs, that I ſaid, [g] I am not the Chriſt, but that [h] I am ſent before him. 29. He that hath the bride, is [i] the bridegroom: but [k] the friend of the bridegroom, which ſtandeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly becauſe of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled. 30. He muſt increaſe, but I muſt decreaſe. 31. He that cometh from above, [l] is above all: [m] he that is of the earth, is earthly, and ſpeaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven, [n] is above all. 32. And [o] what he hath ſeen and heard, that he teſtifieth; and no man receiveth his teſtimony. 33. He that hath received his teſtimony, [p] hath ſet to his ſeal, that God is true. 34. For he whom God hath ſent, ſpeaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit [q] by meaſure unto him. 35. [r] The Father loveth the Son, and [s] hath given all things into his hand. 36. [t] He that believeth on the Son, hath everlaſting life; and he that believeth not the Son, ſhall not ſee life; but the wrath of God abideth on him.

[b] Chap. iv. 2.
[c] Mat. iii. 6. Mark i. 4. Luke iii. 3.
[d] Mat. xiv. 3.
[e] Chap. i. 7, 15, 27, 34.
[f] 1 Cor. iv. 7. Heb. v. 4. Jam. i. 17.
† Or, take unto himſelf.
[g] Chap. i. 20, 27.
[h] Mal. iii. 1. Mark i. 2. Luke i. 17.
[i] 2 Cor. xi. 2.
[k] Cant. v. 1.
[l] Chap. i. 15, 27.
[m] Chap. viii. 23. 1 Cor. xv. 47.
[n] Eph. i 21. 1 Pet. iii. 22.
[o] Ver. 11. Chap. vii. 16. & viii. 26. & xii. 49.
[p] Rom. iii. 4. 1 John v. 10.
[q] Chap. i. 16.
[r] Chap. v. 20.
[s] Dan. vii. 14. Mat. xi. 27. & xxviii. 18. Chap. xiii. 3. Heb. ii. 8.
[t] Hab. ii. 4. Ver. 15, 16. Rom. i. 17. 1 John v. 10.

v. 22—36. When our Lord had finiſhed his diſcourſe with Nicodemus, we are told,

1. Whither he went, and what he did. He left Jeruſalem, and travelled into the country of Judea, where he continued ſome time, preaching the goſpel of the kingdom, and by the ordinance of baptiſm, which his apoſtles adminiſtred, admitted thoſe who profeſſed their faith in him into the number of his avowed diſciples.

2. John continued his miniſtry in another part of the country with ſucceſs. He did not join with Jeſus, leſt their enemies ſhould pretend there was a combination between them; nor did he deſiſt from his labours, though he knew his ſuperior was now gone forth to miniſter, but continued to preach and baptize all who came to him, having fixed himſelf at a place where were many ſtreams of water, that rendered it convenient to adminiſter baptiſm to the multitudes which reſorted to him; for as yet he was not caſt into priſon, as he ſhortly afterwards was, and a period put to his farther uſefulneſs. Note, The work of the miniſtry is wide; there is room for the exerciſe of all our ſeveral talents, nor muſt any be diſcouraged by their own comparative inferiority: they are ſuited for their place, and may hope to ſee their labours ſucceſsful.

3. A conteſt aroſe between ſome of John's diſciples and the Jews, concerning purifying. It would ſeem as if the diſciples of John exalted their maſter's baptiſm above the ceremonial ablutions of Moſes, or the purifications enjoined by the traditions of the elders; whilſt many of the Jews probably contended for their own more antient and authoriſed cuſtoms, and looked upon John's baptiſm as an innovation; ſuggeſting that there would be no end to ſuch novelties, as another perſon, one Jeſus, was as much or more followed than their maſter, and his diſciples would cry up his baptiſm as better than John's.

4. Puzzled with this difficulty, John's diſciples carry the caſe to their maſter, and, jealous for his honour and their own, who were connected with him, report with concern what they had lately heard, and ſaid unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, and, among others, received baptiſm; to whom thou beareſt witneſs, pointing him out with peculiar diſtinction; behold, the ſame baptizeth, ſetting up himſelf as a rival to thee; and all men come to him. They look upon it as a piece of preſumption in Jeſus to aſſume the Baptiſt's office, and ungrateful to make uſe of the teſtimony which John had born, in prejudice to him: nor could they without envy behold their maſter eclipſed by him whom they regarded as lately but his diſciple, and as one of themſelves. So ready are good men to be under the temptation of a party-ſpirit, and to feel unbecoming jealouſies, and riſings of envy againſt ſuperior excellence, which ſeems to eclipſe their own.

5. John's anſwer ſhewed what ſpirit he was of. Far from envying Jeſus as his rival, he rejoices in his ſucceſs; and confirming the teſtimony he had before born to him, chearfully turns over to him all his intereſt in Iſrael.

John anſwered and ſaid, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven. God gives to every man ſeverally as he wills, gifts, endowments, and ſucceſs. If he is pleaſed to beſtow more on one than another, there is no room for complaint: whatever our meaſure is, it is a matter of favour to us, and we have reaſon to be thankful, nor ought to envy the ſuperior honours or uſefulneſs of others: and this conſideration ſhould in every caſe ſilence every murmur of diſcontent or envy. The words alſo may have another reference, and intimate, that it was evident the plaineſt truths were inſufficient, unleſs they were favoured with divine illumination; elſe could not his diſciples, after what he had ſo repeatedly ſpoken of Chriſt, have ſtumbled at the riſing fame of Jeſus, and the application of the multitudes to him. And this is a univerſal truth, that unleſs a man be taught of God, he never can underſtand and heartily embrace the truths of God, which muſt be ſpiritually diſcerned.

He appeals to what he had uniformly advanced from the beginning. Ye yourſelves bear me witneſs, that I ſaid, I am not the Chriſt, but that I am ſent before him. All the honour he had ever aſſumed was that of being his harbinger, and going before the face of the Lord to prepare his way: if therefore he was now arrived, his forerunner, far from being grieved, muſt rejoice in it. He that hath the bride, is the bridegroom; Chriſt hath alone the right over his church, and to him muſt the gathering of the people be. He is come from heaven to eſpouſe it to himſelf, the heavenly bridegroom; and having loved his people from eternity, draws their hearts to him in faith and love. There can be no reaſon therefore for murmurs or jealouſy; but, far otherwiſe, the friend of the bridegroom, as he was, which ſtandeth and heareth him, waiting upon him as his attendant, helping forward his intereſts, and deſiring to advance his honour, rejoiceth greatly becauſe of the bridegroom's voice, when he comes to take his bride, and iſſues his orders and inſtructions to thoſe who wait in his train. This my joy therefore is fulfilled, to hear that Chriſt appears publicly, inviting his bride, his redeemed people, to come to him, and that multitudes flock to him, embracing the offers of his grace. And thus doth every faithful miniſter ſtand before the great bridegroom of ſouls, to receive his commands, and deliver the meſſages of love to his church; delighted to behold the happy effects produced by them, when his people become a willing people in the day of his power; and rejoicing greatly in every ſoul converted to Jeſus, and brought by faith and love to cleave to him alone.

Far from envying the riſing glory of his Lord, John beholds with pleaſure the fulfilment of the divine decree. He muſt increaſe, but I muſt decreaſe; his fame muſt ſpread, his glory be manifeſted, his diſciples multiply; and to him doth John gladly turn over all his intereſt, content to fade before his ſuperior brightneſs, as the morning ſtar diſappears before the riſing ſun, and well-pleaſed to ſee that kingdom of the Meſſiah eſtabliſhed and increaſing, that muſt ſpread from pole to pole, and endure to the end of time. And to behold this, cannot but give the moſt ſingular delight to every faithful miniſter.

The glory of his perſon, and the ſurpaſſing excellence of his office, cannot but give him this ſuperiority. He that cometh from above, is above all: his nature and original being divine, he muſt needs have the indiſputed precedency, and ſupreme authority, over all other meſſengers ſent from God, who ſpeak only in his name, and by his commiſſion. He that is of the earth, and ſuch are the greateſt ſaints and prophets, is earthly, and ſpeaketh of the earth: as he is ſprung from the duſt, and muſt return to the duſt, he is naturally attached to earthly things; his conceptions low and groveling; and, when even under divine inſpiration, unable adequately to expreſs the ſublime myſteries of infinite wiſdom; whilſt he that cometh from heaven, is above all. Contraſted with the teachings of Jeſus, in whom from eternity dwelt all the treaſures of wiſdom, as being one of the ſacred ſelf-exiſtent Godhead; the wiſdom of the wiſeſt is weakneſs, and their ſpeech not to be compared with his preaching. And the reaſon is evident, becauſe what he hath ſeen and heard, that he teſtifieth; from the moſt intimate knowledge of the divine nature and counſels, both as God incarnate, and in the human nature poſſeſſing the Spirit without meaſure. But ſuch was the blindneſs and obſtinacy of thoſe to whom he ſpoke, that, though he was greatly attended, and John's diſciples apprehended all who followed him believed in him, he lets them know the caſe was far otherwiſe: no man receiveth his teſtimony; none, comparatively ſpeaking; ſo few of the multitudes who came to him would be found his real diſciples. Many are called by the goſpel, but few truly converted by it; bleſſed and happy however are thoſe who receive it in the light and love of it; for he that hath received his teſtimony, hath ſet to his ſeal, that God is true. He ſubſcribes to the faithfulneſs and veracity of God, in having fulfilled all the prophecies concerning the Meſſiah; and embraces, with full confidence of their completion, the gracious promiſes of his goſpel, as being all Yea and Amen in Chriſt Jeſus. And herein God is glorified, when we truſt our everlaſting hopes upon the word he hath delivered to us by his Son; for he whom God hath ſent, ſpeaketh the words of God; all his language ſpoke the divinity reſident in him, and no word of human infirmity ever dropped from his lips; for God giveth not the Spirit by meaſure unto him. All the other prophets, who were ſent of God, poſſeſſed but a meaſure of the Spirit, and only ſpoke under his immediate inſpiration on ſome particular occaſions, being at other times left to ſpeak their own words; but he in whom dwelt the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily, ever ſpoke the words of God. The Father loveth the Son with a peculiar and tranſcendent regard, as being poſſeſſed of the ſame nature and perfections. He delights in his Son's undertaking, as Mediator, and hath given all things into his hand; inveſting him in his human nature with all power and authority in heaven and in earth. All the great affairs of the kingdom of providence, grace, and glory, are committed to his management, that his enemies may feel his vengeance; that his faithful ones may experience his bleſſing, protection, and care; and all at laſt appear before him as their eternal Judge. He that believeth, therefore, on the Son, receives him as God manifeſt in the fleſh, and reſts his hopes on the rich grace revealed in the goſpel alone, hath everlaſting life; he ſhall not only hereafter be put in poſſeſſion of it, but hath actually already in himſelf the beginnings and foretaſtes of it, and poſſeſſes that title to it, confirmed by the immutable oath and promiſe of God, which never can be loſt: and, on the contrary, he that believeth not the Son, rejecting his divine authority and miſſion, incredulous of his word, and diſobedient to his will; ſhall not ſee life: whilſt he remains under the power of unbelief, he is dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, and nothing but miſery inconceiveable and eternal awaits him, becauſe the wrath of God, which is for ever wrath to come, abideth on him. How terrible is the end of all who believe not God, and obey not the goſpel of his dear Son!

CHAP. IV.

In this chapter we have Chriſt, 1. Departing out of Judea, ver. 1—3. 2. Paſſing through Samaria, (1.) His coming into Samaria, ver. 4—6. (2.) His diſcourſe with the Samaritan woman at a well, ver. 7—26. (3.) The notice which the woman gave of him to the city, ver. 27—30. (4.) Chriſt's talk with his diſciples in the mean time, ver. 31—38. (5.) The good effect of this among the Samaritans, ver. 39—42. 3. We find him reſiding for ſome time in Galilee, ver. 43—46. and his curing of a nobleman's ſon there that was at death's door, ver. 46—54.

1. WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Phariſees had heard that Jeſus made and [a] baptized more diſciples than John, 2. (Though Jeſus himſelf baptized not, but his diſciples) 3. [b] He left Judea, and departed again into Galilee.

v. 1—3. Judea being now become a dangerous abode, thro' the malice of the Phariſees, Our Lord retires into Galilee, that he might be farther removed from Jeruſalem, where his bitter enemies chiefly reſided. He had continued about eight months (See ver. 35.) in Judea; and as his preaching had been very ſucceſsful, and great multitudes followed him, who were admitted by baptiſm into the number of his profeſſing diſciples, he knew the wicked deſigns which his Phariſaical enemies had formed, on the information they received concerning his growing fame and intereſt among the people, as if he far exceeded John in his popularity and the number of converts, and therefore was to be apprehended as a more dangerous rival than the Baptiſt. Though in ſome particulars the information given to the Phariſees ſeems to be falſe; for as it is not probable, that they who were baptized by the diſciples of Jeſus were more than thoſe whom John had baptized; ſo it is certain, that Jeſus baptized not, but his diſciples, maintaining the dignity of his character, as ſent to baptize with the Holy Ghoſt, and far ſuperior to John, or any others. Or it may be alſo to remove all emulation among his diſciples, which might ariſe, if he baptized ſome, and his ſervants others: or to ſhew, that the validity of the ordinance depended not on the worthineſs of the miniſtry, but on his bleſſing and inſtitution. Note, (1.) The enemies of the goſpel are ever envious and exaſperated at its ſucceſs. (2.) When danger threatens, it is prudent to avoid the ſtorm by flight, where duty does not require us to ſtand and ſuffer.

4. And he muſt needs go through Samaria. 5. Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground [c] that Jacob gave to his ſon Joſeph. 6. Now Jacob's well was there. Jeſus therefore being wearied with his journey, ſat thus on the well: and it was about the ſixth hour. 7. There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water: Jeſus ſaith unto her, Give me to drink. 8. For his diſciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat. 9. Then ſaith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it that thou being a Jew, aſkeſt drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for [d] the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans. 10. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, If thou kneweſt the gift of God, and who it is that ſaith to thee, Give me to drink; thou wouldeſt have aſked of him, and he would have given thee [e] living water. 11. The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, thou haſt nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then haſt thou that living water? 12. Art thou greater than our father Jacob, which gave us the well, and drank thereof himſelf, and his children, and his cattle? 13. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto her, Whoſoever drinketh of this water ſhall thirſt again: 14. But [f] whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never thirſt: but the water that I ſhall give him, [g] ſhall be in him a well of water ſpringing up into everlaſting life. 15. The woman ſaith unto him, [h] Sir, give me this water, that I thirſt not, neither come hither to draw. 16. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Go, call thy huſband, and come hither. 17. The woman anſwered and ſaid, I have no huſband. Jeſus ſaid unto her, Thou haſt well ſaid, I have no huſband: 18. For thou haſt had five huſbands, and he whom thou now haſt is not thy huſband: in that ſaidſt thou truly. 19. The woman ſaith unto him, Sir, [i] I perceive that thou art a prophet. 20. Our fathers worſhipped in this mountain; and ye ſay, that [k] in Jeruſalem is the place where men ought to worſhip. 21. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman, believe me, the hour cometh, [l] when ye ſhall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jeruſalem worſhip the Father. 22. Ye worſhip [m] ye know not what: we know what we worſhip: for [n] ſalvation is of the Jews. 23. But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worſhippers ſhall

[a] Chap. iii. 22, 26.

[b] Mat. x. 23.

[c] Gen. xxxiii. 19. & xlviii. 22. Joſh. xxiv. 32.

[d] 2 Kings xvii. 24. Luke ix. 52, 53. Acts x. 28.

[e] Jer. ii. 13. Zech. xiii. 1. & xiv. 8.

[f] Chap. vi. 35, 58.

[g] Chap. vii. 38.

[h] Chap. vi. 34.

[i] Luke vii. 16. & xxiv. 19. Chap. vi. 14.

[k] Deut. xii. 5, 11. 1 Kings ix. 3. 2 Chron. vii. 12.

[l] Mal. i. 11. 1 Tim. ii. 8.

[m] 2 Kings xvii. 29.

[n] Iſa. ii. 3. Rom. ix. 4, 5.

Phil. iii. 3. worſhip the Father [o] in ſpirit and [p] in truth: for the p Heb. x. 22. Father ſeeketh ſuch to worſhip him. 24. [q] God is a q 2 Cor. iii. 17. Spirit, and they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth. 25. The woman ſaith unto him, I know that Meſſias cometh which is called Chriſt: when r Ver. 29, 39. he is come, [r] he will tell us all things. 26. Jeſus ſaith s Chap. ix. 37. unto her, [s] I that ſpeak unto thee, am he.

v. 4—26. As Samaria lay between Judea and Galilee, he muſt neceſſarily paſs through it in his way thither, unleſs he took a large compaſs about. That country was inhabited by the poſterity of the colonies which the king of Aſſyria had planted there after the captivity; and being mingled with many apoſtate Jews, became a mongrel race, who, though retaining many heathen idolatries and ſuperſtitions, profeſſed themſelves worſhippers of Iſrael's God, and received the books of Moſes; were circumciſed, and erected a temple on mount Gerizim, in oppoſition to that at Jeruſalem, pretending that this was the ſpot where God ought to be worſhipped. Hence aroſe the bittereſt animoſity between the Samaritans and the Jews, who regarded them as the moſt abominable of mankind. In this journey we are told,

1. The place where our Lord ſtayed to reſt himſelf a while, being wearied with his journey. It was by a well-ſide belonging to a city of Samaria, called Sychar, (or Shechem, as is ſuppoſed) which city bordered on a piece of land which Jacob, having purchaſed of the ſons of Hamor, had given to his ſon Joſeph, (See Gen. xlviii. 22. Joſh. xxiv. 32.) The well was called Jacob's, either becauſe he dug it, or uſed it for himſelf and family. Our Lord here appears truly man, ſubject to our ſinleſs infirmities, wearineſs, thirſt, and hunger; for it became him in all things to become like unto his brethren, ſin only excepted. It was about the ſixth hour, or mid-day, according to the Jewiſh computation of time; or ſix in the evening, if we follow the Roman method of reckoning.

2. The diſcourſe which paſſed between Jeſus and a woman of Samaria. She happened juſt at this time to come to draw water: ſo divine Providence ordered it, leading her to Chriſt in a way ſhe knew not, (See Gen. xix. 2. xxiv. 11. Exod. ii. 15.) The diſciples being gone into the city to buy meat, he was alone, and is pleaſed graciouſly to improve that moment's leiſure for the benefit of this poor ſtranger's ſoul, ſhe being one of thoſe loſt ſheep he came to ſeek and ſave.

He addreſſed her firſt, begging a little water to drink; for though he was rich, for our ſakes he became thus poor, and condeſcends to aſk a cup of cold water. Yet he had a farther end in view, even to engage her in converſation, and thereby to effect the purpoſes of his grace towards her. Occaſional diſcourſe with ſtrangers hath been often found to have a bleſſed and abiding influence, and ſhould encourage us, when travelling, to open our mouths, and ſpeak a word for God, and for immortal ſouls.

The woman expreſſed her ſurprize, that he who appeared to be a Jew, ſhould deign to receive any act of kindneſs at the hands of a Samaritan; or that he ſhould expect the leaſt favour would be granted from one to the other, where the enmity between the two nations was ſo bitter and irreconcileable, as to cut off all manner of friendly intercourſe between them. Religious quarrels are thus uſually ſeen to be the moſt implacable; but where the ſpirit of bigotry and uncharitableneſs dwells, whichever ſide is right in the point diſputed, the ſpirit of both is wrong, and utterly oppoſite to pure religion and undefiled.

Waving the ſubject of the controverſy between the Jews and Samaritans, Chriſt deſigned to lead her to the knowledge of himſelf, and therefore replied, If thou kneweſt the gift of God, what an amazing inſtance of his love he hath given in ſending his own Son into the world; and who it is that ſaith to thee, Give me to drink; even that divine perſon now become incarnate; thou wouldſt have laid aſide all theſe national prejudices, and have aſked of him, and he would have given thee living water; thoſe gifts of grace, and comforts of his ſpirit, which to the ſinner's ſoul are more deſireable than the cooleſt and moſt refreſhing ſtream to the parched throat and weary traveller. Note, (1.) Chriſt is the fountain of gardens, and well of living waters, open for every poor ſinner, and freely given, that whoſoever will, may come unto him, and drink of the riches of his grace. (2.) Many careleſsly diſregard the invaluable bleſſings of the goſpel, becauſe they perceive not their excellence, nor their own want of them. (3.) They who would obtain the bleſſings of grace from Jeſus, and his holy Spirit, muſt ſeek them in importunate prayer; and he who is faithful and true, hath promiſed, that none ſuch ſhall aſk in vain.

The woman miſtaking Chriſt's meaning, and taking his diſcourſe literally, with ſome ſort of diſdain anſwered, Sir, thou haſt nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then haſt thou that living water? and therefore concludes his boaſts were abſurd, and his offers a mere jeſt. They who are wholly taken up with the objects of ſenſe, have no underſtanding of ſpiritual things; they are fooliſhneſs to them: the hidden ſprings of grace in Chriſt being unſeen, are diſbelieved. Beſides, ſhe regards it as a great piece of preſumption in him, to prefer any other waters before thoſe of a well ſo highly diſtinguiſhed. Art thou greater than our father Jacob, from whom we Samaritans, as well as you Jews, claim our deſcent, which gave us this well, and drank thereof himſelf, and his children, and his cattle? Vain boaſts theſe! when they had ſo poor a title to claim kindred with the patriarch, and were no better than uſurpers of that country, which they pretended came to them by gift from Jacob to Joſeph, and ſo in a right line of deſcent to them. The bittereſt enemies of the church thus often uſurp, and would monopolize its privileges.

Though ſhe had ſpoken fooliſhly and perverſely, Chriſt kindly bore with her, and continued his diſcourſe, ſaying, Whoſoever drinketh of this water ſhall thirſt again; this was but common water, and could only ſlake the preſent thirſt, which muſt ſoon return: but whoſoever drinketh of the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall never thirſt. All the comforts of the world are inſufficient to give any abiding ſatisfaction; Chriſt alone can beſtow the ſubſtantial portion on the ſoul. They who pant after the earth, and its enjoyments, drink and thirſt again; but the water that I ſhall give him, ſhall be in him a well of water ſprinking up into everlaſting life. Such is Chriſt, when formed in the believer's heart. [1.] He delivers the ſoul from the dominion of all the former unſatiable appetites and inclinations after ſenſual objects. [2.] He furniſhes us with continual ſupplies of grace and conſolation from himſelf, the everflowing, overflowing fountain of mercies; ſo that in our heavenly journey we can never faint nor be weary, drinking of theſe living ſtreams, as of the water from the rock, which followed Iſrael's camp through the deſart. [3.] Wherever his grace is thus implanted in the ſoul, it bears the affections heavenward, and never fails till it is conſummated in glory everlaſting.

The woman, either ſeriouſly deſiring what, could it be poſſeſſed, would ſave her ſo much trouble, or ridiculing pretenſions ſhe had no apprehenſion he could make good, replied, Sir, give me this water, that I thirſt not, neither come hither to draw.

To impreſs deeper ſeriouſneſs upon her ſoul, or to convince her of the dignity of his character, of which ſhe was not at all apprized, Jeſus turned the diſcourſe to another topic, which he knew muſt nearly and deeply affect her, and bringing her ſin home to her conſcience, would engage her to embrace him as her Saviour. Therefore he ſaith unto her, Go, call thy huſband, and come hither. Conſcious of the guilty ſtate in which ſhe at preſent lived, ſhe wanted to conceal her ſhame, and ſaid, I have no huſband, conceiving it impoſſible for him to detect the lie. But, to her amazement, ſhe finds him intimately acquainted with all the moſt ſecret tranſactions of her life, which he lays before her. Thou haſt well ſaid, I have no huſband; ſo far is true; for thou haſt had five huſbands, from whom, probably for her adulterous conduct, ſhe had been ſucceſſively divorced; and he whom thou now haſt, is not thy huſband: in that ſaidſt thou truly, the perſon with whom ſhe now cohabited, not being married to her, or her former huſbands being yet living. He doth not reproach her either with her evaſion or lewdneſs, but rather leaves it to her conſcience to make the application. Gentle reproofs, by inſinuation, are often more effectual than more immediate and rough rebuke.

Struck with what ſhe heard, and convicted in her own conſcience, ſhe would willingly have turned off the diſcourſe from ſo painful a ſubject; and perſuaded, by what he had told her, of his more than human knowledge, ſhe propoſes to him the grand point in debate between the Jews and Samaritans: Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet. Our fathers worſhipped in this mountain; there Abraham built an altar (Gen. xii. 6, 7.) and the tribe of Joſeph ſtood, when the bleſſings and curſes were pronounced by the tribes on mount Ebal and Gerizim; and therefore on this mountain Gerizim, the Samaritans inſiſted ſacrifices and offering ſhould alone be offered to God, in the temple which they built there: and ye, that are Jews, ſay, that in Jeruſalem is the place where men ought to worſhip, at the temple on Mount Zion, where alone the oblations on God's altar are accepted; and therefore ſhe wiſhed, that he, who appeared ſo able, would reſolve her in this important point. That God ſhould be worſhipped, there was no doubt: they who live in the neglect of his worſhip, are worſe than Jews or Samaritans. The queſtion was, Where was the place of divine appointment? and herein ſhe did well to improve the preſent opportunity in converſe about divine things, when ſhe had with her ſo able an adviſer.

Jeſus kindly leads her even farther than her enquiry reached. He ſaith unto her, Woman, believe me, and, ſince you eſteem me a prophet, weigh well what I am now about to declare, the hour cometh, when a final period ſhall be put to all ceremonial diſtinctions, and the peculiar holineſs of places ſet apart for the worſhip of the Divine Being; when ye ſhall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jeruſalem, worſhip the Father; that is to ſay, excluſively; ſince under the goſpel diſpenſation every place was alike acceptable to God, where holy hands were lifted up without wrath or doubting; and ſhortly both the temple at Gerizim and on mount Zion would be made deſolate, and no ſacrifices be any longer offered there. Indeed at preſent the Samaritans were wholly wrong. Ye worſhip ye know not what; ignorant of the true God, (2 Kings xvii. 26.) regarding him as a local deity, and debaſing the worſhip which they pretended to pay him, with idolatrous ſuperſtitions. We know what we worſhip; for God is known in Iſrael; and he, as one of that nation after the fleſh, reckoned himſelf among the true worſhippers, who paid their adorations according to the divine preſcription, and were poſſeſſed of that revelation which he had been graciouſly pleaſed to make of himſelf in his ſacred oracles. For ſalvation is of the Jews; the promiſes of ſalvation were peculiarly made to them; the means of grace confined for the moſt part to them; and he who came to be the ſalvation of the ends of the earth, ſprang from them. But, though in this reſpect the Samaritans were utterly wrong, and not to be compared with Abraham's true deſcendants, yet theſe diſtinctions of nations and places were now about to ceaſe; the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worſhippers ſhall worſhip the Father in ſpirit and in truth. The place of worſhip is now become indifferent; the ſpirit and temper of the worſhipper alone makes the acceptable ſervice. All carnal ordinances are aboliſhed, and a ſpiritual worſhip is introduced, wherein the heart, under the powerful influences of the Holy Ghoſt, muſt be lifted up in faith and love to God; and in truth, with ſimplicity and godly ſincerity, according to the divine inſtitution, and through Chriſt alone, who is the way, the truth, and the life; for the father ſeeketh ſuch to worſhip him: he will graciouſly accept their ſervices, and can be pleaſed with no other; and ſuch worſhippers by his grace he faſhions and finds, though few, compared with the formal, lifeleſs, hypocritical, or ignorant worſhippers, who are utter ſtrangers to ſuch ſpirituality. For God is a Spirit, of infinite perfections, incorporeal, inviſible, eternal, omniſcient; requiring not the adoration of the lip or the knee, but of the heart; and they that worſhip him, muſt worſhip him in ſpirit and in truth; without which, the place, the form, the manner of our religious worſhip, avails nothing, and are in his view of no account. And what Chriſt ſaith to her is an eternal truth, and merits our moſt ſerious notice and regard, that ſo we may not mock God, and deceive ourſelves, when we approach him in the ordinances of his worſhip.

The woman, though unable to object to the truths here advanced, yet profeſſes to ſuſpend her judgment till he ſhould come, who would ſet all things right. She ſaith unto him, I know that Meſſias cometh, (which is called, in the Greek, Chriſt, or the anointed), this expectation being generally entertained by the Samaritans, as well as Jews. When he is come, whom we expect as ready to appear, he will tell us all things; will put an end to our controverſies, clear up our doubts, and give us a diſtinct knowledge of all the will of God. Hereupon Jeſus, in anſwer to her expectation of the Meſſiah's coming, plainly declares to her his character; I that ſpeak unto thee, am he: ſo much nearer to us is the dear Saviour often than we are aware. Speak, Lord, to my heart, and make me to know that thou art with me, in me!

27. ¶ And upon this came his diſciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman: yet no man ſaid, What ſeekeſt thou? or Why talkeſt thou with her? 28. The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and ſaith to the men, 29. Come, ſee a man [t] which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Chriſt? 30. Then they went out of the city, and came unto him. 31. ¶ In the mean while his diſciples prayed him, ſaying, Maſter, eat. 32. But he ſaid unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of. 33. Therefore ſaid the diſciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat? 34. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [u] My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work. 35. Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harveſt? behold, I ſay unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for [x] they are white already to harveſt. 36. And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that both he that ſoweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoice together. 37. And herein is that ſaying true, One ſoweth, and another reapeth. 38. I ſent you to reap that whereon ye beſtowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entred into their labours. 39. ¶ And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him, for the ſaying of the woman, which teſtified, [y] He told me all that ever I did. 40. So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they beſought him, that he would tarry with them: and he abode there two days. 41. And many more believed, becauſe of his own word: 42. And ſaid unto the woman, Now we believe, not becauſe of thy ſaying: for [z] we have heard him ourſelves, and know that this is indeed the Chriſt, the Saviour of the world.

[t] Ver. 25.

[u] Job xxiii. 12. Chap. vi. 38.

[x] Mat. ix. 37. Luke x. 2.

[y] Ver. 29, 42.

[z] Chap. xvii. 8.

v. 27—42. Juſt as the Lord had ſo far advanced in his diſcourſe, and manifeſted his glorious character to this poor Samaritan, we are told,

1. The interruption given to the converſation by the arrival of the diſciples, who had been ſent to procure proviſions; and, influenced by the common Jewiſh prejudices, they marvelled to ſee him thus engaged with a Samaritan woman. Yet, ſubmitting to his will and wiſdom, and with deepeſt reverence ſilent before him, none dared preſume to aſk him, what he ſought of the woman, or what he ſaid to her. Note, We may not queſtion the Lord concerning any of the diſpenſations of his providence or grace, but reſt aſſured that he doth all things well.

2. Deeply convinced, by what Jeſus had ſpoken, of his being indeed the Meſſiah, with eagerneſs and joy the woman ran back to the city, leaving her water-pot behind her, careleſs about that, when greater concerns engaged her ſoul; and ſaid to the men, the inhabitants of the place, Come; opportunity is precious, and not a moment to be loſt: come, ſee a man which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Chriſt? He told me ſuch ſecret paſſages of my life, which none but God could know, and hath impreſſed ſuch a ſenſe of them on my conſcience, as fully convinces me he is the promiſed Meſſiah; haſte therefore to him, and judge for yourſelves, that you may be convinced alſo. Note, (1.) They who run on Chriſt's errands, gladly diſincumber themſelves of every thing which would retard their ſpeed, and ſit looſe to all they leave behind them. (2.) When we have ourſelves taſted that the Lord is gracious, we cannot but delight to invite others to come and ſee how good he is, and to partake with us in his rich mercies. (3.) We never know Chriſt truly, till experimentally feeling the convictions of his word and Spirit, and brought to a deep and humbling diſcovery of our ſins, we feel the neceſſity of that ſalvation which he brings.

3. Multitudes on this ſtrange report, bad as the woman's character had been, reſolved to go and ſee for themſelves; no doubt inviſibly drawn alſo by the Saviour's grace to come to him, who had ſuch ſignal mercies in ſtore for them.

4. Chriſt in the mean time improved the interval in profitable diſcourſe with his diſciples. So ſet was his mind on the bleſſed work before him, that, though hungry, he forgat for a while to eat his bread. The diſciples preſſed him, as weary, and faſting too long, to eat of the proviſion they had brought; but he ſaid unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of. The gracious work begun on the heart of this poor Samaritan woman, and the proſpect of multitudes flocking towards him, were more delightful and refreſhing to his ſoul, than the richeſt entertainment to his body. The diſciples, who underſtood him literally, with ſurprize ſaid one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat? ſo dull were they of underſtanding. But their Maſter ſoon corrected their miſtake, ſaying unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that ſent me, and to finiſh his work; this is my greateſt ſatisfaction, to be engaged in the bleſſed work of ſeeking and ſaving that which was loſt, for which great end I came into the world, and from which I ſhall never deſiſt till it is compleated; and what was his delight ſhould be theirs, as the huſbandman labours with ſatisfaction in the view of the approaching harveſt. Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harveſt? Doth this joyous ſeaſon pleaſe you in the proſpect? Behold, an infinitely better is in view; I ſay unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields, (where probably multitudes of the Samaritans now appeared in view), for they are white already to harveſt; immortal ſouls are ready to be gathered into the goſpel church, and therefore this is no time to eat and drink, but to riſe and labour. And, for an inducement hereunto, he ſuggeſts the glorious recompenſe of reward, which would be the wages of their fidelity: He that reapeth, receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto eternal life; the wages of preſent comfort increaſing ſtrength and ſucceſs in his labours, and in the world to come life everlaſting: and this not only for himſelf, but for many of thoſe among whom he miniſters; for he ſhall not only ſave his own ſoul, but thoſe that hear him, 1 Tim. iv. 16. the bleſſed effects of which will be, that he that ſoweth, and he that reapeth, may rejoice together. The miniſters who begin, and they who carry on the good work, will alike partake of the comfort of it. And herein is that proverbial ſaying true, One ſoweth, and another reapeth: the apoſtles reaped what the prophets ſowed; and, after their Maſter's reſurrection, gathered a plenteous harveſt of ſouls, among whom he had ſown the ſeed of eternal life. I ſent you to reap that whereon ye beſtowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entred into their labours: the writings of the prophets, and the preaching of John, greatly facilitated their miniſtry, and contributed to its ſucceſs; and going forth with ſuch advantages, they had peculiar encouragement, and double cauſe for their diligence. Note, (1.) Goſpel miniſters, like harveſt-men, muſt labour diligently and chearfully in the ſervice of God, and of immortal ſouls. (2.) When the people appear eager and attentive to hear, it is a moſt powerful excitement to the miniſter, to preach with livelineſs and zeal. (3.) Nothing will turn to ſo glorious an account in the day of God, as immortal ſouls gained to his kingdom through our miniſtry. (4.) The preachers of the goſpel have different talents; ſome more adapted to break up the fallow ground, and ſow the ſeed; others, to nouriſh up, and rear to maturity, the trees of righteouſneſs: each are uſeful in their place, and will rejoice together at the laſt in the fruit of their joint labours.

5. Great was the effect of the woman's teſtimony concerning Chriſt. Many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him for the ſaying of the woman, which teſtified, He told me all that ever I did. She was indeed a weak inſtrument, but God can work by the moſt unlikely means. Perſuaded of his prophetical character, and receiving him as the Meſſiah, they humbly beſought him to favour them with his company for a while, that they might enjoy his holy inſtructions. Nor did he diſdain their requeſt, but abode with them two days, teaching them concerning the things that made for their everlaſting peace. And ſo powerful was his miniſtry among them, that many more believed becauſe of his word: not only thoſe who believed in him on the woman's report, were confirmed in the faith; but thoſe who had paid leſs regard to her, now felt the divine conviction of the Saviour's diſcourſes, and ſaid unto the woman, Now we believe, not becauſe of thy ſaying, merely, but on the moſt unſhaken authority of the word of Jeſus himſelf; for we have heard him ourſelves, and know, by the powerful energy of his word upon our conſciences, that this is indeed the Chriſt, the ſo long promiſed and expected Saviour of the world; not of the Jews only, but of the Samaritans alſo, and of all the nations of the earth, to whom his goſpel ſhould come, and who ſhould receive this word of ſalvation. Note, (1.) The greateſt fruit is often reaped where it was leaſt expected. The Samaritans readily embraced that Saviour whom the Jews rejected. (2.) Chriſt is indeed the Saviour of the world; but we muſt believe in him before we ourſelves can be experimentally acquainted with his ſalvation.

43. ¶ Now after two days he departed thence, and went into Galilee: 44. For [a] Jeſus himſelf teſtified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country. 45. Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having ſeen all the things that he did at Jeruſalem at [b] the feaſt: for they alſo went unto the feaſt. 46. So Jeſus came again into Cana of Galilee, [c] where he made the water wine. And there was a certain † nobleman, whoſe ſon was ſick at Capernaum. 47. When he heard that Jeſus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him, and [d] beſought him that he would come down and heal his ſon: for he was at the point of death. 48. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, [e] Except ye ſee ſigns and wonders, ye will not believe. 49. The nobleman ſaith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die. 50. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Go thy way; thy ſon liveth. And the man believed the word that Jeſus had ſpoken unto him, and he went his way. 51. And as he was now going down, his ſervants met him, and told him, ſaying, Thy ſon liveth. 52. Then enquired he of them the hour when he began to amend: and they ſaid unto him, Yeſterday at the ſeventh hour the fever left him. 53. So the father knew that it was at the ſame hour in the which Jeſus ſaid unto him, Thy ſon liveth; and himſelf believed, and his whole houſe. 54. This is again the ſecond miracle that Jeſus did, when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

[a] Mat. xiii. 57. Mark vi. 4. Luke iv. 27.

[b] Ex. xxiii. 15.

[c] Chap. ii. 9.

† Or courtier, or ruler.

[d] Ho15 ..vſ.

[e] Chap. ii. 18. 1 Cor. i. 22.

v. 43—54. Jeſus made but a ſhort viſit to Sychar; he had other work to do, and therefore after two days he departed thence. Yet perhaps two more ſucceſsful days paſſed not during his miniſtry; a gracious earneſt of the ſucceſs which his goſpel ſhould meet in the heathen world, when, inſtead of being confined almoſt wholly, as at preſent, to the loſt ſheep of the houſe of Iſrael, it ſhould be preached to every creature.

1. Chriſt purſued his journey to Galilee, but went not to Nazareth, well knowing, as he had before obſerved and experienced, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country. Thoſe with whom we have been brought up from infancy, uſually paying little reſpect to the perſon as their teacher, with whom they have been familiar, as their junior, their ſchoolfellow, or their companion.

2. The Galileans gladly received him, having ſeen his miracles at the feaſt of the paſſover, to celebrate which, diſtant as they were, they went up with the other Jews to Jeruſalem. Note, They who love God's ordinances, will not grudge to go far to enjoy them, and will have never reaſon to regret their pains.

3. He viſited, among other places, Cana, where his firſt miracle was wrought of turning the water into wine; and there another notable miracle is wrought by him, which is not recorded by any of the other Evangeliſts.

[1.] The perſon who made application to him was a nobleman; probably one of Herod's courtiers, perhaps Chuza, (Luke viii. 3.) or Manaen, (Acts xiii. 1.) and the patient was his own ſon. Note, (1.) Greatneſs is no protection from diſeaſe, nor from any of the common calamities incident to humanity. (2.) Afflictions often drive thoſe to Chriſt, who otherwiſe, probably had never applied to him, and then indeed they are bleſſings in diſguiſe.

[2.] His addreſs was earneſt, and beſpoke his confidence in the power of Jeſus. He came himſelf from Capernaum to Cana, about fifteen miles, to beg his help. The caſe was deſperate, and paſt all other aid but his; for his child was at the point of death; and therefore he intreats him to haſten down without delay. He thought the preſence of Jeſus was needful to the cure, herein diſhonourably limiting the holy One of Iſrael. Note, Our ſins have reduced us all to the point of eternal death: unleſs Jeſus ſave, we muſt inevitably periſh.

[3.] Chriſt rebukes his confined notions of his almighty power, and the backwardneſs of the Jews in general to believe. The Samaritans believed as ſoon as he had preached among them; but they required repeated ſigns and wonders, not ſatisfied with thoſe which they had already ſeen him work at Jeruſalem, during the feaſt.

[4.] The nobleman renews his importunate requeſt. Every moment of delay was, in his apprehenſion, imminently dangerous; for though he had faith in Chriſt, that he could cure his ſon, if he was preſent with him; yet he ſeems to have no apprehenſion that he could heal at a diſtance, or, if the child was dead, reſtore him to life again.

[5.] Chriſt relieves him of his pain, ſaying, Go thy way; thy ſon liveth. Nothing more was needful to the cure: his word wrought as effectually at a diſtance, as if he had gone in perſon. He ſpeaks, and it is done. Oh that we had but faith to truſt him at all times!

[6.] The power which wrought the cure of the ſon, as effectually influenced the heart of the father; ſo that in full aſſurance of faith he departed, perfectly ſatisfied, that the word which Jeſus had ſpoken was ſure, and that he ſhould find his ſon alive and well. He appeared thus a true ſon of Abraham, and none like him ever truſted the Lord, and was confounded.

[7.] His ſervants met him, as he returned, with the joyful news of his ſon's recovery; and on enquiring when the happy change took place, they told him, at the ſeventh hour the fever left him; not gradually, but in a moment he recovered; and the father immediately remembered that was preciſely the hour when Jeſus had ſpoken to him.

[8.] The effect of this miracle was the converſion of himſelf and his family. Himſelf believed, and his whole houſe. He had begun to believe before; now his faith was more confirmed in Jeſus as the Meſſiah, and he became a profeſſed diſciple; whilſt his houſhold, who were eye-witneſſes of the miracle, followed his example. Note, (1.) One word of Jeſus ſpoken to the heart, works effectually to our ſalvation. (2.) When the maſter of the family ſets the gracious example, it is often greatly influential to all his houſe.

Laſtly, The evangeliſt remarks this, as the ſecond miracle Jeſus had wrought in Cana of Galilee. By two and three witneſſes thus he eſtabliſhed the authority of his miſſion, and probably the quality of the patient made the cure to be the more obſerved. When perſons of ſuperior rank are ſingled out by the grace of the Redeemer, the change wrought on them engages more particular attention.

CHAP. V.

We have in this chapter a miracle and a ſermon. 1. The miracle was the cure of an impotent man, that had been diſeaſed thirty-eight years, ver. 1—16. 2. The ſermon was Chriſt's vindication of himſelf before the Sanhedrim, when he was proſecuted as a criminal for healing the man on the ſabbath-day; in which, (1.) He aſſerts his authority as Meſſiah, and Mediator between God and man, ver. 17—29. (2.) He proves it by the teſtimony of his Father, of John Baptiſt, of his miracles, and of the ſcriptures of the Old Teſtament, and condemns the Jews for their unbelief, ver. 30—47.

1. AFTER this [a] there was a feaſt of the Jews, and Jeſus went up to Jeruſalem. 2. Now there is at Jeruſalem [b] by the ſheep † market a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue, ‡ Betheſda, having five porches. 3. In theſe lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water. 4. For an angel went down at a certain ſeaſon into the pool, and troubled the water: whoſoever then firſt after the troubling of the water ſtepped in, was made whole of whatſoever diſeaſe he had. 5. And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years. 6. When Jeſus ſaw him lie, and knew that [a] Lev. xxiii. 2. Deut. xvi. 1.

[b] Neh. iii. 1.

† Or Gate.

‡ i. e. The houſe of mercy.

that he had been now a long time in that caſe, he ſaith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole? 7. The impotent man anſwered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool: but while I am coming, another ſteppeth down before me. 8. Jeſus ſaith unto him, [c] Riſe, take up thy bed, and walk. 9. And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked: and [d] on the ſame day was the ſabbath. 10. ¶ The Jews therefore ſaid unto him that was cured, It is the ſabbath-day; [e] it is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed. 11. He anſwered them, He that made me whole, the ſame ſaid unto me, Take up thy bed and walk. 12. Then aſked they him, What man is that which ſaid unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk? 13. And he that was healed wiſt not who it was: for Jeſus had conveyed himſelf away, a multitude being in that place. 14. Afterward Jeſus findeth him in the temple, and ſaid unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: [f] ſin no more, leſt a worſe thing come unto thee. 15. The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jeſus which had made him whole. 16. And therefore did the Jews perſecute Jeſus, and ſought to ſlay him, becauſe he had done theſe things on the ſabbath-day.

[c] Mat. ix. 6. Mark ii. 11. Luke v. 24.
[d] Chap. ix. 14.
[e] Exod. xx. 10. Neh. xiii. 19. Jer. xvii. 21, &c. Mat. xii. 2.
[f] Mat. xii. 45. Chap. viii. 11.

v. 1—16. The feaſt here ſpoken of was probably the paſſover; the ſecond, which our Lord kept at Jeruſalem, after his public entrance on the miniſtry; and there he works the following notable miracle.

1. The place where the miracle was wrought, is very remarkable. It was a pool of water near the ſheep-gate, Neh. iii. 1. called Betheſda, or the Houſe of Mercy, ſurrounded with cloyſters, or covered walks, where the impotent lay ſheltered, who came with their ſeveral complaints, blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water in hopes of a cure. For this pool was impregnated with a ſtrange virtue at certain ſeaſons, owing to the deſcent of an angel who troubled the waters, and the firſt perſon who immediately ſtepped in, was cured of whatever diſeaſe he had.

When this healing power began to be communicated to the waters, or when it ceaſed, the Jewiſh hiſtorians are entirely ſilent; it ſerved however to ſhew, God had not left his people without witneſs, and repreſented that fountain which ſhould be opened in the Saviour's ſide, in which whoſoever waſhed ſhould be made clean. This fountain hath not at ſeaſons merely, but at all times, the power of healing; and therefore whoſoever continues under his ſpiritual maladies, has only his own negligence to blame, that he will not come to Chriſt that he may be cured.

2. The perſon on whom the cure was wrought had been thirty-eight years under his infirmity, probably paralytic, and unable to move; and therefore, when Jeſus paſſing by, compaſſionately obſerved his pitiable caſe, and graciouſly addreſſed him, Wilt thou be made whole? He relates his unhappy condition, and his continual diſappointment, whilſt ſome other ſtepped in before he could find a friend to aſſiſt him to reach the troubled waters, ſo that he began now to deſpair of ever obtaining his cure. Note, (1.) What thankfulneſs do we owe to our preſerving God, if we enjoy perfect health and ſtrength, whilſt others totter with weakneſs and diſeaſe, and wearisome days and nights are appointed to them? (2.) The compaſſionate eye of Jeſus is on the afflicted; and though he ſuffers them to be long exerciſed, he will paſs by them in due ſeaſon, and deliver them. (3.) They who would receive a cure from him of their ſpiritual maladies, ought at leaſt to be waiting at the pool of ordinances, where Jeſus uſually manifeſts his power and grace.

3. Chriſt with a word heals his diſeaſe, bidding him ariſe, take up his bed, and walk; and ſuch power accompanied his command, that the impotent man inſtantly felt his ſtrength return; aroſe perfectly cured; and taking up his bed, walked away in the ſight, and to the amazement of the beholders; and the ſame day was the ſabbath. Note, (1.) When Chriſt ſpeaks to the impotent ſoul, he gives ability for that which he commands. (2.) They who are healed by his grace, will inſtantly be obedient to his will.

4. As according to the tradition of the elders, it was accounted unlawful to carry a bed on the ſabbath-day; the Jews jealous, therefore, for the honour of that ſacred day of reſt, rebuked him for being guilty of ſuch a profanation. The man thought he had ſufficient authority, when he who healed him gave him his orders, and pleads the command of the perſon who had wrought the cure upon him. They ſuſpected who had done the miracle, and wanted the man to accuſe his kind benefactor, againſt whom they wiſhed to proceed as a ſabbath-breaker. What man is that which ſaid unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk? With ſuch contempt and indignation do they ſpeak of Chriſt, as if he was a mere man, and a wicked man too, notoriouſly guilty of a breach of God's law. The man, who knew not Jeſus, could give them no information; for he had diſappeared immediately, mixing among the croud, probably to avoid the admiration of ſome, and the malignity of others, who he knew would be offended at him for this glorious act of mercy, becauſe it was the ſabbath-day. Note, (1.) The ſabbath was made for man, not man for the ſabbath; therefore works of mercy and charity are always commendable. (2.) They who are eminent for well doing, may expect to paſs through evil report as well as good report.

5. Soon after the poor man going up to the temple, probably to return thanks for his late mercies, met Jeſus there, who gave him a ſolemn caution with regard to his future conduct: ſin no more, leaſt a worſe thing come unto thee. Should he provoke the wrath of God by his ſins, it would yet be worſe than his paſt long affliction. The man in the ſimplicity of his heart went and told the Jews that it was Jeſus which had made him whole: probably he hoped this notable miracle might engage them to acknowledge him as the Meſſiah; but ſo far were they from being led to admire his character, that filled with envy and enmity, they ſought to ſlay Jeſus; and for a pretext, pleaded that this work of mercy was a profanation of the ſabbath. Note, (1.) They who have received ſignal mercies from God, are peculiarly bound to be found in the temple, offering up their thankſgivings. (2.) In the Lord's houſe we may expect to be favoured with his preſence. (3.) Sin is at the root of all our ſufferings, in time and eternity. (4.) They who are by grace delivered from the power and puniſhment of ſin, ſhould be doubly watchful not to return again unto folly. (5.) Many cover, with pretended zeal for religion, their enmity againſt the moſt faithful ſervants of Chriſt.

17. ¶ But Jeſus anſwered them, [g] My Father worketh hitherto, and I work. 18. Therefore the Jews [h] ſought the more to kill him, becauſe he not only had broken the ſabbath, but ſaid alſo, that God was his Father, [i] making himſelf equal with God. 19. Then anſwered Jeſus, and ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [k] The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do: for what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe. 20. For [l] the Father loveth the Son, and [m] ſheweth him all things that himſelf doth: and he will ſhew him greater works than theſe, that ye may marvel. 21. For as the Father raiſeth up the dead, and quickeneth them: even ſo [n] the Son quickeneth whom he will. 22. For the Father judgeth no man; [o] but hath committed all judgment unto the Son: 23. That all men ſhould honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. [p] He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath ſent him. 24. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [q] He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and [r] ſhall not come into condemnation; [s] but is paſſed from death unto life. 25. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when [t] the dead ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God: and they that hear ſhall live. 26. For as the Father hath life in himſelf; ſo hath he given to the Son to have life in himſelf 27. And [u] hath given him authority to execute judgment alſo, [x] becauſe he is the Son of man. 28. Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves ſhall hear his voice, 29. And [y] ſhall come forth, [z] they that have done good unto the reſurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the reſurrection of damnation. 30. [a] I can of mine own ſelf do nothing: as I hear I judge: and [b] my judgment is juſt; becauſe [c] I ſeek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath ſent me.

[g] Ver. 21. Chap. xiv. 10.
[h] Chap. vii. 19.
[i] Ibid. x. 33. Phil. ii. 6.
[k] Ver. 30. Chap. viii. 38. & ix. 4. & xii. 49. & xiv. 10.
[l] Chap. iii. 35.
[m] Chap. viii. 28.
[n] Luke vii. 14. & viii. 54. Chap. xi. 43.
[o] Ver. 27. Acts xvii. 31.
[p] 1 John ii. 23.
[q] Chap. iii. 18, 36. & vi. 40, 47. & xx. 31.
[r] Rom. viii. 1.
[s] 1 John iii. 14.
[t] Eph. ii. 1, 5. & v. 14. Col. ii. 13.
[u] Ver. 22. Acts x. 42.
[x] Dan. vii. 13, 14.
[y] Iſa. xxvi. 19.
[z] Dan. xii. 2. Mat. xxv. 32, 33, 46. 1 Theſ. iv. 16.
[a] Ver. 19.
[b] Iſa. xi. 4, 5.
[c] Mat. xxvi. 39. Chap. vi. 38.

v. 17—30. We have here our Lord's vindication of himſelf from the charge laid againſt him as a ſabbath-breaker.

1. He argues from his Father's works to his own. My Father worketh hitherto; by his continual operation, every day he adminiſters the affairs of the kingdom of providence; and I work as one with him, in nature and operation; and therefore my works of power and grace can be no more the ſubject of blame, than his. Moſt abſurd, therefore, was the charge laid againſt him as a ſabbath-breaker, who was Lord of the ſabbath, and one with the eternal Father, the Maker and Preſerver of all things.

2. This defence exaſperated them but the more. Such a claim to God as his own father (πατέρα ἴδιον) in that peculiar ſenſe, as implied a co-equality with him in power, authority, and operation, they regarded as the higheſt blaſphemy, and more deſerving of death than even the breach of the ſabbath.

3. Far from blaming his enemies as perverting his words, he vindicates what he had ſaid; aſſerting and proving in the moſt exalted ſenſe the eternal union and co-equality between the Father and the Son, and his title to the dignity of the undivided godhead, Verily, verily, I ſay unto you, what I ſpeak is certain, and my words truth itſelf; The Son can do nothing of himſelf, but what he ſeeth the Father do; ſuch is the unity of their nature, that they are alike intimately acquainted with each others counſels and deſigns, having one eternal mind. The Son, therefore, never acts ſeparate from the Father, but with his conſent and co-operation: for what things ſoever he doth, theſe alſo doth the Son likewiſe; whatever the Father doth in the continual agency of his providence, the Son, as one with him, is a co-worker, and acts with the ſame divine power and authority as the Father himſelf. For the Father loveth the Son, an infinite mutual complacence ſubſiſts between the divine perſons, and ſheweth him all things that himſelf doth, communicating with him all his counſels and deſigns, and doing nothing in the kingdom of grace or providence, but in conjunction with him: and he will ſhew him greater things than theſe, performing by him and with him, greater miracles of power and goodneſs than this wrought on the impotent man, that ye may marvel; either led to admire my works, and believe in my divine miſſion, or to wonder and periſh in obſtinate infidelity.

In confirmation of what he had ſaid, he inſtances his own divine power in two moſt remarkable particulars, each of which are interwoven in his diſcourſe, and nearly connected.

[1.] He hath power equally with the Father to quicken the dead. He is the prince of life, and by his own ſovereign will and pleaſure raiſes up whom he will: ſelf-exiſtent as the Father, he hath life in himſelf, v. 26. or as the Father hath life in himſelf, intending in his eternal mind to beſtow it on his choſen people, ſo hath he given the Son to have life in himſelf, in the œconomy of man's redemption this life eternal is lodged in the hands of the Son, reſides in him, and is to be derived from him; and he beſtows it ſovereignly according to the good pleaſure of his will. By him,

(1.) The ſouls of ſinners are raiſed from the death of treſpaſſes in which they lay; by the effectual word of goſpel-grace they are called from the grave of corruption, and awake to newneſs of life: and the hour is coming, yea, now is, when this great work ſhall be performed; now by his own miniſtry, hereafter more abundantly by his apoſtles preaching. Note, (1.) Our ſouls, by the fall, are become utterly incapable of all ſpiritual good, inſenſible to our real ſtate of miſery, and altogether dead before God, as much as the corpſe which is laid in the coffin is inſenſible to what paſſes around it, and utterly diſqualified for every action of life. (2.) Our hearts muſt experience a ſpiritual reſurrection to newneſs of life here, or we can never hope for eternal life hereafter. (3.) The voice of Jeſus in his word made effectual by his ſpirit, is the powerful agent which accompliſhes this glorious work.

(2.) By him the dead bodies of men ſhall be raiſed up at the laſt day. Nor need any marvel, that he who firſt created man upon earth, ſhould be able to repair the ruined tabernacle, and reſtore it from duſt: all, from the firſt man whom God formed, to the laſt whom death ſhall ſeize, ſhall hear the voice of the Son of God, and inſtantly at his word ſhall come forth, leaving the priſon of the grave, reſtored to life that never more ſhall end. Though according to their ſeveral characters, very different will their doom be; they that have done good, whoſe hearts were renewed by divine grace, and whoſe works and ways evidenced faith unfeigned, and love without diſſimulation, they, and only they, will riſe unto the reſurrection of life, to that ſtate of immortal bliſs and glory, which ſhall be the reward of their fidelity; and they that have done evil, have continued under the power and dominion of their native corruption, have lived without experiencing a divine change upon their hearts, and died under the guilt of unrepented ſin, they ſhall be raiſed unto the reſurrection of damnation, condemned to thoſe eternal torments which are the wages of ſin, without meaſure and without end; lying down in hell under that wrath of God, which is for ever wrath to come. How awful! how alarming the admonition! oh that we might feel the weighty import of it, and prepare to meet our God!

[2.] He hath the power of finally determining the everlaſting ſtate of men and angels. Not only as God the Son is he judge of all, in common with the Father, adminiſtring all the affairs of the kingdom of providence and grace, and without him the Father judgeth no man; but as mediator alſo, he hath a peculiar authority delegated to him, to execute judgment as the Son of man; to pronounce ſentence from his throne at the laſt day, to take vengeance on all who have been rebellious againſt his government, and deſpiſed or rejected his ſalvation; and to fix, by an irrevocable decree, the eternal bleſſedneſs of his redeemed people; and the rule of his judgment at that day will be his own word, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that ſent me, hath everlaſting life, and ſhall not come into condemnation, but is paſſed from death unto life; where we may obſerve, (1.) The ſinner's title to glory, faith in the Redeemer. (2.) The effect of it; deliverance from all condemnation in time and eternity; for who can lay ought to the charge of thoſe whom God juſtifieth? (3.) They who have paſſed from ſpiritual death to ſpiritual life, have therein the earneſt and foretaſte of eternal life. (4.) The judgment of Jeſus is juſt, ver. 30. for all he doth is according to the eternal counſels of wiſdom between the Father and the Son, v. 29. in correſpondence with the will of the Father, and according to the commiſſion he hath received from him. Such, then, being his infinite dignity, the Son, who is in glory equal, in majeſty coeternal, muſt be honoured, worſhipped, and adored, even as the Father; and ſo far from its being blaſphemous, and derogatory from the Father's glory, that he ſhould thus claim equality with him, in nature, perfections, and uncreated excellence; ſo inſeparably connected are they, and their honour and intereſt ſo entirely the ſame, that the Father regards every inſtance of diſreſpect ſhewn to his Son, as diſhonour done to himſelf; both as he is one with him in the ſame undivided Godhead, and alſo as he is the Son of man ſent from him, commiſſioned by him, and, as his ambaſſador, repreſenting himſelf.

31. [d] If I bear witneſs of myſelf, my witneſs † is not true. 32. ¶ [e] There is another that beareth witneſs of me, and I know that the witneſs which he witneſſeth of me, is true. 33. Ye ſent unto John, and [f] he bare witneſs unto the truth. 34. But I receive not teſtimony from man: but theſe things I ſay, that ye might be ſaved. 35. He was a burning and a ſhining light: and [g] ye were willing [h] for a ſeaſon to rejoice in his light. 36. ¶ But [i] I have greater witneſs than that of John: for [k] the works which the Father hath given me to finiſh, the ſame works that I do, bear witneſs of me, that the Father hath ſent me. 37. And [l] the Father himſelf which hath ſent me, hath born witneſs of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, [m] nor ſeen his ſhape. 38. And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath ſent, him ye believe not. 39. [n] Search the ſcriptures, for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and [o] they are they which teſtify of me. 40. And [p] ye will not come to me, that ye might have life. 41. [q] I receive not honour from men. 42. But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you. 43. I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another ſhall come in his own name, him ye will receive. 44. [r] How can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and ſeek not [s] the honour that cometh from God only? 45. Do not think that I will accuſe you to the Father: there is one that accuſeth you, even Moſes, in whom ye truſt. 46. For had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: for [t] he wrote of me. 47. But if ye believe not his writings, how ſhall ye believe my words?

[d] Chap. viii. 14.
† i. e. It might be doubted.
Num. xxxv. 30. Deut. xvii. 6.
[e] Mat. iii. 17. & xvii. 5.
[f] Chap. i. 15, 27.
[g] Mat. iii. 5. & xxi. 26.
[h] Mat. xiii. 14.
[i] 1 John v. 9.
[k] Chap. iii. 2. & x. 25. & xv. 24.
[l] Mat. iii. 17. & xvii. 5. Chap. viii. 18.
[m] Deut. iv. 12. 1 John iv. 12.
[n] Iſa. viii. 20. & xxxiv. 16. Luke xvi. 29. Acts xvii. 11.
[o] Luke xxiv. 27. & Chap. i. 45.
[p] Chap. i. 11. & iii. 19.
[q] 1 Theſ. ii. 6.
[r] Chap. xii. 43.
[s] Rom. ii. 29.
[t] Gen. iii. 15. & xii. 3. & xviii. 18. & xxii. 18. & xlix. 10. Deut. xviii. 15, 18. Acts xxvi. 22.

v. 31—47. In confirmation of the glorious character he aſſumed, and his miſſion from the Father, he proceeds to produce other evidence than his own; admitting, that if what he aſſerted was utterly unſupported, they might reject his teſtimony of himſelf as untrue.

1. John the Baptiſt bore witneſs of him, and to his evidence Chriſt appeals, fully aſſured it was true: and they themſelves, who applied to him as a prophet, were bound to embrace his teſtimony, which in the moſt ſolemn manner he delivered to thoſe deputies of the Sanhedrim who were ſent to enquire who he was, and under what authority he acted. He plainly aſſerted Chriſt's divine character, chap. i. 19—30. and his evidence they could not but allow to be moſt reſpectable. For though he was not that light, the Meſſiah, he was a burning and a ſhining light; his exemplary conduct and zealous preaching beſpoke the ſimplicity of his ſoul, and ye were willing for a ſeaſon to rejoice in his light. They gloried in him at firſt, and raiſed their expectations high, but when he would neither himſelf aſſume the character of the Meſſiah, nor declare himſelf that Elias whom they expected, they could not bear the ſharpneſs of his rebukes, and the plainneſs of his teſtimony to that Meſſiah whom they rejected; and therefore they ſoon fell off and neglected him: not that Chriſt indeed needed human teſtimony, he had far greater. But for their conviction he mentions this, if any thing might be the means of reſcuing them from ruin. Note, (1.) Every miniſter of Jeſus, like John, ſhould burn with zeal for his glory, and ſhine in all holy converſation, that he may adorn and give weight to the doctrine he preaches. (2.) Many at firſt ſeem to rejoice in the light of the goſpel, who ſoon grow cold and careleſs, and neglect ſo great a ſalvation. (3.) They who trifle with their mercies, are juſtly deprived of them.

2. He appeals to a greater witneſs than that of John, even to his own works, which bore witneſs of him. His whole life and miniſtry beſpoke his glorious character, and eſpecially his miracles, wrought by his own divine power, evidenced his miſſion from God. And greater works than he had yet done remained for him to finiſh; to leave them at leaſt without excuſe, if they obſtinately perſiſted in their infidelity.

3. God the Father himſelf had expreſsly born witneſs to him by a voice from heaven at his baptiſm, Mat. iii. 16, 17. which was ſolemnly repeated, Mat. xvii. 5. at his transfiguration, and this was a ſingular atteſtation, ſuch as had never before on any occaſion been vouchſafed. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor ſeen his ſhape; all the voices that were heard, and the appearances that were ſeen, under the Old Teſtament, were either thoſe of the Son in a human form, or of the angels employed by him in this miniſtry; then firſt when the Father in perſon ſpoke from heaven at the baptiſm of his Son, was his voice audibly heard, and a viſible manifeſtation made of his glory. And ye have not his word abiding in you; neither this immediate teſtimony from heaven, nor his former word by his prophets had ever made any abiding impreſſion; for whom he hath ſent, him ye believe not: after all this evidence they, notwithſtanding, rejected the teſtimony of God, and refuſed to believe in his Meſſiah. Note, (1.) When God ſends, he will bear witneſs to his own ſervants, and atteſt with his ſpirit the commiſſion he hath given them. (2.) Many have the word of God in their hands, and ſounding in their ears, and yet have it not abiding in their hearts.

4. He refers them to their own ſcriptures for the proof of his divine character and miſſion. Search the ſcriptures, or ye do ſearch them. The ſcriptures were by many of them much ſtudied, and they boaſted of their wiſdom in theſe ſacred oracles, but they were really great ſtrangers to the meaning of them; they had need therefore look farther and deeper than ever yet they had done, and he ventures to reſt his cauſe upon an appeal to theſe authentic records, which they themſelves ſo highly and juſtly valued: for in them ye think ye have eternal life; they placed the chief ſtreſs of their religion upon the knowledge of the law; and flattered themſelves, by conſtantly reading theſe ſacred writings, and getting them by rote, they were ſure of heaven. Now theſe, ſaith he, are they that teſtify of me; all the types, promiſes, prophecies, center in him, and refer to him; and yet ye will not come to me, that ye may have life; ſuch were their prejudices and wilful blindneſs, that though the ſcriptures were ſo expreſs in pointing him out to their notice, they would not ſubmit to apply to him, that they might obtain the pardon life and ſalvation which he alone could give. Not that he affected to exalt himſelf, to gather a party, or obtain temporal dominion. I receive not honour from men; he neither courted nor needed human applauſe, his only aim was to advance his Father's glory. But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you; he tried their hearts, and notwithſtanding all their high pretences of zeal for God's honour, the love of the world predominated in their affections, and they had really no heartfelt and ſincere regard to God or godlineſs, and rejected him becauſe he did not correſpond with their earthly expectations. Hence, though I am come in my Father's name, with evidences of a divine miſſion ſo ſtrong and ſtriking, ye receive me not, becauſe the ſalvation he brought was ſpiritual from ſin, and death, and hell: and he ſo ſharply rebuked their vices, and undeceived them in their vain expectation of a temporal Meſſiah, who ſhould come with outward pomp and grandeur, therefore they rejected him: but if another ſhall come in his own name, him ye will receive, eager to embrace every impoſtor who pretended to deliver them from the Roman yoke, and aggrandize their nation, though vouching no authority but his own vain boaſtings. And being under the influence of ſuch a carnal mind, how can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and ſeek not the honour which cometh from God only? Their ſpirit and temper, and proud affectation of pre-eminence, were the reverſe of the kingdom which Chriſt came to erect; where humility and ſelf-denial ſtood in the firſt and moſt diſtinguiſhed place; and muſt for ever exclude them from the ſpiritual, ſubſtantial, and eternal honours which God alone beſtows on the children of his grace, and the heirs of his glory. Learn hence, (1.) The neceſſity of deep and ſerious examination of the ſcriptures, comparing ſpiritual things with ſpiritual, and diligently ſeeking for Chriſt in them, who is the ſum and ſubſtance of them; for without the practical knowledge of him, all other attainments in the letter, language, and phraſes of the ſcripture, are really no better than ſplendid ignorance. (2.) In the ſcriptures eternal life is to be obtained, becauſe they reveal to us that Redeemer, who is the author of it, to all who obey him. The Old Teſtament, as well as the new, is full of him; the moral law drives us for refuge to him, the types of the ceremonial law all prefigure him, the prophecies all center in him. He is indeed all, and in all. (3.) All who come by faith to Chriſt, embracing the ſalvation which is in him, will aſſuredly find pardon, grace, and glory; the reaſon why any ſinners periſh is this, that blinded by ignorance, or perverted by pride and ſelf-righteouſneſs, they will not come to Chriſt, that they might have life. Their eternal ruin, therefore, lies at their own door. (4.) Chriſt ſearcheth the heart and trieth the reins; he knoweth what is in man, and under the guiſe of warmeſt profeſſion of religion, can diſcover the enmity which reigns within, againſt himſelf and his goſpel. (5.) Where inordinate love of this world prevails, and ambition, covetouſneſs, and deſire of human applauſe, poſſeſs the ſoul, it is impoſſible the love of God ſhould dwell there. No man can ſerve two maſters. (6.) When men chuſe thoſe falſe prophets, who flatter them in their iniquities, and run without being ſent, and pleaſed with their ſmooth prophecies turn a deaf ear to the warning voice of truth, juſtly doth God give up ſuch to the deluſions they have choſen. (7.) True honour comes from God alone; his eſtimation of us, not that of all the world beſide, ſtamps our character with excellence or infamy. His approbation, therefore, a gracious ſoul deſires in the firſt place. (8.) Whilſt our hearts chiefly affect earthly honours, it is impoſſible we ſhould believe in, embrace, and ſubmit to him, whoſe kingdom is not of this world, and whoſe firſt demand from us is to take up our croſs and follow him, as men wondered at.

Laſtly, Chriſt turns them over to Moſes, in whoſe writings they ſo much gloried, for a proof of his miſſion, and as their accuſer, if they perſiſted in their infidelity. Do not think that I will accuſe you to the Father, as if I came to ſpy out your faults, with a view to your condemnation; No: there is one that accuſeth you, even Moſes, in whom ye truſt. That law on which they truſted for ſalvation muſt needs condemn them as tranſgreſſors; and Moſes in perſon at the laſt day muſt, to their confuſion, teſtify againſt their impenitence and unbelief. For had ye believed Moſes, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me, as the great Prophet who ſhould ariſe; as the great End of the Law, moral and ceremonial, to whom both pointed; but if ye believe not his writings, for whom you pretend ſuch high veneration, and are not convinced by them of my divine miſſion, how ſhall ye believe my words? againſt whom you entertain ſuch inveterate prejudices, and whom you treat with ſuch inſolent contempt? Note, (1.) Many make their boaſt in thoſe privileges which will at laſt prove their more aggravated condemnation, becauſe they have abuſed them. (2.) They who refuſe to fly by faith for refuge to the goſpel of Chriſt, muſt inevitably periſh under the accuſations of the law of Moſes.

CHAP. VI.

In this chapter we have, 1. The miracle of the loaves, ver. 1—14. 2. Chriſt's walking upon the water, ver. 15—21. 3. The people's flocking after him to Capernaum, ver. 22—25. 4. His conference with them, occaſioned by the miracle of the loaves, in which he reproves them for ſeeking carnal food, and directs them to ſpiritual food, ver. 26—27. ſhewing them how they muſt labour for ſpiritual food, ver. 28, 29. and what that ſpiritual food is, ver. 30—59. 5. Their diſcontent at what he ſaid, and the reproof he gave them for it, ver. 60—65. 6. The apoſtaſy of many from him, and his diſcourſe with his diſciples that adhered to him upon that occaſion, ver. 66—71.

1. AFTER theſe things Jeſus went over the ſea of Galilee, which is the ſea of Tiberias. 2. And a great multitude followed him, becauſe they ſaw his miracles which he did on them that were diſeaſed. 3.
And [a] Jeſus went up into a mountain, and there he ſat with his diſciples. 4. And [b] the paſſover, a feaſt of the Jews, was nigh. 5. ¶ When Jeſus then lift up his eyes, and [c] ſaw a great company come unto him, he ſaith unto Philip, Whence ſhall we buy bread that theſe may eat?
6. (And this he ſaid to prove him: for he himſelf knew what he would do) 7. Philip anſwered him, [d]
Two hundred † penny-worth of bread is not ſufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little. 8.
One of his diſciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, ſaith unto him, 9. There is a lad here, which hath five barley-loaves, and two ſmall fiſhes: [e] but what are they among ſo many? 10. And Jeſus ſaid, Make the men ſit down. Now there was much graſs in the place. So the men ſat down, in number about five thouſand.
11. And Jeſus took the loaves, and when [f] he had given thanks, [g] he diſtributed to the diſciples, and [g] the diſciples to them that were ſet down; and likewiſe of the fiſhes, as much as they would. 12. When they were filled, he ſaid to his diſciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be loſt. 13. Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baſkets with the fragments of the five barley-loaves, which remained over and above unto them that had eaten. 14. Then thoſe men, when they had ſeen the miracle that Jeſus did, ſaid, This is of a truth [h] that prophet that ſhould come into the world.

[a] Luke ix. 10.
[b] Lev. xxiii. 5, 7. Deut. xvi. 1.
[c] Mat. xiv. 14. Mark vi. 35. Luke ix. 12.
[d] Num. xi. 22.
† Mat. xviii. 28.
[e] 2 Kings iv. 43.
[f] Mat. xv. 36. & xxvi. 26. Rom. xiv. 6.
[g] Mat. xxiv. 45.
[h] Deut. xviii. 15, 18. & vii. 40.

v. 1—14. The miracle here recorded is the only one, which all the four evangeliſts have mentioned. We have,

1. The time and place, when and where it was wrought. Chriſt had croſſed the Lake Genneſaret, called the ſea of Tiberias, from a city Herod had built on the borders of it, in honour of the Emperor Tiberius. Multitudes followed him; not ſo much, it ſeems, affected by his doctrine, as drawn by his miracles. However the Lord was ready to receive them; and going up into a mountain, for the convenience of being heard, ſat there with his diſciples, and taught the liſtening crowd: and the paſſover, the third ſince his entrance on the miniſtry, now approached.

2. The miracle itſelf. Beholding with compaſſion the multitudes who were aſſembled on this occaſion, our Lord addreſſed himſelf to Philip, and aſked him, in order to try his faith, being himſelf reſolved what to do, Where they could get bread to feed that multitude? Philip, dull of apprehenſion, looked only to human aid, and ſuggeſts, that two hundred pennyworth of bread (about ſix pounds five ſhillings, which probably was all their common ſtock) would not be ſufficient to give each a morſel. Andrew hearing the diſcourſe, ſuggeſts, there was a lad in the company that had five barley loaves and two ſmall fiſhes; but theſe indeed would be as nothing among ſuch a multitude. But where human means fail, the divine power is not ſtraitned. Commanding his diſciples, therefore, to ſeat the multitude in order, where the graſs was their carpet, and the earth their table, with his divine benediction he conſecrated the ſcanty proviſion, and breaking the bread and fiſhes, gave them to his diſciples, who diſtributed them to the multitude; and marvellous to behold! under their hands the meat continued to grow as it deſcended down the ranks; and not only afforded enough for a plentiful meal to all that vaſt multitude, but ſuch a quantity of fragments as filled twelve baſkets full. Note, (1.) When the Lord is pleaſed at times to leave us in perplexity, he hath deſigns of his own to anſwer, and knows what he intends to do. (2.) Chriſt's diſciples muſt not diſdain coarſe and ſcanty fare, but be content, when his providence ſo ordains, to put up with barley cakes, and be thankful for them; and then this poor proviſion, with the benediction of Jeſus, ſhall yield a richer entertainment than all the delicacies of the luxurious. (3.) They who call a fiſh-meal faſting, ſeem to caſt reproach on the rich feaſt with which Jeſus entertained his followers. (4.) Bread muſt never be waſted, even the fragments of barley cakes are carefully gathered up. If we are full, others are faſting, who will be glad of our leavings; good œconomy is the means to enable us for more extenſive charity.

3. Great was the effect, for the time at leaſt, produced by this miracle on the minds of the people. They concluded this muſt be that great prophet ſpoken of by Moſes, Deut. xviii. 15. who ſhould come into the world.

15. ¶ When Jeſus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, he departed again into a mountain himſelf alone. 16. And [i] when even was now come, his diſciples went down unto the ſea, 17. And entred into a ſhip, and went over the ſea towards Capernaum: and it was now dark, and Jeſus was not come to them. 18. And [k] the ſea aroſe, by reaſon of a great wind that blew. 19. So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, they ſee Jeſus [l] walking on the ſea, and drawing nigh unto the ſhip: and they were afraid. 20. But he ſaith unto them, It is I, be not afraid. 21. Then [m] they willingly received him into the ſhip: and immediately the ſhip was at the land whither they went.

[i] Mat. xiv. 23. Mark vi. 47.

[k] Pſ. cvii. 23, &c.

[l] Job ix. 8.

[m] Cant. iii. 4.

v. 15—21. We have here,

1. The retirement of the Lord Jeſus. They, whom he had in ſo aſtoniſhing a manner fed, were immediately for proclaiming him King of the Jews, and erecting his ſtandard; expecting, according to their miſtaken prejudices, that he would ſet up a temporal dominion, reſcue them from the Roman yoke, and place them at the head of the nations. But far different was the kingdom he came to eſtabliſh; therefore, fearing leaſt their irregular zeal ſhould hurry them into ſome ſeditious behaviour, and that againſt his will they might attempt to force the royalty upon him, he left them, and went up again into the mountain alone. Note, (1.) Chriſt's kingdom is not of this world, his true diſciples will never ſeek their portion here below. (2.) His miniſters muſt avoid every thing that may give the ſhadow of offence to the ſecular powers, never intermeddling with civil affairs, but teaching all dutiful ſubmiſſion to the powers that are.

2. Whilſt the maſter was in the mountain, the diſciples were toſſing on the tempeſtuous waves. By the command of their Lord they had gone on ſhipboard, in order to croſs the lake; but now the ſtorm aroſe, the night was dark, the wind contrary, and their maſter not come to them, which heightened their diſtreſs. Note, (1.) After the ſweeteſt ſeaſons of refreſhment, ſometimes the darkeſt days of temptation ſucceed. (2.) It is one of the heavieſt afflictions to the ſoul under trials, when the preſence of Jeſus is withdrawn, and we are left under darkneſs and deſertion. (3.) They who embark in Chriſt's cauſe, muſt prepare for a ſtorm. The way to glory lies through much tribulation.

3. In their extremity help approaches. In the way of duty we need never deſpair; Chriſt will deliver us in the needful time of trouble. He came to them miraculouſly walking on the waters; but they, affrighted, thought it had been an apparition, till his well-known voice quieted their fears: when he was ſo nigh, no evil could hurt them. Note, (1.) We often terrify ourſelves with unneceſſary apprehenſions of danger, and when our minds are dejected, are ready to fear that the very means that are working for our good, portend an increaſe of our miſery. (2.) Jeſus alone, by his all-powerful word, can ſpeak peace to the ſinner's troubled mind.

4. With joy they welcomed their maſter's arrival; and in a moment the ſhip, by miracle, was at the place of their deſtination. Note, (1.) Chriſt is doubly precious to the ſoul; when mourning after him, and walking in darkneſs, he returns, and lifts up the light of his countenance, and diſſipates every cloud of ſorrow. (2.) The church, and every faithful ſoul embarked on this tempeſtuous world, experience many a ſtorm; but their everlaſting ſafety is ſecured, they ſhall never finally be caſt away. (3.) It will be a pleaſing ſurprize to many a trembling believer, when he ſhall find himſelf at death ſafely landed on the ſhores of eternal reſt.

22. ¶ The day following, when the people which ſtood on the other ſide of the ſea, ſaw that there was none other boat there, ſave that one whereinto his diſciples were entred, and that Jeſus went not with his diſciples into the boat, but that his diſciples were gone away alone: 23. (Howbeit there came other boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place [n] where they did eat bread, after that the Lord had given thanks) 24. When the people therefore ſaw that Jeſus was not there, neither his diſciples, they alſo took ſhipping, and came to Capernaum, ſeeking for Jeſus. 25. And when they had found him on the other ſide of the ſea, they ſaid unto him, Rabbi, when cameſt thou hither? 26. Jeſus anſwered them, and ſaid, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Ye ſeek me, not becauſe ye ſaw the miracles, but becauſe ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled. 27. Labour not for the meat which periſheth, but for [o] that meat which endureth unto everlaſting life, which the Son of man ſhall give unto you: for [p] him hath God the Father ſealed.

[n] Ver. 11.

[o] Ver. 54, 63. Chap. xiv. 14.

[p] Mat. iii. 17. & xvii. 5. 2 Pet. i. 17.

v. 22—27. All night the multitude ſeem to have waited for the return of Jeſus from the mountain in the morning; for as they ſaw the diſciples embark, and leave their maſter behind them, and there was no other boat in which he could follow them, they concluded he muſt ſtill be on that ſide the water; but not finding him there as they expected, we are told,

1. How carefully they followed him. Some boats arriving in the morning from Tiberias, near that place where they had been miraculouſly fed through the benediction of Jeſus, they croſſed the lake to Capernaum, hoping to find him there, where he uſually made his abode. Note, (1.) They who love Chriſt truly, will ſtick at no pains in following him. (2.) When we are found in God's way, his providence is often ſeen moſt graciouſly to ſecond our good deſigns and deſires.

2. They found him on the other ſide of the ſea, and could not but expreſs their aſtoniſhment how he could come thither, having no convenience for croſſing the lake. Note, Many eagerly run after Chriſt and his goſpel, pretending great zeal for hearing, who never truly come to him by faith, nor receive the ingrafted word to the ſaving of their ſouls.

3. Chriſt, who knew the ſpirit and temper with which they followed him, replies to their queſtion in ſuch a manner, as he ſaw their ſtate required.

[1.] He rebukes them for the corrupt principle on which they acted. They followed him, not becauſe they were convinced by his doctrine and miracles, and believed in him to the ſaving of their ſouls, but merely becauſe they had been fed at his coſt, and expected yet greater temporal advantages from him when he ſhould ſet up his kingdom. Note, Many follow Chriſt for the loaves, who have no love for his goſpel.

[2.] He exhorts them to ſeek a better portion. Labour not for the meat which periſheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlaſting life, which the Son of man ſhall give unto you. The world and all the things of it periſh in the uſing, and we are dying daily, and cannot long poſſeſs any thing here below. It were therefore the moſt egregious folly to lay out all our labour on ſo tranſitory a portion, and moſt criminal to make our profeſſion of religion ſubſervient to the baſe purpoſes of earthly advantage. Chriſt propoſes to us a nobler good, even that ſpiritual food of his grace, by which our immortal ſouls may be fed, and we may grow up to the participation of that eternal life, which the ſon of man hath to beſtow on every truly faithful ſoul: for him hath God the Father ſealed, fully commiſſioned and authoriſed him to give this eternal life to his redeemed people, and to feed them with that living bread, of which, if a man eat, he ſhall never die. Note, (1.) All our bleſſings, in time and eternity, come from the free gift of our Redeemer. (2.) None who come to Jeſus, ſeeking the living bread, will be denied, for he feedeth the hungry.

28. Then ſaid they unto him, What ſhall we do, that we might work the works of God? 29. Jeſus anſwer-ed and ſaid unto them, This is the work of God, [q] that ye believe on him whom he hath ſent. 30. They ſaid therefore unto him, [r] What ſign ſheweſt thou then, that we may ſee, and believe thee? what doſt thou work?
31. [s] Our fathers did eat manna in the deſert; as it is written, [t] He gave them bread from heaven to eat. 32.
Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Moſes gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you [u] the true bread from heaven.
33. For the bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world. 34. Then ſaid they unto him, [x] Lord, evermore give us this bread.
35. And Jeſus ſaid unto them, I am the bread of life: [y] he that cometh to me, ſhall never hunger; and he that believeth on me, ſhall never thirſt. 36. But I ſaid unto you, that ye alſo have ſeen me, and believe not. 37.
All that the Father giveth me, ſhall come to me; and [z] him that cometh to me, I will in no wiſe caſt out.
38. For I came down from heaven, [a] not to do mine own will, [b] but the will of him that ſent me. 39.
And this is the Father's will which hath ſent me, [c] that of all which he hath given me, I ſhould loſe nothing, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day. 40. And this is the will of him that ſent me, that [d] every one which ſeeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlaſting life: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day.
41. The Jews then murmured at him, becauſe he ſaid,
I am the bread which came down from heaven. 42.
And they ſaid, [e] Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph, whoſe father and mother we know? how is it then that he ſaith, I came down from heaven? 43. Jeſus therefore anſwered and ſaid unto them, Murmur not among yourſelves. 44. [f] No man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. 45. [g] It is written in the prophets, And they ſhall be all taught of God.
Every man therefore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me. 46. Not that any man hath ſeen the Father, [h] ſave he which is of God, he hath ſeen the Father. 47. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [i] He that believeth on me hath everlaſting life. 48. [k] I am that bread of life. 49. [l] Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderneſs, and are dead. 50. [m] This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die. 51. I am the living bread, [n] which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he ſhall live for ever: and the bread that I will give, is my fleſh, [o] which I will give for the life of the world.
52. The Jews therefore [p] ſtrove amongſt themſelves, ſaying, [q] How can this man give us his fleſh to eat? 53.
Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Except ye [r] eat the fleſh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. 54. [s] Whoſo eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. 55. For my fleſh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.
56. He that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, [t] dwelleth in me and I in him. 57. As the living Father hath ſent me, and I live by the Father: ſo he that eat-eth me, even he ſhall live by me. 58. [u] This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead: he that eateth of this bread ſhall live for ever. 59. Theſe things ſaid he in the ſynagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

[q] 1 John iii. 23.
[r] Mat. xii. 38. & xvi. 1. 1 Cor. i. 22.
[s] Ex. xvi. 15. Num. xi. 7. 1 Cor. x. 3.
[t] Pſ. lxxviii. 24, 25.
[u] Ver. 35.
[x] Chap. iv. 15.
[y] Iſa. lv. 1, 2. Chap. iv. 14. & vii. 37.
[z] Mat. xi. 28.
[a] Mat. xxvi. 39. Chap. v. 30.
[b] Chap. iv. 34.
[c] Ibid. x. 28. & xvii 12. & xviii. 9. 1 John ii. 19.
[d] Ver. 27. Chap. iii. 16. & iv. 14.
[e] Mat. xiii. 55. Mark vi 3. Luke iv. 22.
[f] Cant. i. 4. Ver. 65.
[g] Iſa. liv. 13. Jer. xxxi. 34. Heb. viii. 10. & x. 16.
[h] Mat. xi. 27. Chap. i. 18. & vii. 29.
[i] Chap. iii. 16, 18, 36.
[k] Ver. 35, 51.
[l] Ver. 31.
[m] Ver. 51, 58.
[n] Chap. iii. 13.
[o] Heb. x. 10.
[p] Chap. vii. 43. & ix. 16. & x. 19.
[q] Chap. iii. 9.
[r] Mat. xxvi. 26, 28.
[s] Ver. 27. Chap. iv. 14.
[t] 1 John iii. 24. & iv. 16.
[u] Ver. 50, 51.

v. 28—59. In conſequence of what he had ſpoken, the perſons who heard him entered into conference with him, how they might attain that everlaſting life he mentioned.

1. They ſaid unto him, What ſhall we do, that we might work the works of God? He had commanded them to labour for the enduring meat, and they wanted to know what they muſt do; whether any thing more was neceſſary than obedience to the law of Moſes: for they founded all their expectations on their own doings and duties, and thought of no other way to righteouſneſs and life eternal than by the works of the law.

2. Chriſt replied, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him whom he hath ſent. It is not by doing, but by believing, that righteouſneſs and ſalvation are attainable; faith in Jeſus, in his divine character as the Meſſiah, and in the all-ſufficiency of his blood and righteouſneſs, to juſtify the ungodly is the principal thing, without which it is impoſſible to pleaſe God. And this faith is his own work in the ſoul, which we can no more give ourſelves, than we can create a world.

3. They anſwered again, What ſign ſheweſt thou then, that we may ſee, and believe thee, what doſt thou work? They overlooked the miracles he had already performed, and demanded greater. For ſince he ſeemed to aſſume higher authority than that of Moſes, they thought he ſhould produce greater evidences of a divine commiſſion: it is true he had by miracle yeſterday fed five thouſand, but they ſuggeſt Moſes did much more. Our Fathers did eat manna in the deſert; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat. The number there was much greater, the miracle daily continued, and the fare far more delicious than barley loaves.

4. Chriſt rectifies their miſtake. They aſcribed to Moſes what was not his, but God's gift. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Moſes gave you not that bread from heaven; it doth not appear he had the leaſt concern in procuring it; neither did it come from heaven, as they imagined, but merely from the clouds, and ſerved only to ſupport a mortal life: but my Father, who gave you the manna, giveth you the true bread from heaven, of which that was the type and figure. For the bread of God is he (or that) which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world, a proviſion as much ſuperior to the manna in the wilderneſs, as the throne of God is beyond the clouds, and life eternal exceeds the preſent moment of mortality.

5. Ignorantly miſtaking his meaning, as if he ſpoke of material bread, they ſaid unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread. They eagerly deſire that heavenly proviſion, whoſe properties were ſo excellent, and ſo far ſurpaſſed the manna which their fathers did eat in the wilderneſs. They indeed underſtood not what they aſked; but if we have taſted of the heavenly manna, have fed upon the word of Jeſus, and feaſted on the ſweet and precious promiſes which are in him, we ſhall not ceaſe with deep ſenſibility to cry, Lord, evermore give us this bread!

6. Chriſt plainly informs them of his meaning. I am the bread of life; he ſpake not of bread literally, or of a merely temporal happineſs, but of himſelf; a divine perſon become incarnate to give ſpiritual life to immortal ſouls. He is the bread of life; our bodies could better live without daily food, than our ſpirit without the conſtant ſupplies of his grace. He is both the quickening principle of our ſpiritual life, and the conſtant ſupport of it. Therefore, ſaith Chriſt, he that cometh to me ſhall never hunger; and he that believeth in me, ſhall never thirſt; whoſoever by faith applies to Jeſus, ſhall never want the richeſt proviſion to ſatisfy the moſt enlarged deſires of his ſoul. But I ſaid unto you, that ye alſo have ſeen me, and believe not; they had ſeen his miracles, yet through their earthly-mindedneſs and attachment to worldly intereſts, they received him not as a ſpiritual Redeemer, nor truſted upon him for eternal life. Some, indeed, there were who would embrace his goſpel, and be ſaved by it. All that the Father giveth me, according to the everlaſting covenant of grace, as a peculiar people, ſhall come unto me; drawn by Almighty cords of grace irreſiſtible, and enabled to exerciſe faith in me: and him that cometh to me, under whatever load of guilt or corruption he groans, I will in no wiſe caſt out. The Saviour's arms of mercy are open to receive the miſerable and the deſperate: no ſinner who flies to him need fear a repulſe, however great or aggravated his iniquities may be, pardon, peace, grace, and glory, are aſſured to him by the promiſes of the God who cannot lie. For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that ſent me; not on an errand of uncertainty, or to carry on any deſign ſeparately from his Father; but as his ambaſſador, qualified and commiſſioned to execute that glorious work of man's redemption, to which he was appointed; and ready to do and ſuffer whatever the derminate counſel of God hath ordained. And this is the Father's will which hath ſent me, that of all which he hath given me, I ſhould loſe none, but ſhould raiſe it up again at the laſt day. From whence we learn, (1.) That according to the covenant of redemption, a certain number of ſinners are given to Jeſus Chriſt, in whom he ſhall ſee the travel of his ſoul: and herein he acts as the eternal King, ſovereignly exerciſing mercy to ſome, when he might, in juſtice, have condemned all to ſuffer the wages of ſin. (2.) Chriſt will infallibly take care of thoſe whoſe intereſts are lodged in his hands; his grace ſhall find them out, his power preſerve them; and neither the wiles of Satan, nor the temptations of the world, nor the perverſeneſs of the fallen heart, ſhall be able to defeat his purpoſes of love towards them: not one ſhall be loſt, of thoſe whoſe ſins he bore. (3.) As the Saviour undertakes to deliver his people from ſin and all its conſequences, death, which is the wages of ſin, ſhall not have dominion over them; as by his grace their ſouls are reſcued from the power of corruption, their bodies ſhall alſo be redeemed from the grave, and raiſed up in glory at the great day of his appearing. (4.) All thoſe have a part in this ſalvation who hear, and by faith, embrace the goſpel which Chriſt declares. For this is the will of him that ſent me, that every one that ſeeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlaſting life: and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day; the goſpel propoſes a free ſalvation, through Jeſus, to every miſerable ſinner, and who ever receives the record of God concerning his Son, ſees his own deep need of the Saviour and the all-ſufficiency of Jeſus, becomes a partaker of that preſent life of grace, which is the earneſt of the eternal life of glory. They who periſh owe it to their infidelity; they reject the counſel of God againſt their own ſouls, and will not come to Chriſt that they may have life; either through ignorance, inſenſible to their own miſery and want of a Saviour, or through pride, going about to eſtabliſh their own righteouſneſs inſtead of ſubmitting to the righteouſneſs of God.

7. Perceiving now that Chriſt plainly pointed at himſelf, as the living bread endued with ſuch wondrous properties, the Jews murmured and cavilled at him, as if he aſſumed to himſelf extravagant honours, in pretending to come down from heaven, and being the bread of life, and they objected his known deſcent from Joſeph and Mary. Is not this Jeſus the ſon of Joſeph, whoſe father and mother we know? How is it then that he ſaith, I came down from heaven? when his earthly original is ſo evident.

8. Chriſt confutes their cavils, and anſwers their murmurings. He ſaid unto them, Murmur not among yourſelves; he knew their thoughts, and the prejudices they entertained againſt him, ariſing from that native corruption of their hearts, which nothing but Almighty grace could ſubdue. For no man can come to me, except the Father which hath ſent me, draw him; ſuch is the preſent ſtate of fallen man, that he is under an utter impotence to turn unto God, unleſs drawn by the ſpirit of God, and enabled to believe in his dear Son. And to as many as are thus drawn to him, Chriſt ſaith, I will raiſe him up at the laſt day; and the way in which the ſinner is thus wrought upon, is according as it is written in the prophets, Iſa. liv. 13. Jer. xxxi. 34. They ſhall be all taught of God, by his revealed word, and the illumination of his ſpirit. Every one therefore that hath heard and learned of the Father, ſpeaking in his word, and by his ſpirit to the ſoul, cometh unto me, truſting on Jeſus alone for pardon, righteouſneſs, and ſalvation; and without ſuch divine teaching and ſpiritual illumination, the natural man cannot receive the truths of revelation, nor believe in the Son of God. Not that any man hath ſeen the Father, viſibly or perſonally inſtructing him, ſave he which is of God, his incarnate Son, he hath ſeen the Father; is privy to all his councils and deſigns; by him all divine diſcoveries are made, and through his agency the effectual power is communicated to our ſouls, to hear and receive the goſpel-word. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, as a moſt undoubted truth, He that believeth on me, hath everlaſting life; the true believer is already poſſeſſed of it by right and title, through Jeſus, his glorious covenant-head and repreſentative; embraces it in faith and hope, hath the earneſt and foretaſtes of it in preſent grace, and muſt neceſſarily be brought to the actual enjoyment of eternal glory hereafter. I am that bread of life; it is from Chriſt our ſpiritual life is derived, through him it is ſupported, and by him it ſhall be perfected. Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderneſs, and are dead; miraculous as their proviſion was, it only maintained for a while a temporal life, and did not prevent the ravages of death, or render them immortal. But this is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die; for whoever by faith truly feeds upon Chriſt, ſhall never die eternally. I am the living bread which came down from heaven, to be the author of ſpiritual and eternal life: if any man eat of this bread, hungring after the pardon, righteouſneſs, and ſalvation which Jeſus brings, he ſhall live for ever; though not immortal upon earth, yet ſure of an eternity of glory in heaven: and the bread that I will give, is my fleſh, which I will give for the life of the world. His human body, offered up as the great ſacrifice for ſinners, would be the grand procuring cauſe of all thoſe ineſtimable bleſſings he had mentioned; of which not only the Jews, but the Gentile world would be made partakers.

9. The groſs and carnal ideas of the Jews ſtill prevented them from comprehending his meaning. And they ſtrove among themſelves, ſaying, How can this man give us his fleſh to eat? Concluding his aſſertion abſurd and improbable, becauſe they underſtood him, as if ſpeaking of his human fleſh, which ſhould be eaten like bread. An opinion as monſtrous, as that which the Romiſh church hath ſince adopted concerning the fleſh of Jeſus, as corporally eaten in the euchariſt.

Laſtly, Chriſt confirms and explains what he had ſaid concerning his fleſh. It was of abſolute neceſſity, that in a ſpiritual ſenſe, that ſhould be done which was figuratively repreſented by eating his fleſh, and drinking his blood; even that they ſhould be vitally united to him by faith, and become one with him, as the food which is eaten incorporates with our bodies. For verily, verily I ſay unto you, Except ye eat the fleſh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you; without this union of our ſouls to him, we can neither have ſpiritual life here, nor eternal life hereafter. But whoſo eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, not merely partaking of the elements which repreſent theſe; depending on which, many deceive themſelves, and think, if they can but receive the ſacrament before they die, they ſhall infallibly be ſaved; when neither living nor dying will thoſe outward ſigns at all profit thoſe who are ſtrangers to the inward and ſpiritual grace; I ſay, it is not partaking of the outward elements, but the ſpiritual feeding upon Chriſt and his ſaving benefits by faith which is here meant; and whoever doth that, hath eternal life, is now entitled to it, and will ſhortly be put in poſſeſſion of it; and I will raiſe him up at the laſt day. For my fleſh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed; affording the moſt delightful nouriſhment and feaſt for the ſoul, infinitely exceeding any corporal refreſhment. He that eateth my fleſh, and drinketh my blood, with ſpiritual appetite and diſcernment, dwelleth in me, and I in him. He is incorporated with Chriſt, as a member of his body myſtical, is entitled to the remiſſion of ſins and acceptance with God, which, by the blood-ſhedding of Jeſus, is obtained for all who believe in him, and hath Chriſt as the quickning ſpirit formed in his heart, the principle of ſpiritual life, which ſhall reach its utmoſt perfection in eternal glory; the union between him and us once formed, being ever after indiſſoluble. For as the living Father, who is the fountain of life to every creature, hath ſent me, and I, as man and mediator, commiſſioned by him, live by the Father, ſupported and enabled to finiſh the work he hath given me to do; ſo he that eateth me, united to me by faith, ſhall live by me; receiving out of my fulneſs, as the branches are fed by the living root, and their life as eternal as my own. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo. This then is the concluſion of the whole; I am that bread which came down from heaven, concerning which I ſpoke before, and the properties of which are ſo tranſcendently excellent: not as your fathers did eat manna, far different is this bread; that was from the clouds, this from the higheſt heavens; that was but the type, this the antitype and ſubſtance; that only ſupported a momentary life; they who fed thereupon, were ſubject to all the diſeaſes and decays incident to mortality, and are dead; but he that eateth of this bread ſhall live for ever.

This diſcourſe Jeſus held in the ſynagogue at Capernaum, publicly and openly, that all who deſired it might hear and receive his heavenly doctrines. Note, Truth ſeeks no covert. The goſpel of Jeſus muſt be declared openly, and will bear the ſevereſt enquiry. His word is truth.

60. Many therefore of his diſciples, when they had heard this, ſaid, This is an hard ſaying, who can hear it? 61. When Jeſus knew in himſelf, that his diſciples murmured at it, he ſaid unto them, Doth this offend you? 62. [x] What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of man aſcend up where he was before? 63. [y] It is the ſpirit that quickneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing: the words that I ſpeak unto you, they are ſpirit, and they are life. 64. But there are ſome of you that believe not. For [z] Jeſus knew from the beginning, who they were that believed not, and who ſhould betray him. 65. And he ſaid, Therefore [a] ſaid I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father. 66. ¶ From that time many of his diſciples went back, and walked no more with him. 67. Then ſaid Jeſus unto the twelve, Will ye alſo go away? 68. Then Simon Peter anſwered him, Lord, to whom ſhall we go? thou haſt [b] the words of eternal life. 69. And [c] we believe, and are ſure that thou art that Chriſt the Son of the living God. 70. Jeſus anſwered them, [d] Have not I choſen you twelve, and [e] one of you is a devil? 71. He ſpake of Judas Iſcariot, the ſon of Simon: for he it was that ſhould betray him, being one of the twelve.

[x] Chap. iii. 13. Acts i. 9. Eph. iv. 8.

[y] 2 Cor. iii. 6.

[z] Chap. ii. 24, 25. & xiii. 11.

[a] Ver. 44, 45.

[b] Acts v. 20.

[c] Mat. xvi. 16. Chap. i. 49. & xi. 27.

[d] Luke vi. 13.

[e] Chap. xiii. 27.

v. 60—71. We have here an account of the different effects produced by this diſcourſe on the minds of the hearers.

1. Many who had followed him till then as his nominal diſciples were highly ſhocked at what they heard, taking it in a groſs and carnal ſenſe, and not entering into the ſpirit of his words; or they were offended at the divine original and operation which he claimed as coequal with God the Father; or, becauſe it was myſterious, they diſbelieved his doctrine as abſurd: as the infidels and ſcoffers of our day, who, becauſe the myſteries of grace appear not agreeable to their fallen reaſon, ſuppoſe it a mark of ſuperior underſtanding to reject them.

2. Chriſt was appriſed of their murmurings; for he ſees the hard thoughts which ſinners entertain of him, as well as hears their hard ſpeeches. He ſearcheth the heart, and therefore replies, plies, Doth this offend you? If the coming down of the Son of man from heaven appears ſo incredible, What and if ye ſhall ſee the Son of man aſcend up where he was before? This would perhaps yet more aſtoniſh them, conſidering the meanneſs of his preſent appearance, and might ſeem ſtill more improbable to happen. As to what he had obſerved about eating his fleſh, this muſt be underſtood not corporally, but ſpiritually: It is the ſpirit that quickneth, the fleſh profiteth nothing: the bare participation of the outward ordinances avails nothing to procure eternal life. The ſinner's ſoul muſt firſt be quickned by the power of the Spirit of Jeſus, and brought to the diſcernment of ſpiritual things, otherwiſe the moſt nouriſhing words of his goſpel convey no more to the inward man, than meat doth to the dead corpſe. The words that I ſpeak unto you, ſaith he, they are ſpirit, and they are life; to be underſtood not in a literal but ſpiritual ſenſe, and, accompanied by the power of the Holy Ghoſt, become the means of quickening the dead ſinner's ſoul, and maintaining the life which Chriſt beſtows, till it is perfected in eternity. But there are ſome of you that believe not; profeſſing to be diſciples, but in truth not at all experimentally acquainted with the doctrines of the goſpel: for Jeſus knew from the beginning who they were that believed not, and who ſhould betray him. And he ſaid, Therefore ſaid I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father, being powerfully drawn by his effectual grace. Note, (1.) Chriſt knoweth the heart, and ſees the infidelity which reigns within, though covered with the moſt plauſible cloak of profeſſion. (2.) Apoſtates prove they were always hypocrites. (3.) Unleſs the Lord draw us by his grace, we have neither inclination nor ability to follow him.

3. Many, who had murmured before, now utterly withdrew, and returned to their former occupations, to their own ſinful ways, and phariſaical teachers, and never made any farther profeſſion, nor attended any more on his miniſtry. We are not to wonder if we ſee apoſtates; nay many, of whom we had formed the moſt ſanguine hopes, go back: it was ſo from the beginning.

4. Chriſt hereupon addreſſed his twelve choſen ones, that he might draw from them a profeſſion of their faith in him: Will ye alſo go away? Not that he doubted their ſincerity; but it beſpeaks his affection towards them, and his confidence in them, that, whatever others did, they would never follow ſo bad examples; but in general, at leaſt, cleave to him with unſhaken fidelity.

5. Peter's zealous heart cannot bear the ſuſpicion which the queſtion ſeemed to intimate, and therefore, in the name of his brethren, he nobly replies, Lord, to whom ſhall we go? Out of thee we can hope for neither pardon, peace, grace nor glory. Turn where we will, miſery and deſtruction meet us. Thou, and thou alone, haſt the words of eternal life; and we believe all that thou haſt lately ſpoken, and are ſure that thou art that Chriſt, the Son of the living God. Note, (1.) Peter's reply muſt be the anſwer of every faithful ſoul, when tempted to quit his profeſſion: To whom ſhall we go for life and peace? To our ſins? they will deſtroy us. To our own works and endeavours? they cannot juſtify or ſave us. To the world? it will deceive our expectations. Chriſt, and Chriſt alone, is the only foundation of hope and fountain of happineſs to a fallen ſinner: out of him, nothing but wrath and ruin remain for us. (2.) The more ſteadily and aſſuredly we truſt in the Son of God, the more we honour him. And that faith which gives him glory, will bring us the moſt reviving conſolations.

6. Jeſus anſwered them, to check too great ſelf-confidence, and prepare them for the iſſue, Have not I choſen you twelve to the diſtinguiſhed honour of apoſtleſhip, and one of you is a devil? poſſeſſed by that wicked ſpirit, in his heart a traitor and a murderer. He ſpake of Judas Iſcariot, the ſon of Simon; for he it was that ſhould betray him, as Chriſt full well knew; though he was one of the twelve, which aggravated his guilt. Note, (1.) A man, like Judas, may have been the means of caſting out devils from others, and yet be a devil himſelf. Among the moſt flaming profeſſors there will be found hypocrites and apoſtates. Let him that thinketh he ſtandeth take heed leſt he fall. (2.) The pureſt ſocieties on earth cannot anſwer for all their members. It is in heaven alone that the wheat will be free from the chaff.

CHAP. VII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's declining for ſome time to appear publicly in Judea, ver. 1. 2. His deſign to go up to Jeruſalem at the feaſt of tabernacles, and his diſcourſe with his kindred in Galilee concerning his going up to this feaſt, ver. 3—13. 3. His preaching publicly in the temple at that feaſt. (1.) In the midſt of the feaſt, ver. 14, 15. we have his diſcourſe with the Jews, [1.] Concerning his doctrine, ver. 16—18. [2.] Concerning the crime of ſabbath-breaking laid to his charge, ver. 19—24. [3.] Concerning himſelf, both whence he came, and whither he was going, ver. 25—36. (2.) On the laſt day of the feaſt, [1.] His gracious invitation to poor ſouls to come to him, ver. 37—39. [2.] The reception that it met with. 1. Many of the people diſputed about it, ver. 40—44. 2. The chief prieſts would have brought him into trouble for it, but were firſt balked by their officers, ver. 45—49. and then ſilenced by one of their own court, ver. 50—53.

1. AFTER theſe things, Jeſus walked in Galilee: for he would not walk in Jewry, becauſe [a] the Jews ſought to kill him. 2. Now [b] the Jews feaſt of tabernacles was at hand. 3. [c] His brethren therefore ſaid unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy diſciples alſo may ſee the works that thou doſt. 4. For there is no man that doth any thing in ſecret, and he himſelf ſeeketh to be known openly: If thou do theſe things, ſhew thyſelf to the world. 5. For [d] neither did his brethren believe in him. 6. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, [e] My time is not yet come: but your time is alway ready. 7. [f] The world cannot hate you; but me it hateth, [g] becauſe I teſtify of it that the works thereof are evil. 8. Go ye up unto this feaſt: I go not up yet unto this feaſt, for [h] my time is not yet full come. 9. When he had ſaid theſe words unto them, he abode ſtill in Galilee. 10. ¶ But when his brethren were gone up, then went he alſo up unto the feaſt, not openly, but as it were in ſecret. 11. Then [i] the Jews ſought him at the feaſt, and ſaid, Where is he? 12. And [k] there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for [l] ſome ſaid, He is a good man: others ſaid, Nay; but he deceiveth the people. 13. Howbeit, no man ſpake openly of him, [m] for fear of the Jews.

[a] Chap. v. 16, 18.
[b] Lev. xxiii. 34.
[c] Mat. xii. 46. Mark iii. 31. Acts i. 14.
[d] Mark iii. 21.
[e] Chap. ii. 4. & viii. 20. Ver. 8, 30.
[f] Chap. xv. 19.
[g] Chap. iii. 10.
[h] Chap. viii. 20.
[i] Chap. xi. 56.
[k] Chap. ix. 16. & x. 19.
[l] Mat. xxi. 46. Luke vii. 16. Chap. vi. 14. Ver. 40.
[m] Chap. ix. 22. & xii. 42. & xix. 38.

v. 1—13. As the inveterate malignity of the chief prieſts and Phariſees led them to determine the death of Jeſus, by popular fury or by form of law; to avoid their devices, he continued in Galilee. They who had refuſed the light of truth, have it juſtly withdrawn from them; and where our enemies rage, and our ſafety is in danger, it is prudent to depart, and carry that goſpel of God to others, which ſinners againſt their own ſouls reject and perſecute. We have here,

1. The converſation which paſſed in Galilee between Jeſus and ſome of his relations. The feaſt of tabernacles being at hand, when a great concourſe of people would be aſſembled in Jeruſalem:

(1.) They urge him to make his public appearance there, and not ſtay in that obſcure part of the country, but go up to the metropolis and ſhew himſelf, and his wondrous works, if really they would bear the teſt of examination: ſince this could not fail of getting him diſciples among the great men at Jeruſalem, and of confirming thoſe he had already made, who would be aſſembled there on this ſolemnity. And they ſuggeſt this would be the way moſt effectually to advance his own reputation and honour, which they ſinfully imagined he, like the men of the world, deſigned. For neither did his brethren believe in him. As he did not anſwer their expectations in erecting a temporal kingdom, they began to ſuſpect he was not the Meſſiah, which they at firſt hoped; and therefore wanted him to declare himſelf, and produce his credentials, or go up to Jeruſalem, where his pretenſions, if falſe, might be detected. Note, (1.) Many appear at public ordinances to ſhew themſelves; not to aſcribe glory to God, but to ſecure reputation to themſelves. (2.) They who want a temporal kingdom evidently prove that they are faithleſs followers of Chriſt.

(2.) Chriſt mildly replies to their perverſe ſuggeſtions, My time is not yet come for going up to the feaſt, but your time is always ready, you may appear there at any time without any danger; they ſeek not your lives, as they do mine. The world cannot hate you, becauſe your ſpirit, temper, and conduct, are but too conformed thereunto; but me it hateth, becauſe I teſtify of it, that the works thereof are evil, which cannot but exaſperate thoſe who determine not to part with their beloved ſins. Go ye therefore up unto the feaſt without delay: I go not up yet unto the feaſt, for my time is not yet full come. Note, (1.) Chriſt hath fixed the time for all his purpoſes, and we may be aſſured that is the beſt time, and therefore are bound chearfully and confidently to wait his leiſure. (2.) Sinners hate the light of truth, and cannot but be exaſperated with thoſe reproofs, to which they obſtinately refuſe to ſubmit. (3.) Whatever pretences men make for their enmity againſt the goſpel and the preachers of it, the true cauſe is this, they cannot endure the teſtimony born againſt their evil deeds. (4.) They who go to ordinances with an hypocritical ſpirit may never expect the comfort of Chriſt's preſence in them.

2. The journey of Jeſus to Jeruſalem. He ſtaid a while longer in Galilee, till his brethren were gone up to the feaſt; and then, when his time was come, he went himſelf, not openly, but as it were in ſecret, that he might give no offence to the ruling powers, who, if he came with a multitude, might interpret it into a ſeditious deſign. Note, Though the cauſe of Chriſt cannot be carried on without notice, it will be prudent to do it with as little noiſe as poſſible. We need not provoke needleſs oppoſition: it will come faſt enough upon us, if we are faithful.

3. The expectation which was raiſed of him. The Jews ſought him at the feaſt, and ſaid, Where is he? Some wiſhed to ſee him out of curioſity; ſome out of malice, hoping to deſtroy him; and ſome out of better motives, expecting to receive ſome gracious inſtructions from him. And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him, their ſentiments being greatly divided: ſome ſaid he is a good man, convinced by his miracles, ſtruck with his exemplary life, and influenced by his holy doctrine; others, hardened in infidelity, though they had not one ſingle charge of evil to produce againſt him, ſaid, Nay, but he deceiveth the people; as if there was ſome latent impoſture under theſe ſpecious appearances. Howbeit, no man ſpake openly of him, for fear of the Jews. Whatever good opinion any formed of him, they were very cautious how they ſpoke their ſentiments, it being highly dangerous to appear among his approvers, when thoſe who were in power were known to be the avowed enemies and bitter perſecutors of him and his diſciples. Note, (1.) Chriſt's miniſters, like himſelf, muſt expect to paſs through evil report and good report; as deceivers, and yet true. (2.) They who are obſtinate in rejecting the truth, will find ſomething to quarrel with in the moſt ſpotleſs characters, and ſuppoſe thoſe who act with greateſt ſimplicity for God's glory, are carrying on ſome deſign of their own.

14. ¶ Now about the midſt of the feaſt, Jeſus went up into the temple, and taught. 15. And the Jews marvelled, ſaying, [n] How knoweth this man letters, having never learned? 16. Jeſus anſwered them, and ſaid, [o] My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. 17. [p] If any man † will do his will, he ſhall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeak of myſelf. 18. [q] He that ſpeaketh of himſelf, ſeeketh his own glory: but he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, the ſame is true, and no unrighteouſneſs is in him. 19. [r] Did not Moſes give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? [s] Why go ye about to kill me? 20. The people anſwered and ſaid, [t] Thou haſt a devil: who goeth about to kill thee? 21. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel. 22. [u] Moſes therefore gave unto you circumciſion, (not becauſe it is of Moſes, [x] but of the fathers) and ye on the ſabbath-day circumciſe a man. 23. If a man on the ſabbath-day receive circumciſion, that the law of Moſes ſhould not be broken; are ye angry at me, becauſe [y] I have made a man every whit whole on the ſabbath-day? 24. [z] Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment. 25. Then ſaid ſome of them of Jeruſalem, Is not this he [a] whom they ſeek to kill? 26. But lo, he ſpeaketh boldly, and they ſay nothing unto him: do the rulers know indeed that this is the very Chriſt? 27. Howbeit [b] we know this man whence he is: but when Chriſt cometh, no man knoweth whence he is. 28. Then cried Jeſus in the temple as he taught, ſaying, [c] Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am: and [d] I am not come of myſelf, but he that ſent me [e] is true, [f] whom ye know not. 29. But [g] I know him, for I am from him, and he hath ſent me. 30. Then [h] they ſought to take him: but [i] no man laid hands on him, becauſe his hour was not yet come. 31. And [k] many of the people believed on him, and ſaid, When Chriſt cometh, will he do more miracles than theſe which this man hath done? 32. ¶ The Phariſees heard that the people murmured ſuch things concerning him: and the Phariſees, and the chief prieſts ſent officers to take him. 33. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, [l] Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that ſent me. 34. [m] Ye ſhall ſeek me, and ſhall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come. 35. Then ſaid the Jews among themſelves, Whither will he go, that we ſhall not find him? will he go unto [n] the diſperſed amonſt the ‡ Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles? 36. What manner of ſaying is this that he ſaid, Ye ſhall ſeek me, and ſhall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

[n] Mark vi. 3.
[o] Chap. viii. 28. & xii. 49. & xiv. 10, 24.
[p] Ecclus xxi. 11.
† Or is willing to do.
[q] Chap. v. 41.
[r] Ex. xxiv. 3. Acts vii. 35, &c.
[s] Chap. v. 16, 18. & xi. 53.
[t] Chap. viii. 48, 52. & x. 20.
[u] Lev. xii. 3.
[x] Gen. xvii. 10.
[y] Chap. v. 8, 9.
[z] Deut. i. 16, 17. Prov. xxiv. 23.
[a] Ver. 19.
[b] Mat. xiii. 55. Mark vi. 3. Luke iv. 22.
[c] Chap. viii. 14.
[d] Chap. v. 43. & viii. 42.
[e] Chap. v. 32. & viii. 26. Rom. iii. 4.
[f] Chap. i. 18. & viii. 55.
[g] Mat. xi. 27. Chap. x. 15.
[h] Mark xi. 18. Luke xix. 47. & xx. 19. Ver. 19. Chap. viii. 37.
[i] Ver. 44. Chap. viii. 20.
[k] Chap. viii. 30.
[l] Chap. xvi. 16.
[m] Hoſ. v. 6. Chap. viii. 21. & xiii. 33.
[n] Iſa. xi. 12. Jam. i. 1. 1 Pet. i. 1.
‡ Gr. Greeks.

v. 14—36. When Chriſt was come up to Jeruſalem, about the midſt of the feaſt, we find him, where indeed we might expect to meet him, in the temple, teaching the people. He would ſhew, he was neither aſhamed of the doctrine he preached, nor afraid of the enemies who threatned him. We are told,

1. The admiration which the hearers expreſſed at his preaching, ſaying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned? Though he had been brought up in none of their ſchools, he appeared ſo wiſe in the Scriptures, opened them with ſuch evidence, and reaſoned upon them with ſuch force of argument, as could not but aſtoniſh them; and probably led ſome to conclude, that ſuch extraordinary gifts were not attained without diabolical aſſiſtance.

2. The reply of Jeſus. My doctrine is not mine, but his that ſent me. As Mediator, he received his miſſion, and ability to diſcharge his office, from his Father, and needed no human aſſiſtance, nor advanced ought of his own invention. What he taught was divine in its original, and deſigned ultimately to advance the glory of God, from whom it came. If any man will do his will, he ſhall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I ſpeak of myſelf: he that, laying aſide his prejudices, as an humble enquirer, comes, deſiring to be taught, ſhall find ſuch evidence in the goſpel, as to demonſtrate the divine authority of its author, and ſhall experience ſuch powerful and bleſſed effects produced thereby, as ſhall moſt indubitably prove it to be the word (not of man, but) of God. He that ſpeaketh of himſelf, ſeeketh his own glory: an impoſtor would ſeek to advance his own reputation and intereſts, as the falſe teachers did: but he that ſeeketh his glory that ſent him, as Chriſt did, and all his faithful miniſters will do, the ſame is true, he evidences hereby the ſimplicity of his heart; and no unrighteouſneſs is in him, no fraud nor falſehood in his preaching or deſigns. They pretended indeed great zeal for the law of Moſes, and founded their ſuggeſtions of his being an impoſtor on the ſuppoſition that he violated the ſabbath, and taught men to diſregard the Moſaical inſtitutions; when, in fact, they themſelves were living in the groſſeſt violation of the plaineſt precepts of it: Did not Moſes give you the law? and yet none of you keepeth the law. Why go ye about to kill me? purpoſing to murder him, becauſe of the miracle he had wrought on the impotent man on the ſabbath-day. Note, (1.) They who ſpeak of themſelves, without a divine call, and for themſelves, with a view to their own honour and advantage, evidently ſhew the falſehood of their religious pretenſions: theſe God hath never ſent. (2.) Many pretend a great zeal for the intereſts of morality, and a jealouſy leſt the grace of the goſpel ſhould entrench upon them, who live themſelves in the open violation of the divine law.

3. The people, who were really ignorant of the deſigns of the enemies of Jeſus, or at leaſt affected to be ſo, expreſs their ſurpriſe at the accuſation he brought againſt them. They anſwered and ſaid, Thou haſt a devil; thou talkeſt as one poſſeſſed: Who goeth about to kill thee? They would inſinuate that his fears were groundleſs, the charge unjuſt, and himſelf a liar. Let us not wonder if we ſuffer the moſt vile aſperſions, are counted madmen, liars, devils. The Son of God was thus reproached before us.

4. Overlooking their perverſeneſs and abuſe, our Lord proceeds to vindicate that action which they had ſo much condemned, and for which they went about to kill him. I have done one work, in healing the impotent man; and ye all marvel, becauſe it was done on the ſabbath-day; as if this was inconſiſtent with the character he profeſſed as a teacher ſent from God. And yet they themſelves commonly practiſed what might much more juſtly be regarded as a breach of the ſabbath, than his healing a cripple by a word ſpeaking. Moſes therefore gave unto you circumciſion, as an ordinance to be obſerved among you, (not becauſe it is of Moſes, inſtituted by him; but of the fathers, being commanded of God to Abraham long before the days of Moſes) and ye on the ſabbath circumciſe a man. If a man on the ſabbath-day receive circumciſion, that the law of Moſes ſhould not be broken, which enjoins it to be performed on the eighth day, whenever that happened, are ye angry with me, becauſe I made a man every whit whole on the ſabbath-day? where they allowed themſelves to circumciſe and dreſs a wound on that day, how could they, with any ſhew of reaſon, cenſure him, who, without the leaſt trouble, merely by a word, had cured an object ſo miſerable? Partial judges were they indeed, and juſtly therefore doth he rebuke them, Judge not according to appearance, with reſpect of perſons, condemning that in him which they allowed in their own countrymen; or becauſe of the meanneſs of his outward circumſtances, paying a higher reſpect to the deciſions of their own more ſpecious and pompous rabbi's than to his: but judge righteous judgment, weighing the real merits of the caſe, without prejudice, and then they would be convinced, that their own practice would be a full vindication of his conduct. Note, (1.) Unreaſonable and wicked men are they indeed, who cenſure and condemn others for what they allow, nay approve, in themſelves. (2.) Such is the force of prejudice, that it often blinds the eyes againſt the moſt glaring conviction. (3.) All is not gold which glitters: we muſt look farther than appearances, if we would learn the true characters of men. (4.) Chriſt's words and works demand nothing but an impartial examination to prove their excellence.

5. Some of the inhabitants of Jeruſalem, to whom the deſigns of the chief prieſts and rulers were no ſecret, were exceedingly aſtoniſhed at the boldneſs of Chriſt's diſcourſe, and wondered they did not immediately attempt to ſeize him, ſuggeſting as if their withholding their hands from him gave ſuſpicion that they had changed their ſentiments concerning him, and began themſelves to think him the Meſſiah. As for themſelves, they could entertain no ſuch imagination, becauſe they knew whence he was: but, when Chriſt cometh, no man knoweth whence he is; the Scripture having ſpoken of him as like Melchizedek, whoſe deſcent is unknown; as one whoſe goings forth have been from everlaſting, and whoſe generation none can declare. Their reaſoning however was fallacious: for, though theſe ſcriptures were true with regard to his divine nature and deſignation to his mediatorial office, of whom he ſhould ſpring, and where he ſhould be born, in his human nature, had been expreſsly determined. Note, (1.) God hath reſtraints upon the hands and hearts of wicked men, and marvellouſly withholds them from the evil which they deſign and have an opportunity to perform. (2.) They who miſtake the Scriptures err moſt dangerouſly, as they ſupport themſelves in their own imagination with the conceit of divine authority.

6. Chriſt replies to theſe cavils. It was true they knew his earthly deſcent: their grand miſtake lay in not looking higher, to his original from above, and his miſſion from God. I am not come of myſelf, aſſuming this honour; but he that ſent me is true to all his promiſes made of and to the Meſſiah; whom ye know not; for, though they believed in one eternal Jehovah, they did not truly know the Scripture God, as ſubſiſting in Father, Son, and Holy Ghoſt; but I know him, his perfections and purpoſes; for I am from him, by eſſential emanation, as the beams from the ſun; and he hath ſent me, in the character of Mediator, to accompliſh the ſalvation of his people.

7. Very different were the effects produced upon the hearers. Some were highly incenſed by his declarations, and would have inſtantly ſeized him; but they were under a divine reſtraint; the determinate hour fixed in the divine counſels not being yet come. Others, eſpecially of the common people, ſtruck with what they heard and ſaw, could not withhold from expreſſing their perſuaſion that this muſt be the Chriſt: for it could not be conceived, whenever he came, that he ſhould do greater miracles than Jeſus wrought. Note, (1.) Though the enmity of wicked men be never ſo great againſt us, it is a comfortable conſideration that they can do nothing without a divine permiſſion; and all their power or policy muſt prove abortive to oppreſs the faithful miniſters of Chriſt, who bear teſtimony to his truth, till the hour appointed in God's eternal counſels comes. (2.) They who receive the goſpel of Jeſus are uſually ſuch as man deſpiſeth, as being of the poor and unlearned multitude. What therefore the world accounts their reproach, that they are chiefly followed by ſuch, the miniſters of the goſpel ſhould eſteem their honour.

8. The Phariſees and rulers, jealous leſt his credit and influence with the people ſhould increaſe, could not hear theſe murmurs without indignation, and therefore immediately diſpatched officers to arreſt him, and to bring him before the ſanhedrim. Note, Wicked inſtruments will not be wanting, where power is in the hands of perſecutors.

9. Chriſt, who knew what was plotting againſt him, addreſſed the officers and people, ſaying, Yet a little while I am with you, and till that time was expired all their malicious attempts were impotent; and then I go unto him that ſent me, to my Father, from whom I came. Ye ſhall ſeek me; when your calamity comes, you will wiſh for the Meſſiah; and ſhall not find me, nor obtain the leaſt relief or reſpite, looking for help from heaven in vain: and where I am, thither ye cannot come, baniſhed for ever from that glory where I am. Though Chriſt's human nature was on earth, in his divine nature he was ſtill enthroned in the light, which no man can approach unto. Note, (1.) It is too late to cry for mercy when it is the time of judgment. They who reject the Saviour upon earth, and die faithleſs and impenitent, muſt never hope to be with him where he is, in heaven. (2.) A little while will deliver the faithful out of all their troubles. Let us therefore patiently endure. The time is ſhort.

Laſtly, Miſtaking his meaning, they bewildered themſelves in idle and vain reaſonings whither he would go, that they ſhould not find him; whether among the diſperſed Jews, or among the Gentiles; as if he could find no diſciples among thoſe, who were judges of his pretenſions; or as defying him to go where they could not follow him.

37. [o] In the laſt day, that great day of the feaſt, Jeſus ſtood and cried, ſaying, [p] If any man thirſt, let him come unto me, and drink. 38. He that believeth on me, as the ſcripture hath ſaid, [q] out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water. 39. (But [r] this ſpake he of the Spirit, [s] which they that believe on him ſhould receive: for the holy Ghoſt was not yet given, becauſe that Jeſus was not yet glorified.) 40. ¶ Many of the people therefore, when they heard this ſaying, ſaid, Of a truth this is [t] the prophet. 41. Others ſaid, [u] This is the Chriſt. But ſome ſaid, [x] Shall Chriſt come out of Galilee? 42. Hath not the ſcripture ſaid, That Chriſt cometh [y] of the ſeed of David, and [z] out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was? 43. So [a] there was a diviſion among the people becauſe of him. 44. And [b] ſome of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

[o] Lev. xxiii. 36.
[p] Iſa. lv. 1. Chap. vi. 35. Rev. xxii. 17.
[q] Prov. x. 11. Iſa. lviii. 11. Chap. iv. 14.
[r] Iſa. xliv. 3. Joel ii. 28. Chap. vi. 7. Acts ii. 17.
[s] Acts xix. 2. Eph. i. 13.
[t] Deut. xviii. 15. Chap. i. 21. & vi. 14.
[u] Chap. iv. 42.
[x] Ver. 52. Chap. i. 46.
[y] Pſ. cxxxii. 11.
[z] Mic. v. 2.
[a] Ver. 12. Chap. ix. 16. & x. 19.
[b] Ver. 30.

v. 37—44. The officers returned without executing their commiſſion, and Jeſus went on in the public exerciſe of his miniſtry. We have,

1. His diſcourſe in the laſt day of the feaſt, when a vaſt concourſe attended at the temple, and they uſed with great ſolemnity to draw water from the pool of Siloam, and pour it out with great rejoicings. On which he took occaſion to ſpeak of himſelf as the living water. He cried, If any man thirſt, let him come unto me, and drink. Earneſt to invite poor ſinners to partake of his rich grace, he lifted up his voice aloud, and urged them to come to him and be happy. The invitation is general, to any man that thirſts: and none can truly come to Chriſt but they who feel their want of him, and therefore hunger and thirſt after him and his righteouſneſs; to ſuch Chriſt is a fountain of living waters, refreſhing and ſatisfying the longing deſires of the ſoul. He that believeth on me, as the only Saviour, and repoſes his entire confidence on my all-ſufficiency to ſupply his every want, as the ſcripture hath ſaid, out of his belly ſhall flow rivers of living water; ſuch an abundance of ſpiritual gifts, graces, and conſolations, ſhall be beſtowed upon him, that, like a perpetual and copious fountain, they ſhall flow forth in ſtreams of righteouſneſs, and diffuſe bleſſings on every ſide, Iſa. xli. 18. xliii. 20. xliv. 3. lviii. 2. Joel ii. 28.

2. The Evangeliſt explains the meaning of Chriſt's words. This ſpake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him ſhould receive, in a more abundant and glorious manner than had been ever vouchſafed before: for the holy Ghoſt was not yet given, in that moſt plentiful effuſion of his divine influences which was promiſed, Joel ii. 28. becauſe that Jeſus was not yet glorified: and it was needful he ſhould firſt paſs through his ſtate of humiliation, and enter into his glory; when, on the day of Pentecoſt, the moſt aſtoniſhing out-pouring of the Spirit ſhould atteſt the Saviour's exaltation; and not only the miraculous powers communicated by him ſhould evidence the divine authority under which the apoſtles acted, but the ſtrongeſt demonſtration of his effectual power ſhould accompany their preaching, and under the goſpel diſpenſation the ſouls of thoſe who were converted ſhould be filled with the largeſt meaſures of light, holineſs, and joy.

3. The people were divided greatly in their ſentiments concerning Chriſt. Many, ſtruck with his divine teaching, could not help expreſſing their perſuaſion of his miſſion from God, as that prophet promiſed, Deut. xviii. 15. which they underſtood as the forerunner of the Meſſiah. Others went farther; thinking him not the harbinger, but the King Meſſiah himſelf. But others, prejudiced by their national pride and falſe notions of the Meſſiah, objected that he came out of Galilee, whereas Chriſt was to deſcend from the lineage of David, and to come from Bethlehem, the reſidence of David's anceſtors, as he did, though they knew it not. Thus, whilſt the ſentiments of the people were divided, the officers and his enemies, though they would fain have arreſted him, were reſtrained by a divine power, and offered him no violence. Note, (1.) The goſpel of Chriſt often creates great diviſions; for, though it breathes nothing but peace, they who refuſe to receive the truth cannot but oppoſe it. (2.) Many flatter themſelves they have right on their ſide, for want of examining into facts and evidences, when their concluſions would often be found utterly unſupported.

45. Then came the officers to the chief prieſts and Phariſees; and they ſaid unto them, Why have ye not brought him? 46. The officers anſwered, [c] Never man ſpake like this man. 47. Then anſwered them the Phariſees, Are ye alſo deceived? 48. [d] Have any of the rulers, or of the Phariſees believed on him? 49. But this people who knoweth not the law are curſed. 50. Nicodemus ſaith unto them, ([e] he that came † to Jeſus by night, being one of them) 51. [f] Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doth? 52. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, Art thou alſo of Galilee? Search and look: for [g] out of Galilee ariſeth no prophet. 53. And every man went unto his own houſe.

[c] Mat. vii. 29.
[d] Chap. xii. 42. Acts vi. 7. 1 Cor. i. 26. & ii. 8.
[e] Chap. iii. 2.
† Gr. To him.
[f] Deut. i. 17. & xix. 15.
[g] Iſa. ix. 1, 2. Mat. iv. 15. Chap. i. 46.

v. 45—53. Whilſt the chief prieſts and Phariſees, as in duty bound, ſhould have been in the temple, leading the devotions of the people, we find them maliciouſly conſulting how to deſtroy the Lord of that ſacred place, for which they profeſſed ſo high a veneration.

1. The officers returned without the priſoner, and are ſharply queſtioned why they have not executed their orders. They honeſtly acknowledge they could not; they were ſo over-awed with the majeſty of Jeſus, with the power and evidence of his diſcourſe, that their hearts failed them. Never man ſpake like this man. Note, There is a power accompanying the preaching of the goſpel, which hath often diſarmed the rage of bittereſt enemies, and made thoſe bow down before the word of truth who came to diſturb the preacher.

2. The Phariſees, with indignation, upbraided them with their weakneſs. Are ye alſo deceived? Can men of your ſenſe and rank be impoſed upon by ſuch a deluſion? Have any of the rulers, or of the Phariſees, believed on him? Men of the greateſt abilities, faſhion, and reputation; the wiſeſt and moſt devout: but this people who know not the law, the vulgar herd, are curſed; abandoned of God to every impoſtor, and through their ignorance of the law, unable to judge of his pretenſions. Note, (1.) Few of the rulers and Phariſees, the great men, and pious devotees, who value themſelves on their own goodneſs, are found among the diſciples of Jeſus in any age. (2.) Many are prejudiced againſt the goſpel, becauſe they ſee the profeſſion of it is unfaſhionable, and not the way to this world's preferment. (3.) It is common with this world's wiſe men to treat the poor diſciples of Jeſus as an ignorant, contemptible, deluded ſet of creatures; yet to the babes hath God revealed, what they, who boaſt of their ſuperior wiſdom, never knew. (4.) The curſe cauſeleſs will not fall, but upon the head of him that utters it.

3. Nicodemus, who had viſited Jeſus by night, chap. iii. 2. and was ſecretly a diſciple, could not hear thoſe infamous and unjuſt reflections, unmoved; and therefore aſſuming courage, he remonſtrated againſt their unreaſonable and illegal manner of proceeding. They condemned unheard, contrary to all rules of juſtice and equity; whereas, at leaſt, they ſhould have given Chriſt an impartial hearing, and examined thoroughly into facts, before they decided on the merits of the caſe. Nothing could be more ſenſible and juſt than the maxim, but it doth not appear that any ſeconded or ſupported the motion. Note, (1.) Chriſt hath ſome that dare own his cauſe, even among the great and noble. (2.) It is highly wicked and unjuſt to condemn any man till he hath had a fair hearing, and liberty to ſpeak in his own defence.

4. Inſtead of refuting the force of his argument, they fell to reviling; Art thou alſo of Galilee? A diſciple of this deſpicable Galilean? Search, and look; for out of Galilee ariſeth no prophet. They concluded Jeſus had been born in Galilee, becauſe he had made it his chief abode; and as falſe was their aſſertion concerning the ſcriptures; for Jonah was of Galilee, and probably Nahum and Elijah alſo. Note, (1.) It is a ſure ſign of a bad cauſe, when men have recourſe to abuſe in the ſtead of argument. (2.) Many confidently appeal to the ſcriptures, as if it was the ſame thing to aſſert and prove; but we muſt examine for ourſelves, and not take the ſcripture upon truſt.

5. Hereupon the council ſeparated, and each retired to his own home, unable to anſwer Nicodemus, and aſhamed to proceed farther, where the injuſtice was ſo glaring. Note, One faithful man, who dares make a ſtand for Chriſt, will often ſilence and confound a whole company of gainſayers.

CHAP. VIII.

In this chapter we have, 1. Chriſt's evading the ſnare which the Jews laid for him, in bringing to him a woman taken in adultery, ver. 1—11. 2. Divers diſcourſes or conferences of his with the Jews that cavilled at him, and ſought occaſion againſt him, and made every thing he ſaid a matter of a controverſy. (1.) Concerning his being the light of the world, ver. 12—20. (2.) Concerning the ruin of the unbelieving Jews, ver. 21—30. (3.) Concerning liberty and bondage, ver. 31—37. (4.) Concerning his Father and their Father, ver. 38—47. (5.) Here is his diſcourſe in anſwer to their blaſphemous reproaches, ver. 48—50. (6.) Concerning the immortality of believers, ver. 51—59. And in all this he endured the contradiction of ſinners againſt himſelf.

1. JESUS went unto the mount of olives: 2. And early in the morning he came again into the temple, and all the people came unto him; and he ſat down and taught them. 3. And the ſcribes and Phariſees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when they had ſet her in the midſt, 4. They ſay unto him, Maſter, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act. 5. Now [a] Moſes in the law commanded us, that ſuch ſhould be ſtoned: but what ſayeſt thou? 6. This they ſaid, tempting him, that they might have to accuſe him. But Jeſus ſtooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground as though he heard them not. 7. So when they continued aſking him, he lifted up himſelf, and ſaid unto them, [b] He that is without ſin among you, let him firſt caſt a ſtone at her. 8. And again he ſtooped down, and wrote on the ground. 9. And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conſcience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldeſt, even unto the laſt: and Jeſus was left alone, and the woman ſtanding in the midſt. 10. When Jeſus had lifted up himſelf, and ſaw none but the woman, he ſaid unto her, Woman, where are thoſe thine accuſers? hath no man condemned thee? 11. She ſaid, no man, Lord. And Jeſus ſaid unto her, [c] Neither do I condemn thee: go, and ſin no more.

[a] Lev. xx. 10. Deut. xxii. 22.

[b] Deut. xvii. 7. Rom. ii. 1.

[c] Chap. iii. 17.

v. 1—11. According to his uſual cuſtom, our Lord at evening went unto the mount of olives; perhaps to the houſe of his friend Lazarus; or to retire for communion with God; or to avoid the danger of ſome popular tumult, which his implacable enemies might attempt to raiſe againſt him in the night. In the morning early he returned to the temple, and ſat down, as one having authority, to preach the goſpel to the multitudes which crowded around him. Note, Early riſing to wait upon God will be a gracious preſage of a happy day.

Whilſt Chriſt was engaged in this bleſſed employment, we are told the interruption he met with from his invenomed enemies.

1. They propoſed a caſe to him, the deciſion of which they flattered themſelves would bring him into diſgrace with the people, or embroil him with the government. They bring a woman taken in adultery, in the very act; for, though ſuch deeds of darkneſs uſually are concealed with deepeſt cunning, God is ſometimes pleaſed ſtrangely to bring to light ſuch deadly works, and to expoſe thoſe to the infamy of the world, who were emboldened to tranſgreſs in the fooliſh confidence that no eye ſeeth me. The proof was evident, the law expreſs; but, as he aſſumed authority to make alterations therein, they deſire to know what was his judgment on the caſe, hoping to get ſome matter of accuſation againſt him. On the one hand, if he ſhould command the law to be put in force, they would accuſe him to the Roman government as pronouncing ſentence of death, and aſſuming judicial authority; and to the people, as acting inconſiſtent with himſelf, who invited publicans and ſinners to come to him, and willingly converſed and eat and drank with them. On the other, if he ſhould acquit her, or refuſe to confirm the ſentence the law had pronounced, they would brand him as an enemy to the divine inſtitutions, a violater of the law, and a patron of the moſt ſcandalous enormities.

2. Chriſt, who knew their wickedneſs, ſeemed to pay no regard to the caſe they propoſed; ſtooping down and writing on the ground, as though he heard them not. But, as they now thought he was in a dilemma from which he could not diſentangle himſelf, they urged him vehemently to anſwer their queſtion. When raiſing himſelf, with majeſty and wiſdom which confounded his enemies, he bids him that was without ſin caſt the firſt ſtone at her. Since the hands of the witneſſes ſhould be firſt upon the criminals, Deut. xvii. 7. it became them, who appeared ſo zealous in puniſhing the ſins of others, to ſee that they were themſelves free from the like or more infamous crimes; elſe it would be ſtrangely abſurd in them to execute the ſentence, however juſt. Thus he teſtified his approbation of the law, without encouraging their proſecution; and effectually ſaved his own reputation, without any expreſs condemnation of the poor criminal. Note, (1.) When we have to deal with crafty foes, a cautious anſwer is but needful prudence. (2.) Before we condemn others, we ſhould firſt take care that we are not chargeable with the ſame or greater evils than we cenſure in them.

3. Whilſt he ſtooped again to the ground, to give them a moment's time to pauſe, reflect, and retire; they, convicted by their conſciences, ſlunk away, fearing leſt their own ſins ſhould be brought to light to their confuſion. The eldeſt led the way, and the younger followed: ſo that, all theſe malignant accuſers being fled, the woman was left alone with Jeſus, and thoſe who before had been attending his miniſtry. Note, (1.) Many are more afraid of being ſhamed for their ſins than of being damned. (2.) They, who, under convictions, fly from Chriſt, to get rid of them, inſtead of coming to him with humble confuſion to obtain pardon, wilfully deſtroy themſelves.

4. The trembling criminal ſtill ſtood at his bar; when, lifting up himſelf, the merciful Judge queſtions her, Where are thoſe thine accuſers? hath none condemned thee? nor offered to caſt a ſtone at thee? She ſaith, No man, Lord. And Jeſus ſaid, Neither do I condemn thee: go, and ſin no more. As he came not upon earth to be a temporal judge, he left the ſword of magiſtracy to the powers that ruled; and diſmiſſed her, with a ſolemn warning to beware of returning again unto wickedneſs, leſt a more dreadful puniſhment than the civil magiſtrate could inflict ſhould be her portion in the laſt great day. Note, (1.) Jeſus is now a merciful Saviour: he will ſhortly be an inexorable Judge. Wiſe and happy are they who improve the moment of opportunity, and ſeek to him for mercy whilſt mercy may be found. (2.) The greateſt crimes, even adultery, may be forgiven to thoſe who come by faith to a dying Redeemer, and waſh their polluted ſouls in the fountain of his blood. (3.) Thoſe whom Jeſus pardons he ſaves not in their ſins, but from them: they go to lead a new life, whoſe ſentence of death he reverſes. There is an inſeparable union between juſtifying and ſanctifying grace.

12. ¶ Then ſpake Jeſus again unto them, ſaying, [d] I am the light of the world: he that followeth me ſhall not walk in darkneſs, but ſhall have the light of life. 13. The Phariſees therefore ſaid unto him, [e] Thou beareſt record of thyſelf; thy record is not true. 14. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto them, Though I bear record of myſelf, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but [f] ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go. 15. [g] Ye judge after the fleſh, [h] I judge no man. 16. And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for [i] I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me. 17. It is alſo written in your law, that [k] the teſtimony of two men is true. 18. I am one that bear witneſs of myſelf, and [l] the Father that ſent me, beareth witneſs of me. 19. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jeſus anſwered, [m] Ye neither know me, nor my Father: [n] if ye had known me, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo. 20. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus in the treaſury, as he taught in the temple: and [o] no man laid hands on him, [p] for his hour was not yet come.

[d] Iſa. xlix. 6. Chap. i. 4, 5, 9. & ix. 5. & xii. 35, 36, 46.
[e] Chap. v. 31.
[f] Chap. vii. 28. & ix. 29.
[g] Chap. vii. 24.
[h] Chap. iii. 17. & xii. 47.
[i] Ver. 29.
[k] Deut. xvii. 6. & xix. 15. Heb. x. 28.
[l] Chap. v. 37.
[m] Chap. xvi. 3.
[n] Chap. xiv. 9.
[o] Chap. vii. 30.
[p] Chap. vii. 8.

v. 12—20. Though the Phariſaical accuſers of the adultereſs had been confounded, ſome of their brethren remained to cavil at the gracious words which proceeded out of the Saviour's lips.

1. Chriſt, re-aſſuming his diſcourſe to the people, took occaſion to ſpeak of himſelf under the glorious character of the Sun of righteouſneſs, ſaying, I am the Light of the world. What the ſun is to the world, that Chriſt muſt be to the ſoul. Without him, univerſal ſpiritual darkneſs ſpreads over us its dreadful, baleful influence. But he that followeth me, receives my goſpel, and treads in my ſteps, ſhall not walk in darkneſs; the eyes of his mind ſhall be enlightened to know the truth, and his ſoul enabled for and directed in the practice of it; ſo that the darkneſs of error and ſin ſhall not deceive and miſlead him; but he ſhall have the light of life, the ſaving light of goſpel grace here, and the eternal life of glory hereafter. Bleſſed and happy are they who walk in this light of the Lord.

3. He vindicates himſelf from the objection which the Phariſees made, who ſaid, Thou beareſt record of thyſelf; thy record is not true: as if, in his own cauſe, theſe aſſertions were the mere boaſts of ſelf-commendation: overlooking the teſtimony which John bore to his character, and the evidence which all the miracles Chriſt did brought along with them. He anſwered and ſaid unto them, Though I bear record of myſelf, yet my record is true. If, in ordinary caſes, a man's own teſtimony concerning himſelf may be well called in queſtion, yet, in the caſe of meſſengers ſent from God, the matter is otherwiſe. The meſſage he brought was itſelf a proof of his miſſion, conſidering the circumſtances in which he appeared. For I know whence I came, and whither I go. He knew his own divine miſſion, and that, as he came from the Father, he muſt ſhortly return to him again; of which he had given them ſtriking evidence in the miracles he had wrought. But ye cannot tell whence I come, nor whither I go, wilfully blind to the truths he brought, and rejecting the credentials which he produced. Ye judge after the fleſh, and from the meanneſs of his outward appearance concluded, it was impoſſible that this ſhould be he who ſhould deliver Iſrael: and they who thus judge after the fleſh in ſpiritual matters are ſure to be in the wrong. I judge no man, not at all intermeddling in acts of judicial power, nor aſſuming any authority; nor was it his office at preſent to condemn any, but to ſeek and ſave that which was loſt. And yet, if I judge, my judgment is true, as being the ſearcher of all hearts, and beholding all things naked and open before him: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that ſent me; ſuch an inſeparable union ſubſiſting between us, as that my judgment is according to his, and all I ſpeak is in expreſs conformity with his will, who gave me my miſſion. It is alſo written in your law, that the teſtimony of two men, credible witneſſes, is true, and ſufficient for the proof of any matter of the greateſt conſequence. I am one that bear witneſs of myſelf, as the Meſſiah, which my doctrine and works declare me to be; and the Father that ſent me beareth witneſs of me, not only in all the prophecies of old, but in repeated voices heard from heaven. Here therefore are two witneſſes of divine authority to prove the truth.

4. The Phariſees, with contempt of his pretenſions, replied, Where is thy father? what, Joſeph the carpenter? is he the witneſs? Jeſus anſwered, Ye neither know me nor my Father; are not acquainted with my divine original: if ye had known me, as the Son of God, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo, as we are one in nature, counſel, and operation: the knowledge of me includes the knowledge of my Father, as I am the brightneſs of his glory, and the expreſs image of his perſon. Thus freely and fully doth Jeſus aſſert his eternal power, Godhead, and unity with the Father. Theſe words ſpake Jeſus in the treaſury, as he taught in the temple: and no man laid hands on him, for his hour was not yet come. And, till God's decreed and appointed moment comes, the malice of perſecutors and the rage of devils are alike impotent and vain.

21. Then ſaid Jeſus again unto them, I go my way, and [q] ye ſhall ſeek me, and ſhall die in your ſins: whither I go, ye cannot come. 22. Then ſaid the Jews, Will he kill himſelf? becauſe he ſaith, Whither I go, ye cannot come. 23. And he ſaid unto them, [r] Ye are from beneath, I am from above: ye are of this world, I am not of this world. 24. [s] I ſaid therefore unto you, that ye ſhall die in your ſins: for if ye believe not that I am he, ye ſhall die in your ſins. 25. Then ſaid they unto him, Who art thou? And Jeſus ſaith unto them, Even the ſame that I ſaid unto you from the beginning. 26. I have many things to ſay, and to judge of you: but [t] he that ſent me is true; and [u] I ſpeak to the world thoſe things which I have heard of him. 27. They underſtood not that he ſpake to them of the Father. 28. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, When ye [x] have lift up the Son of man, [y] then ſhall ye know that I am he, and [z] that I do nothing of myſelf; but as my Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things. 29. And [a] he that ſent me, is with me: [b] the Father hath not left me alone: for [c] I do always thoſe things that pleaſe him. 30. As he ſpake theſe words, [d] many believed on him.

[q] Chap. vii. 34. & xiii. 33.
[r] Chap. iii. 31.
[s] Ver. 21.
[t] Chap. vii. 28.
[u] Chap. iii. 32. & xv. 15.
[x] Chap. iii. 14. & xii. 32.
[y] Rom. i. 4.
[z] Chap. v. 19, 30.
[a] Chap. xiv. 10.
[b] Ver. 16. Chap. xvi. 32.
[c] Chap. iv. 34. & v. 30.
[d] Chap. vii. 31.

v. 21—30. Words of terror to awaken their conſciences, as well as words of grace to engage their hearts, did the Redeemer employ, if any thing might at laſt effectually work upon them.

1. He warns them of their approaching ruin, and the cauſe of it. Then ſaid Jeſus again unto them, I go my way, to the Father; and ye ſhall ſeek me, when your calamities overtake you, and ſhall long for the Meſſiah to ſave you from them; and ſhall die in your ſins, or your ſin, under the guilt of all your other iniquities, and eſpecially that capital one of unbelief, and rejection of me and my goſpel: whither I go, ye cannot come; the gates of eternal life and glory will be for ever barred againſt you, and no entrance permitted you into thoſe regions of bleſſedneſs, where I ſhall ſhortly be. Note, (1.) Unbelief is the damning evil. It is the ſin againſt our remedy, and neceſſarily leads men to deſtruction. (2.) They who refuſe to embrace the Saviour in faith and love, and to follow him in holy obedience here, muſt never expect admiſſion into his eternal kingdom of glory hereafter.

2. The Jews, inſtead of trembling before the warnings of Jeſus, treated them with deriſion, ſaying, Will he kill himſelf? to get rid of his enemies, and be out of their reach.

3. In reply to their malicious ſuggeſtion, he anſwers, Ye are from beneath, earthly and ſenſual in your ſpirit and temper, and therefore cannot underſtand and follow me; I am from above, celeſtial in my original, and my converſation in heaven: ye are of this world, affecting and purſuing its honours, intereſts, pleaſures, and eſteem; I am not of this world, dead to it in my affections, and looking forward to that bleſſed world to which I go. I ſaid therefore unto you, that ye ſhall die in your ſins, as you muſt infallibly do, if you continue in your preſent ſtate of impenitence, worldly-mindedneſs, and unbelief: for if ye believe not that I am he, the eternal, unchangeable Jehovah, or the Meſſiah, the Light of the world, the Saviour of the miſerable, ye ſhall die in your ſins, no pardon or redemption being poſſible for thoſe who reject the grace of the goſpel. Jeſus alone can deliver the ſoul from the guilt, power, and puniſhment of ſin; and out of him there is no help or hope of ſalvation.

4. With a repetition of the like taunt as before, they replied, Who art thou? that talkeſt ſuch great things, and threateneſt ſo highly? Jeſus ſaith unto them, Even the ſame that I ſaid unto you from the beginning, the great object of faith ſince the firſt promiſe was given, and the ſame Meſſiah which from the beginning of my miniſtry I have proved myſelf to be. I have many things to ſay and to judge of you, to upbraid your infidelity, and prove the inexcuſableneſs of your impenitence; theſe are reſerved for an after-reckoning: but he that ſent me is true, both in fulfilling his promiſes and his threatnings; and I ſpeak to the world thoſe things which I have heard of him, both the purpoſes of his grace to his people, and the inevitable ruin which will attend thoſe who reject his Chriſt, and which the iſſue will infallibly prove to be a true teſtimony. They underſtood not that he ſpake to them of the Father; their hearts were hardened in ſin, and their minds blinded by prejudice. Note, The plaineſt truths of God, the moſt ſolemn warnings of danger, are not apprehended nor underſtood. The God of this world hath blinded the minds of ſinners, and they continue ſtupid and inſenſible.

5. Chriſt refers them to a future day for a full conviction of what at preſent they will not believe. When ye have lift up the Son of man upon a croſs, as the braſen ſerpent, in conſequence of which ſufferings his exaltation to glory would follow, then ſhall ye know that I am he, the true Meſſiah, as the wonders which happened during his hanging upon the croſs beſpoke him to be; as was proved by his reſurrection and aſcenſion to glory; as many of them to their eternal comfort perceived, when by his Spirit their ſouls were converted, and turned to him whom they had pierced; and as the reſt would terribly feel, when ſhortly he ſhould take vengeance on their nation, cut them off by the Roman ſword, and doom them to eternal miſery. Then will ye be convinced, ſaith he, that I do nothing of myſelf, without divine authority; but as the Father hath taught me, I ſpeak theſe things, in exact correſpondence with the inſtructions that, as man and mediator, I have received from him; and he that ſent me, is with me, Chriſt being in nature and eſſence one with the Father, and having his preſence, power, and Spirit, to enable him for, and encourage him in, the great work of redemption. The Father hath not left me alone, without the cleareſt demonſtrations of his favour and regard; for I do always thoſe things that pleaſe him; and therefore he cannot but take the higheſt complacency in me and my undertaking, which is in ſuch exact conformity to his will, and ultimately tends ſo highly to advance his glory. Note, (1.) All muſt know, by happy or dreadful experience, that Jeſus is the Chriſt: they who are not convinced of it by his word and Spirit, will prove it in the judgments he will inflict upon them. (2.) However much we may be deſerted of the world, God will never leave nor forſake his faithful ſervants; and we can want neither company nor comfort, if his bleſſed preſence be with us.

6. Great was the effect produced by theſe words. As he ſpake them, many believed on him, as come with a divine commiſſion from God, and the true Meſſiah: at leaſt, ſo far were they convinced, as to make a profeſſion of their faith, though by the ſequel it ſeems, that many of them were far from being ſound converts. Note, Many for a time make a fair profeſſion, whoſe hearts are not right with God, and who abide not ſtedfaſtly in his covenant.

31. Then ſaid Jeſus to thoſe Jews which believed on him, [e] If ye continue in my word, then are ye my diſciples indeed; 32. And ye ſhall know the truth, and [f] the truth ſhall make you free. 33. ¶ They anſwered him, [g] We be Abraham's ſeed, and were never in bondage to any man: how ſayeſt thou, Ye ſhall be made free? 34. Jeſus anſwered them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [h] Whoſoever committeth ſin, is the ſervant of ſin. 35. And [i] the ſervant abideth not in the houſe for ever: but the Son abideth ever. 36. [k] If the Son therefore ſhall make you free, ye ſhall be free indeed. 37. I know that ye are Abraham's ſeed; but [l] ye ſeek to kill me, becauſe my word hath no place in you.

[e] Heb. iii. 14.
[f] Ver. 36. Rom. vi. 14, 18. & viii. 2. Jam. i. 25.
[g] Mat. iii. 9. Ver. 39.
[h] Rom. vi. 16, 20. 2 Pet. ii. 19.
[i] Gen. xxi. 10. Gal. iv. 30.
[k] Rom. viii. 2. Gal. v. 1.
[l] Chap. vii. 19, 25, 32.

v. 31—37. We have here,

1. Chriſt's addreſs to thoſe Jews who profeſſed to believe in him. If ye continue in my word, faithfully adhere to the goſpel and the profeſſion of it, unmoved with any oppoſition, and cordially prove your obedience to it in all holy converſation and godlineſs; then are ye my diſciples indeed: I will own and accept you as ſuch: and ye ſhall know the truth, obtain deeper and clearer diſcoveries of it; and the truth ſhall make you free, free from guilt, through the knowledge of the Redeemer's blood and righteouſneſs; free from the dominion of ſin and Satan, through the powerful operations of the Spirit; free from ignorance and error, through divine teaching; free from the bondage of the law and corruption, and brought into the glorious liberty of the Sons of God. Note, (1.) The proof of true diſcipleſhip is ſeen in our abiding faith in, and adherence to, Jeſus and his goſpel. Many profeſs to believe for a while, who, in time of temptation, fall away. (2.) Our meaſure of attainments in knowledge and grace is very imperfect here; we have need to be looking up continually for daily ſupplies of divine light and love, and Chriſt's faithful followers ſhall find both abundantly diſpenſed to them from on high. (3.) That is true liberty, when our ſouls are brought to God's happy ſervice, and delivered from the ſervitude of ſin and Satan.

2. The Jews who heard him, felt their pride hurt by the inſinuation of their ſubjection, which Chriſt intimated, and with indignation replied, We are Abraham's ſeed, and were never in bondage to any man: how ſayeſt thou, Ye ſhall be made free? They boaſt of their deſcent from that patriarch, as their great honour, and with the ſtrangeſt effrontery profeſs to have enjoyed uninterrupted liberty as their birthright and privilege; when it was ſo notorious, that under a multitude of enemies they had ſuffered the moſt afflictive ſervitude and captivity, and were now a conquered province of the Roman Empire.

3. Waving the diſcuſſion of the point relative to their civil liberty, concerning which he ſpake not, he lets them know there is a more dreadful ſervitude than that of the body, even of the immortal ſoul, under the yoke of ſin and Satan. Whoſo committeth ſin, is the ſervant of ſin; he that makes a practice of ſin, and lives habitually under the power of it, is the worſt of ſlaves, whatever his civil liberties may be, however noble his deſcent, or high his church privileges. And the ſervant abideth not in the houſe always; but as the ſon of the bondwoman was caſt out of Abraham's family, ſo would all the impenitent and unbelieving among the Jews be cut off from the church of God; as every unfaithful profeſſor will be, who continues to live in his ſins, however high an opinion he may have entertained of himſelf, or however reſpectfully others may have thought of him: but the Son abideth ever; he who is Abraham's promiſed ſeed emphatically, the true Iſaac, his is the inheritance; and all who claim under him, as the ſons of God by faith, have a ſure title to a place among the houſhold of God. If the Son therefore ſhall make you free, the Son of God, the Lord of the houſe, where Moſes himſelf was but a ſervant, ye ſhall be free indeed; not with that imaginary freedom, of which the Jews boaſted, but (ὄντως) that real liberty which only Jeſus can give to the fallen, corrupt, and guilty ſoul. He makes his people free, (1.) From the arreſts of the law; by an obedience unto death he hath ſatisfied all its demands, and found a ranſom for us. (2.) From corruption; his Spirit both delivers us from the blindneſs of error, and from the power of ſin. (3.) As free-born ſons, we are adopted into God's family, enjoy all the privileges, to which perfect obedience in our own perſons could have entitled us, and have an aſſured title to the eternal kingdom.

4. He applies the caſe to them. I know that ye are Abraham's ſeed; but, very unlike that patriarch in your ſpirit and temper, ye ſeek to kill me; and the reaſon is, becauſe my word hath no place in you; your hearts are ſteeled againſt it; you cannot bear the humbling truths I deliver, and your pride, prejudices, and ſelf-righteouſneſs, effectually prevent their influence; and where this is the caſe with any ſoul, there the goſpel is as water ſpilt on the ground, utterly unprofitable.

38. [m] I ſpeak that which I have ſeen with my Father: and ye do that which ye have ſeen with your father. 39. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, [n] Abraham is our father. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [o] If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham. 40. But now [p] ye ſeek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham. 41. Ye do the deeds of your father. Then ſaid they to him, We be not born of fornication; [q] we have one Father, even God. 42. Jeſus ſaid unto them, [r] If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth, and came from God; [s] neither came I of myſelf, but he ſent men. 43. [t] Why do ye not underſtand my ſpeech? even becauſe ye cannot hear my word. 44. [u] Ye are of your father the devil, and the luſts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and [x] abode not in the truth, becauſe there is no truth in him. When he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it. 45. And becauſe I tell you the truth, ye believe me not. 46. Which of you convinceth me of ſin? And if I ſay the truth, why do ye not believe me? 47. [y] He that is of God, heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, becauſe ye are not of God.

[m] Chap. v. 19, 30. & xiv. 10, 24.
[n] Mat. iii. 9. Ver. 33.
[o] Rom. ii. 28. & ix. 7. Gal. iii. 7, 29.
[p] Chap. vii. 19. Ver. 37.
[q] Iſa. lxiv. 8. Mal. i. 6.
[r] 1 John v. 1.
[s] Chap. v. 43. & vii. 28, 29.
[t] Chap. vii. 17.
[u] Mat. xiii. 38. 1 John iii. 8.
[x] Jude 6.
[y] 1 John iv. 6.

v. 38—47. Chriſt proceeds in his diſcourſe.

1. He points out the cauſe of the contrariety of ſentiments which ſubſiſted between them. I ſpeak that which I have ſeen with my Father, as perfectly knowing his mind and will, and from eternity acquainted with all his councils and deſigns; and ye do that which ye have ſeen with your father; your works ſhew whoſe children you are, whoſe example you imitate, and under what father's tuition you have been brought up.

2. Fired with reſentment, as if he reflected upon their pedigree, they boaſted their deſcent from Abraham, the friend of God, of whom they could ſurely learn nothing that was evil. Jeſus anſwered them, If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham; but, very oppoſite to his faith and obedience is your conduct, ye ſeek to kill me, a man that hath told you the truth, which I have heard from God; a truth ſo needful to be known, that I am the very promiſed Meſſiah, the eternal Son of the Father: this did not Abraham; his ſubmiſſion to the firſt notice of God's will was eminent; and ſuch a murderous ſpirit, as to contrive the death of any man, much leſs of a meſſenger ſent from heaven, never dwelt in his boſom; therefore it is ſufficiently evident, that your relation to him can never be proved by your temper; for ye do the deeds of your father, and who that is, let your conduct tell. Note, It is often prudent, in conveying unpleaſing truths, to ſtate the premiſes, and let the perſons themſelves draw the concluſion.

3. With indignation they replied, perceiving he ſpoke not in a literal but figurative ſenſe, We be not born of fornication; are not idolaters, nor their deſcendants; have never gone a whoring from God: we have one Father, whom we worſhip and adore, even Jehovah, the only living and true God. But alas, they who flatter themſelves they have the true religion, becauſe they make profeſſion of it, whilſt their practice is utterly contradictory to ſound godlineſs, deceive their own ſouls.

4. Chriſt ſhews them their fatal miſtake. God could not be their Father, whilſt their ways were ſo perverſe before him. If God were your Father, you would love me, and embrace the truth I deliver to you; for I proceeded forth, and came from God, as my Father, and one in nature with him: neither came I of myſelf, but he ſent me, to accompliſh the great deſigns of his grace, as the redeemer of his elect children. Why do ye not underſtand my ſpeech? The reaſon is, becauſe ye cannot hear my words; your hearts are averſe to the truth, and prejudiced againſt me; and how then can God be your Father? Ye are of your father the devil; he is the ſpirit which worketh in you; and the luſts of your father ye will do; obſtinately bent on following the dictates of pride, malice, and envy, the grand characteriſtics of this foul fiend. He was a murderer from the beginning: ſeducing man in paradiſe from his allegiance to God, he thereby expoſed the whole human race to death ſpiritual, temporal, and eternal; and ever ſince, from the days of righteous Abel, at his inſtigation have thoſe horrid deeds of bloodſhed and murder been committed, under which the earth groans. And he abode not in the truth; he loſt the purity and rectitude of his own nature, and then by a daring lie tempted man to diſbelieve the divine commination reſpecting the forbidden fruit; becauſe there is no truth in him; his kingdom is ſupported by falſhood and deluſion; all the errors and hereſies that rend the church, and all the vain hopes that lull ſinners to ruin, derive from him their origin. When he ſpeaketh a lie, he ſpeaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it: all his temptations from the beginning have been, and are, a tiſſue of falſhoods; his own deviſing; the genuine offspring of his apoſtate ſpirit: and as he is in himſelf faithleſs in his nature, ſo is he the father of all lies and liars; they are his children; they bear his ſtrong and ſtriking lineaments, and evidence clearly from whom they are deſcended; they obey his commands, and follow his example. And becauſe I tell you the truth, the truth of my goſpel, miſſion, and divine character, ye believe me not: ſuch is your miſerable infatuation and deluſion, that ye are more diſpoſed to believe the devil's lie, than God's truth; ſo enſlaved are you by this wicked ſpirit. Which of you convinceth me of ſin? either of immorality in conduct, or unſoundneſs in doctrine? And if I ſay the truth, why do ye not believe me? when every circumſtance conſpires to prove my miſſion divine, how inexcuſable is your obſtinacy! He that is of God, as you pretend to be, heareth God's word; deſirous to know, and willing to obey it: ye therefore hear them not, and pay no regard to what I declare to you, becauſe ye are not of God; are not his children, nor influenced by his ſpirit, but under the power and dominion of the god of this world, the ſpirit that worketh in the children of diſobedience. Note, (1.) They who have God for their Father, will ſhew it by an unfeigned love to the Lord Jeſus Chriſt; by a ſolemn attention to his word, and faithful obedience to his will. (2.) They who do the devil's works, are infallibly the devil's children. By their fruits ye ſhall know them: Pride, envy, malice, enmity againſt thoſe that are good, lying, rage, &c. theſe are the features of Satan, and mark his genuine offspring. (3.) Chriſt's miniſters and people, like their Maſter, muſt give diligence to keep a conſcience void of offence, that their moſt envenomed enemies may have no evil thing juſtly to ſay of them. (4.) They who ſlight and diſregard the Redeemer's goſpel, and thoſe who preach it, deſpiſe not men, but God, and therein prove the unſubdued enmity and apoſtacy of their hearts.

48. Then anſwered the Jews, and ſaid unto him, Say we not well, that thou art a Samaritan, and [z] haſt a devil? 49. Jeſus anſwered, I have not a devil; but I honour my Father, and ye do diſhonour me. 50. And [a] I ſeek not mine own glory: there is one that ſeeketh and judgeth. 51. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [b] If a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never ſee death. 52. Then ſaid the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou haſt a devil. [c] Abraham is dead, and [d] the prophets; and thou ſayeſt, If a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never taſte of death. 53. Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makeſt thou thyſelf? 54. Jeſus anſwered, [e] If I honour myſelf, my honour is nothing: [f] it is my Father that honoureth me, [g] of whom ye ſay that he is your God: 55. Yet [h] ye have not known him; but I know him: and if I ſhould ſay, I know him not, I ſhould be a liar like unto you: but I know him, and keep his ſaying. 56. Your father Abraham rejoiced to ſee my day: and he ſaw it, and was glad. 57. Then ſaid the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and haſt thou ſeen Abraham? 58. Jeſus ſaid unto them, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Before Abraham was, I am. 59. Then took they up ſtones to caſt at him: but Jeſus hid himſelf, and went out of the temple, going through the midſt of them, and ſo paſſed by.

[z] Chap. vii. 20. & x. 20.
[a] Chap. v. 41. & vii. 18.
[b] Chap. v. 24. & xi. 26.
[c] Heb. xi. 13.
[d] Zech. i. 5.
[e] Chap. v. 31.
[f] Chap. xiii. 31, 32. & xvii. 5.
[g] Ver. 41.
[h] Chap. vii. 28, 29.

v. 48—59. The Jews, cut to the heart at this ſharp rebuke, were exceedingly exaſperated.

1. They began to abuſe him with the moſt virulent language. Say we not well, that thou art a Samaritan, and haſt a devil? They would repreſent him as an enemy to their religion and nation; as one in league with Satan, to whoſe influence they aſcribed the miracles Chriſt performed; or as a lunatic and madman, poſſeſſed by this ſpirit, thus to call the children of Abraham the children of the devil. Note, It is no uncommon thing to hear the beſt of men branded with the moſt opprobrious names, abuſed as ſatanical, or treated with contempt as madmen; but wiſdom is juſtified of all her children.

2. Chriſt meekly replies to ſo unjuſt and malicious an accuſation, I have not a devil; neither act in concert with him, nor am poſſeſſed by him: but I honour my Father; far from derogating from his honour, as you would infer from my pretenſions, the great end I propoſe in all my words and works is to advance it; and I ſeek not my own glory, in contradiſtinction to him; there is one that ſeeketh and judgeth, that will ſecure me an intereſt in the hearts of his people, will vindicate my injured character, and avenge the contempt and indignity you caſt upon me. But, however ſlightly and meanly you may think of me, verily, verily I ſay unto you, as the moſt aſſured truth, If a man keep my ſaying, really believes, embraces, and obeys my goſpel, he ſhall never ſee death, the ſecond, the eternal death, the wages of ſin. Note, (1.) The moſt unprovoked abuſe muſt be returned with mildneſs; the wrath of man worketh not the righteouſneſs of God. (2.) When we are conſcious our deſign is the advancement of the divine glory, we need not be concerned about any malignant interpretations put on our conduct. (3.) They are diſciples indeed, who hear the word of God and keep it, embracing the promiſes as the moſt invaluable treaſure, and obedient to tne commands, as the approved rule of duty. (4.) They who thus walk, have nothing to fear from death; the ſting of it is taken away; the power of ſpiritual death is deſtroyed; and the grave is now become the gate of eternal life and glory.

3. More confirmed in their prejudices, inſtead of embracing the glorious privilege to which Chriſt invited them, they ſaid, Now we know that thou haſt a devil, and art ſtark mad to talk at ſo ſtrange a rate. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou ſayeſt, If a man keep my ſaying, he ſhall never taſte of death. Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? though ſo eminently the friend of God; and the prophets are dead, who were ſo highly favoured of him; whom makeſt thou thyſelf? what inſufferable arrogance, to pretend a power of beſtowing that immortality upon thy followers, which God himſelf never vouchſafed to his moſt eminent ſaints and ſervants?

4. Chriſt anſwers their cavil, and vindicates what he had aſſerted. If I honour myſelf, and aſſumed a character which I could not ſupport with the moſt powerful evidence, my honour is nothing, and you might treat it as an empty boaſt: but it is my Father that honoureth me, bearing witneſs to my divine miſſion and authority, and expreſſing his full approbation of me as his Son, of whom ye ſay that he is your God; glorying, as deſcendants from the patriarchs, in your covenant relation to him. Yet ye have not known him, his nature and perfections, his mind and will; but I know him, moſt intimately acquainted with his perſon and counſels: and if I ſhould ſay, I know him not, and ſhould retract ought that I have advanced concerning the perfect knowledge I have of him from eternity, I ſhould be a liar like unto you: but I know him, and keep his ſaying; always doing the things which pleaſe him, and acting in exact conformity with his mind and will. Your father Abraham rejoiced, or was very deſirous, to ſee my day, and longed for my coming in the human nature to redeem the Iſrael of God; and he ſaw it by faith, tho' diſtant, yet ſurely approaching. He beheld in Iſaac born; in the promiſe made to his ſeed; in Melchiſedech; in the ſacrifice of his ſon, and the ram provided in his ſtead; and in the viſible appearance of the Lord himſelf, Gen. xviii. 2. in all theſe he beheld the incarnate Saviour, and was glad, exulted in the glorious hope of my appearing in the fulneſs of time. Note, (1.) The affectation of honour, and courting men's admiration, is the ſure evidence of not deſerving it. (2.) What was Chriſt's labour muſt be ours, to advance not our own, but God's glory. (3.) Many profeſs to know God, who in works deny him, and againſt whom their very privileges and opportunities of knowing him will riſe up to their greater condemnation. (4.) The ſureſt evidence of a right knowledge of God is our practical improvement of his ſayings, and ſubmitting to his bleſſed word and will. (5.) The appearing of Chriſt is the deſire and delight of the faithful, as it is the terror of the wicked; and he will come, and will not tarry. The Lord is at hand. (6.) They who by faith now look to Jeſus, and wait for him, ſhall ſoon ſee him face to face, and rejoice with joy unſpeakable and full of glory.

5. With ſovereign contempt do the Jews treat this declaration, perverting his words, as if he had aſſerted, that Abraham ſaw him in the fleſh. Thou art not yet fifty years old, and haſt thou ſeen Abraham? or he thee; when he hath been dead above two thouſand years before? How ridiculous the pretenſion!

They judged of Chriſt's age probably by his look: inceſſant labours perhaps had marred his viſage, and brought on, before their time, the wrinkles of age.

6. He plainly aſſerts to them his eternal ſelf-exiſtence, as an anſwer to their objection. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, as the moſt certain and undoubted truth, Before Abraham was born, or had a being, I am, the ſame unchangeable Jehovah, who by this name made myſelf known to Moſes in the buſh, Exod. iii. 14. and therefore muſt be infinitely ſuperior and prior to Abraham.

7. Enraged beyond all bounds of forbearance at ſuch an aſſertion, which they regarded as the moſt impudent blaſphemy, the Jews took up ſtones to caſt at him, intending to murder him on the ſpot: but Jeſus hid himſelf, by his divine power probably withholding their eyes from perceiving him, and went out of the temple, going through the midſt of them, and ſo paſſed by, eſcaping their fury, becauſe his hour was not yet come. Note, (1.) It is prudent to hide ourſelves when we ſee the approaching danger. (2.) They who drive Chriſt from them, are juſtly abandoned by him to judicial blindneſs and hardneſs of heart.

CHAP. IX.

In this chapter we have, 1. The miraculous cure of a man that was born blind, ver. 1—7. 2. The diſcourſes which were occaſioned by it: (1.) A diſcourſe of the neighbours among themſelves, and with the man, ver. 8—12. (2.) Between the Phariſees and the man, ver. 13—34. (3.) Between Chriſt and the poor man, ver. 35—38. (4.) Between Chriſt aud the Phariſees, ver. 39 ad finem.

1. AND as Jeſus paſſed by, he ſaw a man which was blind from his birth. 2. And his diſciples aſked him, ſaying, Maſter, who did ſin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind? 3. Jeſus anſwered, Neither hath this man ſinned, nor his parents: [a] but that the works of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him. 4. [b] I muſt work the works of him that ſent me, while it is day: [c] the night cometh when no man can work. 5. As long as I am in the world, [d] I am the light of the world. 6. When he had thus ſpoken, [e] he ſpat on the ground, and made clay of the ſpittle, and [f] he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, 7. And ſaid unto him, Go waſh in the pool of Siloam (which is by interpretation, Sent.) He went his way therefore, and waſhed, and came ſeeing.

[a] Chap. xi. 4.
[b] Chap. v. 19. & xvii. 4.
[c] Chap. xi. 9. & xii. 35.
[d] Chap. i. 5, 9. & viii. 12. & xii. 35, 46.
[e] Mark vii. 33. & viii. 23.
[f] Rev. iii. 18.

v. 1—7. The connection between this chapter and the foregoing ſeems to ſpeak as if the events here recorded immediately followed the preceding, though others ſuppoſe they happened at the diſtance of three months; thoſe being done at the feaſt of tabernacles, theſe at the feaſt of dedication, Chap. x. 22. We have here the cure of a poor blind man.

1. Jeſus obſerved him as he paſſed by, and knew his pitiable caſe, that he was blind from his birth. Such are we by nature; born in ſin, and conceived in wickedneſs; blind to every ſpiritual object, and utterly unable to find the way to eternal life and peace, till Jeſus paſſeth by, regards us with the eyes of his compaſſion, and is found by them who ſought him not.

2. The diſciples hereupon propoſed a curious queſtion to their Maſter. Who did ſin, this man, or his parents, that he was born blind? They ſeem to have entertained ſomething of the Pythagorean opinion concerning the pre-exiſtence and tranſmigration of ſouls from one body to another; and that the puniſhment of ſome ſignal offence in a former body might be puniſhed with the preſent affliction; or that the ſin of the parents might have entailed this judgment on their offspring.

3. Chriſt anſwers their queſtion, by way of rectifying their miſtakes, and checking ſuch cenſorious concluſions. Neither hath this man ſinned, nor his parents; not that they had never committed actual ſin, nor been born in original corruption; but that it was not becauſe of any particular crime which either had committed, that this blindneſs was inflicted; but that the works of God ſhould be made manifeſt in him, and the Meſſiah be exalted in working a miraculous cure upon him. Note, (1.) We are not to judge of men's ſins by their ſufferings, it being often the lot of God's deareſt children to be moſt ſeverely afflicted. (2.) God has purpoſes of his own glory to anſwer in thoſe afflictive providences, the reaſon of which we cannot always diſcern; and this is at leaſt a ſufficient reaſon to reconcile us to them.

4. He gives the reaſon of his readineſs to help this poor man. I muſt work the works of him that ſent me, while it is yet day. He was ſent upon earth to do good to the bodies as well as ſouls of men; and therefore whilſt his perſonal miniſtry laſted, this was his proper employment. The night cometh when no man can work; when death ſhould put a period to his mortal days, his works of healing would then be done. As long as I am in the world, I am the light of the world; both corporally giving eyes to the blind, and enabling them to ſee the day; but more peculiarly in a ſpiritual ſenſe, as the Sun of Righteouſneſs ariſen with healing in his wings, the only true light that can guide the benighted ſouls of men into the paths of eternal life. Note, (1.) Life is our day of uſefulneſs, the moment in which we can ſerve and glorify God; we have need therefore to be diligent to redeem the time, and lay ourſelves out in his bleſſed ſervice. The night of death is near, when no work can be done for Chriſt and for ſouls; how precious then is every paſſing hour! (2.) What the ſun is to the natural world, that is Chriſt to the ſpiritual world: without him all is darkneſs; we know nothing of God, or ourſelves, our true happineſs, our proper work, or the great end of our being; and he muſt not only ſhine upon us as the light, but ſhine into our hearts, giving us alſo the faculty of viſion.

5. He gives ſight to the blind man, and this in a way different from the miracles he uſually performed, which were done with a word. He ſpat on the ground, and made clay of the ſpittle, and he anointed the eyes of the blind man with the clay, and ſaid unto him, Go waſh in the pool of Siloam (which is by interpretation, Sent,) and was the figure of the kingdom of the Meſſiah, (Iſa. viii. 6.) The blind man immediately obeyed his orders, and inſtantly felt his eyes opened, and his ſight perfectly reſtored. Note, (1.) The word of the goſpel is as this clay, unable of itſelf to communicate ſpiritual light to the ſoul; but, when applied by the powerful hand of Jeſus, becomes effectual to open the eyes of the mind. (2) Obedient faith never fails of bringing relief. They who at Chriſt's command perſeveringly wait upon him in the way of his ordinances, will find their darkneſs enlightened, their doubts removed, their weakneſs ſtrengthened, their ſouls comforted.

8. ¶ The neighbours therefore, and they which before had ſeen him, that he was blind, ſaid, Is not this he that ſat and begged? 9. Some ſaid, This is he: others ſaid, He is like him: but he ſaid, I am he. 10. Therefore ſaid they unto him, How were thine eyes opened? 11. He anſwered and ſaid, A man that is called Jeſus, made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and ſaid unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and waſh: and I went and waſhed, and I received ſight. 12. Then ſaid they unto him, Where is he? He ſaid, I know not.

v. 8—12. We have here,

1. The amazement of the neighbours, who could ſcarce perſuade themſelves that he was the ſame man whom they had ſeen ſtretched along, a poor blind beggar, by the way-ſide during ſo many years. Some affirmed it was the ſame man; others doubted, though they owned the reſemblance; till the man himſelf ended the diſpute, by affirming he was the very perſon. Note, They who have experienced the power of the healing grace of Jeſus upon their ſouls, ſhould be ready to own it, to the glory of his great name.

2. In anſwer to their queſtion, how he came to recover his ſight, after being blind from his birth, he informed them, that a man called Jeſus, had made clay, anointed his eyes, ſent him to the pool of Siloam to waſh, and that inſtantly thereupon he received his ſight. Note, If the opening of the eyes of a dark body awakened ſuch concern to enquire how it was done, much more ought the opening the eyes of the darkned minds of ſinners to be matter of aſtoniſhment, and awaken our notice and enquiries.

3. They hereupon put another queſtion to him; either out of deſire to know this wonderful perſon, or more probably with a malicious deſign to ſeize one whom the Phariſees had proſcribed. Where is he? He ſaid, I know not; Chriſt having departed when he had performed the cure. Thus in the work of grace upon the ſoul we ſee and feel the bleſſed change, though the hand which produces it is unſeen.

13. ¶ They brought to the Phariſees him that aforetime was blind. 14. And it was the ſabbath-day when Jeſus made the clay, and opened his eyes. 15. Then again the Phariſees alſo aſked him how he had received his ſight. He ſaid unto them, [g] He put clay upon mine eyes, and I waſhed, and do ſee. 16. Therefore ſaid ſome of the Phariſees, This man is not of God, becauſe he keepth not the ſabbath-day. Others ſaid, [h] How can a man that is a ſinner do ſuch miracles? And [i] there was a diviſion among them. 17. They ſay unto the blind man again, What ſayeſt thou of him, that he hath opened thine eyes? He ſaid, [k] He is a prophet. 18. But the Jews did not believe concerning him, that he had been blind, and received his ſight, until they had called the parents of him that had received his ſight. 19. And they aſked them, ſaying, Is this your ſon, who

[g] Ver. 6.
[h] Ver. 33. Chap. iii. 2.
[i] Chap. vii. 43. & x. 19.
[k] Chap. iv. 19. & vi. 14.

ye ſay was born blind? how then doth he now ſee? 20. His parents anſwered them and ſaid, We know that this is our ſon, and that he was born blind: 21. But by what means he now ſeeth, we know not: or who hath opened his eyes, we know not: he is of age, aſk him, he ſhall ſpeak for himſelf. 22. Theſe words ſpake his parents, becauſe [l] they feared the Jews: for the Jews had agreed already, that if any man did confeſs that he was Chriſt, [m] he ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue. 23. Therefore ſaid his parents, He is of age, aſk him. 24. Then again called they the man that was blind, and ſaid unto him, Give God the praiſe: we know that [n] this man is a ſinner. 25. He anſwered and ſaid, Whether he be a ſinner or no, I know not: one thing I know, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee. 26. Then ſaid they to him again, What did he to thee? how opened he thine eyes? 27. He anſwered them, I have told you already, and [o] ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again? will ye alſo be his diſciples? 28. Then they reviled him, and ſaid, Thou art his diſciple; but we are Moſes' diſciples. 29. We know that God ſpake unto Moſes: as for this fellow, [p] we know not from whence he is. 30. The man anſwered and ſaid unto them, Why, herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, and yet he hath opened mine eyes. 31. Now we know that [q] God heareth not ſinners: but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth. 32. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind. 33. [r] If this man were not of God, he could do nothing. 34. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, [s] Thou waſt altogether born in ſins, and doſt thou teach us? And they † caſt him out.

hap. vii. & xii. & xix. Acts 13.
Chap. xvi.
Ver. 16.
[o] Zech. vii. 11.
[p] Chap. viii. 14.
[q] Job xxvii. 9. & xxxv. 12. Pſ. xviii. 41. & lxvi. 18. Prov. i. 28. & xxviii. 29. Iſa. i. 15. Jer. xi. 11. & xiv. 12. Ezek. viii. 18. Mic. iii. 4. Zech. vii. 13.
[r] Ver. 16.
[s] Ver. 2.
† Or excommunicated him.

v. 13—34. Far from being induced by this wondrous miracle to admire the perſon who wrought it, we find them incenſed, and ready to proſecute Jeſus as a criminal.

1. Information is lodged againſt him before the rulers and the Phariſees; and the man who had been lately blind, is brought before the Sanhedrim, becauſe it was the ſabbath-day when Jeſus made the clay, and opened his eyes, which they regarded as a vile profanation of the day.

2. The Phariſees interrogate the man concerning the matter, very loth to be perſuaded of the fact, and determined to find fault where wonder and praiſe ſhould have filled their hearts and tongues. The man ſimply gives a narrative of his caſe and cure, which divided the ſentiments of the council. Some ſaid, admitting the fact, this man is not of God, whatever miracles he may pretend to work, becauſe he keepeth not the ſabbath-day; for they regarded the making clay of the ſpittle as a violation of the ſtrict reſt enjoined by the tradition of the elders. Others were loth to admit the fact, and would fain overthrow its evidence; fearing, leaſt if it was allowed to be true, the people would juſtly conclude that no wicked man could work ſuch miracles, and thereby the authority of Jeſus would be eſtabliſhed: or rather, How can a man that is a ſinner do ſuch miracles? are the words of ſome, ſuch as Joſeph and Nicodemus, who juſtly objected, that ſuch miracles of grace were a ſtrong evidence of a divine miſſion, and of God's approbation of the perſon who wrought them; and this occaſioned ſome debates in the council. Some of them hereupon demanded of the man what he thought of Jeſus, and whether he had really opened his eyes. The man from juſt experience owns, he could not but conclude he muſt be a prophet. Note, (1.) A poor blind beggar often judges more wiſely concerning Chriſt and his character, than thoſe who boaſt themſelves maſters in Iſrael. (2.) Some, even of the great, are called, and their conduct and teſtimony leaves the reſt at leaſt more inexcuſable.

3. They cite the father and mother of the man to appear at their bar, hoping to find ſome way to invalidate the credit of the miracle, but they only the more confirmed it; ſo eaſily can God take the wiſe in their own craftineſs. They queſtion the parents of the man, Whether this was their ſon? whether he was born blind? and how he now came to ſee? To the two firſt queſtions they give a clear and explicit anſwer. He was their ſon, and had been born blind. How he now ſaw was a queſtion, which they cared not, for certain reaſons, to enter into; and therefore rather referred the matter to their ſon, who was of age, and therefore able to anſwer for himſelf. For the truth was, they were timorous and apprehenſive of the conſequences of making that open confeſſion, which gratitude and truth demanded; becauſe they were afraid they ſhould be excommunicated, according to the Jewiſh law which the Sanhedrim had paſſed, that if any ſhould own Jeſus as the Meſſiah, he ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue; and therefore they were willing to trim, and leave the queſtion for their ſon to reſolve. Note, (1.) The church's cenſures, when wicked men are in authority, have often been laid on her beſt friends. (2.) The true religion of Jeſus will ever be a ſuffering cauſe, even where the public profeſſion of it is made: experimental godlineſs being only poſſeſſed by a few. (3.) When the profeſſion of Chriſt expoſes us to perſecution, many are ready to conceal their religion in order to eſcape the croſs.

4. The council finding they got nothing to their ſatisfaction from the parents, again called the man himſelf; and unable to deny that a notable miracle was wrought, endeavour to rob the Lord Jeſus of the honour due to him for it, ſaying, Give God the praiſe, who hath done the work; but we know that this man is a ſinner, and therefore though God may pleaſe to uſe wicked inſtruments for the accompliſhment of his purpoſes, yet the praiſe is only due to himſelf. So confidently do they ſpeak, who, when challenged to bring a ſingle proof of ſin againſt Jeſus, could not have the confidence to lodge one accuſation. Note, Many endeavour thus to ſupply the want of argument, with confident aſſertions of virulent abuſe.

5. The man replied, Whether he be a ſinner or no, I know not, I will not determine; though I have all the reaſon in the world to believe the contrary: but one thing I know, by happy experience, that whereas I was blind, now I ſee, and cannot be perſuaded out of my ſenſes. Note, Many captious queſtions may be put to a gracious ſoul, in order to ſhake the ground of his confidence; but though he may not be able to give a diſtinct account how that ſpiritual change is wrought, which he experiences, yet he can ſay, I know it is wrought: my underſtanding is enlightened; my heart is changed.

6. Again they demand an anſwer to their queſtions, in hopes that through inadvertence or fear he might faulter in his evidence, or vary from what he had advanced; but his reply more exaſperated them. He anſwered them, I have told you already, diſtinctly and clearly, and ye did not hear, ſo as to regard or credit what I ſaid: wherefore would ye hear it again? to what purpoſe do you deſire it? will ye alſo be his diſciples? which he ſuggeſts either ironically, as knowing their averſion to Jeſus; or ſeriouſly, as very willing to repeat what he had ſaid a thouſand times over, if they had the leaſt diſpoſition to hear and believe him, and come to Jeſus as their Lord and Maſter.

7. With rage and reſentment at the mention of this, they bitterly revile him. Thou art his diſciple, a poor deluded wretch; but we are Moſes' diſciples, the followers of that great lawgiver of Iſrael, and who ought to be regarded as the guides in religious matters, and not to be taught by ſuch a fellow as thee. We know that God ſpake by Moſes, face to face on the Mount, and delivered the law under a divine commiſſion: but as for this fellow, we know not from whence he is: in truth they deſired not to know, and would not examine the evidence he had produced of his divine original and authority; for then they might have ſeen that there was a perfect agreement between Jeſus and Moſes; and that inſtead of the worthleſs fellow whom they ſcornfully rejected, this was the great Prophet, of whom Moſes ſpake. Note, (1.) Many boaſt of theſe external privileges which only ſerve to aggravate their guilt. (2.) The ſervants of Jeſus, like their maſter, have often been treated with inſolence and contempt, as upſtart fellows whom nobody knows. (3.) Many are branded as forſaking the good old religion, who are in fact the very eſpouſers of it, by thoſe who, reſting upon the form of godlineſs, are utter ſtrangers to the power of it.

8. Once more the man replies, Why, herein is a marvellous thing, that ye know not from whence he is, when he hath given ſuch an inconteſtible evidence of his divine miſſion by this amazing miracle, and he hath opened mine eyes. Now we know, we, who are common people, and much more perſons of your learning and ſagacity, that God heareth not ſinners, nor grants their prayers, much leſs would he enable them to perform miracles to ſupport an impoſture: but if any man be a worſhipper of God, and doth his will, him he heareth; and in the preſent caſe, the miracle Jeſus hath wrought is an expreſs teſtimony of God's approbation of him. Since the world began was it not heard that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind; ſuch a thing, not the greateſt of the prophets, not even Moſes himſelf had ever performed. If, therefore, this man was not of God, ſent by him, and owned of him, he could do nothing; ſince it cannot be imagined God would enable a bad man to work ſuch extraordinary miracles to carry on a bad cauſe, and promote a deluſion. A concluſion moſt reaſonable and unanſwerable, and drawn from premiſes the moſt evident and allowed. Note, (1.) An impenitent ſinner, who perſiſts in his iniquities, can never expect God will hear or anſwer his prayers. (2.) They who in ſpirit worſhip God, and in ſimplicity obey him, may be aſſured he will hear and grant all their petitions. (3.) A poor unlettered man, when taught of God, is able to confound the wiſeſt doctors who are, with all their learning, ſtrangers to divine teaching.

9. Unable to anſwer his reaſoning, they make up in violence and abuſe what they want in argument. Thou waſt altogether born in ſin, and doſt thou teach us? Thou, a vile fellow, ſtigmatized from thy birth, as carrying a body inhabited by a viler ſoul; a poor ignorant wretch, a companion of beggars from thy birth; doſt thou pretend to direct us, the guides and rulers of the church, famed for wiſdom and ſanctity, and inveſted with chief authority. What inſolence, what arrogance is thine! And they caſt him out, excommunicated him immediately, and cut him off from the congregation of Iſrael. But the curſe cauſeleſs ſhall not fall; the anathemas of church rulers, who abuſe their authority, ſhall only light upon their own head. Note, Proud worldly-wiſe men deſpiſe the poor, and think their own ſelf-ſufficiency above all need of others help and teaching: whereas none who know themſelves, will ever think themſelves too wiſe to learn, or too good to mend.

35. Jeſus heard that they had caſt him out; and when he had found him, he ſaid unto him, Doſt thou believe on [t] the Son of God? 36. He anſwered and ſaid, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him? 37. And Jeſus ſaid unto him, Thou haſt both ſeen him, and [u] it is he that talketh with thee. 38. And he ſaid, Lord, I believe. And he worſhipped him.

t Pſ. ii. 7.
u Mat. iii. 17. & xiv. 33. & xxvi. 63.

v. 35—38. The unjuſt act of theſe oppreſſive church rulers was ſoon noiſed abroad, and came to the ears of Jeſus. Hereupon we are told,

1. That Chriſt found him; he went in ſearch of him, probably to encourage and comfort him under the perſecution he ſuffered for the truth, and ſaid unto him, Doſt thou believe on the Son of God, the promiſed Meſſiah? Note, (1.) Though wicked men may abuſe their power in caſting out the faithful ſervants of Jeſus, he will viſit his outcaſts with his love, and own them under their ſufferings for his ſake. (2.) True faith in the Son of God is the great attainment; to know and truſt in him, is everlaſting life.

2. The poor man replied with earneſtneſs, Who is he, Lord, that I might believe on him? I do expect him, and ſhould be happy to find him; and wiſh for nothing more than to be directed to him, that I might by faith embrace him.

3. Chriſt gives him a clear declaration of his own office and character. Thou haſt both ſeen him, and it is he that talketh with thee; whoſe power thou haſt experienced, and is ſo much nearer to thee than thou art aware of; as he often is to his dear people, when they are afflicted and mourning his abſence.

4. That moment, by the power of Jeſus, he was enabled to exerciſe divine faith in his heart, and he makes an open profeſſion of it; Lord, I believe; and he worſhipped him; giving him that divine honour which was due to him, as the eternal Son of God. For they who truly know and believe in him, pay the ſame worſhip and honour to the Son, even as to the Father.

39. ¶ And Jeſus ſaid, [x] For judgment I am come into this world: [y] that they which ſee not might ſee; and that they which ſee, [z] might be made blind. 40. And ſome of the Phariſees which were with him, heard theſe words, and ſaid unto him, [a] Are we blind alſo? 41. Jeſus ſaid unto them, [b] If ye were blind, ye ſhould have no ſin: but now ye ſay, We ſee; therefore your ſin remaineth.

x Chap. v. 22, 27. Chap. iii. 17. & xii. 47.
y Mat. xiii. 13.
z Mat. xi. 25. 2 Cor. iii. 14.
a Rom. ii. 19.
b Chap. xv. 22, 24.

v. 39—41. Whilſt Jeſus ſo kindly encouraged and comforted the poor ſufferer, he pronounces juſt judgment on his malicious perſecutors.

1. He gives a general account of the deſign of his miſſion. Jeſus ſaid, For judgment am I come into this world, to fulfil the decree of God; revealing his truth for the illumination of ſome, and inflicting judicial blindneſs on others who rejected it: that they which ſee not, might ſee, both corporally and ſpiritually; not only opening, by miracle, the eyes of men's bodies, but by his grace ſhining into the benighted ſouls of men: and that they which ſee, conceit themſelves wiſe and knowing in the things of God, might be made blind, given up for their pride and ſelf-ſufficiency to the blindneſs, hardneſs, and impenitence of their own hearts.

2. The Phariſees ſuppoſing they were meant, with indignation replied, Are we blind alſo? Dare you inſolently ſuggeſt, that we, the guides of the people, and the light of the land, are in darkneſs ourſelves? Note, Nothing more offends the proud and ſelf-righteous, than to call in queſtion their knowledge or goodneſs: and their paſſion on ſuch occaſions is a freſh proof of the truth of the charge laid againſt them.

3. Chriſt anſwered, If ye were blind, really deſtitute of the means of knowledge, as the Gentile world, or, deeply ſenſible of your own native blindneſs, deſired to be led unto me the light of life, ye ſhould have no ſin; none comparatively ſpeaking; or you would have ſubmitted to a better wiſdom and righteouſneſs than your own, whereby ye might have been juſtified from all things, and your ſins be pardoned: but now ye ſay, We ſee; conceited of your knowledge, and puffed up with pride, and therefore your ſin remaineth; aggravated by the pretenſions you make, and the abuſe of the means of grace you have enjoyed. Note, None are ſo far from divine wiſdom, as thoſe who are wiſe in their own conceits; none ſo far from real goodneſs, as they who value themſelves on their own excellence. Publicans and harlots ſhall enter the kingdom of heaven before ſuch as theſe.

CHAP. X.

In this chapter, we have, 1. Chriſt's parabolical diſcourſe concerning himſelf, as the door of the ſheep, and the ſhepherd of the ſheep, ver. 1—18. 2. The various ſentiments of people upon it, ver. 19—21. 3. The diſpute Chriſt had with the Jews in the temple at the feaſt of dedication, ver. 22—39. 4. His departure into the country thereupon, ver. 40—42.

1. VERILY I ſay unto you, [a] He that entreth not by the door into the ſheepfold, but climbeth up ſome other way, the ſame is a thief and a robber. 2. But he that entreth in by the door, is the ſhepherd of the ſheep. 3. To him the porter openeth: and the ſheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own ſheep by name, and leadeth them out. 4. And when he putteth forth his own ſheep, he goeth before them, and the ſheep follow him: for they know his voice. 5. And a ſtranger will they not follow, but will flee from him; for they know not the voice of ſtrangers. 6. This parable ſpake Jeſus unto them: but they underſtood not what things they were which he ſpake unto them. 7. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them again, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [b] I am the door of [c] the ſheep. 8. All that ever came before me, [d] are thieves and robbers: but the ſheep did not hear them. 9. I am the door: [e] by me if any man enter in, he ſhall be ſaved, and [f] ſhall go in and out, and [g] find paſture. 10. [h] The thief cometh not, but for to ſteal, and to kill, and to deſtroy: I am come [i] that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. 11. [k] I am the good ſhepherd: [l] the good ſhepherd giveth his life for the ſheep. 12. But he that is an hireling, and not the ſhepherd, whoſe own the ſheep are not, ſeeth the wolf coming, and [m] leaveth the ſheep, and fleeth: and the wolf catcheth them, and ſcattereth the ſheep. 13. The hireling fleeth, becauſe he is an hireling, and careth not for the ſheep. 14. I am the good ſhepherd, [n] and know my ſheep, and [o] am known of mine. 15. [p] As the Father knoweth me, even ſo know I the Father: and I lay down my life for the ſheep. 16. And [q] other ſheep I have, which are not of this fold: them alſo I muſt bring, and they ſhall hear my voice; and [r] there ſhall be one fold, and one ſhepherd. 17. Therefore doth my Father love me, [s] becauſe I lay down my life, that I might take it again. 18. No man taketh it from me, but I lay it down of myſelf: I have power to lay it down, and [t] I have power to take it again. [u] This commandment have I received of my Father.

a Heb. v. 4.
b Chap. xiv. 6. Eph. ii. 18.
c Ezek. xxxiv. 31.
d Jer. xxiii. 1. & l. 6. Ezek. xxxiv. 2.
e John xiv. 6.
f Zech. x. 12.
g Pſ. xxiii. 2. Ezek. xxxiv. 14.
h 2 Pet. ii. 1.
i Ezek. xxxiv. 16.
k Iſa. xl. 11. Ezek. xxxiv. 23. & xxxvii. 24. Heb. xiii. 20. 1 Pet. v. 4.
l Acts xx. 28.
m Zech. xi. 16, 17.
n Chap. xiii. 18. 2 Tim. ii. 19.
o 2 Tim. i. 12.
p Mat. xi. 27.
q Iſa. lvi. 8.
r Ezek. xxxvii. 22. Eph. ii. 14. 1 Pet. ii. 25.
s Iſa. liii. 7, 8, 12. Heb. ii. 9.
t Chap. ii. 19.
u Acts ii. 24.

v. 1—18. As the Phariſees and prieſts arrogated to themſelves the dominion over the church, and boaſted of their authority, wiſdom, and ſanctity, as the only true paſtors; traducing Jeſus as an impoſtor, becauſe he acted without their ordination. Chriſt here, in a parable, warns the people againſt theſe faithleſs paſtors.

1. He propoſes a parable to them, borrowed from a ſhepherd and his flock. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, with deepeſt ſolemnity, and moſt infallible certainty, He that entreth not by the door into the ſheepfold, but climbeth up ſome other way, the ſame is a thief and a robber; ſuch a clandeſtine entry ſhews the ill deſign on which he comes. The ſheepfold is the church of God, where the faithful are united together in love, and ſhare in the proviſion of goſpel-ordinances provided for them; the door is Chriſt himſelf, by whom the faithful enter, and who by his ſpirit calls and qualifies his miniſters for their work. The thieves are thoſe who intrude into the miniſtry without a divine call, influenced by the hopes of the honours and profits of the ſervice, inſtead of being inwardly moved by the Holy Ghoſt, and animated by love to Jeſus, and zeal for immortal ſouls. But he that entreth in by the door, is the ſhepherd of the ſheep, whom Jeſus calls and qualifies for his office; and who, with fidelity and diligence attends, feeds, and watches over thoſe gracious ſouls, whom the Saviour commits to his care. To him the porter openeth, and the ſheep hear his voice: the ſpirit of God makes his miniſtry ſucceſsful, and opens the hearts of ſinners to receive the goſpel he preaches: and he calleth his own ſheep by name; the Lord knoweth thoſe that are his, and by his effectual power upon their hearts, calls them to himſelf by the inſtrumentality of his under-ſhepherds, who alſo are perſonally and particularly acquainted with their own peculiar flocks; and leadeth them out into green paſtures of ordinances, and beſide the waters of comfort. And when he putteth putteth forth his own ſheep, he goeth before them as their ſhepherd, to protect them from danger, and the ſheep follow him, cloſe at his footſteps, imitating his example; for they know his voice; they have a diſcernment of goſpel-truth, and approve of, and ſubmit to his teachings. But a ſtranger will they not follow, for they know not the voice of ſtrangers; they diſcover the falſe principles or bad practices of thoſe who ſet up for pretended guides, and will not put their ſouls under their tuition, or be influenced by their examples.

2. The Jews underſtood not the meaning of his diſcourſe, and therefore Chriſt more explicitly opens to them his meaning.

(1.) He is the door; the only way of acceſs to God and glory is through him, and none can enter into the miniſtry but by his call, and under his commiſſion. All that went before, with pretenſions to the character of the Meſſiah; and thoſe who, without an eye to him, exerciſed their miniſtry; or who endeavoured, as the Scribes and Phariſees of that age did, to prejudice the people againſt the true Meſſiah's character, all theſe were thieves and robbers, intruders into the office to which God never called them, and robbing him of his glory: but from their deluſive teachings the Lord preſerved his own people, ſo that they were not deceived by them, nor paid regard to the teachings of theſe falſe ſhepherds. But of himſelf Chriſt ſaith, I am the door of acceſs to, and acceptance with God; by me, through faith in my name, if any man enter in, he ſhall be ſaved from ſin, from the condemning guilt and enſlaving power of it, from the law, and the curſe which it pronounces; from Satan, and all the powers of evil; from deceivers, and all their wiles; yea, he ſhall be ſaved with an everlaſting ſalvation, and ſhall go in and out, and ſhall find paſture, during his journey through life; he ſhall have free acceſs to the ordinances, poſſeſs a glorious liberty in his ſpirit, be ſafe under the ſhepherd's conſtant care, and be fed with the ſweeteſt refreſhments which the grace of the goſpel miniſters. Bleſſed and happy are they, who thus walk under the conſtant guard and guidance of the divine Redeemer.

(2.) He is the ſhepherd, the great, the good, the true ſhepherd.

[1.] The gracious deſign which he is come upon, is quite different from that of the falſe teachers. They, by their pernicious hereſies, ſteal away the heart of the unwary, prejudice them againſt the truth, and whilſt they promiſe them life and ſalvation, really murder their ſouls; and ſeek by perſecutions to deſtroy or diſperſe the flock of Chriſt, which they cannot deceive: whilſt he is come, that his people and the ſheep of his paſture may have life, the life of grace here, and of glory hereafter: yea, that they might have it more abundantly, fuller aſſurance of it than they ever had before; or in a more abundant meaſure, and with greater glory and advantage than even Adam in innocence poſſeſſed.

[2.] The way in which he obtains theſe privileges for his people, is by his death for them. I am the good ſhepherd, eminently ſo; and as the greateſt inſtance of it, the good ſhepherd giveth his life for the ſheep, as I am ready to do, dying in their ſtead to redeem them from ſin, death, and hell. And herein Chriſt's love towards them is in the moſt convincing manner evidenced. But he that is an hireling, and not the ſhepherd, who ſerves for lucre merely, not for the love of ſouls, whoſe own the ſheep are not, regarding them with none of that affectionate concern which the owner feels; ſuch a one ſeeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the ſheep; whenever danger approaches, he deſerts his poſt, and the wolf catcheth them, and ſcattereth the ſheep, perverting and ſeducing them. The hireling fleeth, becauſe he is an hireling, and careth not for the ſheep: behold the true character of the falſe and faithleſs ſhepherd. (1.) He is one who ſerves for hire, and makes the miniſtry his trade. (2.) He feels no concern about the ſouls of men; and if he gets the revenues of the church, concerns himſelf not if the devil runs away with his flock. (3.) He never expoſes himſelf to any danger nor labours in the miniſtry, only careful about his own ſafety, and conſulting his own eaſe. The very reverſe is the character of a good miniſter: like his maſter, his boſom glows with deſire after the ſalvation of men's ſouls; he is ready to ſpend and be ſpent in the ſervice of the miniſtry; he labours willingly, not for hire but from principle; and no dangers can deter him from his duty, or drive him to deſert his poſt.

[3.] As the good ſhepherd, he is acquainted intimately with his flock and their concerns, and takes care of them. I am the good ſhepherd, and know my ſheep, and am known of mine; Chriſt knows particularly thoſe that are his; he regards them with tendereſt affection; takes cognizance of all their wants, and kindly relieves and ſupplies them: and he is known by his people as the great object of their faith and hope, the author of their joy and happineſs. As the Father knoweth me, even ſo know I the Father; ſuch intimate knowledge of each other as ſubſiſts between the father and the ſon, ſubſiſts alſo between Chriſt and his people: and I lay down my life for the ſheep, to teſtify his love, and to accompliſh the eternal deſigns of grace towards them. And other ſheep I have, which are not of this fold, out of the pale of the Jewiſh church; them alſo I muſt bring, according to the eternal decrees of the covenant of grace, from their guilt, miſery, and ruin, into a ſtate of favour and acceptance with God; and they ſhall hear my voice, effectually wrought upon by the mighy and irreſiſtible influences of the divine ſpirit; and there ſhall be one fold, and one ſhepherd; when all true believers, both Jews and Gentiles, ſhall be united in one glorious church, under their common head Chriſt Jeſus, and ſhare the ſame bleſſings and privileges. Therefore doth my Father love me, becauſe I lay down my life; highly well pleaſed in my undertaking, whereby ſuch glory would accrue to him, and ſalvation certain and eternal be obtained for the redeemed: for I lay it down that I might take it again, riſing for their juſtification, and thus effectually triumphing over all their foes. No man taketh it from me, neither force nor fraud avail any thing, till my own time comes; but I lay it down of myſelf, voluntarily, with my own conſent: I have power to lay it down, a right and authority to lay it down, as a ſatisfaction to divine juſtice; and I have power to take it again; having made the atonement, by my own almighty power I will quicken my dead body, and raiſe it to eternal life and glory. This commandment have I received of my Father, according to the eternal counſels between them, he had engaged thus to die for his people, and herein he delighted to do the will of God.

19. ¶ [x] There was a diviſion therefore again among the Jews for theſe ſayings. 20. And many of them ſaid, [y] He hath a devil, and is mad; why hear ye him? 21.
Others ſaid, Theſe are not the words of him that hath a devil: [z] Can a devil [a] open the eyes of the blind?

[x] Chap. vii. 43. & ix. 16.
[y] Chap. vii. 20. & viii. 48, 52.
[z] Exod. iv. 11. Pſ. xciv. 9. & cxlvi. 8.
[a] Chap. ix. 6, 7.

v. 19—21. The diſcourſe of Jeſus gave occaſion for warm debates among the Jews, whoſe ſentiments were greatly divided concerning him.

1. Many, who were his enemies, cried out, He hath a devil, and and is mad; why hear ye him? Can you be ſo weak and deluded, as to attend to ſuch abſurd and blaſphemous nonſenſe? Thus doth the world often ſcoff at the ſerious diſcourſes of Chriſt's faithful miniſters, and ridicule and revile thoſe who pay attention to their preaching: but we ſhould neither be threatned nor laughed out of our religion.

2. Others entertained very different ſentiments, and ſaid very ſenſibly, Theſe are not the words of him that hath a devil; the nature of his doctrine, and his manner of ſpeaking, ſavour nothing of inſanity; nor can poſſibly tend to advance, but to deſtroy Satan's kingdom. Beſides, Can a devil open the eyes of the blind? Can a madman, or much leſs a bad man, under diabolical influence, perform ſuch a miracle? The ſuppoſition is abſurd and incredible. It evidently appeared that this was the finger of God.

22. ¶ And it was at Jeruſalem [b] the feaſt of the dedication, and it was winter. 23. And Jeſus walked in the temple in [c] Solomon's porch. 24. Then came the Jews round about him, and ſaid unto him, How long doſt thou † make us to doubt? If thou be the Chriſt, tell us plainly. 25. Jeſus anſwered them, I told you, and ye believed not; [d] the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witneſs of me. 26. [e] But ye believe not; becauſe ye are not my ſheep, as I ſaid unto you. 27. [f] My ſheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me. 28. And [g] I give unto them eternal life, and [h] they ſhall never periſh, neither ſhall any pluck them out of my hand. 29. [i] My Father which gave them me, is greater than all: and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand. 30. [k] I and my Father are one. 31.
Then [l] the Jews took up ſtones again to ſtone him. 32.
Jeſus anſwered them, Many good works have I ſhewed you from my Father; for which of thoſe works do ye ſtone me? 33. The Jews anſwered him, ſaying, For a good work we ſtone thee not; but for blaſphemy, and becauſe that thou, being a man, [m] makeſt thyſelf God. 34.
Jeſus anſwered them, [n] Is it not written in your law, I ſaid, Ye are gods? 35. If [o] he called them gods, [p] unto whom the word of God came, and the ſcripture cannot be broken: 36. Say ye of him, [q] whom the Father hath ſanctified, and ſent into the world, thou blaſphemeſt; [r] becauſe I ſaid, I am [s] the Son of God? 37. [t] If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not. 38. But if I do, though ye believe not me, [u] believe the works: that ye may know and believe that [x] the Father is in me, and I in him.

[b] 1 Mac. iv. 59.
[c] Acts iii. 11. & v. 12.
† Gr. Take away our ſouls.
[d] Ver. 38. Chap. v. 36.
[e] Ibid. viii. 47. 1 John iv. 6.
[f] Ver. 4, 14.
[g] Ver. 10, 15. Chap. xvii. 2. Rom. vi. 23.
[h] Chap. xvii. 12. & xviii. 9.
[i] Chap. xiv. 28.
[k] Ibid. xvii. 11, 12.
[l] Chap. viii. 59.
[m] Ibid. v. 18.
[n] Pſ. lxxxii. 6.
[o] Ex. xxii. 28.
[p] Rom. xiii. 1.
[q] Chap. vi. 27.
[r] Ibid. v. 17, 18.
[s] Luke i. 35.
[t] Chap. xv. 24.
[u] Chap. v. 36. & xiv. 10.
[x] Chap. xiv. 11. & xvii. 21.

v. 22—38. We have here another diſcourſe between Jeſus and the Jews. We have,

1. The time and place. It was at the feaſt of dedication, obſerved in remembrance of the renovation of the temple-ſervice, when Judas Maccabæus dedicated the new altar, and cleanſed the temple which Antiochus had profaned, which was in the winter, in the month of December. And therefore Chriſt walked under cover, in a place called Solomon's porch; a magnificent building, which ſtanding on the ſame ground where Solomon's porch formerly ſtood, continued to bear that name.

2. Hither the Jews came to him; and ſurrounding him, in order to pick a quarrel with him, they urged him to tell them plainly and boldly, and leave them no longer in ſuſpence by his figurative and dark expreſſions, whether he were the Chriſt or not.

3. Chriſt knew their malicious deſigns, and therefore anſwered them, I told you in terms ſufficiently plain, if you choſe to underſtand them, and ye believed not, and were determined not to believe: it was vain, therefore, to add farther aſſertions, and he choſe to refer them to the miracles which abundantly proved his miſſion: the works that I do in my Father's name, they bear witneſs of me. But ye believe not, obſtinate in your infidelity, becauſe ye are not of my ſheep, as I ſaid unto you; their tempers and diſpoſitions plainly ſhewed they were not, and Chriſt knew they were not of thoſe whom the Father had given him, whoſe character and conduct he deſcribes. My ſheep hear my voice, with attention, diſcernment, and ſpiritual delight, and I know them, take cognizance of them, and diſtinguiſh them with my peculiar favour and regard; and they follow me in the ways of truth and righteouſneſs, obedient to my word, and imitating my example. And I give unto them eternal life; they have a preſent ſure title thereto, experience the beginnings of it here, and ſhall be put into the full poſſeſſion of it after death; and they ſhall never periſh; no wiles of Satan, no craft of men, no power of corruption, ſhall be able finally and fatally to prevail againſt them, and ſeparate them from the love and protection of me their ſhepherd: neither ſhall any pluck them out of my hand, whatever efforts the devil, the world, and the fleſh may make to deſtroy them. My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all their foes, and none is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand; they muſt be ſafe when omnipotence is their guard. I and my Father are one, in nature, eſſence, and perfections; and our power, wiſdom, and truth, are engaged for the preſervation of the redeemed flock. Note, (1.) Eternal life is wholly the gift of God through Jeſus Chriſt. (2.) They whom Chriſt will ſave, can never periſh. O that we had faith to truſt him!

4. The Jews, fired with rage, could no longer refrain, but took up ſtones to ſtone him as a blaſphemer.

5. Jeſus mildly expoſtulated with them on their baſeneſs, ſaying, Many good works have I ſhewed you from my Father; works of ſuch benevolence and wonder, as evidenced his miſſion divine: for which of thoſe works do ye ſtone me? how horrid is your ingratitude! how baſe your returns! Note, (1.) Nothing aggravates our ſins againſt God, ſo much as our vile ingratitude. (2.) If we meet with the moſt ungrateful returns from thoſe on whom we had conferred the greateſt obligations, we may not think it ſtrange: Jeſus was ſo treated before us.

6. The Jews attempt to vindicate their conduct, ſaying, For a good work we ſtone thee not, but for blaſphemy; and becauſe that thou, being a man, makeſt thyſelf God; for in this light they interpreted his claim of unity with the Father, and his aſſuming the incommunicable attributes of the Deity. Note, Pretended zeal for God's honour hath been the pretext which perſecutors have often uſed to cover the moſt violent outrages againſt his moſt faithful ſervants.

7. Chriſt proves he had the fulleſt right to thoſe divine honours which he claimed. Is it not written in your law, I ſaid ye are gods? Pſ. lxxxii. 6. If he called them gods, who as magiſtrates were types of the King Meſſiah, and unto whom the word of God came; entruſted by him with the government of the Jewiſh church and nation; and the ſcripture cannot be broken, but muſt receive its accompliſhment in that Meſſiah, who really poſſeſſes divine honour and authority, and is intitled to that high name which they bore as his repreſentatives; ſay ye then of him whom the Father hath ſanctified, and ſet apart before the worlds were, and in the fulneſs of time ſent into the world, Thou blaſphemeſt, becauſe I ſaid, I am the Son of God? But beſides the ſcripture teſtimony, I appeal to my miracles. If I do not the works of my Father, as great as might be expected from him, and by my own power as God; if theſe do not ſpeak my divine character, and that I am entitled to the honour I claim as Son of God, believe me not; I am content to be rejected by you: but if I do works ſo great, and in ſuch a manner, as declare my divine power and godhead, though ye believe not me, on my own word and aſſertions, believe the works, thoſe unexceptionable evidences, that ye may know and believe that the Father is in me, and I in him; we being one in nature and eſſence, having the moſt intimate union and communion in the ſame undivided Godhead.

39. [y] Therefore they ſought again to take him: but he eſcaped out of their hand, 40. And went away again beyond Jordan, into the place [z] where John at firſt baptized; and there he abode. 41. And many reſorted unto him, and ſaid, John did no miracle: [a] but all things that John ſpake of this man were true. 42. And many believed on him there.

[y] Chap. vii. 30, 44. & viii. 59.
[z] Chap. i. 28.
[a] Chap. iii. 30.

v. 39—42. Far from appeaſing their fury, Chriſt, by maintaining his right to the eſſential glories of divinity, exaſperated them to the higheſt pitch. Whereupon,

1. They ſought again to take him; concluding they had now full evidence againſt him to convict him as a blaſphemer, and get him legally condemned by the Sanhedrim, and put to death.

2. As the time for Chriſt's ſuffering was not yet come, he eſcaped out of their hand; either holding their arms by an inviſible power from ſeizing him, or their eyes from ſeeing him.

3. He retired beyond Jordan, into the place where John at firſt baptized; and there he abode, preaching the goſpel of the kingdom, and gathering probably ſome fruit from the ſeed, which John had ſown there about two or three years before.

4. Multitudes reſorted to him there, drawn by his preaching and miracles; and ſaid, John did no miracle: but all things that John ſpake of this man were true. He appears with that tranſcendent greatneſs and glory, in which John ſpake of him. And many believed on him there, as the true Meſſiah. Note, (1.) Tho' perſecutors drive the miniſters of Chriſt from one place, God will take care to ſend them where he hath ſtill greater work for them to do. (2.) Jeſus will be peculiarly welcome with his goſpel to thoſe, whoſe hearts, by the ſharp convictions of the law, as by the auſtere Baptiſt's miniſtry, are broken with a humbling ſenſe of ſin.

CHAP. XI.

Here is, 1. The tidings ſent to our Lord Jeſus of the ſickneſs of Lazarus, and his entertainment of thoſe tidings, ver. 1—16. 2. The viſit he made to Lazarus's relations when he had heard of his death, and their entertainment of the viſit, ver. 17—32. 3. The miracle wrought in the raiſing of Lazarus from the dead, ver. 33—44. 4. The effect wrought by this miracle upon others, ver. 45—57.

1. NOW a certain man was ſick, named Lazarus of Bethany, the town of [a] Mary and her ſiſter Martha. 2. (It was that Mary [b] which anointed the Lord with ointment, and wiped his feet with her hair, whoſe brother Lazarus was ſick) 3. Therefore his ſiſters ſent unto him, ſaying, Lord, behold, he whom thou loveſt is ſick. 4. When Jeſus heard that, he ſaid, This ſickneſs is not unto death, [c] but for the glory of God, that the Son of God might be glorified thereby. 5. Now Jeſus loved Martha, and her ſiſter, and Lazarus. 6. When he had heard therefore that he was ſick, [d] he abode two days ſtill in the ſame place where he was. 7. Then after that, ſaith he to his diſciples, Let us go into Judea again. 8. His diſciples ſay unto him, Maſter, [e] the Jews of late ſought to ſtone thee; and goeſt thou thither again? 9. Jeſus anſwered, Are there not twelve hours in the day? [f] If any man walk in the day, he ſtumbleth not, becauſe he ſeeth the light of this world. 10. But [g] if a man walk in the night, he ſtumbleth, becauſe there is no light in him. 11. Theſe things ſaid he: and after that, he ſaith unto them, Our friend Lazarus [h] ſleepeth; but I go that I may awake him out of ſleep. 12. Then ſaid his diſciples, Lord, if he ſleep, he ſhall do well. 13. Howbeit Jeſus ſpake of his death: but they thought that he had ſpoken of taking reſt in ſleep. 14. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them plainly, Lazarus is dead. 15. And I am glad for your ſakes, that I was not there (to the intent ye may believe) nevertheleſs, let us go unto him. 16. Then ſaid Thomas, which is called Didymus, unto his fellow-diſciples, Let us alſo go, that we may die with him.

[a] Luke x. 38, 39.
[b] Mat. xxvi. 7. Mark xiv. 3. Chap. xii. 3.
[c] Chap. ix. 3. Ver. 10.
[d] Chap. x. 40.
[e] Ibid. 31.
[f] Ibid. ix. 4.
[g] Ibid. xii. 35.
[h] Mat. ix. 24.

v. 1—16. The miracle contained in this chapter is recorded by this evangeliſt alone. We have,

1. The perſons particularly intereſted. Lazarus, a particular friend of Chriſt's, who was now ſick at Bethany, a little village near Jeruſalem, where he had lived with Mary and her ſiſter Martha; at whoſe houſe Jeſus ſeems to have chiefly reſided when he went up to Jeruſalem on the great feſtivals. Mary, whoſe brother was ill, was a woman of ſingular piety, which particularly appeared in the reſpect ſhe paid our Lord ſome time after this, chap. xii. 3. when at a public entertainment ſhe anointed his feet with a box of precious ointment, and wiped them with her hair. Note, Chriſt keeps a faithful account, and will not fail to make honourable mention of all the works of faith and labours of love done for his ſake by his faithful people.

2. The ſiſters, anxious for their brother, who was ſo dear to them, diſpatched a meſſenger to acquaint their Lord and maſter of his imminent danger; knowing it would be enough to mention the caſe to him, ſince he who was ſick was a perſon he loved ſo tenderly. Note, (1.) When we ourſelves, or our dear relatives, are ſick, we muſt ſpread the caſe before the compaſſionate Saviour, and commit it with humble ſubmiſſion to his care. (2.) They are happy ſouls indeed, who are diſtinguiſhed as the diſciples whom Jeſus eminently loves. (3.) The deareſt children of God ſhare in the common afflictions incident to humanity; yea, often are moſt ſeverely exerciſed.

3. Chriſt foretold the iſſue of the ſickneſs, that it ſhould not be unto death; at leaſt that death ſhould not keep him as his priſoner, but that the glory of God ſhould be moſt eminently diſplayed in his recovery, for which end this ſickneſs was ſent. Note, (1.) It is a great conſolation to every child of God, that in all his ſufferings, God hath purpoſes of his own glory to anſwer. (2.) Though we are ſick, even unto death, we know if Jeſus loves us, that the periſhing of the outward man can do us no real harm, but will open for our diſembodied ſouls a paſſage to eternal life and bleſſedneſs.

4. He defers his viſit to Lazarus two days, though his love to him and the family was well known, and very ſingular; and this he did to prove their faith and patience, and give them a more ſignal manifeſtation of his power and grace. Note, Chriſt's very delays, however irkſome and trying to us, are deſigned in the iſſue for our greater comfort and his greater glory.

5. When the two days were expired, Chriſt calls upon his diſciples to attend him to Bethany, deſigning to carry relief to the afflicted family there. But they expoſtulate with him on the danger to which he muſt expoſe himſelf by ſuch a journey, when ſo lately the Jews had attempted to murder him, and ſtill harboured the ſame malicious intentions: but perhaps this concern for his ſafety was not without ſome regard to their own alſo, who were ſo nearly connected with him; for very apt are we to mix ſelfiſh conſiderations where we ſeem to mean only our divine maſter's honour and intereſts. In reply to their ſuggeſtion, he anſwers, Are there not twelve hours in the day, according to general eſtimation, allotted for labour? if any man walk in the day he ſtumbleth not, becauſe he ſeeth the light of the world, that ſun which gilds his path, and makes his way plain before his face. Thus whilſt the time of life appointed by the Father laſts, I fear no danger, and go forward in my work; but if a man walk in the night he ſtumbleth, becauſe there is no light in him. So when my day of work expires, then, and not till then, ſhall I be ſuffered to fall into the hands of my foes. Note, (1.) The conſideration how ſoon the night of death approaches, ſhould quicken our diligence, whilſt yet the day of life continues, to redeem the time, and finiſh the work Chriſt hath given us to do. (2.) They who walk under the guidance of the word and ſpirit of Jeſus, go on their way unmoved; whilſt they who follow any other guide are ſure to ſtumble upon the dark mountains of error, and fall into the pit of deſtruction.

6. He informs them of the death of their common friend Lazarus, and his deſign to raiſe him up again to life, which he repreſents under the figure of ſleep. Our friend Lazarus ſleepeth, but I go, that I may awake him out of ſleep. The diſciples underſtanding him literally, thought this a favourable ſymptom, and that he would do well without their maſter's going into the jaws of danger. But as he ſpake of his death under this figure, and not of common reſt, as they apprehended, he rectified their miſtake by plainly telling them, Lazarus is dead; and adds, I am glad, for your ſakes, that I was not there before he died, to the intent ye may believe, when by his reſurrection from the grave, after ſo long a time, your faith may receive the greater confirmation. Neverthleſs, though he is dead, let us go unto him. Note, (1.) Sleep is death's leſſer myſteries; and every day that we awake from our beds, we experience a kind of reſurrection. (2.) The great reſtorative to weak and wearied nature is ſoft repoſe; but no ſleep is ſo ſweet to the body, as the ſleep of death to the gracious ſoul, from which he awakes in eternal day.

7. Thomas, called Didymus, or the twin, on hearing what Jeſus had ſaid, and his reſolution to go into Judea, ſaid to his fellow-diſciples, let us alſo go, that we may die with him; either with Lazarus, whom he loved ſo much as not to wiſh to ſurvive him, or rather with their maſter; who, by going, ſeeemed to expoſe his life to inevitable danger: and he, zealous to attend him, offers himſelf, and encourages his brethren to cleave to him wherever he went, though death itſelf ſhould be the conſequence. Note, (1.) The loſs of thoſe on whom our fond affections were placed, often embitters life, and makes death appear deſirable. (2.) To go to join the ſpirits of juſt men made perfect, is indeed a conſummation devoutly to be wiſhed for. (3.) Faithful diſciples will be intimidated by no danger from following their maſter, and encouraging each other to ſtand faſt in the day of trial.

17. Then when Jeſus came, he found that he had lien in the grave four days already. 18. (Now Bethany was nigh unto Jeruſalem, about † fifteen furlongs off) 19. And many of the Jews came to Martha and Mary, to comfort them concerning their brother. 20. Then Martha, as ſoon as ſhe heard that Jeſus was coming, went and met him: but Mary ſat ſtill in the houſe. 21. Then ſaid Martha unto Jeſus, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died. 22. But I know, that even now [i] whatſoever thou wilt aſk of God, God will give it thee. 23. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Thy brother ſhall riſe again. 24. Martha ſaith unto him, [k] I know that he ſhall riſe again in the reſurrection at the laſt day. 25. Jeſus ſaid unto her, [l] I am the reſurrection, and the life: [m] he that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet ſhall he live; 26. And whoſoever liveth and believeth in me, [n] ſhall never die. Believeſt thou this? 27. She ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord: I believe that [o] thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God, which ſhould come into the world. 28. And when ſhe had ſo ſaid, ſhe went her way, and called Mary her ſiſter ſecretly, ſaying, The Maſter is come, and calleth for thee. 29. As ſoon as ſhe heard that, ſhe aroſe quickly, and came unto him. 30. Now Jeſus was not yet come into the town, but was in that place where Martha met him. 31. The Jews then which were with her in the houſe, and [p] comforted her, when they ſaw Mary that ſhe roſe up haſtily, and went out, followed her, ſaying, She goeth unto the grave, to weep there. 32. Then when Mary was come where Jeſus was, and ſaw him, ſhe fell down at his feet, ſaying unto him, Lord, [q] if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died.

† i. e. About two miles.

[i] Chap. ix. 31.
[k] Luke xiv. 14. Chap. v. 29.
[l] Chap. v. 21. & vi. 39, 44.
[m] Chap. iii. 36. 1 John v. 10, &c.
[n] Rev. xx. 6.
[o] Mat. xvi. 16. Chap. iv. 42. & vi. 69.
[p] Ver. 19.
[q] Ver. 21.

v. 17—32. Jeſus having declared his purpoſes, began his journey with his diſciples, and arrived at Bethany, which was diſtant from Jeruſalem about two miles.

1. He found a melancholy ſcene. The houſe, where with joy he had lately been entertained, is drowned in tears; ſuch awful changes do we often ſee after the ſhorteſt abſence from our friends. Lazarus had lien in the grave four days already, and many of the Jews from Jeruſalem, which was near, had come to conſole the afflicted ſiſters. Note, (1.) It is kind to weep with thoſe that weep; and by partaking, to alleviate the ſorrows of the miſerable. (2.) When we loſe our deareſt relatives, if they fall aſleep in Jeſus, we have abundant reaſon to be comforted concerning our brother; his lot is to be envied; our tears ſhould rather flow for ourſelves left yet behind, to conflict with the powers of evil. (3.) The houſe of moſt diſtinguiſhed piety is not barred againſt affliction; but though we ſorrow as men, we can rejoice as believers. There is hope in the end.

2. Martha no ſooner heard of the Maſter's approach, than ſhe went to meet him; whilſt Mary, who had not yet heard of his arrival, ſat ſtill in the houſe. We are here told what paſſed at this firſt interview.

[1.] Martha, with deep reſpect addreſſing the Saviour, ſaid, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died; ſo confident was ſhe of his power and compaſſions, though her weakneſs appeared in ſuppoſing his bodily preſence neceſſary to the cure. But I know that even now, deſperate as the caſe is, whatſoever thou wilt aſk of God, God will give it thee; ſhe mentioned no particulars, but meekly referred the caſe to his grace and wiſdom. Note, In our deepeſt ſorrows, our only relief is to draw near to Jeſus, to tell him our ſorrows, and caſt our care upon him.

[2.] Chriſt anſwers her with good words, and comfortable words. Thy brother ſhall riſe again. He expreſſes it ſo as to leave it doubtful, whether he meant a preſent or future reſurrection: in either view it adminiſtred matter for her faith and hope and conſolation. Note, It is a moſt reviving conſideration when death robs us of our brethren in Jeſus, that the ſeparation is but ſhort, we ſhall meet them again at the reſurrection of the juſt.

[3.] Martha profeſſes her faith in what her Lord had ſpoken. I know that he ſhall riſe again in the reſurrection at the laſt day; that there ſhould be a reſurrection ſhe was perſuaded, and that Lazarus would riſe among the juſt; but though this was ſome conſolation, her loſs hung heavy upon her.

[4.] Jeſus ſaid unto her, I am the reſurrection and the life; not only by his prayer could he obtain life from God for whom he would, but he had the power of life in himſelf, and at his own pleaſure could raiſe the dead, and call the things that are not, as though they were. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet ſhall he live; his body, as well as ſoul, ſhall live in the eternal world; and whoſoever liveth and believeth in me, quickened to ſpiritual life, and walking now by faith, ſhall never die; ſhall never loſe the life of grace he poſſeſſes, which is the beginning of the life of glory; and though this body may return to the duſt, from whence it came, yet ſhall it be raiſed again, and be made immortal as his never-dying ſoul. Believeſt thou this? A ſolemn queſtion which we ſhould often put to ourſelves. The reſurrection of the body is to ſenſe improbable, impoſſible; but faith overlooks every difficulty. He who raiſed us from the duſt at firſt, can again re-aſſemble the ſcattered atoms, and bring bone to his bone. Note, (1.) Chriſt is the author of natural life; in him we live, and move, and have our being; of ſpiritual life; by his power and his ſpirit are we quickened from the death of ſin: of eternal life; as he hath procured the title for us, and by him we ſhall be raiſed up at the laſt day. (2.) They who have this faith in them, are truly bleſſed and happy; they live in comfort, and die in hope.

[5.] Martha ſaid unto him, Yea, Lord, I believe that thou art the Chriſt, the Son of God, which ſhould come into the world; the true Meſſiah ſo long promiſed, ſo greatly expected; and that thou haſt all power to do whatſoever thou pleaſeſt, and that nothing is impoſſible with thee. Note, They who know the Saviour's all-ſufficiency, may comfortably and confidently reſt all their hopes upon him.

3. Mary comes to meet the Lord. Martha, in haſte to communicate the glad news, and to make her ſiſter partaker of the bleſſings of his converſe, goes and ſecretly whiſpers to her that Jeſus the Maſter was come, and wiſhed to ſee her. Eager to meet him, ſhe haſtily aroſe, and came to him without the town where he had halted, as nearer the grave where his buſineſs lay. The Jews, who came to condole with her, obſerving her ſudden departure, concluded ſhe was gone to the grave to weep, and followed her. But Mary had now found her Lord, and at his feet poured out with tears her ſorrowful complaint, Lord, if thou hadſt been here, my brother had not died. Note, (1.) Gracious ſouls delight to be inſtrumental in bringing others to Jeſus, to partake of his conſolations. (2.) Chriſt is a better comforter than ten thouſand friends: at his feet under all our ſorrows let us be found, and he will calm our troubled breaſts. (3.) It is kind to viſit the houſe of mourning, and ſeek to divert from inordinate ſorrow the afflicted, who often ſtudy how to ſharpen and aggravate their own griefs. (4.) We are often apt to torment and grieve ourſelves unneceſſarily with apprehenſions that ſomething was neglected or overlooked, that might have been done for our departed friends, inſtead of ſubmitting to the divine decree with ſilent reſignation.

33. When Jeſus therefore ſaw her weeping, and the Jews alſo weeping which came with her, he groaned in the ſpirit, and was troubled, 34. And ſaid, Where have ye laid him? They ſay unto him, Lord, come and ſee.
35. [r] Jeſus wept. 36. Then ſaid the Jews, Behold how he loved him! 37. And ſome of them ſaid, Could not this man, [s] which opened the eyes of the blind, have cauſed that even this man ſhould not have died? 38.
Jeſus therefore again groaning in himſelf, cometh to the grave. It was a cave, and a ſtone lay upon it. 39.
Jeſus ſaid, Take ye away the ſtone. Martha, the ſiſter of him that was dead, ſaith unto him, Lord, by this time he ſtinketh: for he hath been dead four days. 40. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldſt believe, [t] thou ſhouldſt ſee the glory of God? 41. Then they took away the ſtone from the place where the dead was laid. And Jeſus lifted up his eyes, and ſaid, Father, I thank thee that thou haſt heard me. 42. And I knew that thou heareſt me always: but [u] becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that they may believe that thou haſt ſent me. 43. And when he had thus ſpoken, he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. 44.
And he that was dead came forth, bound hand and foot with grave clothes: and [x] his face was bound about with a napkin. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Looſe him, and let him go.

v. 33—44. We have here,

1. The compaſſions of Jeſus. He felt for the anguiſh which appeared in the tears ſo plentifully ſhed; he groaned in the ſpirit, and was troubled; either ſympathizing with Mary and her friends in their grief, or, as the words ſeem in their ſignification to intimate, with indignation at the unbelief and hardneſs of heart which he ſaw in many of the Jews there preſent: and knowing his own deſigns of grace, he aſked, Where have ye laid him? Not that he could be unacquainted with any event, but that it might appear there was no contrivance between him and the relations of the deceaſed; They ſay unto him, Lord, come and ſee; and being come to the place, he, whoſe tender heart felt deeply for human miſery; and as man poſſeſſed the tendereſt feelings of our nature, gave vent to his grief: Jeſus wept. Note, (1.) Jeſus was very man as well as very God, and ſubject to all our ſinleſs paſſions and infirmities. (2.) Tears of tender ſympathy become the diſciples of Jeſus, who are commanded to weep with thoſe that weep.

2. The reflections made by thoſe preſent on the tears of Jeſus. Some ſaid, and the obſervation was moſt natural, Behold how he loved him! Others with more malignant inſinuations, ſuggeſt, Could not this man, which opened the eyes of the blind, have cauſed that even this man ſhould not have died? Intimating, that had he really poſſeſſed the power he pretended, he would have kept his friend from death; but as he could not do this, it was to be ſuſpected that what had paſſed for ſo extraordinary a miracle before, was really a mere ſham. Note, (1.) If we conſider what Jeſus hath done, how he hath ſhed not only tears, but drops of blood for us, with much more reaſon may we ſay, Behold how he loved us! (2.) They who determine to cavil, will always find a pretence.

3. Jeſus groaning in ſpirit at the malice and wickedneſs of ſuch a ſuggeſtion, cometh to the grave; which, according to their uſual method of burying the dead, was a cave, with a ſtone laid on its mouth. This he bids them remove, that all might be convinced of the reality of Lazarus's death, by the putrefaction of the corpſe. Martha, concluding from the time he had lain in the grave, that the body muſt be very offenſive, and thinking it too late to hope for his revival, would have diverted Jeſus from his purpoſe, but he ſaid unto her, Said I not unto thee, that if thou wouldſt believe, thou ſhouldſt ſee the glory of God diſplayed in a more eminent manner than hath yet appeared? And herein probably he refers to ſomething which he had ſaid in the former converſation with her, which is not recorded by the evangeliſt. Note, (1.) Nothing ſerves more deeply to mortify our pride on any bodily excellencies, than the reflection how awful will be the change, when we have lain but a few days in the grave. (2.) If we have true faith, we ſhall ſurely ſee the great ſalvation of God, whatever difficulties may ſeem to be in our way.

4. The grave being opened, and the corpſe diſcovered, Jeſus lift up his eyes to heaven, and ſaid, Father, I thank thee that thou haſt heard me; not as imploring aſſiſtance for the performing the miracle of Lazarus's reſurrection, which by his own power he would accompliſh, but as thanking him for the preſent opportunity afforded him, for the diſplay of his divine power and authority. And I knew that thou heareſt me alway, becauſe my will and thine are one; but becauſe of the people which ſtand by, I ſaid it, that they might believe that thou haſt ſent me, and be aſſured of my being the true Meſſiah by this ſtupenduous miracle, which will add ſtill greater evidence to my miſſion. Note, (1.) In our approaches to God, we ſhould draw near to him as the Father of mercies, with full confidence in his faithfulneſs, power, and love. (2.) Thankſgivings for paſt mercies are an encouragement to the preſent exerciſe of our faith. (3.) Chriſt is an all-prevailing advocate; his prayers for us are always heard; therefore we may boldly draw near to a throne of grace.

5. By a word the miracle is wrought. With the voice of Majeſty, as the Lord of life, he ſpeaks aloud, Lazarus, come forth; and inſtantly, obedient to his command, death ſurrenders his priſoner; by omnipotent power the corpſe is raiſed, Lazarus comes forth alive, enveloped with all the ſwathings and the napkin round his face, as he was laid in the grave. Jeſus bids them looſe him, and let him go; being perfectly reſtored to health and ſtrength, he was able as ever to walk to his own houſe. Note, (1.) Such is the mighty call of Jeſus to the ſoul dead in treſpaſſes and ſins, and power accompanies his goſpel, by which the dead are quickened to newneſs of life. (2.) The change in a reſurrection day will be thus inſtantaneous, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, 1 Cor. xv. 52.

45. Then many of the Jews which came to Mary, and [x] had ſeen the things which Jeſus did, believed on him.
46. But ſome of them went their ways to the Phariſees, and told them what things Jeſus had done. 47. ¶ Then [z] gathered the chief prieſts and the Phariſees a council, and ſaid, [a] What do we? for this man doth many miracles.
48. If we let him thus alone, all men will believe on him; and the Romans ſhall come and take away both our place and nation. 49. And one of them named [b] Caiaphas, being the high prieſt that ſame year, ſaid unto them, Ye know nothing at all, 50. Nor conſider that [c] it is expedient for us, that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not. 51. And this he ſpake not of himſelf: but being high prieſt that year, he propheſied that Jeſus ſhould die for that nation:
52. And [d] not for that nation only, [e] but that alſo he ſhould gather together in one, the children of God that were ſcattered abroad. 53. Then from that day forth they took counſel together for to put him to death. 54.
Jeſus therefore walked no more openly among the Jews;
but went thence into a country near to the wilderneſs, into a city called [f] Ephraim, and there continued with his diſciples. 55. ¶ And the Jews paſſover was nigh at hand: and many went out of the country up to Jeruſalem before the paſſover, to purify themſelves. 56.
[g] Then ſought they for Jeſus, and ſpake among themſelves, as they ſtood in the temple, What think ye, that he will not come to the feaſt? 57. Now both the chief prieſts

---

[r] Luke xix. 41. Rom. xii. 15.

[s] Chap. ix. 6.

[t] Ver. 4.

[u] Chap. xii. 30.

[x] Chap. xx. 7.

[y] Chap. ii. 23. & xii. 11.

[z] Pſ. ii. 2. Mat. xxvi. 3. Mark xiv. 1.

[a] Chap. xii. 19. Acts iv. 16.

[b] Luke iii. 2. Acts iv. 6.

[c] Chap. xviii. 14.

[d] Iſa. xlix. 6. 1 John ii. 2.

[e] Eph. ii. 14, &c.

[f] 2 Chron. 13, 19.

[g] Chap. vii. 11.

prieſts and the Phariſees had given a commandment, that if any man knew where he were, he ſhould ſhew it, that they might take him.

v. 45—57. This miracle produced very different effects upon the ſpectators.

1. Many of the Jews there preſent, who had come to conſole the ſorrowful ſiſters, ſtruck with the evidence of the divine power of Jeſus, believed in him as the Meſſiah. Thus their kindneſs to the afflicted was repaid with the beſt of ſpiritual bleſſings upon their own ſouls.

2. Others, obſtinate in infidelity, and exaſperated, inſtead of being convinced, by what they had ſeen, went with malicious wickedneſs to the Phariſees, who were members of the Sanhedrim, and informed them what was done, that they might take meaſures to ſuppreſs the increaſing fame of Jeſus.

3. A council is inſtantly ſummoned, in order to deliberate on ſome more vigorous methods to ſtop this man. Being aſſembled, they ſaid, What do we? How dilatory are our proceedings? How long ſhall we ſee ourſelves run down, and our intereſts in the people uſurped? for this man doth many miracles, which could not be denied; and if we let him thus alone to root himſelf in the people's affections, all men will believe in him as the Meſſiah, and ſet him up as king: the conſequence of which will be, that the Romans will come to cruſh ſuch a rebellion, and take away both our place and nation. This they dreadfully apprehended; and by the very methods they took to prevent it, filled up the meaſure of their iniquities, and brought that very deſtruction which they feared upon their own heads. Note, (1.) The enemies of Chriſt have often pretended zeal for the public good, as a pretence to perſecute the public's beſt friends. (2.) They who, under the influence of carnal policy, by wicked methods think to extricate themſelves from their difficulties, only pull down the more ſurely that ruin which they ſeek to ſhun.

4. Caiaphas, the high-prieſt that year (this dignity and office under the Roman government having become venal, and the perſons being often changed) a man of a Sadducean ſpirit, Acts v. 17. unconcerned about a judgment to come, with daring effrontery and haughtineſs, ſaid, Ye know nothing at all, to ſit thus debating and deliberating; nor conſider that it is expedient for us, that one man ſhould die for the people, and that the whole nation periſh not: when matters are come to ſuch a criſis, there can be no ground to heſitate about proceeding, nor need we enter into the enquiry whether he be a prophet or no; the caſe is deſperate, and requires a deſperate remedy: better is it, tho' he were innocent, to deſtroy him, than endanger, by a fooliſh lenity, the ſafety of the nation. Note, (1.) When ſecular intereſt, court favour, bribery, and corruption, exalt men to the higheſt offices in the church, no marvel if the chief rulers are arch-perſecutors. (2.) Reaſon and juſtice ſtand in little ſtead, where power is in the hand of oppreſſors.

5. The evangeliſt informs us, that Caiaphas ſpake not this of himſelf: but being high prieſt that year, whoſe words would be looked upon as oracular, God ſo ordered it that he ſhould expreſs his ſentiments in ſuch a way, as that though he deſigned the moſt malignant and murderous counſel, he declared the moſt important and glorious truth, he propheſied that Jeſus ſhould die for that nation, as the Meſſiah, to redeem his people: and not for that nation only, to ſave the elect remnant, Rom. xi. 3. of the Jewiſh people, but that alſo he ſhould gather in one the children of God that were ſcattered abroad; even thoſe of the Gentiles alſo, wherever diſperſed, as well as Jews, who were predeſtinated to the adoption of children by Chriſt Jeſus, Eph. i. 5. and deſigned to become one fold under one ſhepherd.

6. Caiaphas's diſcourſe determined the counſel, and from that day forward, with reſolute purpoſe, they took counſel to put Jeſus to death, and thought only on the propereſt means to execute their deſign.

7. Chriſt, who knew this combination againſt him, and the determination of his implacable enemies, withdrew, and walked no more openly among the Jews; retiring to a city called Ephraim, in the leaſt frequented part of the country, where he ſpent his time in converſation with his diſciples. The hour of his departure approaching, this ſeaſon was moſt uſefully employed in teaching them the things which pertained to the kingdom of God.

8. The laſt paſſover which our Lord was to celebrate on earth, now drew nigh; and multitudes, according to cuſtom, reſorted to Jeruſalem to purify themſelves from any ceremonial uncleanneſs which they had contracted, before the feaſt began, that they might be legally prepared to partake of it. Many enquiries were then made concerning Jeſus, by thoſe who met together in the temple; it being a queſtion much agitated among them, whether he would venture to come up to the feaſt or not? For the chief prieſts had iſſued ſtrict orders, that if any man knew where he was he ſhould ſhew it, that they might arreſt him, and put him to death. And this made ſome doubt, whether ſuch an open declaration of their intentions might not intimidate him, whilſt others would have been glad to have had an opportunity of delivering him up to his implacable enemies. Note, When rulers are wicked, they never want inſtruments to execute their iniquitous purpoſes.

CHAP. XII.

In this chapter we are told, 1. How Mary anointed the feet of Jeſus at Bethany, ver. 1—8. 2. The conſultation of the chief prieſts to kill him and Lazarus, whom the people flocked to ſee, ver. 9—11. 3. He enters Jeruſalem in triumph, ver. 12—19. 4. The Greeks deſire to ſee him, ver. 20—22. 5. He fortels his death, ver. 23—33. 6. He ſolemnly warns the Jews, ver. 34—36. 7. They in general perſiſt in their infidelity, though ſome of the rulers believe, but durſt not own him, ver. 37—43. 8. He aſſerts his divine miſſion, ver. 44—50.

1. THEN Jeſus, ſix days before the paſſover, came to Bethany, where Lazarus was which had been dead, whom he raiſed from the dead. 2. [a] There they made him a ſupper, and Martha ſerved: but Lazarus was one of them that ſat at the table with him. 3. Then took [b] Mary a pound of ointment of † ſpikenard very coſtly, and anointed the feet of Jeſus, and wiped his feet with her hair: and the houſe was filled with the odour of the ointment. 4. Then ſaith one of his diſciples, Judas Iſcariot, Simon's ſon, which ſhould betray him, 5. Why was not this ointment ſold for three hundred ‡ pence, and given to the poor? 6. This he ſaid, not that he cared for the poor; but becauſe he was a thief, and [c] had the bag, and bare what was put therein. 7. Then ſaid Jeſus, Let her alone: againſt the day of my burying hath ſhe kept this. 8. For [d] the poor always ye have with you, but me ye have not always. 9. Much people of the Jews therefore knew that he was there: and they came, not for Jeſus ſake only, but that they might ſee Lazarus alſo, [e] whom he had raiſed from the dead. 10. ¶ But the chief prieſts conſulted, that they might put Lazarus alſo to death; 11. Becauſe that [f] by reaſon of him many of the Jews went away, and believed on Jeſus.

[a] Mat. xxvi. 6. Mark xiv. 3.

[b] Luke x. 39. Chap. xi. 2.

† Or pure nard.

‡ Mat. xviii. 28.

[c] Chap. xiii. 29.

[d] Deut. xv. 11.

[e] Chap. xi. 44.

[f] Chap. ii. 23. & xi. 45.

v. 1—11. We have here,

1. The viſit of Jeſus to Bethany. He came there ſix days before the paſſover, and took up his lodgings with Lazarus, a perſon now uncommonly diſtinguiſhed, as having been dead, and miraculouſly reſtored to life by his power. He knew the danger to which he expoſed himſelf; but his hour approached, and therefore he offered himſelf a willing ſacrifice, as the true paſchal Lamb, who ſhould be ſacrificed for us.

2. Lazarus and his ſiſters gave him a moſt welcome reception, and in honour of their gueſt made a great ſupper: and Martha, to do honour to her heavenly viſitant, waited herſelf upon him, whilſt Lazarus ſat at the table with him, a living monument of his power and grace.

3. During the entertainment, Mary, to teſtify her deep reſpect for her divine Lord and Maſter, came with a pound of very coſtly ſpikenard, and anointed his feet, wiping them with her hair; and the odour of the ointment filled the houſe: expreſſing hereby her faith, love, and deep humility, receiving him as the anointed Meſſiah, and paying her dutiful homage to him. Note, No fragrance of the ſweeteſt perfume can adequately repreſent that ſweet ſavour of Chriſt, and of the graces of his ſpirit, which fill the believer's ſoul with joy unſpeakable and full of glory.

4. Judas, in heart a traitor, but yet in profeſſion ranked among the apoſtles, pretending charity for the poor, teſtified indignation at this act of reſpect ſhewn to his Maſter, as if it had been an unneceſſary piece of waſte: not indeed that this divine grace of charity ever glowed in his falſe boſom, but becauſe he was a thief; and being intruſted with the common purſe, he had purloined part of the money which was put in it, and applied it to his own uſe, and hoped if this ointment had been ſold, and the money brought into their joint ſtock, ſome part of it might be eaſily ſecreted. Note, (1.) Hypocrites, when they make the moſt zealous profeſſion, really diſlike that ſerious godlineſs they diſcover in others; and their worldly-mindedneſs in trifles ſhews how ready they will be to apoſtatize, the moment a greater temptation beſets them. (2.) Satan transforms himſelf often into an angel of light, and gilds with ſpecious names and pretences the vileſt purpoſes. Thus worldly wiſdom is called rational prudence; and covetouſneſs wears the maſk of zeal againſt others extravagance. (3.) The love of money is uſually moſt fatal to the ſoul. They who are fond of the bag, will not long be faithful to their Lord.

5. Chriſt vindicates what Mary did from the ill conſtruction which Judas had put upon it. Jeſus ſaid, Let her alone;

neither blame nor trouble her; againſt the day of my burial hath ſhe kept this; ſo Divine Providence ordered it, that, though ſhe knew not his approaching death, ſhe thus ſhould embalm him when alive, becauſe ſhe would have no opportunity to perform that kind office when he was dead. Beſides, he adds, the poor always ye have with you; ſuch objects would never be wanting whereon to exerciſe their charity: but me ye have not always; and therefore, during the ſhort moment of his ſtay with them, they could not be too ſedulous to ſhew him every token of reſpect and honour. Note, Opportunities to ſerve Chriſt are precious, and muſt be embraced without delay.

6. Multitudes of people from Jeruſalem flocked to Bethany, in order to gratify their curioſity with a ſight of Jeſus, concerning whom they had heard ſo much; and alſo to ſee Lazarus, who had been raiſed from the dead, the fame of which miracle had been greatly ſpread.

7. The chief-prieſts, far from being affected with ſuch an inſtance of Chriſt's power, not only perſiſted in their bloody purpoſe to murder him, but alſo conſulted to put Lazarus to death, being filled with rage and envy, that many of the Jews, ſtruck with the evidence of this miracle, had deſerted their party, and joined themſelves to Jeſus, profeſſing their faith in him as the Meſſiah. Note, (1.) They who are moſt eminently diſtinguiſhed with God's favour, are the objects againſt whom wicked men level their moſt malignant enmity. (2.) The ſtronger the evidence is, the more exaſperated do they grow who obſtinately reſolve not to be convinced.

12. ¶ [g] On the next day, much people that were come to the feaſt, when they heard that Jeſus was coming to Jeruſalem, 13. [h] Took branches of palm-trees, and went forth to meet him, and cried, [i] Hoſanna, bleſſed is the King of Iſrael that cometh in the name of the Lord. 14. And Jeſus when he had found a young aſs, ſat thereon; [k] as it is written, 15. Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold thy King cometh, ſitting on an aſs's colt. 16. Theſe things underſtood not his diſciples at the firſt: But when [l] Jeſus was glorified, [m] then remembred they that theſe things were written of him, and that they had done theſe things unto him. 17. The people therefore that was with him, when he called Lazarus out of his grave, and raiſed him from the dead, bare record. 18. For this cauſe the people alſo met him, for that they heard that he had done this miracle. 19. The Phariſees therefore ſaid among themſelves, [n] Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? behold, the world is gone after him.

[g] Mat. xxi. 8. Mark xi. 8. Luke xix. 35.
[h] 1 Mac. xiii. 51. 2 Mac. x. 7.
[i] Pſ. cxviii. 25, 26.
[k] Zech. ix. 9.
[l] Chap. vii. 39.
[m] Chap. xiv. 26.
[n] Chap. xi. 47.

v. 12—19. The triumphal entry of our Lord into Jeruſalem is recorded by all the evangeliſts.

1. A vaſt crowd, with loudeſt acclamations and every expreſſion of joy, attended him. A great multitude, who were come to the feaſt, when they heard that Jeſus was coming to Jeruſalem, from Bethany, went forth to meet him, and welcome his arrival, with palm-branches in their hands, the emblem of that victory which Jeſus was ſhortly to obtain over ſin and Satan, the iſſue of which conflict was already ſure; and with loud hoſannas they cried, Bleſſed is the King of Iſrael, that cometh in the name of the Lord. They acknowledge Jeſus as the King Meſſiah, ſo long expected to ſit on David's throne; they wiſh him all proſperity, ſucceſs, and happineſs; and hail the glad day of his appearing. Note, With greater joy doth the ſinner welcome the Saviour to the throne of his heart, and wiſhes him to ſet up his throne there for ever and ever.

2. He made his entry, not with the pomp of earthly majeſty, but, as better ſuited his ſtate of humiliation, on an aſs's colt; that thus alſo he might fulfil the Scripture, which had ſaid, Fear not, daughter of Sion: behold thy King cometh, to ſave thee from all thy ſpiritual foes, ſitting on an aſs's colt, that humble ſupplicants may be emboldened to approach him, and preſent their petitions. Theſe things underſtood not his diſciples at the firſt: but when Jeſus was glorified, and from his throne on high had ſent his Spirit into their hearts, to open their underſtandings, that they might underſtand the Scripture, then remembred they that theſe things were written of him; and that, though at the time they had no thoughts about the fulfilment of the Scripture, they had done theſe things unto him, which had been foretold. Note, (1.) Chriſt is Zion's King, and he muſt reign till he hath put all his enemies and hers under his feet. (2.) The Scriptures are often fulfilled by thoſe who at the time have not the leaſt intention ſo to do. (3.) Many times the Scriptures are read without the leaſt knowledge of their true meaning; but, when God opens the underſtanding, the Bible then becomes a book perfectly new, and treaſures of wiſdom are diſcovered in it which were utterly unknown before.

3. The reaſon of ſo great a multitude coming to uſher Jeſus into Jeruſalem at this time was, that many of thoſe who beheld the miracle of Lazarus's reſurrection declared what they had ſeen: and ſuch an aſtoniſhing work, atteſted by ſo many and credible eye-witneſſes, could not but procure general admiration.

4. The Phariſees beheld, with the utmoſt rage and vexation, the increaſing reſpect paid to Jeſus; and ſaid one to another, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? inſtead of cruſhing him, all our attempts are baffled, and his riſing fame threatens utterly to ſupplant us in the eſteem of the people: behold, the world is gone after him; the generality of our followers have forſaken us, and commenced his diſciples. It is high time to put ſome ſtop to theſe proceedings, or the grievance will be paſt redreſs. Note, (1.) They who oppoſe Chriſt, in vain lift up their impotent arm: againſt his church and kingdom no powers of earth or hell ſhall be able finally to prevail. (2.) Obſtinate ſinners grow more reſolute and determined in ſin by the very checks which God gives them, and madly ruſh on the thick boſſes of his buckler.

20. ¶ And there were [o] certain Greeks among them, [p] that came up to worſhip at the feaſt: 21. The ſame came therefore to Philip, [q] which was of Bethſaida of Galilee, and deſired him, ſaying, Sir, we would ſee Jeſus. 22. Philip cometh and telleth Andrew: and again, Andrew and Philip told Jeſus. 23. ¶ And Jeſus anſwered them, ſaying, [r] The hour is come, that the Son of man ſhould be glorified. 24. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [s] Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. 25. [t] He that loveth his life ſhall loſe it: and he that hateth his life in this world, ſhall keep it unto life eternal. 26. If any man ſerve me, let him follow me; and [u] where I am, there ſhall alſo my ſervant be: if any man ſerve me, him will my Father honour.

[o] Acts xvii. 4.
[p] Acts viii. 27.
[q] Chap. i. 44.
[r] Chap. xiii. 32. & xvii. 1.
[s] 1 Cor. xv. 36.
[t] Mat. x. 39. & xvi. 25.
[u] Chap. xiv. 3. & xvii. 24. 1 Theſ. iv. 17.

v. 20—26. Chriſt's fame had been ſpread far and wide. We have here,

1. The enquiry of ſome Greeks after him. They ſeem to have been devout men, proſelytes from among the Gentiles, who came up to Jeruſalem to worſhip; and, having heard ſo much of Jeſus, were greatly deſirous to ſee and converſe with him: for which purpoſe they applied to Philip, with whom probably they might formerly have had ſome acquaintance. Note, (1.) They who have a real deſire after Chriſt will ſeek him, and beg advice and aſſiſtance from thoſe who are his miniſtring ſervants. It is good to know thoſe that know the Saviour. (2.) The awakened ſinner deſires to ſee Jeſus, his fulneſs of grace and all-ſufficiency to ſave, to obtain an intereſt in his regard, and be admitted to communion with him.

2. Philip firſt conſulted his brother Andrew, whether it was proper to mention the requeſt of Gentiles to their Maſter; and, being agreed on the point, they informed Jeſus of the matter. Note, In doubtful caſes it is wiſdom to conſult a faithful friend.

3. Chriſt took occaſion, from this application to him, to diſcourſe on the glorious iſſue of his undertaking, when Jews and Gentiles by the power of his Spirit ſhould be converted unto him. The hour is come that the Son of man ſhould be glorified; when, being lifted up on the croſs, and exalted to the throne of his glory, he ſhould draw all men unto him, and be honoured in the ſalvation of ſinners from every nation, without diſtinction. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit. So, he intimates, muſt he die, and be laid in the earth, that, having thereby made the atonement, and brought in an everlaſting righteouſneſs, he might in his reſurrection become the root and author of ſpiritual life to innumerable multitudes of his redeemed people, who ſhould be raiſed by him from the death of ſin unto the life of righteouſneſs, and bring forth abundant fruits of grace, the glory of which would be aſcribed to him alone. And as thoſe, whom he died to ſave, would for his ſake, when called and converted unto him, be expoſed to the greateſt ſufferings, he ſuggeſts the moſt powerful arguments to engage their fidelity. He that loveth his life, and, for fear of loſing a temporal being, or the advantages of this world, deſerts the cauſe of Jeſus; ſhall loſe it, and periſh everlaſtingly: and he that hateth his life in this world, ſitting looſe to its honours, eaſe, and intereſts, when they ſtand in competition with Chriſt, and ready, if need be, to ſeal his teſtimony with his blood; he ſhall keep it unto life eternal, and be made for ever happy with God in glory. So that, if any man ſerve me, let him follow me, my example, the teachings of my word and Spirit, and the directions of my providence; and then, whatever difficulties, dangers, or ſufferings he may be expoſed to, where I am, there ſhall alſo my ſervant be, inheriting the ſame glory to which I ſhall be advanced: if any man ſerve me, in ſimplicity and godly ſincerity; him will my Father honour, ſeating him at his own right hand, and cauſing him to ſit down on my throne, as I am ſat down with the Father on his throne. Note, (1.) They who would faithfully follow Chriſt muſt prepare for ſufferings. (2.) When we by faith look to and realize the glories of the world above, we cannot but ſit looſe to every thing here below. (3.) If Chriſt be our maſter, and our affections are placed upon him, where he is we ſhall ſhortly be. (4.) However diſhonoured we may be by a world which lieth in wicked-neſs, we ſhall find the moſt abundant recompenſe in the honour which cometh from God only.

27. [x] Now is my ſoul troubled; and what ſhall I ſay? † Father, ſave me from this hour: but [y] for this cauſe came I unto this hour. 28. Father, glorify thy name. [z] Then came there a voice from heaven, ſaying, I have both glorified it, and will glorify it again. 29. The people therefore that ſtood by, and heard it, ſaid that it thundred: others ſaid, An angel ſpake to him. 30. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, [a] This voice came not becauſe of me, but for your ſakes. 31. Now is the judgment of this world: [b] now ſhall the prince of this world be caſt out. 32. And I, if [c] I be lifted up from the earth, will [d] draw all men unto me. 33. (This he ſaid, ſignifying what death he ſhould die) 34. The people anſwered him, We have heard out of the law, that [e] Chriſt abideth for ever: and how ſayeſt thou, The Son of man muſt be lifted up? who is this Son of man? 35. Then Jeſus ſaid unto them, Yet a little while [f] is the light with you: [g] walk while ye have the light, leſt darkneſs come upon you: for [h] he that walketh in darkneſs, knoweth not whither he goeth. 36. While ye have the light, believe in the light, that ye may be [i] the children of light. Theſe things ſpake Jeſus and departed, [k] and did hide himſelf from them.

[x] Mat. xxvi. 38, 39. Luke xii. 50. Chap. xiii. 21.
† Or, Father, ſave me from this hour: nay, but for this cauſe, &c.
[y] Luke xxii. 53.
[z] Mat. iii. 17.
[a] Chap. xi. 42.
[b] Mat xii. 20. Luke x. 18. Chap. xiv. 30. & xvi. 11. Eph. vi. 12.
[c] Chap. iii. 14. & viii. 28.
[d] Cant. i. 4. Jer. xxxi. 3. Hoſ. xi. 4.
[e] Pſ. lxxxix. 36, 37. & cx. 4. Iſa. ix. 7. & liii. 8. Ezek xxxvii. 25. Dan. ii. 44. & vii. 14, 27. Mic. iv. 7.
[f] Chap. viii. 12. & ix. 5. Ver. 46.
[g] Jer. xiii. 16. Eph. v. 8.
[h] Chap. xi. 10.
[i] Luke xvi. 8. Eph. v. 8. 1 Theſ. v. 5. 1 John ii. 9, 10.
[k] Chap. viii. 59. & xi. 54.

v. 27—36. We have here,

1. The addreſs of Jeſus to his heavenly Father. Now is my ſoul troubled, with the proſpect of his approaching ſufferings, from which the humanity ſhrunk back; and what ſhall I ſay, in this diſtreſs? Father, ſave me from this hour? ſhall I deſire to be excuſed the pains and death which I foreſee? No: but for this cauſe came I unto this hour, according to the eternal counſels being appointed in the ſtead of ſinners to bear their ſins and carry their ſorrows; and therefore he deſired not to be ſaved from the ſufferings to which he had conſented, but to be ſupported under them. Father, glorify thy name, and by my death diſplay, in the moſt eminent manner, the glory of thy juſtice, faithfulneſs, mercy, and every divine perfection. Note, (1.) The remembrance of the diſtreſs of the Redeemer's ſoul ſhould be a relief to us when our ſpirits are troubled. He gave his ſoul an offering for ſin, that he might take away the bitterneſs of it from ours. (2.) Though now for a little moment we feel diſtreſs, the time is near, when every trouble ſhall end in everlaſting joy. (3.) When we are under difficulties we muſt fly to God, humbly reſign ourſelves to his will, and beg for ſtrength to glorify him in the fires.

2. The Father anſwers him by a voice from heaven. Then came there a voice from heaven, ſaying, I have both glorified it, in the incarnation, obedience, miracles, and doctrine of Jeſus; and will glorify it again, by his death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion.

3. The people who ſtood by heard with aſtoniſhment the voice; ſome more confuſedly, who ſaid it thundered; others more diſtinctly, who ſaid that an angel ſpake to him; either ignorantly or wilfully miſtaking the glorious teſtimony.

4. Chriſt declares to them the meaning of what they heard. This voice came not becauſe of me, for my ſatisfaction merely; but for your ſakes, that you my diſciples might be encouraged by this teſtimony born to my divine miſſion. Now is the judgment of this world; the hour is near, when the Jewiſh nation ſhall receive their doom, and a bleſſed change be wrought in the heathen world, when God ſhall ſeparate the precious from the vile, and gather his choſen people to himſelf, the power of ſin and Satan being broken: for now ſhall the prince of this world be caſt out; the devil's uſurped dominion over the ſouls of men ſhall be deſtroyed, his oracles in the heathen world be ſilenced, and at laſt his kingdom ſhall be finally rooted up: and this by a method which to human view may appear the moſt unlikely. I, if I be, or when I am, lifted up from the earth, on the croſs as a ſacrifice for ſin, will draw all men unto me, Gentiles as well as Jews, who ſhould be made partakers of all the ineſtimable bleſſings of his blood-ſhedding, and drawn to him by the irreſiſtible cords of his dying love. (This he ſaid, ſignifying what death he ſhould die, even by crucifixion). Note, (1.) Satan is now a vanquiſhed foe; ſince Chriſt hath died, the head of this old ſerpent is bruiſed. (2.) Chriſt is the glorious center of unity, the banner under which his redeemed with delight are gathered, and, cleaving to him in faith and love, are made more than conquerors by him over all their enemies. (3.) The croſs of Chriſt is the powerfully attractive object, and therein all the glories of redeeming love are moſt eminently diſplayed, which effectually conſtrain the ſinner's ſoul.

5. The people, hearing him ſpeak of himſelf as about to be lifted up and die, object this as a confutation of the character which he aſſumed as the Meſſiah, becauſe the Scriptures ſpoke of his continuing a king and prieſt for ever, Pſa. cx. 4. lxxxix. 29. but they overlooked what the ſame ſcriptures had ſaid concerning his ſufferings, and would not attend to the repeated notices which Chriſt had given of his riſing again, and thus entring into his glory; which made his ſufferings not at all inconſiſtent with his everlaſting dominion: therefore they inſultingly aſk, Who is this Son of man? As if he himſelf could not poſſibly be the perſon of whom Daniel prophecied, ſince he acknowledged he muſt be lifted up and die. Note, They cannot but err, who take one part or text of Scripture, without conſidering its connection and relation with the reſt. Thus many pervert the very life-giving truths of God, and make them a ſavour of death.

6. As Chriſt ſaw the ill ſpirit and temper that raiſed theſe cavils, he declines a direct anſwer to their queſtion, and rather chuſes to reply by warning them of their danger, if they neglected the preſent opportunity vouchſafed unto them. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them, Yet a little while is the light with you; either meaning himſelf, the Sun of righteouſneſs, now about to ſet in blood; or the goſpel, which ſhould for a ſeaſon be continued among them: walk while ye have the light, make uſe of your day of grace; leſt darkneſs come upon you, as it certainly will if you neglect the preſent ſalvation; you will then be given up to judicial blindneſs, the light of the goſpel will be removed, and you will be left, as a man benighted, to ſtumble and fall into eternal miſery: for he that walketh in darkneſs knoweth not whither he goeth, not appriſed of the precipice which is before him, and the ruin which approaches. While therefore ye have the light of my preſence and goſpel, believe in the light, receive me as the Meſſiah, and walk under the influence of my word; that ye may be the children of light, the children of grace on earth, of glory in heaven, admitted to the inheritance among the ſaints in light. Note, (1.) Nothing is more conducive to awaken the conſcience, than the remembrance of the momentarineſs of our time, and the infinite importance of that eternity which depends upon our improvement of it. The day of life is ſhort, the day of grace may be much ſhorter. To-day therefore, whilſt it is called today, harden not your hearts. (2.) They who are favoured with the light of the goſpel, are under peculiar obligations to know and improve the day of their viſitation. (3.) Chriſt is the light of a benighted world, and out of him there is nothing but blackneſs of darkneſs. They who know him not, nor the rich ſalvation which his blood and righteouſneſs have obtained for us, are walking in the darkneſs of error and ſin, and haſtening into that eternal darkneſs where there is weeping and wailing, and gnaſhing of teeth. (4.) They only are children of the light who walk in the light as Chriſt alſo walked, habitually looking to him for direction, and deſiring to follow his example.

Laſtly, Chriſt, having finiſhed this diſcourſe, withdrew, and did hide himſelf from them. He knew their wicked deſigns to apprehend him, and therefore, as his hour was not yet come, he concealed himſelf, probably at Bethany; abandoning them alſo hereby to their impenitence and unbelief. Wo to the ſinner from whom Jeſus finally departs, and leaves him to his own heart. His ruin is inevitable.

37. But though he had done ſo many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him: 38. That the ſaying of Eſaias the prophet might be fulfilled, which he ſpake, [l] Lord, who hath believed our report? and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed? 39. Therefore they could not believe, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again, 40. [m] He hath blinded their eyes, and hardned their heart; that they ſhould not ſee with their eyes, nor underſtand with their heart, and be converted, and I ſhould heal them. 41. [n] Theſe things ſaid Eſaias, when he ſaw his glory, and ſpake of him. 42. ¶ Nevertheleſs, [o] among the chief rulers alſo many believed on him; but [p] becauſe of the Phariſees they did not confeſs him, leſt they ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue. 43. For [q] they loved the praiſe of men more than the praiſe of God.

[l] Iſa. liii. 1. Rom. x. 16.
[m] Iſa. vi. 10.
[n] Iſa. vi. 1.
[o] Chap. iii. 2.
[p] Chap. vii. 13. & ix. 22.
[q] Chap. v. 44.

v. 37—43. The miracles and preaching of the Lord Jeſus were, we find, ineffectual to the converſion of the Jewiſh people.

1. Though he had done ſo many miracles before them, yet they believed not on him. In general their hearts were obſtinately hardned, and they could not bear to think of acknowledging one who appeared ſo mean and poor as their Meſſiah, concerning whom they had formed ſuch high expectations.

2. Herein the prophecy of Iſaiah was eminently fulfilled. Lord, who hath believed our report? the declaration made by Jeſus and his miniſters; and to whom hath the arm of the Lord been revealed? how few have been effectually wrought upon by the power of the Spirit, and brought to the obedience of faith? Therefore they could not believe; they were under, not a fatal neceſſity, but a moral impotency; God had determined to leave them to the hardneſs and impenitency of their hearts, and had predicted their infidelity and deſtruction; which prophecy therefore ſore now received its accompliſhment, becauſe that Eſaias ſaid again, Iſa. vi. 9, 10. He hath blinded their eyes, and hardned their hearts, giving them up to follow their own devices, and puniſhing them with the curſe of impenitence; that they ſhould not ſee with their eyes, nor hear with their ears, nor underſtand with their heart, and be converted, and I ſhould heal them: they would not, and therefore they ſhall not. He abandons them to their wickedneſs, and they awfully fulfil the prophetic word. Note, (1.) God's ſpiritual judgments are a great deep. We know he is righteous, and will be found juſt when he judgeth. (2.) They cannot believe to whom the arm of the Lord is not revealed: for our minds are darkneſs, till God ſhines into us, to give us the light of the knowledge of his glory in the face of Jeſus Chriſt. (3.) The Scripture muſt be fulfilled; and they cannot but periſh whom God abandons to their own heart's luſts.

3. The Evangeliſt ſhews that the prophecy he had quoted looked farther than the times of Iſaiah, even to the days of the Meſſiah, when the prophet ſaw his glory, and ſpake of it. The place referred to is Iſa. vi. 1—10. and contains one of the moſt glorious viſions of the eternal Jehovah in the whole book of Scripture, and the ſtrongeſt and cleareſt proof of the proper and eſſential divinity of Jeſus our Lord.

4. Though in general Chriſt was rejected by the Jewiſh people, Nevertheleſs, among the chief rulers alſo many believed on him, convinced in their conſciences that he was the Meſſiah; but, becauſe of the Phariſees, they did not confeſs him, leſt they ſhould be put out of the ſynagogue; the ſanhedrim, his inveterate enemies, having thus determined; and, unwilling to take up this reproach of Chriſt, they were aſhamed to own what they felt; for they loved the praiſe of men more than the praiſe of God. Note, (1.) Many approve in their hearts the truths and practices, which the fear of men and the reproach of the world deter them from profeſſing and following. (2.) They who are aſhamed of Chriſt, and his goſpel, may juſtly expect to be diſowned by him in the great day of his appearing.

44. Jeſus cried, and ſaid, [r] He that believeth on me, believeth not on me, but on him that ſent me. 45. And [s] he that ſeeth me, ſeeth him that ſent me. 46. [t] I am come a light into the world, that whoſoever believeth on me, ſhould not abide in darkneſs. 47. And if any man hear my words, and believe not, [u] I judge him not: for [x] I came not to judge the world, but to ſave the world. 48. [y] He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him: [z] the word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judge him in the laſt day. 49. For [a] I have not ſpoken of myſelf; but the Father which ſent me, he gave me a commandment, [b] what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak. 50. And I know that his commandment is life everlaſting: whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak.

[r] Mark ix. 37. 1 Pet. i. 21.
[s] Chap. xiv. 9.
[t] Ver. 36. Chap. iii. 19. & viii. 12. & ix. 5, 39.
[u] Chap. v. 45. & viii. 15, 26.
[x] Chap. iii. 17.
[y] Deut. xviii. 10. Luke x. 16.
[z] Mark xvi. 16.
[a] Chap. viii. 38. & xiv. 10.
[b] Deut. xviii. 18.

v. 44—50. Jeſus takes his laſt farewel of them, and leaves his finiſhing teſtimony, with earneſtneſs addreſſing to them his diſcourſe, if ſo be that at laſt, in this their day, they might know the things which made for their everlaſting peace, before they ſhould be for ever hid from their eyes.

1. He ſhews the excellence of faith. Jeſus cried and ſaid, He that believeth on me as the Meſſiah, the true and only Saviour of loſt ſouls, believeth not on me only, or ultimately, but on him that ſent me. And he that ſeeth me, by faith in my true character as God, as well as man, and in my office as commiſſioned from my Father, ſeeth him that ſent me, from whom as Mediator I derive my authority, and whoſe glory and perfections are manifeſted in and by me: for I am come a light into the world, from heaven, where I ſhone eternally bright in uncreated glory, that whoſoever believeth on me as the Author of eternal ſalvation, and bringing life and immortality to light by the goſpel, expecting to receive from me direction and guidance in the way to glory; ſhould not abide in darkneſs, in the ways of error and ſin, or go down into eternal darkneſs. Note, They who walk by faith in Jeſus have the light of life before them, and can never finally or fatally err.

2. He warns them of the great peril of unbelief. If any man hear my words, and believe not, wilfully rejecting the inconteſtible evidences of my divine miſſion; I judge him not, do not yet paſs ſentence upon him, but give him a longer reſpite: for I came not to judge the world, to take vengeance upon ſinners; but to ſave the world, to bring to all in general, Gentiles as well as Jews, the glad tidings of a free and full ſalvation. He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, making light of the goſpel, and deſpiſing its offers, hath one that judgeth him: the word that I have ſpoken, the ſame ſhall judge him in the laſt day, and riſe up to witneſs againſt his obſtinate infidelity and hardened impenitence. Note, (1.) The great end of Chriſt's coming into the world was the ſalvation of loſt ſouls. They who reject him ſin againſt their own mercies. (2.) In a judgment-day, nothing will riſe up to aggravate more fearfully the guilt of thoſe that periſh, than all the means of grace which they have abuſed, and the word of the goſpel preached to them, which they have ſlighted.

3. He declares the authority on which he acted. For I have not ſpoken of myſelf, as a private perſon, on my own authority; but the Father, which ſent me, he gave me a commandment, what I ſhould ſay, and what I ſhould ſpeak, under whoſe commiſſion I act, and from whom I have received my inſtructions; and I know that his commandment is life everlaſting, the doctrines, which from him I declare unto you, are the only means of leading ſinners to eternal bleſſedneſs: whatſoever I ſpeak therefore, even as the Father ſaid unto me, ſo I ſpeak; and acting under his authority, and declaring his will, it would be at their peril if they rejected the truths which from God he delivered unto them. Note, (1.) They who would obtain everlaſting life muſt attend to the word of Jeſus. There, and only there, is it to be found. (2.) They who reject the goſpel do it at their peril. Their ruin is inevitable.

CHAP. XIII.

Having finiſhed his public diſcourſes, our Saviour improves the time in private with his diſciples. In this chapter, 1. He waſheth his diſciples feet, ver. 1—17. 2. He foretels who ſhould betray him, ver. 1—30. 3. He inſtructs them in the great doctrine of his own death, and the great duty of brotherly love, ver. 31—35. 4. He foretels Peter's denying of him, ver. 36—38.

1. NOW [a] before the feaſt of the paſſover, when Jeſus knew that [b] his hour was come, that he ſhould depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, [c] he loved them unto the end. 2. And ſupper being ended, [d] (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iſcariot, Simon's ſon, to betray him) 3. Jeſus knowing that [e] the Father had given all things into his hands, and that [f] he was come from God, and went to God, 4. He riſeth from ſupper, and laid aſide his garments, and took a towel and girded himſelf. 5. After that, he poureth water into a baſon, and began to waſh the diſciples feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. 6. Then cometh he to Simon Peter: and † Peter ſaith unto him, Lord, [g] doſt thou waſh my feet? 7. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter. 8. Peter ſaith unto him, Thou ſhalt never waſh my feet. Jeſus anſwered him, [h] If I waſh thee not, thou haſt no part with me. 9. Simon Peter ſaith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but alſo my hands and my head. 10. Jeſus ſaith to him, He that is waſhed, needeth not, ſave to waſh his feet, but is clean every whit: and [i] ye are clean, but not all. 11. For [k] he knew who ſhould betray him; therefore, ſaid he, Ye are not all clean. 12. So after he had waſhed their feet, and had taken his garments, and was ſet down again, he ſaid unto them, Know ye what I have done to you? 13. [l] Ye call me, Maſter, and Lord: and ye ſay well; for ſo I am. 14. [m] If I then your Lord and Maſter have waſhed your feet, [n] ye alſo ought to waſh one anothers feet. 15. For [o] I have given you an example, that ye ſhould do as I have done to you. 16. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [p] The ſervant is not greater than his Lord, neither he that is ſent, greater than he that ſent him. 17. [q] If ye know theſe things, happy are ye if ye do them.

[a] Mat. xxvi. 2.
[b] Chap. xii. 23. & xvii. 1.
[c] Jer. xxxi. 3.
[d] Luke xxii. 3. Ver. 27. Acts v. 3.
[e] Mat. xi. 27. & xxviii. 18. Chap. iii. 35. Heb. ii. 8.
[f] Chap. viii. 42.
† Gr. He
[g] Mat. iii. 14.
[h] Chap. iii. 5. 1 Cor. vi. 11. Eph. v. 26. Tit. iii. 5. Heb. x. 22.
[i] Chap. xv. 3. Acts xv. 9.
[k] Chap. vi. 64. Ver. 21.
[l] Mat. xxiii. 8, 10. 1 Cor. viii. 6. & xii. 3. Phil. ii. 11.
[m] Luke xxii. 27.
[n] Gal. vi. 2.
[o] Mat. xi. 29. 1 Pet. ii. 21. 1 John ii. 6.
[p] Mat. x. 24. Luke vi. 40. Chap. xv. 20.
[q] Jam. i. 25.

v. 1—17. This tranſaction is ſuppoſed by ſome to have paſſed two days before the paſſover, during the ſupper at Simon's houſe in Bethany; though others imagine it was done at the paſchal ſupper itſelf.

1. Chriſt in deepeſt humility condeſcends to waſh his diſciples feet, to teſtify his love towards them, and ſet them an example. When he knew that his hour was come, that he ſhould depart out of this world to the Father, by his death, reſurrection, and aſcenſion; having loved his own which were in the world, with an everlaſting love; he loved them unto the end, unchangeable in his regards, and purpoſing to bring them to a ſtate of everlaſting happineſs with himſelf. And, as an inſtance of his love, ſupper being ended, or it being ſupper-time, (the devil having now put into the heart of Judas Iſcariot, Simon's ſon, to betray him) Jeſus, knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, all power in heaven and in earth; and that he was come from God, and went to God; notwithſtanding the tranſcendent glory which he poſſeſſed in conſequence thereof, yet, to make his humiliation more illuſtrious, and his love appear more aſtoniſhing, he riſeth from ſupper, and laid aſide his upper garments, and, as a ſervant, took a towel and girded himſelf, tucked it round his waſte. After that, he poureth water into a baſon, and began to waſh the diſciples feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded. Note, (1.) Chriſt hath a peculiar people in this world, whom he diſtinguiſhes from all others with ſpecial marks of his love and regard, for whoſe ſake he came into the world, and whom he will love to eternity, perfecting their ſalvation, and bringing them to be with him to enjoy him for ever and ever. (2.) The devil's wiles are fatally prevalent: even an apoſtle becomes his prey. Who need not then tremble for himſelf. (3.) Whilſt the amazing humility of Jeſus raiſes our higheſt admiration, we ſhould learn to imitate his bright example, and count nothing beneath us which may tend to God's glory, or the good of immortal ſouls.

2. We have the converſation which paſt between Chriſt and Peter on this occaſion. After having waſhed the feet of others, he came to Peter, who, amazed at ſuch condeſcenſion, could not bear to ſee his Maſter in ſo ſervile an office, and ſaith, Lord, doſt thou, the God of glory, the divine Meſſiah, waſh my feet, a vile ſinner as I am? Jeſus anſwered and ſaid, What I do, thou knoweſt not now; but thou ſhalt know hereafter, be made acquainted with my purpoſe and deſign in this matter. Peter ſaith unto him, Thou ſhalt never waſh my feet: he was ſhocked at the thought of his Maſter's degrading himſelf ſo low, and thought he never would conſent that he ſhould perform ſo mean a ſervice to ſo worthleſs a creature as he felt himſelf to be. Jeſus anſwered him, If I waſh thee not, if thou art not ſpiritually waſhed from thy ſins by my blood, and cleanſed by my Spirit, which is ſignified by this waſhing of water, thou haſt no part in me, no communion with me, no intereſt in me. Simon Peter ſaith unto him, Lord, not my feet only, but alſo my hands and my head; convinced of his error, and deſiring nothing ſo much as his favour, and communion with him, and ſenſible how polluted he was throughout, he longs to be thoroughly purged from corruption, and to be waſhed all over. Jeſus ſaith to him, He that is waſhed, juſtified and ſanctified, needeth not, ſave to waſh his feet by daily application to the ſame fountain of my blood, to cleanſe him from the remaining corruption which cleaves to him, and the guilt daily contracted in this polluted world; and will not be hereby caſt out of my favour; but is clean every whit, regarded as compleat in me, and habitually freed from the dominion of ſin: and ye are clean in this ſenſe, but not all, not every individual of you. For he knew who ſhould betray him; therefore he ſaid, ye are not all clean, Judas the traitor being of their number. Note, (1.) The condeſcenſions of Jeſus cannot but be the aſtoniſhment of the enlightened ſoul. (2.) Though God's diſpenſations appear dark and intricate, it becomes us never to object: we know not now, but we ſhall know hereafter, the reaſons of his procedure. (3.) None have a part in Chriſt who are not cleanſed by his heavenly waſhing. We cannot partake of his glory, if we are not firſt made partakers of his grace, waſhed in his blood and cleanſed by his Spirit. (4.) It is good not to be peremptory in our reſolves, as we may ſee cauſe to change our minds. (5.) They who have taſted the grace of God in truth, deſire the perfect ſanctification of their hearts and lives. (6.) We need not only once come to Jeſus for pardon and grace, but every day to renew the exerciſe of faith and repentance. (7.) Chriſt tries the hearts of his profeſſing people, and knows who are hypocrites, and who are diſciples indeed.

3. Chriſt explains to them the meaning of what he had done. Ye call me Maſter, and Lord: and ye ſay well; for ſo I am. If I then, your Lord and Maſter, have waſhed your feet, ye ought alſo to waſh one another's feet, condeſcending to every office of kindneſs towards the meaneſt diſciple. And, to reconcile them to duties ſo ſelf-denying, he adds, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, The ſervant is not greater than his Lord, neither he that is ſent, greater than he that ſent him. With ſuch an example therefore before them, they need not think the loweſt offices of charity a diſparagement to them. If ye know theſe things, and underſtand my meaning, happy are ye if ye do them, and in your ſpirit and practice conform to my precepts and pattern. Note, (1.) Jeſus is our Lord and Maſter: his teaching we muſt obſerve, his commands obey. (2.) A faithful diſciple of Jeſus ſtudies how to ſerve his brethren, and is ready to condeſcend to the loweſt in every work of faith and labour of love. (3.) Chriſt hath ſet us an example that we ſhould follow his ſteps; what he enjoins on us he hath practiſed firſt himſelf. (4.) Knowledge is good, but practice is the life of religion. They are doubly criminal who know better and do worſe.

18. ¶ I ſpeak not of you all; I know whom I have [r] Pſ. xli. 9. Mat. xxvi. 23.
choſen: but that the ſcripture may be fulfilled, [r] He † Or From henceforth.
that eateth bread with me, hath lifted up his heel againſt [s] Chap. xiv. 29.
me. 19. † Now [s] I tell you before it come, that when [t] Mat. x. 40. Luke x. 60.
it is come to paſs, ye may believe that I am be. 20.
Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [t] He that receiveth whom- [u] Mat. xxvi. 21. Mark xiv. 18.
ſoever I ſend, receiveth me: and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that ſent me. 21. [u] When Jeſus had thus Luke xxii. 21.
ſaid, [x] he was troubled in ſpirit, and teſtified, and ſaid, [x] Chap. xii. 27.
Verily, verily I ſay unto you, that [y] one of you ſhall be- [y] 1 John ii. 19.
tray me. 22. Then the diſciples looked one on another, doubting of whom he ſpake. 23. Now [z] there was lean- [z] Chap. xix. 26. & xx. 2. & xxi. 7, 20.
ing on Jeſus boſom, one of his diſciples whom Jeſus loved. 24. Simon Peter therefore beckened to him; that he ſhould aſk who it ſhould be of whom he ſpake.
25. He then lying on Jeſus breaſt, ſaith unto him, Lord, who is it? 26. Jeſus ‡ anſwered, He it is to whom I ‡ i. e. Softly to John alone.
ſhall give a ſop, when I have dipped it. And when he had dipped the ſop, he gave it to Judas Iſcariot, the ſon Ver. 28.
of Simon. 27. And [a] after the ſop, Satan entred into [a] Luke xxii. 3. Ver. 2.
him. Then ſaid Jeſus unto him, That thou doſt, do quickly. 28. Now no man at the table knew for what intent he ſpake this unto him. 29. For ſome of them thought, becauſe [b] Judas had the bag, that Jeſus had [b] Chap. xii. 6.
ſaid unto him, Buy thoſe things that we have need of againſt the feaſt: or that he ſhould give ſomething to the poor. 30. He then having received the ſop, went immediately out: and it was night.

v. 18—30. Chriſt knew who ſhould betray him, and here he begins to point out the traitor to his diſciples.

1. In general he lets them know there was a falſe diſciple among them, on whom none of the things he had ſpoken would have had any effect. I ſpeak not of you all, as clean and faithful; I know whom I have choſen to ſalvation, as well as apoſtleſhip: but that the ſcripture may be fulfilled, which ſaid, He that eateth bread with me hath lifted up his heel againſt me, therefore have I called one to be an apoſtle whom I know to be a traitor, notwithſtanding all the kindneſs I have ſhewn him. Now I tell you before it come, that when it is come to paſs, ye may believe that I am he, and may be the more confirmed in your faith of my divine omniſcience and mediatorial character, when you ſee this prediction awfully verified. And to encourage you to be faithful, whatever falſehood you may ſee in others, or whatever humbling ſervices you may be called to, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, He that receiveth whomſoever I ſend, receiveth me, and teſtifies his reſpect for me, in the honour paid to my ambaſſador; and he that receiveth me as the Meſſiah ſent of God, receiveth him that ſent me. When Jeſus had thus ſaid, he was troubled in ſpirit, deeply affected with the traitor's guilt, and the ruin hanging over his head, and teſtified, and ſaid, Verily, verily I ſay unto you, that one of you ſhall betray me. Note, (1.) The Lord knows thoſe that are his, and whom he hath choſen to grace and glory, and they ſhall never periſh. (2.) Many eat at Chriſt's table who moſt ungratefully lift up their heel againſt him, and with aggravated guilt prove faithleſs and betray him. (3.) Every true miniſter of Jeſus is his ambaſſador, and repreſents his Prince's perſon. For his ſake therefore is he to be honoured.

2. He points out Judas in particular as the perſon deſigned. Shocked at what they heard, doubtful which of them was meant, and anxious to know, each of them looked at the other, to obſerve whether either would betray any ſymptoms of guilt; and, as John the beloved diſciple lay on the couch next below Jeſus, as it were in his boſom, Simon Peter, eager to be reſolved, privately gave him a hint that he ſhould ſoftly aſk their Maſter who was meant: when, taking an opportunity, he whiſpered, Lord, who is it? Jeſus anſwered, ſo low as not to be heard by the reſt, He it is to whom I ſhall give a ſop, when I have dipped it in the ſauce. And when he had dipped the ſop, he gave it to Judas Iſcariot, the ſon of Simon, intimating to John that he was the perſon. Note, (1.) It is a bitter grief to true diſciples to hear of the ſcandals brought upon Jeſus by falſe profeſſors of religion. (2.) Thoſe are happy whom Jeſus favours with his eſpecial regard, and lays in the boſom of his love.

3. Judas immediately ſets himſelf to accompliſh his helliſh purpoſe. After the ſop, Satan entred into him, poſſeſſed his body and ſoul, and drove him to the precipice of deſtruction. Then ſaid Jeſus, What thou doſt, do quickly, either challenging him to do his worſt, or abandoning him to Satan's devices. None at the table having heard what he had ſaid to John, they ſuſpected Chriſt had given Judas orders to provide ſomething againſt the feaſt, or to diſtribute ſome relief to the poor, he being the purſe-bearer. Urged on by the power of the wicked one, he went out preſently, fixed in his baſe and wicked purpoſe; and it was night, the fitteſt time for ſuch deeds of darkneſs; and, however unſeaſonable the hour, ſo eager was he bent upon his treachery, that nothing could delay him. Note, (1.) When Chriſt abandons the ſinner to Satan's power, he ruſhes headlong to ruin. (2.) They who withdraw from the ſociety of the faithful, begin to ſhew the apoſtacy of their hearts.

31. ¶ Therefore when he was gone out, Jeſus ſaid, [c] Chap. xii. 23, 28. [d] Chap. xvii. 1, 5.
Now is [c] the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified [e] Chap. xii. 23.
in him. 32. [d] If God be glorified in him, God ſhall [f] Chap. vii. 34. & viii. 21.
alſo glorify him in himſelf, and [e] ſhall ſtraightway glo- [g] Lev. xix. 18. Chap. xv. 12, 17.
rify him. 33. Little children, yet a little while I am with you. Ye ſhall ſeek me: and [f] as I ſaid unto the Eph. v. 2.
Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come: ſo now I ſay un- 1 Theſ. iv. 9. 1 John ii. 7, 8. & iii.
to you. 34. [g] A new commandment I give unto you, 23. & iv. 21.
That ye love one another; as I have loved you, that [h] 1 John ii.
ye alſo love one another. 35. [h] By this ſhall all men 5. & iv. 20.
know

know that ye are my diſciples, if ye have love one to another.

v. 31—35. When Judas was gone out, Jeſus addreſſed himſelf to his faithful apoſtles.

1. He informs them, that the hour of his glorification was now nearly arrived. Jeſus ſaid, Now is the Son of man glorified; he is ready by his ſufferings to obtain the glorious victory over all his own and his people's foes, ſin, Satan, death, and hell: and God is glorified in him; all his divine perfections being moſt eminently diſplayed in the obedience to death of the Redeemer. If God be glorified in him, his juſtice, truth, wiſdom, mercy exalted to the higheſt by his croſs; God ſhall alſo glorify him in himſelf, or with himſelf; bringing him to the mediatorial throne in heaven; and ſhall ſtraightway glorify him, in the amazing ſigns and wonders which ſhould accompany the death of Jeſus, and eſpecially by his ſpeedy reſurrection.

2. He intimates to them, that the time of his ſtay with them would be very ſhort. Little children, ſo tenderly and affectionately doth the Lord Jeſus regard his dear people, yet a little while I am with you. Ye ſhall ſeek me; longing for my bodily preſence with you: and as I ſaid unto the Jews, Whither I go, ye cannot come: ſo now ſay I unto you; you muſt be content for a while under the irkſome ſeparation, till the hour of your glory ſhall alſo arrive, (v. 36.) and ye ſhall then come to be with me where I am.

3. He charges them to cultivate mutual love. A new commandment I give unto you; not indeed now firſt enjoined, ſince it was the old commandment which had been from the beginning, but through the degeneracy of the times it had ceaſed to be practiſed, but was now more clearly explained, and enforced by new motives; a command the moſt excellent, and the fundamental law of that kingdom which he came to eſtabliſh; that ye love one another, as I have loved you; ready to every act of kindneſs, and to part with every thing, if need be, even life itſelf, for the good of your brethren: and this was to be the characteriſtic mark of their diſcipleſhip; for by this ſhall all men know that ye are my diſciples, if ye have love one to another; they ſhall take knowledge of you, that you have been with me, and learnt of me. Note, The diſtinguiſhing badge of true Chriſtianity is this ſpirit of fervent charity. Love is the image of Jeſus: he that dwelleth in love, dwelleth in him. This will make us meek and lowly towards our brethren; ready to paſs by their provocations; to forgive their offences; to pity their infirmities; to bear with their differences in opinion or practice; to delight in their proſperity; to promote their good, ſpiritual and temporal; and ever to maintain towards them the kindeſt ſentiments, and be conſtant in warmeſt applications to the throne of grace on their behalf. Then ſhall the wondring world ſay of us as of old, See how theſe Chriſtians love one another. A ſpirit of ſelfiſhneſs, narrowneſs, bitterneſs, diſpute, animoſity, is a reproach to the profeſſion of Chriſtianity; and proves, that thoſe who are actuated by it, deceive their own ſelves, when they call themſelves the followers of Jeſus.

36. ¶ Simon Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, whither goeſt thou? Jeſus anſwered him, Whither I go, thou canſt not follow me now; but [l] thou ſhalt follow me afterwards. 37. Peter ſaid unto him, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? [k] I will lay down my life for thy ſake. 38. Jeſus anſwered him, Wilt thou lay down thy life for my ſake? Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, The cock ſhall not crow, till thou haſt denied me thrice.

[l] Chap. xxi. 18. 2 Pet. i. 14.
[k] Mat. xxvi. 35. Mark xiv. 31. Luke xxii. 33.

v. 36—38. We have here a conference between Chriſt and Peter on what he had ſaid, v. 33.

1. Peter, diſſatisfied perhaps with what Chriſt had ſpoken, v. 33. is ſollicitous to know whither he was going, and therefore eagerly enquires. Probably he thought he was about to quit Judea, and, according to their prejudiced opinions of the Meſſiah, to erect his kingdom in ſome other part of the world.

2. Jeſus anſwered him, Whither I go, thou canſt not follow me now: Chriſt had work yet for Peter to do upon earth, before he ſhould gain the glorious crown of martyrdom: but thou ſhalt follow me afterwards, partaking both of my ſufferings and glory. Note, Our eternal inheritance is ſecured for us; and tho' here we wait and ſuffer a while, the happy hour will arrive, when we ſhall come to be with Jeſus where he is.

3. Peter, with too much ſelf-confidence, unwilling his Maſter ſhould doubt his courage, or determined purpoſe to cleave to him wherever he went, replied, Lord, why cannot I follow thee now? what dangers or difficulties can deter me? I will lay down my life for thy ſake, and will die ſooner than deſert thee.

4. Chriſt warns him of the weakneſs of his reſolution, and how unable he would find himſelf for the leaſt part of what he promiſed. Wilt thou lay down thy life for my ſake? how little doſt thou know thy own weakneſs! Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, take notice of it as the moſt certain truth, The cock ſhall not crow, till thou haſt denied me thrice; before another ſun ſhall riſe, and the time of cock-crowing is over, thou ſhalt not only deny me as thy Maſter, but diſown the very knowledge of my perſon. Note, We know not our weakneſs till the temptation comes, and every boaſt of ſelf-confidence is a certain prelude to a fall.

CHAP. XIV.

This chapter is a continuation of Chriſt's diſcourſe with his diſciples after ſupper. When he had convicted and diſcarded Judas, he ſet himſelf to comfort the reſt, who were full of ſorrow upon what he had ſaid of leaving them, and a great many good words and comfortable words he here ſpeaks to them. The general ſcope of this chapter is in the firſt verſe; it is deſigned to keep trouble from their hearts: now in order to that, they muſt believe. And let them conſider, 1. Heaven as their everlaſting reſt, ver. 2, 3. 2. Chriſt himſelf as their way, ver. 4—11. 3. The great power they ſhall be clothed with by the prevalency of their prayers, ver. 12—14. 4. The coming of another comforter, ver. 15—17. 5. The fellowſhip and communion that ſhould be between him and them after his departure, ver. 18—24. 6. The inſtructions which the Holy Ghoſt ſhould give them, ver. 25, 26. 7. The peace Chriſt bequeathed to them, ver. 27. 8. Chriſt's own chearfulneſs in his departure, ver. 28—31. And this which he ſaid to them, is deſigned for the comfort of all his faithful followers.

1. [a] LET not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe alſo in me. 2. In my Father's houſe are many manſions; if it were not ſo, I would have told you: [b] I go to prepare a place for you. 3. And [c] if I go and prepare a place for you, [d] I will come again, and receive you unto myſelf, that [e] where I am, there ye may be alſo.

[a] Ver. 27. Chap. xvi. 22.
[b] Chap. xiii. 33, 36.
[c] Ver. 18, 28.
[d] Acts i. 11.
[e] Chap. xii. 26. & xvii. 24.

v. 1—3. To comfort them againſt the approaching trials, which would be apt to ſhake the foundation of all their hopes,

1. He exhorts them to maintain unſhaken confidence in him amidſt all their difficulties. Let not your heart be troubled: the thought that one diſciple ſhould betray him; another deny him; that he ſhould ſuffer, die, and leave them; theſe things deeply affected them, and he, who knows the ſouls of his people in adverſity, endeavours to provide for their comfort. Ye believe in God, according to the revelation he hath made of himſelf in his word; believe alſo in me, as the true Meſſiah, as the almighty Saviour, able to ſupport you in all your exigencies, and to comfort you under every affliction. Or it may be read, Believe in God; live in the conſtant exerciſe of faith in the power and grace of my Father: and believe alſo in me; have the ſame confidence in me, who am one with him in the ſame undivided Godhead.

2. He aſſures them his abſence would be to their great advantage. In my father's houſe, in heaven, the place where the eternal Father makes the brighteſt manifeſtations of his glory, there are many manſions, abiding dwelling-places, where there is perfect peace and joy, and love and happineſs. If it were not ſo, I would have told you, and not encouraged you to follow me at the loſs of all things, if I had not an eternal recompenſe to beſtow upon you. I go to prepare a place for you, as your forerunner, to take poſſeſſion of the purchaſed inheritance, to be ready there to receive and welcome you, having prepared you for the manſions prepared for you. And if I go and prepare a place for you, as ſurely as I leave you now, I will come again, and that quickly, and receive you unto myſelf, that where I am, there ye may be alſo; admitted to my preſence, partaking of my glory, and made for ever bleſſed and happy in the enjoyment of my love and favour. Note, (1.) The believing proſpect of the glory which ſhall be revealed, ſhould comfort us under all our preſent trials and afflictions. (2.) In heaven there are manſions for the many ſons whom Jeſus ſhall bring home to his Father's houſe: none ſhall thruſt his mate; for there is room enough for all. (3.) None who truſt on Jeſus, whatever they may quit or loſe for his ſake, ſhall ever have cauſe to lament their choice: in heaven they will be abundantly repaid. (4.) They who look for a better country, that is, a heavenly, ſhall by bleſſed experience ſhortly prove the faithfulneſs of him who hath promiſed to bring them thither, who alſo will do it. (5.) As ſurely as Chriſt is gone into heaven, ſo ſurely will he come to bring his people home to himſelf; either calling them away by death, or finally appearing at the great judgment-day, when all his elect ſhall be gathered together unto him, and be taken to reign with him in glory everlaſting; and well may we comfort one another with theſe words.

4. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. 5. Thomas ſaith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goeſt, and how can we know the way? 6. Jeſus ſaith unto him [f] I am the way, and [g] the truth, and [h] the life: [i] no man cometh unto the Father but by me. 7. If [f] Iſa. xxxv. 8. Heb. ix. 8.

[g] Chap. i. 17. & viii. 32.
[h] Chap. i. 4 & xi. 25.
[i] Chap. x. 9.

[k] If ye had known me, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo: and from henceforth ye know him, and have ſeen him. 8. Philip ſaith unto him, Lord, ſhew us the Father, and it ſufficeth us. 9. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Have I been ſo long time with you, and yet haſt thou not known me, Philip? [l] he that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father; and how ſayeſt thou then, Shew us the Father? 10. Believeſt thou not that [m] I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I ſpeak unto you, [n] I ſpeak not of myſelf: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the works. 11. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me: or elſe believe me for the very works ſake.

[k] Chap. viii. 19.
[l] Chap. xii. 45. Col. i. 15.
[m] Ver. 20. Chap. x. 38. & xvii. 21, 23.
[n] Chap. v. 19. & viii. 38. & xii. 49.

v. 4—11. Having ſet before them the happineſs provided for them, Chriſt farther encourages them, ſaying, Whither I go ye know; I have repeatedly told you; and the way ye know, which I have taught you by my word and my example.

1. Thomas replied to this, We know not whither thou goeſt, and how can we know the way? Though in general they had ſome knowledge of the way to heaven, whither Chriſt was going; yet miſtaking his diſcourſe, and having his head filled with the conceits of Chriſt's temporal kingdom, Thomas, like the reſt, ſuppoſes he was going ſomewhere to erect his throne upon earth, but where was a ſecret to him; and he wiſhed to know, as Peter had done, that, though with leſs ſelf-confidence, he might follow his Maſter.

2. Jeſus anſwers, I am the way; through his blood alone there is acceſs unto God, and by his grace can we only be enabled to walk in the path which leads to eternal glory: the truth; whom all the ritual ſervices prefigured, in whom they were fulfilled, whoſe promiſes are faithful, and who hath never failed thoſe that truſt him; and the life; who hath life in himſelf, and is the author of ſpiritual and eternal life to his people: no man cometh to the Father, but by me; in our preſent fallen ſtate we can neither draw near to a throne of grace with acceptance, but by Jeſus Chriſt as our advocate and ſurety; nor can we ever hope to appear before the throne of glory, but as compleat in him, and making mention of his righteouſneſs only. If ye had known me, in my true character as God, as well as man, ye ſhould have known my Father alſo; foraſmuch as we are in nature and eſſence one: and from henceforth, as by this intimation you may perceive my meaning, ye know him, and have ſeen him, in me. Note, (1.) The knowledge of the Godhead of the Redeemer is eſſential to ſalvation. (2.) Chriſt can diſcover in his diſciples more knowledge of his bleſſed ſelf than they think themſelves poſſeſſed of, and are therefore complaining of their ignorance.

3. Philip, not yet entring fully into his Maſter's meaning, ſaith unto him, Lord, ſhew us the Father, ſome viſible and corporeal repreſentation of him, and it ſufficeth us; this will fully ſatisfy us, and ſilence all our further enquiries.

4. Jeſus gently rebukes the dulneſs of his comprehenſion, and ſaith unto him, Have I been ſo long time with you, and yet haſt thou not known me, Philip? my divine original, as well as miſſion? He that hath ſeen me, hath ſeen the Father; the divine perfections which I have diſplayed, prove my eſſential Godhead, as partaker of the ſame nature, attributes, and glory with him: and how ſayeſt thou, Shew us the Father? believeſt thou that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? though in perſon diſtinct, yet in eſſence one, inſeparably united in the ſame eternal Godhead. The words I ſpeak to you, deep and myſterious as ſome of the doctrines are which I declare, I ſpeak not of myſelf, by any authority purely my own, or as apart from the Father; but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doth the works, which confirm my divine miſſion, and ſet God's ſeal to the truths which I deliver. Believe me that I am in the Father, and the Father in me, upon the credit of the teſtimony which I bear; or elſe, if you think that inſufficient, believe me for the very works ſake, which are ſuch convincing proofs of the truths which I preach, and done in ſuch a godlike manner, by my word, in my own name, and by my own power, as ſhews my Godhead and glory. Note, (1.) They who have been long in Chriſt's ſchool, ſhould make their profiting appear. They are juſtly culpable who, bleſſed with the richeſt means, do not grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jeſus Chriſt. (2.) In Chriſt Jeſus we behold a brighter diſplay of God's glory and preſence than ever before appeared, ſeeing in him dwelt all the fulneſs of the Godhead bodily.

12. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [o] He that believeth on me, the works that I do, ſhall he do alſo, and greater works than theſe ſhall he do; becauſe I go unto my Father. 13. And [p] whatſoever ye ſhall aſk in my name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. 14. If ye ſhall aſk any thing in my name, I will do it.

[o] Mat. xxi. 21. Mark xvi. 17.
[p] Mat. vii. 7. & xxi. 22. Mark xi. 24. Chap. xv. 7. 16. & xvi. 23. 1 John iii. 22. & v. 14.

v. 12—14. The loſs of their Maſter's preſence and company dejected his poor diſciples. To comfort them, he promiſes,

1. To endue them with the moſt aſtoniſhing miraculous powers. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, He that believeth on me, as you do, the works that I do, ſhall he do alſo; the ſame miracles ye have ſeen me perform: yea, and greater works than theſe ſhall he do; more numerous, and more wonderful, (See Acts v. 15. xix. 12.) And particularly this may refer to the gift of tongues, and the vaſtly ſuperior ſucceſs which ſhould attend the preaching of the apoſtles, and the much more numerous converts they ſhould make, than their Maſter had done; and this, becauſe I go to the Father, when having received all power in heaven and earth, he would in the moſt abundant manner pour out the Spirit upon them from on high, to enable them for the great work whereunto he had ordained them.

2. To grant them all their petitions. Whatſoever ye ſhall aſk in my name, pleading my promiſe, and depending on my advocacy; that I will do, by my own divine power, giving you an anſwer to every prayer according to the various neceſſities of your ſouls; that the Father may be glorified in the Son; and his glory ſhould be the end of all our petitions; and in gratifying them Chriſt deſigns to advance his Father's honour, and manifeſt his power, grace, and faithfulneſs. If ye ſhall aſk any thing in my name, I will do it, granting you every needful ſupply of grace and ſtrength for your ſupport and ſucceſs in the work of the goſpel.

15. [q] If ye love me, keep my commandments. 16.
And I will pray the Father, and [r] he ſhall give you another comforter, that he may abide with you for ever;
17. Even [s] the Spirit of truth, whom the world cannot receive, becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him; but ye know him, for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you.

[q] Ver. 21, 23. Chap. xv. 10, 14. 1 John v. 3.
[r] Chap. xv. 26. & xvi. 7. Rom. viii. 26, 27.
[s] Chap. xvi. 13. 1 John iv. 6.

v. 15—17. Our Lord proceeds to encourage and comfort them in the view of the ſervice before them, and in the proſpect of his departure from them.

1. They muſt give a proof of their love of him by their obſervance of his commandments. If ye love me, keep my commandments. He ſpeaks not as doubting the truth of their regard, but as quickening them to give increaſing proofs of the ſincerity of their love, by a conſcientious reſpect to all his precepts.

2. He promiſes to ſend them another comforter, who ſhould abundantly ſupply the loſs of his bodily preſence. I will pray the Father, and effectually be your advocate, and he ſhall give you another comforter, and counſellor, to ſupport, direct, and quicken you, whoſe loſs they ſhould no more fear, for Chriſt will take care that he may abide with you for ever, carrying you through all your trials, and death itſelf, to an eternal inheritance in glory; even the Spirit of truth, the Spirit of the true God, whoſe inſpiration dictates the ſacred oracles, and who leads the minds of benighted ſinners into the knowledge of all truth; whom the world cannot receive, the men of the world, who harden their hearts in pride and impenitence; becauſe it ſeeth him not, neither knoweth him; are ſtrangers to his operations; are led by ſight, not by faith; and therefore count his teaching to be fooliſhneſs and enthuſiaſm. But ye know him, as having already illuminated your hearts, and ſanctified in a meaſure your ſouls: for he dwelleth with you, and ſhall be in you, as his living temples, guiding, governing, ſtrengthening, comforting, and bleſſing you continually. Note, (1.) In the one Godhead there are three perſons, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, each poſſeſſed of the ſame divine perfections. (2.) All Chriſt's true diſciples to the end of time may expect divine teaching and conſolation amidſt all their trials; and, whilſt they are looking to him, ſhall be ſtrengthened, quickened, and comforted in his bleſſed work and ways. (3.) Every faithful ſoul is the temple of the Holy Ghoſt, and by experience feels the in-dwelling power of his effectual grace.

18. [t] I will not leave you † comfortleſs; [u] I will come to you. 19. Yet a little while, and the world ſeeth me no more: but [x] ye ſee me: [y] becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo. 20. At that day ye ſhall know that [z] I am in my Father, and you in me, and I in you. 21. [a] He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me, ſhall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifeſt myſelf to him. 22. Judas ſaith unto him, not Iſcariot, Lord, how is it that thou wilt manifeſt thyſelf unto us, and not unto the world? 23. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, [b] If a man love me, he will keep my words:
and my Father will love him, [c] and we will come unto him,

[t] Mat. xxviii. 20.
† Or orphans.
[u] Ver. iii. 28.
[x] Chap. x. 16.
[y] 1 Cor. xv. 13, 20. 1 Theſ. iv. 14.
[z] Ver. 10. Chap. x. 38. & xvii. 21, 23.
[a] Ver. 15, 23. 1 John ii. 5. & v. 3.
[b] Ver. 15.
[c] 1 John ii. 24. Rev. iii. 20.

him, and make our abode with him. 24. He that loveth me not, keepeth not my ſayings: and [d] the word which you hear, is not mine, but the Father's which ſent me.

[d] Ver. 10. Chap. v. 28, 38. & xii. 49.

v. 18—24. Chriſt purſues the ſame reviving ſubject. He was indeed going from them for a while, but his abſence would not be long.

1. I will not leave you comfortleſs, as orphans: I will come to you; either at his reſurrection, or by the miſſion of his Spirit, or by his final appearing to judgment. Yet a little while, and the world ſeeth me no more; they who rejected him, would no more be favoured with a ſight of him after his reſurrection: but ye ſee me; I will appear to you; ye ſhall ſee me now by faith, and ſhortly ſhall eternally enjoy the full viſion of me in glory. Becauſe I live, ye ſhall live alſo; I, as the fountain-head of ſpiritual life, will communicate the living influences to you my members; and, vitally united to me, you ſhall live in holy conformity to me here, and in the eternal enjoyment of me hereafter. If we are diſciples indeed, our life is bound up with that of the Son of God himſelf, nor can death deſtroy our union with him: he that liveth and believeth in him ſhall never die eternally. At that day, of Chriſt's reſurrection as a triumphant conqueror over all his foes; or when by the effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt their minds ſhould be more deeply illuminated; and moſt eſpeciall when they ſhould come to meet him in the kingdom of his glory; ye ſhall know that I am in my Father, one in eſſential union; and you in me, and I in you, as living members of my body myſtical, joined to me in one ſpirit. And in conſequence of this, he that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, is enabled truly to underſtand, and in ſimplicity to obey them; he it is that loveth me; he gives hereby an undoubted proof of his unfeigned affection to me: and he that loveth me, ſhall be loved of my Father, as the object of his favour, delight, and complacence: and I will love him, with unchangeable regard; and will manifeſt myſelf to him, making the richeſt diſcoveries of grace and glory to his ſoul. Note, (1.) Every faithful ſoul is a partaker of a divine nature, and lives in a ſtate of inſeparable union with the Son of God. (2.) Chriſt gives increaſing diſcoveries of his truth and love to the ſouls of his people, till they are brought to ſee him face to face. (3.) The proof of our love to Jeſus muſt appear in our fidelity and obedience. If we ſay we abide in him, and walk in darkneſs, we lie. (4.) Though our love to him is not the cauſe of his love to us, but the effect; yet, as we are enabled to make it appear more clearly, we ſhall find brighter manifeſtations made to our ſouls of our intereſt in him; ſhall experience ſweeter foretaſtes of the eternal bliſs which is promiſed; and ſhall receive increaſing ſupplies of the Spirit, to perfect in us what is yet lacking, and prepare us for our eternal abode with him.

2. One of Chriſt's diſciples, either not apprehending fully his meaning, deſired him to explain it; oroverwhelmed with admiration, could not but wonder at the endearing condeſcenſions of Jeſus to them in particular; Judas ſaith unto him, not Iſcariot, but Jude the brother of James, another of the twelve apoſtles, How is it that thou wilt manifeſt thyſelf unto us, and not unto the world? Note, They who are the objects of God's diſtinguiſhing favour, cannot but admire the grace of which they are partakers, and with wonder cry, Why me, Lord!

3. Chriſt graciouſly confirms and explains what he had ſpoken. Jeſus anſwered and ſaid unto him, If a man love me, he will keep my words, and my Father will love him, and make the moſt delightful diſcoveries to him of his grace and favour; and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him; taking up our dwelling in the temple of his heart, manifeſting our gracious preſence to him, and maintaining, through the Spirit, in the word and ordinances, the moſt bleſſed and abiding communion with him. On the other hand, He that loveth me not, keepeth not my ſayings,; diſobeys my commands, and neglects my inſtitutions; and thereby proving his averſion to me, ſhuts the door of his heart againſt me, and wilfully rejects my goſpel, with all its ineſtimable bleſſings. And the word which you hear is not mine, but the Father's, who ſent me; therefore they who diſreliſh and reject it, muſt be neceſſarily excluded from his favour as well as mine.

25. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you, being yet preſent with you. 26. But [e] the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghoſt, whom the Father will ſend in my name, [f] he ſhall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatſoever I have ſaid unto you. 27. [g] Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, give I unto you. [h] Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid. 28. Ye have heard how [i] I ſaid unto you, I go away, and come again unto you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, becauſe I ſaid, I go unto the Father: for [k] my Father is greater than I. 29. And [l] now I have told you before it come to paſs, that when it is come to paſs, ye might believe. 30. Hereafter I will not talk much with you: for [m] the prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me. 31. But that the world may know that I love the Father; and [n] as the Father gave me commandment, even ſo I do: Ariſe, let us go hence.

[e] Ver. 16.
[f] Chap. xii. 16. & xvi. 13. 1 John ii. 20, 27.
[g] Phil. iv. 7. Col. iii. 15.
[h] Ver. 1.
[i] Ver. 3.
[k] Chap. v. 18. & x. 29. Phil. ii. 6.
[l] Chap. xiii. 19. & xvi. 4.
[m] Chap. xii. 31. & xvi. 11.
[n] Chap. x. 18.

v. 25—31. For the further encouragement of his diſciples he proceeds,

1. To aſſure them of the teachings and conſolations of the Holy Ghoſt. Theſe things have I ſpoken, being yet preſent with you; the time being ſhort, I have endeavoured to lay them clearly before you: but the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghoſt, the third perſon in the ſacred Trinity, whom the Father will ſend in my name, at my interceſſion, to ſupply my abſence, and to advance my kingdom and glory; he ſhall teach you all things, opening your underſtandings to clearer diſcoveries of the truth, enlarging your capacities, and ſtrengthening your memories; for he ſhall bring all things things to your remembrance whatſoever I have ſaid unto you; he would not only revive the memory of all the works and diſcourſes of Chriſt, which they had forgotten, but give them a diſtinct knowledge of what, at the time Chriſt ſpoke, they did not underſtand.

2. He engages to give them peace in the midſt of all their troubles. Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you, as my laſt bequeſt; peace with God, as reconciled to you; peace in your own conſciences, from the confidence of his love; peace with each other, united in bonds of firmeſt union; my peace, which none but I your Maſter could procure or beſtow, the purchaſe of my blood, the fruit of my interceſſion; I give it, freely, fully, to you, and all who follow you as my diſciples. Not as the world giveth, give I unto you; not as a piece of compliment, but as a real bleſſing; not as worldly gifts, uncertain and precarious, but as a gift infinitely more valuable than all that earth can beſtow, and infinitely more abiding. It is what the world can neither give, and, bleſſed be God, can never take away from us. Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid, under the apprehenſion of any ſufferings or trials when I am abſent from you: my peace, which paſſeth all underſtanding, ſhall keep your hearts and minds.

3. He aſſures them his departure would be for his own glory and their good, and therefore they ought rather to rejoice than be ſorry for it. Ye have heard how I ſaid unto you, I go away, and come again unto you, to take you to the manſions prepared for you. If ye loved me, ye would rejoice, becauſe I ſaid, I go unto the Father, to receive the mediatorial throne; for my Father is greater than I; not in his divine nature, but as in the œconomy of man's ſalvation, the Son of God humbled himſelf to take the human nature, and ſubmitted to the form of a ſervant: though equal to the Father, as touching his Godhead, yet inferior to the Father, as touching his manhood; therefore in his exaltation, as the man Chriſt Jeſus, it became them to be joyful. And now I have told you before it come to paſs, that when it is come to paſs, in my death, reſurrection, aſcenſion, and the effuſion of the Holy Ghoſt, ye may believe, that I am the true Meſſiah, and will aſſuredly fulfil all the promiſes which I have made to you.

4. He tells them, that the great enemy of ſouls would now be finally vanquiſhed. Hereafter I will not talk much with you; the time of my departure is at hand: for the prince of this world, he who hath uſurped the dominion over the hearts of fallen men, and once pretended to offer me the kingdoms of the world, (Luke iv. 5—7,) he cometh, with all his fury and rage, to make his laſt, his deſperate attack; and hath nothing in me; all his attempts will be baffled, and his malice recoil upon his own head with greater aggravation of his guilt; and to his utter confuſion and deſtruction, he will find no guilt in me to accuſe my conſcience, no legal power over me in conſequence of ſin, (See Heb. ii. 14.) no corruption to work upon, or afford an opening for his temptations: and as Chriſt once conquered for his people in his own perſon, ſo will he conquer in them, and bruiſe Satan ſhortly under their feet.

5. He informs them, that his departure from them was according to the Father's commandment, and a matter of his moſt willing obedience. But, that the world may know, that I love the Father, though Satan hath no power over me, I am ready to lay down my life, according to my Father's will: and as the Father hath given me commandment, even ſo I do; readily offering myſelf to ſuffer according to his eternal counſels. Ariſe, let us go hence, and meet the approaching danger. Note, When duty calls, and God ſo ordains, inſtead of flying from ſufferings, we muſt chearfully offer ourſelves up, willing to glorify God, if he ſo pleaſes, even in the fires.

CHAP. XV.

In this chapter, 1. Chriſt ſpeaks of himſelf under the figure of a vine, ver. 1—7. 2. Commands them to abound in fruits of love. ver. 8—17. 3. Comforts them againſt the world's hatred, ver. 18—27.

1. I Am the true vine, and [a] my Father is the huſbandman. 2. [b] Every branch in me that beareth not

[a] Mat. xxi. 33. 1 Cor. iii. 9.
[b] Mat. xv. 13.

not fruit, he taketh away : and every branch [c] that beareth fruit, he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit. 3. [d] Now ye are clean through the word which I have ſpoken unto you. 4. [e] Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itſelf, except it abide in the vine : no more can ye, except ye abide in me. 5. I am the vine, ye are the branches : He that abideth in me, and I in him, the ſame bringeth forth much [f] fruit : for without me ye can do nothing. 6. If a man abide not in me, [g] he is caſt forth as a branch, and is withered ; and men gather them, and caſt them into the fire, and they are burned. 7. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, [h] ye ſhall aſk what you will, and it ſhall be done unto you. 8. [i] Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, ſo ſhall ye be my diſciples.

[c] Gal. v. 22. Eph. v. 9.
[d] Chap. xiii. 10. & xvii. 17. Eph. v. 26. 1 Pet. i. 22.
[e] Col. i. 23.
[f] Hoſ. xiv. 8. Phil. i. 11.
[g] Mat. iii. 10. & vii. 19.
[h] Ver. 16. Chap. xiv. 13. 1 John iii. 22.
[i] Mat. v. 16. Phil. i. 11.

v. 1—8. We have here a continuation of Chriſt's farewel diſcourſe to his diſconſolate diſciples.

1. He repreſents himſelf to them under the figure of a vine. I am the true vine ; as a vine, mean and weak in his outward appearance, yet ſpreading on every ſide ; ſending his ſalvation to the ends of the earth, and bringing forth the moſt reviving fruits, pleaſing to God, and chearing to man : the true vine, the life-giving ſource of ſpiritual influences, conveyed from him to all the branches of his body myſtical ; and thoſe who are ingrafted upon him, will never find him to fail or deceive them : and my Father is the huſbandman, who planted it in the earth, and with watchfulneſs and care every moment preſerves and waters it ; ſupporting Chriſt in the exerciſe of his mediatorial office, with complacence delighting in him, and guarding him and every member of his church, who are grafted upon him, from every evil.

2. His profeſſing people are the branches, on whom the great huſbandman employs his care. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh away. Some profeſſing members of Chriſt are only nominally diſciples, not vitally united to Jeſus by faith and love, and bearing no true fruits of grace and holineſs; theſe the Lord taketh away. In time of perſecution they fall off ; or they turn aſide into ſuch errors in principle, or immoralities in conduct, as diſcover their hypocriſy ; or, if they are ſpared to the laſt, by death they are cut off, and then the hypocrite's hope periſheth. And every branch in me that beareth fruit, truly engrafted into Chriſt, partaking of the quickening influences of his Spirit, and bringing forth the fruits of righteouſneſs, which are by Jeſus Chriſt to the praiſe and glory of God ; he purgeth it, that it may bring forth more fruit : by his word, his Spirit, his afflictive providences, he continues to cut off the luxuriant and noxious ſhoots of pride, luſt, and worldlineſs, which would ſtill ſpring from the remainders of in-dwelling corruption, even in the hearts of the faithful ; and to encourage, cultivate, and increaſe the gracious diſpoſitions he hath implanted, that they may ſhoot more vigorouſly, and bring forth more abundantly in all good converſation and godlineſs.

3. As he had now purged out Judas from among them, he exhorts them to approve their fidelity. Now ye are clean through the word which I have ſpoken unto you ; your hearts being purified by faith, in which way the word becomes effectual to all Chriſt's diſciples in every age, purging out the droſs of in-dwelling evil, and ſanctifying the ſoul. Abide in me, as the root and ſtock from whence all ſpiritual ſupplies of grace are drawn ; placing all your dependance on my blood and righteouſneſs, my Spirit and power ; and I will then abide in you, as the living principle of all goodneſs. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itſelf, except it abide in the vine, and maintain a conſtant communication with the root, no more can ye, except ye abide in me. The beſt of men have no ſtock of grace within themſelves, but muſt maintain habitual communion with Jeſus, if they would continue to bring forth fruit unto God. I am the vine, ye are the branches : he that abideth in me, in the conſtant exerciſe of faith, and I in him, by the powerful operation of my Spirit, the ſame bringeth forth much fruit : for without me, ſeparate from me, and for a moment deſtitute of my quickening influence, ye can do nothing truly good and acceptable to God, but muſt wither, droop, and die, as a branch deprived of communication with the living root. Without Chriſt we can do nothing towards our juſtification, ſanctification, or glorification ; he muſt be to us all and in all.

4. He warns them of the fatal conſequences of departure from him. If any man abide not in me ; baſely deſert my cauſe, and make ſhipwreck of faith and a good conſcience ; or, whilſt he hath a name to live, be really found dead in treſpaſſes and ſins ; he is caſt forth as a branch ; excommunicated from the company of the faithful here below, if his iniquities are brought to light ; or, at fartheſt, cut off at death from the ſociety of the bleſſed, and is withered ; his gifts wither ; his zeal grows cold ; his devotion dies ; his reputation decays ; his hopes periſh ; and men gather them and caſt them into the fire, and they are burned ; and thus ſhall the angels of God at the laſt gather out of Chriſt's kingdom all that offend and do iniquity, when hypocrites will have their portion with the unbelievers and impenitent, and be caſt together into the everlaſting burnings. Let us read and tremble.

5. He aſſures them the prayers of all his faithful people ſhould be heard and anſwered. If ye abide in me, ſteadily cleaving to me under all diſcouragements ; and my words abide in you, and habitually influence your conduct ; ye ſhall aſk what ye will, and it ſhall be done unto you ; whatever is for his glory and our good ſhall be granted. And herein is my Father glorified, by your abiding in me, and aſking and receiving out of my fulneſs ; that ye bear much fruit of grace, which will redound to his praiſe ; ſo ſhall ye be my diſciples ; evidently proved to be ſuch by your good converſation and approved fidelity, and ſhall be acknowledged by me in the day of my appearing and glory.

9. As the Father hath loved me, ſo have I loved you : continue ye in my love. 10. [h] If ye keep my commandments, ye ſhall abide in my love : even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. 11. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you that my joy might remain in you, and [i] that your joy might be full. 12. [k] This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you. 13. [l] Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends. 14. [m] Ye are my friends, if ye do whatſoever I command you. 15. Henceforth I call you not ſervants ; for the ſervant knoweth not what his lord doth : but I have called you friends ; for [n] all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you. 16. [o] Ye have not choſen me, but I have choſen you, and [p] ordained you, that you ſhould go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit ſhould remain : that [q] whatſoever ye ſhall aſk of the Father in my name, he may give it you. 17. [r] Theſe things I command you, that ye love one another.

[h] Chap. xiv. 15, 21, 23.
[i] Chap. xvi. 24. & xvii. 13. 1 John i. 4.
[k] Chap. xiii. 34. 1 Theſ. iv. 9. 1 Pet. iv. 8. 1 John iii. 11. & iv. 21.
[l] Rom. v. 7. 1 John iii. 16.
[m] Chap. xiv. 15, 23. Mat. xii. 50.
[n] Eph. i. 9. & iii. 5.
[o] 1 John iv. 10, 19.
[p] Mat. xxviii. 19. 1 Tim. ii. 7.
[q] Mat. xxi. 22. Ver. 7. Chap. xiv. 13.
[r] Ver. 12.

v. 9—17. We have here,

1. The love of Chriſt towards his people. As the Father hath loved me, ſo have I loved you ; and this love of his appeared moſt eminent and ſingular :

(1.) In his laying down his life for them. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends : but greater even than this hath been the love of Jeſus; when we were enemies Chriſt died for us.

(2.) In his kindneſs towards them, admitting them into his favour and friendſhip. Ye are my friends, if ye do whatſoever I command you, and herein ſhew yourſelves faithful to me. Henceforth I call you not ſervants ; though to be employed by ſuch a Maſter, and that he condeſcends to accept of our ſervices, is abundant honour ; for the ſervant knoweth not what his lord doth, nor is admitted to any ſuch intimacy and familiarity as you have been indulged with : but I have called you by the honourable name of friends, and have treated you with the moſt cordial affection and confidence ; for all things that I have heard of my Father, I have made known unto you ; all things that as Mediator he came to preach and teach, reſpecting the ſalvation of ſinners, and the counſels of grace ; he had kept back nothing from them, and his Spirit would ſhortly give them a clearer knowledge of what he had revealed to them.

(3.) In his ordaining them to the high dignity of apoſtleſhip, as well as to eternal life and glory. Ye have not choſen me, and by your choice laid any obligations on me to return the kindneſs ; but I have choſen you, of my ſovereign will and pleaſure, and to manifeſt the riches of my grace and love ; and ordained you, both to your office as apoſtles, and to ſalvation, as elect veſſels ; that ye ſhould go and bring forth fruit, in the purity of your converſations, and the abundant ſucceſs of your miniſtry ; and that your fruit ſhould remain, when your fidelity ſhall receive an eternal recompenſe, and the bleſſed effects of your labours, preaching, and writings, remain to the lateſt ages.

(4.) In his granting them all their petitions. That whatſoever ye ſhall aſk of the Father in my name, he may give it you ; and the aſſurance of being heard is the great inducement and encouragement to us to pray. How can we but be happy to draw near to God, when we are thus conſtantly aſſured of receiving an anſwer of peace ?

2. He exhorts them, from the conſideration of his love to them, to make the due and grateful return to him, by loving and ſerving him, and one another. Continue ye in my love ; ſtedfaſtly cleave to me, and believe my regard to you will be invariable and unchangeable. If ye keep my commandments, ye ſhall abide in my love ; if you approve your fidelity, you ſhall have the unutterable ſatisfaction of my approbation, and have increaſing ſupplies of grace miniſtred to you, yet farther to eſtabliſh, ſtrengthen, and ſettle you. Even as I have kept my Father's commandments, with unabating ardor and conſtancy ; and abide in his love, am now, and ſhall for ever be, the object of his higheſt delight and complacence, as you ſhall be of mine. And next to your love of me, this is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you. And again, v. 17. this being among the beſt proofs of real love to Jeſus, and the great commandment which he eſpecially enjoins, as the diſtinguiſhing badge of true diſcipleſhip. Note, (1.) The love of Chriſt known and believed, can alone engage our hearts to a return of love. (2.) The purpoſe of univerſal obedience to Chriſt's commands, is the ſure evidence of love without diſſimulation. (3.) No duty is more frequently and earneſtly urged upon us, than chriſtian charity, becauſe nothing is more ornamental to our profeſſion; nor do we in any thing more reſemble him, whoſe nature and name is love.

18. [s] If the world hate you, ye know that it hated me before it hated you. 19. [t] If ye were of the world, the world would love his own: but [u] becauſe ye are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you. 20. Remember the word that I ſaid unto you, [x] The ſervant is not greater than the lord. If they have perſecuted me, they will alſo perſecute you: [y] if they have kept my ſaying, they will keep yours alſo. 21. But [z] all theſe things will they do unto you for my name's ſake, becauſe they know not him that ſent me. 22. [a] If I had not come and ſpoken unto them, they had not had ſin: [b] but now they have no † cloke for their ſin. 23. [c] He that hateth me, hateth my Father alſo. 24. If I had not done among them the works [d] which none other man did, they had not had ſin: but now they have both ſeen, and hated both me and my Father. 25. But this cometh to paſs, that the word might be fulfilled that is written in their law, [e] They hated me without a cauſe.

[s] 1 John iii. 13.
[t] Ibid. iv. 5.
[u] Chap. xvii. 14.
[x] Mat. x. 24. Luke vi. 40. Chap. xiii. 16.
[y] Ezek. iii. 7.
[z] Mat. x. 22. & xxiv. 9. Chap. xvi. 3.
[a] Chap. ix. 41.
[b] Jam. iv. 17.
† Or excuſe.
[c] 1 John ii. 23.
[d] Chap. iii. 2. & ix. 32.
[e] Pſ. xxxv. 19. & lxix. 4.

v. 18—25. They who will be faithful to the Saviour, muſt expect the enmity of a ſinful world; where wicked men, many and mighty, will unite in hatred, oppoſition, and perſecution againſt them.

1. The followers of Jeſus may expect to be hated, perſecuted, deſpiſed. Since the original enmity put between the ſeed of the ſerpent, and the ſeed of the woman, never was there one truly godly man, but more or leſs experienced the like treatment.

2. So dealt they with our great Lord and Maſter, whoſe example ſhould reconcile us to ſuffer with him. If the world hate you, marvel not; ye know that it hated me before it hated you: never was character ſo ſpotleſs as his, never one ſuffered ſo much from the enmity of the world.

3. The reaſon for the world's hatred of us is evident. If ye were of the world, conformed to it in your tempers, manners, and practice, the world would love his own, would careſs and eſteem you; but becauſe ye are not of the world, but I have choſen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you; becauſe by my diſtinguiſhing grace I have taken you for my own, and ordained you to eternal life and glory; your heavenly minds and converſation cannot but witneſs againſt, and reprove their vain and wicked ways, and therefore their anger riſes. Note, The men of the world have not only a hatred of real chriſtians in general, but an eſpecial enmity againſt goſpel-miniſters, whoſe preaching and rebukes exaſperate thoſe who reject the counſel of God againſt their own ſouls.

4. He reminds them, that this was no more than he had all along taught them to expect. Remember the word that I ſaid unto you, The ſervant is not greater than the lord, nor may expect more reſpectful treatment. If they have perſecuted me, with all manner of rancour, reviling, and injuries, they will alſo perſecute you, my ambaſſadors, who bear the ſame meſſage, and go forth into the ſame world that lieth in wickedneſs: if they have kept my ſayings, they will keep yours alſo; the goſpel you preach will be deſpiſed and rejected, and your words be miſrepreſented, cavilled at, and ridiculed, as mine in general have been. But all theſe things will they do unto you for my name's ſake, becauſe you have an intereſt in my love, vindicate my honour, and preach my goſpel, whatever other pretences they may feign as the ground of their oppoſition; becauſe they know not him that ſent me, their minds are blinded by pride and prejudice, ignorant of the true God and his Meſſiah. Note, (1.) All who will live godly in Chriſt Jeſus, may expect perſecution of one kind or other. (2.) The faithful miniſters of the goſpel may not be ſurprized, if their preaching is treated with contempt or ridicule; their Lord was ſo inſulted. (3.) Perſecutors often pretend other cauſes to cover their enmity againſt God's people; but whatever be their pretext, the true reaſon is his image in them which they cannot bear, and his goſpel which they abhor.

5. Chriſt ſuggeſts the inexcuſable guilt of thoſe who rejected him and his goſpel. If I had not come and ſpoken unto them, they had not had ſin, comparatively ſpeaking; but now they have no cloke for their ſin, their infidelity is wilful, their impenitence obſtinate. He that hateth me, hateth my Father alſo; the hatred ſhewn to his perſon, miniſters, and goſpel, ultimately centers in God himſelf. If I had not done among them the works which none other man did, ſuch ſtupenduous miracles, as inconteſtibly proved my divine miſſion, they had not had ſin; they might have had ſome cloak for their unbelief, but now they have both ſeen, and hated both me and my Father; rejecting the teſtimony he thus hath born to me, and fixed in a rooted averſion to me and him. But this cometh to paſs, that the word might be fulfilled that is written, Pſal. lxix. 4. in their law, They hated me without a cauſe. Note, (1.) They are left moſt inexcuſable, and their guilt moſt aggravated, who perſiſt in unbelief, and go to hell with bibles in their hands. (2.) They who hate the goſpel, and Chriſt, the author of it, whatever they may pretend, truly hate God. Enemies to the chriſtian religion, are enemies to all religion; and Deiſt is really but another ſofter name for Atheiſt. (3.) Enmity againſt Chriſt and his goſpel is moſt abſurd and unreaſonable; it is quarrelling with our own mercies, and being, in fact, the worſt enemies to ourſelves.

26. But [f] when the Comforter is come, whom I will ſend unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he ſhall teſtify of me. 27. And [g] ye alſo ſhall bear witneſs, becauſe [h] ye have been with me from the beginning.

[f] Luke xxiv. 49. Chap. xiv. 17, 26. & xvi. 7. Acts ii. 33.
[g] Acts ii. 32. & iv. 20, 33. & v. 32. & x. 39.
[h] Luke i. 2. 1 John i. 1.

v. 26, 27. Though the enemies of Jeſus and his people are many and mighty, he hath provided ſuch ſupports for them, as ſhall enable them to triumph over all oppoſition.

1. His ſpirit ſhall be their comfort and ſtrength. But when the Comforter is come, whom I will ſend unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he ſhall teſtify of me. On the day of Pentecoſt, the moſt abundant influences of the Holy Ghoſt were to be poured forth upon them, he being the third perſon in the ſacred Trinity, proceeding from the Father and the Son, whoſe peculiar office in the œconomy of man's ſalvation is to teſtify of Chriſt, as the Spirit of truth ſpeaking in the apoſtles, and bearing witneſs to the divine glory and grace of the Redeemer, and making the preaching of the goſpel effectual to the conſciences of men. He is the advocate, convincing men of ſin, righteouſneſs, and judgment; the Comforter, filling the ſouls of Chriſt's faithful people with joy unſpeakable and full of glory.

2. They ſhall themſelves hereby be enabled to bear a noble teſtimony for Chriſt. Ye alſo ſhall bear witneſs, preaching my goſpel in the face of all oppoſers, and confirming it by the miraculous powers with which you ſhall be inveſted: and your evidence cannot be juſtly excepted againſt, becauſe ye have been with me from the beginning, and ſpeak the things of which you have yourſelves the moſt undoubted aſſurance. Note, Miniſters can then powerfully preach Chriſt, when they have themſelves experimentally known him, have been with him in faith and love, and for a ſeaſon have walked in a ſtate of communion with him.

CHAP. XVI.

We have here the concluſion of Chriſt's diſcourſe. 1. He warns them of their approaching trials. 2. He promiſes, (1.) That he would ſend them the Comforter, ver. 7—15. (2.) That he would viſit them again at his reſurrection, ver. 16—22. (3.) That he would ſecure to them an anſwer of peace to all their prayers, ver. 23—27. (4.) That he was now but returning to his Father, ver. 28—32. (5.) That whatever troubles they might meet with in this world by virtue of his victory over it, they ſhould be ſure of peace in him, ver. 33.

1. THESE things have I ſpoken unto you, that [a] ye ſhould not be offended. 2. [b] They ſhall put you out of the ſynagogues: yea, the time cometh, that whoſoever killeth you, will think that he doth God ſervice. 3. And [c] theſe things will they do unto you, becauſe they have not known the Father, nor me. 4. But [d] theſe things have I told you, that when the time ſhall come, ye may remember that I told you of them. And [e] theſe things I ſaid not unto you at the beginning, becauſe I was with you. 5. But [f] now I go my way to him that ſent me, and none of you aſketh me, Whither goeſt thou? 6. But becauſe I have ſaid theſe things unto you, [g] ſorrow hath filled your heart. 7. Nevertheleſs, I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away; for if I go not away, [h] the Comforter will not come unto you; but [i] if I depart, I will ſend him unto you. 8. And when he is come, he will † reprove the world of ſin, and of righteouſneſs, and of judgment: 9. [k] Of ſin, becauſe they believe not on me; 10. [l] Of righteouſneſs, becauſe I go to my Father, and ye ſee me no more; 11. [m] Of judgment, becauſe [n] the prince of this world is judged. 12. I have yet many things to ſay unto you, [o] but

[a] Mat. xi. 6.
[b] Chap. ix. 22, 34. & xii. 42.
[c] Mat. xxiv. 9. Chap. xv. 21. 1 Cor. ii. 8.
[d] Chap. xiii. 19. & xiv. 29.
[e] Mat. ix. 15.
[f] Chap. vii. 33. & xiv. 28. Ver. 10, 16.
[g] Chap. xiv. 1, 27.
[h] Chap. xiv. 16, 26. & xv. 26.
[i] Acts ii. 33. Eph. iv. 8.
† Or convince.
[k] Acts ii. 23—37. Rom. vii. 9.
[l] Dan. ix. 24. Rom. x. 4. or Luke xxiii. 47.
[m] John v. 22. or Mat. xii. 20. or Rev. xviii. 10. or Acts x. 42.
[n] Luke x. 18. Chap. xii. 31. Col. ii. 15. Heb. ii. 14.
[o] Mark iv. 43. Heb. v. 11.

but ye cannot bear them now. 13. Howbeit, when he [p] the Spirit of truth is come, [q] he will guide you into all truth: for he ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf; but whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak: and [r] he will ſhew you things to come. 14. He ſhall glorify me: for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. 15. [s] All things that the Father hath, are mine: therefore ſaid I, that he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you.

[p] Chap. xiv. 17.
[q] Ibid. 26. 1 John ii. 27.
[r] Acts xi. 28. & xxi. 11.
[s] Mat. xi. 27. Chap. iii. 35. & xvii. 10.

v. 1—15. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. Chriſt lets his diſciples know what they had to expect.

1. He tells them what they muſt expect, and warns them to prepare for it. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that ye ſhould not be offended, that you might not be diſcouraged by ſufferings, faint under the croſs, and deſert the path of duty. They ſhall put you out of the ſynagogues, excommunicate you from their ſociety, and aſſemblies for divine worſhip: yea, the time cometh, when, ſo infatuated and bloody will their perſecution be, that whoſoever killeth you, will think that he doth God ſervice. Note, (1.) The beſt friends of the church of Chriſt have often been branded by thoſe who pretend to be church-rulers as her worſt enemies. (2.) Blind bigotry raiſes the bittereſt perſecution; the blood of martyrs hath never flowed more liberally than by their hands, who murdered them as excommunicate hereticks in the name of the Lord.

2. He ſuggeſts the real cauſe of this treatment. Theſe things will they do unto you, becauſe they have not known the Father, nor me; though they may pretend the higheſt attainments of wiſdom and piety, and perſecute you as a ſet of poor illiterate deluded enthuſiaſts; yet they are ſunk in ſpiritual ignorance, which though no excuſe for their wickedneſs, is an argument for you to bear patiently with them, and to pity and pray for them.

3. He lets them know that he gave them theſe warnings for the confirmation of their faith in him, and to encourage them to bear up when the day of temptation came upon them. Theſe things have I told you, that when the time ſhall come, ye may remember that I told you of them, and have a freſh proof of my omniſcience and faithfulneſs to you. And theſe things I ſaid not unto you at the beginning, becauſe I was with you, to bear the chief burden myſelf, and to comfort and ſupport you. Note, Chriſt graciouſly proportions our trials to our ſtrength, and will never ſuffer us to be tempted above what he will enable us to bear.

4. He aſſures them, though he was going, and they were dejected, it would be abundantly for their good. But now I go my way to him that ſent me, and none of you aſketh me, Whither goeſt thou? Though they had aſked him with a temporal view, they had no apprehenſion that he was going to heaven, to prepare an abode for them in glory, and therefore did not purſue their enquiries. But becauſe I have ſaid theſe things unto you, of my departure, and your approaching troubles, ſorrow hath filled your heart, when you ought rather to rejoice. Nevertheleſs, I tell you the truth, greatly as you dread my going from you, it is expedient for you that I go away, and a kind father will give his children not what they fooliſhly wiſh, but what he knows will be beſt for them; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; ſuch being the decree of the moſt high: but if I depart, according to the eternal counſels, finiſhing my work, and entring into my glory, I will ſend him unto you, as the fruit of my death, and the effect of my interceſſion; and this would more than ſupply the loſs of his bodily preſence. Note, We are often melancholy, when we ought to rejoice; much readier to pore over our corruptions, and terrify ourſelves with the fear of our enemies, than to exult in the promiſes, and look up with confidence to Chriſt Jeſus; and this is diſhonourable to him, as uncomfortable to ourſelves.

5. He deſcribes the bleſſed work of the Spirit which he promiſes to ſend: When he is come, he ſhall convince the world of ſin, of righteouſneſs, and of judgment.

[1.] Of ſin; awakening the conſciences of many, both Jews and Gentiles, to a diſcovery of their native corruption, actual tranſgreſſions, exceeding ſinfulneſs, and liableneſs to the wrath of an offended God; eſpecially of the great ſin of unbelief, this being the damning iniquity, and the cauſe of ſinners deſtruction, becauſe they believe not in me for pardon, grace, life, and ſalvation; and under this view of themſelves, he lays them in the duſt of deepeſt abaſement.

[2.] Of righteouſneſs; of the perfect perſonal righteouſneſs of Jeſus, whom the Jews had ſo blaſphemed; and of the completeneſs of that everlaſting righteouſneſs which, as the mediator, he wrought out for miſerable ſinners, and to which the ſpirit directs the ſelf-deſpairing ſoul to look, as the grand foundation of hope towards God; becauſe I go to my Father, and ye ſee me no more; his exaltation to the right hand of God being the fulleſt token of his Father's approbation of him, and that he is well pleaſed for his righteouſneſs ſake; and therefore he was no more to appear in his preſent ſtate of humiliation, becauſe he had, to his Father's entire ſatisfaction, finiſhed the work he had given him to do.

[3.] Of judgment; that all power is given to Chriſt, in heaven and in earth, to ſanctify and renew the hearts of his people; and execute judgment upon all their enemies and his, the finally impenitent and obſtinate ſinners, becauſe the prince of this world, the devil, is judged; his power is broken, his kingdom deſtroyed; and whilſt the triumphs of a Redeemer's grace are now continually ſpreading through the earth in multitudes reſcued from the hands of this enemy, he and all his adherents ſhall ſhortly be brought to receive their final ſentence at the bar of this eternal judge; and wicked devils and wicked men together be caſt into the lake which burneth with fire and brimſtone, which is the ſecond death.

6. The Spirit ſhall wonderfully enlarge their underſtandings, and give them a clear inſight into many glorious truths, that as yet they did not fully apprehend. I have many things to ſay unto you, reſpecting the abolition of the Moſaical œconomy, the calling the Gentiles, the rejection of the Jews, &c. but ye cannot bear them now, through the deep rooted prejudices which ſtill held poſſeſſion of their hearts; bigotted to the ritual inſtitutions, and expecting a temporal kingdom. Howbeit, when he the Spirit of truth is come, then they ſhould be enabled to receive thoſe diſcoveries which they now could not bear; for he ſhall guide you into all truth; opening their underſtandings to underſtand the ſcripture, as an unerring guide leading them into the moſt explicit views of the goſpel-truths, and enabling them to ſpeak and act under his direction with infallible wiſdom: for he ſhall not ſpeak of himſelf, as a private perſon, or ſerving any intereſt merely his own, but, in exact correſpondence with Chriſt and the Father, whatſoever he ſhall hear, that ſhall he ſpeak, according to the eternal counſels of peace between them both, with which he is fully acquainted, ſearching the deep things of God, and he will ſhew you things to come; as a ſpirit of prophecy, enabling them to look into futurity, and make known to the church the things which in ſucceeding ages ſhould come to paſs, even to the end of time.

7. In all this work of the divine Spirit, his intention eminently is to glorify the Redeemer. He ſhall glorify me; all the gifts and graces he beſtows, and the miracles he enabled the apoſtles to perform, were deſigned to exalt Jeſus as the great Redeemer of men, and bear witneſs to his divine miſſion, for he ſhall receive of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. Chriſt hath obtained all bleſſings for us; the office of the Spirit is to apply them to our hearts, and put us in poſſeſſion of that pardon, righteouſneſs, adoption, comfort, grace, and glory, which he hath purchaſed by his obedience unto death in behalf of his people. All things that the Father hath, are mine; not only as we are one in nature, perfections, and unity of intereſts, but as all the bleſſings he deſigns for his choſen people, are lodged in my hands as mediator, therefore ſaid I, he ſhall take of mine, and ſhall ſhew it unto you. Spirit of truth and grace, apply theſe ineſtimable bleſſings to my ſoul!

16. [t] A little while and ye ſhall not ſee me: and again, a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me, becauſe I go to the Father. 17. Then ſaid ſome of his diſciples among themſelves, What is this that he ſaith unto us, A little while and ye ſhall not ſee me: and again, a little while and ye ſhall ſee me: and, Becauſe I go to the Father? 18. They ſaid therefore, What is this that he ſaith, A little while? we cannot tell what he ſaith. 19. Now Jeſus knew that they were deſirous to aſk him, and ſaid unto them, Do ye enquire among yourſelves of that I ſaid, A little while and ye ſhall not ſee me: and again, a little while and ye ſhall ſee me? 20. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, that [u] ye ſhall weep and lament, but the world ſhall rejoice: and ye ſhall be ſorrowful, but your ſorrow ſhall be turned into joy. 21. [x] A woman when ſhe is in travail, hath ſorrow, becauſe her hour is come: but as ſoon as ſhe is delivered of the child, ſhe remembreth no more the anguiſh, for joy that a man is born into the world. 22. And ye now therefore have ſorrow: but I will ſee you again, and [y] your heart ſhall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you.

[t] Chap. vii. 33. & xiii. 33. & xiv. 19.
[u] Luke xxiii. 27. & xxiv. 17. Ver. 22.
[x] Iſa. xxvi. 17.
[y] Luke xxiv. 41, 52. Ver. 20. Chap. xx. 20.

v. 16—22. To comfort his ſorrowful diſciples, the gracious Saviour ſuggeſts farther grounds of encouragement to them.

1. He promiſes them to viſit them again ſhortly. A little while and ye ſhall not ſee me, he ſhould be hid in the grave; and again, a little while, and ye ſhall ſee me, after my reſurrection, becauſe I go to the Father; to enter upon his glory, to appear in the preſence of God as his people's advocate, to take poſſeſſion of the purchaſed inheritance for them, and at laſt to bring them to be with him where he is.

2. Some of the diſciples, blinded with their national prejudices, and ſtupid with ſorrow, were at a loſs to comprehend his meaning; and repeating his words, enquired of one and other what they underſtood by them, and all confeſſed they knew not what he meant by a little while.

3. Chriſt, who knew the ſecrets of their hearts, and what was the ſubject of their whiſpers, prevented their enquiries by explaining the meaning of the little while he ſpoke of. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, that ye ſhall lament and weep at his ſufferings and death, with all the circumſtances of ignominy wherewith it would be attended; but the world ſhall rejoice, the wicked world: the ſcribes and rulers would triumph, as if they had obtained a compleat victory over him; and ye ſhall be ſorrowful; ſunk in deep dejection, their hopes ſwallowed up in deſpair; but your ſorrow ſhall be turned into joy; when ſeeing him ariſen from the dead they would triumph, fully aſſured of his being the Meſſiah: and with joy ſtill more unſpeakable and full of glory would they be filled, when, after beholding his aſcenſion into heaven, the Holy Ghoſt ſhould from on high be ſhed abroad in their hearts. Then all their pangs, like thoſe of a woman in travail, when her ſon is born, would be ſwallowed up and forgotten in the comfort which ſhould ſucceed, v. 21. Ye now therefore have ſorrow, becauſe I am leaving you; but I will ſee you again, certainly and ſhortly, and your heart ſhall rejoice, and your joy no man taketh from you; it will never again be interrupted by any more diſtreſs and fears, but continue permanent as the ſource from whence it flows. Note, (1.) Though we may ſometimes be in heavineſs, through manifold temptations, it is our comfort that we know our ſorrow will be momentary; but our joys, which ſhall ſucceed, eternal. (2.) The triumphing of the wicked is but for a moment, and muſt end in eternal diſappointment and miſery. (3.) Though children are certain cares, uncertain comforts, we naturally rejoice at their birth; but when we ſee what a world of ſin they are come into, and what ſnares are before them, we need tremble for them and pray, leaſt it ſhould be better for them they had never been born. (4.) In heaven all our ſorrows will be forgotten, and every tear wiped away from our eyes. Then ſhall we lament no more the abſence of Jeſus, but without interruption behold the beatific viſion. (5.) Chriſt hath ſpiritual joys to beſtow on his people, of which a malicious perſecuting world can never rob them.

23. And in that day ye ſhall aſk me nothing: Verily, verily I ſay unto you, [a] Whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the Father in my name, he will give it you. 24. Hitherto have ye aſked nothing in my name: aſk, and ye ſhall receive, [a] that your joy may be full. 25. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you in † proverbs: the time cometh when I ſhall no more ſpeak unto you in † proverbs, but I ſhall ſhew you plainly of the Father. 26. [b] At that day ye ſhall aſk in my name: and I ſay not unto you, that I will pray the Father for you: 27. For [c] the Father himſelf loveth you, becauſe ye have loved me, and [d] have believed that I came out from God. 28. [e] I came forth from the Father, and am come into the world: again, [f] I leave the world, and go to the Father. 29. His diſciples ſaid unto him, Lo, now ſpeakeſt thou plainly, and ſpeakeſt no proverb. 30. Now are we ſure that [g] thou knoweſt all things, and needeſt not that any man ſhould aſk thee: by this [h] we believe that thou cameſt forth from God. 31. Jeſus anſwered them, Do ye now believe? 32. [i] Behold, the hour cometh, yea, is now come, that ye ſhall be ſcattered [k] every man to his own, and ſhall leave me alone: and [l] yet I am not alone, becauſe the Father is with me. 33. Theſe things I have ſpoken unto you, that [m] in me ye might have peace. In the world ye ſhall have tribulation: but be of good cheer, [n] I have overcome the world.

[a] Mat. vii. 7. & xxi. 22. Chap. xiv. 13. & xv. 16. Jam. i. 5.

[a] Chap. xv. 11.

†† Or parables.

Ver. 19.

[b] Ver. 23.

[c] Chap. xiv. 21, 23.

[d] Ibid. iii. 13. & xvii. 18.

[e] Chap. xiii. 3.

[f] Chap. vii. 33. & xiv. 28. Ver. 5, 16.

[g] Chap. xxi. 17.

[h] Ibid. xvii. 8.

[i] Mat. xxvi. 31. Mark xiv. 27.

[k] Chap. xx. 10.

[l] Chap. viii. 29. & xiv. 10.

[m] Iſa. ix. 6. Chap. xiv. 27. Rom. v. 1. Eph. ii. 14. Col. i. 20.

[n] 1 John iv. 4. & v. 4.

v. 23—33. An anſwer to all their enquiries and prayers is promiſed them in that day, when under the Spirit's mighty influences, they ſhould in all things be taught and directed.

1. In that day ye ſhall aſk nothing, ſhall not need to make any farther enquiries about theſe things, concerning which you are now at a loſs, and which I have ſpoken unto you in proverbs; under ſimilitudes, in parables, and ſhort ſentences; and though ſufficiently plain, you, through your preſent prejudices and ſorrow, have not underſtood. The time cometh when I ſhall no more ſpeak unto you in proverbs, but I ſhall ſhew you plainly of the Father; make ſuch clear diſcoveries to your minds by my ſpirit, of the whole ſyſtem of goſpel-truths; of the divine perfections and perſonality of the Father; of his gracious deſigns towards his people; of the nature and end of all my ſufferings; and of the glory thence accruing to God, as will be perfectly ſatisfactory. Note, All the great and glorious truths of God's word are dark and unintelligible, till he is pleaſed by his Spirit to ſhine into our hearts, to give the light of the knowledge of his glory, and make us acquainted with the great myſteries of godlineſs.

2. All their prayers ſhall be anſwered. Verily, verily I ſay unto you, Whatſoever ye ſhall aſk the Father in my name, as your exalted Saviour and great high-prieſt, entered for you into heaven itſelf, and ever living to make interceſſion for you, he will give it you. Hitherto have ye aſked nothing in my name, nothing ſo great as they were now invited to do; or rather had not in their addreſſes to the Father made uſe of his mediation, or pleaded his blood and righteouſneſs as the ground of their hope: aſk, and ye ſhall receive, that your joy may be full; all that you can wiſh or deſire ſhall be granted, till the abundant joys of preſent grace and divine conſolations ſhall reach their perfection in eternal glory. At that day, when the ſpirit ſhall be poured out upon you, ye ſhall aſk in my name, with entire dependance on my atonement, and all-prevailing advocacy; and I ſay not unto you, I will pray the Father for you; not that he would ever ceaſe to intercede for them, but that the Father would be ready of himſelf to grant all their petitions: for the Father himſelf loveth you, is your friend and Father, and reconciled God, becauſe ye have loved me; this bleſſed effect produced on their hearts might aſſure them of the Father's love, which was the cauſe of it; and have believed that I came out from God, as the true Meſſiah, executing the divine commiſſion received from him. Note, (1.) What an encouragement have we to pray, when the promiſe is ſo full? All the bleſſings which, in humble dependance on our Jeſus, we can aſk, believing, we are ſure to receive. (2.) Nothing ſo directly tends to increaſe our ſpiritual comforts, as the abiding prayer of faith. (3.) God delights in thoſe whom Jeſus hath redeemed; and as he hath loved them with an everlaſting love, he will never ceaſe heaping upon them the conſtant gracious tokens of his regard, when they approach him as their reconciled God and Father in Jeſus Chriſt. (4.) True faith always works by fervent love; they who know Jeſus as their Saviour, cannot but feel their hearts drawn out towards him with enlarged affection, and ſhortly they ſhall be made perfect in love.

3. He ſums up plainly for their comfort all he had been ſaying to them. I came forth from the Father, where from everlaſting I am, and voluntarily ſubmitted to my preſent ſtate of humiliation: again, having finiſhed the work which was given me to do, and obtained the eternal redemption of my people, I leave the world, and go to my Father, to that eternal glory which I had with him before the worlds were. This therefore ſhould be matter of their joy, not ſorrow.

4. The diſciples now enlightened to underſtand his diſcourſe, with delight expreſs their ſatisfaction in what he had ſaid, and their entire faith in him as the true Meſſiah. Lo, now ſpeakeſt thou plainly, and ſpeakeſt no proverb; the meaning is no longer dark or doubtful. Now are we ſure that thou knoweſt all things, and needeſt not that any man ſhould aſk thee; we perceive thou art acquainted with our inmoſt thoughts, and canſt anſwer us, even before we have propoſed our queſtions: by this we believe that thou cameſt forth from God. Note, Truths, though plain, affect us not, till Chriſt ſpeaks to the ſoul; and then we wonder how we could have overlooked before what now we ſee ſo clearly.

5. Jeſus, who ſaw that their faith was leſs eſtabliſhed than they apprehended, warns them how ſoon it would be ſhaken. Do ye now believe? Behold, as a farther proof of my omniſcience, the hour cometh, yea, now is, the moment is at hand that I ſhall be betrayed into the hands of ſinners, and ye ſhall be ſcattered every man to his own, flying for ſafety to any friend's houſe that will conceal you, and ſhall leave me alone, in the power of my enemies: and yet I am not alone, becauſe the Father is with me; not only as one in nature, and in the inſeparable union of the godhead, but his gracious preſence would be with him, as Mediator, ſupporting him under all his ſufferings. Note, (1.) In trying times, many are apt to deſert the profeſſion they have made, unwilling to ſuffer for Chriſt and his cauſe. (2.) They who think that they do believe, muſt not be ſelf-confident: he that thinketh he ſtandeth, muſt take heed leaſt he fall. (3.) God never forſakes his afflicted people; when all the world, yea, their neareſt and deareſt friends deſert them, a ſenſe of his love, the light of his countenance, and his ſupporting preſence, will make them an abundant recompence for the loſs of all beſides.

6. For their comfort, he aſſures them, the iſſue of all their trials and his would be peace. Theſe things have I ſpoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace; whatever happened unto them, what he had ſpoken would afford them a ſufficient ground for their ſupport and comfort. In him, by faith in his perſon, and all-ſufficient ſacrifice and righteouſneſs, they would find ſuch a peace as the world never knew; beholding their ſins pardoned, and God reconciled to them; enjoying delightful communion with him; and amidſt all their trials, their ſouls kept ſerene and calm in the confidence of his power and grace to carry them through, and in the proſpect of the glory which ſhould be revealed in them. In the world ye ſhall have tribulation, you muſt expect and prepare for it; but be of good cheer, be confident of my power and grace, and courageouſly ſtand in the evil day, I have overcome the world; I have vanquiſhed the god of this world with all his wicked inſtruments, and have triumphed over every difficulty which ſtood in the way of your ſalvation; and you may comfortably be aſſured, through my grace and love, you alſo ſhall be made more than conquerors. Note, (1.) Every real chriſtian muſt expect his croſs, and prepare for tribulation; it is inſeparable from his profeſſion. (2.) No outward or inward troubles ſhould deject or diſhearten us; our Redeemer is mighty, yea, almighty to ſave. (3.) Peace in our conſciences is our privilege and portion if we do indeed belong to Chriſt; and uſually as our tribulations for Chriſt abound, our conſolations which are by him, abound alſo. (4.) The world, and the things of it, are great enemies to our ſouls, and the means which the devil employs to enſnare and deſtroy us; but Chriſt hath overcome for us, and he will, by his grace, overcome in us, till all our foes ſhall be made our footſtool.

CHAP. XVII.

This chapter is a prayer, the departing prayer of the Lord Jeſus Chriſt. Obſerve, 1. The circumſtances of the prayer, ver. 1. 2. The prayer itſelf. (1.) He prays for himſelf, ver. 1—5. (2.) He prays for thoſe that are his. And there ſee, [1.] The general pleas with which he introduceth his petitions for them, ver. 6—10. [2.] The particular petitions he puts up for them, 1. That they might be kept, ver. 11—16. 2. That they might be ſanctified, ver. 17—19. 3. That they might be united, ver. 11. and ver. 20—23. 4. That they might be glorified, ver. 24—26.

1. THESE words ſpake Jeſus; and lift up his eyes to heaven and ſaid, Father, [a] the hour is come;
[b] glorify thy Son, that thy Son alſo might glorify thee.
2. [c] As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life to as many [d] as thou haſt given him. 3. And [e] this is life eternal, that they may know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt [f] whom thou haſt ſent. 4. [g] I have glorified thee on the earth: [h] I have finiſhed the work [i] which thou gaveſt me to do.
5. And now, O Father, glorify thou with me with thine own ſelf, with the glory [k] which I had with thee before the world was.

[a] Chap. xii. 23. & xiii. 32.
[b] Chap. xiii. 31.
[c] Mat. xi. 27. & xxviii. 18. Chap. iii. 35. 1 Cor. xv. 25. Phil. ii. 10. Heb. ii. 8.
[d] Chap. vi. 37.
[e] Iſa. liii. 11. Jer. ix. 24.
[f] Chap. viii. 42. & x. 36.
[g] Chap. xiii. 32.
[h] Chap. xix. 30.
[i] Ibid. iv. 34. & xv. 10.
[k] Chap. i. 1, 2. & x. 30. & xiv. 9.

v. 1—5. Our Lord having finiſhed his farewel diſcourſe, cloſes it with a prayer; for thoſe whom we preach to, we ſhould pray for. He here recommends his redeemed to the care and keeping of the Father of mercies, and the bleſſed effects of it we continue to reap to this hour, and ſo ſhall all his church to the end of time.

1. He addreſſes his prayer to the Father, whom, as mediator and head of his church, he regarded as his ſuperior, and in whoſe love he herein expreſſes his confidence. He approaches him as a ſon with reverence and godly fear, lifting up his eyes to heaven, the place where he peculiarly manifeſts his tranſcendent glory. Note, (1.) The object of prayer is God only; and when we approach him, it muſt be as to our reconciled God and Father in Jeſus Chriſt. (2.) Chriſt lifted up his eyes to heaven to ſanctify this geſture to us, and to juſtify it againſt the ridicule of ſcoffers. (3.) None can poſſibly belong to Chriſt who do not ſhew, in a courſe of habitual and conſtant prayer, their dependance upon the Father of Mercies.

2. He prays for himſelf; that he may be glorified, and enabled, in the completion of the work he had undertaken, moſt eminently to exalt his Father's glory. Father, the hour is come, fixed in the eternal counſels for his death; and though it approached with horrors unſpeakable, he welcomed its arrival, becauſe he ſaw that the ſalvation of his people would be the happy fruit thereof: glorify thy Son; as man and Mediator, he looked for ſupport under his ſufferings, that ſome beams of glory might gild that gloomy ſcene; that triumphant over death and hell, he might riſe on the third day, aſcend into heaven, and ſit on the throne prepared for him; where angels, principalities, and powers, ſhould be made ſubject unto him: and from thence he ſhould ſend down his ſpirit effectually, to eſtabliſh his kingdom in the earth, and his judgments upon the Jewiſh people, deſtroying their city and nation; that thy Son alſo might glorify thee, by ſuffering in the ſtead of ſinners, and thereby bringing the higheſt glory to all the divine perfections; as alſo by the diſcharge of his mediatorial office when exalted to the throne of glory, by the miſſion of his ſpirit, and the miniſtry of his ſervants, his goſpel ſhould be ſpread abroad, and God's name made great among the heathen. Note, God's glory ſhould always be the great end we propoſe, in all our prayers and ſervices.

3. He pleads the covenant ſubſiſting between them, and the power with which, in conſequence thereof, he was inveſted, as the argument to enforce his requeſt. As thou haſt given him power over all fleſh, that he ſhould give eternal life to as many as thou haſt given him; all the concerns of fallen man were put into the Redeemer's hand; and in that peculiar remnant, who were to be the travel of his ſoul, was God peculiarly to be glorified. Note, (1.) Man in his fallen ſtate is become fleſh and not ſpirit, brutiſh in his appetites, paſſions, and purſuits. (2.) Chriſt hath all human affairs under his mediatorial government, and as ſuch is not only a King of ſaints, but a King of kings, and Lord of lords. He orders all the temporal affairs of men as ſhall be moſt ſubſervient to the ſalvation of his elect, and ſhall at laſt be the judge of quick and dead. (3.) Eternal life is the gift of Jeſus Chriſt; he hath purchaſed for his people the title to it; and hath, in virtue of his obedience unto death, a right to beſtow this ineſtimable privilege on the many ſons whom he will bring unto glory. May I be of that bleſſed number!

4. He explains wherein this eternal life conſiſts, and what is the way to it. This is life eternal, the earneſt, foretaſte, and aſſurance of it, to know thee the only true God, and Jeſus Chriſt whom thou haſt ſent; not a ſpeculative knowledge merely, but ſuch as engages fiducial confidence in God, as the only worthy object of our truſt and worſhip, in oppoſition to all idols; and ſuch a full perſuaſion of the divine miſſion of Jeſus, as leads us to him as the only Mediator between God and Man, and ſatisfies the ſoul in the clear views of his fulneſs and all-ſufficiency to ſave to the uttermoſt all who come to God by him.

5. He pleads what he had done to glorify God upon earth, as the reaſon and ground of his prayer and confidence, that the Father would glorify him with himſelf in heaven. I have glorified thee upon earth, in my doctrines, miracles, and life; I have finiſhed the work which thou gaveſt me to do; of perfect ſinleſs obedience to death, even the death of the croſs, for the redemption of ſinners. He was now on the very point of concluding his undertaking, and being fully purpoſed to go through with it, he ſpeaks of it as already accompliſhed. And now, O Father, glorify thou me with the glory which I had with thee before the world was. Having finiſhed his mediatorial work, he became intitled to the promiſed reward, and confidently expects to be exalted to the mediatorial throne; and to return to heaven again, there to make a diſplay of his own eternal and uncreated glory, which, during his humiliation, he ſuffered to be obſcured by the vail of fleſh. Note, (1.) The Redeemer's work is a finiſhed work; he hath left nothing for us to do; pardon, comfort, grace, glory, are effectually purchaſed, and his free gift to the miſerable and deſperate. (2.) They who by grace, through faith, are intereſted in this eternal redemption, having the ſame mind which was in Chriſt Jeſus, deſire to live only to glorify God upon earth.

6. I have manifeſted thy name unto the men [l] which thou gaveſt me out of the world: thine they were, and thou gaveſt them me; and they have kept thy word.
7. Now they have known that all things whatſoever thou haſt given me, are of thee. 8. For I have given unto them the words [m] which thou gaveſt me; and they have received them, and [n] have known ſurely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didſt ſend me. 9. I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which thou haſt given me, for they are thine. 10. And all mine are thine, and [o] thine are mine, and I am glorified in them.

[l] Chap. vi. 37. & x. 29. Ver. 9, 11, 24.
[m] Chap. viii. 28. & xii. 49. & xiv. 10.
[n] Chap. xvi. 27, 30.
[o] Chap. xvi. 15.

v. 6—10. Having offered up his prayer for himſelf, he proceeds to enlarge on the behalf of his apoſtles in particular, and the diſciples in general, who had heard and believed his word. I have manifeſted thy name unto the men which thou gaveſt me out of the world; have particularly revealed to them thy glorious perfections, and the eternal deſigns of grace diſplayed in my goſpel, foraſmuch as they were given to me in a diſtinguiſhing way from the reſt of mankind: thine they were, not only by creation as men, but by election, as choſen veſſels; and thou gaveſt them me, as the fruit of my travail, to be a peculiar people to me, favoured with my love, and under my eſpecial care; and they have kept thy word, embracing faithfully the doctrines which I have delivered unto them, publickly profeſſing, and zealouſly propagating the goſpel of the kingdom. Now, of late their minds have been more clearly enlightened, and they have known that all things whatſoever thou haſt given me, are of thee; that what I have taught them hath the ſeal of heaven upon it, and that I have acted in all things in perfect conformity as Mediator to the commiſſion I have received. For I have given unto them the words which thou gaveſt me; all the doctrines of goſpel-grace relative to men's everlaſting peace; how pardon, peace, righteouſneſs, and ſalvation may be attained by me, and they have received them, in the light and love of them, and have known ſurely that I came out from thee, and they have believed that thou didſt ſend me, as the promiſed and true Meſſiah, inveſted with divine authority to ſeek and ſave loſt ſouls, and to accompliſh the redemption of his people. I pray for them, that they may be preſerved and kept, and the begun work perfected in them; I pray not for the world in general, but for them which thou haſt given me; that remnant, according to the election of grace, for whoſe ſake particularly I became incarnate; for they are thine by eternal deſignation, and now by their own voluntary choice and ſurrender. And all mine are thine, and thine are mine; our intereſts are inſeparably the ſame, as we are one in nature, eſſence, and operation, and the redeemed are alike indebted to both for all the bleſſings of the covenant of grace; and I am glorified in them, in their complete redemption; and by their faith, love, worſhip, and obedience here below, as I ſhall be the object of their eternal praiſes in glory everlaſting. From whence we learn, (1.) That the redemption, which is by Chriſt Jeſus, extends not univerſally to every particular of mankind, but is confined to thoſe whom the Father hath given him out of the world. (2.) Thoſe for whom Chriſt doth not pray are called the world, as all their joys, deſires, purſuits, and aims, center in worldly things. They live after the faſhion of the world, and will be condemned with the world. (3.) Chriſt's undertaking was not uncertain reſpecting its ſucceſs: he knew that thoſe whom the Father had given him would come to him; and they can never periſh whoſe intereſts are lodged in his hands. (4.) Keeping Chriſt's word, holding faſt his doctrine, and adorning it by a good converſation, is the ſubſtantial evidence of our belonging to him. (5.) The ſtudy and delight of every redeemed ſoul is to exalt the name of Jeſus, and to aſcribe entirely to him the glory of that rich, full, and free ſalvation, of which he hath made them partakers.

11. And now I am no more in the world, but theſe are in the world, and I come to thee. Holy Father, [p] keep through thine own name thoſe whom thou haſt given me, [q] that they may be one, [r] as we are. 12. While I was with them in the world, [s] I kept them in thy name: thoſe that thou gaveſt me I have kept, and [t] none of them is loſt, [u] but the ſon of perdition: [x] that the ſcripture might be fulfilled. 13. And now come I to thee, and [y] theſe things I ſpeak in the world, that thay might have my joy fulfilled in themſelves. 14. [z] I have given them thy word; and [a] the world hath hated them, becauſe [b] they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world. 15. I pray not that thou ſhouldeſt take them out of the world, but [c] that thou ſhouldeſt keep them from the evil. 16. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.

[p] 1 Pet. i. 5. Jude 1.
[q] Ver. 21, &c.
[r] Chap. x. 30.
[s] Chap. vi. 39. & x. 28. Heb. ii. 13.
[t] Chap. xviii. 9. 1 John ii. 19.
[u] Chap. vi. 70. & xiii. 18.
[x] Pſ. cix. 8.
[y] Chap. xv. 11.
[z] Ver. 8.
[a] Chap. xv. 18, 19.
[b] Ver. 16.
[c] Mat. vi. 13. Gal. i. 4. 2 Theſ. iii. 4. 1 John v. 18, 19.

v. 11—16. Our Lord proceeds in his prayer for his dear diſciples, whom he was going to leave, and therefore, as man and mediator, commends them to his Father's care and keeping. And now I am no more in the world, ready to depart, and return to my radiant throne in glory; but theſe are in the world, left to conflict a while with temptations, corruptions, afflictions, perſecutions; and I am going from them, ſo that they will be deprived of the comfort of my bodily preſence, when I come to thee. Holy Father, eſſentially holy in thyſelf, and the Author and Source of all holineſs to thy creatures; keep, through thine own name, thoſe whom thou haſt given me; by thy almighty power, and for thy own glory, preſerve them from ſinking under their trials; ſtrengthen them againſt their ſpiritual foes, Satan, the world, and ſin; keep them by thy grace, till thou ſhalt bring them to thy glory; that they may be one as we are, united in affection and labours, and having the ſame intereſts and deſigns. While I was with them in the world, I kept them in thy name from apoſtacy, according to the commiſſion with which I was inveſted, and by the influences of thy grace: thoſe that thou gaveſt me to be my apoſtles, I have kept in the faith and hope of the goſpel, unmoved; and none of them is loſt, and left to periſh, but the ſon of perdition, that traitor Judas, who was from the beginning a child of the devil; that the ſcripture might be fulfilled, Pſalm xli. 9. cix. 8. And now come I to thee, having finiſhed my work, and returning to my glorious reſt: and theſe things I ſpeak in the world, and offer theſe requeſts on their behalf, that they might have my joy fulfilled in themſelves, happy in the preſent experience of my love; in the quickening, guiding, and comforting influences of my Spirit; and in the hope inſpired by the great and precious promiſes that are in me; ſo that their joys on earth may increaſe, and be growing up to perfection in heaven. I have given them thy word, have put them in truſt with thy goſpel, and furniſhed them with gifts to publiſh it through the world; and, becauſe they have embraced the truth, and boldly confeſſed it, the world hath hated them, unable to bear the reproofs of their preaching and practice; becauſe they are not of the world, in their principles, tempers, and conduct, oppoſite to the carnal minds and converſation of natural and ſenſual men, who mind earthly things; as I am not of the world; and my example and doctrine have they faithfully obſerved. I pray not that thou ſhouldeſt take them out of the world, deliver them at once from all the power of their enemies, and put an immediate period to all their trials and troubles; but that thou ſhouldeſt keep them from the evil, ſupporting them under all their ſufferings, preſerving them from falling into ſin, and bruiſing the wicked one, Satan, under their feet; thus cauſing them to triumph over all oppoſition. They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world; therefore they will be ſore thruſt at, as I have been: and, as thou haſt ſupported me, let them experience the like protection, and ſhare thy care and love. Note, (1.) The proſpect of going to be with God in glory cannot but make it pleaſing to quit a world of wretchedneſs: the hour of our diſmiſſion will be the beginning of our endleſs felicity. (2.) It is a pleaſing, comforting conſideration, that our ſtability depends not upon ourſelves, but is ſecured by the divine grace and faithfulneſs: they muſt needs be ſafe kept, whom God keeps. (3.) The world is the Chriſtian's grand enemy; and the victory that overcometh it is our faith; and this is the gift of God. (4.) Chriſt's people have work to do for him in the world; and, however deſireable it is to be with him, they muſt not be in haſte to go before his time; but patiently take up their croſs, fight the good fight, and hope unto the end. (5.) No man's profeſſion, privileges, gifts, or apparent attainments, where the heart is not right with God, will ſtand him in any ſtead: when the hour of trial comes, he will be proved, like Judas, a ſon of perdition. (6.) The Lord will have his diſciples walk joyfully, not mournfully, before him; and he hath for this end left us the exceeding great and precious promiſes, and ever lives to make interceſſion for us. (7.) The faithful ſervants of Jeſus, who keep his word, and refuſe to be conformed to the ways and manners of this wicked world, may expect to be hated by thoſe, againſt whom their words and works cannot but teſtify that their deeds are evil.

17. [d] Sanctify them through thy truth: [e] Thy word is truth. 18. [f] As thou haſt ſent me into the world, even ſo have I alſo ſent them into the world. 19. And [g] for their ſakes I ſanctify myſelf, that they alſo might be † ſanctified through the truth.

[d] Chap. xv. 3. Acts xv. 9. Eph. v. 26. 1 Pet. i. 22.
[e] 2 Sam. vii. 28. Pſ. cxix. 151. Chap. viii. 40.
[f] Chap. xx. 21.
[g] 1 Cor. i. 2, 30. Heb. ix. 14. & x. 10.
† Or truly ſanctified.

v. 17—19. Our Lord had before prayed for his diſciples preſervation; here he prays for their ſanctification.

Sanctify them through thy truth; conſecrate them for their ſacred office, and let them be under the powerful influences of thy word and Spirit, that in their own ſouls they may experience increaſing purity, and be enabled for the propagation of the truth of the goſpel through the world: thy word is truth, infallibly certain in itſelf, and the great means of purifying the heart. As thou haſt ſent me into the world, even ſo ſend I them, with the ſame goſpel, and on the ſame errand, to advance thy glory, and promote the ſalvation of immortal ſouls. And for their ſakes I ſanctify myſelf, am now ready to offer up myſelf a ſacrifice, and to enter on my mediatorial office in glory, as their great High-prieſt, to be their eternal Advocate; that they alſo, in virtue of my interceſſion for them, and by the miſſion of the Holy Ghoſt into their hearts, might be ſanctified through thy truth, enabled for the practice of all true godlineſs, and, poſſeſſed of the knowledge of the glorious goſpel, may be ſtrengthened and made ſucceſsful in propagating the glad tidings to the ends of the earth. Note, (1.) All Chriſt's people are made partakers of true holineſs: he ſaves none whom he does not ſanctify. (2.) What was his prayer for us, muſt be ours daily for ourſelves, that God would carry on the bleſſed work of his grace upon our hearts, and perfect that which he hath begun. (3.) The word of God is the great means of our ſanctification, and by it, thro' the quickening influences of the Holy Ghoſt, are we enabled to grow up into him in all things who is our head, even Chriſt. (4.) The miniſters of Jeſus are his peculiar concern, and they who are truly his, prove it by the practical influence his word hath on their own hearts, and the zeal with which they preach the truth to others. (5.) They who go into the miniſtry under a divine miſſion and call, may confidently expect the divine aſſiſtance and bleſſing. (6.) All that Chriſt did and ſuffered was for our benefit and advantage; and as the merit is transferred to us, if we are by faith united to him, we may confidently expect the reward, in preſent grace and future glory.

20. Neither pray I for theſe alone, but for them alſo which ſhall believe on me through their word: 21. [h] That they all may be one, as [i] thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee: that they alſo may be one in us; that the world may believe that thou haſt ſent me. 22. And the glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them: [k] that they may be one, even as we are one. 23. I in them, and thou in me, [l] that they may be made perfect in one, and that the world may know that thou haſt ſent me, and haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me.

[h] Ver. 11, 22, 23. Rom. xii. 5. Gal. iii. 28.
[i] Chap. x. 38. & xiv. 11.
[k] Chap. xiv. 20.
[l] Col. iii. 14.

v. 20—23. Chriſt's prayer terminates not merely in requeſts for his diſciples of that day, but includes all his redeemed to the lateſt ages.

Neither pray I for theſe alone, my firſt miniſters and apoſtles, but for them alſo which ſhall believe on me through their word, in all ſucceeding generations; that they all may be one in faith and love, by the preaching of the goſpel collected together, and united in one body under the ſame living head; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee; that they alſo may be one in us, animated by the ſame ſpirit; one in judgment, diſpoſition, deſigns, deſires, and admitted into the neareſt fellowſhip with the Father and his Son Jeſus Chriſt; that the world may believe that thou haſt ſent me, beholding the powerful effects of my grace upon them: and the glory which thou gaveſt me, I have given them; either the goſpel, with all its ineſtimable bleſſings; or the grace and glory which he, as the great covenant-head of his people, hath obtained in order to beſtow upon them; that they may be one, even as we are one, in ſtricteſt and moſt inſeparable union with us and with each other through the ſame Spirit: I in them, as the head of vital influence to them; and thou in me, by thy Spirit given without meaſure unto me; that they may be made perfect in one, attaining to the higheſt perfection of which their nature is capable in eternal glory; and that the world may know that thou haſt ſent me, convinced by the preſent power of thy grace, diſplayed in their concord, unity, and mutual love; or beyond doubt aſſured of my divine character, when they ſhall be glorified together with me. And it ſhall then appear that thou haſt loved them, as thou haſt loved me, when they are made kings and prieſts, and ſhall reign with us for ever and ever. Note, (1.) The miniſtry of the word is the great inſtrument Chriſt is pleaſed to make uſe of, in order to beget faith in the ſouls of his redeemed people; and to as many as he will call, and for whom he prays, it will be certainly effectual. (2.) All true Chriſtians are one in Chriſt Jeſus: he is their living head: they are by faith and love united to him, and joined in one ſpirit to each other; and what is now begun in grace ſhall be ſhortly compleated in glory. (3.) They who are one with Chriſt, ſprinkled with his blood, cloathed with his righteouſneſs, and joined to him in one ſpirit, are complete in him, and as ſuch cannot but be the objects of the ſame love as God the Father ſhewed to him the Mediator. (4.) They who deſpiſe, inſult, and ridicule the followers of Jeſus, will ſhortly be convinced, to their confuſion, how highly they are, and ſhall be to eternity, the objects of his love.

24. [m] Father, I will that they alſo whom thou haſt given me, be with me where I am; that they may behold my glory which thou haſt given me: for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world. 25. O righteous Father, [n] the world hath not known thee; but [o] I have known thee, and [p] theſe have not known that thou haſt ſent me. 26. And I have declared unto them thy name, and will declare it: [q] that the love wherewith thou haſt loved me, may be in them, and I in them.

[m] Chap. xii. 26. & xiv. 3. 1 Theſ. iv. 17.
[n] Chap. xv. 21. & xvi. 3.
[o] Chap. vii. 29. & viii. 55. & x. 15.
[p] Ver. 8. Chap. xvi. 27.
[q] Chap. xv. 9.

v. 24—26. Our Lord here concludes his prayer for his dear people, with the moſt comfortable aſſurance of their everlaſting bleſſedneſs being ſecured to them.

Father, I will that they alſo, whom thou haſt given me, all my redeemed, be with me where I am. It is my demand, and I claim it as my right, that they be brought to my eternal kingdom, and may behold my glory which thou haſt given me, transformed into the ſame image, adoring and rejoicing; for thou lovedſt me before the foundation of the world, and therefore wilt grant all my requeſts. O righteous Father, whoſe decrees are juſt, and whoſe promiſes are all faithful and true; the world hath not known thee, thy perfections, counſels, or deſigns; but I have known thee moſt intimately and perfectly; and theſe my preſent apoſtles and diſciples have known that thou haſt ſent me, the promiſed Meſſiah. And I have declared unto them thy name, thy nature, attributes, and deſigns of grace according to the everlaſting covenant; and will declare it, by farther diſcoveries to them of thy mind and will, after my reſurrection, and by the miſſion of the Spirit; that the love wherewith thou haſt loved me may be in them, and they, knowing it, may, by experience of the ſame love, be made unutterably bleſſed and happy; and I in them, taking up my reſidence in their hearts, and thus preparing them for and bringing them to the fruition of the eternal felicity provided for them before the foundation of the world. Note, (1.) Chriſt's interceſſion is not uncertain in its effect; but what he aſks muſt be granted, ſince he claims only what he is intitled to. Father, I will. (2.) All Chriſt's people muſt be with him where he is; and in his preſence is the fulneſs of joy. (3.) The world lieth in ignorance and wickedneſs: happy are they who are enlightened by Jeſus, and called out of the world. (4.) God loves his people with an everlaſting love; and a ſenſe of this ſhed abroad in the heart is heaven begun. (5.) Where Chriſt now dwelleth in the hearts of his people by faith and love, they have an earneſt of the eternal glory which ſhall be revealed in them when they come to dwell with him in heaven.

CHAP. XVIII.

This chapter relates, 1. How Chriſt was arreſted in the garden, and ſurrendered himſelf a priſoner, ver. 1—12. 2. How he was abuſed in the high-prieſt's court, and how Peter in the mean time denied him, ver. 13—27. 3. How he was proſecuted before Pilate, ver. 28—40.

1. WHEN Jeſus had ſpoken theſe words, [a] he went forth with his diſciples over [b] the brook Cedron, where was a garden, into the which he entered, and his diſciples. 2. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, knew the place: for [c] Jeſus oft-times reſorted thither with his diſciples. 3. [d] Judas then having received a band of men, and officers from the chief-prieſts and Phariſees, cometh thither with lanterns, and torches, and weapons. 4. Jeſus therefore knowing all things that ſhould come upon him, went forth, and ſaid unto them, Whom ſeek ye? 5. They anſwered him, Jeſus of Nazareth. Jeſus ſaith unto them, † I am he. And Judas alſo which betrayed him, ſtood with them. 6. As ſoon then as he had ſaid unto them, I am he, [e] they went backward and fell to the ground. 7. Then aſked he them again, Whom ſeek ye? and they ſaid, Jeſus of Nazareth. 8. Jeſus anſwered, I have told ye that I am he. If therefore ye ſeek me, let theſe go their way: 9. That the ſaying might be fulfilled which he ſpake, [f] Of them which thou gaveſt me, have I loſt none. 10. [g] Then Simon Peter having a ſword, drew it, and [h] ſmote the high-prieſt's ſervant, and cut off his right ear. The ſervant's name was Malchus. 11. Then ſaid Jeſus unto Peter, Put up thy ſword into the ſheath: [i] the cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? 12. Then the band, and the captain, and officers of the Jews [k] took Jeſus, and bound him. 13. And led him away to [l] Annas firſt (for he was father-in-law to Caiaphas, which was the high-prieſt that ſame year). 14. Now [m] Caiaphas was he which gave counſel to the Jews, that it was expedient that one man ſhould die for the people.

[a] Mat. xxvi. 36. Mark xiv. 32. Luke xxii. 39.
[b] 2 Sam. xv. 23.
[c] Luke xxi. 37. & xxii. 39.
[d] Mat. xxvi. 47. Mark xiv. 43. Luke xxii. 47. Acts i. 16.
† Gr. I am. Ex. iii. 14.
[e] Pſ. xxii. 12.
[f] Chap. xvii. 12.
[g] Mat. xxvi. 51. Mark xiv. 47. Luke xxii. 50.
[h] Rom. xii. 19.
[i] Mat. xx. 22. & xxvi. 39, 42.
[k] Lam. iv. 20. Acts ii. 23.
[l] Luke iii. 2.
[m] Chap. xi. 50.

v. 1—14. His hour being come, the Son of man ſurrenders himſelf into the hands of his enemies, having firſt given them a demonſtration both of his power and his grace.

1. Having finiſhed his diſcourſe, he retired over the brook Cedron to the garden whither he was wont to reſort with his diſciples, a place the traitor Judas well knew, and which he judged the moſt convenient to betray him. A garden was the ſcene of the firſt man's rebellion and apoſtacy, and in a garden the atoning ſufferings of the ſecond man, the Lord from heaven, began.

2. Judas, having laid the plot with the chief-prieſts and Phariſees, now got a band of ſoldiers, together with the ſervants and officers of theſe inveterate enemies of Jeſus, with whom alſo ſome of their maſters went themſelves, to make ſure of their prey; and, as it was night, they took lanterns and torches, as well as weapons, that they might ſearch him out; and, if any reſiſtance was made, overpower his few diſciples. Jews and Gentiles concur in bringing him to the accurſed tree, who was ordained to reconcile both to God by the blood of his croſs.

3. Jeſus, far from declining to meet them, or ſeeking to eſcape the danger, goes forth to meet them. He knew what was coming upon him: he had undertaken to ſuffer; and therefore, having aſked their buſineſs, and being informed by them that they ſought Jeſus of Nazareth, not aſhamed of that reproachful name, he ſaith, I am he, readily offering himſelf to them, Judas the traitor being at their head. Note, (1.) When duty calls, no danger muſt deter us from appearing boldly and openly for Chriſt. (2.) We muſt not be aſhamed of any reproachful name which for the ſake of Jeſus we are called to bear. His reproach is our real honour. (3.) It is a dreadful change to ſee the man, who was once numbered among the diſciples, herding with enemies and perſecutors.

4. Wonderfully powerful was the word of Jeſus. No ſooner had he uttered it, than, ſtruck by an unſeen hand, they went backward and fell to the ground. He that laid them thus low could in an inſtant have laid them lower in the belly of hell; but this was the day of his patience, and therefore, though he would give them an evidence of his power, he will yet give them ſpace to repent.

5. Once more he aſks them whom they ſought, if they dared perſiſt in their atrocious deſigns; and they, with hardened obſtinacy, anſwered, Jeſus of Nazareth. He mildly replied, I have told you I am he, ready to yield up himſelf, but deſirous to ſecure his diſciples from danger; if therefore ye ſeek me, let theſe go their way, do them no harm: and this he ſaid with reference to a late declaration he had made, of them whom thou gaveſt me I have loſt none, and by his preſent protection of them gave them an earneſt of the fulfilment of all the other promiſes which he had made to them. Note, (1.) Hearts hardened in ſin will be reſtrained by no warnings, nor checked by any providences, but ruſh madly on to ruin. (2.) Chriſt knows how to ſuit our trials to our ſtrength, and will not ſuffer his diſciples to be tempted above what he knows they are able to bear. (3.) He who gave himſelf to bear our ſins, hath by his bonds obtained our diſcharge. The juſtice of God hath no more demands, nor need we fear the penalty of a broken law. He hath purchaſed, by the offering of his own body, eternal redemption for us. (4.) None can be finally loſt whom Chriſt hath undertaken to ſave.

6. Peter, fired at what he ſaw, immediately drew his ſword, and, in the heat of inconſiderate raſhneſs, ſmote a domeſtick of the high-prieſt, whoſe name was Malchus, and cut off his ear. But Jeſus, diſpleaſed at this unſeaſonable zeal, bids him ſheath the ſword, and urges as a reaſon, the cup which my Father hath given me, ſhall I not drink it? His reſolution was fixed, his ſufferings neceſſary, and, whatever power he was poſſeſſed of to reſcue himſelf from his enemies, he freely reſigned himſelf into their hands, to do with him according to the determinate counſel and foreknowledge of God. Note, (1.) They who are moſt haſty in their zeal are not always moſt ſteady in their ſervice. Of this, Peter's deſertion and conduct afford a ſufficient proof. (2.) Chriſt's cauſe is not to be maintained by the ſword. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but ſpiritual, and by our meekneſs we ſhould ſeek to diſarm the madneſs of our foes.

7. The ſoldiers, with the officers of the Jews, therefore now ſeized and bound the voluntary priſoner, and, as a criminal, ſhamefully dragged him through the ſtreets to the palace of Annas, the father-in-law of Caiaphas the high-prieſt that year; ſuch ſad and frequent changes were now made in that high office. This Caiaphas it was, who in a former debate had ſhewed his inveterate enmity againſt Chriſt, and determined, right or wrong, that it was better to put him to death than provoke the Romans to deſtroy the nation, as he apprehended would be the conſequence, if Jeſus were ſuffered to ſet up himſelf as the Meſſiah. Note, (1.) The bonds of Chriſt are ſignificant. He was bound with cords, that we might be looſed from the chains of our ſins, and that henceforth his conſtraining love might effectually bind our hearts to him in cords of gratitude, which never ſhould be broken. (2.) If we are in bonds for Chriſt, it will reconcile us to ſuffer joyfully, when we reflect that he was firſt bound for us. (3.) If one man, Chriſt Jeſus, had not died for the ſins of his people, they muſt have periſhed everlaſtingly.

15. ¶ And [n] Simon Peter followed Jeſus, and ſo did another diſciple. That diſciple was known unto the high prieſt, and went in with Jeſus into the palace of the high prieſt. 16. [o] But Peter ſtood at the door without. Then went out that other diſciple which was known unto the high prieſt, and ſpake unto her that kept the door, and brought in Peter. 17. Then ſaith the damſel that kept the door unto Peter, Art not thou alſo one of this man's diſciples? He ſaith, I am not. 18. And the ſervants and officers ſtood there, who had made a fire of coals, (for it was cold) and they warmed themſelves: and Peter [p] ſtood with them, and warmed himſelf. 19. ¶ The high prieſt then aſked Jeſus of his diſciples, and of his doctrine. 20. Jeſus anſwered him, [q] I ſpake openly to the world; I ever taught in the ſynagogue and in the temple, whither the Jews always reſort, and in ſecret have I ſaid nothing. 21. Why aſkeſt thou me? aſk them which heard me, what I have ſaid unto them: behold, they know what I ſaid. 22. And when he had thus ſpoken, one of the officers which ſtood by, [r] ſtruck Jeſus † with the palm of his hand, ſaying, Anſwereſt thou the high prieſt ſo? 23. Jeſus anſwered him, If I have ſpoken evil, bear witneſs of the evil: but if well, why ſmiteſt thou me? 24. [s] (Now Annas had ſent him bound unto Caiaphas the high prieſt). 25. And Simon Peter ſtood and warmed himſelf: [t] They ſaid therefore unto him, Art not thou alſo one of his diſciples? He denied, and ſaid, I am not. 26. One of the ſervants of the high prieſt (being his kinſman whoſe ear Peter cut off) ſaith, Did not I ſee thee in the garden with him? 27. Peter then denied again, and immediately [u] the cock crew.

[n] Mat. xxvi. 58. Mark xiv. 54. Luke xxii. 54.
[o] Mat. xxvi. 69.
[p] Pſ. i. 1.
[q] Chap. vii. 26.
[r] Jer. xx. 2. Acts xxiii 2.
† Or with a rod.
[s] Mat. xx. 57.
[t] Mat. xxvi. 69, 71. Mark xiv. 69. Luke xxii. 58.
[u] Chap. xiii. 38.

v. 15—27. Annas, highly approving the deed, and confirming them in their purpoſe, ſoon diſpatched the innocent priſoner to Caiaphas, to be condemned. Perhaps his age prevented him from attending in the council; but he wiſhed them to proceed, and would give his ſanction to their proſecution. We have an account of what paſſed in the high-prieſt's palace.

1. Peter denies his Maſter the firſt time.

(1.) He followed at a diſtance to the door of the palace, his courage having ſomewhat revived, and his curioſity being ſtrong to ſee what would be the iſſue of the matter. Thus unneceſſarily he ran into temptation, and no good can then be expected from him. We have no promiſe of protection, when we wilfully thruſt ourſelves into danger.

(2.) A diſciple, who was known to the high-prieſt, ſeeing Peter at the gate, let him in. Some have ſuppoſed this was John, who in ſome other parts of this goſpel thus modeſtly ſuppreſſes his own name: but it rather ſeems improbable that a poor fiſherman of Galilee ſhould have ſuch an acquaintance as Caiaphas; and with much more probability the perſon ſpoken of was of thoſe chief rulers who believed on Jeſus, but dared not confeſs him for fear of the Jews. But what was intended as a kindneſs really proved a ſnare; ſo often are we hurt by the miſguided affection of our real friends.

(3.) The firſt and feebleſt attack quite diſconcerted the ſelf-confident diſciple. A ſervant girl, that kept the door, obſerving probably his dejected looks, and recollecting his countenance among the followers of Jeſus, charged him as this man's diſciple, which he inſtantly denied; and, as if to avoid every ſuſpicion of belonging to Chriſt, he joined the ſervants and officers, who, it being cold, and at night, had kindled a fire in the hall, and warmed themſelves. Note, (1.) We know not how weak we are till we are tried. (2.) They who mix with vain and worldly company, to avoid the imputation of being over-righteous, will uſually, if there be any ſenſibility remaining in their conſciences, pierce themſelves through with many ſorrows.

2. Whilſt Peter, inſtead of appearing in behalf of his Maſter, was baſely denying him, the high-prieſt began to interrogate Jeſus concerning his diſciples and his doctrine, hoping to find ſome charge of ſedition or blaſphemy whereon to ground an accuſation againſt him.

3. Chriſt appeals to all who had heard him preach, for an anſwer to his interrogatories. If he had done or taught any thing criminal, there could be no want of witneſs, when many then preſent had often heard him, and knew the doctrines which he taught. He ever ſpake freely, boldly, and openly, preaching in the ſynagogues, the places of chief reſort; and he advanced nothing in private different from what he avowed publickly, nor wiſhed to conceal his ſentiments from the world, but to make all men know the truth. Note, Truth neither needs nor ſeeks the covert; and God's miniſters muſt boldly, openly, and uniformly declare their meſſage to the world, whether men will hear, or whether they will forbear.

4. Juſt and mild as Chriſt's anſwer was to a queſtion ſo malicious and captious, an inſolent officer, who ſtood by, ſtruck the innocent priſoner with his hand or his ſtaff, and haughtily ſuggeſts as if his anſwer to the high-prieſt was unbecoming. He knew, however infamous ſuch behaviour was, his maſter would countenance it, and that his inſolence would recommend him. When rulers are wicked, their ſervants will readily imitate their ill examples; and the inſults of ſuch objects are peculiarly bitter. But to this, for our ſakes, the Son of God ſubmitted, and thus fulfilled the Scriptures, Iſa. l. 6. Mic. v. 1.

5. Chriſt, with aſtoniſhing patience, inſtead of ſtriking him dead, meekly replied, If I have ſpoken evil, now, or at any other time, bear witneſs of the evil before the court; but if well, and I have ſpoken nothing juſtly blameable, why ſmiteſt thou me? Note, (1.) When we are ſuffering, however unjuſtly, we muſt in our patience poſſeſs our ſouls, and neither entertain undue reſentment nor fly into a rage. (2.) Mild remonſtrances, not railing accuſations, become the children of God.

6. A ſecond time Peter is beſet, and falls. As he ſtood at the fire, ſome who ſtood by challenged him again as a follower of Jeſus: and now, ſunk under temptation, he repeats the ſhameful lie, I am not. Note, (1.) They who are fallen under one temptation feel themſelves leſs able to reſiſt the next. (2.) Many who make confident profeſſion, when the cauſe of Chriſt flouriſhes, ſoon diſown and renounce it, when called to ſuffer ſhame for his ſake.

7. One of the by-ſtanders, a relation of him whoſe ear Peter had cut off, hearing him ſo ſtoutly deny all connection with Jeſus, on obſerving him attentively recollected his face, and urged the queſtion ſtronger upon him, Did not I ſee thee in the garden with him? So cloſe an attack more ſadly diſconcerted the unhappy diſciple, and urged him the more ſolemnly to repeat his denial: and immediately the cock crew. Note, (1.) Every ſin hardens the heart, and naturally paves the way for a greater. (2.) The ſlighteſt incidents of Providence, which others diſregard, God can make to us a moſt alarming call.

28. ¶ [x] Then led they Jeſus from Caiaphas, unto † the hall of judgment: and [y] it was early, and they themſelves went not into the judgment-hall, [z] leſt they ſhould be defiled: but that they might eat the paſſover. 29. Pilate then went out unto them, and ſaid, What accuſation bring you againſt this man? 30. They anſwered and ſaid unto him, If he were not a malefactor, we would not have delivered him up unto thee. 31. Then Pilate ſaid unto them, Take ye him and judge him according to your law. The Jews therefore ſaid unto him, [a] It is not lawful for us to put any man to death: 32. That [b] the ſaying of Jeſus might be fulfilled, which he ſpake, ſignifying what death he ſhould die. 33. [c] Then Pilate entred into the judgment-hall again, and called Jeſus, and ſaid unto him, Art thou the king of the Jews? 34. Jeſus anſwered him, Sayeſt thou this thing of thyſelf, or did others tell it thee of me? 35. Pilate anſwered, Am I a Jew? Thine own nation, and the chief prieſts have delivered thee unto me: What haſt thou done? 36. [d] Jeſus anſwered, [e] My kingdom is [x] Mat. xxvii. 2. Mark xv. 1. Luke xxiii. 1.

† i. e. Pilate's houſe.
[y] Prov. iv. 16. Mic. ii. 1.
[z] Mat. xxiii. 24.
[a] Gen. xlix. 10.
[b] Mat. xx. 19. Chap. xii. 32.
[c] Mat. xxvii. 11.
[d] 1 Tim. vi. 13.
[e] Luke xii. 14. Chap. vi. 15. & viii. 15.

is not of this world: if my kingdom were of this world, then would my ſervants fight, that I ſhould not be delivered to the Jews: but now is my kingdom not from hence. 37. Pilate therefore ſaid unto him, Art thou [f] a king then? Jeſus anſwered, Thou ſayeſt that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cauſe came I into the world, that I ſhould bear witneſs unto the truth. [g] Every one that is of the truth, heareth my voice. 38. Pilate ſaith unto him, What is truth? And when he had ſaid this, he went out again unto the Jews, and ſaith unto them, [h] I find in him no fault at all. 39. But ye have a cuſtom, that I ſhould releaſe unto you one at the paſſover: will ye therefore that I releaſe unto you the king of the Jews? 40. Then [i] cried they all again, ſaying, Not this man, but Barabbas. [k] Now Barabbas was a robber.

[f] 1 Tim. i. 17.
[g] 1 John iii. 19. & iv. 6.
[h] Mat. xxvii. 24. Luke xxiii. 4. Chap. xix. 4.
[i] Acts iii. 14.
[k] Luke xxiii. 19.

v. 28—40. His invenomed enemies, determined on his ruin, dragged the innocent Jeſus very early in the morning, after ſuffering during the night the greateſt inſults and indignities, to Pilate the Roman governor, in order to get him legally condemned and crucified, deſirous that he ſhould ſuffer in the moſt ignominious way. And we are told,

1. The hypocritical ſcrupuloſity of theſe pretended pietiſts. They would not enter the judgment-hall, leſt they ſhould be defiled by the touch and company of heathens, and thereby, being rendered ceremonially unclean according to their traditions, ſhould be diſabled from partaking of the paſſover-feaſt, and the ſacrifices which were offered the day after the paſſover. Thus ſtrictly devout would they appear, with innocent blood upon their heads. Well was it ſaid of them, Ye ſtrain out a gnat and ſwallow a camel.

2. Pilate, at whoſe bar Jeſus was placed as a criminal, came forth to them in great complaiſance, deſiring to know their accuſation againſt the priſoner. In anſwer to ſo reaſonable a queſtion, they haughtily reply, If he were not a malefactor, a perſon notoriouſly infamous, we would not have delivered him up unto thee; as if from perſons of their eminent ſanctity a general charge was a ſufficient proof of the priſoner's crimes. Pilate, juſtly offended at ſo inſolent a reply, and ſo unreaſonable a procedure, bid them take him and judge him according to their law, deſirous to rid himſelf of ſo diſagreeable a cauſe. They replied, It is not lawful for us to put any man to death; either they had been deprived of the power of capital puniſhments, or they dared not exert it through the frequency of the people's crimes: but there was a farther view, which they undeſignedly anſwered hereby, even the fulfilling of the prophecy of Jeſus, who had ſignified by what death he ſhould die, Matth. xx. 19. and crucifixion being not a Jewiſh but a Roman puniſhment, it was neceſſary he ſhould be delivered to the Romans, and executed by them. Note, (1.) Many of the beſt of men, like Jeſus, have been branded as the vileſt of malefactors, without one real crime proved againſt them. (2.) God can over-rule the wickedneſs of the moſt envenomed perſecutors to his own glory, and make them, when they mean only to gratify their own malice, the means of fulfilling the prophecies of his word.

3. Pilate, having heard the treaſonable accuſations lodged againſt Jeſus by his accuſers, ordered the priſoner to be brought, and examined him as touching the things laid to his charge, the chief of which was ſetting up in oppoſition to Cæſar; and therefore he demands if it were true, that he aſſumed the character of King of the Jews? Jeſus anſwered, Sayeſt thou this thing of thyſelf, under any real ſuſpicion of the truth of the fact? or did others tell it thee of me, by whoſe falſehood and malice thou art influenced? Pilate, in a kind of deriſion at the expectation the Jewiſh people formed of their Meſſiah, anſwered, Am I a Jew? no: I concern myſelf about none of theſe matters: thine own nation and the chief prieſts have delivered thee unto me as a traitor and ſeditious perſon, ſetting up for a king in oppoſition to Cæſar. What haſt thou done? It is to be ſuppoſed perſons of ſo reſpectable a character would not, without cauſe, lodge ſuch an accuſation. Note, Many think there muſt be ſomething wrong, when thoſe who are eſteemed the moſt learned and pious condemn and perſecute: but we muſt not take our opinions from the judgment of men, but from the word of God. Otherwiſe, like Pilate, we ſhall be in danger of condemning the innocent.

4. Chriſt informs Pilate of the nature of that kingdom which he came to erect. Jeſus anſwered, My kingdom is not of this world, promiſing no earthly honours nor emoluments, nor interfering with any ſecular affair; but is purely ſpiritual, conſiſting in a dominion over the ſouls of men. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my ſervants fight, that I ſhould not be delivered to the Jews; but there never had been the leaſt attempt to reſcue him, nor any ſedition or tumult excited by him, which muſt have been the caſe had he affected temporal authority: but now is my kingdom not from hence, it takes not its riſe from earth, is not ſupported by the arm of fleſh, nor governed by worldly maxims and human policy.

5. Pilate, beholding his mean, wretched, and low eſtate, could not help exclaiming at the pretenſions which Jeſus ſeemed here to advance. Art thou a king then? Yes, ſaith Jeſus, thou ſayeſt that I am a king, and ſo it is; for to this end was I born, and for this cauſe came I into the world, that I ſhould bear witneſs unto the truth of the goſpel word in general, and to this truth in particular, that I am that King Meſſiah who ſhould come into the world. Every one that is of the truth, effectually wrought upon by the Spirit of truth; heareth my voice, receives my word, acknowledges my miſſion, and bows to that ſceptre of grace I ſtretch forth to the miſerable and the deſperate. Pilate ſaith unto him, What is truth? either he ſpoke it contemptuouſly, deriding his pretenſions, who ſet himſelf up as the voice of truth itſelf; or if he put the queſtion curiouſly, ſeriouſly, or judicially, he ſeems not to have waited for an anſwer; or Jeſus vouchſafed not to return one. Note, (1.) Is Chriſt born a King? then ſhould we yield our hearts willing ſubjects to his bleſſed government. (2.) They only know that truth which makes wiſe unto ſalvation, who hear and ſpiritually underſtand the voice of Jeſus ſpeaking in his goſpel.

6. Pilate, in his conſcience now ſatisfied of the innocence of Jeſus, led him forth, and declared before them all, that he found no fault in him. Willing therefore to obtain his diſcharge, he propoſed it to them, as it was an eſtabliſhed cuſtom at that feaſt to releaſe ſome priſoner unto them, whether it ſhould not be this miſerable object, whom, in deriſion of his pretenſions, he calls the king of the Jews. But they, inſtigated by their malicious prieſts, rejected the propoſition, and demanded Barabbas, a noted murderer and robber, preferring him before the Lord of life and glory. Note, (1.) He who ſuffered for ſins not his own, even by his judge was acknowledged to be innocent. (2.) They who, under the dictates of worldly wiſdom ſeek to pleaſe men, and maintain a good conſcience withal, will find the impracticability of the attempt. (3.) The cry is ever againſt the cauſe of truth; but, though it be oppreſſed for a while, it ſhall finally prevail.

CHAP. XIX.

In this chapter we have, 1. The remainder of Chriſt's trial before Pilate, which was tumultuous and confuſed, ver. 1—15. 2. Sentence given, and execution done upon it, ver. 16—18. 3. The title over his head, ver. 19—22. 4. The parting of his garment, ver. 23, 24. 5. The care he took of his mother, ver. 25—27. 6. The giving him vinegar to drink, ver. 28, 29. 7. His dying word, ver. 30. 8. The piercing of his ſide, ver. 31—37. 9. The burial of his body, ver. 38—42. O that in meditating on theſe things, we may experimentally know the power of Chriſt's death, and the fellowſhip of his ſufferings!

1. [a] THEN Pilate therefore took Jeſus, and [b] ſcourged him. 2. And the ſoldiers platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, and they put on him a purple robe, 3. And ſaid, Hail, king of the Jews: and they ſmote him with their hands. 4. Pilate therefore went forth again, and ſaith unto them, Behold, I bring him forth to you, that ye may know that [c] I find no fault with him. 5. Then came Jeſus forth, wearing the crown of thorns, and the purple robe. And Pilate ſaith unto them, Behold the man. 6. When the chief prieſts therefore and officers ſaw him, [d] they cried out, ſaying, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate ſaith unto them, Take ye him, and crucify him: for I find no fault in him. 7. The Jews anſwered him, [e] We have a law, and by our law he ought to die, becauſe [f] he made himſelf the Son of God. 8. ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that ſaying, he was the more afraid; 9. And went again into the judgment-hall, and ſaith unto Jeſus, Whence art thou? But [g] Jeſus gave him no anſwer. 10. Then ſaith Pilate unto him, Speakeſt thou not unto me? knoweſt thou not, that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to releaſe thee? 11. Jeſus anſwered, Thou couldſt have no power at all againſt me, except it were given thee from above: therefore he that delivered me unto thee hath the greater ſin. 12. And from thenceforth Pilate ſought to releaſe him: but the Jews cried out, ſaying, [p] If thou let this man go, thou art not Ceſar's friend: [i] whoſoever maketh himſelf a king, ſpeaketh againſt Ceſar. 13. ¶ When Pilate therefore heard that ſaying, he brought Jeſus forth, and ſat down in the Judgment-ſeat, in a place that is called the Pavement, but in the Hebrew, Gabbatha. 14. And [k] it was the preparation of the paſſover, and about the ſixth hour: and he ſaith unto the Jews, Behold your king. 15. But they cried out, Away with him, away with him, [l] crucify

[a] Mat. xxvii. 26. Mark xv. 15.
[b] Iſa. l. 6.
[c] Chap. xviii. 38. Ver. 6.
[d] Ver. 15. Acts iii. 13.
[e] Lev. xxiv. 16.
[f] Mat. xxvi. 65. Chap. v. 18. & x. 38.
[g] Iſa. liii. 7.
[h] Luke xxiii. 2.
[i] Acts xvii. 7.
[k] Mat. xxvii. 62.

[l] crucify him. Pilate ſaith unto them, Shall I crucify your king? The chief prieſts anſwered, [m] We have no king but Ceſar. 16. [n] Then delivered he him therefore unto them to be crucified. And they took Jeſus and led him away. 17. And he bearing his croſs, [o] went forth into a place called the place of a ſkull, which is called in the Hebrew, Golgotha: 18. Where they crucified him, and two other with him, on either ſide one, and Jeſus in the midſt.

[l] Ver. 6.
[m] Gen. xlix. 10.
[n] Mat. xxvii. 26. Mark xv. 15. Luke xxiii. 24.
[o] Heb. xiii. 12, 13.

v. 1—18. Having failed in his firſt attempt to releaſe the innocent priſoner, he bethought him of another, to move the people's compaſſion.

1. He delivered him up to the officers to be publicly ſcourged, hoping probably, that after this ignominy and puniſhment their fury might be appeaſed. The ſoldiers to whoſe cuſtody Jeſus had been committed, added the moſt cruel mockery to his ſufferings, and, in deriſion of the dignity to which he pretended, platted a crown of thorns, and put it on his head, arrayed him in robes of mock-majeſty, and bowing the knee, ſaluted him king of the Jews; whilſt with their hands they ſmote him, and offered him the vileſt indignities. Note, (1.) By theſe ſtripes he fulfilled the prophetic word, and procured the healing of our guilty ſouls. (2.) Many make a jeſt of things ſacred now, who will ſhortly prove them to their coſt ſerious realities. (3.) He who endured ſuch pain and ſhame for us, hath left us his example of patient ſuffering: how dare we at any time complain, when we ſee what he endured?

2. Thus arrayed, Pilate once more ordered him to be led forth, hoping this would ſatisfy his perſecutors, and that they might be prevailed upon to let him go; when he adds withal his ſolemn teſtimony, that he found no fault in him, and that he therefore regarded him as an object rather to be pitied than feared; and pointing to him as he ſtood, wearing the crown of thorns and purple robe, his face black with buffetting, and ſmeared with blood, he ſaid, Behold the man! and let ſuch an object of miſery plead with you for mercy. Note, (1.) That man, once treated with ſuch inſult and contempt, ſhould be for ever in our eyes the object of our admiration, love, and praiſe; for as he humbled himſelf thus low, the more we ſee of his abaſement, the more the riches of his grace ſhould riſe in our eſteem. (2.) If we are hooted at, and made a gazing-ſtock by wicked men, we are only called to a fellowſhip in Chriſt's ſufferings, and ſhould therein rejoice.

3. Far from being ſoftened and melted by the miſery of the innocent ſufferer, the chief prieſts and their officers, more exaſperated through the fear of loſing their prey, inſtigated the people, and in a moſt tumultuous manner headed the mob, and led the cry, Crucify him, crucify him. Pilate, ſhocked at their cruelty and injuſtice, or ironically reproaching them, who pretended to ſo much ſanctity, with ſo wicked a deed, replies, Take ye him, and crucify him, if ye are ſo madly ſet upon it; I chuſe to have nothing to do with ſo baſe an action, for I find no fault in him. Fearing that Jeſus ſhould yet eſcape them, they produce a new accuſation of a capital nature. Before they charged him as a traitor againſt the government, now as a blaſphemer againſt God; pretending, that according to their law he ought to die, becauſe he made himſelf the Son of God, and pretended to the incommunicable honours of the Godhead.

4. Pilate, more terrified at that ſaying, leſt he ſhould bring the divine vengeance more fearfully on his head, determined to examine farther into the matter; and therefore taking Jeſus into the judgment-hall, demanded whence he came, whether of human or divine extraction. But Jeſus, knowing it was uſeleſs to reply, gave him no anſwer. Pilate reſenting his ſilence as a contempt of his authority, with haughtineſs adds, Speakeſt thou not unto me? art thou mute, though a priſoner at my bar? knoweſt thou not that I have power to crucify thee, and have power to releaſe thee? He boaſts of his authority as abſolute, as able to ſave or to deſtroy: ſo apt are proud worms in office to magnify themſelves, and to affect a diſplay of their power.

5. Chriſt nobly checks his arrogance, and expoſes the vanity of his boaſts. Thou couldſt have no power at all againſt me, except it were given thee from above; as a magiſtrate, it was from heaven he received his authority, and ſhould rule with juſtice; and in this particular caſe, had he not been delivered by the determinate counſel of God, not all the Roman powers combined could have prevailed in the minuteſt particular againſt him. Therefore he that delivered me unto thee, Judas the traitor, or Caiaphas the high-prieſt, hath the greater ſin. Note, There is a difference in ſins; ſome tranſgreſs with much more aggravated guilt than others, as they act againſt greater light, and offend with more deliberate malice.

6. Pilate, now more deeply ſtung in his conſcience, ſought earneſtly to obtain the releaſe of Jeſus, but in vain. Had he acted as an upright magiſtrate, and according to the convictions of his conſcience, he would have feared no popular reſentment; but his corruptions overcame his convictions, and the fear of offending the people, and perhaps endangering himſelf, at laſt prevailed. The Jews perceiving how he was diſpoſed, in order to compel him to conſent, clamoured loud, and urged, that if he let this man go, he could not be Ceſar's friend; ſince whoever made himſelf a king, ſpoke againſt Ceſar, and was a rebel againſt his government; tho' the fact was ſo notoriouſly falſe, Chriſt having never aſſumed the leaſt temporal authority; he commanded, on the contrary, the tribute to be paid to Ceſar; and when the people would have made him a king by force, he left them, and diſappointed their deſigns. But this they craftily urge, as what muſt moſt powerfully influence Pilate, who might now be liable to an accuſation before the emperor for betraying his truſt, if he ſhould let one go, whom they accuſed as a traitor. Thus they who in heart abhorred the Roman government, now would appear the moſt zealous ſubjects of Ceſar. Wicked men to effect their purpoſes can transform themſelves into every ſhape.

7. Pilate, terrified into compliance with their requeſt by this ſuggeſtion, and well apprized of the cruel and ſuſpicious temper of Tiberius the Roman emperor, ſat down on the judgment-ſeat, in a place called Gabbatha, or the pavement, in order to pronounce ſentence upon the priſoner. And it was the preparation day of the paſſover ſabbath, a ſolemn ſeaſon, when very different ſubjects ſhould have engaged their time and thoughts; and about the ſixth hour. Once more to try if any thing would work upon them, Pilate bids them behold their king, and think a moment if ſuch a miſerable object could afford any real cauſe to fear his pretenſions, even if he had affected royalty. But they, impatient for his execution, ſhouted, Away with him, crucify him; they will hear nothing in his favour, and are determined in their bloody purpoſe. Pilate remonſtrates with them hereupon, Shall I crucify your king? either meaning to excite their compaſſions, or ridiculing their hopes of the Meſſiah. They who at other times ever teſtified their abhorrence of the Roman yoke, now eagerly embrace it, and with deep profeſſions of loyalty cry, We have no king but Ceſar. Pilate then ſeeing it in vain to contend, pronounced ſentence, and delivered up the innocent priſoner to them to be crucified. Thus was he arraigned and condemned for us, for a pretended crime, that the condemnation due to us for our real rebellions againſt God might be removed.

8. The ſentence is immediately put in execution by his blood-thirſty perſecutors, with every circumſtance of ignominy. They drag him to the place where malefactors were executed without the city, bearing his own croſs, and there nail him to the accurſed tree, between two infamous criminals, who were executed with him, to make him appear the vileſt of the vile; thus fulfilling the ſcriptures, which foretold he ſhould be numbered with the tranſgreſſors, Iſa. liii. 12. We cannot too frequently in our meditations come and ſee this great ſight: Calvary offers the nobleſt ſubject to our view, God incarnate dying for our iniquities: with what anguiſh for our guilt, which brought the Saviour to the croſs; with what love to him, who ſo freely conſented to bear our ſins in his own body on the tree, ſhould we then look up to a crucified Jeſus!

19. ¶ [p] And Pilate wrote a title, and put it on the croſs. And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS. 20. This title then read many of the Jews: For the place where Jeſus was crucified was nigh to the city: And it was written in Hebrew, and Greek, and Latin. 21. Then ſaid the chief prieſts of the Jews to Pilate, Write not, The king of the Jews; but that he ſaid, I am king of the Jews. 22. Pilate anſwered, What I have written, I have written. 23. ¶ Then [q] the ſoldiers, when they had crucified Jeſus, took his garments (and made four parts, to every ſoldier a part) and alſo his coat: Now the coat was without ſeam, woven from the top throughout. 24. They ſaid therefore among themſelves, Let us not rent it, but caſt lots for it, whoſe it ſhall be: that the ſcripture might be fulfilled, which ſaith, [r] They parted my raiment among them, and for my veſture they did caſt lots. Theſe things therefore the ſoldiers did. 25. [s] Now there ſtood by the croſs of Jeſus, his mother, and his mother's ſiſter, Mary the wife of † Cleophas, and Mary Magdalene. 26. When Jeſus therefore ſaw his mother and the diſciple ſtanding by, [t] whom he loved, he ſaith unto his mother, [u] Woman, behold thy ſon. 27. Then ſaith he to the diſciple, Behold thy mother. And from that hour that diſciple took her unto his own home. 28. ¶ After this, Jeſus knowing that all things were now accompliſhed, [x] that the ſcripture might be fulfilled, ſaith, I thirſt. 29. Now there was ſet a veſſel full of vinegar: and they filled a ſpunge with vinegar, and put it upon hyſſop, and put it to his mouth. 30. When Jeſus therefore had received the vinegar, he ſaid,

It

[p] Mat. xxvii. 37. Mark xv. 26. Luke xxiii. 38.
[q] Mat. xxvii. 35. Mark xv. 24. Luke xxiii. 34.
[r] Pſ. xxii. 18.
[s] Mat. xxvii. 55. Mark xv. 40. Luke xxiii. 49.
† Gr. Cleopas.
[t] Chap. xiii. 23. & xxi. 24.
[u] Chap. ii. 4.
[x] Pſ. lxix. 21.

y Chap. xvii. 4.

[y] It is finiſhed: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghoſt.

v. 19—30. The circumſtances of Chriſt's death are here ſomewhat more fully related than by the other Evangeliſts.

1. On a tablet at the top of his croſs Pilate wrote a ſuperſcription in Hebrew, Greek, and Latin, containing the accuſation laid againſt him, Jeſus of Nazareth the King of the Jews. Multitudes of the Jews then, who came from the city to the place of execution, read the ſuperſcription; and the chief prieſts, offended at the title given him, regarded it as a brand of infamy upon their nation, and therefore wiſhed him to alter the writing into another form, and not to call him abſolutely King of the Jews, but that he ſaid, I am King of the Jews; deſiring to fix upon his memory this infamy of an impoſtor. But Pilate, indignant at the injuſtice they had driven him to commit, with diſpleaſure rejects their requeſt, ſaying, What I have written, I have written, and will not alter it. Note, (1.) The innocence of Jeſus this very ſuperſcription proved. No crime was charged upon him, but his aſſerting his real character as the King Meſſiah. (2.) God holds the hands and lips of wicked men, and can, when he pleaſes, make them write and ſpeak in ſuch a way, as ſhall bear teſtimony to his truth.

2. The ſoldiers who crucified him, as he hung on the tree, ſat down to part his garments among them; and, unwilling to rend his ſeamleſs coat, determined rather to caſt lots which of them ſhould have it, fulfilling literally the ſcripture, which had ſaid, They parted my raiment among them, and for my veſture they did caſt lots, (Pſ. xxii. 18.) Theſe things therefore the ſoldiers did, being under the ſecret influence of his power, whom they knew not.

3. In the midſt of his agonies Jeſus ſhewed the tendereſt concern for his afflicted mother, who ſtood by his croſs, with the diſciple whom he loved; and kindly addreſſing her, he recommends her to the care of his beloved John, deſiring her to regard him henceforward as a ſon, and directing him to pay her the duty and affection due to a mother; and from that hour that diſciple took her to his own home, glad to obey the commands of his dying Maſter, and well pleaſed to have an opportunity of teſtifying his unfeigned love towards him. Note, (1.) Chriſt on the croſs hath taught all children an eminent inſtance of filial duty towards their parents, whoſe wants to the utmoſt they are bound to provide for. (2.) When one friend fails, the Lord can raiſe us up another; if we truſt him, we ſhall not be deſtitute. (3.) They who love the adored Jeſus, will be happy to embrace every opportunity of teſtifying their regard for him.

4. Chriſt knowing that all things were now accompliſhed, and his work of redemption nearly complete, that the ſcripture might be fulfilled, (Pſ. xxii. 15. lxix. 21.) ſaith, I thirſt; and a veſſel of vinegar being near, which was probably mixed with water, as drink for the Roman ſoldiers, they dipped a ſpunge in the liquor, and on a ſtalk of hyſſop lifted it to his lips. Jeſus felt that wrath of God, and thirſted, which had he not endured, we muſt for ever have lain down in everlaſting burnings, without one drop of water to cool our tongues.

5. Jeſus having received the vinegar, ſaith, It is finiſhed; the victory is obtained over death and hell; the work of redemption compleated; the full atonement made; all the types and prophecies fulfilled; the law magnified by a perfect obedience unto death; the juſtice of God ſatisfied; the ſalvation of ſinners ſecured; and therefore now his ſufferings end He bowed his head, and gave up the ghoſt; freely reſigning his ſoul into his Father's hands, and ſurrendering that life, which otherwiſe none could have taken from him, a ranſom for many.

z Deut. xxi. 23.

a 1 John v. 6, 8.

b Ex. xii. 46. Num. ix. 12. Pſ. xxxiv. 20.

c Zech. xii. 10.

31. The Jews therefore, becauſe it was the preparation, that [z] the bodies ſhould not remain upon the croſs on the ſabbath-day (for that ſabbath-day was an high day) beſought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. 32. Then came the ſoldiers, and brake the legs of the firſt, and of the other which was crucified with him. 33. But when they came to Jeſus, and ſaw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs. 34. But one of the ſoldiers with a ſpear pierced his ſide, and forthwith [a] came thereout blood and water. 35. And he that ſaw it bare record, and his record is true: and he knoweth that he ſaith true, that ye might believe. 36. For theſe things were done, that the ſcripture ſhould be fulfilled, [b] a bone of him ſhall not be broken. 37. And again another ſcripture ſaith, [c] They ſhall look on him whom they pierced.

v. 31—37. This laſt indignity ſhewn to our Lord's body is only recorded by this Evangeliſt.

1. The Jews, ſuperſtitiouſly obſervant of the ſabbath, and hypocritically pretending reverence for that ſacred inſtitution, whilſt their hands were red with the blood of him who was Lord of the ſabbath, that the bodies might not hang on the trees till evening, when the ſabbath began, which was a high day, and kept with great ſolemnity, they deſired Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away; to kill them outright, if they were not dead before, and to bury them immediately. Note, Hypocrites often appear very ſcrupulous about the ceremonials of religion, whilſt they are living in open violation of its moſt eſſential precepts.

2. Pilate granted their requeſt; and the two malefactors, not being yet dead, had the dreadful operation performed on them: but when the ſoldiers came to Jeſus, perceiving him already dead, they brake not his legs; but one of the ſoldiers, to put the matter paſt diſpute, thruſt his ſpear into his ſide, and forthwith came thereout blood and water; either the pericardium being pierced, and thus the water it contained ruſhed out with the blood, or this ſeparate diſcharge was miraculous, and typical of the great bleſſings of juſtification and ſanctification obtained by Chriſt's blood ſhedding for us. And John, who was ſtanding by, adds his atteſtation, as an eye-witneſs to this fact, as moſt indubitably true, that we might believe the certainty of Chriſt's death, and receive the ineſtimable bleſſings which this blood and water ſignified. Note, (1.) We are polluted with guilt, and defiled with corruption; but this is the fountain opened for ſin and for uncleanneſs. Jeſus came by blood to make the atonement, by water to purge our conſciences from dead works to ſerve the living God: whoſoever therefore cometh to him, ſhall find the mighty efficacy of his blood to pardon the moſt guilty, and of his grace to purify the moſt polluted ſoul. (2.) We have not followed cunningly deviſed fables in the goſpel of our ſalvation, but believe on the evidence of facts, ſupported by the moſt unſhaken authority, and atteſted by the moſt competent witneſſes.

3. In this tranſaction particular notice is taken of the fulfilment of two ſcriptures: [1.] A bone of him ſhall not be broken, (Exod. xii. 46.) which, though ſpoken of the paſchal lamb, yet eſpecially regarded him, who in the fulneſs of time, as our paſſover, ſhould be ſacrificed for us, (1 Cor. v. 7.) Another ſcripture had ſaid, (Zech. xii. 10.) They ſhall look on him whom they pierced. Thus were the prophecies accompliſhed by thoſe, who thought of nothing leſs in what they did, than the confirmation of our faith in Jeſus as the true Meſſiah.

d Mat. xxvii. 57. Mark xv. 42. Luke xxiii. 50.

e Chap. ix. 22. & xii. 42.

f Chap. iii. 1, 2. & vii. 50.

g Acts v. 6.

h Iſa. liii. 9. Mat. xxvii. 60.

38. ¶ [d] And after this, Joſeph of Arimathea (being a diſciple of Jeſus, but ſecretly [e] for fear of the Jews) beſought Pilate that he might take away the body of Jeſus: and Pilate gave him leave: he came therefore and took the body of Jeſus. 39. And there came alſo [f] Nicodemus (which at firſt came to Jeſus by night) and brought a mixture of myrrh and aloes, about an hundred pound weight. 40. Then took they the body of Jeſus, and [g] wound it in linen clothes, with the ſpices, as the manner of the Jews is to bury. 41. Now in the place where he was crucified, there was a garden; and in the garden a new ſepulchre, wherein was never man yet laid. 42. [h] There laid they Jeſus therefore, becauſe of the Jews preparation-day, for the ſepulchre was nigh at hand.

v. 38—42. Though now Jeſus ſeemed deſerted of all, and his corpſe ready to be laid with malefactors in a common grave, God raiſes up one who is appointed to give it a more honourable interment.

1. Joſeph of Arimathea, who through fear of the Jews had concealed his ſentiments, and, though ſecretly a diſciple of Jeſus, dared not to profeſs it, now boldly appears, and begs of the governor the body of Jeſus, which was granted. Note, (1.) The higher men are in the world, the greater temptation they are under to ſhun the reproach of the croſs; and, though perſuaded of the truth of the goſpel, not to make bold and open profeſſion of it. (2.) When the more courageous diſciples are foiled, God can ſay to the fearful heart, Be ſtrong, and enable them to appear boldly in the cauſe of God and truth.

2. Nicodemus, who at the firſt appearing of Jeſus came to him by night, now joined Joſeph in this pious work, and provided a large quantity of myrrh and aloes, in order to embalm the body of Jeſus, as was often done to men of eminent reputation and dignity. No expence to ſerve him will be grudged by thoſe who truly love the Lord Jeſus Chriſt.

3. They took down the body, and wrapped it in linen clothes, with the ſpices, as was the manner of the Jews to bury their great men: and as Joſeph had a garden near the place where Jeſus was crucified, in which he had prepared for himſelf a new tomb, hewn out of a rock, where never man had lain before, there laid they the body of Jeſus, it being very convenient, as they were ſtraitned for time, the preparation-day being far advanced, and the ſabbath approaching. Thus was our great ſurety laid under the arreſts of death, and conſigned to the ſilent grave, that he might make the clods of the valley ſweet to us, prepare our bed of duſt perfumed with his own glorious body, and comfort us in the reviving hope of following him through the grave, the gate of death, unto a joyful immortality.

CHAP. XX.

The proofs of Chriſt's reſurrection which we have in this chapter, are, 1. Such as occurred immediately at the ſepulchre. (1.) The ſepulchre found empty, and the grave-clothes in good order, ver. 1—10. (2.) Two angels appearing to Mary Magdalene at the ſepulchre, ver. 11—13. (3.) Chriſt himſelf appearing to her, ver. 14—18. 2. Such as occurred afterwards at the meetings of the apoſtles. (1.) At one, the ſame day at evening that Chriſt roſe, when Thomas was abſent, ver. 19—25. At another, that day ſeven-night, when Thomas was with him, ver. 26—31.

1. [a] THE firſt day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene, early when it was yet dark, unto the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the ſtone taken away from the ſepulchre. 2. Then ſhe runneth, and cometh to Simon Peter, and to [b] the other diſciple whom Jeſus loved, and ſaith unto them, They have taken away the Lord out of the ſepulchre, and we know not where they have laid him. 3. [c] Peter therefore went forth, and that other diſciple, and came to the ſepulchre. 4. So they ran both together: And the other diſciple did out-run Peter, and came firſt to the ſepulchre. 5. And he ſtooping down, and looking in, ſaw [d] the linen clothes lying; yet went he not in. 6. Then cometh Simon Peter following him, and went into the ſepulchre, and ſeeth the linen clothes lie: 7. And [e] the napkin that was about his head, not lying with the linen clothes, but wrapped together in a place by itſelf. 8. Then went in alſo that other diſciple which came firſt to the ſepulchre, and he ſaw, and believed. 9. For as yet they knew not [f] the ſcripture, that he muſt riſe again from the dead. 10. Then the diſciples went away again unto their own home.

[a] Mat. xxviii. 1. Mark xvi. 1. Luke xxiv. 1.
[b] Chap. xiii. 23. & xxi. 7, 20, 24.
[c] Luke xxiv. 12.
[d] Chap. xix. 40.
[e] Chap. xi. 44.
[f] Pſ. xvi. 10. Acts ii. 25, 31. & xiii. 35.

v. 1—10. The reconciling the accounts of the ſeveral Evangeliſts, with regard to the circumſtances attending the reſurrection, hath exerciſed the ingenuity of many learned expoſitors. The fact itſelf is proved by a great cloud of witneſſes.

1. Mary Magdalene very early, while it was yet dark, ſat out for the ſepulchre, where ſhe arrived about ſun-riſing, and to her ſurprize found the ſtone removed from the door. Hereupon looking in, and miſſing the body of Jeſus, ſhe, with the other women, ran to Peter and John, and with great concern informed them of the removal of the body of Jeſus, they knew not whither. Note, (1.) They who truly love Chriſt, will delight to meet him early. (2.) It is a bitter grief to a gracious ſoul to feel the abſence of Jeſus, and not to know where he may be found. (3.) We often make that matter of our mourning, which ſhould afford us real cauſe for joy. (4.) The communication of our ſorrows is often the neareſt way to recover our loſt comforts.

2. Peter and John immediately went forth, deſirous to inform themſelves how matters ſtood; and running together, John out-ran Peter, and came firſt to the ſepulchre, where ſtooping down, and looking in, he ſaw the linen clothes lying, yet went not in. Peter, more courageous, no ſooner reached the place, than he went in to gain the fulleſt ſatisfaction poſſible, and obſerved the grave-clothes, not careleſsly thrown down, but each part ſeparately folded up, and laid by itſelf; a certain proof, that whoever removed the body, did it deliberately, and not in haſte. Hereupon John alſo now ventured in after Peter, and he ſaw, and believed, either that the body was removed, or that Chriſt was really riſen from the dead; for hitherto none of the diſciples had entertained any right notions of the Meſſiah, nor, after all the ſcripture prophecies, and their Maſter's predictions, ſeem at all to have expected his reſurrection from the dead.

3. Hereupon the diſciples return to their companions, to communicate to them the ſtate of the matter as it appeared to them, and to wait the event.

11. ¶ [g] But Mary ſtood without at the ſepulchre, weeping: and as ſhe wept, ſhe ſtooped down, and looked into the ſepulchre, 12. And ſeeth two angels in white, ſitting the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jeſus had lain: 13. And they ſay unto her, [h] Woman, why weepeſt thou? She ſaith unto them, Becauſe they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him. 14. [i] And when ſhe had thus ſaid, ſhe turned herſelf back, and ſaw Jeſus ſtanding, and [k] knew not that it was Jeſus. 15. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Woman, why weepeſt thou? whom ſeekeſt thou? ſhe ſuppoſing him to be the gardener, ſaith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou haſt laid him, and I will take him away. 16. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Mary. She turned herſelf, and ſaith unto him, Rabboni, which is to ſay, Maſter. 17. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Touch me not: for I am not yet aſcended to my Father: but go to [l] my brethren, and ſay unto them, [m] I aſcend unto my Father and your Father, and to [n] my God and your God. 18. Mary Magdelene came and told the diſciples, that ſhe had ſeen the Lord, and that he had ſpoken theſe things unto her.

[g] Mark xvi. 5.
[h] Ver. 15.
[i] Mat. xxviii. 9. Mark xvi. 9.
[k] Luke xxiv. 16, 31. Chap. xxi. 4.
[l] Pſ. xxii. 22. Mat. xxviii. 10. Heb. ii. 11.
[m] Chap. xvi. 28.
[n] Eph. i. 17.

v. 11—18. Chriſt's firſt appearance was to Mary Magdalene. Much had been forgiven her, and ſhe loved much. Her paſt conduct was all forgotten, and her unfeigned preſent attachment to Jeſus made her now juſtly dear to him, and ſhe is favoured with this diſtinguiſhed token of his regard.

1. She ſtood without at the ſepulchre weeping, being returned the ſecond time to ſeek farther after her dear Lord: and they who wait conſtantly upon him, though he withdraw for a while, yet ſhall they find him at the laſt, and what they ſow in tears, they ſhall reap in joy.

2. As ſhe wept, ſhe ſtooped down, and looked into the ſepulchre, and ſaw two angels in human forms, (the ſame, as ſome ſuppoſe, which appeared to her before, Luke xxiv. 3—6.) They were clothed in white, the emblem of their ſpotleſs purity, and ſat one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jeſus had lain, to pay him honour, and to be the meſſengers of his reſurrection.

3. They kindly addreſſed her, Woman, why weepeſt thou? She, whoſe heart overflowed with ſorrow, as her eyes with tears, replied, Becauſe they have taken away my Lord, and I know not where they have laid him: and this ſhe thought a ſufficient reaſon for her grief; but our vexations, like hers, are often imaginary, and of our own making: had we but faith, the clouds would immediately diſappear.

4. Chriſt manifeſts himſelf to her; for they who can reſt in nothing ſhort of Chriſt and his love, ſhall not be diſappointed. As ſhe turned herſelf, ſhe ſaw Jeſus ſtanding, and, becauſe either her eyes were holden, or they were ſo filled with tears, ſhe knew not that it was Jeſus: ſo much nearer is he to his mourning ſaints, than they oftentimes are aware. He kindly addreſſed her in the words of his angelic miniſters, Woman, why weepeſt thou? and ſhe not attending to him cloſely, and ſuppoſing him probably the gardener, begged to be informed if he had borne the body away, or could give her any intelligence concerning it, that ſhe might give it an honourable interment elſewhere, if it might not lie there. Jeſus ſaith unto her, Mary: his altered tone of voice, and calling her by her name, aſſured her inſtantly who ſpoke; and turning to him, ſhe caſts herſelf at his feet with reverence and rapturous joy, crying, Rabboni, my Maſter! how welcome, unutterably welcome to her longing heart! Note, When Chriſt returns after a ſeaſon of darkneſs and weeping, then, as the ſun ſhining after rain, the beams of his love are more delightful than ever to the ſoul.

5. He ſends her with the kindeſt meſſage to his diſciples. Touch me not; ſtay not to expreſs your affectionate regard; the moment is precious; for I am not yet aſcended to my Father; you will therefore have other opportunities of ſeeing and converſing with me. But go to my brethren without delay; in ſuch affectionate terms doth he addreſs thoſe who had ſo lately ſhamefully fled and left him; and ſay unto them, I aſcend unto my Father and your Father, and to my God and your God. Chriſt owns them in the endeared relation of brethren; aſſures them he was now entering into his glory, as the covenant head of his redeemed people; returning to his Father by eternal generation, and theirs by adoption and grace; to his God, whom, as the man Chriſt Jeſus, the head of his redeemed people, he loved, obeyed, and worſhipped; and their God, in a covenant of everlaſting love, to bleſs them with all ſpiritual bleſſings in heavenly things in Chriſt. Bleſſed and happy are they who can ſay, The God and Father of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt is my Father and my God.

6. Mary haſtens to carry the glad news to the diſconſolate diſciples, and with a tranſport of joy declares ſhe has ſeen him, and reports the kind meſſage which he had delivered to her. They who have ſeen Chriſt by faith, and taſted of his conſolations, cannot but delight to tell of him, and to ſpread the knowledge of his grace.

19. ¶ [o] Then the ſame day at evening, being the firſt day of the week, when the doors were ſhut, where the diſciples were aſſembled for fear of the Jews, came Jeſus and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaith unto them, Peace be unto you. 20. And when he had ſo ſaid, [p] he ſhewed unto them his hands and his ſide. Then [q] were the diſciples glad when they ſaw the Lord. 21. Then ſaid Jeſus

[o] Mark xvi. 14. Luke xxiv. 36. 1 Cor. xv. 5.
[p] Ver. 27. 1 John i. 1.
[q] Chap. xvi. 22.

Jeſus to them again, Peace be unto you: [r] as my Father hath ſent me, even ſo ſend I you. 22. And when he had ſaid this, he breathed on them, and ſaith unto them, Receive ye the holy Ghoſt. 23. [s] Whoſeſoever ſins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and [t] whoſeſoever ſins ye retain, they are retained. 24. ¶ But Thomas, one of the twelve, [u] called Didymus, was not with them when Jeſus came. 25. The other diſciples therefore ſaid unto him, We have ſeen the Lord. But he ſaid unto them, Except I ſhall ſee in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thruſt my hand into his ſide, I will not believe.

[r] Mat. xxviii. 18. Chap. xvii. 18. Heb. iii. 1. 2 Tim. ii. 2.
[s] Mat. xvi. 19. & xviii. 18.
[t] 1 Cor. v. 3, &c.
[u] Chap. xi. 16.

v. 19—25. The reports of Mary and the women produced little conviction in the minds of the diſciples; ſuch fools, and ſlow of heart were they to believe; Jeſus therefore appears to them himſelf, to put the matter out of doubt.

1. The apoſtles were all aſſembled, Thomas excepted, on the evening of the day in which Chriſt roſe from the dead, which was the firſt day of the week. For fear of the Jews they had ſhut and barred the doors, when on a ſudden, probably whilſt they were conſidering over the ſtrange reports which they had heard, and examining into their credibility, or praying for farther light and direction, Jeſus appears in the midſt of them, and with the kindeſt ſalutation addreſſes them, Peace be unto you. He upbraids them not with any thing that had paſſed; it was forgiven and forgotten; and now he is come to put them in poſſeſſion of that peace which before his death he had ſo ſolemnly bequeathed to them. Note, (1.) Where the diſciples of Jeſus aſſemble in his name, there will he be in the midſt of them. (2.) The peace which our Redeemer beſtows, lifts us ſuperior to all our fears.

2. To give them undoubted aſſurance of the identity of his perſon, and the certainty of his reſurrection, he ſhewed them his hands and his ſide, which ſtill bore the glorious ſcars gotten in that conflict he had endured for their ſakes, when all their foes were vanquiſhed; and, fully ſatisfied that it was indeed their adored Maſter himſelf, joy and gladneſs were diffuſed thro' every heart, and ſat on every countenance. Note, Theſe love-prints in the Saviour's fleſh ſhould ſtill be gazed upon by us with faith, delight, and wonder. Whilſt they are pleading before the throne, who ſhall lay ought to our charge?

3. He ſolemnly inveſts them anew with their commiſſion from him. Then ſaid Jeſus unto them again, Peace be unto you: he would remove every remaining fear, and recover them from their aſtoniſhment, that they might hear and receive the commiſſion he delivered to them. As my Father hath ſent me, even ſo ſend I you; giving you full authority to go and preach my goſpel, engaging to qualify you for the work, and to give you to ſee the moſt abundant ſucceſs of your labours. And when he had ſaid this, he breathed on them, and ſaith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghoſt; by this emblem ſignifying to them, that the Spirit which proceeded from him, as the breath from the body, ſhould reſt upon them, as a quickening Spirit, like that which God breathed at firſt into the lifeleſs clay, (Gen. ii. 7.) and ſhould enable them with the abundance of his gifts and graces to diſcharge that high office to which they were ordained. And as one branch of their divinely-delegated authority, he ſaith, Whoſeſoever ſins ye remit, according to the goſpel which they preached, and as poſſeſſed of that diſcernment of ſpirits, whereby they were enabled to diſtinguiſh the truly faithful, they are remitted unto them; the abſolution which they pronounce on earth, he engages to ratify in heaven: and whoſeſoever ſins ye retain, becauſe of their impenitence and unbelief, they are retained; and if they die in their ſins, the wrath of God, according to their denunciations, muſt for ever abide upon them. Note, (1.) Though men may give an outward miſſion, it is the office of the Holy Ghoſt to call and qualify every true miniſter of Chriſt; and, without his inſpiration, they who run unſent, will be accounted as thieves and robbers. (2.) Though miniſters have no power of their own to pardon ſins, or bind them upon the ſoul, yet, where they ſpeak according to Chriſt's word, he will confirm their ſentence.

4. Thomas, called Didymus, one of the twelve apoſtles who were firſt ordained, though now reduced to eleven by the apoſtacy of Judas, happened not to be preſent when Jeſus ſhewed himſelf to the reſt. By what he was detained, is not ſaid; perhaps the fear which made them lock the doors, kept him away: and if ſo, for his cowardice and neglect he is juſtly puniſhed with the loſs of that bleſſed ſight which his brethren enjoyed. But whether he was before in fault or not, his incredulity was juſtly blameable, when his brethren in a tranſport of joy aſſured him they had ſeen the Lord. Reſolute in unbelief, he declares nothing ſhall convince him, but the evidence of his own ſenſes: Except I ſhall ſee in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thruſt my hand into his ſide, I will not believe; a very criminal incredulity, yet was it ſo over-ruled by divine providence, as to add additional evidence to the certainty of Jeſus's reſurrection. So far were his own apoſtles from eaſily ſatisfying themſelves about the fact, that nothing but the moſt infallible evidence could have convinced them: and indeed when they looked forward to what they muſt expect to meet with on account of their teſtimony, they needed the fulleſt conviction of the truth in their own ſouls, to bear them out in their ſufferings.

26. ¶ And after eight days again his diſciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jeſus, the doors being ſhut, and ſtood in the midſt, and ſaid, [x] Peace be unto you. 27. Then ſaith he to Thomas, [y] Reach hither thy finger, and behold my hands; and reach hither thy hand, and thruſt it into my ſide: and be not faithleſs, but believing. 28. And Thomas anſwered and ſaid unto him, My Lord and my God. 29. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Thomas, becauſe thou has ſeen me, thou haſt believed: [z] bleſſed are they that have not ſeen, and yet have believed. 30. ¶ And [a] many other ſigns truly did Jeſus in the preſence of his diſciples, which are not written in this book. 31. [b] But theſe are written, that ye might believe that Jeſus is the Chriſt the Son of God, and [c] that believing ye might have life through his name.

[x] Ver. 19.
[y] Ver. 25. 1 John i. 1.
[z] 2 Cor. v. 7. 1 Pet. i. 8.
[a] Chap. xxi. 25.
[b] Luke i. 4.
[c] Chap. iii. 15, 36. & v. 24. 1 Pet. i. 9.

v. 26—31. Our Lord by his reſurrection conſecrated the firſt day of the week; then his diſciples aſſembled, and he appeared to them. A week after he repeated his viſit, to put a farther honour on the day, which was henceforward to be obſerved as the Chriſtian ſabbath.

1. Chriſt appears to them, where they were met together, and Thomas with them, having ſhut the doors for fear of the Jews. Seven days Thomas was left to his unbelieving doubts, and in a miſerable ſtate of ſuſpence; whilſt the other diſciples rejoiced in their riſen Redeemer. But now having puniſhed him for his former neglect and abſence, and being joined again in communion with his fellow-apoſtles, he is favoured with the ſight of Jeſus, who graciouſly condeſcends to give him all that ſatisfaction which he perverſely required. He ſtood in the midſt, and ſaid, Peace be unto you, according to his former gracious ſalutation: then particularly addreſſing himſelf to Thomas, to rebuke his infidelity, and ſatisfy his doubts, he bids him, ſince nothing elſe would convince him, put his finger upon the ſcars in his hands, and examine with his hand the wound in his ſide, and feel and ſee the certainty of that reſurrection he would not credit, and be not faithleſs, or incredulous, but believing. Note, Unbelief is the injurious bar which robs us of our comfort, and God of his glory; moſt juſtly therefore does it deſerve rebuke from Chriſt, and call for deep humiliation from us.

2. Thomas, quite overcome with the evidence and confounded and aſhamed at his own incredulity, cries out, My Lord and my God, in the fulleſt aſſurance of faith, and with the deepeſt reverence and adoration of his glorious Maſter. He acknowledges his divinity, and worſhips him as the object of higheſt honour, as very God. Note, (1.) True faith regards Jeſus not only as God and Lord, but as my God, and my Lord, in whoſe favour and love we have an aſſured intereſt. (2.) We are then diſciples indeed, when Jeſus is exalted in our hearts, and in our lips and life we confeſs him our Lord and Maſter.

3. For a reproof to Thomas, and an encouragement to thoſe who ſhould come after, Jeſus replies, Thomas, becauſe thou haſt ſeen me, thou haſt believed; refuſing every proof but the evidence of his own ſenſes; and, though convinced at laſt, yet was he culpable in rejecting the teſtimony which his brethren had born, in which way the reſt of the world muſt be converted to the faith. And therefore Chriſt adds, Bleſſed are they that have not ſeen, and yet have believed, as the Old Teſtament ſaints had done, and as muſt be the caſe with thoſe who afterwards ſhould believe the goſpel on the teſtimony of the inſpired witneſſes: their faith is more noble, ſpiritual, and honourable to God, and will procure the moſt tranſcendent bleſſings upon their own ſouls.

4. The Evangeliſt obſerves, that many other ſigns were given of the reſurrection of Jeſus, during the forty days he was ſeen of them, than thoſe recorded in the ſacred writings; but the evidence contained in the book of God is fully ſatisfactory to thoſe who humbly deſire information, and who ſearch the ſcriptures to be made wiſe unto ſalvation through them: they will be convinced from theſe ſacred records, that Jeſus it the Chriſt, the promiſed Meſſiah, the Son of God, poſſeſſed of the ſame divine nature and perfections, and declared to be ſo by his reſurrection from the dead (Rom. i. 4.); and they who believe on him may be aſſured of life through his name; the life of grace with all its comforts here, and the life of glory with all its unutterable bleſſedneſs hereafter, both being effectually obtained by the death and reſurrection of Jeſus, who hath opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers.

CHAP.

CHAP. XXI.

We have here another appearance of Chriſt. We are told, 1. How he diſcovered himſelf to them as they were fiſhing, filled their net, and then very familiarly came and dined with them upon what they had caught, ver. 1—14. 2. What diſcourſe he had with Peter after dinner. (1.) Concerning himſelf, ver. 15—20. (2.) Concerning John, ver. 21—23. (3.) The ſolemn concluſion of this goſpel, ver. 24, 25.

1. AFTER theſe things Jeſus ſhewed himſelf again to the diſciples at the ſea of Tiberias; and on this wiſe ſhewed he himſelf. 2. There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus, and [a] Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and [b] the ſons of Zebedee, and two other of his diſciples. 3. Simon Peter ſaith unto them, I go a fiſhing. They ſay unto him, We alſo go with thee. They went forth, and entred into a ſhip immediately; and that night they caught nothing. 4. But when the morning was now come, Jeſus ſtood on the ſhore: but [c] the diſciples knew not that it was Jeſus. 5. Then [d] Jeſus ſaith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They anſwered him, No. 6. And he ſaid unto them, [e] Caſt the net on the right ſide of the ſhip, and ye ſhall find. They caſt therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fiſhes. 7. Therefore that diſciple [f] whom Jeſus loved, ſaith unto Peter, It is the Lord. Now when Simon Peter heard that it was the Lord, he girt his fiſher's coat unto him, (for he was naked) and did caſt himſelf into the ſea. 8. And the other diſciples came in a little ſhip (for they were not far from land, but as it were two hundred cubits) dragging the net with fiſhes. 9. As ſoon then as they were come to land, they ſaw a fire of coals there, and fiſh laid thereon, and bread. 10. Jeſus ſaith unto them, Bring of the fiſh, which ye have now caught. 11. Simon Peter went up, and drew the net to land full of great fiſhes, an hundred and fifty and three: and for all there were ſo many, yet was not the net broken. 12. Jeſus ſaith unto them, [g] Come and dine. And none of the diſciples durſt aſk him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord. 13. Jeſus then cometh and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fiſh likewiſe. 14. This is now [h] the third time that Jeſus ſhewed himſelf to his diſciples, after that he was riſen from the dead.

[a] Chap. i. 45.
[b] Mat. iv. 21.
[c] Luke xxiv. 16. Chap. xx. 14.
[d] Luke xxiv. 41.
[e] Luke v. 4, &c.
[f] Chap. xiii. 23. & xx. 2. Ver. 20.
[g] Acts x. 41.
[h] Chap. xx. 19, 26.

v. 1—14. The diſciples being appointed to meet their Lord in Galilee, returned thither, and, till the time came, employed themſelves in their former occupation. Chriſt's ſervants muſt never be idlers.

1. Chriſt appears to them at the ſea of Tiberias, where Simon Peter, Thomas, Nathanael, the ſons of Zebedee, and two other diſciples were fiſhing. They were unſucceſsful all night, and toiled in vain: in the morning Jeſus ſtood on the ſhore, and, at the diſtance they were, the diſciples knew him not. Note, (1.) God's miniſters ſometimes labour long, and ſee little fruit; but they muſt not be weary, nor faint in their minds: patient perſeverance ſhall at laſt be crowned with ſucceſs. (2.) They who are diligent in their honeſt calling, are in Chriſt's way, and may expect his bleſſing.

2. Chriſt addreſſes them in his familiar manner, Children, have ye any meat? They anſwered, No. He ſaid unto them, Caſt the net on the right ſide of the ſhip. Rather than return empty, they reſolved to make the trial, and to their aſtoniſhment found the net ſo full, that they were not able to draw it up into the boat for the multitude of fiſhes. Note, (1.) Chriſt takes cognizance of his diſciples wants; he will ſee that they have meat to eat. (2.) Our ſucceſs depends not on our own labours, but on Chriſt's bleſſing. (3.) They who go under a divine call, ſhall find at laſt, that their labour is not in vain in the Lord.

3. John hereupon ſuggeſts this muſt needs be the Lord. Peter inſtantly caught the hint, and, fired with zeal and love, girt up his coat, and plunged into the ſea, impatient to be at his dear Maſter's feet; whilſt the other diſciples, who were but a little way from ſhore, about an hundred yards, haſted to land, dragging the net with them. Simon joined them, and aſſiſted them in their labour, and to their aſtoniſhment counted one hundred and fifty-three large fiſhes, and yet the net remained unbroken, which ſtill increaſed the miracle. Note, (1.) Different diſciples excel in different gifts and graces: ſome are more quick to diſcern, others more intrepid to execute; ſome move ſlowly, but ſteadily; others blaze with zeal, though not equally uniform; and each eſpecially ſerviceable in their places. (2.) God's people will all be brought ſafe to the ſhores of everlaſting reſt through every tribulation; and when they are counted over, not one will be lacking of thoſe which goſpel grace effectually drew to Jeſus.

4. Their Maſter, who had given them this miraculous draught of fiſhes, had provided alſo for their refreſhment on ſhore. They found a fire, and fiſh laid thereon, and bread, to which he bids them add ſome of thoſe they had caught, and then kindly and familiarly, as formerly, invites them to come and refreſh themſelves; whilſt they in ſacred awe at his preſence and miracles, kept at a reſpectful diſtance, nor durſt aſk him, Who art thou? which would have implied unbelief, when indeed they were fully ſatisfied that it was the Lord. Note, (1.) They who act under the command of Jeſus, and go forth in his name, ſhall not want a proviſion. Verily they ſhall be fed. (2.) In the ordinances a rich repaſt is provided for the faithful, and the Maſter in them will break the bread of life to our ſouls. (3.) The goſpel word is, Come; Chriſts arms are open to his people; they will be welcome to all the rich proviſion of his grace.

5. Chriſt, as the maſter of the feaſt, diſtributes the bread and fiſh to them, and did eat and drink with them, to ſhew himſelf truly alive, and to confirm them in the certainty of his reſurrection, (Acts x. 41.) And ſtill he is the ſame gracious Lord: they who hunger and thirſt after righteouſneſs, ſhall be filled, and all the cravings of their ſouls relieved by the abundance of his grace.

6. The Evangeliſt remarks, that this was the third public appearance of Jeſus to any conſiderable number of his diſciples together, whoſe faith would hereby be more confirmed. Or this was the third day that he appeared to them: the firſt day of his reſurrection he appeared five ſeveral times, once the week after, and now again for the third time; and every repeated viſit brought new tokens of his love.

15. ¶ So when they had dined, Jeſus ſaith to Simon Peter, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me more than theſe? He ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knoweſt that I love thee. He ſaith unto him, Feed my lambs. 16. He ſaith to him again the ſecond time, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me? He ſaith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knoweſt that I love thee. He ſaith unto him, [i] Feed my ſheep. 17. He ſaith unto him the third time, Simon ſon of Jonas, loveſt thou me? Peter was grieved, becauſe he ſaid unto him [k] the third time, Loveſt thou me? And he ſaid unto him, Lord, [l] thou knoweſt all things; thou knoweſt that I love thee. Jeſus ſaith unto him, Feed my ſheep. 18. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, When thou waſt young, thou girdeſt thyſelf, and walkedſt whither thou wouldeſt: but when thou ſhalt be old, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thy hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and [m] carry thee whither thou wouldeſt not. 19. This ſpake he, ſignifying [n] by what death he ſhould glorify God. And when he had ſpoken this, he ſaith unto him, Follow me.

[i] Acts xx. 28. 1 Pet. v. 2.
[k] Chap. xiii. 38.
[l] Chap. ii. 25. & xvi. 30.
[m] Acts xii. 3, 4.
[n] 2 Pet. i. 14.

v. 15—19. When dinner was ended, Chriſt addreſſed himſelf to Peter. He knew Peter's conſcious heart upbraided him bitterly for his paſt conduct, and now, to ſilence his fears, whilſt he tacitly reproves his unfaithfulneſs, confirms him in his office, as fully reſtored to his favour and love.

We have,

1. The queſtion thrice put to him, Loveſt thou me? and the firſt time Chriſt adds, more than theſe? more than he loved his deareſt relatives who were preſent; or more than the ſhip, and nets, and fiſh, and all earthly comforts and gain; or rather, more than theſe love me; becauſe he had once ſo boldly and forwardly intimated his ſuperior attachment to him, that though all men ſhould be offended, yet will not I; and then it implied a tacit rebuke for this vain-glorious boaſt. But now that he was reſtored to favour again, this new obligation conferred upon him required an eſpecial return of love. Note, (1.) Nothing begets genuine repentance, but a ſenſe of Chriſt's love engaging ours. (2.) When we do amiſs, we muſt not be diſpleaſed to have our ſincerity queſtioned. (3.) True love to Chriſt will make us count every thing trivial in compariſon with him. (4.) It is a commendable ambition to deſire to love Chriſt more than others, whilſt we feel how peculiar our obligations to him are.

2. Three times Peter makes the ſame reply: Thou knoweſt that I love thee: he will not pretend any more to a ſuperiority over his brethren, though conſcious of the ſincerity of his love. The third time, grieved at the repeated queſtion, which ſeemed to intimate a ſuſpicion of his ſincerity, and reminded him of his threefold denial, he adds, Thou knoweſt all things, Lord; thou knoweſt that I love thee; and for this he can appeal to him, as the ſearcher of hearts. Note, (1.) They who are ſincere in their attachment to Chriſt, can appeal for their ſimplicity to the ſearcher of their hearts. (2.) Every remembrance of paſt unfaithfulneſs ſhould grieve us, though it be forgiven of our Lord, and forgotten.

3. Thrice Jeſus bids him prove the ſincerity of his love by his diligence and labour in the miniſtry. Feed my lambs; feed my ſheep. Since his iniquity is pardoned, his commiſſion is renewed, and with more abundant diligence he is called upon to diſcharge his awful truſt. He muſt feed the lambs, the young diſciples, and thoſe who are moſt weak and feeble, conſidering their weakneſs, and having compaſſion on their infirmities, as remembering his own. He muſt feed the ſheep, the ſtrong of the flock, willing to expoſe himſelf to any dangers for their ſake, and faithfully miniſtring to them the rich food of the goſpel word, for their nouriſhment and growth in grace.

4. Chriſt foretels the ſufferings which awaited him in the diſcharge of his miniſtry. He muſt ſeal the truth he preached by enduring martyrdom. Verily, verily I ſay unto thee, When thou waſt young, thou girdeſt thyſelf, full of vigour, and walkedſt whither thou wouldeſt; but when thou ſhalt be old, after a long life of labour, thou ſhalt ſtretch forth thy hands, and another ſhall gird thee, and carry thee whither thou wouldeſt not, even to priſon*: and this he ſpake, ſignifying by what death he ſhould die*; and the concurring teſtimony of antiquity reports, that he was crucified at Rome. Note, (1.) Nature ſtarts from death, as reluctant to go; but grace can enable us to meet it in its moſt tremendous forms. (2.) Every ſaint of God deſires to die, as he lived, to God's glory; patiently reſigned to his will; commending with his dying breath the good ways of the Lord; and rejoicing in hope of the glory ready to be revealed in him.

5. He gives Peter a ſignificant ſign of what he required of him. Riſing from table, he ſaith unto him, Follow me; copy my example; follow my inſtructions; and if he was called to the croſs, he muſt remember, it would be no more than his Maſter for his ſake had endured before. Whatever we ſuffer, we ſhould never forget how much more our Maſter endured, and that this is the way to come to be with him in his glory. We muſt bear the croſs before we wear the crown.

20. Then Peter turning about, ſeeth the diſciple [o] whom Jeſus loved, following; which alſo leaned on his breaſt at ſupper, and ſaid, Lord, which is he that betrayeth thee? 21. Peter ſeeing him, ſaith to Jeſus, Lord, and what ſhall this man do? 22. Jeſus ſaith unto him, If I will that [p] he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? [q] Follow thou me. 23. Then went this ſaying abroad among the brethren, that that diſciple ſhould not die: yet Jeſus ſaid not unto him, He ſhall not die: but, If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? 24. This is the diſciple which teſtifieth of theſe things, and wrote theſe things: and we know that [r] his teſtimony is true. 25. [s] And there are alſo many other things which Jeſus did, the which if they ſhould be written every one, I ſuppoſe that even the world itſelf could not contain the books that ſhould be written. Amen.

v. 20—25. Peter riſing up to follow his Maſter, on looking back, beheld John the beloved diſciple juſt behind him. Hereupon,

1. He begs Jeſus to ſay, what ſhould be John's lot and labour. Either he was curious to know, or tenderly concerned, leſt the ſame ſufferings awaited his dear fellow-labourer. True Chriſtian charity will make us feel for our brethren as for ourſelves.

2. Chriſt checks his curioſity, whilſt he anſwers his queſtion. If I will that he tarry till I come, in ſome peculiarly glorious diſplay of my power, ſuch as the deſtruction of the Jewiſh nation would be, what is that to thee? follow thou me. Note, (1.) It is the will of Jeſus, that we ſhould follow ſteadily the path of duty, without curiouſly deſiring to pry into futurity, content to leave all our concerns in his hands. (2.) Our Lord directs all things according to the counſels of his own will, and that ſhould at all times ſatisfy us, and make us humbly ſay, The will of the Lord be done.

3. From a miſtake of Chriſt's meaning a report ſpread among the brethren, as if that diſciple ſhould not die; whereas Chriſt ſaid no ſuch thing, but, If I will that he tarry till I come, meaning that he ſhould live to ſee the deſtruction of the Jewiſh ſtate and polity, and afterwards die not a violent but a natural death. From whence we may obſerve, the uncertainty of all human traditions, and the great danger of ſubmitting implicitly to human expoſitions of ſcripture, however ſupported by numbers, authority, or antiquity. We have the book of God before us; we have the Spirit of God promiſed to teach us; let us therefore, after all that others ſay, read, hear, and judge for ourſelves.

4. The Evangeliſt now drawing to a concluſion, ſolemnly atteſts the truth of all he had recorded, being an eye and ear-witneſs of what he writes; and as he was himſelf abſolutely certain of what he ſaid, ſo were all his brethren; and the truths contained in this goſpel are attended with ſuch evidence as muſt convince every impartial enquirer. They who reject the ſcripture teſtimony, wilfully ſhut their eyes againſt the light, and, whatever they may pretend, have no cloak for their obſtinate infidelity.

5. He cloſes with a declaration, that innumerable other miracles were performed by Jeſus, beſides thoſe here recorded, which, if they were all related with the circumſtances ſeverally attending them, not all the ſcribes in the world could have written them, nor the moſt retentive memory contain them. Nor would the unbelieving world, who reject the preſent evidence, have received the truth, though innumerable volumes of Chriſt's miracles had been written for their conviction. Hereto the Evangeliſt ſets his Amen! What he wrote was infallibly certain: let us add our Amen to his, perfectly ſatisfied in his teſtimony, by faith embracing the glorious truths he records, and fervently praying for the accompliſhment of all the ineſtimable bleſſings which are promiſed. Amen! Amen!

[o] Chap. xiii. 23. & xx. 2. Ver. 7.

[p] Mat. xvi. 28.

[q] Ver. 19.

[r] Chap. xix. 35. 3 John 12

[s] Chap. xx. 30.

THE EVANGELICAL EXPOSITOR;
OR, A PRACTICAL COMMENT UPON THE ACTS of the APOSTLES.

THE Author of this volume is uſually ſuppoſed to be Luke the beloved phyſician, who wrote the third of the four goſpels, which bears his name; and who was very probably one of the ſeventy diſciples, whoſe commiſſion, Luke x. 1, &c. was little inferior to that of the twelve apoſtles. This Luke was very much a companion of Paul's in his ſervices and ſufferings: Only Luke is with me, 2 Tim. iv. 11. We may know by his ſtile in the latter part of this book when and where he was with him, for then he writes we did ſo and ſo, as chap. xvi. 10. xx. 6. and from thenceforward to the end of the book. He was with Paul in his dangerous voyage to Rome, when he was carried thither a priſoner; was with him when from his priſon there he wrote his epiſtles to the Coloſſians and Philemon, in both which he is named. And it ſhould ſeem that St. Luke wrote this hiſtory when he was with St. Paul at Rome during his impriſonment there, and was aſſiſtant to him; for the hiſtory concludes with St. Paul's preaching there in his own hired houſe. It is called, The Acts of the Apoſtles; of the holy Apoſtles, ſo the Greek copies generally read it, and ſo they are called, Rev. xviii. 20. Rejoice over her, ye holy apoſtles. One copy inſcribes it, The Acts of the Apoſtles by Luke the Evangeliſt. 1. It is the hiſtory of the apoſtles; yet here is in it the hiſtory of Stephen, Barnabas, and ſome other apoſtolical men, who, though not of the twelve, yet were endued with the ſame Spirit, and employed in the ſame work. And of thoſe that were apoſtles, it is the hiſtory of Peter and Paul only that is here recorded; and Paul was not of the twelve: But this ſufficeth as a ſpecimen of what the reſt did in other places, purſuant to their commiſſion, for they were none of them idle. And as we are to think what is related in the goſpels concerning Chriſt ſufficient, becauſe infinite wiſdom thought ſo, the ſame we are to think here concerning what is related of the apoſtles and their labours; for what more is told us from tradition of the labours and ſufferings of the apoſtles, and the churches they planted, is altogether doubtful and uncertain, and what I think we cannot build upon with any ſatisfaction at all; this is gold, ſilver, and precious ſtones, built upon the foundation; that is wood, hay, and ſtubble. 2. It is called their acts, or doings, giving an account of their preaching, ſufferings, miracles, ſucceſs, the planting of the Chriſtian churches by their means, and the vaſt progreſs of the goſpel through their indefatigable labours. The hiſtory ends with the firſt impriſonment of Paul at Rome, about thirty years after our Lord's aſcenſion.

CHAP. I.

The inſpired hiſtorian begins his narrative of the Acts of the Apoſtles, 1. With a review of the goſpel hiſtory from the reſurrection to the aſcenſion of our Lord, ver. 1—11. 2. With a general idea of the embryo of the Chriſtian church, and its ſtate from Chriſt's aſcenſion to the pouring out of the Spirit, ver. 12—14. 3. With a particular account of the filling up of the vacancy that was made in the ſacred college by the death of Judas, by the electing of Matthias in his room, ver. 15—26.

[a] Luke i. 3.
[b] Mark xvi. 19. Luke ix. 51. 1 Tim. [illegible]. 16.

1. THE former treatiſe have I made, O [a] Theophilus, of all that Jeſus began both to do and teach, 2. [b] Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the holy Ghoſt [c] had given commandments unto the apoſtles, whom he had choſen. 3. [d] To whom alſo he ſhewed himſelf alive after his paſſion, by many infallible proofs, being ſeen of them forty days, and ſpeaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God: 4. [e] And being aſſembled together with them, commanded them that they ſhould not depart from Jeruſalem, but wait for the promiſe of the Father, [f] which, ſaith he, you have heard of me. 5. For [g] John truly baptized with water; [h] but ye ſhall be baptized with the holy Ghoſt, not many days hence.

[c] Mat. xxviii. 19. Mark xvi. 15. John xx. 21. Chap. x. 42.
[d] John xx. 19, 26. & xxi. 1. 1 Cor. xv. 5.
[e] Luke xxiv. 43, 49.
[f] John xiv. 16, 26, 27. & xv. 26. & xvi. 7.
[g] Mat. iii. 11. Chap. xi. 16. & xix. 4.
[h] Joel ii. 28. Chap. ii. 4. & xi. 15.

v. 1—5. St. Luke, the ſuppoſed penman of this book, addreſſes it, as he had done his goſpel, to Theophilus his noble catechumen.

1. He reminds him of the former treatiſe which he had written for his edification and inſtruction, containing an account of all that Jeſus began both to do and teach, laying the foundation of that Chriſtian church on which they were to build, until the day in which he was taken up, continuing to inſtruct them in the nature of his kingdom, after that he, through the Holy Ghoſt, which the Father gave without meaſure unto him, had given commandments unto the apoſtles whom he had choſen, commiſſioning them to preach his goſpel, and, according to the plenitude of his power, enabling them for the arduous work. Note, They who teach, muſt do: a miniſter's practice muſt be correſpondent with his precepts.

2. He mentions ſome of thoſe many infallible ſigns which Jeſus gave of his reſurrection. He ſhewed himſelf to his diſciples alive, convinced them fully of the identity of his perſon, was ſeen of them ſeveral times, in different places, during the forty days that he continued on earth; eat, drank, and converſed freely with them, inſtructing them in the things pertaining to the kingdom of God, informing them of the nature of his kingdom, the powers they ſhould be endued with, the ſucceſs of their miniſtry, and the glory which was prepared for them.

3. Chriſt ordered them, at one of their ſolemn meetings, not to depart from Jeruſalem, whither they had probably come from Galilee, after they had ſeen him on the mountain where he appointed them to meet him; but wait for the promiſe of the Father, which, ſaith he, you have heard of me, fully and confidently expecting that Spirit whom the ancient prophecies had foretold ſhould be abundantly poured out in the days of the Meſſiah, and of whom he had ſo often ſpoken to them before his departure, as the Comforter that he would ſend unto them from the Father, to enable them for the glorious work which was before them. For John truly baptized with water, and that was all he pretended to do; but ye, according to his declarations, ſhall be baptized with the Holy Ghoſt not many days hence, receiving ſuch abundant meaſures of light, grace, wiſdom, courage, and utterance, as effectually to carry them through every temptation, and make them ſucceſsful in ſpreading the goſpel, in defiance of all oppoſition. Note, We muſt patiently wait, and then we ſhall aſſuredly ſee the ſalvation of God.

6. When they therefore were come together, they aſked of him, ſaying, [i] Lord, wilt thou at this time reſtore again the kingdom to Iſrael? 7. And he ſaid unto them, [k] It is not for you to know [l] the times or the ſeaſons, which the Father hath put in his own power. 8. But [m] ye ſhall receive † power, [n] after that the Holy Ghoſt is come upon you: and [o] ye ſhall be witneſſes unto me, both in Jeruſalem, and in all Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermoſt part of the earth. 9. And [p] when he had ſpoken theſe things, while they beheld, [q] he was taken up, and a cloud received him out of their ſight. 10. And while they looked ſtedfaſtly towards heaven, as he went up, behold, two men ſtood by them [r] in white apparel; 11. Which alſo ſaid, [s] Ye men of Galilee, why ſtand ye gazing up into heaven? this ſame Jeſus, which is taken up from you into heaven, [t] ſhall ſo come in like manner as ye have ſeen him go into heaven.

[i] Mat. xxiv. 3.
[k] Mat. xxiv. 36. Mark xiii. 32.
[l] 1 Theſ. v. 1.
[m] Chap. ii. 1, 4.
† Or the power of the Holy Ghoſt coming upon you.
[n] Luke xxiv. 49.
[o] Luke xxiv. 48. John xv. 27. Ver. 22. Chap. ii. 32.
[p] Luke xxiv. 51.
[q] Ver. 2.
[r] Mat. xxviii. 3. Chap. x. 3, 30.
[s] Chap. ii. 7. & xiii. 31.
[t] Dan. vii. 13. Mat. xxiv. 30. 1 Theſ. i. 10. 2 Theſ. i. 10. Rev. i. 7.

v. 6—11. The apoſtles had not yet quite dropped their apprehenſions of the Meſſiah's temporal kingdom, and the reſurrection of Jeſus probably flattered them with new hopes.

1. They put the queſtion therefore to him, whether at this time he would reſtore again the kingdom to Iſrael, raiſing the Jewiſh people to the higheſt pitch of grandeur, and bringing all the kingdoms of the earth in ſubjection to them: ſo hard is it to eradicate early prejudices. And even good men are apt to look for a church triumphant inſtead of a church militant upon earth: but, when the Spirit is poured out more abundantly, we ſhall learn to expect nothing here but reproach and the croſs, and wait for another world to ſit down in the kingdom.

2. Chriſt checks their vain curioſity. And, as the Spirit, which ſhould be given them, would ſhortly rectify theſe miſtakes, he tells them it was not for them to know the times and ſeaſons when thoſe great expected revolutions ſhould be brought about, which the Father hath put in his own power, and which are ſecrets concealed in the divine mind. Note, (1.) Secret things belong unto God. Curioſity to be wiſe above what is written, is fooliſh as well as fruitleſs. (2.) The uncertainty in which it hath pleaſed God to leave us, concerning future events, is graciouſly ordered, to the intent we might be always prepared for that which God hath prepared for us.

3. He aſſures them, that, poor, illiterate, and deſpicable inſtruments as they appeared, they ſhould be endued with the moſt aſtoniſhing ſpiritual powers, through the mighty influence of the Holy Ghoſt, which ſhould come upon them, when, filled with zeal, courage, and wiſdom, which none of their adverſaries could gainſay or reſiſt, they ſhould be witneſſes unto him; aſſerting his character as the divine Meſſiah, bearing teſtimony to his reſurrection, publiſhing the glad tidings of ſalvation through his name, and confirming the truth of their words by the atteſtation of the moſt amazing miracles; beginning at Jeruſalem, then going to the Samaritans, among whom before they had been with-held from preaching, and afterwards ſpreading the glorious goſpel to the ends of the earth, not only among the diſperſed Jews, but among the Gentiles alſo. Note, Goſpel miniſters muſt preach Jeſus Chriſt, bearing witneſs to his grace and glory, and publiſhing to all, the free and full redemption which is obtained for loſt ſinners through his blood and righteouſneſs.

4. When he had ſpoken theſe things, while they beheld, earneſtly regarding him, and duly attentive to the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth, he was taken up, and with eager looks they followed him, till a cloud received him out of their ſight; and, amidſt congratulating angels, he aſcended to the throne of his glory. May I follow thee, Lord, with the eyes of faith now, and, when it ſhall pleaſe thee, aſcend to behold thee face to face.

